5. Miller, Arthur R., "Computers, data banks, and individual privacy: an overview," in Surveillance, Dataveillance, and Personal Freedoms: Use and Misuse of Information Technology; a Symposium. ed. by the Staff of the Columbia Human Rights Law Review. Fair Lawn, N.J., R. E. Burdick, 1973. p. 20.
6. Raines, John C. Attack on Privacy. Valley Forge, Pa., Judson Pr., 1974. p. 30f.
7. Neier, Aryeh. Dossier: The Secret Files They Keep on You. Stein & Day, 1974. Chapter 9, "The Scarlet Letter: Conviction Records."
8. U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Affirmative Action and Equal Employment: A Guide for Employers. Washington, D.C., U.S. GPO, 1974. Vol. 1, p. 41f.
9. Askin, Frank. "Surveillance, the Social Science Perspective," in Surveillance, Dataveillance, and Personal Freedoms: Use and Misuse of Information Technology; A Symposium. Ed. by the staff of the Columbia Human Rights Law Review. Fair Lawn, N.J., R. E. Burdick, 1973. p. 90.
10. Neier, op. cit., Chapters 5, 6, 11.
11. Askin, op. cit., p. 92f.
12. Ervin, Sam J., Jr. "The First Amendment: a Living Thought on the Computer Age," in Surveillance, Dataveillance, and Personal Freedoms; Use and Misuse of Information Technology; A Symposium. Ed. by the staff of the Columbia Human Rights Law Review. Fair Lawn, N.J., R. E. Burdick, 1973. p. 50.
13. Solano County, California, "Disclosure of Personal History Files." October 1975.
14. Baker, Michael A., "Record Privacy as a Marginal Problem: The Limits of Consciousness and Concern," in Surveillance, Dataveillance, and Personal Freedoms; Use and Misuse of Information Technology; A Symposium. Ed. by the staff of the Columbia Human Rights Law Review. Fair Lawn, N.J., R. E. Burdick, 1973. p. 109.
15. Miller, Arthur R. The Assault on Privacy: Computers, Data Banks, And Dossiers. Ann Arbor, Univ. of Michigan Pr., 1971. p. 83f. Also: Thomas Whiteside, "Credit Bureaus," New Yorker, April 21, 1975, p. 45f.
16. Simmons, Peter. "Library Automation," In Annual Review of Information Science and Technology. American Society for Information Science, Vol. 8, 1973. p. 180.
17. Rule, James B. Private Lives and Public Surveillance; Social Control in the Computer Age. Schocken, 1974. p. 29f, 333f.
18. Ervin, op. cit., p. 33.
19. U.S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Report of the Secretary's Advisory Committee on Automated Personal Data Systems: Records, Computers, and the Rights of Citizens. GPO, 1973.
20. H.R. 1984, 94th Congress, 1st Session. January 23, 1975. Also: Barry M. Goldwater, Jr., "Bipartisan Politics," The Civil Liberties Review, Summer 1974, p. 744.
21. Ordinance No. 4732 N.S., October, 1974.
22. Shields, Hannah & Mae Churchill. "Criminal Data Banks: The Fraudulent War on Crime," Nation, December 21, 1974, p. 648.
23. Miller, op. cit., p. 21.
24. Neier, op. cit., Chapters 1-3.
25. Askin, op. cit., p. 95.
26. Donner, Frank, "Electronic Surveillance: The National Security Game," Civil Liberties Review, Summer 1974, p. 15f. Also: Raines, op. cit., p. 32.
27. Donner, Frank J. "Political Intelligence: Cameras, Informers, and Files," Civil Liberties Review, Summer 1974, p. 8f. Also: Raines, op. cit., p. 32.
28. Ervin, op. cit., p. 30f., 74f.
29. Raines, op. cit., p. 34.
30. Raines, ibid., p. 44.
31. Raines, ibid., p. 58.
32. National Commission on Libraries and Information Science. Toward a National Program for Library and Information Service: Goals for Action, GPO, 1975.
33. ———. Annual Report to the President and Congress: 1973-74, GPO, 1975.
34. Wright, Christopher. "Pricing knowledge: Annual Meeting of the American Society for Information Science," American Libraries, January 1975, p. 8f. Also: "New computerized services provide speedy (but not free) copies 'on demand,'" Publishers Weekly, 206:21. Also: Penner, Rudolf J., "The practice of charging users for information service," Journal of the American Society for Information Science, January-February 1970, p. 67f.
35. "The growth of scientific and technical information—A Challenge." Information. 3:3, 1974, p. 9.
36. Olson, Edwin E., Russell Shank, and Harold A. Olsen, "Library and Information Networks." In Annual Review of Information Science and Technology. American Society for Information Science, Vol. 7, 1972, p. 307.
37. Ervin, op. cit., p. 29.
38. "Data base publishers vying for key roles as rapid growth looms in business use," Publishers Weekly, September 16, 1974, p. 36f.
39. Garfield, Eugene. "Is there a future for the scientific journal?" Sci-Tech News, April 1975, p. 42f.
40. Martin, Susan K., "Library Automation." In Annual Review of Information Science and Technology, American Society for Information Science, Vol. 7, 1972, p. 250.
41. Simmons, op. cit., p. 179.

Dynamo and tinkerer

STEVENS, Norman D., ed. Essays for Ralph Shaw.

Scarecrow. 1975. 212p. ISBN 0-8108-0815-3. LC 75-6664. $8.

"People are the priceless ingredient, not machines," said Shaw, as quoted in a list of his aphorisms included in this slender collection of 15 essays by former colleagues and students. From the picture drawn by the two articles on Shaw the Man, it is Shaw himself that emerges as a priceless, if not universally beloved, ingredient in librarianship. An "inventor, adapter, adopter, discoverer, and tinkerer," whose career included positions as a librarian, founder and publisher of Scarecrow Press, and professor and dean at the Graduate School of Library Service at Rutgers, Shaw was a "mover and shaker, driven by the conviction that the world was in an unnecessary mess and that the human brain could solve all problems and human energy remove all obstacles." With such a philosophy, it is not surprising that he made an impact on the often quiet, reserved world of librarianship.

The other essays address some of the areas that engaged Shaw's attention: Projects and Experiments gathers articles on such diverse topics as "Adverse Drug Reaction Information in the Literature" to "Scholars in Residence"; another section deals with Scientific Management and Statistics; and another, with Theory and Philosophies.

As in most collections of articles by different hands, the essays are of varying interest and importance depending upon each reader's needs and sophistication. However, the biographical sketches and the listing of Shaw's aphorisms should interest and amaze all who have known or known of this dynamic figure, a man who, according to his own phraseology, "never worried too much about mouse farts," but instead embraced the challenges of the wider world.—JULIA EMMONS, DIVISION OF LIBRARIANSHIP, EMORY UNIVERSITY, ATLANTA

Archival pioneer

MITCHELL, Thornton W., ed. Norton on Archives: the Writings of Margaret Cross Norton on Archival & Records Management.

Southern Illinois Univ. Pr. 1975. 288p. foreword by Ernst Rosner. index. appendix. ISBN 0-8093-0738-3. LC 75-20410. $10.

Margaret Cross Norton, State Archivist of Illinois from 1922 to 1957, was a pioneer in archival theory and practice, an active participant in professional meetings, and a frequent contributor to library and archival journals. Thirty of the best of her articles, still representative of sound theory and practice, have been selected to form a very readable introduction and manual on archival management. The careful and intelligent editing by Mitchell is outstanding.—ROLLAND STEVENS, GRADUATE SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SCIENCE, UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS, URBANA

Practical visionary

HARRIS, Michael H., ed. The Age of Jewett: Charles Coffin Jewett and American Librarianship, 1841-1868.

Libraries Unlimited. (The Heritage of Librarianship Series, No. 1). 1975. 166p. index. bibliog ISBN 0-87287-113-4. LC 75-14205. In U.S. & Canada, $11.50; elsewhere, $13.50.

This collection of writings (with a biographical essay and bibliography by the editor) inaugurates a new series which promises to be a substantial contribution to the history of librarianship. It is apt that the first volume should be devoted to Charles Coffin Jewett, first full-time academic librarian (at Brown University) in the United States, first librarian of the Smithsonian Institution, first superintendent of the eminent Boston Public Library—the leading member of that pre-1876 generation of bookmen that, centennial celebrations notwithstanding, founded the American library profession.

Conservative in politics and religion, Jewett was innovative and visionary in the world of books. At a time when library resources and their organization for use were barely developed in this country, he grasped the problems and worked out solutions for them, endeavors that are articulated in the speeches and selections from his works reprinted here. He devised the pioneering, influential Rules for Preparing Catalogues, produced practical library catalogs, built impressive collections, compiled the first survey of American libraries, presided over the first librarians' conference in 1853. He also, unsuccessfully, urged the repeal of import duties on books, campaigned for a great national library, and planned a national union catalog based on standardized rules—dreams he was not able to realize in his lifetime.

Besides its intrinsic interest and scholarly value, a compilation like this one—which complements Joseph Borome's Charles Coffin Jewett (1951, recently reprinted)—reminds us of the creativity and originality of our distinguished professional forebears and stirs renewed respect for their considerable accomplishments.—PHYLLIS DAIN, SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SERVICE, COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY

Third World acquisitions

CLARKE, D. A., ed. Acquisitions from the Third World: Papers of the Ligue des bibliothèques européennes de recherche seminar 17-19 September 1973.

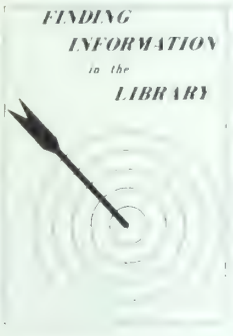
Mansell; dist. by International Scholarly Book Services, P.O. Box 4347, Portland, Ore. 97208. 1975. 276p. ISBN 0-7201-0453-X. $15.

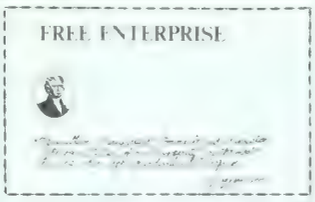
The Ligue des bibliothèques européennes de recherche (LIBER) was established in 1971 for the purpose of fostering greater cooperation among the research libraries of Western Europe. With a grant from the Council of Europe to study the acquisition of library materials from Third World countries, LIBER sponsored a seminar at the University of Sussex in September 1973 "to examine the problems of acquisition; the availability of materials in European libraries both for reference and for lending; and the feasibility of setting up a European centre for the collection of such material, to be available for loan."

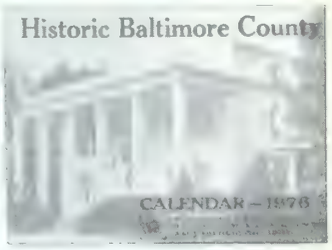
The thrust of these essays concerns more the wholesale acquisition of comprehensive blocs of material than the selection and acquiring of individual titles. American experience is reported in papers on PL 480 and NPAC by William S. Dix, on the Farmington Plan by Philip J. McNiff, and on SALALM by Glenn F. Read. European cooperative experience is represented by papers on the Scandia Plan (for cooperative worldwide collecting in Scandinavia); on the work of the British Library (especially the Lending Division); on German efforts at comprehensive collection development; and on Australia's acquisitions program in Indonesia. There are reports on the individual experiences of several libraries which have special missions in particular Third World areas, and papers on book production, bibliographical control, and the book trade of five developing areas.

All of the papers are by experts, all represent sound thought and experience, and all are forward looking, save one, which appears more intent upon arguing the demerits of PL 480 and NPAC than in proposing a plan of its own. The resulting volume is an excellent state-of-the-art account of the most difficult acquisitions problems on earth and of man's best efforts to date to resolve them. Thirty years ago there would have been nothing to report.—DAVID KASER, GRADUATE LIBRARY SCHOOL, INDIANA UNIVERSITY, BLOOMINGTON

LJ:CHECKLIST







Library aid

A handbook written by librarians to provide their students with a guide to sources of information and their use would be of interest to anyone involved in teaching and learning research skills at the secondary level. Finding Information in the Library is divided into parts on basic and advanced reference sources. The 74-page booklet has illustrations, an index, and a bibliography. It is available for $2 from Librarians, Rochelle Township High School, Rochelle, Ill. 61068. Checks payable to Rochelle High School must be included with the order.

Community resources

People's Yellow Pages brings together resources and ideas which are available to the people of the Greater Boston Area. A directory of tenant unions, political activists, health clinics, workplace organizers, arts and crafts associations, and other alternative groups, the 200-page publication would serve as a fine model for other communities interested in developing a similar directory. "How-to" articles are presented on such topics as applying for unemployment insurance and food stamps, starting a working collective, and organizing for social change. The Yellow Pages (which happens to be gray) is attractively illustrated with photographs and drawings. It costs $2.50 from Vocations for Social Change, 353 Broadway, Cambridge, Mass. 02139.

Primitive art guide

A Guide to Slide and Photograph Collections of Primitive Art from Boston to Washington, D.C., compiled by June M. Axelrod, is being offered by the Art Libraries Society of North America. It is the first of a planned three-part compilation of primitive art collections in museums and academic institutions throughout the United States. The survey describes the scope of individual collections as well as their size and accessibility to the public, and includes a brief statement of purpose. There is an index by subject, place, and personal name. The publication costs $3.50 prepaid from ARLIS/NA, P.O. Box 3692, Glendale, Calif. 91201.

Entrepreneurship

One patron's displeasure at the lack of a particular subject heading in the Troy Public Library's catalog resulted in the staff's preparation of a bibliography on the subject. The patron had found that although the catalog had headings of Free Love, Free Thought, Free Schools, and Free Verse, there was no heading for Free Enterprise. He felt that the situation was shocking because free enterprise "made us the richest and most powerful nation in the world," or so he wrote to a local newspaper and to the governor. According to Christine Hage, Adult Services Librarian, in this year of the bicentennial it seemed feasible to "rally round the flag" with a bibliography. What's more, it's free to anyone enterprising enough to send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Free Enterprise Bibliography, Troy Public Library, 510 W. Big Beaver Rd., Troy, Mich. 48084.

Appalachiana

Folklore and music, belles lettres, religion, history, politics, and economy are some of the aspects of mountain life covered in Appalachian Books and Media for Public and College Libraries, an 85-page annotated bibliography of in-print materials. A special section is devoted to materials on coal mining. Books, films, videotapes, phonograph recordings, and periodicals are listed. Since the guide was intended to be helpful as an acquisition tool in building a foundation collection in Appalachian studies, order information, including price, is given for all listings. The spiral-bound booklet costs $3 from the publisher, West Virginia University Library, Morgantown, W. Va. 26506.

Californiana

A collection of local history and rare Californiana is described in A Selective Bibliography of Books, Pamphlets, Letters, Documents and Other Materials in the Heritage Collection of the A. K. Smiley Public Library. Maps, oral history tapes, manuscripts, and periodicals are among the materials listed. The 40-page booklet costs $2 prepaid from the A. K. Smiley Public Library, P. O. Box 751, Redlands, Calif. 92373. Make checks payable to Library Friends Fund.

Bicentennial bumper sticker

Whether the Fresno Area Library Council wishes to lure patriots or joy-riders into the library is moot, but they've issued a bumper sticker in red, white, and blue bearing the motto "1776 is in the Library." The 3″ x 11″ sticker costs $1 from the Council, P.O. Box 1704, Fresno, Calif. 93717. California residents should add six percent sales tax.

Calendar

A new 1976 edition of the engagement calendar and photographic record, "Historic Baltimore County," is available from the Baltimore County Public Library. Compiled with the cooperation of the Patapsco Neck Bicentennial Committee and the Baltimore County Bicentennial Committee, the calendar features photographs of lovely, pre-Civil War buildings, the oldest of which was built in 1767. The calendar also contains a complete listing of Bicentennial events in the County during 1976. Send your order before the year wanes to Special Projects Officer, Baltimore County Public Library, 320 York Rd., Towson, 21204. Single copies of the spiral-bound 10″ x 12″ publication cost $2; bulk rates for 20 or more are available upon request. Proceeds will be shared by the two Bicentennial committees.

Women's studies guide

With Reference to Women is a guide to reference sources held by Northwestern University Library which are useful to and increasingly necessary for research on women. It consists of all books and serials primarily from the Reference Department which deal with women exclusively, or a related subject, such as marriage, family planning, divorce, homosexuality. Selected reference items from other collections in the Library system have also been included, and an introduction briefly notes additional sources. Divided into broad subject categories, citations are numbered and annotated. A subject, author and title index is also provided. The 55-page bibliography costs $2 prepaid from Northwestern University Library, Reference Dept., Publications Program, Evanston, Ill. 60201. Checks should be made out to Northwestern University Library.

LJ MAGAZINES

Bill Katz, PROFESSOR, SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SCIENCE, STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK, ALBANY

Moving Out

1970. Biannual. $2. Ed: Editorial Board. 169 Mackenzie Hall, Wayne State University, Detroit, Mich. 48202. Illus. Aud: Ac Ga, Hs. (Subject: Women: Issue examined. Vol. 4, No. 1, 1974)

Boasting a circulation of 1500 to 2000, this 45- to 70-page offset feminist literary magazine, which has considerable staying power, has been in circulation since 1970. The issues run the gamut of fiction, poetry, graphics, letters, and articles on the local and national efforts of various women's groups. Particularly impressive are the pieces on writing and literary criticism—all from original points of view. Editorially, the purpose is to support what the editors call "the emergence of a true woman's aesthetic. Its potential for fostering and developing a new and fundamental social, psychological, and economic orientation is clearly evident." Equally evident is that the professionals who put this magazine together not only have a point of view, but a well defined aesthetic sense which considers all facets of women's lives and literature. I'm not sure all the fiction is up to the critical material, but even the stumbling is fascinating. And of the various titles reviewed here, this strikes me as the best—first choice for librarians who must make such a choice.—BK

The American Humanities Index

1975. Quarterly. $125; (Annual cumulation may be ordered separately, $89.50). Whitson Publishing Co., P.O. Box 322, Troy, N.Y. 12181. (Subject: Abstracts and Indexes. Issue examined: No. 1, Fall 1975)

Not to be confused with the H. W. Wilson Company's Humanities Index, this is a new entry which concentrates on "creative and critical journals in the arts." The close to 150 titles indexed are those clustered around reviews and little magazines. About 50 percent of the little magazines indexed are those still functioning since the last edition of Index to Little Magazines (i.e. covering 1958 to 1969 and published in 1972 by Swallow). Also heavily represented: author journals and newsletters from the Baker Street Journal to the Willa Cather Newsletter. As far as can be ascertained, few if any of the titles here are indexed elsewhere. An alphabetical author/subject index, but with primary emphasis on author entries, i.e. works by and about writers, including reviews of their works. For larger research and academic libraries where there is an emphasis on critical English studies. Recommended.—BK

The magazines annotated below are among some of the more recent newsstand items. For libraries with budget problems none is absolutely necessary. If additions are to be made, I'd favor New Behavior, although surely the most popular and controversial will be High Times.

New Behavior

1975. Weekly. £11.50. Ed: Peter Evans. IPC Magazines, 128 Long Acre, London, England. Illus. adv. Aud: Ac, Ga. (Subject: Psychology. Issue examined: April 25, 1975)

For those who can't get enough of the Psychology Today or who would like a trifle more serious approach to the subject, a good addition or substitute is this English title. Put out by the same publishers as the highly successful New Scientist and New Society, the 48-page weekly consists of up-to-date news items and short articles on all aspects of the psychological sciences. The publisher, one of the largest in England, is as interested in popular appeal as information, and a good deal of the magazine is purposefully directed to the layperson. Typical articles: Race and IQ; Whatever turns you on; The manager in his job; Faces; How did I come to do that?, etc. The news, reviews, and reports on research give it added appeal for those trying to keep up with developments in psychology and sociology. Politically, the editors are a bit to the left, which would be no more than in the main stream in England. Some of the articles are of interest solely to the English reader, but the majority will capture the imagination of an American. The writing is good, if not brilliant, clear if not always original. There are some black-and-white illustrations on a businesslike newsprint paper, although in traditional magazine form.—BK

High Times

1974. Quarterly. 12 issues, $14. Ed: Andy Kowal. Trans High Corp., Box 386, Cooper Station, New York, N.Y. 10003. Illus. Adv. Aud: Ac, Ga. (Subject: Alternative Cultures. Issue examined: Spring 1975)

The talk of the publishing world (i.e. "Why didn't we think of that?"), this well edited, informative quarterly is devoted exclusively to what the title implies. Emphasis is on marijuana as an accepted and acceptable social method of getting high. An average 75-page issue has a format similar to New York Magazine, and the writing style is equally up to the best (and sometimes the worst) of the new journalism. And while one might term this "alternative culture," it looks to be more a commercial success than a typical underground approach. Illustrated articles such as "Joint rolling around the world" and one on the Fitz-Hugh Ludlow Memorial Library (a scholarly library of materials on cannabis and drugs) treat the subject with a nice balance of popularism and scholarship. Historical background material is balanced with current news about the legalization of pot and various penalties exacted. There is some attention to other drugs, and an amazing amount of advertising. The most popular feature: "Trans high market quotations": a city by city, country by country, monthly report on the going prices for various grades of marijuana in ounces and pounds. Probably to keep on the safe side, the publisher has the backing of an advisory board made up of scholars and physicians from Northwestern to Harvard—among the notables, Benjamin Spock. Circulation is reported to be over 300,000 and rising. Without taking sides, a librarian would do well to at least ask for a sample copy and see how it goes in the library. High Times threatens to be the runaway popular magazine of the mid 1970s, pushing Playboy and the other juveniles off the top ten controversial list.—BK

Angler: the Magazine for All Fishermen

1974. Bimonthly. $7.50. Ed: Dick Gaumer. Angler Publications, P.O. Box 4206, Stockton, Calif. 95204. Illus. adv. Aud: Ga, Ac, Hs. (Subject: Sports: Fishing, Hunting, and Guns. Issues examined: March-April 1975)

Averaging 72 pages, some 16 articles, and numerous color and black-and-white illustrations of the ones that did not get away, this is a fisherman's magazine. It limits itself to California and other Western states, although much of the more general how-to-do-it information will be useful to sports fans in any part of the country. Most material is written by experienced writers, and varies from articles about personal experiences to ideal fishing spots. Some conservation news and a definite emphasis on fly fishing streams and lakes. A nice companion for the more general Field and Stream, and the long needed American counterpart to the English Angling Times.—BK

LJ BUYERS' GUIDE

Thomas W. McConkey CHIEF, ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICE, FREE LIBRARY OF PHILADELPHIA

Every effort is made to evaluate carefully the products listed. However, mention here is not an endorsement. Prices are subject to change, and may vary in different geographical areas.

DELIVERY NETWORK

SENSOR SCREEN

FICHE STATION

Conveyor system

Although hand delivery of library materials might appear convenient and even personal, it is not reliable and, with present staff costs, it's very expensive. For these reasons, some libraries, like the White Plains (N.Y.) Public Library, are installing Telelift, the Mosler Safe Co.'s system for conveying literary materials. Normally, library materials—books, documents, AV items, etc.—are moved vertically by booklifts and horizontally by moving belts. Telelift combines the advantages of both—transporting loads up to 20 lbs., horizontally and vertically, from one station to any other station in the network.

Basically a Telelift system consists of a track network, a number of stations and electric, self-propelled "freight" cars, the largest of which has a 1700 cu. in., 20 lb. cargo-carrying capacity. The cars travel independently of each other to any of 1000 possible stations in a network. Each car is programmed to its proper destination by adjusting three sliding indicators on the closed lid. The operator programs a car by adjusting these indicators to the appropriate station number; then dispatches it by pressing a button. Telelift switches, installed at predetermined points in the network, read the indicators as the car passes, and guide it via the shortest route to its intended destination.

Telelift is most easily placed in new buildings, but it can be installed in old ones. The tracks can be placed beneath floors, hung from ceilings (they have a modern, functional design), enclosed in soffits or installed in false ceilings. Stations can be so designed that they fit unobtrusively into the decor and can be added or removed as required. Since they are automatic, switches can be installed vertically or horizontally.

Cars are electronically prevented from colliding while a flanged profile prevents them from being derailed or removed. Input is 240 volt AC or 110 volt AC; cars operate on safe, low-voltage, 24-volt current. For more information, contact the Mosler Safe Co., 1561 Grand Blvd., Hamilton, Ohio 45012. (513) 867-4000.

Theft detection system

The second generation Checkpoint MK II Library Security System has proven effective and economical after two years of field performance in academic and public libraries. According to the manufacturer, inventories taken by eight representative libraries before and after installation of the MK II revealed an average 88.1 percent reduction of volumes missing in inventory.

The Checkpoint MK II electronic detecting equipment consists of two small, slender sensing screens, one on each side of the library's exit path, which automatically lock a gate or turnstile when an improperly charged book is carried between the screens. Detection is from floor to head height and, since the system does not operate on a magnetic principle, there is no danger to cassettes and other recording tapes or to hearing aids or heart pacers.

The MK II System is available in either 1) the Full Circulation mode in which books are desensitized at the charging station before the patron leaves the library through the remote, unmanned detection zone at the exit; or 2) the By-Pass mode with the detection zone located at the circulation or inspection desk where books are passed behind the near sensing screen and returned to the patron as they are charged out.

The Checklabel, the detectable element placed in the book, is a 2-11/16″ x 3-3/16″ pressure-sensitive paper label containing a small, concealed printed circuit. The Checklabel may be printed to double as a bookplate or reference label, or, if greater concealment is desired, may be hidden in or under a book pocket, under a jacket, endpaper, or flyleaf. Because the Checklabel is so small, it can protect a greater variety of library materials previously not protectable, e.g., books, pamphlets, and periodicals of varying sizes; phonodiscs, recording tapes, and many AV materials. Because of the unique configuration of the printed circuit in the Checklabel there can be no false alarms with the MK II System.

The UL approved system carries an all inclusive first-year warranty and may be purchased outright, lease-purchased, or leased, as the library budget may require. For further information contact Checkpoint Systems, Inc., 110 East Gloucester Pk., Barrington, N.J. 08007. (609) 546-0100.

Microfiche reader

The Advantage Library Microfiche Reader is a complete work station, recently introduced by the Library Microfilms & Materials Co. (LMM). With this reader, a double-page spread of books and journals appears in full size on a screen 20 1/2″ wide by 14 1/4″ high. It takes just a second to slide the "Large Print" lens in place to view an image 2½ times larger than with the standard lens; eight-point type filmed at 24x reduction, for example, enlarges to 20 points. The full width of the page is also displayed, so the user need not shift the image back and forth when reading, as must be done with smaller-screen, dual-lens readers. The "Large Print" feature is convenient for library users and essential for those unable to read normal-size print.

Other advantages include: image rotation, symmetrical arrangement for both right- and left-handed use, ejector-type lamp exchange, up to 1200 hours of lamp life, and additional electrical outlets for a tape recorder, typewriter, or desk lamp. The LMM Advantage is available in a walnut-pattern high pressure laminate or in a walnut-veneer finish carrel. The dimensions are 30″ deep, 48″ wide, and 60″ high. From Library Microfilms and Materials, 5709 Mesmer Ave., Culver City, Calif. 90230. (213) 870-7355.

SPRING BOOK ANNOUNCEMENTS

Spring is here! America's publishers announce their new spring books in this issue of Library Journal. To make their advertising more useful to our readers we have indexed these spring book announcements by subject and by publisher. Scan the advertising in this issue, check the listings below, and if you need more information about any of the books you find, look up the full publisher's advertisement in the directory on p. 560.

REFERENCE

Arco
Beckoff, S. Good English with Ease May.
Career Guidance. May.

Autumn Pr.
Shurtleff, W. & A. Aoyagi. The Book of Tofu. Mar.

Arlington House
Ragan, D. Who's Who in Hollywood, 1900-1976. 2 vols. Jul.

Bobbs
Who Was Who During the American Revolution. Mar.

Bowker
American Art Directory 1976. Apr.
The American Film Institute Catalog. Feature Films 1961-1970. Apr.
Books in Print Supplement 1975-76. May.
The Bowker Annual of Library and Book Trade Information 1976. May.
El-Hi Textbooks in Print 1976. Mar.
Filler, L. Progressivism and Muckraking. Apr.
Hoover, D. W. Cities. Apr.
International Bibliography of Reprints. Vol. 1. Apr.
International Guide to Library, Archival & Information Sciences Associations. May.
Lambert, E., ed. World of Fashion. Apr.
Literary Market Place 1976-1977. Apr.
Who's Who in American Art 1976. Apr.
Zils, M., comp. World Guide to Universities. Apr.

Crown
Barlow, H. & S. Morgenstern. Dictionary of Musical Themes. rev. ed. Feb.
Barlow, H. & S. Morgenstern. Dictionary of Opera and Song. rev. ed. Feb.
Miller-Gault, S. & G. Kalmbacher. Color Dictionary of Shrubs. Mar.

Dekker
Belzer, J. & others, eds. Encyclopedia of Computer Science and Technology. Feb.
McKetta, J., ed. Encyclopedia of Chemical Processing and Design. Feb.

Douglas-West
McFadden, D. L. Oriental Gardens. Apr.

Dutton
Hebert, T. & J. Coyne. Getting Skilled. May.

Environment Information
The Energy Index. Dec.
Energy Information Locator. Sept.
The Environment Index. Dec.
Land Use Planning Abstracts. Dec.

Eriksson
Eriksson, P. S. The Bird Finder's 3-Year Note Book. Feb.
Weintz, T. The Gardener's 3-Year Note Book. Feb.

Evans
Kesselman, J. Stopping-Out. May.

Fell
Barkins, E. Hospital Happy. Apr.
Place, I. Parliamentary Procedure Simplified. May.

Free Pr.
Hare, A. P. Handbook of Small Group Research. Jul.

Greenwood
Gore, D., ed. Farewell to Alexandria.
Metropolitan Applied Research Center, Inc. The Black Separatism Controversy.
Metz, K. S. Information Sources in Power Engineering.
Obudho, C. E. Black-White Racial Attitudes.

Harmony: Crown
Overstreet, B. Comic Book Price Guide. May.

Harper
Barker-Benfield, G. J. The Horrors of the Half-Known Life. Jan.
Mayer, M. Today & Tomorrow in America. Feb.
Zinsser, W. On Writing Well. Jan.

Kodansha
Hisamatsu, S. Biographical Dictionary of Literature. Apr.

Lippincott
Paulsen, K. E. & R. A. Kuhn, eds. Woman's Almanac.

McGraw
Babb, L. L. The Washington Post Guide to Washington. Feb.
Dunn, E. Your Lifetime Health Records Book. Apr.
Snyder, L. The Encyclopedia of the Third Reich. Mar.
Steinbrunner, C. & O. Penzler. Encyclopedia of Mystery & Detection. Mar.

McKay
Adams, J. German. Jan.
Adams, J. & N. S. Wilson. French. Jan.
Aitchison. General Linguistics. Jan.
Aquilina, J. Maltese. Jan.
Bailey, T. G. Urdu. Jan.
Barker, J. W. Portuguese. Jan.
Blakeley, L. Old English. Jan.
Bowditch, N. Bowditch for Yachtsmen. Apr.
Bowen, T. & R. T. J. Jines. Welsh. Jan.
Bruce, R. Cantonese. Jan.
Budina-Lazdina, T. Latvian. Jan.
Collier, L. D. Everyday Spanish. Jan.
Corbridge-Patkaniowska, M. Polish. Jan.
Cresswell, J. & J. Hartley. Esperanto. Jan.
deCarle, D. Horology. Apr.
Dillon, M. Irish. Jan.
Duncan's Masonic Ritual and Monitor. Mar.
Dunn, C. J. & S. Yanada. Japanese. Jan.
Ellis, V. Serbo-Croatian Phrase Book. Jan.
Encyclopedia of Dates and Events. Apr.
Ewing, A. C. Ethics. Apr.
Fairfield, D. Lapidary. Apr.
Finlay, I. Translating. Jan.

Latest Titles

FACTS ON FILE BOOKS

Presidential Succession/ Ford, Rockefeller & the 25th Amendment

Background of the 25th Amendment, events that ended in the Agnew and Nixon resignations, appointment of Gerald Ford as Vice President, his succession to the Presidency and appointment of Nelson Rockefeller as our second unelected Vice President. Indexed. 225 pages.
ISBN 0-87196-266-0/$7.95.

". . . most authoritative and complete work on how the 25th Amendment has actually performed. . . . a job well done."
—Sen. Birch Bayh

Consumer Protection

The war on false advertising, dangerous products, harmful or valueless drugs, deceptive packaging and credit abuses. Activities of Ralph Nader, federal regulatory agencies, Congress and the President. Indexed. Approx. 200 pages.
ISBN 0-87196-287-X/$7.95.

New York and the Urban Dilemma

Events leading to financial crisis in New York and other American cities. Among problems covered: the tax crunch, layoffs, strikes, welfare, crime. Indexed. Available June. Approx. 250 pages.
ISBN 0-87196-290-X/$8.95.

Ford & the Economy/1974-76

The American economy during Ford's Administration, the attempts to cope with problems of inflation, recession, unemployment, deficit spending, and the energy crisis. Available May. Indexed. Approx. 200 pages.
ISBN 0-87196-277-2/$7.95.

The Portuguese Revolution/1974-76

Dissolution of the Portuguese empire, the overthrow of Portugal's civilian dictatorship, and the contest between opposing forces that followed. Indexed. Available June. Approx. 200 pages.
ISBN 0-87196-223-3/$7.95.

FACTS ON FILE
119 West 57th Street
New York, N.Y. 10019

klahoma

Olmec Religion: A Key to Middle America and Beyond, by Karl W. Luckert. 250 pages, 64 photos and drawings. $9.95. May.
The American Paint Horse, by Glynn W. Haynes, 375 pages, 16 pages color/ 74 black and white illus. $12.50. May.
Oklahoma Treasures and Treasure Tales, by Steve Wilson. 336 pages, maps, 212 illus. $15.95. April.
The Cowboy: Six-Shooters, Songs, and Sex, edited by Charles W. Harris and Buck Rainey. 175 pages, illus. $9.95 cl/$3.95 pa. May.
My Life on the Plains: Or Personal Experience with Indians, by General George Armstrong Custer. 448 pages, illus. $5.95. June 25, 1976.
Research, Teaching, and Learning with the Piaget Model, by John W. Renner, et al. 250 pages, illus. $9.95. April.
The Rhetoric of History, by Savoie Lottinville. 256 pages. $9.95. March.
The Sunflower, by Charles B. Heiser, Jr. 224 pages, 12 pages color/63 black and white illus. $10.95. March.
The Cutting Edge: The Life of John Rogers, by Cheryl Haun Morris. 235 pages, illus. $7.75. May.
Foundation Sires of the American Quarter Horse, by Robert M. Denhardt. 300 pages. $9.95. April.
Algiers in the Age of the Corsairs, by William Spencer. 200 pages. $4.95. March.
General Revenue Sharing and Decentralization, edited by Walter F. Scheffer. 250 pages. $9.95 cl/$4.95 pa. March.
Great Plains Command: William B. Hazen in the Frontier West, by Marvin E. Kroeker. 200 pages, illus. $9.95. Feb.
Oklahoma Innovator: The Life of Virgil Browne, by Matthew Paul Bonnifield. 190 pages, illus. $7.75. April.
Money and Man: A Survey of Monetary Experience, by Elgin Groseclose. Fourth Edition, Revised. 326 pages. $9.95 cl/$3.95 pa. June.
Bonaventure and Aquinas: Enduring Philosophers, edited and with an Introduction by Robert W. Shahan and Francis J. Kovach. 200 pages, illus. $9.95 cl/ $3.95 pa. June.
We Held History in Our Hands: Oklahoma Teachers Remember, edited by James M. Smallwood. 256 pages. $8.95. June.
Thomas Jefferson, American Tourist, by Edward H. Dumbauld. 284 pages, illus. $9.95. July.
The Germanic People in America, by Victor Wolfgang von Hagen. 416 pages, 152 illus., maps. $12.50. July.
A History of the Lewis and Clark Journals, by Paul Russell Cutright. 311 pages, illus., maps, bib. $17.50. July.

NEW PAPERBACKS . . .

Five Indian Tribes of the Upper Missouri: Sioux, Arickaras, Assiniboines, Crees, Crows, by Edwin Thompson Denig. $3.95. Jan.
The Banditti of the Plains: Or the Cattlemen's Invasion of Wyoming in 1892, by A. S. Mercer. $2.95. Jan.
When Buffalo Ran, by George Bird Grinnell. $2.95. Jan.
A Lady's Life in the Rocky Mountains, by Isabella L. Bird. $2.95. Jan.
Cry of the Thunderbird: The American Indian's Own Story, collected and edited by Charles Hamilton. Color paintings by George Catlin. $3.95. Jan.
The Conquest of Apacheria, by Dan L. Thrapp. $4.95. Jan.
The Cayuse Indians: Imperial Tribesmen of Old Oregon, by Robert H. Ruby and John A. Brown. $4.95. March.
Indians and Pioneers, by Grant Foreman. $3.50. April.
The Life and Death of Colonel Albert Jennings Fountain, by Arrell M. Gibson. $3.25. April.
Energy Impacts on Public Policy and Administration, edited by Walter F. Scheffer. $4.95. May.
The Kickapoos: Lords of the Middle Border, by Arrell M. Gibson. $3.95. June.
The Rhodes Reader: Stories of Virgins, Villains, and Varmints, Second Edition, by Eugene Manlove Rhodes. $3.95. June.
Benjamin Franklin: An American Man of Letters, by Bruce Ingham Granger. $3.95. July.
Lord North, by Alan Valentine. 2 volumes. $9.95. June.

University of Oklahoma Press
1005 Asp Avenue
Norman, Oklahoma 73069

Fourman, M. Russian. Jan.
Fradd, D. The Guitar. Apr.
French Dictionary. Jan.
German Dictionary. Jan.
Glendening, P. J. T. Icelandic. Jan.
Harrison, R. K. Bobl... Hebrew. Jan.
Hudson, D. F. Bengali. Jan.
Humphreys, G. S. English Grammar. Jan.
Javareck, V. Serbo-Croatian Reader Jan
Javerek, V. & M. Sudjic. Serbo-Croat. Jan.
The Jefferson Bible. Mar.
Jenkins, E. S. French Grammar. Jan.
Jepson, R. W. Express Yourself. Apr
Jewell, R. E. C. British Constitution. Apr.
Koefoed, H. A. Danish. Jan
King, P. & M. King. Dutch Dictionary. Jan.
Koolhoven, H. Dutch. Jan.
Kraft, C. H. & A. H. M. Kirt-Greene. Hausa. Jan.
Lee, W. R. & Z. Lee. Czech. Jan.
Leonard, M. Understanding Statistics. Apr.
Lewis, G. L. Turkish. Jan.
Lewis, M. B. Malay. Jan.
Lindsay, M. The New England Gun. Mar.
Lord, R. Comparative Linguistics. Jan.
McClean, T. J. Swedish. Jan
McMullen, M. Multihull Seamanship. Mar.
Mace, J. Modern Persian. Jan.
Mares, C. Efficient Reading. Apr.
Mackinnon, R. Gaelic. Jan.
Marm, I. & A. Sommerfelt. Norwegian. Jan.
Marsack, C. C. Samoan. Jan.
Melton, D. How To Help Your Preschooler Learn More- Faster- and Better. Apr.
Meredith, P. Learning, Remembering and Knowing. Apr
Mitchell, T. F. Arabic, Colloquial. Jan.
Modern Greek Phrase Book. Jan.
Munro, K. D. French Revision. Jan.
Murrell, M. & V. Stefanescu-Draganesti. Romanian. Jan.
Panter, G. G. & S. M. Linde. Now That You've Had Your Baby. Feb.
Perrot, D. V. English for Swahili Speaking People. Jan.
Perrot, D. V. Swahili. Jan.
Pine, L. Heraldry and Genealogy. Apr.
Portsmouth, J. Modern Poultry Keeping. Apr.
Raventos, M. H. Spanish Dictionary. Jan.
Rowlands, E. C. Yoruba. Jan.
Shackle, C. Punjabi. Jan.
Smith, F. K. Latin. Jan.
Smith, F. K. & T. L. Melluish. Greek. Jan.
Sofroniou, S. A. Modern Greek. Jan.
Speaker and Debater. Apr.
Speight, K. Italian. Jan.
Stringer, L. A First German. Jan.
Stringer, L. German Reader. Jan
Swedish Phrase Book. Jan.
Thornton, G. H. & K. Baron. Good English. Jan.
Timms, W. W. & M. Pulgar. Spanish Phrase Book. Jan.
Tritton, A. S. Arabic. Jan
Wells, J. C. Esperanto Dictionary. Jan.
Wells, S. W. More German. Jan.
Whitney, A. H. Finnish. Jan.
Whitney, A. H. Finnish Reader. Jan.
Williamson, H. R. Chinese. Jan.
Wilson, A. Latin Dictionary. Jan.
Wilson, N. S. Everyday French. Jan.
Wilson, N. S. A First French. Jan.
Wilson, N. S. French Reader. Jan.
Wilson, N. S. Spanish. Jan.
Wilson, P. G. German Grammar. Jan.
Yates, A. Catalan. Jan

Macmillan
Fleisher, M. The Encyclopedia of Comic Book Heroes. Vol. 1. Jun.
Gilbert, M. Jewish History Atlas May.
Herwig, R. & M. Schubert. The Treasury of Houseplants. May Littell, F. H. The Macmillan Atlas History of Christianity. Apr.
Moore, J. E., ed. Jane's Pocket Book of Submarine Development. May.
Pretty, R., ed. Jane's Pocket Book of Missiles. Mar.
Rosignoli, G. Army Badges and Insignia of World War 2, Bk. 2. Apr.
Swedrup, I. The Pocket Encyclopedia of Dogs in Color. Mar.

Morrow
Thompson, D. A Biographical Dictionary of Film. Feb.

Norton
Reader's Digest. 1976 Almanac and Yearbook. Jan.
Reader's Digest. Strange Stories, Amazing Facts. Aug.

Penguin
Hall, M. & J. Norman. Polish Phrase Book.
Hendrickson, R. Ripoffs.
Matson, K. The Working Actor.
Roseman, M., ed. Detectionary.

Prentice-Hall
Deschler, L. Deschler's Rules of Order. May.
The Encyclopedia of Archeological Excavations in the Holy Land. 2 vols. Mar
The Prentice-Hall Textbook of Cosmetology. Jan.
Smythe, M. B., ed. The Black American Reference Book. Jun.
Sulzberger, C. L. Go Gentle into the Night. May.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Cappon, L., ed. Atlas of Early American History. Apr.
Mach, R. Catalogue of Arabic Manuscripts. Jul.

San Francisco Bk. Co.
McCosker, J. E. & E. Janss. The Undersea Life Calendar-1977. Jul.

Scribners
Dictionary of Scientific Biography. Vols. 13 & 14. Mar.
Mansion, J. E. Harrap's Modern College French and English Dictionary. Apr.
Salaman, R. A. Dictionary of Tools. Mar.
Wynter, H. & A. Turner, The Collector's Book of Scientific Instruments. Mar.

S. & S.
Lasser Inst. J. K. Lasser's Managing Your Family Finances. Apr.
Lovejoy's College Guide. 13th ed. Apr.
Queen Victoria. Advice to My Granddaughter. Apr.
Rosen, S. Future Facts. Apr.

Sleepy Hollow
Butler, J. T. The Family Collections at Van Cortlandt Manor. Feb.
Butler, J. T. Washington Irving's Sunnyside. Feb.

Stanford Univ. Pr.
Mass, J. P. The Kamakura Bakufu. Jul.
Rocq, M. M., ed. California Local History. Jul.

Stein & Day
Macksey, J. & K. Macksey. The Book of Women's Achievements. May

Touchstone: S. & S.
Shapiro, H. L. Peking Man. Mar.

Transatlantic
Speed, F. M., ed. Film Review 1975-76. Mar.

Univ. of Illinois Pr.
Brichford, M. & others. Manuscripts Guide to Collections at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Apr.

Viking
Gluck, F., ed. Modern Publicity 1975-1976.

Walker
Supplement to the United Nations World Trade Annual. Jan.

Weybright & Talley
Highet, G. The Immortal Profession. May.

Zondervan
Brown, C., ed. The New International Dictionary of New Testament Theology. Jan.

THE ARTS

Arco
Shaw, M. & others, eds. National Anthems of the World. 4th rev. ed. Jan.

Arlington House
Parish, J. R. The Tough Guys. Jul.

Barre
Boston Society of Architects & W. Geddis. Architecture Boston. Jun.

Bobbs
Brunner, M. Antiques for Amateurs on a Shoestring Budget. Apr.
Stokes, G. Star-Making Machinery. Apr.

Bounty: Crown
Adrian, W. Speed. Feb.
Cool, P. Children's Pin-Up Gallery. Mar.
London, R. Cinema of Mystery. Feb.

Braziller
Comini, A. Egon Schiele. Apr.
Hornung, C. P. & F. Johnson. Two Hundred Years of American Graphic Arts. Feb.
Mutherich, F. Carolingian Painting. Jun.
Schapiro, M. Romanesque Art. Jul.
Welch, S. C. Persian Painting. Mar.

Cornell Univ. Pr.
Bialostocki, J. The Art of the Renaissance in Eastern Europe. Apr.
Gombrich, E. H. The Heritage of Apelles. Sept.
Gould, C. The Paintings of Correggio. Feb.
Haskell, F. Rediscoveries in Art. Feb.

Crowell
The Color Treasury of Oriental Rugs. Mar
Levine, F. The Cutlure Barons. Jun.
Oster, H. Living Country Blues. Feb.

Crown
American Artist Magazine Staff. American Artist. Feb.
Barlow, R. & B. Stewart. E. C. Horror Comics of 1950's Feb.
Busshell, S. W. Oriental Ceramic Art. Jun.
Caniff, M. Terry and the Pirates. Feb.
Cogniat, R. Pissarro QLP Art Series. Apr.
Gardner, P. V. Glass of Frederick Carter. Feb.
Halas, J. Great Movie Cartoon Parade. Jun.
Hornby, G. & Eds. Eastman Kodak Photographing America. May.
McCay, W. Little Nemo, 1905-1906 Feb.
Nahas, R. Your Acting Career. May.
Willis, J. Screen World. 1976. Jul.

Dekker
Cohen, S. J., ed. Dance Perspectives. Feb.
Croce, A., ed. Ballet Review. Feb.

Dodd
Green, S. Encyclopaedia of the Musical Theatre. Mar.
McNally, T. "The Ritz" and Other Plays. Jun.
Terry, W. Ballet Guide. Feb.

Down East
Maine Architecture from the 16th Century to the Present. Jun.

Dutton
Goldstein, L. & J. Kaufman. Into Film. May.
Nelson, C. T., comp. The Quilt Engagement Calendar—1977.
Porter, E. The Eliot Porter Calendar —1977. Jul.
Stefano, F., Jr. Pictorial Souvenirs and Commemoratives of North America. Apr.

Fireside: S. & S.
Seeger, P. The Incompleat Folksinger. Apr.

HBJ
Schneider, I. & B. Korot. Video Art. May.
Woolf, V. Freshwater. Jun.

Harmony: Crown
Gabor, M. Art of the Calendar. May.
Notestrine, S. G. Illuminated Declaration of Independence. Feb.
O'Neil, D. Secret Origins fof the D.C. Superheroes. Mar.
Rosenau, H. Boullee and Visionary Architecture. Jun.

Knopf
Brandau, R., ed. De Meyer. May.
Sandberg, L. & D. Weissman. The Folk Music Sourcebook. May.
Noad, F. The Classical Guitar. May.
Taupin, B. The One Who Writes the Words for Elton John. May.

Kodansha
Stock, D. National Parks of Japan. Jul.
Yamada, C. F., ed. Dialogue in Art. Jun.

Livingston Pr.
Perry, R. Photography for the Professionals. May.

M.I.T. Pr.
Appleyard, D. Planning at Pluralist City. Mar.
Hayden, D. Seven American Utopias. Mar.
Kranz, K. Early Form Sequences, 1927-1932. Feb.
Mamber, S. Cinema Verité in America. Mar.
Martinell, C. Gaudi. Feb.
Matejka, L. & I. R. Titunik, eds. Semiotics of Art. Mar.
Rowe, C. The Mathematics of the Ideal Villa and Other Essays. Mar.
Tafuri, M. Architecture and Utopia. Jan.

McGraw
Davern, J. Lewis Mumford. Oct.
Galella, R. Offguard. May

McKay
Ames, J. & J. Siegelman. The Book of Tap. Jul.
Dunlop, R. O. Painting for Pleasure. Apr.
Grossman, L. A Social History of Rock Music. May.
Hagen, C. Color. Jul.
Harvey, E. Jazz Piano. Apr.
Mason, R. Photography. Apr.
Palmer, C. K. Orchestration. Apr.
Palmer, C. K. The Piano. Apr.
Perceval, A. History of Music. Apr.
Rice, D. T. Art Study. Apr.
Routh, F. The Organ. Apr.
Rowland-Entwistle, T. The Violin. Apr.
West, T. W. Architecture in England Apr.

Macmillan
Counts, C. Pottery Workshop. Mar.
Eaton, F. Dolls in Color. Feb.
Gammond, P. Musical Instruments in Color. Feb
Kentner, L. The Piano. Apr.
Menuhin, Y. The Violin and Viola. Jan.
Nicoll, J. Rossetti. Mar.
Nicholls, A. Clocks in Color. Feb.
Piepenburg, R. Raku Pottery. Apr.
Smith, B. The Vaudevillians. May.
Spencer, I. Walter Crane. Jan.
Tidball, H. The Weaver's Book. Apr.
Welling, W. Collector's Guide to Nineteenth Century Photographs. Mar.
Wight, F. S. The Potent Image. Apr.
Wolfram, E. History of Collage. Apr.

Morrow
Art Gallery of Ontario. Exposure. Apr.
Hamilton, D. David Hamilton's Private Collection. Jun.

Mexico

Viewed through the eyes of the former president MIGUEL ALEMAN

"The purpose of Pictorial Images of Mexico Today is to produce a Full Color Preview of Mexico's most beautiful new tourist areas ... further, we have premiered, in dramatic color, photographically, the ever-increasing Industrial, Agricultural, Medical, Fine Arts and Technological Development in Mexico today. A pictorial was selected as the vehicle to accomplish this purpose."

Miguel Aleman, President of Consejo Nacional de Turismo.

Priced at $29.95, this 320 page book with a simulated leather cover features over 400 striking full color pictures that expose each facet of her unique and rare grandeur from magnificent architecture, ultra modern factories, fine arts, music, cuisine, fashion, scenic beauty, natural history, to the greatest resources of all ... her people at work and at leisure.

"In my opinion the book, "Pictorial Images of Mexico Today" will prove to be one of the most exciting photographic books on a nation to date."

Warren Deal, President Graphic Arts Center Portland, Oregon.

INTERNATIONAL PICTORIAL PUBLICATIONS
49 South Baldwin,
Sierra Madre, Ca. 91024 (213) 355-8205

Acupuncture Therapy

Current Chinese Practice
Second edition, revised and enlarged
Leong T. Tan, Margaret Y.-C. Tan and Ilza Veith

The second edition of the best-selling text includes 250 new points, provides greatly expanded coverage of acupuncture-anesthesia, and includes such new specialties as neurosurgery, thoracic operations, and pediatric surgery. Current Chinese observations on the mechanism of acupuncture-analgesia are presented, as well as an update on legal developments in the United States.

256 pp. 51 illus. March
ISBN 064-6 $17.50

The Docile Puerto Rican

René Marqués
Essays Translated with an Introduction by Barbara Bockus Aponte

Puerto Rico's leading contemporary writer describes the problem of his homeland's national identity and the prospects for its survival in the shadow of United States political, economic, and cultural domination. These eight essays draw on the disciplines of literature, education, psychology, and sociology to show why cultural identity and independence are clearly linked in the mind of the Puerto Rican intellectual.

160 pp. March ISBN 048-4 $10.00

Spring 76 Temple University Press
Philadelphia, Pa. 19122

Social Services in the United States

Policies and Programs
Sheila B. Kamerman and Alfred J. Kahn

Day care, community services for the aged, access to family planning and abortion, and institutional and alternative care for neglected or delinquent children—these are some of the "personal social service" programs whose laws, formal policies, funding, staffing, measures of need, coverage rates, delivery systems, and patterns of use are analyzed in this book. Essential for courses in social policy and welfare.

400 pp. April
cloth ISBN 065-4 $15.00
paper ISBN 066-2 $7.95

The Social Gospel

Religion and Reform in Changing America
Edited by Ronald C. White, Jr., and C. Howard Hopkins

The movement which changed the orientation of religion and social policy in America and formed links with the movements on behalf of peace, women, and blacks is presented here through primary sources, critical essays, and new scholarship. Among the preachers of the social gospel were the towering figures of Niebuhr, DuBois, Rauschenbusch, Gladden, Willard, and Dr. Martin Luther King.

368 pp. Illus. April
cloth ISBN 083-2 $15.00
paper ISBN 084-0 $6.95

The Philadelphia Quakers in the Industrial Age, 1865-1920

Philip S. Benjamin

A moneyed elite that attacked the commercial temper of the times—this is one of the many paradoxical characterizations that apply to the Quakers of the industrial age. A people who had tried to remain apart from American society and criticize its vanities, the Quakers of the Gilded Age found themselves in positions of prominence in business, politics, and the arts.

309 pp. April ISBN 086-7 $12.50

Portents of Rebellion

Rhetoric and Revolution in Philadelphia, 1765-1776

Stephen E. Lucas

The American colonists had to be convinced to break with England, and it was the rhetoric of certain skilled propagandists that made the Battle of Bunker Hill inevitable. That is the argument Professor Lucas advances in this provocative book. He identifies the most articulate radicals and analyzes the rhetorical tools they used.

376 pp. August ISBN 087-5 $17.50

Write for information on Children's Literature, Vol. 4, starring P.L Travers, Francelia Butler, Skipping Lambkins, Rudyard Kipling, Laura Ingalls Wilder, and Indira Ghandi. Paper $4.95. Cloth $15.00

Publisher's ISBN prefix is 0-87722.

New York Graphic Society
Adams, C. Fritz Scholder Lithographs. Jan.
Baver, H. & others. Bauhaus 1919-1928. Feb.
Desroches-Noblecourt, C. Tutankhamen. Mar.
Eiland, M. L. Oriental Rugs. Mar.
Hulten, K. G. P. Jean Tinguely "Meta." Feb.
Justema, W. Pattern. Apr.
Kane, P. 300 Years of American Seating Furniture. Apr.
Lang, L. Expressionist Book Illustration in Germany 1907-1927. Feb.
Loth, C. & J. T. Sadler. The Only Proper Style. Jan.
Metropolitan Museum of Art. From the Lands of the Scythians. Feb.
Mookerjee, A. Yoga Art. Jan.
The Pieced Quilt. Jan.
Selz, P. & M. Constatine. Art Nouveau. Feb.
Van Gindertael, R. Ensor. Jan.
Webb, P. The Erotic Arts. Apr.
Yale Univ. Art Gallery. American Art 1750-1800. Apr.

Norton
Automobile Assn. of England. Treasures of Britain. Aug.
Boretz, B. & E. T. Cone, eds. Perspectives on Notation and Performance. Feb.
Shanks, B. The Cool Fire. Mar.
Strindberg, A. The Dance of Death. May.
Strunk, O. Essays on Music in the Byzantine World. May.
Woyinka, W. Death and the King's Horseman. Apr.

Pantheon
Bergman, I. Face to Face. Apr.
Sartre, J.-P. Sartre on Theater. May.

Penguin
de Mare, E. Photography.

Potter
Brander, M. Scottish Border Ballads and Battles. Mar.
Miller, G. & D. Miller. Picture Postcards in the U.S. 1893-1918. May.
Paskman, D. "Gentlemen, Be Seated." Mar.
Sasowsky, N. Prints of Reginald Marsh. Jun.

Prentice-Hall
Guillot, G. & G. Prudhommeau. The Book of Ballet. Jan.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Bartok, B. Turkish Folk Music from Asia Minor. Jan.
Bronson, B. The Singing Tradition of Child's Popular Ballads. Jul.
Hatfield, R. Botticelli's Uffizi Adoration. May.
Millard, C. The Sculpture of Edgar Degas. Jun.
Pevsner, N. A History of Building Types. May.
Read, H. The Art of Sculpture. May.
Rykwert, J. The Idea of a Town. Apr.
Schulz, A. The Sculpture of Bernardo Rossellino and His Workshop. Jun.
Schmizu, Y. & C. Wheelwright. Japanese Ink Paintings from American Collections. May.
Stillwell, R., ed. The Princeton Encyclopedia of Classical Sites. Apr.
Zuckerkandl, V. Man the Musician. May.

Random
Patrick, R. Kennedy's Children. Feb.
Vogel, A. Film as a Subversive Art. Apr.

Abner Schram
All the Paintings in the Rijksmuseum in Amsterdam. Mar.
Birbari, E. Dress in Italian Painting 1460-1500. Mar.
Bolland, R. Victorians on the Thames. Mar.
Kirschenbaum, B. The Religious and Historical Paintings of Jan Steen. May.
Seuphor, M. Abstract Painting in Flanders. Mar.
Tuscania. Mar.
Waterhouse, E. Roman Baroque Painting. Mar.

Scribners
Dardis, T. Some Time in the Sun. Jun.
Larkin, D. Fantastic Creatures of Edward Julius Detmold. Mar.
Larkin, D. The Marine Paintings of Chris Mayger. Mar.
Larkin, D. The Paintings of Carl Larsson. Mar.
Lyons, M. Russia Perceived. Jun.
Reck, D. Music of the Whole Earth. Aug.

S. & S.
Greene, G. The Return of A. J. Raffles. Apr.

Stein & Day
Goodfriend, J. A Guide to Classical Music. Aug.
Greif, M. The Gay Engagement Calendar 1977. Aug.
Main Street Pr. The Fashion Engagement Book 1977. Aug.
Main Street Pr. The Magic Calendar 1977. Aug.

Taplinger
Baxter, J. The Hollywood Exiles. Apr.
Vassal, J. Electric Children. Apr.

Transatlantic
Muller, J.-E., Velazquez. Apr.
Wedgwood, C. V. The Political Career of Peter Paul Rubens. Mar.

Univ. of Illinois Pr.
Townsend, C. R. San Antonio Rose. May.

Univ. Massachusetts Pr.
Carey, G. G. A Sailor's Songbag. Aug.
Fly, R. Shakespeare's Mediated World. May.
Mackerras, C. The Chinese Theatre in Modern Times. Jan.

Viking
Blunt, W. The Splendors of Islam.
Bowit, J., ed. Russian Art of the Avant Garde.
Culshaw, J. Reflections on Wagner's Ring.
Fugard, A. & others. Sizwe Bansi is Dead and The Island.
Gaunt, W. Marine Painting.
Guinness, D. & J. T. Sodler, Jr. Paddadio.
Jean, M., ed. The Autobiography of Surrealism.
Miller, A. The Theatre Essays of Arthur Miller.
Mordden, E. Better Foot Forward.
Pevsner, N. & others. A Dictionary of Architecture.
Racine, J. Andromache and Other Plays.
Simpson, R., ed. Symphony.
Tomkins, C. The Scene.
Wade, D. Pattern in Islamic Art.

Walker
Adams, L. Art on Trial. May.
Baines, A., ed. Musical Instruments Through the Ages. Jan.
Fairmont Park Art Assn. Philadelphia's Treasures in Bronze and Stone. Mar.

Watts
Manchel, F. The Talking Clowns. Apr.

Weatherhill
Asian Cultural Centre for UNESCO. Folk Tales from Asia for Children Everywhere. Mar.
Bushell, R. Netsuke Familiar and Unfamiliar. Feb.
Fukuyama, T. Heian Temples. May.
Terada, T. Japanese Art in World Perspective. Apr.
Welch, S. C. Indian Drawings and Painted Sketches. Feb.

Wesleyan Univ. Pr.
Ludwig, A. Graven Images. Jan.
Sherman, J. Soaring. Apr.
Tatum, G. B. Philadelphia Georgian. Jun.

Yale Univ. Pr.
Brown, E. M. New Haven. Apr.
Yeston, M. The Stratification of Musical Rhythm. Jun.

BIOGRAPHY

Arlington House
Josefsberg, M. The Jack Benny Show. Jun.
Kulik, K. Alexander Korda. Feb.

Atheneum
Lee, L. I. Can't Stay Long. Feb.

Braziller
Stern, P. J. C. G. Jung. Apr.

Bobbs
James, M. The Raven. Apr.
Sabbag, R. Cocaine Blues. May.

Columbia Univ. Pr.
Hazard, L. Attorney for the Situation. Jun.

Crowell
Deiss, J. J. The Roman Years of Margaret Fuller. Jan.
Hubbard, H. Payne Hollow. Jan.
Masani, Z. Indira Gandhi. Apr.

Crown
Cabara, L. Fleischer Story. Mar.
Weed, S. &. S. Swanton. My Search for Patty Hearst. Feb.

John Day
Burney, F. The Famous Miss Burney. Mar.

Delacorte
Logan, J. Josh. May.
Morella, J. & E. V. Epstein. The "It" Girl. Apr.

Dial
Donlen, Y. Third Time Lucky. Apr.
Harris, M. Best Father Ever Invented. Apr.
Terry, W. Prometheus Unbound. Jul.

Dodd
Mallowan, A. C. Come Tell Me How You Live. Feb.
Mason, R. K. & V. Harrison. Confusion to the Enemy. Feb.

Dutton
Derby, P. The Lady and Her Tiger. May.
Diapoulos, P. & S. Linakis. The Sixth Family. May.
Guthrie, W. Bound for Glory. Jun.
LaBastille, A. Woodswoman. May.
MacShane, F. The Life of Raymond Chandler. May.
Patrick, T. Let Our Children Go! Apr.

Eriksson
Hoyt, E. P. The Shah. Mar.

Evans
Brown, H. Yesterday's Child. May.
Rubin, J. Growing (Up) at Thirty-Seven. Feb.

Fireside: S. & S.
Howlett, J. James Dean. Mar.

Harmony: Crown
Engen, R. Kate Greenaway. Jun.

HBJ
Bevington, H. Along Came the Witch. Mar.
Brooke-Shepherd, G. Uncle of Europe. Jan.
Cockshut, A. O. J. Truth to Life. Mar.
Burrows, W. E. Vigilante! Jun.
Green, R. L. & W. Hooper. C. S. Lewis. Mar.
Lehmann, J. Virginia Woolf and Her World. Feb.
Manners, W. Patience and Fortitude. Jun.
Nin, A. The Diary of Anais Nin. Vol. 6. May.
Panin, D. The Notebooks of Sologdin. Feb.
Parrish, R. Growing Up in Hollywood. Apr.
Sahl, M. Heartland. May.
West, J. The Woman Said Yes. Apr.
Woolf, V. Roger Fry. Mar.

Knopf
Fonteyn, M. Margot Fonteyn. May.
Hingley, R. A. A New Life of Anton Chekhov. May.
Mitchell, P. Act of Love. Mar.
Skinner, B. F. Particulars of My Life. Apr.

Seymour Lawrence
Fellini, F. Fellini on Fellini. Apr.

Lippincott
Hibbert, C. The Royal Victorians. May.
Taber, G. Harvest of Yesterdays. Jun.
Westmore, F. & M. Davidson. The Westmores of Hollywood. Apr.

McGraw
Gnarowski, M. Leonard Cohen. Apr.
Kovic, R. Born on the Fourth of July. Jul.
Russell, F. Adams. Apr.

McKay
Lawson, D. Paul Morphy. Apr.
Mardis, J. Memos of a West Point Cadet. Apr.
Robyns, G. Princess Grace. May.
Thompson, C. Bing. Mar.

Macmillan
Lady Gregory. Seventy Years (1852-1922). Jan.
Loomer, A. Famous Flaws. Jul.
Meyer, L. Off the Sauce. Apr.
Rowland, P. David Lloyd George. Apr.
Speer, A. Spandau. Jan.
Williams, N. The Cardinal and the Secretary. Mar.
Wilson, E. Sinatra. Jun.

Mason/Charter
Dixon, P. George Canning. Aug.
Hendrickson, R. Hamilton I. Apr.
Weatherby, W. J. Conversations with Marilyn. Apr.

Morrow
Arnaz, D. A Book. Feb.
Asinof, E. The Fox Is Crazy Too. Feb.
Dali, S. The Unspeakable Confessions of Salvador Dali. Feb.
Easton, C. The Search for Sam Goldwyn. Jan.
Hallinger, B. The Wings Are Gone. Jun.
Hotchner, A. E. Doris Day. Jan.
Lester, J. All Is Well. Jun.
Martin, M. My Heart Belongs. Apr.
Matray, M. & A. Kruger. The Liaison. Feb.
Smith, W. W. A Letter from My Father. Mar.
Teichmann, H. Smart Aleck. May.
Truman, M. Women of Courage. Jun.

New York Graphic Society
The Fairbanks Album. Feb.

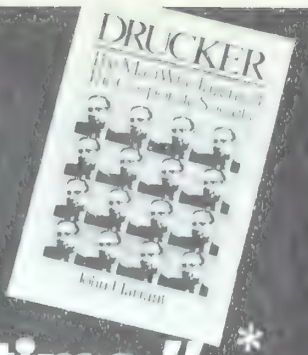
Norton
Allon, Y. My Father's House. May.
Burns, J. M. Edward Kennedy and the Camelot Legacy. Apr.
Epton, N. Josephine. May.
Kiernan, T. Arafat. Aug.
Lippman, T., Jr. Senator Ted Kennedy. Jan.
Maguire, J. On Shares. Feb.
Marx, A. Goldwyn. Mar.
Schulke, F., ed. Martin Luther King, Jr. Mar.
Valenti, J. A Very Human President. Jan.

Ohio Univ. Pr.
Barratt, G. The Rebel on the Bridge. Jan.

Potter
Bridgeman, H. & E. Drury. British Eccentric. Mar.

Random
Clifton, L. Generations. Mar.
Edwards. A. &. S. Citron. The Inn and Us. Jun.
Hoagland, E. Red Wolves and Black Bears. May.
Schickele, P. The Definitive Biography of P. D. Q. Bach. Apr.

"This critical analysis makes a substantial contribution in describing the importance of the greatest management philosopher and writer of our time."*



"Peter Drucker has had a major impact on American management for many years. It's time someone took a hard look to find out why. This book does just that."
Chester Burger
Author of Survival in the Executive Jungle

"If you've 'always meant to read Drucker' but haven't gotten around to it, this is the opportunity to catch up."
Auren Uris
Research Institute of America

"Reading the book by Tarrant about Drucker is like reading the score and expert interpretation of the work of an accomplished composer. It permits one to enjoy Drucker's philosophy and contribution with a much deeper understanding."
Ernest Dichter
Author and Consultant

DRUCKER: THE MAN WHO INVENTED THE CORPORATE SOCIETY
By John J. Tarrant

The Foreword is by C. Northcote Parkinson, the distinguished English author, well-known for his book, Parkinson's Law.

For reference purposes, the book contains a complete annotated bibliography of all of Drucker's works from his first book published in 1942, The Future of Industrial Man, to his recently published Management.

* Harold Koontz
Mead Johnson Professor of Management
Department of Management
University of California, Los Angeles

Drucker: The Man Who Invented the Corporate Society, takes you through each and every one of Drucker's books. It is must reading for executives, students, and for anyone who wants to understand one of America's most important thinkers.

ISBN 0-8436-0744-0
LC 75-44263
320 pp.
$13.50

CAHNERS BOOKS
INTERNATIONAL
221 Columbus Ave.
Boston, MA 02116

CRITICAL STUDIES IN RELIGION

JAMES, Martin Dibelius. (Hermeneia). Available now. $16.95, cloth.

THEOPOETIC: Theology and the Religious Imagination, Amos Niven Wilder. March $4.95, cloth.

HOPE AGAINST HOPE: Moltmann to Merton in One Theological Decade, Walter Holden Capps. April. $4.75, paper.

STRUCTURAL ANALYSIS OF NARRATIVE, Jean Calloud. (Semeia Supplements). April. $3.95, paper.

STUDIES IN THE STRUCTURE OF HEBREW NARRATIVE, Robert C. Culley. (Semeia Supplements). April. $3.95, paper.

JESUS THROUGH MANY EYES: Introduction to the Theology of the New Testament, Stephen Neill. May. $5.95, paper.

NEW BIRTH OF FREEDOM: A Theology of Bondage and Liberation, Peter C. Hodgson. May. $7.95, paper. $14.95, cloth.

THE PASSION IN MARK: Studies on Mark 14-16, Werner H. Kelber, editor. May. $10.95, cloth.

THE SON OF GOD, Martin Hengel. May. $3.75, paper.

WHAT IS STRUCTURAL EXEGESIS?, Daniel Patte. (Guides to Biblical Scholarship). May. $2.95, paper.

JESUS IN CONTEMPORARY HISTORICAL RESEARCH, Gustaf Aulén. June. $9.50, cloth.

MINISTRY TO WORD AND SACRAMENTS: History and Theology, Bernard Cooke. June. $25.00 (tentative), cloth.

THE THEOLOGY AND EXPERIENCE OF THE HOLY SPIRIT, Claus Heitman and Heribert Mühlen, editors; Charles A. M. Hall, translator and general editor. July. $9.95, cloth.

ISRAEL IN REVOLUTION: 6-73 C.E.: A Political History Based on the Writings of Josephus, David M. Rhoads. July. $5.95, paper. $9.95, cloth.

THE CHRIST OF FAITH AND THE JESUS OF HISTORY, David Friedrich Strauss. (Lives of Jesus Series). August. $14.95, paper.

Write for complete Spring-Summer 1976 catalog.

FORTRESS PRESS
2900 Queen Lane
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19129

Canadian Representative:
G.R. WELCH COMPANY LIMITED
310 Judson Street
Toronto, Ontario, M8Z 1J9, Canada

Reader's Digest Pr.
Levenson, S. Maud Gonne. Jun.
Wason, B. Ellen. Mar.

Saturday Review Pr.
Densen-Gerber, J. Walk in My Shoes. Jul.
Duke, M. The Du Ponts. May.
Kitchen, P. A Most Unsettling Person. Jan.
Kriegel, L. Notes for the Two-Dollar Window. Mar.

Scribners
Amis, K. Kipling and His World. Mar.
Daiches, D. Boswell and His World. Mar.
Deacon, J. J. Joey. Mar.
Davenport, M. Mozart. Apr.
Dickson, L. Radclyffe Hall at the Well of Loneliness. Mar.
Dubos, R. Louis Pasteur. Mar.
Hubbard, M. Propertius. Mar.
Rodzinski, H. My Life with Arthur Rodzinski. Apr.
Rowse, A. L. Jonathan Swift. Apr.
Shepherd, D. The Man Who Loves Giants. Apr.
Swanberg, W. A. Citizen Hearst. Apr.

S. & S.
Deford, F. Big Bill Tilden. Jun.
Pullar, P. Frank Harris, a Biography Mar.
Rivera, G. A. Special Kind of Courage. Mar.
Wayne, J. America, Why I Love Her. Jun.

Sleepy Hollow
Irving, W. Life of George Washington Dec.
Siever, H. J., ed. Six Presidents from the Empire State. Feb.

Stein & Day
Clark, E. Leading Ladies. Jul
Gal, H. Wagner. Mar.
Hutchison, H. F. Sir Christopher Wren. Feb.
Macksey, K. Guderian. Feb.
Pandey, B. N. Nehru. Jul.

Taplinger
Gielgud, J. Early Stages. Feb.
Jules-Verne, J. Jules Verne. Apr.
Plomer, W. The Autiobiography of William Plomer. Feb.
Sharples, A. The Scorpion's Tail. Feb.

Transatlantic
Argyll, M. Forget Not. Mar.
Cockerill, A. W. Sir Percy Sillitoe. Mar
Edwards, R. D. Daniel O'Donnell and His World. Apr.
Hedley, O. Queen Charlotte. Apr.
Stonehouse, J. Death of an Idealist. Mar
Surtees, V. Charlotte Canning. May.

Viking
Betenson, L. P. Butch Cassidy, My Brother
Birley, A., tr. Lives of the Later Caesars.
McCarthy, P. Celine.
Moor, D. An Impossible Woman.
Nicolaiesky, B. & O. Maenchen-Helfen. Karl Marx
Ridley, J. Garibaldi
Shub, D. Lenin.
Spender, S. T. S. Eliot.
Sutton, W. Where the Money Was.

Watts
Kurtz, H. I. Captain John Smith. Feb.

Westminster
Parker, T. H. L. John Calvin. Apr.
Stohlman, M. L. L. John Witherspoon. Apr

Weybright & Talley
Hoyt, E. The Whitneys. Jun.

Helen & Kurt Wolff
Frisch, M. Montauk. May.
Lindbergh, A. M. The Flower and the Nettle. Mar.
Simenon, G. Letter to My Mother. Jan.
Strage, M. Women of Power. Mar.

Yale Univ. Pr.
Reid, B. L. The Lives of Roger Casement. May.

BUSINESS & ECONOMICS

Abingdon
Heath, F. H. Clergy Tax Guide, 1976. Dec.

Arco
Elzerman, A. W. Your Future in Salesmanship and Sales Management. May.
Turner, D. R. Management Analyst. Mar.

Arlington House
Holt, T. J. Total Investing. Feb.
Myers, C. V. The Coming Deflation. Apr.

Cambridge Univ. Pr.
Wood, A. A Theory of Profits. Nov.

Cornell Univ. Pr.
Mikdashi, Z. The International Politics of Natural Resources. Apr.

Crowell
Hardy, C. C. Dun & Bradstreet's Guide to $Your Investments$ 1976-1977. Jan.
Holzman, R. S. Take It Off. Jan.
Jones, A. The Decline of Capitol. Jan.
Kelder, J. How to Open a Swiss Bank Account. Apr.

Dial
Engel, P. H. The Overachievers. Mar.

Dodd
Bloomstein, M. J. Consumer's Guide to Fighting Back. Jun.
Malabre, A. L., Jr. Understanding the Economy. Apr.

Facts on File
Consumer Protection. Jan.
Ford and the Economy. May.

Fell
Sheeran, J. How To Skyrocket Your Income. Apr.
Tso, L. How To Make Money in Listed Options. Apr.

Fireside: S. & S.
Elbert, V. & G. Elbert. Plants That Really Bloom Indoors. Mar.

Free Pr.
Brown, C. C. Putting the Corporate Board to Work. Feb.
Eells, R. Global Corporations. Jan.
Rothberg, R. R. Corporate Strategy and Product Innovation. Apr.
Simon, H. A. Administrative Behavior. 3d ed. Jan.
Wrightsman, D. An Introduction to Monetary Theory and Policy. 2d ed. Mar.

Funk & Wagnalls
Hardy, C. C. Funk & Wagnalls Guide to Personal Money Management. Mar.

HBJ
Glaser, E. M. Worklife and Productivity. Jun.

Johns Hopkins
Kreps, J. & R. Clark. Sex, Age, and Work. Jan.
Levitan, S. A. & B. H. Johnston. The Job Corps. Jan.

Kodansha
Ballon, R. J. & others. Financial Reporting in Japan. May.
Matsushita, K. Japan at the Brink. Apr.

M.I.T. Pr.
Berliner, J. S. The Innovation Decision in Soviet Industry. May.
Chen, C.-C. Applications of Operations Research Models to Libraries. Apr.
Hymer, S. H. The International Operations of National Firms. May.
Marlow. W. H., ed. Modern Trends in Logistics Research. May.
Perkowski, J. C. & others. Resource Material for Environmental Management and Education. Jan.

McGraw
Benke, W. The Manual of Land Investment. Jun.
Browne, H. The Swiss Bank Handbook. May.
Bush, G. Anatomy of a Growth Company. Apr.
Grossman, L. Fat Paper. Jul.
Gruber, W. H. & J. S. Niles. The New Management. May.
Hegarty, E. How To Succeed in Company Politics. 2d ed. Jun.
Lekachman, R. Economists at Bay Mar.
Liker, R. & J. G. Likert. New Ways of Managing Conflict. Apr.
Simon, J. How To Start and Operate a Mail Order Business. 2d ed. Jul
Veit, L. A. India. Apr.

McKay
Betts, P. W. Office Management. Apr.
Breadmore, R. G. Organization and Methods. Apr.
Dutton, R. G. J. Dutton Speedwords. Apr.
Goodkin, S. Superland. Aug.
Makower, M. S. & E. Williamson. Operational Research. Apr.
Rickenbacker, W. F. William F. Rickenbacker's Savings and Investment Guide. Apr
Thomas, S. E. Economics. Apr.

Macmillan
Brown, C. C. Putting the Corporate Board to Work. Jan.

Mason/Charter
Craig, G. H. Unscrewing the Small Investor. Apr.

Morrow
Barnes, J. How To Cut Your Taxes. Jan.
Barnes, J. Who Will Get Your Money. Apr.
Chesler, P. & E. J. Goodman. Women, Money & Power. Feb.
Clark, L. How To Make Money with Your Crafts. Apr.

Norton
Bowen, W. C. & O. Ashenfelter, eds. Labor and the National Economy. Jan.
Heilbroner, R. L. Business Civilization in Decline. Apr.
Hochman, H. M., ed. The Urban Economy. Feb.
Spulber, N. & I. Horowitz. Quantitative Economic Policy and Planning. Apr.
Temin, P. Did Monetary Forces Cause the Great Depression? Feb.
Vernon, R., ed. The Oil Crisis. Apr

Pantheon
Blair, J. M. The Control of Oil. Jun.

Penguin
Howard, M. C. & J. E. King. The Economics of Marx.

Prentice-Hall
Bennett, V. & C. Clagett. 1001 Ways To Be Your Own Boss. Apr.
Harper, V. Handbook of Investment Products and Services. Jan.
Meltzer, Y. Putting Money to Work Mar.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Form, W. Blue-Collar Stratification. May.
Kyle, J. The Balance of Payments in a Monetary Economy. Jul.
Parker, N. & E. Jones, eds. European Peasants and Their Markets. Feb.

Random
Linden, E. The Alms Race. Jun.
Loebl, E. Humanomics. Apr.
Lyon, P. Promises To Pay. Apr.
Wilson, W. L. Full Faith & Credit. Mar.

San Francisco Bk. Co.
Gurley, J. G. Challengers to Capitalism. Apr.
Solomon, E. The Anxious Economy. Apr.

Scribners
Bliss, E. C. The ABC's of Time Management. Jun.
Bylinsky, G. The Innovation Millionaires. Jul.
Parker, D. B. Crime by Computer. Jan.

S. & S.
Harrington, M. The Twilight of Capitalism. May.
Margolius, S. & others. Stocks, Bonds and Mutual Funds. Feb.

Taplinger
Conolly, V. Siberia Today and Tomorrow. Feb.

Touchstone: S. & S.
Melman, S. The Permanent War Economy. Mar.

Viking
Guattari, G. & F. Guattari. Anti-Oedipus.

Watts
Collier, J. L. Making Music for Money. Mar.

Weybright & Talley
Dickson, P. The Future of the Workplace. Jan.
Jensen, M. The Financiers. May.

Yale Univ. Pr.
Berry, A. & M. Urrutia. Income Distribution in Colombia. May.
Mamalakis, M. J. The Growth and Structure of the Chilean Economy. Mar

FICTION

Atheneum
Braine, J. The Pious Agent. Mar.
Dobyns, S. Saratoga Longshot. Feb.
Koontz, D. R. Night Chills. Feb.
Winward, W. Fives Wild. Mar.

Bobbs
Arrighi, M. Navona 1000. Feb.
Bova, B. The Multiple Man. Jun.
Cooper, W. Death Has a Thousand Doors. Apr
DeMaria, R. To Be a King. Mar.
Downs, R. C. S. Country Dying. Apr.
Harrison, M., ed. & ann. Beyond Baker Street. Mar.
King, H. Four Days. Feb.
Kluge, P. F. The Day That I Die. Feb.
Lafferty, R. A. Not to Mention Camels. May.
Porter, J. The Package Included Murder. Mar.
Rye, B. R. A Feast of Pikes. Apr
Vassilikos, V. The Monarch. Apr.
Yglesias, J. The Kill Price. Apr.

Braziller
Anderson, E. & R. Coover, eds. Minute Stories. Jul.
Bainbridge, B. Sweet William. Mar
Duffy, M. Capital. Mar
Emecheta, B. The Bride Price. Apr.
Hinde, T. Our Father. May.

Crowell
Benson, E. F. Make Way for Lucia. Jul.
Dahlberg, E. Bottom Dogs, From Flushing to Calvary, Those Who Perish. Mar.
Dahlberg, E. The Olive of Minerva. Feb.
Frederics, M. Black Work. Jul.
Hartmann, M. A Game for Vultures. Jan.
Neely, R. A Madness of the Heart. Feb.
Sigal, C. Zone of the Interior. Apr.

Crown
Courlander, H. Treasury of Afro-American Folklore. May.
Foster, H. & M. Trell. Prince Valiant and the Golden Princess. Feb.
Foster, H. Prince Valiant in the New World. Feb.
Foster, H. & M. Trell. Prince Valiant's Perilous Voyage. Feb.

Spring 1976 titles from Larousse

The World of Rocks and Minerals: by Anita Mason, photographs by Eric Storey: joins the successful series started by THE WORLD OF SHELLS and caters to the growing number of collectors. 108 pages of full-color illustrations. hardbound ISBN #0-88332-031-2 $8.95 paperback ISBN #0-88332-032-0 $4.95

The World of Shells: hardbound ISBN #0-88332-074-6 $8.95 paperback ISBN #0-88332-073-8 $4.95

Quilling: The Colonial Art of Paper Scrollwork by Elisabeth Aaron: a timely fourth title in the Larousse Craft Series with the marked revival in colonial crafts. Step-by-step instructions and diagrams from the basics to the most elaborate practical and decorative products. Suggested projects include brooches, necklaces, earrings, mobiles and decoration of boxes, mirrors, trays and lampshades. hardbound ISBN #0-88332-034-7 $8.95 paperback ISBN #0-88332-035-5 $5.95

Papier Mache: hardbound ISBN #0-88332-068-1 $7.95 paperback ISBN #0-88332-069-X $4.95

Costume Doll Making: hardbound ISBN #0-88332-071-1 $7.95 paperback ISBN #0-88332-072-X $4.95

Origami: hardbound ISBN #0-88332-026-6 $7.95 paperback ISBN #0-88332-027-4 $5.95

The Opera Lover's Quiz Book by Ian Taylor, illustrated by Enrico Caruso; the perfect gift for novices and aficionados alike covering music libretto, staging, history and performers. paperback ISBN #0-88332-042-8 $4.95

Larousse Encyclopedia of the Animal World: introduction by Desmond Morris. "Crème de la crème . . ." L.A. Times. "Here, in more than 1,000 striking color pictures, we are reminded that nature is the boldest and the most experimental of all artists . . . 'splendid volume'." N.Y. Times. The most authoritative and best illustrated animal reference book available. hardbound ISBN #0-88332-028-2 $50.00

Foreign Language Dictionaries

Petit Larousse 1976: celebrating its 70th anniversary in publication, the famous French-French dictionary has added 108 new words, 49 new accepted expressions, and 72 new proper names. 1,832 pages; hardbound with line drawings; photographs in color and black and white; charts, maps and the well-known "section rose." ISBN #2-03-02011-3 $19.95

Pequeno Larousse Ilustrado: revised, up-to-date edition of the standard all-Spanish dictionary-encyclopedia. More than 60,000 entries and over 6,000 illustrations and maps in 1,663 pages. hardbound $17.50

Larousse-Vox Spanish-English/English-Spanish Dictionaries:

Modern College: 1,417 pages; 100,000 main entries including modern conversational idioms and scientific terminology. $14.95

Concise College: 981 pages; over 70,000 entries for all words likely to be encountered in reading and conversation: business, scientific and art terms. $7.95

New Compact: 703 pages; over 35,000 entries with a 35-page synopsis of Spanish pronunciation and grammar. $3.95

Larousse Modern French-English/English-French Dictionary: 1,552 pages of synonyms, idioms, usage, fine differences in meaning, pronunciation and other useful features which make this finest French-English dictionary the ultimate authority for students, translators, and scholars of the French language. $14.95.

For a complete catalog of foreign language dictionaries and backlists, write to:
Larousse & Co., Inc. 572 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10036.

MASSACHUSETTS

THE ACCIDENT HAZARDS OF NUCLEAR POWER PLANTS
Richard E. Webb Foreword by David R. Inglis ca. 280 pp., paper, ca. $5.95

MASSACHUSETTS BROADSIDES OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION
Edited by Mason I. Lowance, Jr., and Georgia Bumgardner 150 pp., illus., cloth, $15.00

LETTERS FROM NEW ENGLAND The Massachusetts Bay Colony, 1629-1638
Edited by Everett Emerson The Commonwealth Series 288 pp., illus., cloth, $12.50

A SAILOR'S SONGBAG An American Rebel in an English Prison, 1777-1779
Edited with an Introduction by George G. Carey 124 pp., illus., cloth, $8.50

SUCCESS IN AMERICA The Yeoman Dream and the Industrial Revolution
Rex Burns 236 pp., cloth, $10.00

PARTY LEADERSHIP IN THE STATES
Robert J. Huckshorn 400 pp., cloth, $15.00

THE PHILOSOPHY OF KARL POPPER
Robert John Ackermann 300 pp., cloth, $15.00

WORDS IN STONE
Yves Bonnefoy Translated by Susanna Lang 150 pp., cloth, ca. $8.50

SHAKESPEARE'S MEDIATED WORLD
Richard Fly 200 pp., cloth, $10.00

THE CHINESE THEATRE IN MODERN TIMES
Colin Mackerras 256 pp., illus., cloth, $15.00

LAW AND STATE The Case of Northern Ireland
Kevin Boyle, Tom Hadden, Paddy Hillyard 204 pp., cloth, $10.00

GODS AND HEROES OF THE GREEKS The Library of Apollodorus
Translated with Introduction and Notes by Michael Simpson Drawings by Leonard Baskin
250 pp., cloth, ca. $12.00, paper, ca. $5.95

The University of Massachusetts Press Post Office Box 429 Amherst, Massachusetts

1976 Spring and Summer Books

Hodges, H. The Fabricator. Apr.
Manfred, F. Manly-Hearted Woman.

John Day
Buck, P. S. Secrets of the Heart. May.
Stableford, B. Man in a Cage. Jan.

Delacorte
[illegible]
Carter, F. The Vengeance Trail of Josey Wales. Apr.
Lee, E. The Nabob's Widow. Jun.
Leonard, E. Swag. Mar.
[illegible]
Sagan, F. Lost Profile. Apr.
Salten, F. Fifteen Rabbits. Mar.
Stirling, J. The Dresden Finch. Jul.

Dial
Colette. Short Novels of Colette. Jun.
Condon, R. Whisper of the Axe. May.
Hynd, N. Revenge. Mar.
Ludlum, R. The Gemini Contenders. Mar.
Rikoff, J. Sweetwater. May.
Skelton, C. L. Hardacre. Jul.
[illegible]

Dodd
[illegible]
Curtiss, U. The Birthday Gift. Mar.
Foley, R. Where Helen Lies. Jun.
Fraser, A. Home Through the Dark. Feb.
Gatenby, R. The Fugitive Affair. Apr.
Gerson, N. B. Neptune. May.
Innes, M. The Appleby File. Jan.
Johnston, V. The Frenchman. Apr.
Leonard, C. Hostage in Illyria. May.
Pearson, P. Postscript for Malpas. Feb.
[illegible]
Peters, E. Legend in Green Velvet. Mar.
Seifert, E. The Doctor's Desperate Hour. Jun.

Dutton
Chapman, L. A Change of Heart. Apr.
del Rey, L., ed. Best Science Fiction Stories of the Year—1976. Jul.
Forbes, C. The Stone Leopard. Apr.
Hoch, E. D., ed. Best Detective Stories of the Year—1976. Jul.
Jolly, A. A Time of Soldiers. Mar.
Markish, D. A New World for Simon Ashkenazy. May.
Meyer, N., ed. The West End Horror. May.
Puig, M. The Buenos Aires Affair. Apr.
Reed, K. Captain Grownup. Mar.
Rudd, H. My Escape from the CIA (and into CBS). Apr.
Setlove, R. The Brink. Mar.
Sullivan, S. The Calling of Bara. Feb.
Tillinghast, B. S., Jr. The Honey Man. Jun.
Trevor, M. The Fortunate Marriage. Apr.

Ecco
Bedford, S. A Legacy.

Evans
Paretti, S. Tenants of the Earth. Apr.
Wilson, J. Weep in the Sun. Apr.

Fiction Collective
Federman, R. Take It or Leave It. Apr.
Hauser, M. The Talking Room. Apr.
Simckes, S. The Comatose Kids. Mar.

HBJ
Baker, E. Klynt's Law. Jun.
Bier, J. Year of the Cougar. May.
Brooke, D. Death Games. Apr.
Clarke, A. C. Imperial Earth. Jan.
Clifford, F. Drummer in the Dark. Feb.
[illegible]
Karapanou, M. Kassandra and the Wolf. Jun.
Keneally, T. Gossip from the Forest. Mar.
Lyons, N. & I. Lyons. Someone Is Killing the Great Chefs of Europe. May.
MacInnes, H. Agent in Place. Apr.
Sandburg, H. Children & Lovers. Apr.
Valenzuela, L. Clara. May.
van der Zee, J. Stateline. Mar.
Walker, A. Meridian. Jun.

Lawrence Hill
Sembene, O. Xala. May.

Knopf
Althet, L. Kinflicks. Mar.
Carpentier, A. Reasons of State. May.
Crichton, M. Eaters of the Dead. Apr.
DeLillo, D. Ratner's Star. Jun.
Disch, T. M. Getting into Death. Feb.
Drabble, M., ed. The Genius of Thomas Hardy. Feb.
Godden, J. Ahmed and the Old Lady. Mar.
Godwin, G. Dream Children. Feb.
Holland, C. Floating Worlds. Feb.
Kotzwinkle, W. Doctor Rat. May.
Lewin, M. Z. Night Cover. Mar.
Macdonald, R. The Blue Hammer. Jun.
Marius, R. Bound for the Promised Land. Jun.
Ozick, C. Bloodshed and Three Novellas. Apr.
Piercy, M. Woman on the Edge of Time. Jun.
Rice, A. Interview with the Vampire. May.
Smith, M. The Moon Lamp. Apr.
Tryon, T. Crowned Heads. Jul.
Weingarten, V. Half a Marriage. Apr.
Yankowitz, S. Silent Witness. May.

Seymour Lawrence
Holt, K. The Race. May.

Lippincott
Lockridge R. Dead Run. Jun.
MacDonald, J. D. Nightmare in Pink. Mar.
Majerus, J. Grandpa and Frank. Mar.
Myers, R. J. The Slave of Frankenstein. Apr.

Liveright
McDonald, K. L. The Brightwood Expedition. Feb.

Livingston Pr.
Perry, R. Welcome for a Hero. Feb.

McGraw
Bales, W. A. The Seeker. Mar.
Carver, R. Will You Please Be Quiet, Please? Mar.
Lane, R. W. Young Pioneers. Apr.
Nabokov, V. Details of a Sunset and Other Stories. Mar.
Shields, C. Small Ceremonies. Jun.
Garrison, J. The Star Spangled Contract. May.
Stuart, J. Gideon's Children. Apr.

McKay
Creasey, J. Let's Kill Uncle Lionel. Feb.
Creasey, J. Murder in the Family. May.
Ellerbeck, R. Hammersleigh. Apr.
Gluyas, C. The House on Twyford Street. Feb.
Gluyas, C. My Lord Foxe. Jul.
Harcourt, P. A Fair Exchange. Mar.
Kytle, R. Meltdown. May.
Leonard, P. Phantom of the Sacred Well. Jan.
Longstreet, S. God and Sarah Pedlock. Feb.
Scalzo, J. A Prince, A Piper and a Rose. Apr.

Macmillan
Bluh, B. Banana. May.
Clark, J. Untie the Winds. May.
Dorian, M. The Year of the Waterbearer. Apr.
Hunter, A. Gently with the Painters. May.
L'Heureux, J. Jessica Fayer. Mar.
Maxtone-Graham, J. Dark Brown Is the River. Jun.

Mason/Charter
Allan, F. Death in Gentle Grove. Jun.
Cain, J. M. The Institute. Jul.
Chastain, T. 911. Mar.
Dodson, D. B. On a Darkling Plain. Jun.
Gibbs, M. A. The Glass Palace. Feb.
Harris, J. Ride Out the Storm. Apr.
Jones, M. The Pursuit of Happiness. May.
Judson, W. Kilman's Landing. May.

Morrow
Balson, D. Yo Yo. Mar.
Barak, M. The Secret List of Heinrich Roehm. Feb.
Black, J. Ride the Golden Tiger. Mar.
Bleeck, O. No Questions Asked. May.
Cadell, E. Game in Diamonds. Apr.
Cleary, J. A Sound of Lightning. Apr.
Cookson, C. The Devil and Mary Ann. Jan.
Cookson, C. The Tide of Life. May.
Davis, R. P. The Pilot. Jun.
Esler, A. Lord Libertine. Jul.
Fischer, E. Unfinished Things. Mar.
Gartner, C. Mistress of the Highlands. May.
Iremonger, L. How Do I Love Thee. Apr.
Marchant, C. Miss Martha Mary Crawford. Mar.
Moore, R. The Dinosaur Bite. May.
Nolan, F. The Mittenwald Syndicate. Jun.
Ritner, P. The Passion of Richard Thynne. May.
Russell, R. Incubus. Feb.
Sheldon, S. A Stranger in the Mirror. Apr.
Wallace, S. The Fountains. Jun.
Warren, P. N. The Fancy Dancer. Jun.
Werlin, M. Shadow Play. Jan.
Wibberley, L. One in Four. Jul.

Norton
Hahn, H. The Plantain Season. Feb.
Jennings, G. Sow the Seeds of Hemp. Aug.
Lindsay, J. V. The Edge. Feb.
Seton, C. P. A Fine Romance. May.
Sinclair, M. A Long Time Sleeping. Mar.
Snelling, L. Long Shadows. May.
Stewart, J. I. M. Young Pattullo. Feb.
Wilk, M. The Kissinger Noodles. . . or Westward Mr. Ho. Jan.

Ohio Univ. Pr.
Alexander, S. The Hand of Michelangelo. Feb.
Alexander, S. Michelangelo the Florentine. Feb.

Pantheon
Dickinson, P. King and Joker. Jun.
Slung, M. B., ed. Crime on Her Mind. Jun.

Penguin
Amis, K. Ending Up.
Amis, K. Take a Girl Like You.
Arenas, R. Hallucinations.
Bawden, N. Anna Apparent.
Bawden, N. The Birds on the Trees.
Bawden, N. A Woman of My Age.
Bennett, A. Clayhanger.
Bennett, A. The Grand Babylon Hotel.
Bennett, A. Hilda Lessways.
Bennett, A. These Twain.
Butler, B. Erewhon.
Conrad, J. Heart of Darkness.
Conrad, J. Nostromo.
Conrad, J. An Outcast of the Islands.
Conrad, J. Youth and The End of the Tether.
Eliot, G. Silas Marner.
Flaubert, G. Bouvard and Pecuchet.
Hill, S. Bird of Night.
Hill, S. Strange Meeting.
Innes, M. Hamlet Revenge.
Lovesey, P. The Tick of Death.
Milligan, S. Adolf Hitler.
Milligan, S. Connoisseur's Science.
Milligan, S. "Rommel?" "Gunner Who?"
Reid, P. The Fun House.
Richards, A., ed. Penguin Book of Welsh Short Stories.
Rosenblum, R. The Mushroom Cave.

Potter
Parker, R. A. Robert Andrew Parker's Illustrated Frankenstein. Jun.

Prentice-Hall
Dempsey, A. Dog Kill. May.
Marlowe, S. Translation. Mar.
Rennert, M. Operation Calpurnia. Jun.

Putnam
Garner, W. A Big Enough Wreath. Nov.

Random
Bova, B. Millenium. Mar.
Dann, J. & G. Gozois, eds. Future Power. Apr.
Dumas, H. Jonoah and the Green Stone. May.
Einstein, C. The Blackjack Hijack. May.
Goldstein, A. D. Nobody's Sorry He Got Killed. Feb.
Hamilton, J. Elizabeth. Mar.
Hoban, R. Turtle Diary. Feb.
Howar, B. Making Ends Meet. Apr.
Jones, G. Eva's Man. Mar.
Knickmeyer, S. Straight. Apr.
Levin, I. The Boys from Brazil. Mar.
McBain, E. Ceremonies. Jun.
MacLeish, R. The Man Who Wasn't There. Jun.
Maybury, A. The Jeweled Daughter. Apr.
Painter, C. Seeing Things. Mar.
Platt, K. The Body Beautiful Murder. Jul.
Silverberg, R. Capricorn Games. Feb.
Stead, C. Miss Herbert (the Suburban Wife). Jun.
Vidal, G. 1876. Mar.
Wiesel, E. Messengers of God. May.
Wilson, C. The Space Vampires. Mar.
Zeldis, C. Brothers. May.

Saturday Review Pr.
Callison, B. Trapp's War. Feb.
Carmichael, H. Candles for the Dead. Mar.
Conway, L. Take Heed of Loving Me. Feb.
Craddock, F. The Lormes of Castle Rising. Apr.
Kaye, M. Bullets for Macbeth. May.
Kempley, W. The Invaders. May.
L'Amour, L. The Sacketts. Jul.
L'Amour, L. To the Far Blue Mountains. Apr.
Shulman, I. Saturn's Child. May.
Torres, E. Carlito's Way. Jan.
Trevelyan, R. His Highness Commands Pendragon. Mar.

Scribners
Baker, C. The Talismans and Other Stories. Mar.
Cameron, I. The White Ship. Aug.
Clark, D. Premedicated Murder. Jul.
Davis, D. S. A Death in The Life. Jul.
Fitzgerald, F. S. The Vegetable. Jun.
Hopkins, J. G. E. The Price of Liberty. Apr.
Jobson, H. The Shadow That Caught Fire. Jun.
Jones, J. From Here to Eternity. Apr.
Macdonald, E. The House of Gray Eagle. Apr.
McLaughlin, D. Hawk Among the Sparrows. Jun.
Mather, B. With Extreme Prejudice. Mar.
Pedler, K. & G. Davis. The Dynostar Menace. Mar.
Ritter, M. Caroline, Caroline. May.
Sanders, L. Hamlet Warning. Jul.
Shulman, N. Finally . . . I'm a Doctor. Apr.
Swann, L. The Mists of Manittoo. Jun.
Trilling, L. The Middle of the Journey. Mar.
Watson, I. The Jonah Kit. Apr.
Wharton, E. The Age of Innocence. Apr.
Wharton, E. The Custom of the Country. Apr.
Wharton, E. The House of Mirth. Apr.
Wolfe, T. The Short Novels of Thomas Wolfe. Apr.

S. & S.
Anderson, P. The President's Mistress. Mar.
Arnold, E. The Camp Grant Massacre. Feb.
Brandel, M. Survivor. Mar.
Denker, H. The Experiment. Apr.
Ehrlichman, J. The Company. Jul.
Ellis, J. The Magnolias. Apr.
Hartley, N. The Viking Process. Feb.
Klein, N. Girls Turn Wives. Mar.
Koperwas, S. Westchester Bull. Apr.

Lieberman, H. City of the Dead. Jun
Melville, J. Dragon's Eye. Jun
Mortabai, A. G. The 400 Lels of Sig mund Freud. May Murphy, N. C. Mutual Arrangements. Jun.
Patterson, S. The Distant Summer. Jun.
Rayner, C. Paddington Green. Feb.
Robbins, H. The Lonely Lady. May.
Wallace, I. The R Document. Mar

Sleepy Hollow
Irving, W. Rip Van Winkle and the Legend of Sleepy Hollow. Feb.

Stein & Day
Anderson, J. R. L. Death in the North Sea. Feb
Brown, C. Wild Grow the Lilies. May
De Kerpely, I. Arabesque. Jun
Graves, R. L. Quicksilver. May.
Jacks, O. Assassination Day. Aug.
Kerry, R. The Dark Lady. Apr
Leonard, L. I Miss You When You're Here. Jun.
Priestley, J. B. The Carfitt Crisis. Feb
Selwyn, F. Sergeant Verity and the Imperial Diamond. Mar.
Williamson, T. The Connector. Apr

Taplinger
Haining, P., ed. The Ghost's Companion. Mar.
Haining, P., ed. The Black Magic Omnibus. Mar
Lamb, H., ed. Terror By Gaslight. Apr.
Parry, M., ed. The Roots of Evil. May Parry, M., ed. The Supernatural Solution. Mar.
Strick, P., ed. Antigrav. Mar.

Univ. of Illinois Pr.
Ballard, J. Rolling All the Time. Jan
Curley, D. Love in the Winter. Jan.
Felter, A. To Byzantium. Jan.
Packer, N. H. Small Moments. Jan.
Witkiewicz, S. Insatiability. Jun

Viking
Allen, P. Apeland
Anon. Berlinguer and the Professor.
Barden, J. F. The John Franklin Barden Omnibus
Chaix, M. The Laurels of Lake Constance
Davies, R. World of Wonders
Demers, R. The Circuit
Dickens, C. Selected Short Fiction
Douglas, N. South Wind
Durden, C. No Bugles, No Drums.
Garfield, L. The Pleasure Garden.
Godden, R. The Peacock Spring
Gordimer, N. Selected Stories
Guest, J. Ordinary People.
Guy, R. Ruby
Harrison, J. Farmer.
Hayden, J. The Lists of the Past
Lambert, G. The Dangerous Edge
Larkin, P. Jill.
Marlowe, D. Nightshade.
Milligan, S. Puckoon
Narayan, R. K. The Painter of Signs
O'Brien, F. Stories and Plays
Rohmer, E. Six Moral Tales
Simon, C. Triptych.
Tauber, P. The Last Best Hope
Thomas, D. The Flight of the Eagle.
Trevor, W. Angels at the Ritz and Other Stories.

Walker
Ashford, J. Three Layers of Guilt. Jan
Asimov, I. I., Robbi. Jul.
Bell, J. Victim. Jul.
Benton, K. Craig and the Midas Touch. Mar
Boyle, R. The Babysitter. Feb
Burley, W. J. Wycliffe and the Schoolgirls. Apr.
Cooper, E. Prisoner of Fire. Jan
Creasy, J. Call for the Baron. Jun.
Creasy, J. Death in the Rising Sun. Feb
Creasy, J. The Thundermaker. May.
Darcy, C. Elyza. May
Drummond, J. Drop Dead. Apr.
Glaser, D. Amber Wellington, Witch Watcher. Jul.
Goddard, A. The Vienna Pursuit. Jun
Jackson, E. Lord Rivington's Lady Jun.
Norton, A. & D. Madlee. Star Ka'at. May
Ross, J. The Burning of Billy Toober. Jul.
Rossiter, J. The Villains. Mar.
Sims, G. End of the Web. May

Watts
Asch, F. Good Lemonade. Jan.
Hoke, H., ed. Devils, Devils, Devils. Jan

Weybright & Talley
Holland, I. Darcourt. May.

David White
Hildick, E. W. A Cat Called Amnesia. Mar.

Helen & Kurt Wolff
Bassani, G. Behind the Door. Apr
Grass, G. From the Diary of a Snail. Mar.
Simenon, G. Maigret and the Black Sheep. Feb

HISTORY & GEOGRAPHY

Abelard
Tully, G. England Especially for Women. Apr.
Tully, G. France Especially for Women. Apr.
Tully, G. Italy Especially for Women. Jun.
Tully, G. Mexico Especially for Women. Feb.

Arco
Ballantyne, V. How and Where to Find Gold. May Bavousett, G. World War II Aircraft in Combat. Jun.
Chamberlain, P. & T. Gander. Heavy Artillery. Feb
Gruenhagen, R. W. Mustang. May
Wilkinson-Latham, R. J. Collecting Militaria. Jan.

Arlington House
Faulk, O. B. Home of the Brave. Jul
Montaigne, S. Blood Over Texas. Feb.
Rothbard, M. Conceived in Liberty Vol. 3

Atheneum
Barker, A. J. Redcoats. May
Brander, M. The Victorian Gentlemen. Mar.
Glover, M. General Burgoyne in Canada and America. May Goulden, J. C. The Best Years, 1945-1950. May Howarth, D. The Greek Adventure. Apr.
Kaiser, R. G. Russia. Jan
Lowe, A. The Spanish. Feb
Nelson, M. Nobs and Snobs. May Watney, J. Travels in Araby. Mar.

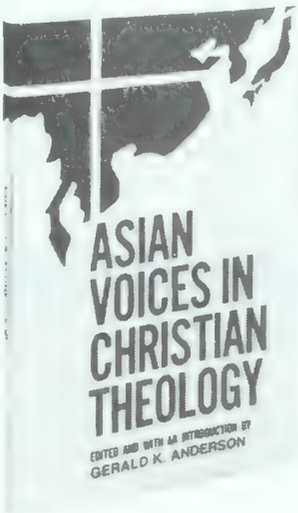
Barre
Bealer, A. Tools That Built America. May
Chesler, B. & E. Kay. Family Guide to Cape Cod. May



New Titles from: ORBIS BOOKS, Maryknoll, NY 10545

ASIAN VOICES IN CHRISTIAN THEOLOGY
edited by Gerald Anderson
"Gerald Anderson has done it again! He has succeeded in encouraging nine able representatives of liberal Protestantism in Asia to reflect vividly on their cultural diversity, Christian heritage and theological pluralism."
Arthur F. Glasser, Fuller Theological Seminary
"A most welcomed panoply of reflections for those of us who are understandably still locked into Northern Atlantic theological 'questions and answers.'"
Thomas F. Stransky, President, Paulist Fathers
Cloth $15.00, Paper $7.95

HEALTH AND DEVELOPMENT
presented by Kevin M. Cahill
Less than ten percent of the people in the developing nations receive any health services. Cahill addresses this problem with the help of many contributors, including, Hugh L. Carey, Governor of NY State, Eduardo Frei, former President of Chile and distinguished authorities in Third World medicine, international finance and political science.
Cloth $6.95

PHILIPPINES: THE SILENCED DEMOCRACY
by Raul S. Manglapus
This book reveals the facts behind the fictions of the Marcos regime, and shows how the ambitions of one man are served by our own military and economic power brokers.
Cloth $7.95

A NEW DEVELOPMENT STRATEGY by Robert J. Alexander
An authoritative study of how South America can become a producing continent by making the goods it now imports. Alexander analyzes both the strengths and the limitations of import substitution, and brushes away the misconceptions which have led many economists to reject it.
Cloth $6.95

IN SEARCH OF THE BEYOND
by Carlo Carretto Cloth $5.95

THE GOSPEL OF PEACE AND JUSTICE Catholic Social Teaching Since Pope John presented by Msgr. Joseph Gremillion
The most important single development within Roman Catholicism since 1960 is its ever clearer conviction that action to achieve justice and peace are demanded by the Gospel. This book presents the official text of the 25 most important documents which embody this development, and presents a penetrating analysis of what this development means for the present and future.
Cloth $15.95, Paper $8.95

HISTORY AND THE THEOLOGY OF LIBERATION by Enrique Dussel
Considering that theology is a reflection on God's action within history, Dussel sketches a history of the Latin American church to provide that basis so necessary for its theology. He traces the development of Latin American Christianity from its origins up to the present day, with the significant emergence of the Medellin Conference and the comunidades de base. In this edition there is a special appendix on Chicanos.
Cloth $8.95, Paper $4.95

JESUS OF NAZARETH
Meditations on His Humanity
by Joseph Comblin Cloth $5.95

Kunz, M. & M. Stout. Big Green Book. Mar.

Bobbs
[illegible]
Apr.
[illegible]
Holzer, H. The Spirits of '76. Mar.
O'Connor, U. The Troubles. Mar.
[illegible]
Crime. Mar.
The Parks, Squares and Mews of London. Apr.
The Rooftops of Paris. Apr.
[illegible]
Sippl, C. & R. Bullen. Computers at Large. Jun.
[illegible]

Cambridge Univ. Pr.
Chadwick, J. The Mycenaean World. Mar.
[illegible]
Jan.
de Vries, J. The Economy of Europe in an Age of Crisis. Jun.
Lockhart, J. & E. Otte. Letters and People of the Spanish Indies. Feb.
Lopez, R. The Commercial Revolution in the Middle Ages. Feb.
Miskimin. The Economy of Early Renaissance Europe. Sept.
Momigliano, A. D. Alien Wisdom. Dec.
Pinckney, A. Red, Black and Green. Mar.
Power, E. Medieval Women. Jan.
Rout, L. The African Experience in Spanish America. Jun.
Savory, R. M. Introduction to Islamic Civilization. Jun.

Columbia Univ. Pr.
Whitfield, S. J. Scott Nearing. Nov.

Cornell Univ. Pr.
Archdeacon, T. J. New York City, 1664-1710. Feb.
Ascher, A., ed. The Mensheviks in the Russian Revolution. Jul.
Davis, D. B. The Problem of Slavery in the Age of Revolution, 1770-1823. Mar.
Emmerson, D. K. Indonesia's Elite. May.
Fox Genovese, E. The Origins of Physiocracy. Jun.
Huttenback, R. A. Racism and Empire. Mar.
Jacob, M. C. The Newtonians and the English Revolution, 1689-1720. Jun.
Mitchell, R. H. Thought Control in Prewar Japan. Aug.
Monter, E. W. Witchcraft in France and Switzerland. Apr.
Ruffle, J. The Egyptians. Sept.
Schneiderman, J. Sergei Zubatov and Revolutionary Marxism. Mar.
Stoianovich, T. French Historical Method. Jun.
Weinstein, F. B. Indonesian Foreign Policy and the Dilemma of Dependence. Aug.

Crowell
Galvin, J. R. Three Men of Boston. Mar.
Haines, F. The Plains Indians. Feb.
Hart, A. L., ed. The Sword and the Pen. Jun.
Mooney, B. I. B.J. May.
Scott, A. F. The Plantagenet Age. Jan.
Silverman, K. A. A Cultural History of the American Revolution. May.
Soule, G. Men Who Dared the Sea. May.
Von der Porten, E. P. Pictorial History of the German Navy in World War II. Jul.
Wheeler, R. Voices of the Civil War. May.

Crown
Brasch, R. This Is Australia. May.
Engel, F.-A. An Ancient World Preserved. Jun.
Rose, A. C. & C. Rakeman. Historic American Roads. May.
Settel, A. Pictorial History of the U.S. Customs Service. Mar.
Springer, L. E. That Vanishing Sound. Jul.
Wagenknecht, E. Pictorial History of New England. Jun.

Dodd
Dodd, E. Polynesia's Sacred Isle. Mar.
Hirschfeld, F. Colonial Jews and American Indepdendence. Feb.
Jacquier, H. Piracy in the Pacific. Feb.

Douglas-West
Basten, F. E. Beverly Hills. Dec.

Down East
Beston, H. White Pine and Blue Water. Mar.
Brace, G. W. Between Wind & Water. Mar.
Brace, G. W. The World of Garrickson's Cove. Mar.
Down East Reader. Mar.
Gould, J. Maine Lingo. Feb.
Holder, J. Abbie Burgess Lighthouse Heroine. Feb.
Munson, G. Penobscot Down East Paradise. Nov.
Only in Name. Sept.
Rich, L. D. Happy the Land. Feb.
Rich, L. D. My Neck of the Woods. Feb.
Rich, L. D. We Took to the Woods. Oct.
Roberts, K. Trending into Maine. Mar.
Smith, E. W. The One-Eyed Poacher in the Maine Woods. Feb.
Smith, E. W. A Treasury of the Maine Woods. Feb.
Tristram Coffin, R. P. Kennebec Cradle of Americans. Mar.
Williams, B. A. Come Spring. Aug.
Williams, B. A. Fraternity Village. Oct.

Dutton
Morris, R. B. & J. Woodress, eds. Voices from America's Past. Vol. 4. Apr.

Free Pr.
Church, R. L. Education in the United States. Mar.

Funk & Wagnalls
Collins, D., ed. The Origins of Europe. May.
James, H. The Princess Casamassima. Apr.
Klamkin, C. Railroadiana. Mar.
Mussey, B. & W. Needham. A Book of Country Things. Mar.
Yeadon, D. Hidden Corners of New England. May.

Greenwood
Crosby, A. W., Jr. Epidemic and Peace, 1918.
Culbert, D. H. News for Everyman.
Filler, L. Appointment at Armageddon.
Flynn, G. Q. Roosevelt and Romanism.
Kaufman, M. American Medical Education.
Levine, D. A. Internal Combustion.
Martin, T. Race First.
Mathurin, O. C. Henry Sylvester Williams and the Origins of the Pan-African Movement, 1869-1911.
Rose, L. A. The Roots of Tragedy.
Swierenga, R. P. Acres for Cents.
Walker, R. H. American Studies.

HBJ
Beeching, J. The Chinese Opium Wars. Jan.
Blum, J. M. V Was for Victory. May.
Fredette, R. H. The Sky on Fire. Mar.
Myers, R. M. A Georgian at Princeton. Mar.
Stevenson, W. A Man Called Intrepid. Feb.

Harmony: Crown
Gelman, W. & B. Jackson. Disaster Illustrated. Apr.

Harper
Cavebrown, A. Bodyguard of Lies. Nov.
Rosenmen, S. & D. Rosenmen. Presidential Style. Jan.

Lawrence Hill
Gronowicz, A. Polish Profiles. May.

Internat. Pictorial Pubs.
Motekaitis, J. Pictorial Images of Mexico Today. Feb.

Johns Hopkins
Forster, R. & O. Ranum. Family and Society. Jun.

Knopf
Dyomin, M. The Day Is Born of Darkness. Apr.
Papachristou, J., ed. Women Together. May.
Roberts, J. M. History of the World. Apr.
Smith, D. Smith's Montreal. May.
Svirsky, G. Hostages. Jun.

Lippincott
Devi, G. & S. Rama Rau. A Princess Remembers. Apr.
Gilborn, A. What Do You Do with a Kinkajou? Mar.
Kopelev, L. To Be Preserved Forever. Aug.
Maxwell, A. E. & I. Ruud. The Year-Long Day. May.

Liveright
Fallaci, O. Interview with History. Apr.

Luce
Hamilton, A. & others. The Federalist. Feb.
Watson, F. Political Terrorism. Apr.

McGraw
Bradford, S. S. Liberty's Road. Apr.
Frenay, H. The Night Will End. Feb.
Remley, D. A. Crooked Road. Mar.
Smith, P. A New Age Now Begins. Feb.

McKay
Basset, M. Profiles and Portraits of American Presidents. Jun.
Bennett, G. Naval Battles of World War II. Feb.
Burke, J. An Illustrated History of England. Apr.
Fodor, E., ed. Austria 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Belgium and Luxembourg 1976-77. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Caribbean 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Europe 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Europe Talking. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Fodor's Old West. Mar.
Fodor, E., ed. Fodor's U.S.A. Apr.
Fodor, E., ed. France 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Germany 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Great Britain 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Greece 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Hawaii 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Holland 1976-77. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. India 1976-77. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Ireland 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Israel 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Italy 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Japan & Korea 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Mexico, 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Morocco 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Portugal 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Scandinavia 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. South America 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Southeast Asia 1976-77. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Soviet Union 1976-77. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Spain 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Switzerland 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Turkey 1976. Jan.
Fodor, E., ed. Yugoslavia 1976-77. Jan.
Frankland, N. & C. Dowling, eds. Decisive Battles of the 20th Century. Mar.
Gallenkamp, C. Maya. Feb.
Haas, I. Historic Homes of the American Presidents. Apr.
Halecki, O. A History of Poland. Mar.
Hirst, S. Life in a Narrow Place. Feb.
Hoyt, E. The Lonely Ships. Jun.
Marx, R. Shipwrecks of the Western Hemisphere. Jan.
Miller, N. The Founding Finaglers. Apr.
Platt, C. The English Medieval Town. Feb.
Simmons, R. C. The American Colonies. Apr.
Skurdenis, J. & L. Smircich. Walk Straight Through the Square. Mar.
Walters, S. Bicycling Through England. Jul.
Williams, B. Legendary Outlaws of the West. Jul.

Macmillan
Alper, M. V. America's Freedom Trail. May.
Alper, M. V. America's Heritage Trail. May.
Baron, S. W. The Russian Jew Under Tsars and Soviets. Apr.
Bermant, C. London's East End. Jan.
Haythornthwaite, P. Uniforms of the Civil War 1861-65. Mar.
Kadish, F. & K. Kirtland. Los Angeles on $500 a Day. May.
Massow, R. Now It's Your Turn to Travel. May.
Mollo, A. Naval, Marine and Air Force Uniforms of World War II. Mar.
Nock, O. S. Railways of the Modern Age Since 1963. May.
Sedgwick, M. Passenger Cars 1924-1942. Mar.
Waldo, M. Myra Waldo's Restaurant Guide to New York City and Vicinity, rev. ed. Jun.
Waldo, M. Myra Waldo's Travel and Motoring Guide to Europe 1976. Mar.
White, B. T. Tanks and Other Armoured Fighting Vehicles, 1942-45. May.

Mason/Charter
Jackson, W. G. F. The Battle for North Africa. Feb.
Mason, H. M., Jr. The United States Air Force. Jun.

Morrow
Bishop, J. The Birth of the United States. Mar.
Casey, W. J. Where and How the War Was Fought. Jul.
Fielding, D. F. Fielding's Selected Favorites. Apr.
Fielding, N. & T. Fielding. Fielding's Low-Cost Europe 1976. Mar.
Frankfort, E. The Voice. Jun.
Hosokawa, B. Thunder in the Rockies. Feb.
Weglyn, M. Years of Infamy. Apr.
Williams, W. A. America Confronts a Revolutionary World. Jun.

New York Graphic Society
Robinson, W. F. Abandoned New England. Apr.

Norton
Bellush, B. The Failure of the NRA. Feb.
Bird, C. Enterprising Women. Feb.
Carter, A. C. Neutrality or Commitment. May.
Catton, B. Michigan. Apr.
Christie, I. R. & B. W. Larabee. Empire or Independence, 1760-1776. Apr.
Church, W. F. Louis XIV in Historical Thought. Mar.
Cipolla, C. M. Before the Industrial Revolution. Feb.
Clark, N. H. Washington. Aug.
Davis, K. S. Kansas. Aug.
Dykeman, W. Tennessee. Apr.
Fleming, T. One Small Candle. Mar.
Frantz, J. B. Texas. Apr.
Garlan, Y. War in the Ancient World. Apr.
Greene, J. P. & others. Society, Freedom, and Conscience. May.
Hoogenboom, A. & O. Hoogenboom. A History of the ICC. Mar.
Hull, R. W. African Cities and Towns Before the European Conquest. Aug.
Jahoda, G. L. Florida. Apr.
Jensen, R. J. Illinois. Aug.
Lavender, D. S. California. Jun.
Lewis, D. Ice Bird. Mar.
Morais, V. A Short History of Anti-Semitism. Jun.
Morison, E. E. & E. F. Morison. New Hampshire. Apr.

OXFORD

Important New Reference Works From Oxford

The New Oxford Atlas

Prepared by the Cartographic Department of the Oxford University Press

The New Oxford Atlas is effectively a new edition of The Oxford Atlas, retaining its outstanding features, thoroughly revised in content and style and supplemented by much new material. Twenty-eight pages of special maps, including some of the most advanced cartography in the world, have been added. A 50,000-entry gazetteer completes the atlas.
1975 204 pp. of maps in color $19.95

A Bibliography of English History to 1485

Based on The Sources and Literature of English History from the earliest times to about 1485 by Charles Gross.

Edited by Edgar B. Graves, Hamilton College. This complete revision of Charles Gross' work, widely regarded as the standard bibliography of its subject, has been compiled by Professor Graves in consultation with a Committee representing the American Historical Association, the Mediaeval Academy of America, and the Royal Historical Society. (Bibliography of British History)
1975 1,128 pp. $52.00

The Compact Edition of the Dictionary of National Biography

Complete Text Reduced Micrographically

This classic twenty-two volume work, covering the lives of great men and women in Britain, has now been reproduced micrographically into two volumes. Twelve pages of the original fill one page of the compact work, leaving the texts of the biographies unchanged. A list of contributors and an index are included, and a reading glass is supplied.
1975 3,158 pp. in two volumes $125.00

Oxford University Press Microfiche Editions

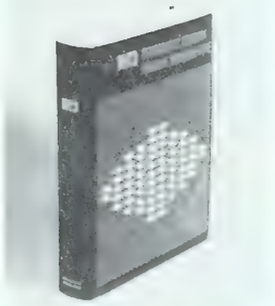
The first series of Oxford University Press Microfiche Editions includes a special re-issue of Oxford titles in English Literature (48 titles) and History (60 titles). These will be available in May 1976 in 98-frame, 4 x 6, 24X microfiche editions. All microfiche are of high quality silver halide film, positive image. For full information about titles, prices, and special pre-publication discount, please write to: Library Promotion Department, Oxford University Press, 200 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016.

Prices are subject to change.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
200 MADISON AVENUE
NEW YORK, N Y 10016

We salute the AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION 1876–1976

PUBLICATIONS FROM UNITED NATIONS



DEMOGRAPHIC YEARBOOK 1973

The twenty-fifth issue of the Demographic Yearbook contains 1973 statistics of area, population, natality, mortality, nuptiality and divorce for every country of the world, latest available data on expectation of life and a 7-year trend of international arrivals and departures. Data on the economic characteristics of the population are shown, including labour force participation rates by age and sex, as well as various cross-classifications of population by industry, occupation, status, age and sex.

Order No. E/F.74.XIII.1 Clothbound $38.00

STATISTICAL YEARBOOK 1974

Important compilation of statistics from countries throughout the world covering a wide range of economic and social subjects, including: population, agriculture, manufacturing, construction, transport, trade, balance of payments, national income, education and culture. Improved statistical coverage has enabled the Yearbook to widen the territorial scope of many of its tables and to provide more comprehensive and accurate world and continental aggregates.

Order No. E.75.XVII.1 Clothbound $38.00

United Nations Publications
Room LX-2300, New York, N.Y. 10017
or
United Nations Publications Palais des Nations
1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland

Powell, L. C. Arizona. Apr.
Sprague, M. Colorado. Aug.
Steel, I. I. Black Images of America: 1784-1870. May.
Williams, J. A. West Virginia. Aug.
Wright, L. B. South Carolina. Apr.

Ohio Univ. Pr.
Bowman, L. G. Captive Americans. Jun.
Norton, L. W. Religious Newspapers in the Old Northwest to 1861. Jun.

Pantheon
Hay, D. & others. Albion's Fatal Tree Feb.
Milton, D. & N. D. Milton. The Wind Will Not Subside. Mar.
Thompson, E. P. Whigs and Hunters Feb.

Penguin
Coles, J. M. & E. S. Higgs. The Archaeology of Early Man.
The Letters of the Younger Pliny.
Livy. Rome and the Mediterranean.
Mencius.
Roux, G. Ancient Iraq
Ullman, W. Medieval Political Thought.

Potter
Flexner, J. T. Face of Liberty. Feb.
Grant, M. Fall of the Roman Empire. Feb.

Prentice-Hall
Mayer, S. L., ed. Signal. Mar.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Aydelotte, W. & others, eds. The Dimensions of Quantitative Research in History. May.
Griffin, P. The Chinese Communist Treatment of Counter-Revolutionaries, 1924-1949. Jul.
Jordan, C. & others, eds. Order and Innovation in the Middle Ages. Jan.
McPherson, J. Abolitionist Legacy. Jan.
Opper, A. Legal Reform in Occupied Japan. Feb.
Poster, M. Existential Marxism in Postwar France. Feb.
Rice, H. Thomas Jefferson's Paris. Aug.
Sablinsky, W. Road to Bloody Sunday. Jun.
Skilling, H. Czechoslovakia's Interrupted Revolution. May.
Tignor, R. The Colonial Transformation of Kenya. Mar.
Viner, J. The Role of Providence in the Social Order. May.

Putnam
Yap, Y. & A. Cotterell. Early Civilization of China. Oct.

Random
Boorstin, The Exploring Spirit. May.
Weymouth, L. & M. Glaser. American in 1876. May.

Reader's Digest Pr.
Barnes, M. A. Murder in Coweta Country. Feb.
Elliott, L. The Long Hunter. Mar
Hubbell, J. G. P.O.W. Mar
Scott, J. D. Journey into Silence. Feb.
Tomkies, M. A World of My Own. Jun.

Saturday Review Pr.
Whiting, C. The Spymasters. Mar

Scribners
Blue, A. G. Pictorial History of the B24 Liberator Bomber. Apr.
Breasted, J. H. A History of Egypt. Apr.
Coleman, K. Colonial Georgia. May.
Crookendon, Sir N. Drop Zone Normandy. Mar.
Dolce, P. C. & G. H. Skau. Power and the Presidency. Aug.
Fowler, W. M., Jr. Rebles Under Sail. May.
Gunston, B. Early Supersonic Fighters of the West. May.
Hart, R. A. The Eccentric Tradition. Aug.
Historic Buildings of Massachusetts. Jun.
Illick, J. E. Colonial Pennsylvania. May.
Longmate, N. The G.I.'s. May.
Park, R. The Companion Guide to Sydney. Mar.
Stone, N. The Eastern Front. Mar.

Sleepy Hollow
East, R. A. & J. Judd, eds. The Loyalist Americans. Jun.
Hindle, B., ed. America's Wooden Age. Oct.
Myers, A. B., ed. The Knickerbocker Tradition. Feb.

Stanford Univ. Pr.
Gimbel, J. The Origins of the Marshall Plan. Jun.

Stein & Day
Barber, N. The Week France Fell. Jun.
Koch, H. W. The Hitler Youth. Mar.
Lacey, R. The Queens of the North Atlantic. Apr.
Shepherd, C. German Aircraft of World War II. Mar.
Turner, J. F. British Aircraft of World War II. Mar.

Taplinger
Bingham, C. The Kings and Queens of Scotland. Mar.
White, P. The Past Is Human. Feb.

Transatlantic
Borer, C. & M. Mayfair. The Years of Grandeur. Apr.
Duff, D. Punch on Children, 1845-1865. Mar.
Haswell, J. The British Army. Apr.
Sparkes, I. Illustrated History of Stagecoaches and Carriages. Apr.
Starsmore, I. English Fairs. May
Vince, J. Illustrated History of Carts and Wagons. Apr.
Warner, O. The British Navy. Apr.
Wiley, K. & R. Smith. Red Centre Feb.

Univ. of Illinois Pr.
Baxter, D. C. Servants of the Sword. Apr.
Grossman, L. The Democratic Party and the Negro. Mar.
Osthaus, C. R. Freedmen, Philanthropy, and Fraud. Mar.
Wilke, E.-T. Political Decadence in Imperial Germany. Apr.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr.
Emerson, E. Letters from New England. Aug.
Lowance, M., Jr. & G. Bumgardner Massachusetts Broadsides of the American Revolution. Aug.

Viking
Blainey, G. Triumph of the Nomads.
Butcher, R. The Desert.
DePauw, L. G. & K. C. Hunt. A Special Destiny.
Gordon, L. Woman's Body, Woman's Right.
Hechtinger, A. The Seasonal Hearth.
Karp, A. J., ed. The Golden Door to America.
Kassoon, J. Civilizing the Machine.
McGinnis, J. Heroes
Smith, C. The Adirondacks.
Snow, D. Archaeology of North America.
West, L. C. They Call It Justice.
Woolman, J. Some Considerations on the Keeping of Negros.

Walker
Lewis, B., ed. Islam. 2 vols. Jan.
Peck, R. N. Rabbitts and Redcoats. Apr.
Powers, E. The Journal of Madame Royale. May.
Radcliffe, V. The Caribbean Heritage. May.
Ricciuti, E. Killer-Animals. Jun.
Roosevelt, K. War Report of The OSS. Apr.

Watts
Dickinson, A. Taken by the Indians. Feb.
Fisher, L. E. The Blacksmiths. Apr.
Hoobler, D. & T. Hoobler. An Album of World War I. Mar.
Poignant, R. Discovery Under the Southern Cross. Jan.
Roberts, J. G. The Colonial Conquest of Asia. Mar.
Rothkopf, C. Z. Austria. Mar.
Vaughan, H. C. The Constitutional Convention. Jan.

Wesleyan Univ. Pr.
Hill, E. & W. Stekl. The Connecticut River. Feb.

Weybright & Talley
Hamby, A. The Imperial Years. Apr.

Yale Univ. Pr.
Brownlee, W. E. & M. M. Brownlee. Women in the American Economy. Jan.
Medlin, V. D. & S. L. Parsons, eds. V. D. Nabokov and the Russian Provisional Government, 1917. Mar
Payne, H. C. The Philosophies and the People. Jun.
Willcox, W. B. & others, eds. The Yale Edition of the Papers of Benjamin Franklin. Vols. 19 & 20. Feb.

HOME ECONOMICS

Atheneum
D'Ermo, Dominique. The Chef's Dessert Cookbook. Jan.
Harrington, G. Summer Garden, Winter Kitchen. Apr.
London, S. Eggplant and Squash. May.
Rhode, I. Cool Entertaining. Apr.
von Welanetz, D. & P. von Welanetz. The Pleasure of Your Company. Jun

Autumn Pr.
Ohsawa, L. The Art of Just Cooking. Feb.

Bobbs
Blackburn, G. Illustrated Basic Carpentry. Mar.
Weber, N. M. How To Plan Your Own Home Landscape. May.

Crowell
Collier, D. & N. Goff. Frozen Delights. May.
Vanocur, E. A Chicken in Every Pot. May.

John Day
Nelson, K. S. The Best of Western European Cooking. Mar

Dodd
Gerber, A. B. The Joy of Dieting May.

Dutton
Melville, J. & J. Morgan, eds. Guide to California Wines. Mar.
Potter, C. H., ed. Greenhouse. rev. ed. Mar.

Evans
Schuler, S. The Floor and Ceiling Book. Mar.

Fireside: S. & S.
Kramer, J. The Indoor Gardeners' How-to-Build-It Book. Apr.
Morehouse, L. E. & L. Gross. Total Fitness. May.

Funk & Wagnalls
Buckwalter, L. The Homeowners Handbook of Power Tools. Mar.
Chapin, S. The Adjustable Diet Cookbook. Feb.
Habeeb, V. Thousands of Creative Kitchen Ideas. Mar.

HBJ
Nichols, N. B. The Farm Cook and Rule Book. May.

Knopf
Hazan, M. The Classic Italian Cook Book. Feb.
Lewis, E. The Taste of Country Cooking. May.
Sokolov, R. The Saucier's Apprentice. Mar.
Wagner, P. M. Grapes into Wine. Jun.

Lippincott
Burns, M. A. Super Sewing Series. 4 vols. Mar.

McGraw
Beard, J. & others. The Garden to Table Cookbook. May.
De Groot, R. A. Feasts for All Seasons. Apr.
Goldbeck, N. & D. Goldbeck. The Dieter's Companion. Mar.

McKay
Dyer, C. How To Make Beautiful Food in a Mold. May.
Grossman, F. The White House Cookbook. May.
McBride, L. Western Cooking. Apr.

Macmillan
Miller, A. B. & P. Fuller. The Best of Shaker Cooking. May.
Schuler, S. How To Build Fences, Gates and Walls. Apr.

Morrow
Anderson, J. The Green Thumb Preserving Guide. Apr
Gladstone, M. & G. Gladstone. Kids' Clothes by Meredith Gladstone. Feb.
Libien, L. & M. Strong. Super Economy Housecleaning. Jul.
Seranne, A. Ann Seranne's Good Food & How To Cook It. Apr.
Seranne, A. Ann Seranne's Good Food with a Blender. Apr.
Seranne, A. Ann Seranne's Good Food Without Meat. Apr.
Simmons, A. G. A Merry Christmas Herbal. Apr.
Uris, A. Executive Housekeeping. Mar.

NAL
Kraus, B. The Barbara Kraus Guide to Fiber in Foods. Feb.

Norton
Reader's Digest. Complete Guide to Sewing. Mar.

Penguin
Humen, R. & M. Downes. Cordon Bleu Desserts and Puddings.

Potter
Cutler, C. Six-Minute Souffle and Other Culinary Delights. Apr
Fisher, J. Alice in Wonderland Cookbook. Feb.

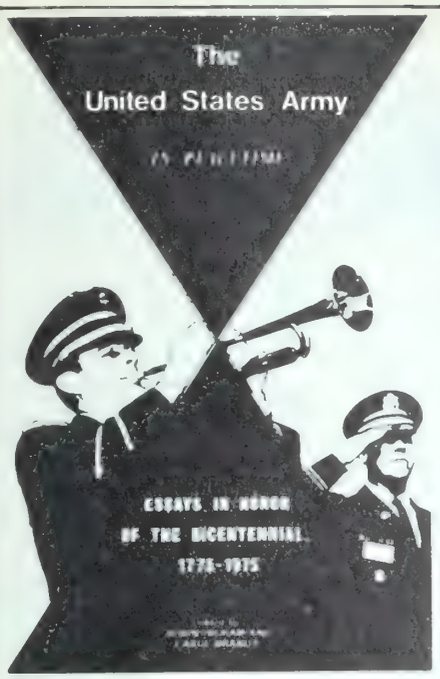
Prentice-Hall
Hawkins, N. & A. Hawkins. The American Regional Cookbook. May.
Hess, N. R. The Home Buyer's Guide. Jun.
Paulsen, G. The Building a New; Buying an Old; Remodeling a Used: Comprehensive Home and Shelter How To Do It Book. Apr.
Peterson, F. The Build-It-Yourself Furniture Catalog. Aug.
Svicarovich, J. & others. The Coffee Book. May.

Random
Malino, E. Super Living Rooms. May
Woman's Day Eds. Woman's Day Cooking for Two. Mar.
Yee, R. Chinese Village Cookbook. Feb.

San Francisco Bk. Co.
Firnstahl, T. Jake O'Shaughnessey's Sourdough Book. Mar.

Saturday Review Pr.
Esterling, E. W., ed. Le Cookbook. Feb.
Fairbridge, K. C. & others. Loft Living. Jun.
Iny, D. The Best of Baghdad Cooking. Jun.

Scribners
Evard, G. Twinkle Toes. May.
Rothacher, N. The Undies Book. May.



The Army's contributions to exploration, national parks, flood and disaster relief, public health, minorities, popular culture, technology, the economy, foreign affairs.

Cloth — $10
Paper — $3.95
(20% Discount To Libraries)

Order this great illustrated bicentennial essay collection from:

Military Affairs/Aerospace Historian Publishing
Eisenhower Hall, Kansas State University
Manhattan, Kansas 66506, U.S.A.

MILITARY AFFAIRS, the quarterly journal of the American Military Institute, has been published since 1937; its subject matter has been expanded into many different fields of military history. The journal now carries news of academic courses, museum exhibits, and other items of interest, as well as the traditional articles, book reviews, and bibliography of current literature. Published in February, April, October, and December.

Institutional or organizational subscription $14.00 (in Canada $15.40)

AEROSPACE HISTORIAN contains articles, book reviews, museum news, photographs, and other features stressing the importance and relevance of the lessons of the past for the present and the future. It appears in March, June, September, and December.

Institutional or organizational subscription $20.00 (in Canada $22.00)

Overseas members and subscribers add $2.00 postage. U.S. Funds only.

WESLEYAN

DANCE

Soaring

The Diary and Letters of a Denishawn Dancer in the Far East, 1925-1926
by Jane Sherman
April $14.95

ARCHITECTURE

Philadelphia Georgian

The City House of Samuel Powel and some of Its 18th-Century Neighbors
by George B. Tatum
June cloth $17.50; paper $4.95

LITERATURE

The Book of Questions

by Edmond Jabès
translated by Rosmarie Waldrop
March cloth $12.00; paper $4.95

PHILOSOPHY

The Evolution of Consciousness

Studies in Polarity
edited by Shirley Sugerman
April $15.00

POETRY

The Wesleyan Poetry Program

Michael Benedikt

Night Cries

W. R. Moses

Passage

March each, cloth $7.50; paper $3.45

PAPERBACKS

Now Available

The Connecticut River

by Evan Hill, with photographs by William Stekl
February $3.95

Graven Images

New England Stonecarving and its Symbols, 1650-1815
by Allan Ludwig
Now available $12.50

WESLEYAN University Press
Middletown, Connecticut 06457

5 new volumes

in the new, revised edition of

Photo Ronald Flores

WILLIAM BARCLAY'S THE DAILY STUDY BIBLE

The revised edition of this phenomenally best-selling series is reset in new type, and available in a choice of two formats — Hardbound Deluxe @ $6.25; Soft Cover @ $3.45. The first six volumes, The Gospels: special set price (Hardbound Deluxe only) $35.75 (21317-0)

COMING IN MAY

The Letter to the Hebrews
(Hard 21312-X; Soft 24112-3)
The Letters of James and Peter
(Hard 21313-8; Soft 24113-1)
The Letters of John and Jude
(Hard 21314-6; Soft 24114-X)
The Revelation of John, Vol. 1
(Hard 21315-4; Soft 24115-8)
The Revelation of John, Vol. 2
(Hard 21316-2; Soft 24116-6)

READY NOW

The Gospel of Matthew, Vol. 1
(Hard 21300-6; Soft 24100-X)
The Gospel of Matthew, Vol. 2
(Hard 21301-4; Soft 24101-8)
The Gospel of Mark
(Hard 21302-2; Soft 24102-6)
The Gospel of Luke
(Hard 21303-0; Soft 24103-4)
The Gospel of John, Vol. 1
(Hard 21304-9; Soft 24104-2)
The Gospel of John, Vol. 2
(Hard 21305-7; Soft 24105-0)
The Letter to the Romans
(Hard 21307-3; Soft 24107-7)
The Letters to the Corinthians
(Hard 21308-1; Soft 24108-5)
The Letters to the Philippians, Colossians, and Thessalonians
(Hard 21310-3; Soft 24110-7)
The Letters to Timothy, Titus, and Philemon
(Hard 21311-1; Soft 24111-5)

FALL 1976

The Acts of the Apostles
(Hard 21306-5; Soft 24106-9)
The Letters to the Galatians and Esphesians
(Hard 21309-X; Soft 24109-3)

Please add Westminster's prefix, 0-664-, to all ISBN's

THE WESTMINSTER PRESS

920 Witherspoon Bldg.,
Phila., Pa. 19107
In Canada:
McGraw-Hill Ryerson, Ltd.

See full-page ad for our entire Spring list elsewhere in this issue.

S. & S.
Beck, J. Help with the Kids. Jul.
Bradford, B. T. How To Solve Your Decorating Problems. Mar.
Brimer, J. Growing Herbs in Pots. Jun.
Consumer Guide Eds. Consumer Guide The Food Preserver. Apr.
Graham, E. The Growling Gourmet Jul.
Kerr, G. The New Seasoning. Jun.
McKenna, M. Bodypower? Jan.
Myers, B. Great Dinner Parties. Feb.
The Pritikin Barbecue Cookbook. Apr.
von Furstenberg, D. Diane von Furstenberg's Book of Beauty. Jun.

Stein & Day
Meinhard, H. The Wines of Germany. Apr.
Wasserman, S. The Wines of Italy. Apr.

Transatlantic
Aziz, Khalid. Step by Step Guide to Indian Cooking. Feb.
Cooper, C. & A. Hildesley. Carefree Cookbook. Feb.
Ellis, A. Complete Book of Home Freezing. Mar.
Ellis, A. French Family Cooking.
Lo, K. Step by Step Guide to Chinese Cooking. Feb.
Patten, M. Hamlyn's Family Cookbook. Mar.
Reynolds, M. Italian Family Cooking. Feb.

Walker
Abisch, R. The Munchy Crunchy Healthy Kids Snack Book. Apr.
Borwick, B. Catskill Country Cooking. Feb.
Rosbach, R. The Provident Planner. Mar.

Watts
Brent, P. Haircutting. Mar.
Lewis, N. & R. Lewis. Keeping in Shape. Mar.
Saunders, R. Good Grooming for Girls. Apr.

Winchester
Heriteau, J., ed. Budget Recipes. Apr.

HUMOR

Crown
National Lampoon. The Hollywood Years. Apr.

Bobbs
Marx, G. Beds. Mar.

Fireside: S. & S.
Kelly, W. Pogo's Body Politic. Apr.

Macmillan
Berman, E. The Solid Gold Stethoscope. May.

Morrow.
Wallach, I. 5000 Years of Foreplay. Feb.

Random
Greenburg, D. How To Make Yourself Miserable. Feb.

Watts
Churchill, E. R. The Six-Million-Dollar Cucumber. Mar.
Cole, W. Knock Knocks. Jan.

LIBRARY SCIENCE

Arco
Meyers, A. & S. Temkin. Your Future in Library Careers. May.

Dekker
Clack, D. Black Literature Resources. Feb.
Daily, J. E. Cataloging Phonorecordings. Feb.
Daily, J. E. Organizing Nonprint Materials. Feb.
Hart, T. & others. Multi-Media Indexes, Lists, and Review Sources. Feb.
Henry, N. Copyright. Feb.
Kent, A. & others, eds. Encyclopedia of Library and Information Science. Feb.
Kent, R. Reading the Russian Language. Feb.
Manheimer, M. L. Cataloging and Classification. Feb.
Nasri, W. Z. Crisi in Copyright. Feb.
Salmon, S. Library Automation Systems. Feb.

LITERATURE

Arco
Clarke, E. & V. Root. Your Future in Technical and Science Writing. May.

Arlington House
Cottle, B. The Plight of English. Feb.

Braziller
MacMillan, D. Transition. Apr.
Turner, F. The Blaze at the Edge of the World. Aug.

Cambridge Univ. Pr.
Cook, E. The Ordinary and the Fabulous. 2d. ed.
Gray, R. Brecht the Dramatist. Jun.

Cornell Univ. Pr.
Baym, N. The Shape of Hawthorne's Career. May.
Blackall, E. A. Goethe and the Novel. Jun.
Cantor, P. A. Shakespeare's Rome. Apr.
Gibian, G. & H. W. Tjalsma, eds. Russian Modernism. May.
Marrs, E. W., Jr., ed. The Letters of Charles and Mary Anne Lamb. Vol. 2. Jun.
Mellor, J. W. The New Economics of Growth. Apr.
Turco, A., Jr. Shaw's Moral Vision. May.

Crowell
Gattegno, J. Lewis Caroll. Feb.
Tolstoy, L. War and Peace. May.
Writers for the Seventies. 3 vols. Feb.

Crown
Legman, G. No Laughing Matter. Feb.

Dial
Baldwin, J. The Devil Finds Work. May.

Dutton
Borges, J. L. & Bioy-Casares, A. Chronicles of Bustos Domecq. Mar.

Free Pr.
Dolan, P. J. Of War and War's Alarms. Jan.

Funk & Wagnalls
Lesky, A. A History of Greek Literature. Jan.

Greenwood
Dettelbach, C. G. In the Driver's Seat.
Perry, M. Silence to the Drums.
Stout, J. P. Sodoms in Eden.

HBJ
Chiaromonte, N. The Worm of Consciousness and Other Essays. Mar.
McCarthy, M. The Stones of Florence. May.
Nin, A. In Favor of the Sensitive Man and Other Essays. Apr.

Johns Hopkins
Robinson, C. E. Mary Shelley. Apr.

Liveright
Graham, S., ed. Great Russian Short Stories. Jan.

McGraw
Albaret, C. Monsieur Proust. Feb.
Armour, R. The Happy Bookers. May.
Rosten, L. The 3:10 to Anywhere. Feb.
Saroyan, W. Sons Come and Go, Mothers Hang in Forever. May.
Tytell, J. Naked Angels. Mar.

Macmillan
Gettings, F. Arthur Rackham. May.

Morrow
Gardam, J. The Pineapple Bay Hotel. Apr.
Harting, E. C. Literary Tour Guide to England and Scotland. Jan.
Heaps, L. The Evaders. May.
Stern, M. ed. Plots and Counterplots. Jul.

Norton
Beowulf, Jan
Dostoevsky, F. The Brothers Karamazov. May.
Goethe, J. W. von. Faust. May.
Melville, H. Moby-Dick, or the Whale. Feb.

Ohio Univ. Pr.
Allott, K. & M. Allott. Writers and Their Background. Apr.
Carter, W. C. & R. Vines. A Concordance to the Complete Works of Rimbaud. Jun.
Howe, J. R. Marlowe, Tamburlaine, and Magic. May.
Howe, M. B. The Art of the Self in D. H. Lawrence. Jun.
Joseloff, S. H. Selected Works of John Gay. Jun.
May, C. E. Short Story Theories. Jun.
Mitchell, B. James Joyce and the German Novel. May.

Penguin
Brereton, G. A Short History of French Literature.
Evans, I. A Short History of English Literature.
Potter, S. Our Language.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Caws, M. The Presence of René Char Jun.
Cox, J. Mark Twain. May.
Fox, S. Poetic Form in Blake's Milton. Jul.
MacCaffrey, I. Spenser's Allegory. Apr.
Maguire, A., ed. Gogol from the Twentieth Century. May.
Rabkin, E. The Fantastic in Literature. Apr.
Reynolds, M. Hemingway's First War. Jul.
Seidel, M. Epic Geography in James Joyce's Ulysses. Jun.
Smith, M. Prudentius' Psychomachia. Apr.
Weinberg, K. The Figure of Faust in Valery and Goethe. May.

Putnam
Noel, D., ed. Seeing Casteneda. Jan.

Random
Harris, H., ed. Astride the Two Cultures. Feb.
Index to Censorship. Mar.
Index on Censorship. Vol. 5. Jun.

Scribners
Bruccoli, M. J. Some Champions. Mar.
Daniels, L. Dying of Fright. Jul.
McDougall, R. The Very Rich Hours of Adrienne Monnier. Apr.

Sleepy Hollow
Myers, A. B., ed. Washington Irving. Feb.
Myers, A. B., ed. The World of Washington Irving, 1783-1859. Feb.

Stanford Univ. Pr.
Peake, C. H. James Joyce. Jul.
Ueda, M. Modern Japanese Writers and the Nature of Literature. May.

Stein & Day
Muir, F. An Irreverent and Thoroughly Incomplete Social History of Almost Everything. Jun.

Taplinger
Crosland, M. Women of Iron and Velvet. Aug.
Holderness, G. Who's Who in D. H. Lawrence. Jul.
Leeming, G. Who's Who in Henry James. Jul.

Univ. of Illinois Pr.
Allen, M. The Necessary Blankness. Mar.
Irwin, W. R. The Game of the Impossible. Jun.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr.
Simpson, M. & L. Baskin. Gods and Heroes of the Greeks. Jul.

Viking
Plimpton, G. Writers at Work.

Wesleyan Univ. Pr.
Jabès, E. The Book of Questions. Mar.

Helen & Kurt Wolff
Morris, J. Travels. Apr.

Yale Univ. Pr.
Bloom, H. Poetry and Repression. Jan.
Frankel, H. H. The Flowering Plum and the Palace Lady. Apr.
Halpern, J. Critical Fictions. Feb.
Rimanelli, G. & K. J. Atchity. Italian Literature. Apr.
Sylvester, R. S., ed. The History of King Richard III and Selections from the English and Latin Poems. May.
Terdiman, R. The Dialectics of Isolation. Jan.
Wimsatt, W. K. Day of the Leopards. Apr.

PHILOSOPHY & RELIGION

Abingdon
Benson, D. The Rock Generation. Mar.
Biddle, P. Abingdon Funeral Manual. Feb.
Biersdorf, J. Creating an Intentional Ministry. Mar.
Cook, W. Mealtime Graces. Jan.
Deffner, D. You Say You're Depressed? Jan.
Diehm, F. How To Be Fully Alive Feb.
Dotts, M. The Church Resource Library. Jan.
Drummond, L. What the Bible Says. Feb.
Hallett, A. The Words of Jesus. Jan.
Hayes, J. Son of God to Superstar. Feb.
Hoyer, R. Seventy Times Seven. Mar.
Ikerman, R. Devotional Alphabet. Jan.
Jones, S. How To Pray. Jan.
Kinghorn, K. Gifts of the Spirit. Jan.
Malcomson, W. Success Is a Failure Experience. Feb.
Moore, H. & P. Moore. The Irritated Oyster. Feb.
Murphy, C. Fundamentals of Faith. Jan.
Otto, H. Marriage and Family Enrichment. Jan.
Reid, G. A New Happiness. Jan.
Warshaw, T. Bible-Related Curriculum Materials. Jan.

Autumn Pr.
Stiskin, N. The Looking Glass God. Feb.

Cornell Univ. Pr.
Ellenburg, S. Rousseau's Political Philosophy. Mar.
Nichols, J. H., Jr. Epicurean Political Philosophy. Jul.

Delacorte
Matson, F. W. The Idea of Man. Aug.

Free Pr.
Abel, R. Man Is the Measure. Mar.
Jayatilleke, K. N. The Message of the Buddha. Jan.

HBJ
Heller, E. The Artist's Journey into the Interior and Other Essays. Apr.

Knopf
Adam, M. Wandering in Eden. Mar.
Bettelheim, B. The Uses of Enchantment. May.
Franck, F. The Book of Angelus Silesius. Apr.

Kodansha
Gage, R. L., ed. & tr. The Toynbee-Ikeda Diologue. Jun.
Nakamura, H. Parallel Developments. Feb.

A new resource . . .

MANAGING LIVESTOCK WASTES

An important new reference for research, technical and rural libraries. The Proceedings of the 3rd International Symposium on Livestock Wastes (ISLW-75) contain 180 papers that provide studies of complete waste management systems and report major research projects. These proceedings reflect a current technology in guidelines for designing economical livestock waste management systems compatible with environmental needs. Comprehensive subject matter includes treatment, economic impacts, legal restraints, uses as feed and energy, runoff control and other pertinent information vital to poultry, beef, dairy and swine systems. 8¼ x 11¼ in., 624 pages.

ISBN 0-916150-00-3 $32.50

American Society of Agricultural Engineers
P.O. Box 410 St. Joseph, MI 49085

INDEX

JOURNAL OF GLASS STUDIES

VOLUMES I—XV
1959-1973

$8.00
plus postage
and handling

THE CORNING MUSEUM OF GLASS
CENTERWAY
CORNING, NEW YORK
14830

May Art History	THE RELIGIOUS AND HISTORICAL PAINTINGS OF JAN STEEN Baruch Kirschenbaum	$50.00
March Art	All the PAINTINGS IN THE RIJKSMUSEUM IN AMSTERDAM A completely illustrated catalogue	$52.00
March Art	ABSTRACT PAINTING IN FLANDERS Michel Seuphor	$70.00
March Art History	ROMAN BAROQUE PAINTING Ellis Waterhouse	$45.00
March History	VICTORIANS ON THE THAMES Reginald Bolland	$12.00
March Art History	DRESS IN ITALIAN PAINTING 1460-1500 Elizabeth Birbari	$17.50
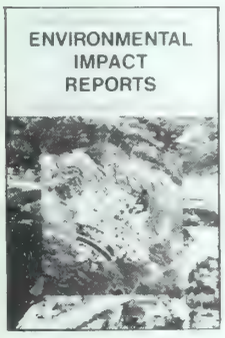
March Art History	TUSCANIA— English edition Artistic civilization in Tuscany	$50.00

ABNER SCHRAM
1860 BROADWAY:
NEW YORK, N.Y. 10023



A GUIDE TO THE PREPARATION AND REVIEW OF ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT REPORTS

Mandatory for many different professionals as a reference tool and valuable to the general public as an elementary handbook, this clear, concise book presents environmental legislation background, interpretations of federal and state guidelines and useful analytical techniques and procedures in the preparation of environmental documents.

Order from distributor or direct:

SECURITY WORLD BOOKS

2639 S. La Cienega Blvd.
Los Angeles, CA 90034
(213) 836-5000

Library of Congress #75-44261
ISBN 0-913708-23-2

INTRODUCING:

DOMUS BOOKS

Here is the first title in a new publishing venture!
All Domus titles are available exclusively from Quality Books Inc.

ONLY $1.98 net
IN HARDCOVER

THE METRIC SYSTEM IS OFFICIAL!

And here is the source everyone is looking for! Instant Metric Conversion Tables makes the transition quick, easy, and precise...offering at a glance complete conversion tables: inches, centimeters, millimeters, yards, meters, miles, kilometers, gallons, liters, centigrade, fahrenheit, bushels, hectoliters–all measurements.

It's the perfect tool for students, housewives, office workers, engineers, architects, craftsmen, butchers, bakers...everybody.

*"HARDCOVER and [illegible]
*Size [illegible]
*All [illegible]
*Complete quick index [illegible]

Instant Metric Conversion Tables is now available exclusively from Quality Books Inc. for only $1.98 net per copy.

Minimum Order $10.00 or check to accompany smaller orders

QUALITY BOOKS INC.
400 Anthony Trail, Northbrook, Illinois 60062 (312)498-4000

Lippincott
[illegible]

Luce
Larson, M. & S. Lowell. The Reli[illegible]

M.I.T. Pr.
[illegible]

McKay
Harris, S. The Nuns. Jun.
Lewis, J. History of Philosophy. Apr.
[illegible]
Turner, A. W. Houses for the Dead. [illegible]

Macmillan
[illegible]
Bradford, E. Paul the Traveller. Apr.
Bradley, I. C. The Call to Seriousness. Jun.
Dumoulin, H., ed. Buddhism in the Modern World. Jun.
Skinner, B. F. Walden Two. Apr.
Taylor, S. W. The Kingdom or Nothing. May.
Wilcox, R. Shroud. Jul.

Morrow
[illegible] D. Diary of a Pigeon Watcher. May.
van der Post, L. A Mantis Carol. May.

Orbis
Anderson, G. Asian Voices in Christian Theology. Apr.
Carretto, C. In Search of the Beyond. Apr.
Comblin, J. Jesus of Nazareth. Mar.
Dussel, E. History and the Theology of Liberation. Mar.
Gremillion, J. The Gospel of Peace & Justice. Jun.

Penguin
Ling, T. The Buddha.

Prentice-Hall
Kinard, J. S. The Worth of a Smile. May.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Cohen, M. & others, eds. Equality and Preferential Treatment. May.

Random
Buddhaghosa, B. The Path of Purification. Mar.
Guenther, H. V. Philosophy and Psy[illegible] in the Abhidharma. Apr.
Guenther, H. V. Treasures on the Tibetan Middle Way. Apr.
Waite, A. E., ed. The Hermetic & Alchemical Writings of Paracelsus. Apr.

Saturday Review Pr.
Smith, C. M. & T. L. Smith. Different Drums. Jan.

Scribners
Koch, K. The Growth of Biblical Tradition. Apr.
Smart, N. Religious Experience of Mankind. 2d ed. Apr.

Shambhala
[illegible] C. The Foundations of Mindfulness. May.
Trungpa, C. The Myth of Freedom. May.
The Zen Teachings of Rinzai. May.

S. & S.
Whitman, A. Meditation. Apr.

Stein & Day
Tillich, H. From Place to Place. May.

Taplinger
Hardy, A. The Biology of God. May.

Touchstone: S. & S.
McLuhan, T. C. Touch the Earth. Mar.

Univ. of Illinois Pr.
Brand, M., ed. The Nature of Causation. Apr.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr.
Ackermann, R. J. The Philosophy of Karl Popper. Apr.

Viking
Berlin, I. Vico and Herder.
Cioran, E. M. The Trouble with Being Born.

Watts
Kleeberg, I. C. Christianity. Apr.
Rossel, S. Judaism. Mar.

Weatherhill
Ikeda, D. The Human Revolution. Jun.
Ikeda, D. The Living Buddha. Apr.
Yokoi, Y. & D. Victoria. Zen Master Dogen. Apr.

Wesleyan Univ. Pr.
Sugerman, S. & others. The Evolution of Consciousness. Apr.

Westminster
Barclay, W. Introduction to the First Three Gospels. May.
Barclay, W. Introduction to John and the Acts of the Apostles. May.
Borsch, F. H. God's Parable. Mar.
Clements, R. E. One Hundred Years of Old Testament Interpretation. May.
Cullman, O. The Johannine Circle. May.
Dean, W. R. Love Before the Fall. Apr.
Duckert, M. Open Education Goes to Church. May.
Faber, H. Psychology of Religion. May.
Franklin, E. Christ the Lord. Mar.
Hall, D. J. Lighten Our Darkness. Apr.
Hodge, D. R. Division in the Protestant House. May.
Hunsinger, G. Karl Barth and Radical Politics. May.
Hunter, A. M. Gleanings from the New Testament. Mar.
Hunter, A. M. Interpreting the Parables. Apr.
Ingle, D. J. Is It Really So? Mar.
Mays, J. L. Micah, a Commentary. May.
Miller, G. T. Religious Liberty in America. Mar.
Rassieur, C. L. The Problem Clergymen Don't Talk About. Apr.
Seifert, H. New Power for the Church. Apr.
Stivers, R. L. The Sustainable Society. Apr.
Tournier, P. The Strong and the Weak. Apr.
Verdesi, E. H. In But Still Out. Mar.

Yale Univ. Pr.
Gadamer, H.-G. Hegel's Dialectic. Feb.
Goldin, J., ed. The Jewish Expression. Apr.
MacKay, A. F. & D. D. Merrill, eds. Issues in the Philosophy of Language. Mar.

Zondervan
Brandt, H. & P. Landrum. I Want To Enjoy My Children. Sept.
LaHaye, T. & B. LaHaye. The Act of Marriage. Mar.
Larson, B. Thirty Days to a New You. Oct.
Lindsell, H. The Battle for the Bible. Apr.
Wagner, M. The Sensation of Being Somebody. Oct.
Williams, T. M. See No Evil. Dec.
Woodson, M. If I Die at Thirty. Sept.

POETRY

Atheneum
Hollander, J. Reflections on Espionage. Feb.
Howard, R. Fellow Feelings. Feb.
Merrill, J. Divine Comedies. Feb.

Autumn Pr.
Ha, K. C. Cry of the People and Other Poems. Feb.

Bobbs
Heyen, W., ed. American Poets in 1976. Mar.

Braziller
Dennis, C. Climbing Down. Feb.
Macdonald, C. Transplants. Jun.

Crowell
Konek, C. & D. Walters, eds. I Hear My Sisters Saying. May.
Wyse, L. Wet Paint and Other Signs of Love. Feb.

Crown
Hornby, G. Poems for Children and Other People. Mar.

Funk & Wagnalls
Tagore, R. The Later Poems of Rabinranath Tagore. Apr.

HBJ
Cudahy, S. The Bristle Pine Cone and Other Poems. Apr.
Walker, A. Once. Mar.
Wilbur, R. The Mind-Reader. Apr.

Harmony: Crown
Language of Flowers. Feb.

Lawrence Hill
Hausman, G. Sitting on the Blue-Eyed Bear. Feb.

Knopf
Hacker, M. Separations. Apr.
Piercy, M. Living in the Open. Feb.

Liveright
Lima, F. Angel. Apr.

McKay
Skelton, R. Poetry. Apr.

Macmillan
Merriam, E. A Husband's Notes About Her. Apr.

Morrow
Neruda, P. Song of Protest. Jun.
Simpson, L. Searching for the Ox. Apr.

Norton
Betjeman, J. A Nip in the Air. Jan.
Lorde, A. Coal. May.

Ohio Univ. Pr.
Evans, D. A. Train Windows. Feb.

Penguin
Fraser, A., ed. Scottish Love Poems.
Gluck, L. The House on Marshland.
Harrison, G. B., ed. A Book of English Poetry.
Scott, T., ed. Penguin Book of Scottish Verse.
Vaughan, H. Complete Poems.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Arghezi, T. Selected Poems of Tudor Arghezi. Jul.
Char, R. The Poems of Rene Char. Jun.

Random
Shapiro, K. Adult Bookstore. Apr.
Warren, R. P. Selected Poems 1923-1975. Jun.

S. & S.
Brautigan, R. Loading Mercury with a Pitchfork. Apr.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr.
Bonnefoy, Y. Words in Stone. Jun.

Viking
Ashbery, J. The Double Dream of Spring.
Booth, P. Available Light.
Pavese, C. Hard Labor.
Schmitz, D. Goodwill, Inc.
Simic, C. & M. Strand. Another Republic

Wesleyan Univ. Pr.
Benedikt, M. Night Cries. Mar.
Moses, W. R. Passage. Mar.

Yale Univ. Pr.
Forche, C. Gathering the Tribes. Apr.

POLITICAL SCIENCE & PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION

Arlington House
Grathwohl, L. Bringing Down America. Jun.
Herschensohn, B. The Gods of Antenna. Feb.
Lambro, D. The Conscience of a Young Conservative. May.
Levine, I. D. Plain Talk. May.
Stenehjem, M. F. An American First. Mar.

Atheneum
Green, D. The Politics of Food. Jan.

Cambridge Univ. Pr.
Maxwell, K. Revolution in Portugal and Africa. Jun.

Bobbs
Ayers, B. E. The War That Never Was. Mar.

Congressional Quarterly
Congressional Quarterly. Candidates '76. Jan.

Cornell Univ. Pr.
Amacher, R. C. & others, eds. The Economic Approach to Public Policy. Aug.
Legault, A. & G. Lindsey. The Dynamics of the Nuclear Balance. May.
Rosecrance, R. America as an Ordinary Country. Jul.

Crowell
Christopher, M. Black Americans in Congress. rev. ed. Jun.
Galloway, G. B. History of the House of Representatives. Jun.
U.S. Army War College. National Security and Detente. May.

Facts on File
New York and the Urban Dilemma. Jun.
Portuguese Revolution. Jun.
Presidential Succession. Jan.

Free Pr.
Black, C. E. Comparative Modernization. Jan.
Brown, A. & M. Kaser. The Soviet Union Since the Fall of Khrushchev. Mar.
Burton, A. M. Urban Terrorism. Jan.
Campbell A. K. & R. W. Bahl. State and Local Government. Aug.
Duff, E. A. & J. F. McGamant. Violence and Repression in Latin America. Feb.
Epstein, W. The Last Chance. May.
Hermann, M. G. & T. W. Milburn. A Psychological Examination of Political Leaders. Oct.
Luard, E. Types of International Society. Nov.
Mazrui, A. A. A World Federation of Cultures. Jun.
Morse, E. L. Modernization and the Transformation of International Relations. Apr.
Reisman, W. M. & B. H. Weston. Toward World Order and Human Dignity. Sept.
Rosenau, J. N. & others. World Politics. Mar.
Seliger, M. Ideology and Politics. Feb.
Smock, D. R. & K. Bentsi-Enchill. The Search for National Integration in Africa. Mar.
Unger, R. M. Law in Modern Society. Jan.
Zinnes, D. A. Contemporary Research in International Relations. Mar.

Greenwood
Miller, A. S. The Modern Corporate State.
Rogers, B. White Wealth and Black Poverty.
Woodrow Wilson Internat. Center for Scholars. Growth in America.

HBJ
Lewis, D. Sexpionage. Jun.

Lawrence Hill
Chadwick, L. Cuba Today. May.
Deutscher, T., ed. Not By Politics Alone. Apr.

Johns Hopkins
Dinerstein, H. S. The Making of a Missle Crisis. Mar.
Glassman, J. Arms for the Arabs. Jan.
Isaac, R. J. Israel Divided. Jun.

Knopf
Commoner, B. The Poverty of Power.
Conoway, J. A. The Texans. Apr.
Gutman, H. Work, Culture, and Society in Industrializing America Apr.

Lippincott
Rosett, A. & D. R. Cressey. Justice by Consent. Mar.

Liveright
Jungk, R. Millennial Man. Aug.

M.I.T. Pr.
Deitchman, S. J. The Best-Laid Schemes. Feb.
Sorensen, T. C. Watchmen in the Night. Mar.
Stockholm Internat. Peace Research Inst. Incendiary Weapons. Jan.

McKay
Miroff, B. Pragmatic Illusions. Apr.
Mondale, W. F. The Accountability of Power. Jan.
Wayper, C. L. & C. W. Parkin. Political Thought. Apr.

Macmillan
Goldstein, J. & others. The My Lai Massacre Cover-Up. Apr.
Goldwater, B. The Coming Breakpoint. Apr.
Martin, J. K. Men in Rebellion. Apr.
Parmet, H. S. The Democrats. Apr.

Mason/Charter
Crass, P. The Wallace Factor. Mar.

Norton
Herbers, J. No Thank You, Mr. President. Mar.
Hockin, T. A. Government in Canada. May
Long, F. A. & G. W. Rathjens, eds. Arms, Defense Policy, and Arms Control. Mar.
Mollenhoff, C. R. Game Plan for Disaster. Jan.
More, T. Utopia. Mar.
Taylor, M.D. The Changing Nature of National Security. Jun.

Orbis
Alexander, R. J. A New Development Strategy. Mar.
Cahill, K. Health and Development. May.
Manglapus, R. S. Philippines. Apr.

Pantheon
Brandon, R. & others. A Citizen Handbook for Tax Reform. Jun.
Guttman, D. & B. Willner. The Shadow Government. Mar.
Schurmann, F. The Logic of World Power. Feb.

Penguin
Finer, S. E. The Man on Horseback.
Godwin, W. Enquiry Concerning Political Justice.
Lucas, J. R. Democracy and Participation.
Paine, T. Common Sense.
Paine, T. The Rights of Man.
Widgery, D. The Left in Britain.

Prentice-Hall
Greenshaw, W. Watch Out for George Wallace. Mar.
Hadley, A. T. The Invisible Primary. Mar.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Clausewitz, C. On War. Jul.
Falk, R., ed. The Vietnam War and International Law. Vol. 4. May.
Hull, R. The Irish Triangle. Feb.
Korbel, J. Detente in Europe. May.
Zonis, M. The Political Elite of Iran. May.

Random
Scott, P. L. & others. The Assassinations. Mar.

Scribners
Polsby, N. W. & A. Wildavsky. Presidential Elections. 4th ed. Mar.

S. & S.
Tekoah, Y. In the Face of Nations. Mar.
Woodward, B. &. C. Bernstein. The Final Days. Apr.

Sleepy Hollow
Judd, J. & I. H. Polishook, eds. Aspects of Early New York Society and Politics. Feb.

Stein & Day
Ky, N. C. Twenty Years and Twenty Days. Apr.
Moore, J. E. The Soviet Navy Today. Mar.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr.
Burns, R. Success in America. Jul.
Huckshorn, R. J. Party Leadership in the States. Jun.

Touchstone: S. & S.
Barnet, R. J. & R. E. Muller. Global Reach. Mar.

Viking
Crankshaw, E. The Shadow of the Winter Palace.
Hawks, D. F. Honorable Treason.
Smith, D. M. Mussolini's Roman Empire.
Weisband, E. &. T. M. Franck. Resignation in Protest

Watts
Cook, F. J. Lobbying in American Politics. Apr.
Dolan, E. F. F., Jr. Amnesty. Mar.

Helen & Kurt Wolff
Osadchy, M. Cataract. Apr.

Yale Univ. Pr.
Decalo, S. Coups and Army rule in Africa. Apr.
Denitch, B. D. The Legitimation of a Revolution. Apr.
Deutsch, J. G. Selling the People's Cadillac. Apr.
Howe, I. Essential Works of Socialism. Apr.
MacRae, D., Jr. The Social Function of Social Science. May.

PSYCHOLOGY & PARAPSYCHOLOGY

Arco
Markoff, D. & others. How To Remember Anything. Jan.

Cambridge Univ. Pr.
Argyle, M. & M. Cook. Gaze and Mutual Gaze. Jan.

Crowell
Janov, A. & E. M. Holden. Primal Man. Jan.

Crown
Donaldson, K. Insanity Inside Out. May.
Moore, M. Hypersentience. May.
Yeterian, D. Exploring Psychic Reality. Mar.

Delacorte
Frederick, C. EST. Mar.
von Daniken. E. Miracles of the Gods. Mar.

Dial
Martine. Sexual Astrology. Aug.

Dutton
Miller, T. Images of Change. Apr.
Shechy, G. Passages. May.

Evans
Glass, S. Life-Control. Apr.
Holt, H. Free To Be Good or Bad. Mar.
LeShan, E. In Search of My Self and Other Children. Mar.
White, S. Suzanne White's Book of Chinese Chance. Apr.

Fell
Koran, A. How To Bring Out the Magic in Your Mind. Jan.
Whiteside, R. L. & D. Whiteside. Personality Power. May.

Free Pr.
Becker, E. The Structure of Evil. Jan.

Funk & Wagnalls
Dyer, W. R. Your Erroneous Zones. Mar.
Gibson, W. B. Houdini's Escapes and Magic. Jan.

Human Sciences
Fix, A. J. & E. A. Haffke. Basic Psychological Therapies. Apr.
Gubrium, J. F. Time, Roles, and Self in Old Age. Apr.
Hartman, H. Let's Play and Learn. Apr.
Howell, R. W. & H. J. Vetter. Language in Behavior. Jan.
Johnson, R. E. In Quest of a New Psychology. Apr.
Olsen, P. T. Emotional Flooring. Mar.

Interface
Watkins, M. M. Waking Dreams. Feb.

Knopf
Leboyer, F. Loving Hands. May.

McGraw
Snyder, S. H. The Troubled Mind. Mar.

McKay
Abell, R. G. Own Your Own Life. Apr.
Brasch, R. How Did the Occult Begin? Apr.
Giltham, B., ed. Psychology Today. Apr.
Rubin, T. Love Me, Love My Fool. Mar.

Macmillan
Austin, R. B., Jr. How To Make It with Another Person. Jan.
Hartford, H. You Are What You Write May
Winter, R. The Fragile Bond. May

Morrow
Daniels, M. Cat Astrology. Jun.
Dixon, J. Yesterday, Today, and Forever. Jan.
Fast, J. Creative Coping. Feb.

Norton
Bell, R. & J. Coplans. Decisions, Decisions. Jan.
Cermak, L. S. Improving Your Memory. Jan.
Erikson, J. M. Activity, Recovery, Growth. Jun.
Freud, S. The Complete Psychological Works of Sigmund Freud. Mar.
Hacker, F. Terror and Terrorism. May.

Pantheon
Block, N. J. & G. Dworkin, eds. The IQ Controversy. May.
Kovel, J. A. Complete Guide to the Therapies and Psychoanalysis. May.
Laing, R. D. The Facts of Life. Mar.

Prentice-Hall
Braga, J. & L. Braga. Children and Adults. Jan.
Broadbent, W. W. How To Be Loved. Apr.
Graham, D. The Practical Side of Reincarnation. Aug.
Logan, D. Vibrations. Jun.
Poduska, B. You Can Cope. Jan.
Smith, L. Improving Your Child's Behavior Chemistry. Jun.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Jung, C. G. Psychological Types. May.
Jung, C. G. Psychology and the Occult May

Random
Boyd, D. Swami. Jun
Davitz, J. & L. Davitz. Making It from 40 to 50. May.
Jones, M. E. Astrology, How & Why It Works. Feb.
Jones, M. E. Essentials of Astrological Analysis. Feb.
Jones, M. E. Guide to Horoscope Interpretation. Feb.
Jones, M. E. Horary Astrology. Feb.
Jones, M. E. How To Learn Astrology. Feb.
Jones, M. E. Mundane Perspectives in Astrology. Feb.
Jones, M. E. Occult Philosophy. Feb.
Jones, M. E. The Sabian Book. Feb.
Jones, M. E. Sabian Manual. Feb.
Jones, M. E. Sabian Symbols in Astrology. Feb.
Jones, M. E. Scope of Astrological Prediction. Feb.
Keleman, S. Living Your Dying. Feb.
Rosenberg, J. L. Total Orgasm. Feb.
Watzlawick, P. How Real Is Real? Mar.

Reader's Digest Pr.
Martin, M. Hostage to the Devil. Mar.

San Francisco Bk. Co.
Bracewell, R. N. The Galactic Club. Jun.

Saturday Review Pr.
Crain, W. W The Psycho Squad. Apr.
Keel, J. A. The Eighth Tower. Jan.
Rosa, K. R. You and AT* (Autogenic Training). Apr.
Rossi, W. A. The Sex Life of the Foot and Shoe. Apr.

Shambhala
Poncé, C. The Waterstone of the Wise. Jun.
Rudhyar, D. An Astrological Study of Psychological Complexes. May.

S. & S.
Friedrich, O. Going Crazy. Feb.
Lifton, R. J. The Life of the Self. Apr.

Stein & Day
Dichter, E. Total Self-Knowledge. May.
Myden, W. The Psychology of Money. May.
Osten, G. The Astrological Chart of the United States. Jun.
Sutherland, N. S. Breakdown. Jun.

IF . . . A Big Word with the Poor

Donald C. Bakely, Terry Evans

Author Bakely and photographer Evans have blended the arts—poetry and photography—to present the plight of the poor. Through pictures and poems the voices and the experiences of the poor speak about living at the shackled end of the social structure.

96 pages, hardback, illustrated . . . $6.00

FAITH AND LIFE PRESS
724 Main Street, Box 347
Newton, Kansas 67114

Wells, H. Your Child's Right to Sex. Jun.

Taplinger
Rogo, D. S. In Search of the Unknown. Mar.

Touchstone/S. & S.
Lifton, R. J. Boundaries. Apr.

Transatlantic
Reichman, S. J. & C. Phelps. Psychology and Medicine. Apr.

Walker
Benziger, B. F. Speaking Out. Apr.
Marwick, C. & H. Marwick. Living with Alcohol. Jun.
Zalman, A. & A. Sutherland. Stay Slim for Good. May.
Zalman, A. & A. Sutherland. Stop Smoking for Good. Jun.

Watts
Aylesworth, T. G. Palmistry. Mar.
Cohen, D. Dreams, Visions, and Drugs. Feb.
Ewen, R. B. Getting It Together. Jan.

Yale Univ. Pr.
Eissler, R. S. & others, eds. Physical Illness and Handicap in Childhood. Apr.
Eissler, R. S. & others, eds. Psychoanalytic Assessment. Apr.
Murphy, L. B. & A. E. Moriarty. Vulnerability, Coping, and Growth. Mar.
Rexford, E. N. & others, eds. Infant Psychiatry. Apr.
Schafer, R. A New Language for Psychoanalysis. Feb.
Smith, J., ed. Psychiatry and the Humanities. Apr.

SCIENCE & TECHNOLOGY

Arco
Boff, V. You Can Be Physically Perfect, Powerfully Strong. Apr.
Bramson, M. Mathematics Level I Achievement Test. Mar.
Chamberlain, P. & T. Gander. Self-Propelled Anti-Tank and Anti-Aircraft Guns. Feb.
Chernok, N. B. Your Future in Medical Assisting. May.
Clement, J. E. Medical Assistants Examination Review. Jun.
Engel, L. K. Auto Repair Frauds. Jun.
Flatto, E. Warning -Sex May Be Hazardous to Your Health. Mar.
French, C. D. Papaya. Mar.
Frost, J. C. Your Future as a Dental Assistant. May.
McDonough, M. Mastering Modern Mathematics for Secondary School. Apr.
Mallan, L. Secrets of the Sea. Mar.
Rau, H. A. D. Healing with Herbs. Mar.
Redempta, M. Practical Nursing Examination Review. Jun.
Riser, W. Your Future in Veterinary Medicine. May.
Rob, C. G. & J. R. Hinshaw. Specialty Board Review. Jun.
Rodgers, J. A. & W. A. McGovern. Psychiatric/Mental Health Nursing Review. Jun.
Singer, W. & others. Pharmacy Examination Review. Jun.
Thienell, G. M. My Victory Over Low Blood Sugar. Mar.

Atheneum
Dixon, B. Magnificent Microbes. Apr.

Autumn Pr.
Huddle, N. & M. Reich. Island of Dreams. Feb.

Braziller
Bertalanffy, L. von. Perspectives on General System Theory. Jan.
Haber, F. C. From Structure to Process. Aug.
The Medieval Health Handbook. Jun.

Cambridge Univ. Pr.
Rosenberg, N. Perspectives on Technology. Jun.
Ziman, J. The Force of Knowledge. Feb.

Cornell Univ. Pr.
Johnson, W. T. & H. H. Lyon. Insects That Feed on Trees and Shrubs. Apr.

Crowell
Barnes, B. & L. Galton. Hypothyroidism. Feb.
Batten, P. Living Trophies. May.
Collins, A. F. The Radio Amateur's Handbook. Jul.
The Color Treasury of Mushrooms. Mar.
Lord, S. The Easy Way to Good Looks. May.
Porter, K. Computers Made Really Simple. May.
Schlittler, J. The Nongilled Mushrooms. Jun.
Zizmor, J. & J. Foreman. Super Skin. Apr.

Crown
Corbetta, F. & others. Complete Book of Fruits & Vegetables. Mar.
Galton, L. Truth About Fiber in Your Food. Mar.

John Day
Nordoff, P. & C. Robbins. Creative Music Therapy. Apr.

Delacorte
Tangye, D. Somewhere a Cat Is Waiting. May.

Dial
Desmond, A. The Hot-Blooded Dinosaurs. Mar.
Frank, B. S. & P. Mielie. Dr. Frank's No-Aging Diet. Jun.

Dodd
Hochman, S. How To Save Money on Car Repairs. May.

Domus Bks.
Instant Metric Conversion Tables. Jan.

Dutton
Blake, H. Talking with Horses. Mar.
Harwood, M. The View from Great Gull. May.

Eriksson
Nininger, H. H. Find a Falling Star. Mar.

Evans
Hellman, H. Technophobia. May.

Fell
Mair, G. Fell's Guide to Doubling the Performance of Your Car. Jun.
Warren, F. Z., M.D. Freedom from Pain the Acupressure Way. Feb.

Funk & Wagnalls
Helm, T. Dangerous Sea Creatures. Mar.

HBJ
McLaughlin, C. J. The Black Parents' Handbook. May.

Knopf
Bruce, H. How To Grow Wildflowers and Wild Shrubs and Trees in Your Own Garden. Feb.
Cruso, T. Making Things Grow (Indoors). Mar.
Cruso, T. Making Things Grow Outdoors. Mar.
Emerson, W. K. & M. K. Jacobson. The American Museum of Natural History Guide to Shells. Mar.
Merleau-Ponty, J. & B. Morando. The Rebirth of Cosmology. May.
Wilson, D. Penicillin. May.

Seymour Lawrence
Brazelton, T. B. Doctor and Child. Jul.

Lippincott
Cassell, E. J. The Healer's Art. May.
Halberstam, M. & S. Lesher. A Coronary Event. Jul.
Schwartz, M. F. Stuttering Solved. May.

Liveright
Levy, J. V. & P. Bach-y-Rita. Vitamins. Apr.

Luce
Springarn, N. D. Heartbeat. Jun.

M.I.T. Pr.
Arnowitt, R. & P. Nath, eds. Gauge Theories and Modern Field Theory. Apr.
Backer, S. & others. Textile Fabric Flammability. Mar.
Baron, R. E. & others. Chemical Equilibria in Carbon-Hydrogen-Oxygen Systems. May.
Bett, K. E. & others. Thermodynamics for Chemical Engineers. Jan.
McKigney, J. I. & H. N. Munro, eds. Nutrient Requirements in Adolescence. Jan.
Parsons, W. B. Engineers and Engineering of the Renaissance. Mar.
Pierce, J. R. Almost All About Waves. Mar.
Rosenzweig, M. R. & E. L. Bennett, eds. Neural Mechanism of Learning and Memory. Mar.
Steinfeld, J. I., ed. Electronic Transition Lasers. May.
Szentagothai, J. & M. A. Arbib. Conceptual Models of Neural Organization. Jan.
Taylor, H. C. Human Reproduction. Apr.
Yanonovich, M. M. Heat Transfer with Thermal Control Applications. Jan.

McGraw
Demarest, R. J. & J. J. Sciarra. Conception, Birth and Contraception. Mar.
Hewlett, S. I. & K. G. Hewlett. Sea Life of the Pacific Northwest. May.
Jacobson, E. You Must Relax. Apr.
Scharff, R. Basics of Electric Appliance Servicing. Jan.
Scharff, R. Major Appliance Servicing. May.
Scharff, R. Refrigeration, Air-Conditioning, Range and Oven Servicing. Apr.
Scharff, R. Small Appliance Servicing Guide. Mar.
Sclar, D. Auto Repair for Dummies. Jun.
Selye, H. The Stress of Life. Feb.
Smith, D. The East/West Exercise Book. May.
Wrogemann, N. Cheetah. Feb.

McKay
Abbot, P. Algebra, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Abbott, P. Calculus, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Abbott, P. Geometry. Apr.
Abbot, P. Mechanics. Apr.
Abbott, P. Trigonometry. Apr.
Bainbridge, C. Welding. Apr.
Berry, R. J. Genetics. Apr.
Block, E. Hypnosis in Criminal Investigation. Apr.
Browne, D. Principles and Practice in Modern Archaeology, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Bryant, D. Physics. Apr.
Butterworth, L. Radio Servicing. Apr.
Claus, G. & K. Bolander. Ecological Sanity. Mar.
Cowden, J. For the Love of an Eagle. Apr.
Davidson, J. Mathematics. Apr.
DeBakey, M. The Living Heart. Jul.
Dodd, K. N. Data Processing. Apr.
Elliott, J. H. Botany, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Evans, D. S. Astronomy, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Forer, L. The Birth Order Imperative. May.
Further Calculus, Teach Yourself. Apr.
George, F. H. Cybernetics. Apr.
Hall, J. R. Biology, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Hollis, H. F. Perspective Drawings. Apr.
Howard, T. O. & F. Oughton. Joinery. Apr.
Jellinck, P. H. Biochemistry, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Jolly, W. P. Electronics. Apr.
Lambe, C. G. Dynamics. Apr.
Leonard, G. Somebody Else Is on Our Moon. May.
LeVay, D. Human Anatomy and Physiology. Apr.
Luce, A. A. Logic, Teach Yourself. Apr.
National Health Education Committee. The Killers and Cripplers. Jul.
Pascoe, L. C. New Mathematics. Apr.
Peatfield, A. E. Practical Concreting. Apr.
Pyke, M. Nutrition. Apr.
Radford, A. S. Computer Programming/Fortran. Apr.
Robinson, D. The Miracle Finders. Jul.
Sagov, S. The Active Patient's Guide to Better Medical Care. Apr.
Savory, T. M. Zoology. Apr.
Sutton, G. Weather. Apr.
Taverner, D. Human Biology, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Wasley, G. D. & R. W. Warner. Microbiology. Apr.
Westwater, F. L. & D. H. Joyce. Electronic Computers. Apr.
Wickham, T. F. & N. Hefford. Seamanship. Apr.
Wilman, C. W. Electricity. Apr.

Mamillan
Becker, E. The Structure of Evil. Feb.
Crawford, P. Homesteading. Mar.
Mullish, H. The Complete Pocket Calculator Handbook. Jun.
Taylor, K. & S. Hamblin. Handbook of Wild Flower Cultivation. Mar.

J. Macy Fdn.
Bowers, J. Z. & E. F. Purcell, Eds. Advances in American Medicine. 2 vols. Apr.
Dalrymple, W. & E. F. Purcell, eds. Campus Health Programs. Apr.

Morrow
Hendin, D. The Life Givers. May.
Kramer, J. 1000 Beautiful Garden Plants and How To Grow Them. Jun.
Michael, P. The Paul Michael Weight-Loss Plan. Feb.
Niall, I. One Man and His Dogs. Apr.
Ronsard, N. Nicole Ronsard's No-Excuse Exercise Guide. Apr.
Stearn, J. The Power of Alpha-Thinking. Feb.
Wilson, H. Van P. The Fragrant Year. Apr.

Norton
Carr, D. E. Energy and the Earth Machine. May.
Cooper, I. S. Living with Chronic Neurologic Disease. Apr.
Eckholm, E. P. Losing Ground. Apr.
Mahoney, M. J. & K. Mahoney. Permanent Weight Control. Mar.
Malthus, T. R. An Essay on the Principle of Population. Mar.
Moore, P. The New Guide to the Stars. Feb.
Moore, P., ed. 1976 Yearbook of Astronomy. Jan.
Moore, P. & I. Nicolson. Black Holes in Space. Feb.
Ward, B. The Home of Man. Apr.

Ohio Univ. Pr.
Roberts, J. C. Born in the Spring. Apr.

Pantheon
Burack, R. The 1976 Handbook of Prescription Drugs. Apr.
Illich, I. Medical Nemesis. May.
Schell, O. Briones. May.

Penguin
Buchenholz, B. Doctor in the Zoo.
Calder, N. The Weather Machine.
de Bono, E. The Mechanism of Mind.
Durrell, G. Catch Me a Colobus.
Harris, R. J. C. Cancer.
Lamb, L. E. What You Need To Know About Food and Cooking for Health.
Patterson, W. Nuclear Power.
The Penguin Book of the Natural World.
The Penguin Book of the Physical World.
Rhodes, F. H. T. The Evolution of Life.
Sandved, K. B. Shells in Color.

Potter
Miller, A. B. Shaker Herbs. Jun.

Prentice-Hall
Ponte, L. The Cooling. May.
Sousa, M. Childbirth at Home. Feb.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Griffith, P. Entire Holomorphic Mappings in One and Several Complex Variables. Feb.
Mulch, T. & others. The Geology of Mars. Jul.
Moynihan, M. The New World Primates. Apr.
Ridgely, R. A Guide to the Birds of Panama. Apr.
Shafer, G. A Mathematical Theory of Evidence. Mar.

Putnam
Stine, G. H. The Third Industrial Revolution. Nov.

Random
Glasser, R. J. The Body Is the Hero. Apr.

Reader's Digest Pr.
Nahas, G. G. Keep Off the Grass. May.
Parrish, L. No Pause at All. Apr.

San Francisco Bk. Co.
Daniels, V. & L. J. Horowitz. Being and Caring. Apr.

Saturday Review Pr.
Gillie, O. Who Do You Think You Are? Feb.
Laufer, I. J. & H. Kadison. The War on Diabetes. Jun.

Scribners
Beedell, S. Windmills. Mar
Ferguson-Lees, J. A Guide to Bird Watching in Europe. Mar
Golden, F. Quasars, Pulsars and Black Holes. Mar.
Harbison, P. The Archaeology of Ireland. Jun.
Hudson, K. The Archaeology of Industry. Jun.
Lauer, J.-P. Saqqara. Apr.
Leutscher, A. Keeping Reptiles and Amphibians. Apr.
MacClintock, D. A Natural History of Zebras. Jul.
MacQuitty, W. Island of Isis. May.
Marks, G. & W. K. Beatty. Epidemics. Jul.
Mellaart, J. The Neolithic of the Near East. Mar.
Najarian, H. H. Sex Lives of Animals Without Backbones. Jun.
Nock, O. J. Locomotion. Mar.
Ordish, G. The Constant Pest. Apr.
Scheffer, V. B. A Natural History of Marine Mammals. Aug.
Sletholt, E. Wild and Tame. Apr.
Smith, N. Man and Water. Apr.
Spoczynska, J. O. I. An Age of Fishes. Mar.
Spotte, S. Secrets of the Deep. May.
Street, P. Animal Migration and Navigation. Apr.

S. & S.
Africa Inst. Psychocalisthenics. Jun.
Bloomfield, H. H. & R. Kory. Happiness. May.
Consumer Guide Eds. Consumer Guide Fix-It. Apr.
Rood, R. It's Going to Sting Me! Mar.

Stanford Univ. Pr.
Radwin, G. E. & A. D'Attilio. Murex Shells of the World. Jun.

Stein & Day
Jonas, D. & D. Jonas. Other Senses, Other Worlds. Feb.
Sitchin, Z. The Twelfth Planet. Jul.

Taplinger
Brown, L. British Birds of Prey. Apr.
Clabby, J. The Natural History of the Horse. Apr.
Napier, J. Monkeys Without Tails. Feb.
MacCaskill, D. & B. MacCaskill. Wild Endeavour. Feb.
Moore, P. The Next Fifty Years in Space. Feb.
Perry, R. Life in Desert and Plain Jun.
Wayre, P. The River People. Mar.

Transatlantic
Bell, F. B. Site Investigations in Areas of Mining Subsidence. Mar.
Bell, F. B., ed. Methods of Treatment of Unstable Ground. Mar.
King, G. J. Servicing with Oscilloscope. 2d ed. May.
Muckle, W. Naval Architecture for Marine Engineers. Apr.
Nunny, M. J. The Automotive Engine. Apr.
Whyte, W. S. Basic Metric Surveying. Apr.

Univ. of Illinois Pr.
Carter, J. C. Diseases of Midwest Trees. Jan.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr.
Webb, R. E. The Accident Hazards of Nuclear Power Plants. May.

Viking
Calder, N. The Human Conspiracy.
Sylvester, H. Horses of the Camargue.

Walker
Asimov, I. How Did We Find Out About Atoms. Jun.
Asimov, I. To the Ends of the Universe. Feb.
Busch, P. Living Things That Poison, Itch and Sting. May.
Gould, T. Home Guide to Early Reading. Jul.
Gribbin, J. Forecasts, Famines and Freezes. Apr.
Klimas, J. Wild Flowers of Kentucky and Tennessee. Mar.
Klimas, J. Wild Flowers of Maryland and Delaware. Mar.
Klimas, J. Wild Flowers of North Carolina. Mar.
Klimas, J. Wild Flowers of Ohio. Mar.
Klimas, J. Wild Flowers of Virginia and West Virginia. Mar.
Kramer, J. The Trellis Garden Book Apr.
Selsam, M. & J. Hunt. A First Look at Toads, Frogs and Salamanders. May.
Simon, S. Everything Moves. Mar.
Sommer, R. & H. Becker. Sidewalk Fossils. Feb.

Watts
Baumann, E. D. The Devil's Triangle. Jan.
Blumberg, R. Sharks. Mar.
Moscati, S. Archaeology. Jan.
Nourse, A. E. Lumps, Bumps, and Rashes. Apr.
Nourse, A. E. Viruses. Feb.
Rockwell, J. Dogs and Puppies. Feb.
Simon, S. Life on Ice. Mar.
Young, P. Drifting Continents, Shifting Seas. Feb.

Yale Univ. Pr.
Gibbs, S. L. Greek and Roman Sundials. Apr.
Haraway, D. J. Crystals, Fabrics, and Fields. Mar.
Kisch, B. Scales and Weights. Jun.
Palmer, R. S., ed. Handbook of North American Birds. Apr.
Simpson, G. G. Penguins. Jun.
Winsor, M. P. Starfish, Jellyfish, and the Order of Life. Jan.

SOCIAL SCIENCE

Abelard
Prodeau, J. A Little Bit of Nothing at All. May.

Arco
Barnewall, G. G. Your Future as a Job Applicant. Apr.
Biskind, E. L. Simplify Legal Writing. Jan.
Resume Service Resumes That Get Jobs. Apr.
Froe, O. D. & O. B. Froe. The Easy Way to Better Grades. Feb.
Morton, A. C. The Official 1976-77 Guide to Airline Careers. Mar.
Corwen, L. Job Hunter's Handbook. Mar.
Turner, D. R. Senior Typist. Jan.

Arlington House
Clutterbuck, R. Living with Terrorism. Feb.
McIlhany, W. H. The Aclu on Trial. May.

Atheneum
Ardrey, R. The Hunting Hypothesis. Mar.
von Hagen, V. W. The Royal Road of the Inca. May.

Bobbs
Sokol, R. P. Justice After Darwin. Apr.

Cornell Univ. Pr.
Corwin, E. S. Presidential Power and the Constitution. Jul.
Graglia, L. A. Disaster by Decree. Jul.
Hiltebeitel, A. The Ritual of Battle. Jun.
Myerhoff, B. G. Peyote Hunt. Mar.

Crowell
Gallagher, D. Hannah's Daughters Jul.
Nader, R. & M. Green, eds. Verdicts on Lawyers. Feb.
Messick, H. & B. Goldblatt. The Only Game in Town. Jun.
Rosenberg, S. When the Bough Breaks. Feb.
Walker, T. Fort Apache. May.
Wiesenfeld, C. & others. Women See Woman. Feb.

Crown
Cavallo, R. M. & S. Kahan. Photography—what's the Law? May.

Delacorte
Ghelardi, R. Economics, Culture, and Society. Aug.

Dial
Nadler, S. The Butterfly Convention. Mar.
Pekkanen, J. Victims. Apr.
Sherril, R. The Last Kennedy. Jun.

Dutton
Annas, G. J. The Rights of Hospital Patients. Mar.
Boggan, E. C. & others. The Rights of Gay People. Mar.
Dienstag, E. Whither Thou Goest Mar.
Gora, J. M. The Rights of Reporters. Mar.
Holt, J. Instead of Education. Apr.

Eriksson
Brandon, B., Jr. Luther's Got Class. Mar.

Evans
Nash, J. R. Bloodletters and Badmen. Mar.
Nash, J. R. Hustlers and Con Men. Mar.

Free Pr.
Bogart, L. Premises for Propaganda Feb.
Goldstein, J. & others. The My Lai Massacre and Its Cover-Up. Apr.
Kindred, M. & others. The Mentally Retarded Citizen and the Law. Feb.
Krauss, I. Stratification, Class and Conflict. Feb.
Loubser, J. J. & others. Explorations in General Theory in Social Science. 2 vols. Jul.
Meyer, C. H. Social Work Practice. 2d ed. Feb.
Roebuck, J. B. & W. Frese. The Rendezvous. Jan.
Roger, E. M. & R. Agarwala-Rogers. Communication in Organizations. Apr.
Turner, F. J. Differential Diagnosis and Treatment in Social Work. 2d ed. Mar.

Funk & Wagnalls
Samuel, D. T. Love, Liberation and Marriage. Jan.
Shain, H. Legal First Aid. Apr.

Greenwood
Fowles, J. Mass Advertising as Social Forecast.
Pescatello, A. M. Power and Pawn.
Ross, J. C. An Assembly of Good Fellows.
Varma, B. N., ed. The New Social Sciences.

HBJ
Howe, I. World of Our Fathers. Feb.
Reynolds, R. Beards. Apr.
Reynolds, R. Cleanliness and Godliness. Apr.

Lawrence Hill
Baskett, E. Entrapped. Apr.

Knopf
Dressler, D. Sociology. May.
Durden-Smith, J. Who Killed George Jackson. Jun.
Raphael, R. Edges. Apr.
Taylor, T. Courts of Terror. Jun.

Kodansha
Seidensticker, E. This Country Japan. May.
Yoshida, K. Japan Is a Circle. Mar.

Seymour Lawrence
Brogger, S. Deliver Us from Love. Jul.
Ginandes, S. Coming Home. Aug.
Harris, D. I Shoulda Been Home Yesterday. Aug.

Liveright
Wheeler, M. Lies, Damn Lies, and Statistics. Jun.

Luce
Whitaker, R. A Plague on Both Your Houses. May.

M.I.T. Pr.
Ashford, N. A. Crisis in the Workplace. Jan.
O'Toole, J., ed. Work and the Quality of Life. Mar.
Pollock, H. Jewish Folkways in Germanic Lands (1648-1806). Jan.
Susskind, L., ed. The Land Use Controversy in Massachusetts. Apr.

McGraw
Cartter, A. M. Ph.D.'s and the Academic Labor Market. Apr.
Ewen, S. Captains of Consciousness. Apr.
Freeman, R. Black Elite. Apr.
Green, M. Fathering. Mar
Lazarre, J. The Mother Knot. Mar.
McLeish, J. A. B. The Ulyssean Adult. Apr.
Ross, M. G. The University. May.
Wooden, K. Weeping in the Playtime of Others. Mar.
Zwerling, L. S. Second Best. Mar.

McKay
Abraham, J. H. Sociology. Apr.
Koestler, F. The Unseen Minority. Feb.
Roberts, J. I. Beyond Intellectual Sexism. Mar
Simon, J. F. The Judge. Apr.

Mason/Charter
DuBrin, A. J. Managerial Deviance. Apr.
Leek, S. & G. A. Hilken. Inside Bellevue. Jul.
Perelman, L. J. The Global Mind. Jun.

Morrow
Abrecht, M. E. The Making of a Woman Cop. Feb.
Chapman, C. America's Runaways. Feb.
Kahn, H. & others. The Next 200 Years. May.
Peter, L. J. The Peter Plan. Jan.
Radosh, R., ed. The New Cuba. Jan.
Worthy, W. The Rape of Our Neighborhoods. Jul.

Norton
Baskin, J. New Burlington. May.
Brown, S. A Man Named Tony. Jan.
Flynn, T. Tales for My Brothers' Keepers. May.
Komarovsky, M. Dilemmas of Masculinity. Jun.
Peirce, N. R. The New England States. Jun.
Peirce, N. R. & M. Barone. The Mid-Atlantic States. Aug

Sales, G. John Maher of Delancey Street. Mar.
Wollstonecraft, M. A Vindication of the Rights of Woman. Jun.

Ohio Univ. Pr.
Swan, E. D. The Kindergarten Crusade. Jun.

Pantheon
[illegible]

Penguin
Bacon, E. N. Design of Cities
Burchett, W. China
Handy, C. Understanding Organizations
Jones, G. S. Outcast London.
MacMisdhachian, A. Spanish Regional Cookery
Mackay, D. & J. Simo. Help Your Child to Read and Write, and More.
Malthus. An Essay on the Principle of Population.
Mayntz, R. & others. Introduction to Empirical Sociology.
Mercer, C. Living in Cities
Pahl, R. E. Whose City?

Prentice-Hall
Key, W. B. Media Sexploitation. May.
Yates, M. Coping. Jan.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Bozeman, A. Conflict in Africa. Jun.
Marsh, R. & Mannari, H. Modernization and the Japanese Factory. Apr.
Shively, D., ed. Tradition and Modernization in Japanese Culture. May.

Random
Friedan, B. It Changed My Life. Jun.
Friendly, F. The Good Guys, the Bad Guys and the First Amendment. May.
Hamilton, J. The Power to Probe. Mar.
Stern, G. The Buffalo Creek Disaster. May

San Francisco Bk. Co.
Adams, J. L. Conceptual Blockbusting. May.
Hampden-Turner, C. Sane Asylum. Mar.
Lunde, D. T. Murder and Madness Mar

Saturday Review Pr.
Astor, G. Hot Paper. Jan.

Scribners
Goldberg, L. Learning to Choose. Jul.
Hobsbaum, E. The Age of Capital. Mar.

S. & S.
Baehr, C. S. Nobody Knows But Me. Apr.
Boston Women's Health Book Collective. Our Bodies, Ourselves. 2d ed. Mar.
Colgrove, M. & others. How To Survive the Loss of a Love. Mar
Copp, D. Famous Soviet Spies. Feb.
Despert, J. L. The Inner Voices of Children. Mar.
Gordon, S. Lonely in America. Feb.
Lilly, J. & A. Lilly. The Dyadic Cyclone. Jun.
Seifer, N. Voices from Silence. Jun.
Simon, S. B. & S. W. Olds. Helping Your Child Learn Right From Wrong. Jun.

Stanford Univ. Pr.
Chao, Y. R. Aspects of Chinese Sociolinguistics. May.
Hafkin, N. J. & E. G. Bay, eds. Women in Africa. Jul.
Howe, M. Learning in Infants and Young Children. May.
Sears, R. R. & others. Patterns of Child Rearing. May Stein, R. A. Tibetan Civilization. Jan.

Stein & Day
Bocca, G. The Moscow Scene. Jun.
Brown, C. The Children of Ham. Mar
Freeman, L. Betrayal. May
Lee, P. G. Interpol. May
Neier, A. Crime and Punishment. May.
Pearce, W. W. & W. Hoffer. Caught in the Act. Apr.

Touchstone: S. & S.
Lifton, R. J. Death in Life. Apr.

Univ. of Illinois Pr.
Davis, K. C. Discretionary Justice in Europe and America. Apr.
Johnstone, J. W. C. & others. The News People. Jun.
Osgood, C. E. & others. Cross-Cultural Universals of Affective Meaning. Jan.
Risenhoover, M. & R. T. Blackburn. Artists as Professors. Mar.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr.
Boyle, K. & others. Law and State. Jan.

Viking
Baldrige, L. Juggling.
Daikman, A. Personal Freedom.
Deak, G. G. American Views
Villiers, D., ed. Next Year in Jerusalem.

Walker
Berger, A. The TV-Guided American. Feb.
Cheney, M. The Co-Ed Killer. Mar.

Watts
Blumberg, R. Fire Fighters. Apr.
Ewen, R. B. Choosing the College for You. Feb.
Fenten, D. X. TV and Radio Careers. Apr.
Hahn, J. & L. Hahn. Environmental Careers. Apr.
Liston, R. A. Patients or Prisoners? Feb.
Peck, R. H. Travel Careers. Mar.
Sheppard, S. Indians of the Plains. Mar.
Williams, G., III. Writing Careers. Mar.

Yale Univ. Pr.
Eckhardt, B. & C. L. Black Jr. The Tides of Power. May.

SPORTS & RECREATION

Arco
Bernstein, A. Beating the Harness Races. Jun.
Charles, A. How To Win at Ladies' Doubles. Mar.
Daglish, E. F. Care and Training of Your Puppy. Mar.
Fredericson, I. Horses and Jumping. Feb.
Harmar, H. Doberman Pinschers. Mar.
Harmar, H. Showing and Judging Dogs. Feb.
Hasenau, J. J. Gerbils. Mar.
Holmes, J. The Family Dog. 7th ed. Mar.
The Illustrated Glossary of Horse Equipment. Jun.
Kelley, J. F. Dealing with Horses. Apr.
Larkin, H. J. Bonsai for Beginners. Apr.
Manners, D. Teach Your Child Self-Defense. Jun.
Markley, A. M. The Yorkshire Terrier. Mar.
Merrill, B. Vacationing with Saddle and Packhorse. Jun.
Migliorini, M. Cocker Spaniels. Mar.
Migliorini, M. Dachshunds. Mar.
Migliorini, M. German Shepherds Mar.
Migliorini, M. Labrador Retrievers. Mar.
Migliorini, M. Miniature Schnauzers Mar.
Moseman's Illustrated Guide for Purchasers of Horse Furnishing Goods. Jun.
Schwarz, T. Coins as Living History. May.
Simmons, S., ed. The Sporting Horse. Apr.
Tang, P. P. The New Manual of Kung Fu. Feb.
Trexler, P. Knit and Crochet Ideas. Jan.
Von Hobbs, H. Irish Setter -Reflections. Mar.
Wayt, D. H. & J. M. Lee. Hapkido. Jun
Whyte, N., ed. Motorcycle Racing Champions. Jan.

Atheneum
Ashe, A. & others. Mastering Your Tennis Strokes. Jun.
Counsilman, J. Swimming. Jun.
Delano, H. Eddie. Apr.
Kowet, D. Pele. Apr.
Lehrman, S. Your Career in Harness Racing. Apr.
Morley, D. C. Golf and the Mind. Jun.
Toski, B. Play Like the Pros. Jun.
Trevino, L. How To Groove a Better Golf Swing. Jun
Woolf, B. Behind Closed Doors. May

Autumn Pr.
Satyavan. The Gayatri Mantra. Feb.

Bobbs
Evans, H. Ribbonwork. Apr.
Farlie, B. L. & C. C. Sloan. Your House in Needlepoint. May.
Houston, J. Batik. Mar.
O'Neill, J. L. Flower Arranging without Flowers. Apr
Snow, J. M. A Family Harvest. Apr
Torbet, L. The T-Shirt Book. Apr.

Butterick
Cordello, B. S. Needlework Classics. Feb.
Fanning, R. Decorative Machine Stitchery. Apr.
Roufberg, R. B. The Kitchen Crafts Workshop. Apr.
Scharf, B. Illustrated Patchwork Crochet. Apr.

Coward
Seranne, A. All About Small Dogs in the Big City. Nov.

Crowell
Gehrig, E. & J. Durso. My Luke and I. Apr.
Spitz, M. & A. LeMond. The Mark Spitz Complete Book of Swimming. Jul

Crown
Appel, E. Sand Art. Apr.
Brooks, C. Nymph Fishing for Lager Trout. Jun.
Clark, L. & H. T. Glenn. Glenn's Honda 4-Cylinder Repair and Tune-Up Guide. Apr.
Davies, R. C. Garden Wizardry. Apr.
Elbert, V. F. & G. A. Elbert. Miracle Houseplants. Jun.
Fraser, B. K. Modern Stitchery. Feb.
Jones, K. & P. Welton. Soccer Skills & Tactics. Apr.
Kreischer, L. String Art Pattern Book I. Mar.
Marinaro, V. In the Ring of the Rise. Jul.
Meilach, M. & D. Z. Meilach. Creating Small Wood Objects as Functional Sculpture. Apr.
Mon Tricot Magazine. Knit and Crochet. Feb.
Newman, T. J. & L. Newman. Lamp and Lighting Book. May.
Pakula, M. B. New Ideas for Needlepointers. Apr.
Perkes, D. New Giant Crossword Puzzle Book. Feb.
Roth, C. D. Dressing Dolls. Jun.
Sommer, E. & M. Sommer. Wearable Crafts. May.

Delacorte
Flying Magazine Eds. I Learned About Flying from That. Jun
Russell, W. S. Karate. Jun
Rust, A., Jr. "Get That Nigger Off the Field!" Apr.

Dial
Cohen, R. M. & others. The World Series. Apr.
Gonzalez, P. Tennis Begins at Forty. May.
Jarnow, J. Redo It Yourself. Jun.
Parker, X. L. Creative Handweaving. Apr.
Tyler, M. The Big Book of Dolls. Apr.

Dodd
Barnard, C. N. I Drank the Water Everywhere. Feb.
Benagh, J. Making It to #1. Mar.
Bennett, M. Biking for Grownups. Mar.
Burgess, R. F. The Cave Divers. Feb.
Chalk, O. Black College Sport. Feb.
Fischler, S. Those Were the Days. Jan.
Fisher, B. Crewing Racing Dinghies and Keelboats. Jun.
Hart, J. C. & W. T. Stone. A Cruising Guide to the Caribbean and the Bahamas. Mar.
Libby, B. Champions of the Indianapolis 500. Apr.
Moss, S. How To Watch Motor Racing. Jan.
Rousmaniere, J. A. Glossary of Modern Sailing Terms. Jan.
Smaridge, N. Choosing Your Retirement Hobby. Jan.
Van Valkenburgh, P. Race Car Engineering and Mechanics. Feb.
White, R. The Complete Manual of Catamaran Racing. Apr.
Whiting, R. The Chrysanthemum and the Bat. Apr.

Dutton
Fantel, H. Durable Pleasures. Mar.
Marsh, I. T. & E. Ehre, eds. Best Sports Stories –1976. Jul.
Sparks, J. C., Jr. Mini and Trail Bikes. Apr.
Unkelbach, K. American Dog Book. May.
Weiss, J. Advanced Bass Fishing. Jul.
Wisner, B. The Complete Guide to Salt and Fresh Water Fishing Equipment. Mar.

Eriksson
Engh, R. A Very Simple Garden Book. Apr.

Fell
Andrews, C. J. Fell's International Coin Book. 6th rev. ed. Feb.
Byrne, B. Fell's Beginner's Guide to Flower Arrangement. Jun.
Gibson, W. B. Fell's Beginner's Guide to Magic. Jun.
Gibson, W. B. 101 Ways to Play Winning Solitaire. Mar.
Hessayon, D. G. Be Your Own House Plant Expert. Mar.
Kaysing, B. Fell's Beginner's Guide to Motorcycling. May.
Landesman, B. & K. Berman. How To Train Your Dog in Six Weeks. Mar.
Lee, C. The Complete Book of Tropical Fish. Apr.

Fireside: S. & S.
Nicklaus, J. & K. Bowden. Golf My Way. Mar.
Silverstein, S. Now Here's My Plan. Mar.

Funk & Wagnalls
Blandford, P. W. Country Craft Tools. Jun.
Lawless, D. Rug Hooking and Braiding for Pleasure and Profit. Jan.
La Barge, L. Basketmaking from the Beginning. Jun.
McMahon, B. McMahon's American Gardener. Feb.
Zielinski, S. A. Encyclopedia of Handweaving. May.

HBJ
Wallach, C. Gardening in the City. Jun.

Harmony: Crown
Scrabble Crossword Players, Inc. Official Scrabble Players Handbook. Mar.

Knopf
Bergman, R. Trout. Apr.

Lippincott
Livingston, A. D. Fly-Rodding for Bass. Jul.
McFarland, W. J. & P. Smith. Sports Illustrated Handball. Jun.
Stewart, P. Sports Illustrated Judo. Mar.
Wilkinson, B. Sports Illustrated Football. Mar.

Liveright
Forbis, J. The Classic Arabian Horse. Apr.

McGraw
Browne, D. The Renovation Book. Mar.
Calder, A. The Toymaker. Apr
Dal Fabbro, M. How To Build Modern Furniture. 3d ed. Mar.
Milberg, A. Street Games. Apr.
Ross, S. First Aid for House Plants. May.
Segura, P. Pancho Segura's Championship Strategy. Jun.

McKay
Abrahams, G. Chess Mind, Teach Yourself. Apr
Abrahams, G. Chess, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Biggs, D. Survival Afloat. Apr.
Bradford, E. Antique Furniture, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Brady, M. The Monopoly Book. Mar.
Brundle, F. Badminton, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Cohen, B. & E. Roberts. Growing Orchids in the Home, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Cotter, E. P. C. Contract Bridge, Teach Yourself. Apr
Creek, F. N. S. Cricket, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Creek, F. N. S. Soccer, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Creek, F. N. S. & D. Rutherford. Rugby, Teach Yourself. Apr.
deBeaumont, C. L. Fencing, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Fabricand, B. Horse Sense. Apr.
Fillingham, P. The Balloon Book. Jun
Fine, R. World's Great Chess Games Feb.
Hervey, G. F. Card Games for One, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Highenbottam, F. Codes and Ciphers, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Hockey Assn. Field Hockey, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Hope, C. E. G. Horse Management, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Horner, I. Dressmaking, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Jessup, F. C. & M. Wilson. Golf, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Jones, D. M. C. Indoor Plants, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Jones, V. Creative Writing, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Keene, R., ed. Learn from the Grandmasters. Feb.
Knight, S. A. Drawing and Painting, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Konstam, K. Card Games for Two, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Latimer-Sayer, D. & J. Hems. Indoor Aquaria, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Lindsay, M. Lure of Antique Arms. Jan.
Lumley, P. Backpacking, Teach Yourself. Apr.
McDonald, E. Elvin McDonald's Book of Small Scale Gardens. Jun
Melville, F. J. Stamp Collecting, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Palmer, C. Compose Music, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Richardson, M. E. Archery, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Roberts, E. Flower Arrangement, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Roberts, E. More Flower Arrangement, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Robins, A, Crosswords, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Rosner, B. & J. Beckerman. Inside the World of Miniatures and Dollhouses. May.
Rudder Eds. Good Sailing. Apr.
Samson, J. Falconry Today. Mar.
Shaw, R. C. Cycling, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Smith, R. Drawing, Teach Yourself. Apr.
Wagenhiem, K. Paper Gold. Feb.
Wheeler, J. The Adventurer's Guide. Jul.
Wiggin, M. Fly Fishing, Teach Yourself. Apr.

Macmillan
A Baseball Century. Apr.
The Baseball Encyclopedia. May.
Cone, A. L., Jr. Fishing Made Easy. Apr.
Davis, N. M. The Complete Book of United States Coin Collecting. rev. ed. May.
The Gardener's Diary. Apr.
Herwig, R. 128 Garden Plants You Can Grow. Jun.
Killanin, L. & J. Rodda, eds. The Olympic Games. Jan
Lewis, A. A. Everybody's Weaving Book. May.
Strung, N. & others. Whitewater! May.
Tutko, T. & W. Bruns. Winning Is Everything and Other American Myths Jun
Voykin, P. N. Ask the Lawn Expert. Apr.
Wallach, C. Interior Decorating with Plants. Jun.
Wyman, D. Ground Cover Plants. Apr.

Mason/Charter
Hinch, D. The Scrabble Book. May.
McDonald, E. How To Grow House Plants from Seeds. Jun.
Schwob, P. & G. Kane. The Chess Tutor. May.

Morrow
Bacon, L. I. American Patchwork Quilts. Apr.
Hood, R. E. The Gashouse Gang. Apr.
Leigh, N. Thirteen Against the Bank. Mar.
Sargent, L. Tincraft for Christmas. Apr.
Vignes, J. The Rage to Survive. Feb.

Norton
Lane, C. D. The Boatman's Manual. Mar.
Lederer, W. J. & J. P. Wilson. Complete Cross-Country Skiing and Ski Touring. Jan.
Ogilvy, C. S. Win More Sailboat Races. Mar.
Rogoff, M. Calculator Navigation. Jun.
Sleightholme, J. D. This Is Basic Sailboat Cruising. Mar.
Smith, R., ed. Press Box. Mar.
Walker, S. H. Advanced Racing Tactics. Mar.

Pantheon
The World's Most Difficult Crossword Puzzles. Apr.

Penguin
Brown, J. The Hard Years.
Kranz, F. H. & J. Kranz. Gardening Indoors. Under Lights.
Marien, S. Stitchery, Needlepoint, Applique, and Patchwork.
Moffat, G. Space Below My Feet.
Pelham, D. Penguin Book of Kites.
Whillans, D. & A. Omerod. Portrait of a Mountaineer.

Prentice-Hall
Abraham, G. & K. Abraham. The New Green Thumb Garden Handbook. Jul.
Dawkins, G. Keys to the Golf Swing Mar.
Hertzel, B. The Big Red Machine, Apr.
Hill, D. & N. Seitz. Roughneck of the Fairways. Jul.
Parent, B. Bernie! Jan.
Reichler, J., ed. The Game and the Glory. May.
Zadig, E. The Complete Book of Boating. 2d ed. Apr.

Random
Crain, J. & T. Milne. Camping Around the Appalachian Mountains. Feb.
Gleason, D. The Great, The Grand and the Also Ran. Apr.
Holiday Magazine. Holiday Travel Guides. Mar.
Mandell, A. J. The Nightmare Season. Apr.
Michener, J. A. Sports in America. May.
Pliner, R. The Lazy Outdoor Gardener. Apr.

San Francisco Bk. Co.
The Garden Club. Jun.

Scribners
Berloquin, P. 100 Geometric Games. Jun.
Copper, M. S. The Horseman's Etiquette Book. May.
Dunn, W. J. Enjoy Europe by Car. May.
Family Handyman Magazine, Eds. The Furniture Maker's Handbook. Aug.
Flying Magazine, Eds. Sheer Fun. May.
Gilby, M. Free Weaving. May.
Goodman, F. S. The Embroidery of Mexico and Guatemala. Aug.
Graf, A. B. Exotic House Plants. 10th ed. May.
Graf, A. B. Exotic Plant Manual. 4th ed. May Graf, A. B. Exotica III. 8th ed. May.
Gross, H. Simplified Bookbinding. Jul.
Hanley, H. Hope Hanley's Patterns for Needlepoint. Mar
Hobbs, H. J. Veneer Craft for Everyone. Jun.
Hobbs, H. J. Veneering Simplified. Apr.
Jargocki, C. P. Science Brain Twisters, Paradoxes and Fallacies. Mar.
Micholls, E. Tatting Techniques. Aug.
Von Mueller, K. The Treasure Hunter's Manual. Mar.
Walker, B. G. Mosaic Knitting. Mar.

S. & S.
The Best of Woman's Day Crochet. Jun
Consumer Guide Eds. The Joy of Making Your Own. Apr
Exxon Travel Club's 1976 Vacation Travel Guides. Feb
Farrar, M., ed. Crosswords from the Times #30. Mar.
Farrar, M., ed. The Crossword Puzzle Book, Series 3. Jun.
Fawcett Pubs. The Woman's Day Book of Knitted Sweaters. May.
Frommer-Pasmantier. Dollarwise Guide to Germany, Japan, and Hong Kong. May.
Frommer-Pasmantier. India on $10 a Day. Jun.
Frommer-Pasmantier. New Zealand and Australia on $10 a Day. Apr.
Frommer-Pasmantier Travel Guides Feb.
Frommer-Pasmantier Travel Guides. Mar.
Frommer-Pasmantier. Where to Stay in the U.S.A. Mar.
Frommer Pasmantier. The Whole World Handbook. Feb.
Hersey, J. The Woman's Day Book of Wildflowers. May.
Hundt, S. W. Invitation to Riding. Jul
Lee, S. Mighty Marvel Strength and Fitness Book. May.
Lee, S. The Mighty Marvel Superheroes Fun Book. May.
McCalls' Book of Afghans. Jun.
The McCall's Book of America's Favorite Needlework and Crafts. Jun.
McCall's Book of Rugmaking. May
Maleska, E. T. The Crossword Book of Quotations #5. Feb.
Middleton, T. H., ed. Simon and Schuster's Crostics. Series 75. Apr.
Mitchell, C. The Perfect Exercise. Mar.
Nelson, B. Shape Your Swing the Modern Way. Apr.
Perry, F., ed. Simon & Schuster's Complete Guide to Plants and Flowers. Feb.
Petzal, D. E., ed. The Experts' Book of Big-Game Hunting in North America. Jul.
Woodall's Mobile Homes, Parks and Retirement Communities 1976 Apr.
Yolen, W. The Complete Book of Kites and Kite Flying. Mar.

Stein & Day
Dwek, J. Backgammon for Profit. Mar.
Heath, E. Sailing. Apr.
Schindler, G. Magic with Everyday Objects. Apr.

Taplinger
Bradshaw-Smith, G. Adventures in Toy-Making. Jun.
Gratus, J. The False Messiahs. Feb.
McNeill, M. Pulled Thread Embroidery. Feb.
Morris, B. & E. Morris. Making Clothes in Leather. Feb.
Morton, B. Cuddly Dolls & How To Dress Them. Aug.
Turner, S. Screen Printing Techniques. Feb.

Tarcher
Lewis, S. & A. B. Hurwitz. Magic for Non-Magicians. Oct.

Transatlantic
Alexander, G. Fabric Printing and Dyeing at Home. Feb.
Coppen-Gardner, S. A Background for Glass Collectors. May.
Crompton, P. H. Kung Fu Theory and Practice. Apr.
Hite, K. & J. Joshua. Practical Guide to Dogs. Apr.
Hutchinson, D. Sea Canoeing. Apr.
Ireson, B. Cottage Crafts. Apr.
Jarman, C. Coastal Cruising. Mar.
Jones, C. M. & A. Buxton. Starting Tennis. Apr.
Kent, H. My Fun with Yoga. Mar.
Klindt-Jensen, O. A History of Scandinavian Archaeology. Apr.
Lellak, J. Shells of Britain and Europe. Mar.
Macself, A. J. The Amateur's Greenhouse. rev. ed. Mar.
Matthews, L. G. The Antiques of Perfume. Jan.
Mauger, I. & P. Oakes. Ivan Mauger's Speedway Spectacular. Feb.
Mills, B. Made in Suede. Feb.
Mudie, C. Power Boats. Mar.
Muirden, J. Beginner's Guide to Astronomical Telescope Making. Apr.
Petrova, E. Flowering Bulbs. Apr.
Prucha, A. J. Flowers from Seed. May.
Rackham, G. Diving Complete. May.
Raleigh, I. & others. Practical Guide to Cats. May.
Seale, J. N. Car Service Data. Apr.
Warren, N. Small Motor Cruisers. Apr.
Wells, S. Mend Your Own China and Glass. Feb.
Weston, E. B. Questions and Answers on Automotive Transmissions Systems. Mar.
Woodland, L. Cycle Racing. Mar.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr.
Werlich, R. United States, Canadian, and Confederate Paper Money. Dec.

Viking
Bishop, A. & C. Lord. The Art of Decorative Stenciling.
Dolensek, E. & B. Burn. A Practical Guide to Impractical Pets.
Finley, M. I. The Olympic Games.
Ford, W. & M. Mantee. Whitey and Mickey.
Lantz, S. Trianglepoint.

Walker
Dobrin, A. Irish. Apr.
Gault, F. & C. Gault. Stories from the Olympics. Jun.
Smith, A. Celebrity Exercise. Feb

Watts
Devereux, F., Jr. Horseback Riding. Apr.
Gibbons, G. Things To Make and Do for Halloween. Apr.
Honig, D. Going the Distance. Mar.
Honig, D. Running Harder. Mar.
Luray, M. Ski Racer. Mar.
Olney, R. R. Gymnastics. Mar.
Platt, C. Outdoor Survival. Apr.

Winchester
Acerrano, A. J. The Outdoorsman's Emergency Manual. Jun.
Falk, J. R. The Complete Guide to Bird Dog Training. Jul.
Jorgensen, P. Modern Fly Dressings for the Practical Angler. May.
Liu, A. J. The American Sporting Collector's Handbook. Jun.
Sandreuter, W. O. Whitewater Canoeing. Mar
Sparano, V. T., ed. The American Fisherman's Fresh and Salt Water Guide. Mar.
Tinsley, R., ed. All About Small Game Hunting in America. Apr
Warner, K. Knives. Jul.
Wilson, L. D. The Handy Sportsman. Mar.
Woods, S. E., Jr. Gunning for Upland Birds. Mar.

VOLUME TEN

JUST PUBLISHED

BOOKMAN'S PRICE INDEX

SERIES TOTAL NOW NEARLY 420,000 ENTRIES

The Bookman's Price Index series furnishes an accurate guide to prices quoted by over 60 representative dealers in the U.S., England, and elsewhere. Based on the catalogs of rare book sellers, specialist dealers, and O.P. bookmen, entries in BPI give author, title, place and date of publication, pagination or collation, condition, dealer's name, catalog number, item number, year the catalog was issued, and price.

THE BPI SERIES IS THE STANDARD PRICE GUIDE:

"The value of Bookman's Price Index as a basic price guide increases with each succeeding volume . . . BPI is the most up-to-date and most comprehensive reference book of its kind . . ."—Papers of the Bibliographical Society of America, Vol. 68, No. 2, 1974

"This is still the most comprehensive, clearest general price guide of its kind!"—AB Bookman's Yearbook, 1972

". . . a standard work for all college and university reference libraries."—American Book Collector, March-April 1971

"In the simplicity of its organization, the clarity of its presentation, and its focus on the out-of-print dealers' market rather than the more limited auction world, it makes a valuable contribution and is recommended to all libraries regularly purchasing scholarly out-of-print books."—The Booklist, May, 15, 1966

"Because the series is very useful for larger libraries, we certainly recommend standing orders for Bookman's Price Index." — American Reference Books Annual, 1974

". . . recommended for purchase."—Choice, December 1972

"Yes, a complete set is indeed invaluable to any bookman."—AB Bookman's Weekly, Sept. 23-30, 1974

BOOKMAN'S PRICE INDEX SERIES . . . $58.00/volume. Volumes 1-10 are in print and available on 30-day approval. (Volume 11 is in preparation.) A standing order will assure automatic delivery of future volumes.

GALE RESEARCH COMPANY

BOOK TOWER • DETROIT, MICHIGAN 48226

LJ
BOOK REVIEW

The Contemporary Scene

Benagh, Jim. Making It To #1: how college football and basketball teams get there.

Dodd. 1976. 270p. $10. SPORTS

Recruiting is the game—the ruthless, often unscrupulous, pursuit of promising high school athletes by college coaches and athletic departments, who are under equally fierce pressure from administrations, alumni, the press, and politicians to keep winning at all costs. Benagh follows up earlier exposés, Gary Shaw's Meat on the Hoof (LJ 12/15/72) and Robert Vare's Buckeye (LJ 12/1/74), by revealing the methods and attitudes of small and large athletic powers. Illustrative case histories are disillusioning and sometimes poignant in terms of exploited young men who frequently fail to graduate, become educated, or even play. Somewhat surprisingly, Benagh winds up with advice to the athletes on how to beat the game. Recommended.—Morey Berger, Monmouth County Lib., Freehold, N.J.

Gilmour, Robert S. & Robert B. Lamb. Political Alienation in Contemporary America.

St. Martin's. 1975. 198p. index. LC 74-81263. $6.95. SOC SCI POL SCI

A brief statistical portrait concerning the wave of political alienation that has been engulfing us since the mid-1960's. Presenting simplified data from the Institute for Social Research at the University of Michigan, the authors illustrate tendencies of differing social groups with case histories drawn from interviews. They find that to an increasing extent, Americans are viewing the entire political system as something they cannot influence—a system which consistently works against them; and that system is losing all semblance of legitimacy. In documenting the increasing extent of estrangement, the authors highlight the potential dangers to a democratic form of government. A good basic treatment for popular audiences.—Ken Nash, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Harmer, Ruth Mulvey. American Medical Avarice.

Abelard. 1975. 352p. LC 74-9370. ISBN 0-200-04025-1. $8.95. MED

This excellent analysis of the medical care system in this country is important reading for everyone. Harmer, an English professor who has written other works criticizing established institutions and practices, has done an outstanding job of pointing out the discrepancies and shortcomings of health care, buttressing her arguments with facts and figures and delivering her thoughts in an organized and easy-to-read fashion. Harmer points to physicians' fight to maintain a monopoly over the dispensing of health care, to their inordinate concern for profits, to the actions of the AMA in defeating national health insurance and other such federal programs, and to the improper alliance between physicians and the drug industry. Group practice health maintenance organizations are suggested as one answer to the problem. There have only been a few books that dare to address this issue, and Harmer's account is one of the best so far.—Beatrice J. Kalisch, Dept. of Parent-Child Health, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor

CONTENTS

The Contemporary Scene 515
Reference 516
Art 519
Biography 522
Business & Economics 524
Communications 525
Education 525
History 525
Home Economics 528
Literature 529
Music 531
Philosophy 531
Poetry 533
Political Science & International Affairs 534
Psychology & Psychiatry 535
Religion 537
Science & Technology 538
Social Science 541
Sports & Recreation 543
Theater 545
Fiction 546
Mystery, Detective & Suspense . 548
Book Review & Professional Reading Author Index 550

Library Journal reviews are indexed in Book Review Index and in Book Review Digest.

Ognibene, Peter J. Scoop: the life and politics of Senator Henry M. Jackson.

Stein & Day. 1975. 229p. index. LC 75-28238. ISBN 0-8128-1884-9. $8.95. BIOG/POL SCI

Admitting at the outset that he is writing as an adversary, Ognibene has produced a highly critical and often unfair work. In some instances, his criticisms are factually based, as in discussing Jackson's dislike of opposing views or his contempt for the McGovern candidacy. In other instances, for example, his discussion on Jackson's relationship with an invalid older brother, Ognibene's implications, whether true or not, are irrelevant and even cruel. And in at least one instance, involving a 1944 Jackson statement on Palestine, the author twists the definition of a phrase to cast doubt on the Senator's past and present sincerity regarding Jews and Israel, though he admitted earlier that Jackson's feelings were sincere and of long standing. There are some areas in which Ognibene provides valuable data and research—e.g., with regard to Jackson's shepherding of the National Environmental Policy Act—and there are instances in which Ognibene grudgingly gives Jackson his due—he recognizes, for example, his loyalty to staff and constituents and his political skill and timing. But overall, Ognibene's work is so colored by personal feeling that readers should await a more objective analysis.—Richard Rosichan, Dade County Schs., Miami, Fla.

van den Haag, Ernest. Punishing Criminals: concerning a very old and painful question.

Basic Bks. 1975. 283p. index. LC 75-3758. ISBN 0-465-06774-3. $11.50. CRIMINOLOGY

Our criminal justice system has failed because it has attempted to do both too much and too little: too much in that it

"Much tried-and-true advice"*

All about SMALL DOGS in the BIG CITY by Ann Seranne

"If you live in the 'big city,' Ms. Seranne is adamant about it; have a little dog; and her book is written in the hope of training not the dog but the owner. She explores what will be the right breed for the individual, steering clear of pet shops, how to determine what sex dog will fit in best with the owner's lifestyle, etc. There's also a good description of most of the small-breed dogs and their characteristics." — Publishers Weekly. "Ms. Seranne's strengths come from her humane, gentle approach to dog care." — Kirkus Reviews.* Photos., bibliog., index.
256 pp. $8.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC. C,M & G
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

FREE BUYING GUIDE FOR LIBRARY ADHESIVES

10 tapes and 4 glues especially for libraries! Order from Section A of our '75-6 catalog, send in the coupon below or call Customer Service.

Josten's LIBRARY SERVICES DIVISION
1301 Cliff Road, Burnsville MN 55337
800-328-2980 TOLL FREE

☐ Please send me your buying guide for glues and tapes

☐ Check here if you do not have our '75-6 Library Supplies Catalog and we will send you one

Name _____

Library _____

Address _____

City _____

State _____ Zip _____

cannot forcibly "rehabilitate" offenders under threat; too little because its punishment structure and practices do not effectively incapacitate the recidivist. Van den Haag brilliantly states (or restates) the "conservative" position on punishment and calmly argues for revival of such socially discredited practices as exile, banishment, and fines for severe crimes. While he concedes some validity to the critique of radical criminologists (he maintains, "Retributive justice cannot ultimately be just unless distributive justice is. For retributive justice necessarily defends and sanctions the distributive order in its major political and economic aspects. . . . Marxists have been quite correct in pointing this out"), he contends that all political arrangements will be unjust to some—even many—persons. Whether replacement of inadequate liberal shibboleths and practices by conservative ones will reduce our appalling crime rate is dubious, but Van den Haag at least cogently raises some critical—and one suspects, inchoate—public policy issues.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

REFERENCE

African Books in Print: an index by author, title and subject. Pt. 1: 1975: English language and African languages. ed. by Hans M. Zell.

Internat. Scholarly Bk. Servs. 1975. 441p. LC 74-9951 $37.50 BIBLIOG

A dependable guide to books published in Africa is much needed and the present book is a worthwhile contribution to that end. It is divided into author, title, and subject indexes and includes over 6000 works in English and vernacular languages. Prices, bibliographical data, and a list of publishers are included, making it relatively easy to use. An edition covering works in French is promised and the series will then alternate. Gathering the data was a lengthy process resulting in serious problems of currency. Some information dates from 1972 and none from later than early 1974, so the work must be used with caution. Withal, it will be a valuable tool both to librarians and to Africanists for whom no comparable tool is available.—David Henige, Univ. of Wisconsin Lib., Madison de Holanda Ferreira, Aurelio Buarque, comp. Novo Dicionario da Lingua Portuguesa.

Rizzoli Internat. Pubs., 712 Fifth Ave., N.Y.C. 10019. 1975. 1517p. $38.50. LANG/REF

This newest of several desk-format Portuguese dictionaries is clearly the work of choice for North American collections that have need for a monolingual dictionary of Portuguese in the first place (for example, the libraries of universities where Portuguese is taught). Everyday, traditional, and regional vocabulary is covered under some 140,000 entries, complete with excellent etymologies. Brazilian usage, insofar as it differs from that of Portugal, takes precedence. The printing and layout are also of high quality. For one shortcoming the compiler cannot be blamed—namely, the meticulous exclusion of proper nouns: it is simply one of the rules of Portuguese lexicography (in Brazil, at least, enshrined in law) that for onomastic materials one must resort to special separately published works.—B. Hunter Smeaton, Dept. of Linguistics, Univ. of Calgary, Alberta, Canada

Edgar, Neal L. A History and Bibliography of American Magazines, 1810-1820.

Scarecrow. 1975. 379p. index. LC 75-11882. ISBN 0-8108-0821-8. $15. BIBLIOG

The bibliographical part of this work (about four-fifths of the book) does appear to cover all the periodicals that either began or ceased during the decade in question; it also provides full bibliographic information and informative annotations for each item. The alphabetical arrangement is supplemented by a chronological listing, and a "Register of Printers" is also included. But why some magazines are "excluded" and then included in an appendix is rather a mystery. Even more mystifying are the reasons Edgar gives for the necessity of publishing a bibliography covering these particular ten years. His explanations are confused, strained, and unconvincing. If the bibliography were to form a part of a series of ten-year bibliographies or if it did fill a gap, as the compiler claims, this would be a worthwhile effort. As it is, it just appears to be superfluous. And as for the history, it is egregiously written, and the less said about it the better. If history is wanted, use Frank Luther Mott's five-volume A History of American Magazines (LJ 2/1/69).—Timothy Schobert, Univ. of Ottawa Lib., Ontario, Canada

Ein, Marion & Alice Shabecoff. The Whole Washington Handbook: where to go and what to know in the metropolitan area.

Luce, dist. by McKay. 1975. 349p. index. LC 75-11371. ISBN 0-88331-077-5. $4.50. REF

The Whole Washington Handbook is a consumer's guide to the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area. It offers an easy-to-use directory of service organizations dealing with child care, the elderly, employment, health, housing, legal matters, taxes, transportation, etc. The subject and organization indexes enhance the book's usefulness. The authors, a former director of the District's City Hall Complaint Office and a former director of the National Consumers League, have successfully threaded the maze of federal, municipal, and private agencies that provide consumer information and assistance. Their book should become an essential reference tool for public libraries in the District of Columbia and in surrounding areas of Maryland and Virginia.—Katharine M. Ratzenberger, Smithsonian Inst. Libs.

Foster, David William. The 20th Century Spanish-American Novel: a bibliographic guide.

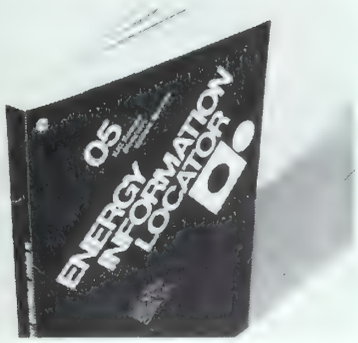
Scarecrow. 1975. 227p. index. LC 75-25787. ISBN 0-8108-0871-4. $8.50. LIT/BIBLIOG

Presented as a "working bibliography," this volume strives to serve both the specialized researcher and the curious undergraduate. Foster successfully joins the two extremes in selective lists that cover 56 novelists, basic monographic studies

THE MOST COMPLETE FAMILY OF ENERGY REFERENCE TOOLS...

Energy Information Tools:



Energy Information Locator describes the systems of 220 organizations; also 71 abstracting and indexing services, 122 directories, 76 newsletters, 20 legal binder services, and 200-plus journals; indexed 192 pages; $27.50 by itself; free as part of the Energy Directory described below.

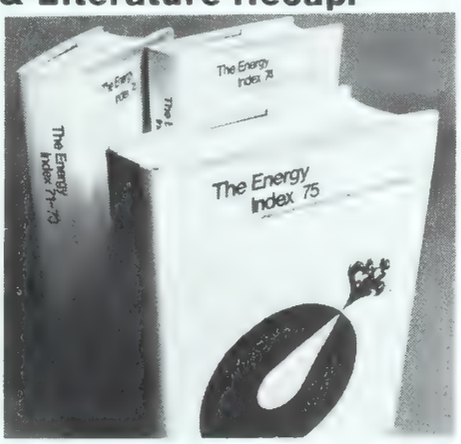
Energy Organizations:

The Energy Directory Update covers five major types of energy organizations: federal government, state and regional government, trade and professional organizations, energy industry, and energy information systems; individual chapters are published bi-monthly; includes annual index; app. 600 pages; $85.00 per year.

Energy Documents & Journal Articles:

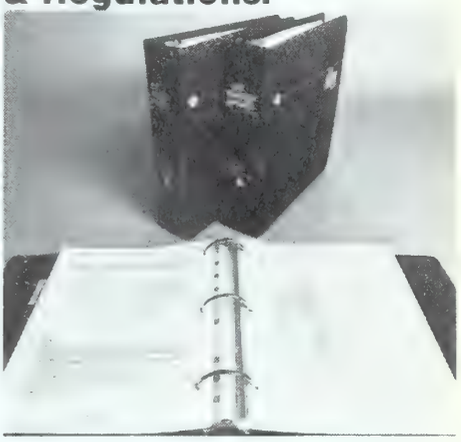
Energy Information Abstracts specializing in socio-economic impact, new energy sources and planning, covers the non-serial reports of 2000 organizations, plus several thousand core journals, published bi-monthly; includes annual index; $175.00 per year.

Energy Yearbook & Literature Recap:



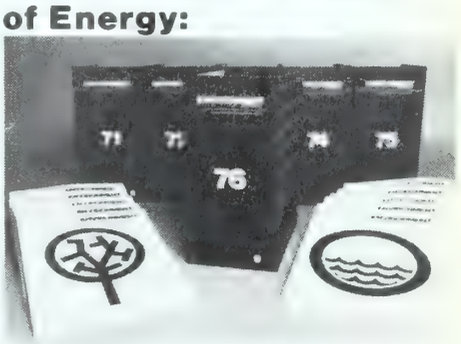
The Energy Index covers trends, statistics, legislation, new books, films, and 2,000 of the year's top reports and articles; 600 pages; $60.00.

Energy Laws & Regulations:



Energy Regulation Update provides you a 600 page back-file of major U.S. energy laws and regulations, plus monthly updates of new key materials; indexed; updates; $75.00.

Environmental Impact of Energy:



Environment Abstracts covers 21 pollution and resource areas, monitoring the documents of the world's leading environmental organizations and 3,400 journals; published monthly; app. 1,200 pages; $200.00 per year. Annual cumulative index (and environment yearbook) is The Environment Index; 800 pages; $75.00.

...ANYWHERE.

Order now on 10-day approval, or request more information from:

EIC
Environment Information Center, Inc.
Reference Books Division
124 East 39th St.
New York, N.Y. 10016

of the Spanish-American novel, period- [illegible] indexes, and bibliographies. The compilation presents reliable information, a practical format, and a selection [illegible] of sources—all features that recommend the book as uncommonly useful.—Dru Dougherty, Dept. of Spanish & Portuguese, Univ. of California, Berkeley

Glassman, Judith. National Guide to Craft Supplies.

Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1975. 224p. index. LC 75-7143. ISBN 0-442-22704-3. $12.95; pap. ISBN 0-[illegible]. CRAFTS/REF

Described as a "yellow pages" directory of craft suppliers, this guide lists more than 600 suppliers as well as bookstores, societies, museums, schools, fairs, and books and periodicals. The suppliers lists are classified broadly by type of craft, and excellent detailed annotations give further information about materials, catalogs, and ordering. Coverage is similar to that found in the Contemporary Crafts Market Place (LJ 5/1/75) and Paul Colin and Deborah Lippman's Craft Sources (LJ 11/1/75). Easy to use, this directory is recommended for libraries not already owning one of the others.—Constance Ashmore Fairchild, Univ. of Illinois Lib., Urbana

Goodman, Michael B. William S. Burroughs: an annotated bibliography of his works and criticism.

Garland. (Reference Library of the Humanities). 1975. 96p. index. LC 75-23007. ISBN 0-8240-9989-3. $13. LIT/BIBLIOG

There are basically three divisions in this volume: works by Burroughs, biographic and critical material on him, and descriptive entries on special collections of personal letters and correspondence dealing with publication questions. Critical annotations are given for the author's books, articles, essays, and stories. Since a substantial amount of Burroughs' shorter material was first published in obscure magazines, Goodman has included the sources of reprinted works. Biographic and critical articles are listed and summarized, though book reviews are not annotated. Quite adequate description is given for Burroughs' letters, which are held by Columbia University, and the items of obvious literary, critical, and textual value in the Grove Press Collection at Syracuse University. The growing scholarly interest in Burroughs makes this research tool one of importance for university libraries.—Colin McLeod, Dept. of English, Virginia Polytechnic Inst. & State Univ., Blacksburg

The New Woman's Survival Sourcebook.

Knopf. 1975. 245p. ed. by Kirsten Grimstad & Susan Rennie. illus. index. LC 75-8260. pap. ISBN 0-[illegible]. SOC SCI/REF

This is a follow-up to the 1973 New Woman's Survival Catalog. There is much new material, and the coverage is greatly expanded. Everything is better the size, the paper quality, the format, the artwork. Each of the 15 sections opens with a short essay explaining what women are doing and thinking in the field. "Work" discusses the wages-for-housewives controversy; "Religion and Spirituality" outlines Mary Daly's "Beyond God the Father" theology and the revival of Goddess worship. Following each essay are catalog-type lists of where and how to get more information. The sections of "The Arts" and on "Literature" include interviews with feminist artists and descriptions of the scores of feminist publications that have sprung up. Other headings include "Health" and "Men" a discussion of men's liberation and the "effeminism" movement. An invaluable reference.—Betty Burnett, Springfield, Mo.

Phan Thein Chau. Vietnamese Communism: a research bibliography.

Greenwood. 1975. 359p. index. LC 75-16961. ISBN 0-8371-7950-5. $19.95. POL SCI/BIBLIOG

This volume provides a systematic listing of research materials available in North America as of June 1974 on Vietnamese nationalism, Communism, and revolution. To my knowledge, it is the largest compilation of books, journals, and pamphlets on the origin and development of the contemporary state of Marxism-Leninism in Vietnam. The bibliography is based primarily on the English, French, and Vietnamese resources in the Cornell University Library, the Library of Congress, and the New York Public Library. The book includes an extended table of contents, as well as author and title indexes. Each entry in the bibliography has an item number; unfortunately, it has not been used as a guide number for the indexes. In addition, there could have been more extensive cross-indexing of entries. Recommended for large academic and research libraries or special subject collections.—Barbara Lande Turman, Univ. of Texas at Austin Lib.

Reader's Digest Family Word Finder: a new thesaurus of synonyms and antonyms in dictionary form.

Reader's Digest Assn/Norton. 1975. 896p. LC 75-18006. $13.95. LANG/REF

This thesaurus, word guide, and simple dictionary uses more than 10,000 of the most powerful words of the English language as main entries. They're followed by their parts of speech, example sentences, and synonym and antonym lists of related words, arranged in decreasing order of use. Special features include "Exploring the Word," boxed histories of groups of related words; word origins; and spelling and pronunciation tips. The example sentences, usage labels, usage notes, as well as cross references and illustrative quotations, guide the user. This practical, easy-to-use reference tool should supplement Webster's Dictionary of Synonyms and Roget's Thesaurus. It would be especially useful to students or for home use by families.—Patricia M. Hogan, North Suburban Lib. System, Wheeling, Ill.

Sewter, A. Charles. The Stained Glass of William Morris and His Circle: a catalogue.

pub. for Paul Mellon Centre for Studies in British Art (London) Ltd. by Yale Univ. Pr. 1975. 335p. index. LC 72-91307. ISBN 0-300-01836-3. $70. DEC ARTS/REF

Sewter's intent in this second volume of his work on Morris and his associates was to locate and identify every surviving window produced by the firm from its foundating in 1861 until its closing in 1940. The main portion of the book deals with the glass existing in England, followed by that in other countries. (The arrangement is alphabetical by place name.) Appendixes and indexes give chronological lists of windows, names of donors and persons commemorated, and of subjects. This formidable work displays exemplary scholarship and devotion to research. Even so, Sewter points in his preface to possible lacunae, always the pain of the scholar. Volume 1, published in 1974, contained the text and illustrations; but this second volume is the basic workbook, and not to be skipped over lightly, for hidden in the firm's account-book notations are asides, such as those of Burne-Jones, well worth a quotation. In the accomplishment of his purpose, it would be difficult to fault Sewter's 20 years of work.—Paul von Khrum, formerly with New York Univ. Libs.

Wall, Bob. Who's Who in the Martial Arts and Directory of Black Belts.

R. A. Wall Investments, Inc., 9465 Wilshire Blvd S. 525, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. 1975. 254p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-2280. $9.95; pap. $7.95. SPORTS, REF

This guide, published by its compiler, includes a three-page biography of him and a dictionary of specialized terms arranged in no discernible order. The main section offers photographs and one-page biographies of well-known martial artists. Emphasis is on those who have participated widely in tournaments or have been commercially successful. Although most persons listed have made contributions to judo, karate, or one of the other fighting arts, there are many omissions and definite regional emphases. Nearly half of the 131 persons listed live in either New York or California. The directory of black belts is actually a lengthy, but somewhat dated, geographical guide to martial arts clubs and schools. This is an interesting first effort, but it lacks the scholarly authority and balance necessary for a reliable reference book.—John Newman, Colorado State Univ. Libs., Ft. Collins

Wheeler, Helen Rippier. Womanhood Media Supplement: additional current resources about women.

Scarecrow. 1975. 482p. index. LC 72-7396. ISBN 0-8108-0858-7. $15. SOC SCI/REF

Each of the main resource sections of Womanhood Media (LJ 4/1/73) has been expanded here, in what Wheeler says will be the only supplement to that work. She provides a basic book collection of more than 500 items; nonbook resources (including posters, buttons, toys, and live entertainment groups as well as more traditional audiovisual forms) with separate lists of pamphlets and movement periodicals; and a directory of sources, including breakdowns of speakers and consultants, governmental status-of-women commissions, women's libertion groups and centers, and rosters for employment and other affirmative action. Annotations for books and audiovisuals vary in length and depth but are generally sharp, concise, and feminist-oriented. Access could have been improved by providing a subject index (though books are in Dewey order and pamphlets under subject headings) and by reprinting short explanatory introductions from the original text, which would facilitate the use of the supplement by itself. Still, this is a wealth of material in a single source; essential for women's studies programs, extremely valuable for academic and public libraries generally. Michele M. Leber, Virginia Beach P.L.

Recently Revised Reference Works

American Book Trade Directory, 1975-1976: booksellers and publishers in the United States, Great Britain, Ireland, and Canada; wholesalers in the United States and Canada; foreign book dealers. 22d ed.

Bowker. 1975. 669p. ed. & comp. by Jaques Cattell Pr. index. LC 15-23627. ISBN 0-8352-0819-2. $45. PUBLISHING REF

Lists more than 11,700 U.S. bookstores, more than 1000 U.S. and Canadian book and magazine wholesalers, some 6500 American publishers, etc. Also, for the first time, subject specialties are noted for each bookstore as well as its general category.

Polking, Kirk & Liz Prince, eds. Artists' Market '76. 2d ed.

Writer's Digest. 1975. 624p. illus. index. LC 74-28735. ISBN 0-911654-38-0. $9.95. ART REF

New material in this edition includes "almost 40% more markets," interviews with art buyers and with artist's and photographer's reps, expanded copyright information, an expanded glossary and appendixes, a sample commissioned art agreement, and "An ABC of Original Graphics." For a review of the first edition see LJ 3/15/75.

Ulrich's International Periodicals Directory, 1975-1976: a classified guide to current periodicals, foreign and domestic. 16th ed.

Bowker. (Serials Bibliography). 1975. 2289p. index. LC 32-16320. ISBN 0-8352-0824-9. $50. REF

Among the new features in this edition, which lists approximately 57,000 in-print periodicals (10,000 are new entries), are an index to publications of international organizations, an ISSN index, a change in format from two-column to three, etc.

Who's Who in American Politics, 1975-1976. 5th ed.

Bowker. 1975. 1090p. ed. by Jaques Cattell Pr. index. LC 67-25024. ISBN 0-8352-0827-3. $48.50. GOVT REF

Contains biographical sketches of approximately 18,800 men and women.

—This highly selective listing was compiled by Robert R. Harris

ART

Bauer, George C., ed Bernini in Perspective.

Spectrum: Prentice-Hall. (Artists in Perspective) 1976. 142p. illus. bibliog. LC 75-31546. $9.95; pap. $3.25. ART

This carefully edited anthology presents a great deal of material not previously available in English. The editor has shaped the collection to reflect the changing critical appreciation of Bernini's sculpture from the 17th through the 19th centuries, and he has supplemented this with important examples of modern scholarship. His perceptive introduction and useful biographical note add to the volume's worth. This work, taken together with Howard Hibbard's Bernini (Penguin, 1974) make accessible to all collections a reasonably priced core of information about this artistic genius.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Blodgett, Richard. How To Make Money in the Art Market.

Wyden, dist. by McKay. 1975. 226p. bibliog. index. LC 75-7648. ISBN 0-88326-093-X. $7.95. BUS ART

In this comprehensive manual on investing in art, Blodgett, author of the New York Times Book of Money, assumes the reader's almost complete ignorance on the subject. He covers in easy-to-understand language the fine details of art investment, providing a bonanza of information on such topics as buying from a dealer, buying at auction, investing in painting and prints, and art conservation. What makes this book so authoritative is the fact that Blodgett relies heavily on the expertise of professionals, including collectors, dealers, and auctioneers; in addition to giving sound advice, these professionals enliven the book by relating colorful, often humorous stories about their experiences. A fine reference tool.—Henry Halpern, Rider Coll. Lib., Lawrenceville, N.J.

Honour, Hugh. The European Vision of America.

Cleveland Museum of Art, dist. by Kent State Univ. Pr. 1976. 389p. illus., some color. index. LC 75-35892. ISBN 0-910386-26-9. $17.50. ART

The evolving European perception of the Americas is the theme of this excellent volume. The lavish catalog of an exhibition organized principally by the Cleveland Museum of Art, it elucidates and illustrates this complex phenomenon with a fascinating potpourri of some 350 objects, including paintings, drawings, maps, tapestries, sculpture, ceramicware, and book illustrations. Included within the 18 topical divisions are considerations of flora and fauna, Dutch Brazil, allegorical representations, and the American Revolution. All the works are illustrated and appropriately documented. A trove of both art and historical information.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Kraus, Dorothy & Henry Kraus. The Hidden World of Misericords.

Braziller. 1975. 192p. photogs. LC 75-10869. ISBN 0-8076-0804-1. $20. ART

Misericords are shelves placed on the bottom of hinged church seats to provide support for the standing worshipper when the chair is raised. Part of the elaborate choir-stall furniture of the late medieval period, these carved wooden panels lent themselves to Gothic drollery. Rarely religious in content, the misericords afford a vivid entrée into the realism and worldliness of the waning Middle Ages. This attractive but superficial volume provides a very basic introduction to the almost completely neglected French misericord. The 169 good plates reflect something of the thematic diversity and qualitative variability of the misericord. The text is, however, insubstantial. Formal analysis and the rich iconographic implications of this vital art are neglected. Worthwhile for comprehensive collections.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Lysaght, A. M. The Book of Birds: five centuries of bird illustration.

Phaidon, dist. by Praeger. 1975. 208p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 74-14037. ISBN 0-7148-1667-1. $22. NAT HIST ART

This lavish book does for bird illustrations what Alice Coats's The Book of Flowers (LJ 11/1/73) did for flower illustrations, and its format is similar. There are 142 illustrations (40 in color), some of which have never before been published. In the introduction the author discusses birds in mythology, religion, medicine, and science. The history of bird illustrations parallels the development of the science of ornithology and the art of the print, and all of this is dealt with. Each illustration is accompanied by notes giving its background, information on the artist, and some criticism. Art libraries and ornithology collections will want to consider this expensive but unique volume.—Bonnie Jo Dopp, San Francisco P.L.

Simbari, Nicola. Simbari.

S. & S. 1975. 363p. comm. by Stuart Preston. color illus. LC 75-4416. ISBN 0-671-22097-7. $40. ART

Simbari is a highly successful Italian painter (the "partial list of collectors" runs to seven pages). His paintings, most of which display brilliant color and a thick impasto (worked with the palette knife), portray attractive people on beaches, on city streets, and in cafés; there are also land and seascapes. More than 100 of his works are reproduced here; the book also features photo essays on the artist and his attractive family, plus comments by Simbari and his admirers. The result—a true coffee-table item.—Margot Karp, Pratt Inst. Lib., Brooklyn

Architecture

Allsopp, Bruce. Towards a Humane Architecture.

Transatlantic. 1975. 111p. illus. index. $7.50. ARCHITECTURE

Critical of the current practice of architecture in Britain and elsewhere, Allsopp offers many criticisms in a style more bombastic than lucid ("To hell with standards based upon nineteenth-century attitudes to housing the workers, and a curse upon socialists who think good design is only for the rich"). The book is weak in examples of what Allsopp seeks or how he proposes to get there. The author's main point seems to be that high-rise dwellings are not planned to human scale and they fail to satisfy perceived human needs. Fundamentally, he seems to preach the necessity of political revolution to solve the problems besetting today's urban architecture.—Lawrence Siegel, formerly with Space Management Consultants, Inc., New York

Thompson, John D. & Grace Goldin. The Hospital: a social and architectural history.

Yale Univ. Pr. 1975. 384p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 74-18758. ISBN 0-300-01850-X. $20. HEC ARTS

This is a readable example of expert scholarship—thorough, illuminating, and profusely and carefully illustrated. In a well-organized manner, the book reviews the entwined social and architectural history of hospital design in western Europe and the U.S. Professional readers interested in the interactions between hospital design and construction, medical theory, and traditional decision making will find important lessons on the impermanence of final solutions here. To the layman, this is an erudite and fascinating history of the not always peaceful frontier between architecture and the sociology of a pressing public problem. Lawrence Siegel, formerly with Space Management Consultants, Inc. New York

Decorative Arts & Crafts

Arwas, Victor. Art Deco Sculpture: Chryselephantine Statuettes of the twenties and thirties.

St. Martin's. 1975. 107p. illus., some color. LC 74-20028. ISBN 0-85670-179-X. $20. DEC ARTS

Arwas has assembled an intriguing catalog on one of the lesser-known specialties of Art Deco. More specifically, these are bronze and ivory carved statuary of sleek fashion models, dancers, and sporting figures overflowing with sensuality, exquisite geometry, and seemingly endless curves—objects hitherto considered "camp and decoration," and now widely collected. They are pictured in 142 illustrations (including 12 in color); the text is short but expansively informative. Despite its high price, the volume should not be overlooked by libraries serving Deco collectors, researchers, and other aficionados. —Gail Jacobson, formerly with Columbia-Greene Community Coll. Lib., Hudson, N.Y.

Colson, Frank A. Kiln Building with Space-Age Materials.

Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1975. 127p. drawings by Nancy Nugent, photogs. index. LC 75-3972. ISBN 0-442-21641-6. $11.95. CRAFTS

Colson uses new ceramic-fiber insulating materials developed by the U.S. space program in place of some of the heavy firebrick traditionally used in constructing kilns. Through testing he has determined that these materials can cut costs of fuel, labor, and material and can reduce firing time while obtaining satisfactory results. Detailed instructions and materials lists are given for building catenary, Roman-arch, suspension drum, raku, car, and cast kilns. A suppliers list is also included. Although not as detailed as Building Pottery Equipment by Roger Harvey and others (LJ 5/15/75), this book provides practical alternatives to traditional methods. —Constance Ashmore Fairchild, Univ. of Illinois Lib., Urbana

Drysdale, Rosemary. The Art of Blackwork Embroidery.

Scribners. 1975. 160p. illus., some color. LC 75-6990. ISBN 0-684-14330-5. $12.95. CRAFTS

With the returning popularity of blackwork comes a demand for a good manual on this kind of embroidery. The Art of Blackwork Embroidery fills this need. Although basic directions and some of the patterns are found in Erica Wilson's Embroidery Book, Drysdale gives much more detailed information on how to work the 45 carefully diagrammed patterns which she shows both in graphic and worked form. Especially useful is the arrangement of patterns according to light, medium, or dark effects. In addition to complete instructions for various projects ranging from the ever-present eyeglass case to tablecloths, a section is devoted to sources of new designs and suggestions for getting new effects through the use of different materials and colors. —Dorothy E. Wynne, SUNY at Buffalo

Orr, Jan. Now Needlepoint: a joyous new approach to creative designing.

Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1975. 208p. illus. index. LC 74-7779. ISBN 0-442-26301-5. $16.95. CRAFTS

Here Orr combines weaving and embroidery techniques with basic needlepoint techniques to create vibrant designs on large-mesh canvas. The use of rug yarn facilitates the designs, which often have the appearance of crochet. Even the inexperienced needleworker should be able to master the most complex stitches thanks to the numerous photographs and bold diagrams. Besides detailing the stitches and basic patterns, Orr explains how to complete projects, and gives directions for tassels and simple macramé finishes. —Barbara Hornick, Univ. of Pittsburgh at Bradford

Shea, John G. Antique Country Furniture of North America.

Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1975. 228p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-9118. ISBN 0-442-27544-7. $16.95. DEC ARTS

The first half of the book is given to the special characteristics of the furniture made in various regions, including Spanish Colonial of the Southwest and French Canadian. Pieces from various regions and showing individual influences are compared. The second half deals with the construction of furniture, with its final section containing measured drawings of the more familiar and popular pieces. Although the book will be of assistance to the collector in determining authenticity in construction, it will be of greater interest to the craftsman; not the novice, but the practicing amateur. —Paul von Khrum, formerly with New York Univ. Libs.

Wilson, Erica. Needleplay.

Scribners. 1975. 189p. illus., some color. index. LC 75-6036. ISBN 0-684-14362-3. $14.95. CRAFTS

This compilation of Wilson's television series is colorful and well edited. Needleplay includes most of the projects seen in the series as well as detailed instructions on how to copy items sold in kits (the Shakespeare Sonnet set, the Beatrix Potter crewel pieces). A cross stitch alphabet and a reverse alphabet for needlepoint are useful additions. However, the basic information, such as directions for stitches and transferring designs, are found in greater detail in Erica Wilson's Embroidery Book, making this volume an unessential purchase. —Dorothy E. Wynne, SUNY at Buffalo

Graphic Arts

Angulo, Diego & Alfonso E. Pérez Sánchez. A Corpus of Spanish Drawings. Vol. 1: 1400-1600.

New York Graphic Society: Little. 1975. 219p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 73-91136. ISBN 0-8212-0576-5. $70. GRAPHIC ARTS

This first volume of a planned comprehensive survey of Spanish drawing is in itself a major scholarly achievement. It features an unprecedented collection of more than 500 drawings from the late Gothic and Renaissance periods, and sheds much light on the neglected graphic tradition of Spain. Although it includes an informative introductory essay, the work is essentially a catalog. There are profiles of known masters, and their drawings, whether accepted, doubted, or even rejected, are documented and discussed. The volume also presents appropriate examples by foreigners who labored in Spain. The anonymous works, of which there are many, are listed separately and arranged under subject headings. The outstanding reproductions are a worthy complement to the scrupulous scholarship of the authors. Fundamental for larger art history collections. —Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Bacou, Roseline, sel. & intro. Piranesi: etchings and drawings.

New York Graphic Society: Little. 1975. 200p. bibliog. index. LC 73-9113. ISBN 0-8212-0577-3. $19.95.

Scott, Jonathan. Piranesi.

St. Martin's. 1975. 336p. illus. index. LC 74-81701. $50. GRAPHIC ARTS

Piranesi was preoccupied throughout his life with the ruins of antiquity, and his beautiful etchings both document and dramatize the crumbling architectural glories of Rome and its environs. Scott skillfully surveys Piranesi's principal publishing projects and also considers his commercial activities and his often eccentric relations with artists and patrons. The author reveals Piranesi as a lively controversialist who frequently engaged in the aesthetic-archaeological disputes of the age. Scott also provides 361 plates, which are satisfactory in quality.

Bacou has made an excellent selection of 178 etchings and drawings from the master's large oeuvre. Though she provides a short introductory essay, she offers little textual discussion of the works themselves. However, the plates are reproduced beautifully, and many are juxtaposed with corresponding preparatory sketches or detail enlargements. The reproductions in this volume are superior in quality to those in the Scott book; yet Scott presents twice the number of illustrations and includes the art historical discussion substantially lacking in Bacou's work. The two volumes are recommended as complementaries. —Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Jones, Dan Burne. The Prints of Rockwell Kent: a catalogue raisonné.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. 1975. 219p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 74-5738. ISBN 0-226-40623-7. $32.50 GRAPHIC ARTS

This handsome volume, with 321 reproductions, attests to Kent's skills as a printmaker. The paper, printing, binding, and layout are all excellent, and the book reflects meticulous editing (the editor was appointed official bibliographer to Kent before the artist's death). Coverage includes the full range of these prints. The book also features a foreword by Carl Zigrosser, who contributed to the popular Rockwellkentiana (1933). This latest book deserves an even wider audience.—Malcolm M. Ferguson, Itek Corp. Lib., Lexington, Mass.

Sorlier, Charles, ed. Chagall's Posters: a catalogue raisonné.

Crown. 1975. 160p. pref. by Jean Adhémar. illus., mostly color. LC 75-15328. ISBN 0-517-52441-4. $60. GRAPHIC ARTS

Organized with the collaboration of the artist and his wife, this volume brings together all of Chagall's posters, including original lithographs, lithographs printed under the supervision of the artist, and posters produced by photographic techniques with Chagall's approval. There are some 60 fine color reproductions of the posters in the first two groupings, and these constitute the main attraction of the volume. The plates are presented with a modicum of vital information. However, the text completely neglects two of the reproduced posters. It is unfortunate that Sorlier, the executor of many of these prints, provides so little insight into their evolution and production. And the inclusion of many inappropriate and sometimes not completely intelligible "appreciations" by various French critics adds little. The volume will be of value primarily for art collectors.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Photography

Frajndlich, Abe. Figments.

Morgan & Morgan. 1975. 63p. photogs. LC 75-18739. ISBN 0-960088-41-5. pap. $8.95. PHOTOG

A well-produced book of black-and-white photographs in which a recurring figure in black maillot, sneakers, and classic mime face appears in a variety of settings. Occasionally the mime is posed with a mural or sculpture, so that art imitates art imitating nature. The photographer makes restrained use of multiple images, sabatier techniques, and infrared film. The book suffers somewhat from a diffused point of view: we can't always tell what the photographer was getting at. Some of the photos are outstanding; many are of clowning around where an obvious good time was had by all. The photos are reproduced with some care for tonal quality and complementary layout. If your library can handle the 9″ x 12″ paperback format, this is an interesting example of a trend in contemporary photography.—J. R. Mosler, formerly with Ocean County Lib., Toms River, N.J.

Gleason, Herbert W. Thoreau Country: photographs and text selections from the works of H. D. Thoreau.

Sierra Club, dist. by Scribners. 1975. 144p. ed. by Mark Silber. intro. by Paul Brooks. LC 75-8865. ISBN 0-87156-140-9. $32.50; pap. ISBN 0-87156-144-1. $9.95. LIT/PHOTOG

Back at the turn of the century, Gleason was asked to illustrate a new edition of Thoreau's writings with photographs. It started him on a hobby which was to last his lifetime—to photograph as many sites that Thoreau described as he could discover. When he died in 1937 he left behind 1230 such photographs, most of them unpublished. His collection was lost for a time, but recently came to light; and now 121 of the finest photographs are superbly reproduced in "exhibition format" (10″x13″) accompanied by the quotations that inspired them. It is an absolute gem of a book that should not only appeal to lovers of Thoreau, but make us aware of the work of a major pioneer photographer who has been overlooked.—Walter Harding, Dept. of English, SUNY at Geneseo

Kertész, André. Washington Square.

Grossman: Viking. 1975. unpaged. appreciation by Brendan Gill. LC 75-19032. pap. ISBN 0-670-00601-7. $5.95. PHOTOG

This collection of photographs by one of the grand old men of photography is a delight to look at. Washington Square has a long tradition as a center of New York Bohemian life, yet Kertész shows very little of the literary and artistic scene. Rather, with lyric vision, he focuses his camera on the square with its surrounding architecture and the people who live there and make use of it. The photographs cover a span of 30 years and all seasons. Although Kertész has occasionally been bitter because his work has received full recognition only during the last ten years, that feeling is not apparent in these photographs, where his love of people and buildings is directly communicated to the viewer. Highly recommended.—Frank Davidoff, Staff Consultant, CBS TV Network

Koudelka, Josef. Gypsies: photographs.

Aperture, dist. by Book Organization. 1975. essay by Willy Guy. LC 75-13611. ISBN 0-912334-74-6. $22.50; pap. Museum of Modern Art. ISBN 0-912334-85-1. $15. PHOTOG

This book of 60 photographs by the Czech photographer Koudelka is the first major publication of his work. The photographs, taken mostly in the Gypsy camps of Eastern Slovakia between 1962 and 1968, are not merely social records but sophisticated and refined images, carefully and beautifully composed. The concluding essay deals with historical aspects of Gypsy existence—particularly developments since World War II. One hopes that Koudelka's photographs will begin to receive the recognition they deserve with the publication of this handsomely designed book. Recommended for contemporary photography collections.—Nancy K. Hall-Duncan, International Museum of Photography at George Eastman House, Rochester, N.Y.

Kumler, Kipton. Photographs.

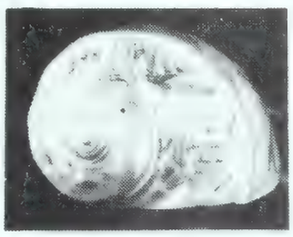
Godine. (Contemporary Photographers, 2). 1975. 88p. LC 75-11467. $20; pap. $10. PHOTOG

Working in the classical tradition of Stieglitz and Weston, Kumler never distorts the objects he photographs. Yet in his work black window frames against snow, white shutters against a dark wall, and the silhouetted leaves of a palm all become abstracts while remaining recog-



Treasure ahoy!

All the fabulous objects of art and utility related to ships and the men who sail them are celebrated in a beautiful new book by the author of The Collectors Book of Bottles. You'll find furniture, china, scrimshaw, navigational instruments, carvings and much more—plus a special section devoted to the care and repair of marine antiques. 23 color, 247 black-and-white illustrations by Charles Klamkin. $17.50

MARINE ANTIQUES

MARIAN KLAMKIN

DODD MEAD

nizable; thus another dimension is added for our perception and enjoyment. While the series of cloud photos becomes monotonous, others (rock forms in Monument, rolling farmlands near the French Pyrenees) afford variety and immediacy. Kuntz shows intelligent control of the process of using slow film in an 8" x 10" format. The contact printing enhances the blacks and whites, one can almost feel the luscious grays, and the final prints show no grain. A beautiful book recommended for all photography collections. –Robert L. Enequist, Coll. of Insurance Lib., N.Y.

The Look Book.

Abrams. 1975. 400p. ed. by Leo Rosten. fwd. by Gardner Cowles. photogs., mainly color. LC 75-[illegible] ISBN [illegible]316-4. $35. COMM/PHOTOG

In this collection of over 450 photographs and selected articles and interviews, Rosten, who was on the Look editorial staff for over 15 years, offers his choices from the "treasury" of the biweekly which was published from 1937 to 1971. Topics range from sex to food to religion. The Look Book is not a chronological review of the magazine but is an eclectic anthology. No publication dates are given for either articles or photographs and there is no index. Although most of the photographs are excellent, the trivial captions reduce their impact. With so little content and such a high price, libraries should simply dust off their bound volumes of Look to recall what it contained.—Lucy Caswell, Ohio State Univ. Journalism Lib., Columbus

Minick, Bob (text), Roger Minick (photogs.), & Leonard Sussman (drawings). Hills of Home: the rural Ozarks of Arkansas.

Scrimshaw. 1975. 160p. LC 75-14226. ISBN 0-912020-48-2. $22.50. SOC SCI/PHOTOG

The photographs are the glory of this book. Bob Minick's subtle social documents, taken with the aid of a Guggenheim Fellowship, portray the Ozark countryside and people with a directness that is reminiscent of Pre-Raphaelite imagery. The beautifully printed photographs, one to a page, are accompanied by stories and recollections told by Minick's father, a "native Ozarker," and the interplay of words and pictures weaves a tale of the American experience not yet spoiled by technology. The cost of the volume is somewhat high for its size, but Hills of Home will have value for Americana and photography collections alike. – Timothy Daum, Ohio Univ. Lib., Athens

Stoumen, Lou. Can't Argue with Sunrise: a paper movie.

Hand Pr.: Celestial Arts. 1975. 191p. photogs. LC [illegible]62. ISBN 0-89087-052-7. $14.95; pap. ISBN 0-89087-050-9. $9.45. PHOTOG

Stoumen, a two-time Oscar winner for his documentary films, puts together 95 photographs of or by him (the "frames"), with a poetic commentary (the "soundtrack"). Presto! We have a personal "paper movie," a pleasing form which the author admits could have wide do-it-yourself application. The images—of Stoumen's youth, men at war, children, lovers, and people of several nations are frequently strong and direct. The "poetry" is actually nothing more than broken-up prose, but is occasionally incisive nonetheless. The combination of elements works quite well, resulting in a positive, if somewhat idealistic and naïve, statement of human potential. Worth considering. –Thomas D. Bedell, Asst. Editor, "Valley Stream MAILeader," N.Y.

BIOGRAPHY

Blackburn, Joyce. George Wythe of Williamsburg.

Harper. 1975. 156p. illus. LC 75-9327. ISBN 0-06-060791-2. $7.95. BIOG

Wythe was an important figure in 18th-Century Virginia. Lawyer, jurist, professor, and mentor of Thomas Jefferson, he is perhaps best known for his signature above the Virginia delegation on the Declaration of Independence. Unfortunately, this tributary biography does not do him full justice. Without footnotes, the distinction between the author's suppositions and the actual facts becomes thin indeed. –Jerry V. Caswell, Univ. of Wisconsin-Madison Libs.

Boer, Charles. Charles Olson in Connecticut.

Swallow. 1975. 156p. illus. LC 74-19869. ISBN 0-8040-0649-0. $7.95. LIT/MEMOIR

Boer gives readers a personal portrait of the perplexing qualities of Olson's mind and temperament, leaving to others the problem of resolving contradictions of fact or opinion. Boer's account of Olson's visit to Connecticut is often amusing, occasionally quizzical, at times boisterous, but never dull. The proximity of view leads the reader to look for answers to questions or for resolutions of discussions, but they rarely appear. Because the book is written as if directly addressed to Olson, because the many conversations are quoted directly, and because the tone is consistently informal, the reader is almost convinced that he or she is present in Connecticut with Olson. This fascinating book is recommended for all literature collections. –Walter Waring, Dept. of English, Kalamazoo Coll., Mich.

Braly, Malcolm. False Starts: a memoir of San Quentin and other prisons.

Little. 1976. 336p. $8.95. CRIME/AUTOBIOG

Author of a paperback novel Felony Tank (highly praised by the Mystery Writers of America), and On the Yard, a well-received novel set in San Quentin, Braly presents in this memoir an apologia for some 40-odd years of false starts by one seemingly fated to do the wrong thing at the wrong time. Abandoned by both parents, institutionalized, encouraged by initial successes at petty thievery, he hit the skids which led to industrial school, escape, a brief and uncharacteristic period of violence in the Nevada desert, an unsuccessful marriage and several affairs, and, over several decades, to intermittent prison terms in a number of Nevada and California institutions. Braly had a natural talent in art, music, and writing, and his literary efforts in prison finally brought him outside help and an opportunity for freedom. But that freedom was delayed, as so often before, by a fear of being trapped into routine and mediocrity, and perhaps by a fear of freedom itself. The book is honest, its language graphic and certainly not for the squeamish, and one suspects the author of posturing a bit—as he confesses he is wont to do. –L. W. Griffin, Univ. of Wisconsin Lib., Madison

Christowe, Stoyan. Eagle and Stork.

Harper's Magazine Pr. 1976. 432p. LC 75-9359 ISBN 0-06-121545-7. $10.95. PER NAR

This is a paean to village life in Macedonia at the turn of the century, as well as to industrial, immigrant America. Recalling the land where he spent the first 12 years of his life, Christowe rhapsodizes about everyday human ritual and celebrates such exotic Balkan scenes as eagle-and-stork battles and man-bear wrestling matches. He relates how, after emigrating to America, he worked in the roundhouses and restaurants of St. Louis before joining the Great Northern construction crew, and then moving to Chicago in his late teens. There he arbitrarily ends his tale, on a note of praise for the promises of America. The florid style, muddled purpose, and oppressive length of this autobiography overwhelm any benefit of the author's good intentions. James Peters, Leonia P.L., N.J.

Davies, Marion. The Times We Had: life with William Randolph Hearst.

Bobbs. 1975. 139p. ed. by Pamela Pfau & Kenneth Marx. fwd. by Orson Welles. LC 75-7015. ISBN 0-672-52112-1. $12.50. PER NAR

Poor Marion Davies. Already done in by Citizen Kane and Fred Guiles's dreary biography, she is now exhumed by the publication of autobiographical tapes recorded in 1951. The editors of The Times We Had claim Davies withheld publication of these reminiscences because she feared she "may have revealed too much." She was wrong. This is a very official, well-laundered account of Davies' life and times with Hearst. The editors occasionally add explanatory footnotes, but rarely when Davies is indulging in her self-admitted habit of telling "white lies." With intelligent and informed editorial comment, the Davies tapes might have provided the makings of a major biography, but The Times We Had doesn't come close.—Gary Carey, Dept. of Film & Theater History, Sch. of Visual Arts, New York

Grant, Zalin. Survivors.

Norton. 1975. 360p. LC 75-17637. ISBN 0-393-08727-1. $8.95. PER NAR

The Vietnam POW stories continue to filter out, revealing quiet accounts of desperate men determined to survive imprisonment by a ruthless enemy. Grant, who interviewed a number of POW's, has recorded their stories from the time of their imprisonment to their release. The writing is choppy at times, as we switch from one story to another, but Grant lets the men speak for themselves—even when they dislike each other. This is a straightforward but powerful book, and it complements Stephen Rowan's fine book, They Wouldn't Let Us Die (LJ 3/15/74). –Robert Molyneux, Virginia Polytechnic Inst. & State Univ. Lib., Blacksburg

Heymann, C. David. Ezra Pound: the last rower, a political profile.
Richard Seaver: Viking. Feb. 1976. 320p. bibliog. index. $10. LIT/BIOG
Although Heymann's study provides adequate background of Pound's role as a poet, it is the "political profile" on which Heymann concentrates. Tracing Pound's growing preoccupation in the 1930's with economics and with what he considered the evils of banking and uses of money in England and America, the author recounts Pound's increasingly violent anti-Semitic views and his support of Mussolini's Fascist regime during World War II. Heymann, who had access to FBI files on Pound, shows us a life and a mind that went off the track. Still, Heymann not only stresses the beauty and greatness of the Cantos, but he also clearly documents Pound's artistic influence on such writers as Joyce, Eliot, Hemingway, and Frost. We are left, moreover, with an increased understanding that in spite of the serious failings in Pound's behavior, 20th-Century literature would have been considerably diminished without his contribution.—Larry Earl Bone, Southwestern at Memphis Lib., Tenn.

Johnson, William Weber. Cortés.
Little. 1975. (Library of World Biography). 238p. bibliog. index. LC 75-19345. ISBN 0-316-46754-5. HIST/BIOG
Johnson retells the well-known story of Cortés' conquest of the Aztec empire in a fresh and interesting style. The work is a very thorough biography of the great conquistador, concentrating on the events in which he participated and going deeply into his stay in Cuba, an episode usually ignored by historians. Johnson is quite sympathetic to both Cortés and the Aztecs, far less so to the Spanish in general. The information he includes on the Spanish is not entirely sufficient, though that on the Indians is extensive. Since biographies of Cortés have been quite infrequent, this popular account is a desirable addition for any library.—Frederic J. Baumgartner, Dept. of History, Georgia Coll., Milledgeville

Laporte, Genevieve. Sunshine at Midnight: memories of Picasso and Cocteau.
Macmillan. 1975. 123p. tr. & annotated by Douglas Cooper. illus. index. LC 75-15633. ISBN 0-02-568300-4. $6.95. MEMOIR
Laporte, heretofore unknown as Picasso's special friend (between Françoise Gilot and Jacqueline Roche), recalls with fondness and regard her 17-year intermittent relationship with Picasso. She also tells of her friendships with Cocteau and with the French poet Paul Eluard; the subtitle is somewhat misleading, for she reveals more about Eluard than she does of Cocteau (except that he illustrated her published poems and acted as a buffer at the time her affair with Picasso ended). We are left at the end with many questions about Laporte's own compelling nature; but Laporte does answer certain questions about Picasso, and her memoir conveys something of Picasso's warmth and charm.—Robin Kaplan, Los Angeles County Museum of Art Lib.

Lehrer, James. We Were Dreamers.
Atheneum. 1975. 216p. LC 75-14679. ISBN 0-689-10693-9. $8.95. PER NAR
The subject of these reminiscences is the pitifully poor Kansas Central Lines intercity bus service, which existed for one year and ten days in 1946-47 as the only public transportation in middle Kansas until its owner had to declare bankruptcy. The company began as a dream of the author's father. He envisioned a flourishing bus line, bringing needed services to the people of small Kansas towns; but he didn't reckon with the problems of three dilapidated buses, just barely running and often broken down entirely, too few passengers, and such poor service that most of those defected. It was a time of trial for the family—a staunch wife who gave her all, and two teen-age sons willing to skip meals when money ran out. One has to admire their bravery and loyalty, but the book is depressing and has little interest beyond adding a note to the story of transportation in America and some local history of the area where the action took place.—Evelyn G. Callaway, Nebraska Lib. Commission, Fairbury

Miller, Helen Hill. George Mason: gentleman revolutionary.
Univ. of North Carolina Pr. 1975. 388p. illus. index. LC 75-1377. ISBN 0-8078-1250-1. $18.95. HIST BIOG
This "life and times" biography of Mason is destined to become a standard work on one of Virginia's most important contributors to the American Revolution. The book gives a vivid and accurate account of Mason's dual careers as planter and statesman, with emphasis on his authorship of the Virginia Declaration of Rights and his role in drafting the Constitution. This work is particularly important for its judicious evaluation of Mason's opposition to the ratification of the Constitution.—John H. Ashby, Dept. of Social Sciences, Catonsville Community Coll., Baltimore, Md.

Sanders, Sol. Honda: the man and his machine.
Little. 1975. 182p. LC 75-16235. ISBN 0-316-77007-8. $7.95. BUS/BIOG
Sanders, a former Far Eastern correspondent for U.S. News and World Report, may not understand Formula I or motorcycle racing, but he does understand Japan and the forces that have raised a major industrial power from the rubble of World War II. The story of the career of Soichiro Honda, of his "maverick" approach to business, and of his phenomenal success is interwoven with an overview of Japan's growing economic muscle and how it was attained. A good portion of the book is devoted to the Honda motorcycle conquest of the U.S. The move into automotive production and the development of the stratified charge engine are also detailed. Little of Honda's personal life is seen, yet in a real sense his life is his work. Recommended.—Charles A. Seavey, Univ. of Northern Iowa Lib., Cedar Falls

Simenon, Georges. Letter to My Mother.
Helen & Kurt Wolff: Harcourt. 1976. 96p. tr. by Ralph Manheim. ISBN 0-15-150445-8. $5.95. MEMOIR
This slight book contains the musings of a mourning son. About four years ago, Madame Henriette André Simenon died peacefully in a French hospital at the age of 91. Her 70-year-old son wonders again and again that she died a virtual stranger, keeping herself and her past from him, even to death. In the end, after reviewing the largely sad and burdensome details of her life and his place in it, he discovers the kernel that led her to extremes of stubbornness, distrust, and pride. The 13th of 13 children, she was driven by a deep-seated "ferocious need to be good." She was born into a well-to-do family, but poverty was her lot after the death of her father when she was five. She married Désiré Simenon and took in boarders to supplement his income. He died at 44, leaving her still poor. In old age, she married a railway clerk whose death finally left her with a secure pension. Because of her lasting distrust, she refused help from Georges and even returned to him in a lump sum all that he had ever sent her. In her secret heart, she equated independence with goodness. Simenon writes here in his usual brief, uncomplicated style, reducing her life to an epistolary handful of ashes. Libraries aiming for the complete works of Simenon will want this fragment, but others can only hope for a better and fuller statement of his filial grief and loyalty.—Barbara Conaty, Madison P.L., Wis.

Sperber, Al. Out of Sight: ten stories of victory over blindness.
Little. Mar. 1976. 237p. ISBN 0-316-80700-1. $7.95. PER NAR
In this book, "victory over blindness" does not denote the miraculous recovery of sight; it means the besting of adversity by hard work and indomitable spirit. The reader meets ten exceptional people, leaders in the movement to better the lives of the handicapped. This volume grew out of the (blind) author's radio program, and part of it contains excerpts from that program. The short autobiographies are organized according to stages in the lives of blind persons. The book is inspirational and heartwarming; it will repay anyone's perusal.—Hamilton B. Webb, Library of Congress

Vladimirov, Peter. The Vladimirov Diaries: Yenan, China, 1942-1945.
Doubleday. 1975. 538p. illus. index. LC 74-27591. ISBN 0-385-00928-3. $10.95. HIST/MEMOIR
This diary of Vladimirov, a key Comintern representative in Mao's Yenan during the crucial years 1942-1945, is as unreliable as it is fascinating. The book obviously serves current Soviet propaganda purposes by portraying Mao as an unscrupulous, anti-Soviet, power-hungry opportunist; Kang Sheng as a Judas; and Chou En-lai as a careerist. The Communist armies are charged with passivity and opium-trading; Mao is accused of trying secretly to poison his pro-Soviet rival, Wang Ming; Mao's abortive attempt to win U.S. support for his movement is seen as a betrayal of Communism. Such unrelieved hostility to Mao and all he stands for is provocative in view of the currently dominant American feeling of sympathy with the Yenan experiment; yet because of the distinct possibility that the diary was tampered with before its 1973 release by the Soviet Novosti Press Agency, all specific details must be viewed with the utmost caution. It is questionable whether the "Publisher's Note" and the list of suggestions for further reading added by Doubleday to the Novosti Agency's English translation constitute sufficient warning to the general reader. —Andrew J. Nathan, East Asian Inst., Columbia Univ.

Weizmann, Chaim. The Letters and Papers of Chaim Weizmann. Series A., Vols. 4-7.

Karen Pr., 430 Park Ave. S., N.Y.C. 10016. 1975. Vol. 4, 1903-1904. 431p. Vol. 6, 454p. Vol. [illegible] Meyer W. Weisgal, general ed. All: illus. index. ISBN 0-7065-1319-3. Vol. 4, $12.50; Vols. [illegible] CORRESPONDENCE

The intellectual breadth and courageous industry of Weizmann, world-renowned chemist, leader of Zionism in its most trying and turbulent years, and first president of the State of Israel, is attested to by these nearly 1600 letters (the first three volumes were published by Oxford University Press), carefully selected to avoid repetition, itemized and annotated, covering the years from January 1905 to July 1914.

The letters have been left unchanged, save for editorial notations and translation into English of those originally in foreign languages. Each volume opens with a foreword, prefatory note, list of letters, and a short but incisive introduction showing Weizmann's role against the backdrop of contemporary events in developing the Zionist idea, and ends with appropriate appendixes and indexes. A demythologized national hero and statesman emerges from the text: a man with frailties and strengths, frustrations and successes, who did battle with civil servants and rivals in science, and with Zionist ideologues and colleagues who disagreed with his brand of realistic optimism, which proposed reconciliation with European powers and the Arab world through rational search for moderate solutions. Weizmann maintained that the conflict between Israel and Palestine is a normal international conflict of two legitimate nationalistic movements, to be resolved not by any single act of diplomacy, imposed by super powers or otherwise, but by a gradual changing of attitudinal predispositions of the belligerents toward each other that would ultimately lead to a de facto peaceful coexistence. The volumes are indispensable for students of Jewish history and culture, Zionism, and the Arab-Israeli conflict; certainly, the dynamics of today's Middle East are unintelligible without a knowledge of Weizmannism.—Zev Garber, Dept. of Jewish Studies, Los Angeles Valley Coll., Van Nuys, Calif.

Xántus, John. Letters from North America.

Wayne State Univ. Pr. 1975. 196p. tr. by Theodore Schoenman & Helen Benedek Schoenman, intro. by Theodore Schoenman, illus. bibliog. $12.95. MEMOIR

Xántus (1825-1894), Hungarian political refugee and naturalist, wrote two volumes on his experiences in America. Although his contributions have long been noted in the development of 19th-Century American natural science and zoology, neither of his books has been translated previously into English. This volume (originally published in Budapest in 1857), consists of a series of letters written by Xántus to his family in Hungary between the years 1852 and 1857. The letters record his difficult early years in St. Louis and New Orleans, and the years immediately following his enlistment in the U.S. Army, which launched him on his career as a naturalist. As the Schoenmans point out, Xántus had a tendency to embellish his accounts by occasionally lifting material from other contemporary writers or by exaggerating his own exploits: nevertheless his letters are a fascinating addition to the primary source material of the early West and to the literature of immigrant experience.—Scott Wright, Coll. of St. Thomas Lib., St. Paul, Minn.

Recommended...

INFORMATION SYSTEMS HANDBOOK

Edited by Warren McFarlan and Richard L. Nolan

Forty chapters by 47 authorities, 887 pages. "Recommended for libraries with an information-systems audience."

—Library Journal

$30.00

Dow Jones-Irwin

1818 Ridge Road, Homewood, Ill. 60430

BUSINESS & ECONOMICS

Heller, Robert & Norris Willatt. The European Revenge.

Scribners. 1975. 316p. index. LC 75-27160. ISBN 0-684-14431-X. $8.95. BUS

Two British financial journalists proclaim the "decline of the American economic empire" and the rise of a new European economic order. They attribute this turnabout primarily to Europe's success in beating U.S. firms at their own multinational game. Contrasting various sectors of European industry to their American counterparts, the authors settle upon managerial methods as a critical factor weighing in the former's favor. Heller and Willatt declare that the European administrative techniques are superior, as demonstrated by the successful introduction of the "team" approach to working, flexible hours, etc. Their work, an apparent rebuttal to J. J. Servan-Schreiber's Le Défi Américain, displays a polished style but scanty macroeconomic evidence to support the notion of a significant shift in the balance of power between the two systems, and thus remains a not altogether convincing treatise. An optional purchase.—William H. Hoffman, Kansas City P.L., Mo.

Low, Albert. Zen and Creative Management.

Anchor: Doubleday. Feb. 1976. illus. bibliog. index. pap. ISBN 0-385-04669-3. $3.50. REL/BUS

Low begins his foreword with the statement "An increasing number of people in all levels of industry feel a profound sense of malaise and frustration," and then after spending an interminably long time describing how organizations operate and what is happening to people in this age of de-individuation, he presents what I assume to be the heart of his thesis: that Zen can be practiced at work. For the life of me, I can't see what he brings that is new to either his description of how organizations work or to the practice of Zen. The book is filled with clichés and cul-de-sacs ("Being is the inner-togetherness of forces that manifest in opposition"). It is doubtful whether any but the most determined reader will wade through the book.—A. J. Anderson, Sch. of Library Science, Simmons Coll., Boston

Targ, William. Indecent Pleasures: the life and times of William Targ.

Macmillan. 1975. 428p. illus. index. LC 75-15991. ISBN 0-02-619700-6. $14.95. BIOG/PUBLISHING

Targ is an eminently successful editor/publisher and luckily has his record to prove it, for this rag-bag of a book reveals few reasons why he should be. It is tasteless, lacking any sense of style or construction, and shallow in its comments about both books and people. Its strongest element is ego, as Targ parades not very bright opinions about almost everything and a battalion of names of the famous he has known. Amid all the dross, if you have the patience, Targ inserts a few useful pieces, including some hard-headed tips for young editors, a few pointers on book collecting, etc. In the main, though, this is a gossip-column book about publishing, not to be mentioned in the same breath with Hiram Haydn's felicitous book about his publishing life, Words and Faces (LJ, 8/74).—Eric Moon, President, Scarecrow Pr.

Wagenheim, Kal. How To Hedge Against Inflation by Investing in Postage Stamps.

Wyden, dist. by McKay. 1976. 160p. index. ISBN 0-88326-099-9. $8.95. HOBBIES/BUS

Wagenheim studies the profits and the pitfalls of investing in stamps. Both the philatelic neophyte and the experienced collector will benefit from his tips in stamp investment techniques as well as his analysis of specific stamps values demonstrating their dramatic rise in value over the years. He emphasizes long-term investment, although he recognizes that very high gains have been realized in only five years. Wagenheim gives particularly sound advice on the critical matter of deciding just how much to pay for a stamp. And his information on guarding against forgeries and repairs in rare stamps would be vital for any investor. Henry T. Hettger, Federal Aviation Admin., Washington, D.C.

Weil, Gordon L. The Consumer's Guide to Banks.

Stein & Day. 1975. index. LC 75-12898. ISBN 0-8128-1822-9. $7.95. BUS

This book is practically a one-of-a-kind item, which is one of its strongest points. Quoting the author: "This book contains at least seventy-five specific suggestions that should help consumers make the most of their money." The suggestions may be there, but the reader has to cut through the author's verbose, disorganized style to reach them. Still, the book does have redeeming features, such as good sections on bank credit cards, mortgages, and regulatory agencies. The text refers to three recent, geographically limited, surveys of banks (San Francisco Consumer Action, New York Consumer Assembly, and the Maine Public Interest Research Group), as well as the Consumer Union 1975 Guide to Banking Services. The interested reader might be better advised to consult these and similar surveys rather than the Weil book.—Susan S. DiMattia, Commack P.L., L.I., N.Y.

Labor

Davis, Louis E. & others. The Quality of Working Life. Vol. 1: Problems, Prospects and the State of the Art. Vol. 2: Cases and Commentary.

Free Pr. 1975. Vol. 1: 450p. LC 74-24369. Vol. 2: 387p. LC 74-24370. ea. vol: index. ISBN 0-02-907390-1. $12.95; pap. ISBN 0-02-907380-4. $4.95. SOC SCI LABOR

These volumes present background papers for an international conference on worker alienation held in 1972. Volume 1 consists of scholarly but not overly technical articles which add up to a worldwide review of knowledge in the field. Volume 2 consists of case studies of intervention, by academics or management, usually in the form of job enlargement, enrichment, the use of work teams, or worker participation in management. Although the cases are of considerable scientific importance, their main value lies in the vision they provide—i.e., that alternative forms of organization are viable. Both volumes reflect a close association between academia and management, a budding interest in involving unions, and a virtual exclusion of consideration of workers' control. They are significant not only for the particular insights they provide but also for their expression of the state of an academic and management movement at a particular point in its development. Recommended for large and special collections only.—Ken Nash, Queens Borough P.L., New York

communications

Thomas, Helen. Dateline: White House.

Macmillan. 1975. 324p. index. $10. GOVT/COMM

Thomas, UPI's top White House reporter, has covered the Presidents from Kennedy to Ford. Her first-person account of these years is chatty and anecdotal but professional in tone, an intelligent journalist's inside view of contemporary Washington personalities and political dramas. Naturally there is a chapter devoted to Martha Mitchell, whose odd-hour telephone calls to Thomas became front-page copy everywhere during the Watergate affair. In addition, there are glimpses of a wisecracking Jack Kennedy, a "hypersensitive" Jackie, a rambunctious Johnson family, and Tricia's wedding and her father's resignation. Thomas provides few new insights, but her bright intimations shine through.—Kenneth F. Kister, West Palm Beach P.L., Fla.

EDUCATION

Viscardi, Henry, Jr. The Phoenix Child: a story of love.

Eriksson, dist. by David White. 1975. 224p. LC 74-30858. ISBN 0-8397-6500-2. $7.95. BIOG/ED

This absorbing and inspiring story, written by the founder of the Human Resources School for crippled children at Long Island, concerns a deformed and unwanted black child and traces his personal history from birth to elementary school. His involvement with and adjustment to society are paralleled by the development and growth of this school designed to replace at-home instruction for exceptional children. The child's progress at school was clearly above average when a dormitory fire abruptly halted overnight care and forced the creation of a foster home situation. There is then seen a tremendous upsurge in the personal development of the child—and of the foster family—which the title implies to be a positive outgrowth of the fire. Recommended for education and psychology collections.—William A. McIntyre, Laconia State Sch. Lib., N.H.

HISTORY

Branca, Patricia. Silent Sisterhood: middle class women in the Victorian home.

Carnegie-Mellon Univ. Pr., Schenley Pk., Pittsburgh, Pa. 15212. 1975. 170p. bibliog. index. LC 75-13979. ISBN 0-915604-04-3. $12.50. SOC SCI HIST

This slim volume is a serious study of the place of the ordinary woman in the larger world of Victorian Britain, with particular emphases on family income levels, fertility rates, and homemaking practices. It is social history wedded to statistical analysis, a popular technique for contemporary historians. What Branca proves may not be revolutionary, but it is at least relatively new, and the evidence she cites relatively fresh. She concludes that, in Britain at least, "the middle-class woman's most important considerations were time and money" and that "her personal life was profoundly altered by modernization," particularly in the area of health care. The book is scholarly, its "selected bibliography" substantial, and its text larded with charts and tables. For college and research collections.—Ellen Gay Detlefsen, Graduate Sch. of Library & Information Sciences, Univ. of Pittsburgh

Brown, Ralph Adams. The Presidency of John Adams.

Univ. Pr. of Kansas. (American Presidency Series). 1975. $12. BIOG/HIST

Although this extensively researched study offers no original data, it does advance a far more positive evaluation of Adams' achievements than have other studies. Brown portrays Adams as a wise and persevering leader whose guidance resulted in avoidance of both war with France and civil strife. The author makes a solid yet not totally convincing statement for his case. The problem is that Brown's book enters a field crowded with

NEW from Harper & Row

TODAY AND TOMORROW IN AMERICA
Martin Mayer. The author of The Bankers, The Lawyers, and Madison Avenue, U.S.A. analyzes the major forces that shape today's world—and shows how individuals can help plan for the future.
LC 73-14273
ISBN 0-06-012872-0 $8.95

THE HORRORS OF THE HALF-KNOWN LIFE
Male Attitudes Toward Women and Sexuality in Nineteenth-Century America
G.J. Barker-Benfield. Fresh and startling evidence illuminates the powerful role male gynecologists played in the sexual lives of their patients.
LC 75-6327
ISBN 0-06-010224-1 $15.00

PRESIDENTIAL STYLE
Some Giants and a Pygmy in the White House
Samuel and Dorothy Rosenman; introduction by James MacGregor Burns.
A distinguished presidential advisor analyzes the styles of Teddy Roosevelt, Wilson, FDR, Truman and Harding. "Interesting and valuable."—Library Journal. LC 74-1850
ISBN 0-06-013669-3 $16.95

BODYGUARD OF LIES
Anthony Cave Brown. The extraordinary, true story of the clandestine war of deceptions that hid the secrets of D-Day from Hitler "must rank with the major historical works of this century."—Gen. S.L.A. Marshall, Chicago Sun-Times. Illustrated. LC 72-9749
ISBN 0-06-010551-8 $15.95

ON WRITING WELL
An Informal Guide to Writing Nonfiction
William Zinsser. Based on his very popular Yale University course, this is "an absolute delight."—William Morris. "Zinsser's advice is sound, engaging and to the point."—Edwin Newman.
LC 75-6364
ISBN 0-06-014798-9 $6.95

Harper & Row
1817

fine studies, e.g., Stephen Kurtz's The Presidency of John Adams (1957). Brown's positive view of Adams' leadership is diametrically opposed to Kurtz's, and his book is not likely to replace previous interpretations. James Levin, Dept. of Special Programs, C.C.N.Y.

Davidson, Marshall B. & Eds. of Horizon. The Horizon History of the World in 1776.

[illegible] illus., some color, index. LC 75-17844. ISBN 0-07-[illegible] HIST

A beautifully written and illustrated volume which is not only interesting but informative. Using numerous contemporary quotations and sketches, the authors present a picture of the world, both East and West, as it existed in 1776. The reader thus gains a broad view of life: the political power structure, the social classes, trade and commerce, the arts and sciences, and finally the Enlightenment. Highly recommended. Gordon C. Bond, Dept. of History, Auburn Univ., Ala.

De Gramont, Sanche. The Strong Brown God.

[illegible] illus. maps bibliog. index. LC 75-33298 ISBN 0-395-19782-1. $12.50. EXPLORATION, HIST

In this book de Gramont tries to do for the Niger what Alan Moorehead did for the Nile. To some extent it is the fault of the material that his volume turns out to be less absorbing. The explorers of the Nile were more interesting men and the Niger never captured the public's imagination as did the Nile. Still, de Gramont's book provides thorough accounts of European penetration into West Africa and the development of French and British control of the area, putting special emphasis on the contrasting imperial styles of the two nations. The principal figures are familiar ones – scholars, egotists, soldiers, traders, missionaries. The book is too crammed with information to read fluently. Although the author traveled through the area, he has not made use of his experiences to shape or enliven his book. Richard Cima, Glenbard East H.S., Lombard, Ill.

Duncan, Archibald A. M. Scotland: the making of the kingdom.

Barnes & Noble Harper (Edinburgh History of Scotland). 1975. 705p. maps. bibliog. index. LC 75-5386. ISBN 0-06-491830-0. $35. HIST

The four-volume "Edinburgh History of Scotland" is now complete, with the publication of Duncan's monumental contribution. While describing events from prehistory on, Duncan focuses on the Scots' achievement of unity by the end of the 13th Century. The book synthesizes recent work in such areas as archaeology and linguistics, and offers a series of hypotheses built from perceptive analysis. For the next several generations of Scottish medievalists, Duncan has defined this early period and its major problems. The massive detail and the excellent maps and genealogical tables add considerable reference value to this indispensable history. A volume well worth its price. Kenneth G. Madison, Dept. of History, Iowa State Univ., Ames

Feldberg, Michael. The Philadelphia Riots of 1844: a study in ethnic conflict.

Greenwood. (Contribs. in American History, No. 43). 1975. 209p. maps. bibliog. index. LC 75-65. ISBN 0-8371-7876-2. $14.50. SOC SCI/HIST

Feldberg emphasizes that no single factor, whether economic, political, cultural, or psychological, can be selected as the primary cause of the ethnic conflict which erupted into violence in 1844. The depression of the late 1830's tended to break down working class unity between native Protestants and Irish Catholics in Philadelphia; as the author demonstrates, deeply and passionately held religious and cultural values eventually obliterated class lines, producing group organizations and conflicts which were utilized and encouraged by special interests. Feldberg's study reflects wide knowledge of the works in the field, and there is a valuable bibliography of primary and secondary sources. As a contribution to ethnic history, the book should have appeal beyond mere local history.—Marcel Pittet, Univ. of Maine at Fort Kent Lib.

Funnell, Charles E. By the Beautiful Sea: the rise and high times of that great American resort, Atlantic City.

Knopf. 1975. 174p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-8219. ISBN 0-394-49175-0. $12.50. HIST

This well-illustrated social history of Atlantic City at the turn of the century attempts to explain the period, its participants, and their most popular resort from the perspective of modern cultural analysis. The use of primary sources—newspapers, travel brochures, and postcards—is effective, and the descriptive passages are informative and sometimes amusing. Ultimately, however, the book is neither here nor there—neither popular nor scholarly, neither narrative nor conceptual. For example, only in an infrequent note will scholars find the careful explanations they seek; yet readers wanting general historical information may well be put off by the author's esoteric style. Funnell seldom allows the objects of his study to develop on their own terms and consequently his book, which promises history as "a sacrament of compassion," becomes a hodgepodge of psychological, sociological, and literary clichés, few of which clarify Victorian Atlantic City. Carol M. Petillo, Dept. of History, Rutgers Univ., New Brunswick

Grun, Bernard. The Timetables of History: a horizontal linkage of people and events.

S. & S. 1975. 661p. index. LC 73-7704. ISBN 0-671-21682-1. $24.95. HIST

Any historian will find things to disagree with in this book. Why, for example, include the steel crossbow as a weapon in 1370, but not the first record of a gun in 1329? Leaving aside questions of what should or should not be included, what is or is not datable, however, the book serves a useful function. Ranged across each large-format double-page spread opposite a list of years are six columns: history, politics; literature, theater; religion, philosophy, learning; visual arts; music; science, technology, growth; and daily life. This juxtaposition of people and events seldom thought of together can be a mind-stretching, sometimes illuminating experience.—B.C. Hacker, formerly with Dept. of History, Iowa State Univ., Ames

CORRECTION: The author of "New England Over the Handlebars" (LJ, Nov. 1, 1975) is Michael H. Farny.

CORRECTION: Page Smith's "A New Age Now Begins" (LJ, Dec. 15, 1975) will be published in two volumes (not three) on February 16. The price is $24.

Harvey, John. Mediaeval Craftsmen.

Drake. 1975. 231p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 74-22576. ISBN 0-87749-786-9. $14.95. CRAFTS/HIST

Based on historical evidence, this description of the working crafts of the Middle Ages, particularly the later Middle Ages, shows the interrelationship of the various crafts, the purposes and power of the guilds, and the products made for the Crown, the Church, and the individual. While less is known and less has survived of the work of the weaver, the joiner, and the goldsmith, the construction crafts have left behind both obvious evidence and many contemporaneous documents. Harvey, who has written widely on the medieval period, gives nearly half of his book to those construction crafts: the technical developments, materials, and decoration. All this is written in that style often found among British authors, straightforward, unconfused, and understandable without special background. Although not well bound, recommended for the larger library.—Paul von Khrum, formerly with New York Univ. Libs.

Herodotus, T. The Establishment of the Establishment: living history.

Lance Bks., dist. by Celestial Arts. 1975. 276p. LC 75-7859. pap. $7.95. HIST

The stated purpose of this book is to "enliven the writing [of history] with sidelights, biography, romance, stories and anecdotes, all of which are true and relevant" and thus to make history entertaining. The book, which is based on the author's lecture notes for an introductory history course, covers U.S. history from Columbus to the War of 1812. Though it includes some interesting biographical and social material, on the whole it is superficial and the content and style are uneven. And to understand some of the information, the reader must have some background in history or use the book in conjunction with a basic text.—Dorothy D. Siles, Holden, Mass.

Hertz, Frederick. The German Public Mind in the Nineteenth Century: a social history of German political sentiments, aspirations and ideas.

Rowman & Littlefield. 1975. 422p. ed. by Frank Eyck. tr. by Eric Northcott. bibliog. index. LC 74-12071. ISBN 0-87471-580-6. $18.75. HIST

Hertz died in 1964, before finishing this third and final volume of his magnum opus. The book is essentially a political history of 19th-Century Germany, with the emphasis on the role of publicists in shaping the ideas underlying political action. Although this book has many virtues, including the fact that it is well written, well translated, and sensible, its tone and approach seem old-fashioned today, and the author's method no longer seems adequate for understanding either political or intellectual history. The general reader will find the book assumes considerable prior knowledge, whereas the professional historian will find the book a familiar interpretation of familiar events.—John G. Williamson, Yale Univ. Lib.

HIST

Howe, Irving with assist. of Kenneth Libo. World of Our Fathers.

Harcourt. Feb. 1976. 736p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-16342. ISBN 0-15-146353-0. $14.95.
CULTURAL STUDY/HIST

This is a massive sociocultural study of the experience of the East European Jews who migrated to America in the 1880-1924 era. Only a small fraction of the book discusses life in the old country, but in almost overwhelming detail Howe adds new material on life on the Lower East Side and offers fresh insights. The ghastly living and working conditions encountered in a ruthless society which submerged unnumbered lost souls poorly equipped for the new world, the serious dislocation of family life, the bitter clash of the first and second generations, the rise from poverty to the middle class, and the strategies of protest devised by those who found this no promised land—these are but some of the themes developed brilliantly. The book abounds in portraits of seminal figures and acute analyses of such institutions as landsmanschaft, candy store, and trade union. As Howe pilots the reader down many channels of that Yiddish culture which proved so transient, he makes us feel the fiery passions natural to a people for whom living was "so close to the blood." This contribution to immigrant and ethnic history is a loving but unsentimental masterwork to be read for both pleasure and illumination.—Milton Meltzer, New York

Huttenback, Robert A. Racism and Empire: white settlers and colored immigrants in the British self-governing colonies, 1830-1910.

Cornell Univ. Pr. Mar. 1976. 368p. ISBN 0-8014-0974-8. $17.50. HIST

This is a careful study of the evolution of British concepts of racial superiority during the Victorian era as mirrored by attitudes towards colored immigrants to the colonies of settlement. Case studies of important issues connected with such immigrants are provided for Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa. The nature and extent of racism as reflected in policy announcements from Whitehall are made manifest, and one comes from the book with a fuller appreciation of the complex factors at work in the formulation of imperial policy during the 19th Century. Strongly recommended for academic libraries, especially those whose collections emphasize British imperial history.—James A. Casada, Dept. of History, Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S.C.

Morton, Harry A. The Wind Commands: sailors and sailing ships in the Pacific.

Wesleyan Univ. Pr. & Univ. of British Columbia Pr. 1975. 498p. drawings by Don Hermansen & Paul Dwillies from original drawings & research by Peggy Morton. bibliog. index. LC 75-21906. ISBN 0-8195-4089-7. $29.95. HIST

This book cannot be faulted. Only nitpickers will object to slight, relatively unimportant omissions. By quoting from the journals, diaries and reports of 15th-Century Italian merchants to 20th-Century yachtsmen, Morton has produced one of the most flavorsome and informative references in print; it is excellent in scope, content, and organization. The author's enthusiasm, spirited and eloquent writing, together with the pungent quotes from numerous sources, make the book much more than a technical and descriptive discussion of the problems of sailing and surviving in the Pacific. Some topics deftly discussed are junks and galleys, whalers and clippers, groundings and sea cooks, mutinies and women. Accompanying the intelligently illustrated, tightly integrated text, are notes, a glossary, and a splendid bibliography. Unreservedly recommended.—James Tazelaar, U.S. Army Engineer Topographic Labs, Fort Belvoir, Va.

Page, Martin. The Lost Pleasures of the Great Trains.

Morrow. 1975. 238p. illus., some color. index. LC 75-13623. ISBN 0-688-02951-5. $16.95. HIST

In an attempt to recreate the extraordinary grand era of luxurious international rail travel between 1900 and World War I, Page offers a popularly written text with many travelers' accounts and an appealing assortment of period illustrations (16 in color and 200 black and white). The anecdotal social history, the touch of biography, and the brief history of the European sleeping car should interest the armchair traveler; but the work will have little appeal for most rail enthusiasts. The world-wide scope is too broad, and the result is a combination scrapbook and collection of anecdotes.—William C. Robinson, Grad. Sch. of Library Science, Univ. of Tennessee, Knoxville

Smith, Jane F. & Robert M. Kvasnicka, eds. Indian-White Relations: a persistent paradox.

Howard Univ. Pr. (National Archives Conference, Vol. 10). 1976. ISBN 0-88258-055-8. $15.
SOC SCI/HIST

This volume of conference papers delivered in June, 1972 successfully demonstrates the importance of the National Archives' holdings to the study of Indian-White relations, as well as the present status of such historical research and writing. Most of the articles, which treat topics including assimilation, reservations, and warfare, were based on research conducted in the collections of the National Archives. Some of the material is dated because of recent developments, but altogether this is a valuable book which belongs in every Indian collection, large or small.—Leo E. Oliva, Dept. of History, Fort Hays Kansas State Coll., Hays

Terraine, John. The Mighty Continent: a view of Europe in the twentieth century.

Doubleday. 1975. 352p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 73-20533. ISBN 0-385-04680-4. $14.95. HIST

This is another "television history," designed to complement a BBC series assembled by military historian Terraine and not yet scheduled for broadcast here. The book, illustrated with 200 photographs and 19 paintings in color, depicts the Europe of 1900 as a proud continent, dominating the world politically, economically, and culturally. Terraine's lively and highly opinionated narrative touches almost all bases in describing Eu-

Highly Recommended Columbia Titles

SCOTT NEARING
Apostle of American Radicalism

Stephen J. Whitfield. "While highlighting Nearing's 1915 expulsion from the University of Pennsylvania and his trial for sedition during World War I, this study follows his whole career through the 1920's Communist years and those after 1932, when he left public life for writing and subsistence farming. Because the life of this social prophet includes several new modish ideas on ecology and diet, as well as income distribution, he would be easy to glamorize; but Whitfield has given a balanced view of Nearing as thinker and activist...a far sounder account of his career than Nearing's own autobiography."
—Library Journal

Illustrated.
LC 74-10641 $10.95

ATTORNEY FOR THE SITUATION

Leland Hazard. "In Kansas City, Hazard's boyhood home and base for his early legal career, he participated in initial attempts to bring down the Pendergast machine. At age 40 he moved to Pittsburgh and for the next 20 years served as general counsel, vice president and director of Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company. He was active in the planning and implementation of the famed 'Renaissance', helped initiate the city's (and nation's) first educational TV station, and, in his retirement years, taught humanities to businessmen. These corporate and civil accomplishments are retold straightforwardly with quiet (and justifiable) pride."—Library Journal

LC 74-83549 $9.95

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY PRESS

Address for orders:
136 South Broadway
Irvington, New York 10533

rope's subsequent decline. The text moves from country to country, jumping lightly from wars to artists to revolutions, and finally arriving at 1970 with Europe struggling for a new unity. Both in text and illustrations this volume falls short of Alistair Cooke's America and Kenneth Clark's Civilisation, but it's agreeable browsing. Nancy C. Cridland, Indiana Univ. Libs., Bloomington

Terrell, John Upton. The Plains Apache.
[illegible] ISBN [illegible] HIST

Devoted entirely to the Plains Apaches, this book is far from a complete story. There is neither a clear thesis nor a conclusion; important studies are missing from the bibliography; and scholarly controversies (such as the true identity of the Padoucas) are not considered. Also, it seems unnecessary to devote one fourth of the contents to Spanish exploration and conquest. The motive behind this book is admirable, and the difficulties in compiling the entire story are many. But one finishes this volume without really understanding the Plains Apaches or their culture. Leo E. Oliva, Dept. of History, Fort Hays Kansas State Coll., Hays

Tignor, Robert L. The Colonial Transformation of Kenya: the Kamba, Kikuyu, and Maasai from 1900–1939.
Princeton Univ. Pr. Apr. 1976. 363p. illus. bibliog. index. $25. HIST

Tignor makes an impressive contribution to studies of the African experience under European colonialism with this detailed and well-balanced study of an important region. Perhaps nowhere in black Africa was the impact of European rule more sudden and dramatic than in Central Kenya. Tignor focuses on the three dominant societies of Highland Kenya. His central question is how and why these people reacted differently to the colonial experience, from the formative era through World War II. He takes the vantage points of both colonizers and colonized, and covers agriculture, labor, education, religion, and politics. The result is a rich and persuasive work, worthy of a place in all serious Africana collections. R. Kent Rasmussen, Dept. of History, UCLA

Tihany, Leslie Charles. The Peoples of Middle Europe: from the earliest times to the age of the world wars.
Rutgers Univ. Pr. Feb. 1976. 280p. photogs. maps index. $[illegible] HIST

With so much attention currently focused on the developing world, it is refreshing to find a concise, well-written, and generally excellent volume on Middle Europe. The book draws its strength from the author's command of the subject and the currency of his research and documentation. Another plus is his strong enthusiasm in dealing with this fascinating area, historically one of war and intrigue. Tihany deftly displays the political, religious, ethnic, and cultural forces leading up to the modern period. He thus provides the background necessary for understanding the importance and complexities of the Baltic-Adriatic line as a Soviet buffer zone. A first-rate popular treatment. R. F. Delaney, U.S. Naval War Coll., Newport, R.I.

Tilton, Timothy Alan. Nazism, Neo-Nazism, and the Peasantry.
Indiana Univ. Pr. 1975. (Social Science). 204p. maps. bibliog. index. LC 75-2444. ISBN 0-253-38431-1. $8.95. HIST

Seeking to explain both the origins of right-radical movements and the impact of modernization on the appeal of such movements, Tilton focuses on Schleswig-Holstein, the only German region where the Nazis gained an absolute majority before 1933. He first examines the pre-1933 situation in detail and concludes, as have others, that the numerous marginal farmers of the area formed the bedrock of Nazi support. He then considers the postwar situation, attributing the Neo-Nazi National Democratic party's failure in Schleswig-Holstein to the economic and social alternatives now open to the local peasantry. Tilton finds the area, and others like it, unlikely to support future rural fascist movements. To my mind, he pushes this last conclusion too far. Although the area has been much studied, it is useful to have the results combined in this competent study. For academic and larger public libraries. John G. Williamson, Yale Univ. Lib.

Travel, Exploration & Adventure

Caen, Herb. One Man's San Francisco.
Doubleday. Feb. 1976. illus. LC 75-14808. ISBN 0-385-01427-9. $6.95. TRAV

Between scenes of skiing at Gstaad and reminiscing in Caen (France), a most ethereal city is illuminated against a background of fog and facetiae. The venerable Herb Caen, landmark of the San Francisco Chronicle for over 30 years, has amalgamated his three-dot journalism into a tome dedicated to the City on its 200th birthday. Old names and old places, existing now only in fading photographs and memories, conjure up the essence of the past, while the new post-hippie Manhattanization is pejoratively eschewed. Don't expect a history, social nor political. Here are Caen's descriptions and . . . Caen's views . . . slyly entertaining. Fraiser McConnell, California Coll. of Arts and Crafts Lib., Oakland

Home Economics

Cookery

Carlton, Jan McBride. The Old-Fashioned Cookbook.
Holt. 1975. 367p. illus. index. LC 75-5471. ISBN 0-03-014621-6. $12.95.

Caruba, Rebecca. Colonial Cooking: a treasury of colonial recipes.
Hammond. 1975. 128p. illus. index. LC 75-13656. ISBN 0-8437-3226-1. $6.95; pap. ISBN 0-8437-[illegible] $2.95

Elverson, Virginia T. & Mary Ann McLanahan. A Cooking Legacy.
Walker. 1975. 180p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-17479. ISBN 0-8027-0511-7. $10. COOKERY

These three books, similar in intention, vary widely in scope and achievement, but all are attractively illustrated. Colonial Cooking contains perhaps 150 recipes calling for only "natural foods." It is arranged according to kind of dish, each chapter introduced by a short discussion of foods available in Colonial times and the settlers' adaptations of them. Only one or two of the dishes requires more than an hour's preparation. Most of the recipes can be found elsewhere, however.

A Cooking Legacy contains some 200 recipes. It is arranged by kind of meal, with descriptions of the meals as prepared by the early settlers, and includes many unusual recipes, adapted for use by the modern cook. Besides the usual index, this book contains a bibliography and a glossary. A very attractive book.

Most ambitious of the three is the Old-Fashioned Cookbook; the recipes, collected from all 50 States, include local specialty dishes taken from old "receipt" books or handed down by word of mouth, and some brought to this country by immigrants. These recipes too have been adapted to take advantage of time-saving techniques while retaining authenticity and flavor. It is a much more comprehensive book than either of the others, and worth the higher price.—Frances Seamster, Kern County Lib., Bakersfield

Claiborne, Craig. Craig Claiborne's Favorites from The New York Times.
Quadrangle, dist. by Harper 1975. 371p. illus. index. LC 75-10599. ISBN 0-8129-0584-9. $10. COOKERY

The title notwithstanding, the food editor of The New York Times has collected only his 1974 columns, not his all-time favorites. He includes about 250 recipes, with accompanying observations about his travels on assignment, the cooks he interviewed, and some restaurants abroad in which he ate during the year. Claiborne is usually interesting and his recipe writing is a model of the genre—clear, precise and easy to follow. But a single year's output inevitably has its ups and downs and the book's chronological arrangement makes it inconvenient to use. Not a must, but those who like to curl up with a good cookbook and who don't regularly read The Times should enjoy this.—Ruth Diebold, Finkelstein Memorial Lib., Spring Valley, N.Y.

Larousse Treasury of Country Cooking.
Crown. 1975. 511p. color illus. index. LC 75-4175. ISBN 0-517-52101-6. $14.95. COOKERY

This basic yet unique cookbook contains 450 recipes from all parts of the world, with the majority originating in France. The recipes are adapted for American cooks and include preparation time, cooking time, and step-by-step directions. Small line drawings accompanying each recipe and full-page photographs enhance the text. The inexpensive to the grand are represented through British cottage pie and French steak with Bordelaise sauce. Salads are omitted, but there are a proportionately large number of recipes for custards and soufflés. Most of the recipes serve from four to six, but a Brittany broiled lobster for two and a Danish Christmas pickled herring for 16 are also included. A chapter on fundamentals defines a variety of culinary terms and gives recipes for basic sauces and stocks. An excellent cookbook for all culinary collections.—Christine Bulson, SUNY at Oneonta Lib.

York, Jo Ann with Jerome Agel & Eugene Boe. How I Feed My Family on $16 a Week (and have meat, fish or poultry on the table every night).
Coward. 1975. 159p. LC 75-10463. ISBN 0-698-10691-4. $5.95. COOKERY
While few of us could follow York's money-saving principles exactly, everyone can benefit from studying her rules for planning, shopping, and preparing meals. To feed her family of 4, this suburban Washington housewife does most of her cooking from scratch, pares waste to a minimum, and uses only foods high in nutritional value and economical to buy. (Note that portions are small and that certain items are not part of the plan.) Four weeks' sample menus are given, along with about 100 quick and easy recipes. Dinners are varied and interesting, but the breakfasts and lunches are repetitive. Unlimited snacks consist mainly of fresh fruits and vegetables. The only beverages allowed are coffee for breakfast, some milk, and iced tea for both lunch and dinner.—Terry M. Cole, formerly with Carthage Central H.S. Lib., N.Y.

Literature

Ahl, Frederick M. Lucan: an introduction.
Cornell Univ. Pr. (Studies in Classical Philology, Vol. 39). 1976. 416p. LC 75-16926. ISBN 0-8014-0837-7. $19.50. LIT
Ahl's study of Lucan is not only an excellent and appreciative introduction to that poet's work, but also an important contribution to literary and intellectual history. The role of Lucan's Pharsalia in the Latin poetic tradition is persuasively interpreted as a culmination and turning point, due to the poet's skill in adapting the epic genre so that history becomes a critique of the contemporary political situation. Ahl's perceptive and sympathetic analysis of the poem is marked by a clear style, full annotation, and deft translations of all Latin quotations. Intended for specialist and general reader alike; both will benefit.—Elizabeth A. Fisher, Dept. of Classics, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis

Artemidorus Daldianus. The Interpretation of Dreams: Oneirocritica.
Noyes. (Classical Studies). 1975. 259p. tr. & comm. by Robert J. White. bibliog. index. LC 74-81537. ISBN 0-8155-5029-4. $15. LIT
White's translation makes available to English readers the complete text of this intriguing work of the Second Century A.D. The translation is careful and readable, occasionally supplemented with Greek terms of special significance. A brief introduction and copious notes are intended to supply for the general reader a historical context and contemporary literary parallels and allusions. In these sections White relies heavily upon secondary sources and upon Pack's edition of the Greek text (Teubner, 1963); unfortunately, he does not furnish section numbers for those wishing to locate passages in the Greek text. Nevertheless, a useful and welcome work.—Elizabeth A. Fisher, Dept. of Classics, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis

Bassoff, Bruce. Toward Loving: the poetics of the novel and the practice of Henry Green.
Univ. of South Carolina Pr. 1975. 179p. index. LC 75-22071. ISBN 0-87249-324-5. $9.95. LIT
A new book on the too-often neglected modern English novelist Henry Green is certainly welcome news. This critical interpretation discusses each of the novels separately, culminating in a chapter on what Bassoff considers to be the best of Green's novels, Loving. But what makes this book even more useful is the way Bassoff expands each chapter to include discussions of critical problems and approaches to the novel that each of Green's novels exemplifies. As a result, this book will be especially interesting to readers concerned with the aesthetics of the novel. Although Bassoff overestimates the quality and scope of Green's novels, his interpretations are always scholarly and sound and his discussions of other novels and theories of fiction are always provocative. This book will be especially useful to large collections and college libraries.—John Louis DiGaetani, Dept. of English Univ. of New Orleans

Bergon, Frank. Stephen Crane's Artistry.
Columbia Univ. Pr. 1975. 224p. ISBN 0-231-03905-0. $10. LIT
With references to published critical opinion and relying on his own close reading of Crane's work, Bergon delineates the strengths and weaknesses that characterize Crane's art. In separate chapters on Crane's prose style, imagination, sense of story, and the West as a subject, Bergon examines Crane's struggle to give form to his uncommon perceptions of reality. In the concluding chapter the author considers the self-imposed limits of Crane's artistry and offers a valid perspective on his work as a whole. This readable and thoughtful study is recommended for literature collections in academic and public libraries.—Mary E. Thatcher, Univ. of Connecticut Lib., Storrs

Brodhead, Richard H. Hawthorne, Melville, and the Novel.
Univ. of Chicago Pr. Feb. 1976. 240p. index. LC 75-5071. ISBN 0-226-07522-2. $11.50. LIT
In this exposition of Brodhead's 1972 Ph.D. dissertation at Yale, The Scarlet Letter, The House of the Seven Gables, The Blithedale Romance, Moby-Dick, and Pierre, all published between 1850 and 1852, are presented as the results of Hawthorne and Melville's intense experimentation with the genre of the novel during this period. Both writers, in attempting to write longer works, incorporate elements of the romance, and experiment with uses of narrators, the role of the reader, multiple plots, and shorter tales within the larger structure. Unlike their European contemporaries, who created many characters, or fictional lives, Hawthorne and Melville created in these novels many ways of perceiving life through works of fiction. Subject collections with critical analyses of the novels examined will be strengthened by this study of Hawthorne and Melville's self-conscious development of narrative form.—James A. Gollata, Mount Senario Coll. Lib., Ladysmith, Wis.

"A modern-day supplement to Marco Polo's Travels"*

The Early Civilization of China

By YONG YAP & ARTHUR COTTERELL

"An amply researched British treatment—generously assisted by color and black-and-white plates of artifacts, silk and scroll paintings, ceramics, and sculpture, and by dynastic maps—traces the cultural and historic evolution of China from prehistoric and feudal eras to the Mongol conquest....Recommended for use with better students."—The Booklist.* Chronology. Notes. Bibliography. 7⅜" x 9¾". Illustrated with 100 monochromes and 16 full-color plates. YA. $15.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

LJ LIBRARY JOURNAL

More Information for Librarians Than You'll Find in All Other Library Magazines Combined

Use coupon below to order your subscription today.

LIBRARY JOURNAL
1180 AVENUE OF THE AMERICAS
NEW YORK, N.Y. 10036

YES, please enter a one year subscription to LIBRARY JOURNAL at $19.00 as indicated:
(LJ is issued twice a month, September through June, monthly in July and August. For subscriptions in Canada, Pan American Postal Union, and Spain, add $2.00 postage. Elsewhere, add $3.00.)

☐ Payment enclosed ☐ Bill me
☐ Bill school, library, or org.

Name_____
Address_____
City_____
State_____ Zip_____
Title or position_____
Kind of library (public, college, special, etc.)_____

Published by R. R. BOWKER COMPANY
A Xerox Education Company
XEROX® is a trademark of XEROX CORPORATION 2/1/76

Murphy, Joan V. The Dark Angel: Gothic elements in Shelley's works.

Bucknell Univ. Pr. 1975. 199p. bibliog. index. LC [illegible] ISBN [illegible] LIT

Scholars have long noted that Shelley's juvenilia fall within the Gothic tradition. Extending this well-known critical position, Murphy attempts to show how Shelley's more obvious and sensational uses of Gothic elements, in such works as Zastrozzi and St. Irvyne, were transformed into precise instruments of psychological and moral exploration, in later works from Alastor to Prometheus Unbound. His analysis of The Cenci, for example, reveals the calamitous implications of a Gothic sensibility that leads to moral casuistry. To demonstrate this continuity of Shelley's consciousness one nurtured on Gothicism—Murphy occasionally forces the poetry to fit his thesis, but his general notion is capably argued and well worth considering.—F. P. Riga, Dept. of English, Canisius Coll., Buffalo, N.Y.

Olson, Elder. "On Value Judgments in the Arts" and Other Essays.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. Feb. 1976. 203p. index. LC [illegible] 9057. ISBN 0-226-62895-7. $16. LIT

With the exception of the title essay, most of the 21 pieces here should be familiar to the reader interested in literary criticism. ("On Value Judgments . . . ," published in 1974 to help launch the journal Critical Inquiry, is itself a less Aristotelian retracing of the author's 1966 "Dialectical Foundations. . . .") This familiarity is a tribute to the influence of the "Chicago critics" and to Olson's stature among them. Olson's age suggests that these essays may be among Chicago's valedictory gifts to a distinguished scholar; and together with his longer critical expositions, Tragedy and the Theory of Drama (Wayne State Univ. Pr., 1961) and Theory of Comedy (Indiana Univ. Pr., 1968), they make up the gratifying record of a noteworthy career.—G. A. Masterton, Wayne State Univ. Lib., Detroit

Orsini, G. N. Giordano. Organic Unity in Ancient and Later Poetics: the philosophical foundations of literary criticism.

Southern Illinois Univ. Pr. 1975. 120p. bibliog. index. LC 75-17927. ISBN 0-8093-0728-6. $8.95 LIT

In this short work Orsini explores the development of the concept of organic unity as a vehicle for literary criticism. He is concerned that not enough attention has been paid by modern critics to the "organic" whole of a work of literature; rather, they have focused their attention on parts (e.g., plot, subject, metrics, style, etc.) which, taken together, comprise the piece. Most of the book is a discussion of the development of this "organic" idea from the pre-Socratic philosophers through Plato to Aristotle, with a few references to later authors. Although the book shines a bit of light on early literary criticism, it is so pedantic and scholarly that it is unlikely to find an audience anywhere but at the largest academic libraries.—John D. Campbell, Occidental Coll. Lib., Los Angeles

Paton, Alan. Knocking On the Door.

Scribners. 1976. 296p. shorter writings sel. & ed by Colin Gardner. $10 LIT

In assembling these pieces, many previously unpublished, the editor has done an important service to scholarship. It will fascinate students of Paton's work to watch him grow, over a span of 50 years, from the aspiring, imitative poems and essays published in his college magazine through the writings on penal reform in the 1930's and 40's to the reflective essays on South Africa's social problems of the 1960's and 1970's. Not every piece is brilliant, but the honest, sensitive concern for humanity—in pieces like "To a Small Boy who Died at Diepkoof Reformatory" and "Bulstrode's Daughter" raises the book above mere scholarly utility to a moving reading experience. For literature collections.—George J. Soete, Arizona State Univ. Lib., Tempe, Ariz.

Rowe, John Carlos. Henry Adams and Henry James: the emergence of a modern consciousness.

Cornell Univ. Pr. Feb. 1976. 272p. bibliog. index. LC 75-16928. ISBN 0-8014-0954-3. $12.50. LIT

Adams and James "belong in that loose group of philosophers, artists, and thinkers who recognized the need for new methods to deal with an increasingly pluralistic world." For both of them "the expression of man's desire for unity is what ultimately describes both his art and history." The tentative affirmation that the two writers express is found also in the late writings of William James; for that reason this book is a fit companion for Richard A. Hocks's study of Henry and William James, Henry James and Pragmatistic Thought (LJ 12/15/74). Hocks's book is hard to read, and Rowe's is exasperatingly hard. Taken together, however, they are important in James studies in that they show the breadth and depth of the relationship of one of America's major novelists to one of the most interesting periods in America's social and intellectual history.—David K. Kirby, Dept. of English, Florida State Univ., Tallahassee

Scheick, William J. The Writings of Jonathan Edwards: time, motif, and style.

Texas A & M Univ. Pr., College Station, Texas 77843. 1975. 162p. index. LC 75-18689. ISBN 0-89096-004-6. $8.50. REL/LIT

The question of personal conversion to God's elect became in Edwards' sermons a "spiritual autobiography." Scheick examines the minister's style as reflective of his theology (while de-emphasizing the importance of Lockean influence) by illustrating Edwards' distrust of speculative knowledge and his concentration on the illumination of the inner self via God's grace. His moderate position and traditional beliefs as echoed in his style through images such as the Puritan family as a social, religious, and political nucleus contributed to his pastoral failure after the "Great Awakening" of the 1740's. Scheick's specialized study is productive, although unnecessarily repetitious, considering its brevity.—James A. Gollata, Mount Senario Coll. Lib., Ladysmith, Wis.

Schneider, Elisabeth. T. S. Eliot: the pattern in the carpet.

Univ. of California Pr. 1975. 226p. index. LC 73-90655. ISBN 0-520-02648-9. $10. LIT

Do we need another book on Eliot's poetry? The answer has to be yes when it is as good an example of interpretive teaching criticism as this one. Out of a long career, Schneider has fashioned a reading that is sensible, informed, objective, and yet personal. From before Prufrock to Little Gidding, she traces the recurring images that yield poetry and meaning. She makes use of, sometimes reacts against what other critics of Eliot have offered. The main thread that connects all of the patterns is probably her reading of Eliot's changing attitude toward change. The book can be highly recommended to anyone who wants help in reading Eliot. Scholars should find it both a needed correction to overspeculative interpretations and a source of useful insights.—Arthur E. Jones Jr., Drew Univ. Lib., Madison, N.J.

Sowards, J. Kelley. Desiderius Erasmus.

Twayne. (World Authors: the Netherlands). 1975. 151p. bibliog. index. LC 74-23864. ISBN 0-8057-2302-1. $7.95. BIOG/LIT

This concise yet graceful sketch of Erasmus as a writer must, by its brevity, neglect much historical background and development; but the general reader will gain from it a valuable appreciation of the themes and impact of Erasmus' works. A proficient scholar in classical and Christian literature, Erasmus was also an effective satirist and polemicist. His advocacy of piety, peace, and intelligence stimulated the Renaissance and Reformation. Although lacking the force of a full biography and offering little to specialists, this book is fully effective as a literary biography, and is recommended to all as yet unacquainted

At last—the key to understanding "Don Juan"

Seeing Castaneda

REACTIONS TO THE "DON JUAN" WRITINGS OF CARLOS CASTANEDA

Edited by DANIEL NOEL. "This wide range of critical essays is a quite successful attempt to explicate the major themes in Castaneda's tetralogy. The essays, for the most part, approach Castaneda's works from a philosophic position . . . [including] favorable and unfavorable reviews . . . [and] a penetrating analysis of the thoughts of Don Juan and the ramifications on established philosophic, scientific, and theological systems."—Library Journal. "Readers will find some answers and a lot of lively opinions."—Publishers Weekly. YA. $7.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

with the "prince of the humanists."—David O. McNeil, Dept. of History, California State Univ., San Jose

Wadlington, Warwick. The Confidence Game in American Literature.
Princeton Univ. Pr. 1975. 331p. bibliog. index. LC 75-3480. ISBN 0-691-06294-3. $13.50. LIT
In one of the few concise statements in this book, Wadlington asserts that "the idea of a confidence game is central to the world view and craft of Melville, Twain, and West," the writers he has chosen to illustrate his thesis. Just what that thesis is is shrouded in such phrases as "amplifying contextualizations" piled one upon another. Whether the focus of the study is on the figure of the trickster/confidence man, or the relationship between artist and audience, or the 100-year period covered by the works of these three authors, is simply not clear. Wadlington's selected bibliography suggests his attraction to similar themes in the fields of sociology, psychology, and anthropology. But his interpretation is unreadable.—Suzanne Sutton, Bloomfield Township P.L., Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

Watson, Burton, tr. Japanese Literature in Chinese. Vol. 1: Poetry and Prose in Chinese by Japanese Writers of the Early Period.
Columbia Univ. Pr. (Asian Studies). 1976. 132p. ISBN 0-231-03986-7. $9. LIT
This is the first of a two-volume set that will make available translations of significant selections of Japanese literature written in Chinese. Volume 1 is concerned with the literature of the 7th through the 12th centuries, and almost half of it is given over to the poetry and prose of Sugawara no Michizane, the Heian bureaucrat, courtier, and scholar-thinker whose ideas have left a permanent mark on Japanese thinking. This body of literature was produced during the period of regional hegemony exerted by Sui and T'ang China and represents an extraordinary effort by the Japanese to participate, both politically and culturally, in the larger sphere of Sinitic influence while maintaining their own cultural identity. Although this body of literature might appear to be of special appeal, it is illustrative of a pattern of reaction to outside cultural influence that the Japanese were to repeat in the 19th Century. For this reason and because of its intrinsic interest, this volume will find a useful place in both general and regional area collections.—Warren Collins, Time-Life Educational Systems, Ltd., Tokyo

MUSIC

Campbell, Margaret. Dolmetsch: the man and his work.
Univ. of Washington Pr. 1975. 318p. photogs., bibliog. index. LC 75-4558. ISBN 0-295-95416-7. $14.95. BIOG/MUSIC
Arnold Dolmetsch (1858-1940) is not a name which might readily be known to all concert goers, but he was one of the central figures in practical musicology, having revived interest in the music of the Renaissance and Baroque eras during the time the Romantic movement was nearing its flamboyant coda. His efforts included performance practice and performance, instrument renovation and construction, research and editing. He was to a large extent the father of the many collegia musica cloistered today on the campuses of the U.S. and in Europe. If that distinction sounds dreary to the casual reader of music books, Campbell's forthright and witty treatment of her lively subject compels one to read this fascinating book at one sitting. Her biography is candid and honest, a quality not often found in those publications which include cooperation from the subject's heirs. There is a great deal to be found here on British life and society, and a tremendous amount on the activities of Dolmetsch. The photographs, art works on their own, are splendidly reproduced.—Dominique-René de Lerma, Dept. of Music, Morgan State Univ., Baltimore

Seltzer, George. The Professional Symphony Orchestra in the United States.
Scarecrow. 1975. 486p. bibliog. index. LC 75-19271. ISBN 0-8108-0855-2. $17.50. MUSIC
This anthology brings together 89 selections (with brief introductions by the editor) dealing with various facets of the symphony orchestra. There are chapters on the orchestra's European beginnings and its development in the United States, on the conductor as the "ultimate autocrat in a democratic world," the orchestra musicians, the audience, and on "music the orchestra makes" and prospects for the future. The selections, from Berlioz and Adam Carse right up to yesterday's newspaper, are generally excellent. The chapter on the orchestra's development in America is somewhat spotty: Cleveland and California are well represented, but New York, Boston, and Philadelphia are neglected, although at least New York could have been covered by an excerpt from Howard Shanet's recent Philharmonic (LJ 7/74).—William Shank, CUNY Graduate Sch. Lib.

Philosophy

Ackermann, Robert John. The Philosophy of Sir Karl Popper.
Univ. of Massachusetts Pr. Apr. 1976. 300p. LC 75-32480. ISBN 0-87023-198-7. $15. PHIL
This acute and scholarly discussion of Popper's philosophy presupposes that the reader is familiar not only with Popper's own views, but with the philosophical background thereto, and especially with the work of R. Carnap on verifiability and inductive inference, of T. Kuhn on relativism and scientific knowledge, and of P. Feyerabend and I. Lakatos on scientific methodology. Ackermann discusses Popper's views on these subjects and also on probability, indeterminism, quantum theory, the social sciences, and democracy. Positions are stated clearly and criticized incisively and fairly. The book is both an important critical study and an insightful contribution to the philosophy of science.—Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philosophy, York Coll., CUNY

Denbigh, K. G. An Inventive Universe.
Braziller. 1975. 219p. illus. index. LC 75-13561. $8.95. PHIL
A highly readable and often elegant de-

For music library or suitcase...

THE MUSIC GUIDE TO GREAT BRITAIN
Elaine Brody and Claire Brook
If it has to do with music in England, Scotland, Wales or Ireland, it's included here—opera houses, concert halls, musical landmarks, music and record dealers, festivals—whatever the music lover needs to know. $10.00

THE MUSIC GUIDE TO AUSTRIA AND GERMANY
Elaine Brody and Claire Brook
A complete record of everything having to do with music in two of Europe's most musical countries, including festivals, landmarks, opera houses, concert halls, libraries and schools. $10.00

DODD MEAD

fense (by a physicist specializing in thermodynamics) of the view that, though there are no forces in nature other than those of physics, there are nonetheless natural processes that are "inventive" in that they result in novel structures. Denbigh discusses thermodynamic and other physical processes that, according to him, support the ideas that some physical laws govern processes that are not reversible in time; and that determinism (regarded as universal and necessary causation) is unsupported by scientific or philosophical results. Life and other inventive processes are seen as due to the operation of chance together with factors Denbigh calls "selection" and "amplification." Denbigh uses the resources of recent philosophy as well as of physics, always in a way readily accessible to the general reader. The argument is largely convincing; in places, however, the influence of the modified positivism of Sir Karl Popper seems to result in some conflation of questions of evidence and truth, particularly regarding the concepts of determinism and novelty. David M. Rosenthal, Dept. of Philosophy, Lehmann Coll., CUNY

Hacking, Ian. Why Does Language Matter to Philosophy?

Cambridge Univ. Pr. 1975. 200p. bibliog. index. LC 75-19432. ISBN 0-521-20923-4. $13.95; pap. ISBN [illegible] $4.95. PHIL

Denying that any one answer to the title question is valid over the whole domain of Western philosophy, Hacking traces answers from the 17th Century (when so-called mental discourse allegedly expressed the connections between ideas, which were thought to be the object of philosophizing and to link the Cartesian ego to the external world), to our own day, when meanings and then sentences replaced ideas as the interface between the knowing subject and what is known. Indeed, sentences are even said to constitute knowledge without a knowing subject (pace Popper). Hacking discusses Hobbes, Descartes, Berkeley, N. Chomsky, L. Wittgenstein, A. J. Ayer, N. Malcolm, P. Feyerabend, D. Davidson, N. Goodman, A. Tarski, W. V. Quine, and others. A good survey for students. Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philosophy, York Coll., CUNY

Harris, R. Baine, ed. Authority: a philosophical analysis.

Univ. of Alabama Pr. Feb. 1976. LC 75-11666. ISBN 0-8173-6620-2. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-8173-6611-0. $3.50.

Nisbet, Robert. Twilight of Authority.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1975. 287p. LC 75-7357. ISBN 0-19-501942-3. $10.95. PHIL

Both books under review attempt to define, analyse, or describe the causes of the decline of the legitimacy of traditional authority since World War II and offer suggestions for its renewal.

Nisbet's book is the more ambitious and the less successful of the two. In a long but loosely argued jeremiad he notes the various causes and signs of political decay in our age—such as the rise of bureaucracy and state power, the growth of criminal activity, the collapse of hierarchy in religious institutions, the absence of heroes, the receding position of universities in our intellectual life. As the root cause of all this decay Nisbet sees the rise of "military society" with its attendant vices of equalitarianism, rapid social change, revolution, and hasty transformation or decay of moral values. To restore authority, he would encourage localism, voluntary groups, and a new, pluralistic concept of citizenship. Any attempt to reduce Nisbet's argument to a logical form reveals its shapelessness. The basic arguments have been put more persuasively by others (Arendt, Dicey, Hayek, Hewitt) and to them the reader should turn.

In Harris' book the level of sustained argument is much higher. The essays by Adams and Jenkins attempt to show the philosophical basis of varying views on authority held by different political groups. Martin's essay "On the Justification of Political Authority" raises the issue of obligation in an acute manner. Later essays are of varying quality, but De George's on "The Nature and Function of Epistemic Authority" and Robison's on "The Functions and Limits of Legal Authority" both clarify the topics concerned. The value of De George's bibliography is lowered by an absence of annotation; however, it is lengthy and reasonably comprehensive. A commendable attempt is made by the various authors to consider each others' arguments, and for this the editor should be congratulated. R. A. Fenn, Dept. of Political Economy, Univ. of Toronto, Canada

Johnson, James Turner. Ideology, Reason, and the Limitation of War: religious and secular concepts 1200-1740.

Princeton Univ. Pr. 1975. 291p. bibliog. index. LC 74-25615. ISBN 0-691-07209-4. $12.50 PHIL

This study shows that a unified classical doctrine of just war (just cause, legitimate authority to wage it, right intention, necessary restraints in waging it) was elaborated with all its elements only towards the end of the Middle Ages, as a synthesis of religious and secular sources in Christendom: canon law, scholastic theology, the chivalric code, and ius gentium. In an epilogue, Johnson deals with the limitations of war in 20th-Century doctrine and international law, and especially with the ambiguity of wording and interpretations of the U.N. Charter. The broad scope of the author's research and his penetrating analyses are impressive. This is an excellent book of more than historical interest, for serious students of international morality, law, and relations. Victor Antolin, Dept. of Philosophy, Loyola Coll., Baltimore

Makkreel, Rudolf A. Dilthey: philosopher of the human studies.

Princeton Univ. Pr. 1975. 456p. bibliog. index. LC 74-25620. ISBN 0-691-07200-0. $20; pap. ISBN 0-691-10032-2. $9.50. PHIL

Dilthey approaches history as a human product that is made intelligible through a descriptive psychology of the individual, the most typical model for analysis being that of the poet. That descriptive psychology, however, does not reduce itself to subjectivity but retains an element of objectivity that allows historical events to be considered in terms of their "human" significance. There is a definite movement in Dilthey's thought from the earlier works to those of his later years. The emphasis on the individual is seen to move to an emphasis on intersubjectivity, and finally to a hermeneutics that interprets the meanings of historical data. Makkreel concludes that Dilthey's earlier and later writings are fundamentally consistent, and he points out that both descriptive psychology and hermeneutics have a necessary role in the dialectical process toward Dilthey's theory of history. A comprehensive presentation of Dilthey's development as a thinker. –Kathleen Madden, Dept. of Philosophy, Loyola Univ., Chicago

Novack, George. Pragmatism versus Marxism: an appraisal of John Dewey's philosophy.

Pathfinder, New York. 1975. 320p. bibliog. index. LC 75-10032. ISBN 0-87348-452-5. $13; pap. ISBN 0-87348-453-3. $3.45. PHIL

This book promises a straightforward Marxist critique of Dewey's work and influence. Novack speaks calmly, has read widely, and writes with clarity—virtues which should win him shelf space in the larger public libraries. But he sees Dewey's system from the outside, attacking conclusions without showing what they mean within it. Dewey's insistence on experience as the arena for disputes about knowledge is seen as flirtation with idealism and subjectivism. His insistence that all theories, including moral theories, are meant to solve problems is seen as a retreat from principle and entry into the world of Richard Nixon. We need to compare Dewey's account of a shared, public experience with overlapping responsibilities as the basis for social critique with the Marxist critique based on economic structure and class. But that never really gets started in this book. If Dewey was, as Novack suggests, the epitome of the bourgeois philosopher, it is paradoxical that he should so little influence contemporary American philosophers. Novack notices the paradox, but leaves it unexplained. Leslie Armour, Dept. of Philosophy, Cleveland State Univ., Ohio

Sircello, Guy. A New Theory of Beauty.

Princeton Univ. Pr. 1975. 141p. index. LC 75-3475. ISBN 0-691-07211-6. $9.50; pap. ISBN 0-691-01987-8. $3.95. PHIL

Sircello denies that one can formulate a theory which specifies the necessary and sufficient conditions for an object to be beautiful, but contends that the beauty of an object is reducible to that of at least one of its properties, which in turn is explicable in terms of what he calls "properties of qualitative degree," such as the vividness of a color, the loftiness of a melody, the softness of a material, etc. Allegedly, a necessary condition of one's legitimately judging something to be beautiful is that one takes pleasure in apprehending it; but beauty is not identical with what pleases. Generally, the enjoyment of beauty lies in a special clarity of perception which is not discounted by any displeasurable factor. Interesting reading, but marred by a weak discussion of the objectivity of beauty. —Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philosophy, York Coll., CUNY

Slote, Michael A. Metaphysics and Essence.

New York Univ. Pr. 1975. 160p. index. LC 74-25322. ISBN 0-8147-7761-9. $10. PHIL

Slote affirms the thesis that some things must have certain of their properties, though they need not have others which they in fact have; and by stating what he takes to be essential and what accidental to entities falling under some metaphysically important concepts, he defines the concepts. These include: event, change, motion, self, physical body, state of affairs, fact, and others. Slote writes clearly, and the book is wide-ranging, imaginative, and stimulating.—Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philosophy, York Coll., CUNY

Strong, Tracy B. Friedrich Nietzsche and the Politics of Transfiguration.
Univ. of California Pr. Jun. 1976. 348p. bibliog. LC 74-81442. ISBN 0-520-02810-4. $15. PHIL
Strong's emphasis is on taking Nietzsche seriously, in the sense of taking his frequently outrageous-sounding claims and prognostications at face value and finding in them not a system, but a coherence. Thus he reads Nietzsche as prescribing in a variety of contexts a fundamental change in human nature itself, a change which would necessarily precede extirpation of the despised slave morality. In this connection, an interesting relationship is suggested but not explored—between Kant's "impossible" ideal of a being both perfectly rational and perfectly moral, and Nietzsche's indication that "a perfect union between obligation and desire" is attainable, as instanced in his notion of spielen. There are passing critiques of other interpreters here, but Strong does not give his own sustained critical evaluation of Nietzsche's thought.—Carla R. Thomas, Dept. of Philosophy, Goddard Coll. Plainfield, Vt.

POETRY

Dorn, Edward. Slinger.
Wingbow, dist. by Book People. 1975. 205p. LC 75-3658. ISBN 0-914728-06-7. $15; pap. ISBN 0-914728-05-9. $5 POETRY
Dorn adds an (apparently concluding) volume to his three previous Gunslinger books and The Cycle to complete (alas! one wishes there were more) his long-abuilding comic masterpiece. Like any major poem, Slinger shimmers with glimpses and reminders of a rich literary past (Stevens' The Man with the Blue Guitar, the novels of William Burroughs, Don Quixote, to cite a few); like any great reverberating work, too, it sings in an authoritative, rich, original voice, pressing sounds, words, objects and ideas into the service of its talents that have never been so employed before, and will never be quite duplicated again. Led by "the cautious gunslinger," a kind of intergalactic Melvillean confidence man whose guns sling "straight information," the narrator and a steadily increasing, ever-shifting band of improbable pilgrims stagecoach around a 19th-Century American Southwest with 21st-Century sensibilities and technology, exploring NOTE: Daniel Halpern's "The American Poetry Anthology" (LJ, Dec. 1, 1975), published as an Avon original paperback, will be issued simultaneously as a hardcover by Westview Pr. at $14.95.

solemn philosophical problems with the humor of another Southwesterner, Mark Twain. "Entrapment is this society's/ Sole activity, I whispered/ and Only laughter,/ can blow it to rags," the narrator says in the last book. The laughter Slinger evokes blows society sky high; its rags are gorgeous.—James McKenzie, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Dakota, Grand Forks

Flint, Roland. And Morning.
Dryad Pr. 1975. 54p. LC 74-11608. pap. $3. POETRY
Flint's style and perceptions in this first collection are unpretentious and convincing. He is at his best an excellent writer who has done the necessary apprentice work. Some of the themes here are friendship, fatherhood, death, old men. There is a fine poem on earthworms, in which the speaker discovers the truest meaning of "worming"; there is another fine one on shampooing one's hair, in which the speaker discovers the shape of his own head. The poems are sometimes witty, sometimes restrained, sometimes joyfully lyrical. Flint is one of the best poets from the Midwest we have.—David Allan Evans, Dept. of English, South Dakota State Univ., Brookings

Gibson, Margaret & Richard McCann, eds. Landscape and Distance: contemporary poets from Virginia.
Univ. of Virginia Pr. 1975. 89p. LC 75-2350. ISBN 0-8139-0622-9. $5.75; pap. ISBN 0-8139-0656-3. $3.45. POETRY
Here are samples from the work of 23 contemporary Virginia poets, 19 of whom have also contributed little prose notes, struggling to explain in 25-words-or-less fashion how landscape, distance, and Virginia bear on their work. Occasional poems are memorable—Henry Taylor's "Burning a Horse," Quentin Vest's "The Darkhorse," the poems of Dabney Stuart—but the mesh of this anthology's net is too fine, catching too many poems better left in the magazines where they first appeared. In the notes section, tantalizing ideas such as Margaret Gibson's definition of distance, or James Everhard's notion that "all landscapes are essentially alien . . . ," die aborning, victims of the book's wooden format.—James McKenzie, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Dakota, Grand Forks

Hill, Geoffrey. Somewhere Is Such a Kingdom: poems, 1952-1971.
Houghton. 1975. 130p. intro. by Harold Bloom. LC 75-11949. ISBN 0-395-20713-4. $6.95. POETRY
At a time when it is unfashionable to have to work at reading poetry, Hill's poems come from England to demonstrate the rewards of just such work. These poems range from two tightly structured early collections to a long prose-poem sequence, the "Mercian Hymns." But all of the poems have in common density, muscular control of language and mood, an almost visionary intensity. Hill's concerns take us through history, myth, and religion—through human sufferings and guilt, and it is a complex and serious journey. But the power and beauty of his language seem never to fail: we are sustained by metaphor. "I have been touched with that fire/ And I have fronted the she-wolf's lair." This is a brilliant and important book.—Linda Pastan, Potomac, Md.

Lincoln, Doris Brandt. Greening Twig.
Membrane Pr., P.O. Box 11409, Milwaukee, Wis. 53211. 1975. 39p. pap. $1.50. POETRY
The power of this first collection lies in the quiet way the poems allow for the consciousness of self to emerge. The tone is deliberately set by the "greening twig" reaching for sky—and we witness the explorations and occasional stumblings as the poet ambles through country and city landscapes, openly questioning and doubting: "unclimbable, perhaps on any day/ resistance is expected." Lincoln delights in turning words around, making a "never" cohabit with "always." She is at her best in her narrative poems: the mime whose "face gets stuck," the lady who "lives in a terrarium." Sometimes the poet is peering over her own shoulder, preferring commentary over suggestion: "Home is the road you are," "I know one who appreciates herself," "I need defense from this small emptiness." The reader occasionally wants more documentation, more of a stake in the poet-observer's territory; one wishes for more voices like that of the little girl the poet likes to listen to because the words are "so soft with every corner rounded off." Here Lincoln is clearly in touch with her own voice as she bears witness herself.—Rosaly De Maios Roffman, Dept. of English, Indiana Univ. of Pennsylvania

Logan, John (text) & Gary H. Brown (drawings). Poem in Progress.
Dryad Pr. 1975. unpaged. LC 75-4561. pap. $5. POETRY
Any book of John Logan's poems is a significant addition to contemporary literature but this collection (comprised of eight poems and eight drawings and totalling only 36 pages) is Logan's slightest work. All of the poems concern the nature of love and suggest Whitman's Calamus poems, a suggestion enhanced by the "one of the roughs" motif of the drawings. Each piece demonstrates Logan's mastery of image and narrative. There is a new mythical depth provided by a credible fabric of Greek allusions, but there is also an unfortunate chattiness: "Passing through Albuquerque where I'd read poetry,/ I find myself beside a quite young drinking buddy."
Dave Smith, Dept. of English, Cottey Coll., Nevada, Mo.

McClure, Michael. Jaguar Skies.
New Directions, dist. by Lippincott. 1975. 96p. LC 75-6956. ISBN 0-8112-0579-7. $7.75; pap. ISBN 0-8112-0580-0. $1.95. POETRY
In Jaguar Skies McClure continues in his familiar mode. Compared to those in his last book (LJ 5/1/74), these poems are less hectoring and didactic, equally rapid, self-centered, and superficial, and more jingling. Take this one, called "To Joanna": "Pink on the ceiling—/ gray-blue/ in the eaves./ The/ doves/ are/ mumbling./ The fall/ of the leaves./My/ eyes/ love/ yours./ Hold/ my hand,/ please." Is this worth a second reading? A first? Is it worth publishing? It represents well enough the general level, if not the themes, of this unrewarding book.—Seamus Cooney, Dept. of English, Western Michigan Univ., Kalamazoo

Roberson, Ed. Etai-Eken.

Pittsburgh Pr. 1975. LC 75-9122. pap. ISBN 0-[illegible] $3.45. POETRY

A jumble of pseudo-experimentation in form and simplistic thinking, this book is basically amateur stuff. Roberson seems to fancy himself the e.e. cummings of black poetry, but his playing with language too often results in a mess of confused diction and garbled syntax. Perhaps these poems would be better heard than read, although even the most impassioned oral performance would have trouble with lines like these: "drawing this way hold of you/ all the lines you know supposed/ to go to infinity do." There are a few effective poems, such as "When Everyone Is Beauty Is A Time Of Day In Zulu," in which language itself is traced to its very primitive and rich beginnings, and "she reveals herself," where racial and sexual tensions are brutally linked. Here the language is straightforward, the situations immediate, and the vision profound. But too many of the others are lacking the fluency of these and their depth of vision. Bruce Guernsey, Dept. of English, Univ. of New Hampshire, Durham

Political Science & International Affairs

Auerbach, Stevanne, ed. with James A. Rivaldo. Rationale for Child Care Services: programs vs. politics.

Human Sciences: Behavioral. (Child Care: a comprehensive guide). 1975. 215p. bibliog. index. LC 74-11877. ISBN 0-87705-218-2. $14.95.

ED, PUBLIC ADMIN

The first part of a projected four-volume study, this book explores the basic problems and concepts of early childhood education and child care in order to clarify issues for the local planner, the public, and legislators. It brings together ideas about day care practices, state or city programs, and the history and basis for current demand for child care services. Although it presents no new ideas, this volume does succinctly state the problem and discuss several possible solutions to the need for preschool and after-school child care and education. Kathryn Scarich, Trumbull Lib., Conn.

The CIA File: reports on the secret agency by Victor Marchetti & others.

Grossman, dist. by Viking. 1976. 220p. ed. by Robert Borosage & John D. Marks. $10. GOVT

In 1974 a liberal think tank, the Center for National Security Studies, held a two-day conference on "The CIA and Covert Action." Ten papers, which represent the bulk of this book, were presented by such leading agency critics as Marchetti, David Wise, and Richard Barnet. The reports explore the nature and implications of clandestine CIA activities here and abroad. William Colby also participated, offering a report on "The View from Langley." Although Colby submitted to questioning, he refused to discuss specific operations (Chile was a hot topic at the time) and was grilled unmercifully by the conferees, who included Congressman Michael Harrington and Daniel Ellsberg. Yet so much has happened since 1974 concerning the CIA that this collection is superfluous. Kenneth F. Kister, West Palm Beach P.L., Fla.

Hartley, Robert E. Charles H. Percy: a political perspective.

Rand McNally. 1975. 255p. illus. index. LC 75-22320. ISBN 0-528-81018-9. $8.95. POL SCI

Hartley, a journalist from Illinois, assesses Percy's accomplishments on national issues. He examines in particular the ways in which Percy's political philosophy has differed from that of traditional Republican leaders, and he analyzes the Senator's conflicts with Nixon on such major issues as ABM and Vietnam. Hartley points out that Percy's reputation for taking his own initiative on significant national problems limited his influence with the Nixon Administration. The author also explores Percy's creation of a power base in the Senate. Hartley's book is better than many political biographies because the author recognizes the complexity of political conflict.—Steven Puro, Dept. of Political Science, St. Louis Univ.

Kelleher, Catherine McCardle. Germany, Nuclear Weapons and Alliance Relations, 1954-1966.

Columbia Univ. Pr. 1975. 384p. ISBN 0-231-03960-3. $15. HIST INT AFFAIRS

Kelleher has performed a singular, scholarly service in focusing her attention on a critical Western political issue —German nuclear policies and the underlying motivations during the formative decade of development, 1954-1966. This is a serious and careful work of primary interest to political scientists and historians. It is not a popular treatise; it it tough-going and assumes a considerable knowledge of NATO and Atlantic politics, internal German political alignments, and the basic givens of East-West fears over a resurgent Germany and unleashed nuclear diplomacy. The book represents the most up-to-date information available in English, based as it is on thorough on-the-scene research and scholarship.—R. F. Delaney, U.S. Naval War Coll., Newport, R.I.

Mansfield, Harvey C., Sr.,, ed. Congress Against the President.

pub. for the Academy of Political Science by Praeger. (Special Studies in U.S. Economic, Social, and Political Issues). 1975. 200p. index. LC 75-17154. $15. GOVT, POL SCI

A collection of 13 studies, by political scientists and senior U.S. government personnel, about Congressional and Presidential power relations at the crucial period of the start of the 94th Congress. These studies emphasize how recent changes in Congressional institutions, involving, for example, the Congressional Budget Committees and the alterations of the seniority system, have curtailed or expanded the capability of Congress to prevail against the President. These studies represent insightful examinations of current and future areas of Congressional-Presidential conflicts—such as foreign policy and Presidential campaign financing. A much-needed treatment.—Steven Puro, Dept. of Political Science, St. Louis Univ.

Mollenhoff, Clark R. Game Plan for Disaster: an ombudsman's report on the Nixon years.

Norton. 1976. 384p. ISBN 0-393-05543-4. $9.95

GOVT

Writing vividly and precisely, this veteran investigative journalist reflects upon his years within, without, and against the Nixon Presidency. Mollenhoff first relates his frustrations as the Administration's scandal-sniffing ombudsman between 1969 and July 1970, when he resigned because of White House interference with his work. He then recounts with a reporter's ease the sordid activities of the Nixon Gang between 1970 and 1972. Finally, Mollenhoff describes his own peripheral but intriguing role in uncovering the spreading Watergate crimes. Presenting a most exciting reconstruction of that ugly drama, Mollenhoff shows the harried Nixon struggling to escape the tightening noose of evidence. Even more importantly, however, he uses Nixon's entrapment as an opportunity to attack the claim of "Executive privilege" as a lawless fiat for the exercise of irresponsible Executive power.—Charles DeBenedetti, Dept. of History, Univ. of Toledo, Ohio

The New York Times Staff. Give Us This Day . . .: a report on the world food crisis.

Arno. 1975. 336p. photogs. LC 75-1038. ISBN 0-405-06644-9. $10. REF/INT AFFAIRS

This book brings together more than 60 articles about the world food crisis published in the last half of 1974 in the New York Times. The articles examine such complex issues as each nation's fair share of food aid, the realignment of traditional economic relationships, and the race between increased food production and population growth. Commentaries on the World Population Conference (Rome, 1974) bring the interplay of opposing forces into focus. The report offers an especially clear account of political conflicts, both foreign and domestic. Although other books, e.g., Lester Brown's By Bread Alone (LJ 11/15/74), should be purchased first, nevertheless this volume is a good library choice because it provides a readable introduction to a complex world issue.—Carol Holbrook, Univ. of Michigan Lib., Ann Arbor

Seagull, Louis M. Southern Republicanism.

Schenkman, dist. by Halsted: Wiley. 1975. 186p. bibliog. LC 74-17381. $10.95; pap. $5.95. POL SCI

Seagull studies the nature of the groups in the South who vote Republican and considers to what extent there has been a permanent voting realignment. Specifically he examines which votes from 1952 to 1972 were based on race issues and which on class status (new white-collar voters), and he gives a state-by-state analysis of Presidential, senatorial, and gubernatorial elections, all with clear statistical tables. His conclusions are cautiously stated with alternative explanations expounded. The recently published Numan V. Bartley and Hugh D. Graham's Southern Politics and the Second Reconstruction (LJ 6/15/75) is far more comprehensive; but Seagull's work on white-collar voters makes his book a valuable addition in its own right for scholarly libraries.—James Levin, Dept. of Special Programs, C.C.N.Y.

Tunney, John V. The Changing Dream.
Doubleday. 1975. 120p. LC 75-11078. ISBN 0-385-04850-5. $5.95. POL SCI
When it comes to the elaboration of their political thinking, politicians seem to have great talent for inflicting dull platitudes on their readers. Senator Tunney's Changing Dream is no exception. His book is a compendium of disconnected generalizations about such problems as the energy crisis, inflation, the economic recession, the dangers of unbridled population growth, our dwindling resources, the need for planning, and better coordination of government activities in Washington. All of this might have provided the basis for an informative and perhaps imaginative work. Unfortunately, the discussion remains pitched at the unrealistic level of patronizing, with many unconvincing and hollow assertions. Jacques Fomerand, Dept. of Political Science, Queens Coll., CUNY

Wegener, Edward. The Soviet Naval Offensive: an examination of the strategic role of Soviet naval forces in the East-West conflict.
Naval Inst. Pr. 1975. 135p. tr. from German by Henning Wegener. index. LC 74-31738. ISBN 0-87021-671-6 $11. INT AFFAIRS
The rise of Russia as a major naval power has puzzled many observers. In this slender volume a retired German admiral analyzes the phenomenon. For the layman, he reviews the theories of seapower. For the expert and the layman, he offers a rational explanation of Russian naval policies within the theoretical framework of seapower. He concludes by forecasting the impact that Russian naval policies will have on the structure of world seapower. His outlook on "raider" warfare overly reflects the German experience; but this does not detract from the overall value of an excellent analysis.—Jack King, Hamline Univ. Lib., St. Paul, Minn.

Psychology & Psychiatry

Atkin, Edith & Estelle Rubin. Part-Time Father.
Vanguard. 1975. 160p. LC 75-18428. ISBN 0-8149-0766-0. $7.95. PSYCH
Here is a book aimed at divorced fathers who are struggling to maintain a relationship with the kids they see once a week, at best. The authors, two psychotherapists, provide reassuring advice on a wide variety of problems. They discuss the difficult adjustment to visitation privileges, parental guilt and its effect on the father–child relationship, and handling negative reactions to dad's first date or new wife. There is also a chapter on the father as custodial parent. Adolescence is a difficult period for father and child, and the authors are particularly aware of the additional problems which may arise when divorce comes at this stage. Divorced fathers, and those considering divorce, will find this a useful guide as well as a morale booster.—Victoria K. Musmann, Glendale P.L., Calif.

Benson, Herbert, M.D. The Relaxation Response.
Morrow. 1975. 158p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-14309. ISBN 0-688-02955-8. $5.95. HEALTH/PSYCH
Dr. Benson argues that meditative practices have been medically proven to be quite useful in combatting everyday stress and chronic high blood pressure. He feels such relaxation through meditation can be reached without following any specific belief system, and he outlines a method to do so. Adherents of T.M. or other meditative disciplines will have mixed reactions to this book. Some will feel vindicated in their endeavors by the fact that a member of the medical establishment has endorsed their meditative principles. Some will charge that Benson has ripped off T.M. principles, relabeled them, and put them in an antiseptic medical model. However, one must add that the author shows respect for the great meditative traditions and takes care to do a good deal of historical analysis, tracing meditation through many cultures and religions. His book may prove useful to those put off by Eastern paraphernalia who would be more comfortable with a demythologized approach to meditation.—Richard Nagler, Detroit P.L.

Freedman, Jonathan L. Crowding and Behavior.
Viking. 1975. 177p. bibliog. index. LC 75-6564. ISBN 0-670-24982-3. $7.95. SOC SCI/PSYCH
Freedman's premise is that physical crowding is a positive, rather than negative, factor in human welfare. He points out, correctly, that unlike many lower animals man is gregarious. Thus, the results of experiments on crowding using animals may not be generalizable to man. Freedman takes to task, rightly, ethologists like Lorenz who assert man's "territoriality" is a major cause of aggression. Even more novel—though not as definitive as Freedman would seem to believe—is his review of evidence showing that high population density has, generally, positive effects. If these findings are reliable, they hold out much hope for the future. Unfortunately, Freedman chooses to present the hypothesis that crowding intensifies all feelings and reactions as a finished theory. From this, he speculates rather broadly about the future of society and its products, committing himself the errors he objects to in others. Nevertheless, his book is provocative.—Dennis Cogan, Dept. of Psychology & Statistics, Texas Tech Univ., Lubbock

Friedrich, Otto. Going Crazy: an inquiry into madness in our times.
S. & S. 1976. 389p. bibliog. index. LC 75-25844. $8.95. PSYCH
Most of the book consists of anecdotal descriptions of the bizarre behavior of dozens of people (some famous, some infamous, others just friends of the author's who have "gone crazy." Friedrich, who is a prolific journalist/writer, spent two years researching the book and some of the conclusions he presents are: nobody really knows what madness is—it is something one experiences rather than understands intellectually, and those who have experienced it understand it better than the "experts" who treat it; drugs work better than psychotherapy in the overall treatment picture and if "... drugs can cure insanity ... then the whole process of psychiatry may be just another episode in the long history of quackery." These and similar arguments put forth by Friedrich are not new but they are interesting. He writes well, and the case histories he describes are fascinating. Recommended.—Eleanore Singer, formerly with the University of Western Ontario Lib., London, Canada

Kris, Ernst. Ego Psychology and Its Applications: selected papers of Ernst Kris.
Yale Univ. Pr. 1975. 512p. bibliog. index. $20. PSYCH
Included in this collection of 24 papers are several of Kris's seminal papers in psychoanalytic child psychology, as well as selections on technique, creative imagination, applied psychoanalysis, and the history of psychoanalysis. His reviews of Anna Freud's The Ego and the Mechanisms of Defense and Strachey's translation of Freud's Interpretation of Dreams are of great historical interest, and his social-psychological papers on propaganda and war are excellent. Since these papers were first published in the years between 1938 and 1956, a few of the selections now seem a bit dated and redundant. The overall quality of the work is high, however, and of enduring value.—Dianne Kraft Kadish, Dept. of Psychology & Sociology, Staten Island Community Coll., CUNY

Lane, Harlan. The Wild Boy of Aveyron.
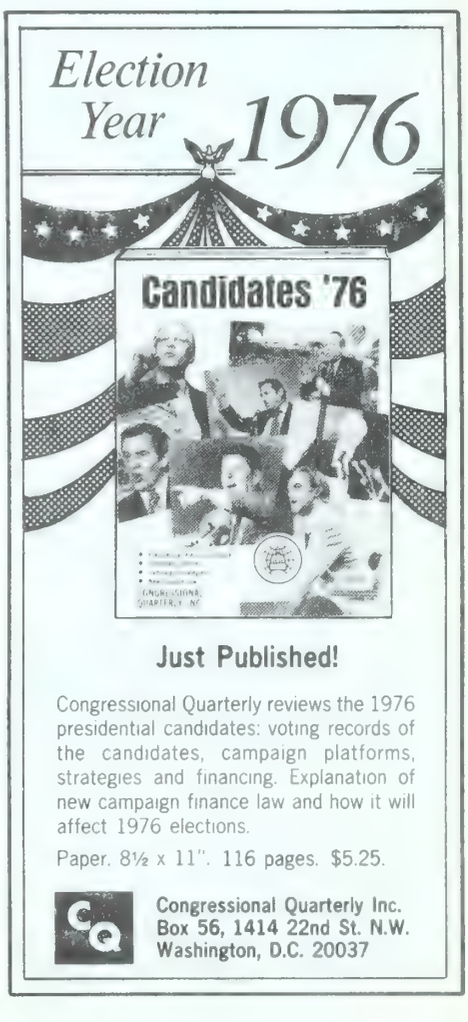
Harvard Univ. Pr. Mar. 1976. 286p. $15. ED/PSYCH
This book contains a wealth of informa-



Just Published!
Congressional Quarterly reviews the 1976 presidential candidates: voting records of the candidates, campaign platforms, strategies and financing. Explanation of new campaign finance law and how it will affect 1976 elections.
Paper. 8½ x 11". 116 pages. $5.25.
Congressional Quarterly Inc.
Box 56, 1414 22nd St. N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20037

tion with historical, philosophical, and practical significance. It provides an absorbing account of the "wild boy" discovered in France in 1799, and analyzes the work of his teacher, Jean-Marc-Gaspard Itard. The information on the young man, whom Itard called Victor, is well documented and carefully set in historical context. Lane perceptively relates Itard's efforts in training Victor to modern experimental theory (e.g., behavior modification). He draws upon psycholinguistics in interpreting Itard's attempts to teach Victor the use of language; and he sets forth, with as little bias as possible, the controversy (sign language versus oral methods) which has surrounded teaching the deaf for more than 200 years. Victor's case was eventually abandoned; but Lane follows Itard's techniques throughout the course of his life, compares them with those of Eduard Seguin, and shows the influence of both men's writings on the work of Maria Montessori. The book is outstanding in tracing, down to present, a complex and still unresolved problem in training children with extreme sensory-perceptual deficits. Clearly written and scholarly, it is especially recommended for collections in special education, psychology, and medicine. Lowry C. Fredrickson, Dept. of Psychology, Coe Coll., Cedar Rapids, Iowa

Murphy, Lois Barclay & Alice E. Moriarty. Vulnerability, Coping, and Growth: from infancy to adolescence.
Yale Univ. Pr. Mar. 1976. bibliog. index. LC 75-27712. ISBN 0-300-01901-7. $20. PSYCH
The focus of the longitudinal investigations reported here is on how "a child mobilizes and uses his resources as they are modified by the outcomes of learning processes" to get along in his environment. Vignettes of individual child behavior serve to illustrate the complex material and make it easier to digest. Among the numerous and significant findings are such conclusions as: the amount of attention given to a child by a mother has a curvilinear relationship, too much or too little being detrimental; compatibility of mother and infant correlates with the degree of respect the mother has for the baby's autonomy; and a greater range of manipulation experience contributes to cognitive development. Of key import is the author's conclusion that "child-rearing is not just a matter of taking care of the . . . child . . . but of supporting the child's efforts to take care of himself." An important addition to the literature on child development. Beatrice J. Kalisch, Dept. of Parent-Child Health, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor

Ramos, Suzanne. Teaching Your Child To Cope with Crisis: how to help your child deal with death, divorce, surgery, being adopted, moving, alcoholic parents, sick parents, leaving home, and other major worries.
M. Kaye. 1975. 138p. intro. by Richard B. Pesikoff, M.D. index. LC 75-23289. ISBN 0-679-50495-8. $9.95. PSYCH
On the assumption that the parent, if properly informed, is best qualified to recognize and deal with problems in their early stages, Ramos offers an informative handbook for parents, a good tool for developing awareness and sensitivity for problems before they become major. The information and advice are sound. The usefulness of the book would have been increased considerably had Ramos provided a bibliography in place of random references in the text. An additional boon would have been a list of some of the relevant books available for children. Nevertheless, recommended. Myra McMurry, Dept. of English, Valdosta State Coll., Ga.

Rosenblatt, Daniel. Opening Doors: what happens in Gestalt therapy.
Harper. 1975. 144p. LC 75-6356. ISBN 0-06-013653-7. $7.95. PSYCH
A practicing Gestalt therapist tries to demonstrate exactly what occurs between client and therapist in a typical session. No theory or background of Gestalt therapy is included. Instead, Rosenblatt concentrates on describing specific problems which bring people to therapy and the different techniques which he has used successfully in resolving these problems. The book treats individual and group therapy in two separate sections, and carefully elucidates the advantages and disadvantages of each. Interesting and informative, and recommended for general collections. –Don Halberstadt, Haverford State Hosp. Lib., Pa.

Siegel, R. K. & L. J. West. Hallucinations: behavior, experience, and theory.
Wiley. 1975. 322p. illus., some color. index. LC 75-12670. ISBN 0-471-79096-6. $25. PSYCH
A collection of eight articles on the subject of hallucinations, this book has unprecedented scope in attempting to cover this complex topic. The word hallucination is treated as not merely psychiatric or psychological; rather there is an attempt to define the actual phenomena from a variety of points of view. The range covers traditional psychiatry, psychology, social psychology, philosophy, anthropology, etc. It is this very scope which finally turns out to be the most troublesome aspect of the book: no resolution is possible between ethnocentric medical men who perceive a difference from their norm as "pathology" and those who attempt to understand phenomena functionally or phenomenologically irrespective of the status of those so described. Both the casual reader and the specialist will encounter a great deal of fascinating fact and argument here, but will find little adequate theory. The illustrations by Yando and others are superb. –Joseph B. Juhasz, College of Environmental Design, Univ. of Colorado, Boulder

Snyder, Solomon H., M.D. The Troubled Mind: a guide to release from distress.
McGraw. Feb. 1976. 256p. bibliog. index. $8.95. PSYCH
The author has previously demonstrated his skill in effectively summarizing the state of knowledge in the field of psychopharmacology in his Madness and the Brain. His latest book is directed to adults outside the mental health professions, especially to the mentally or emotionally distressed and their relatives and friends, and provides a thorough overview of the different treatment methods available. The advice given is conservative and qualified by an emphasis on the restrictions to therapeutic scope and the limitations to the efficacy of traditional psychotherapy ("The most important element is not the theory but the therapist. Ask around."). As an introductory guide for the psychologically uninitiated reader the book deserves a place in popular collections; it is lucid, reasonably unbiased, and written by an authority in the field. —William S. Abrams, Portland State Univ. Lib., Ore.

Wood, John T. What Are You Afraid Of? a guide to dealing with your fears.
Prentice-Hall. Feb. 1976. ISBN 0-13-951889-4. $7.95. pap. Spectrum. ISBN 0-13-951871-1. $2.95. PSYCH
This self-help book's basic premise is that we acquire fear as a result of interaction with our environment and from experiences with punishment, frustration, rejection, pain, and loneliness. Fear, then, becomes a barrier that limits us in our relationships with others, and in reaching our potential. The answer is to accept fear as our own creation, and conquer it through self-actualization. The author relies heavily on other sources, and often quotes continue for two or three pages. The tone of the book ranges from the pedantic and simplistic to an often irritating confession-like tone reminiscent of encounter group sessions. Wood's long excerpts from taped or written statements on fear by others lack situational content and thus tend to sound fatuous. There is nothing new here, and nothing that has not been said better before. Hannelore Schueler, Monmouth County Lib., Freehold, N.J.

Parapsychology & Occultism

Paine, Lauran. Witchcraft and the Mysteries.
Taplinger. 1975. 192p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 73-16636. ISBN 0-8008-8377-2. $8.50. OCCULTISM
This is an attempt at an apology for witchcraft. Starting (as in all his works), from the premise that witchcraft and the occult represent the only belief completely in tune with the natural world, Paine attempts to build a philosophical-theological system. He suggests that science and magic are a continuum and that witchcraft is hence the "once and future" religion. The need for a reasoned study on the relationships between magic and science is evident, but this one fails intellectually. The argument is shabbily done, and the prose clumsy and redundant, resulting in a work of little merit. Jo-Ann D. Suleiman, Wright-Patterson Air Force Base Medical Center Lib., Dayton, Ohio

Tart, Charles T. States of Consciousness.
Dutton. 1975. 224p. bibliog. index. LC 75-5940. ISBN 0-525-20970-0. $12.50. pap. ISBN 0-525-47406-4. $4.95. PARAPSYCH
This is a theoretical synthesis of Tart's research into consciousness and distinct states of consciousness (d-SOCs). He attempts to carefully systematize the scientific examination of d-SOCs by providing a tight set of structures and categories with which to label and analyze the great confusion of research data. Tart's book will certainly not be the last word on the subject, but it offers scientists a solid basis on which to enter the labyrinths of consciousness study. A major criticism, however, is that the work ranges too far into areas (e.g., Buddhist psychology) admittedly not within the author's realm of expertise.—Peter Basofin, Maharishi International Univ. Lib., Fairfield, Iowa

Yeterian, Dixie. Exploring Psychic Reality: discovering your extrasensory gifts.
Crown. Mar. 1976. 125p. $6.95. PARAPSYCH
Yeterian is apparently a natural psychic. In this well-intentioned book, she writes about ESP, intuition, healing, etc. as if her personal experiences had wide general application. Some of the claims she makes are unsubstantiated, e.g., that ESP ability begins to wane at age 6; and some of her statements downright false, e.g., that there are parapsychology labs in most universities. Her own life story, stressing her psychic experiences, might have made a useful book. But those experiences alone can hardly be used as a guide to "discovering your extrasensory gifts." She does give sound advice on the dangers of psychic development. However, parapsychologists aren't sure psi can be trained, let alone how, which makes many of Yeterian's unqualified statements highly questionable.—Rhea A. White, East Meadow P.L., N.Y.

religion

Haugey, John C., S.J. Should Anyone Say Forever? on making, keeping and breaking commitments.
Doubleday. 1975. ISBN 0-385-09754-9. $5.95.
PSYCH REL
In a popular, informal style, the Jesuit author of many theological books and articles explores the question of interpersonal commitments. Can anyone really commit his changing self in an unknown future? Does commitment limit freedom and personal growth? Can one be over- as well as under-committed? Is it right to maintain a relationship (especially a marriage) out of a sense of obligation? Is there a difference between constancy and fidelity? For answers to these and other questions, Haughey explores the Scriptures and current depth psychology for clues to self-understanding, and takes as models of commitment the lives of Jesus, Mary, and St. Paul. His book should do much to clarify a great deal of muddy thinking on a crucial issue.—Genevieve Casey, Div. of Library Science, Wayne State Univ., Detroit

Hoffmann, Yoel, tr. & comm. The Sound of the One Hand: 281 Zen koans with answers.
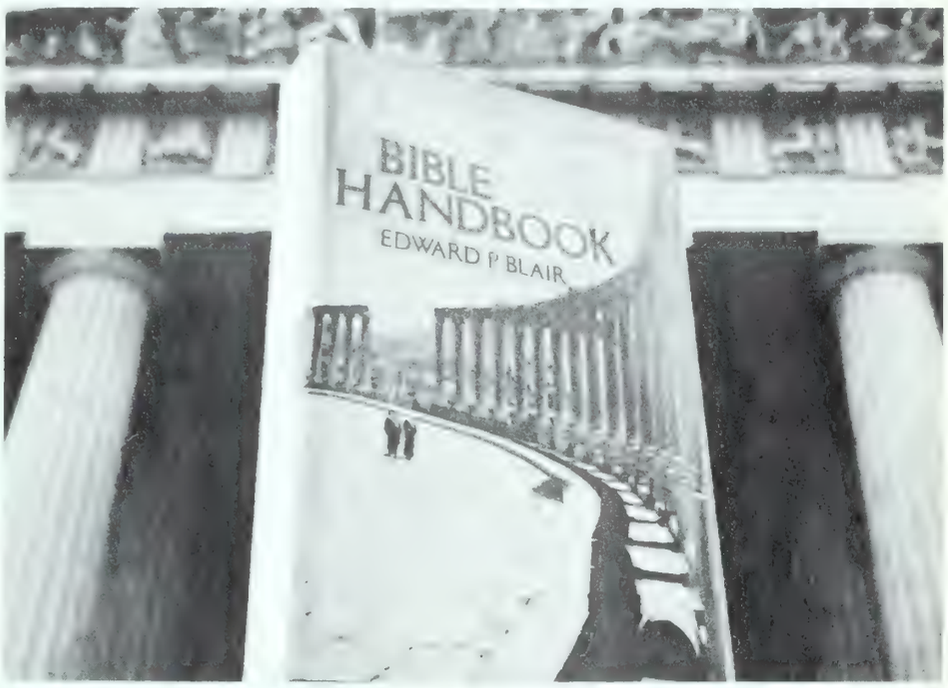
Basic Bks. 1975. 322p. intro. & bibliog. by Ben-Ami Scharfstein. fwd. by Zen Master Hirano Sōjō. LC 75-7274. ISBN 0-465-08078-2. $10; pap. ISBN 0-465-08079-0. $4.95. REL
When this book was first published in Japan in 1916 it caused quite a stir: not only does it contain translations and commentaries of Zen koans, it also includes "answers" presented by unknown students to unknown teachers. While publication of these answers violates no privacy and reveals no secrets (there are none), the emphasis on answers, rather than on the student's realization and expression of the spirit of the koan, creates

The Religious Publishing Event of 1975 is also Winner of the Laymen's National Bible Committee Award

(Sponsors of National Bible Week)



Abingdon Bible Handbook

- All the information readers need to come to a mature understanding of scripture
- Each Bible book (including the Apocrypha) examined
- Fully illustrated in color and black and white
- Indexed

The award winning Abingdon Bible Handbook is divided into three comprehensive sections:

- "The Bible Today" examines contemporary English translations and answers many basic questions confronted by the Bible student.
- "The Bible in History" explains each Bible book (including the Apocrypha) as to title, contents, author, source, and background.
- "The Bible and Faith and Life" offers spiritual perspectives on salvation, Jesus Christ, miracles, and many other important topics.

only $15.95

abingdon
nashville
in canada: g r welch co., ltd in australasia: thomas c. lothian, melbourne

a distinctly mistaken impression of koan study and its intimate association with Zen meditation, in spite of the editors' claims to the contrary. A suggestion of koan study is provided by Kapleau's Three Pillars of Zen, and a better source of commentary is Shibayama's Zen Comments of the Mumonkan (LJ 4/15/74). M. V. W. Wolfe, Los Angeles County P.L. System, Huntington Park

Kao, Charles C.L. Search for Maturity.
Westminster. 1975. 176p. LC 75-15805. ISBN 0-[illegible] PSY, REL
Kao seeks to synthesize concepts of maturity drawn from modern psychology, Christianity, Confucianism, Buddhism, and Taoism. All of these ways of understanding man have in common the idea of inner harmony and integration. Kao's approach is not, however, that "all-religions-are-really-the-same" mishmash that dishonors all religions. He is aware of differences and points them out. The chapter on Taoism is particularly lucid and informative. In a final chapter, Kao discusses the implications of the concept of maturity for persons and nations. His book can be read with profit by the intelligent layman. Douglas S. Marsh, Memphis & Shelby County P.L., Tenn.

Needleman, Jacob. A Sense of the Cosmos: the encounter of modern science and ancient truth.
Doubleday. 1975. ISBN 0-385-00010-3. $6.95.
SCI/REL
The egoistic Western dream of a continually self-serving progress in science is over. Scientists themselves are seeing an organic connection between all entities, and are awakening to ancient religious teachings from those of Judea, Greece, and Egypt to Hinduism, Buddhism, and Taoism. A compelling sense of the unknown is upon us, in crisis form: we ourselves, as microcosms, are that unknown; even the cosmos is an organism with universal purpose. To help us make use of this new-old knowledge, Needleman delineates the concepts found in many esoteric and mystical writings, and shows how they coincide with those of modern science. His book is balanced, significant, and fascinating. Raleigh De Priest Mansfield State Coll. Lib., Pa.

Sebert, Stephen R. & W. Gordon Ross, eds., The Meditations of Elton Trueblood.
Harper. 1975. 114p. LC 75-9340. ISBN 0-06-068671-[illegible] $[illegible] REL
These are not really meditations at all. Rather, they are short selections from Trueblood's writings, ostensibly a "garnering of wisdom, conviction, and inspiration of Elton Trueblood" along with a brief historical chapter on the Yokefellows -a paraecclesiastical spiritual fellowship and service group rooted in Trueblood's teaching. He is a Quaker with sizable influence; and although he is not well appreciated by the more liberal Friends, he is a man from whom the 20th Century can learn a great deal. But this book is not the place to start. It is better suited as a source book of mantras for Yokefellows. Joseph McDonald, Learning Resources Center, Triton Coll., River Grove, Ill.

Shulvass, Moses A. Jewish Culture in Eastern Europe: the classical period.
Ktav. 1975. 180p. index. LC 74-34140. ISBN 0-87068-273-3. $10. REL
Shulvass has written a scholarly book on the historical development of the commentary on the Talmud and the codification of the Jewish law, the contribution of great rabbis from the 13th to the early 17th Century. Shulvass gives enough historical background to explain the rise of the yeshivahs (centers of learning) and then goes into a chronological description of the monumental works produced there, with short biographical synopses of their authors. A most famous work of this period is the Shulkan Arukh by Joseph Karo. Among the nearly 200 great rabbis discussed, the best known are Moses Isserles, Meir of Lublin, and Solomon Luria. All names are indexed, but, alas, by first names. There is an interesting side study in the book on the rise of Yiddish literature, and another on the timid beginnings of the study of the sciences in yeshivahs. —Gerda Haas, Bates College Lib., Lewiston, Me.

Wilcock, Michael. I Saw Heaven Opened: the message of Revelation.
InterVarsity. (Bible Speaks Today). 1975. 223p. bibliog. LC 74-31845. pap. ISBN 0-87784-774-6. $3.95. REL
This exposition of the book of Revelation, clearly directed toward the layman, is in style, format, and content a welcome addition to the literature. The author contends that special knowledge (for instance of secret numbers) is not necessary to interpret and understand this seemingly fantastic and often obscure text. He relies on biblical evidence to provide the background for understanding the events of Revelation and to clarify obscure points. Technical language is kept to a minimum, and the style is clear, concise, and uncomplicated. Jerry D. Campbell, Iliff Sch. of Theology Lib., Denver

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

Krafft, Maurice & Katia Krafft. Volcano.
Abrams. 1975. 174p. intro. by Eugène Ionesco. poems by Max Gérard. tr. by John Shepley. illus., mainly color. bibliog. LC 75-16298. ISBN 0-8109-0557-4. $35. EARTH SCI
Volcanoes? As proven by this book, they are certainly among the most spectacular of natural phenomena. Written by two of the world's leading volcanologists, the book includes a profile of the 1973 Eldfell eruption in Iceland as a realistic backdrop for the reader. This is followed by a clear, illustrated summary of the mechanics of volcanoes in general, and the rest of the book (96 pages) is filled with fascinating and awesome full-color photographs of volcanoes all over the world. Embellished with Ionesco's introduction and Gerard's poetry, this is a handsomely produced work with high-quality color reproduction. Roger E. Bilstein, Univ. of Houston, Clear Lake City, Tex.

Taylor, Ronald L. Butterflies in My Stomach: or, insects in human nutrition.
Woodbridge. 1975. 224p. illus. bibliog. LC 75-13593. ISBN 0-912800-08-9. $8.95. SCI
Written by an entomologist, this most unusual, yet serious, volume examines the insect world as a source of human food. The proposals set forth challenge the imagination, yet insects could indeed be used as supplemental food. The book discusses how to find, rear, and prepare fresh insects—including crickets, beetles, locusts, and bees—as both a dietary staple and a gourmet delicacy. While entertaining, this highly readable volume is thoroughly scientific and includes historical, social, and culinary information. The bibliography is commendable, and the appendixes provide nutritional values, commercial sources, and scientific names. A provocative volume for contemporary collections. —James E. Bobick, Temple Univ. Libs., Philadelphia

Agriculture & Animal Husbandry

Haddle, Jan. The Complete Book of the Appaloosa.
A. S. Barnes. 1975. 371p. photogs. index. LC 73-10521. ISBN 0-498-01420-7. $15.
ANIMAL HUSBANDRY
This well-researched work records the history of the breed and of the Appaloosa Horse Club Registry by tracing the foundation bloodlines, sometimes as far back as the early part of this century. Each foundation horse, and many of the show and track champions from 1948 to 1972, is treated separately in a biographical sketch, and photos are included wherever possible. The history also covers the work of various stockmen who have contributed significantly to the development of the spotted breed. It includes extensive pedigree charts of major families and complete statistics on halter, performance, and racing winners. This is an excellent reference work for any serious showman or breeder who wishes to research bloodlines. —Gaydell M. Collier, formerly with Univ. of Wyoming Lib., Laramie

Howe, John. Choosing the Right Dog.
Harper. Mar. 1976. 160p. photogs. LC 75-25041. ISBN 0-06-012001-0. $7.95. REF/PETS
A useful reference book, Choosing the Right Dog contains descriptions and photographs of all the AKC recognized breeds. However, it offers much more than just physical descriptions. Breeds are rated on such points as shedding, disposition with children, watchdog potential, timidity, and grooming requirements. All this information is very useful for prospective owners. Although many of these points appear in individual breed books, Howe's succinct compilation is much easier to use. A helpful guide for almost any library. —Susan Matusak, Inst. for Sex Research Lib., Indiana Univ., Bloomington Seranne, Ann. All About Small Dogs in the Big City.

Coward. 1975. 256p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 74-30609. ISBN 0-698-10668-7. $8.95. PETS
Despite the implication of its title, this book contains primarily the same basic information as any volume on dog care. Less than one-sixth of the text relates solely to small dogs, and even this coverage is rather general, consisting of brief descriptions of 40 small breeds. These sketches are flattering to the breeds, and fail to warn prospective owners about some common problems (e.g., difficulties in housebreaking or susceptibility to certain diseases). Further, the book recommends active breeds for boys, and elegant breeds requiring grooming for girls. The section on obedience training offers no tips specifically oriented to small-dog handlers. An unnecessary library purchase.—Susan Matusak, Inst. for Sex Research Lib., Indiana Univ., Bloomington

Botany & Horticulture

Proudley, Brian & Valerie Proudley. Fuchsias in Color.

Hippocrene, dist. by Optimum Bk. Marketing (Color Guides). 1976. 206p. color photogs. bibliog. index. LC 75-18625. ISBN 0-88254-362-8. $7.95. HORT

This little offering is remarkable for the excellent quality of its close-up color photographs of 199 fuchsias. The accompanying text briefly describes the flowers of each sort and gives the country of origin and year of introduction of the varieties. Beyond this, the book contains a history of the genus, an explanation of procedures employed in naming fuchsias, a satisfactory discussion of their culture in greenhouses and outdoors, and coverage of disease and pest control, based on British experience. Recommended for specialists and others who have more than a casual interest in fuchsias.—Elizabeth C. Hall, Horticultural Society of New York Lib.

Wilson, Charles L. The World of Terrariums.

Jonathan David. 1975. 143p. illus., some color. LC 74-30396. ISBN 0-8246-0194-7. $14.95. HORT

Emphasizing the educational aspects of terrariums, Wilson's book covers all the standard terrarium lore and assembling techniques. Helpful charts and source lists are included. On the whole, I think Ken Kayatta and Steven Schmidt's Successful Terrariums (LJ 3/15/75) or Charles Evans and Roberta Pliner's The Terrarium Book (Random, 1973) give the reader better value for his money.—Margery Read, Bergen Community Coll. Lib., Paramus, N.J.

Health & Medicine

Ewy, Donna & Rodger Ewy. Preparation for Breast Feeding.

Doubleday. 1975. illus. index. pap. ISBN 0-385-08962-7. $2.95. HEALTH

From the Ewys comes another fine manual for parents. Like their Preparation for Childbirth (Pruett, 1970; Signet: NAL, 1974. pap.), this new book is thoroughly helpful. Identifying breast-feeding as an art that was lost in the 1920's, the authors see the most significant need of nursing mothers to be family and community support. Today's young parents generally grew up without seeing nursing women, and do not have many knowledgeable friends or relatives to instruct and encourage them. Here, the Ewys supply information and also a source of support. The mechanics of milk production and availability are clearly explained, although less extensively than in other popular references such as Marvin Eiger and Sally Olds's The Complete Book of Breastfeeding (Bantam, 1973) and Karen Pryor's Nursing Your Baby (LJ 6/15/63). Prenatal preparation is strongly recommended. A summary chapter outlining keys to success, mother's problems, and baby's problems makes this book the one for ready reference in those early weeks of learning to nurse.—Elizabeth M. Johnson, R.N., Ohio State Univ. Hospitals, Columbus

Gots, Ronald E., M.D. The Truth About Medical Malpractice: the patient's rights, the doctor's rights.

Stein & Day. 1975. 204p. index. LC 75-11801. ISBN 0-8128-1831-8. $8.95. LAW/MED

The "tidal wave" of medical malpractice suits in our country within recent years has been phenomenal, and in this volume Gots, a physician, sheds light on the problem. He carefully illustrates the intricacies of the law, grounds for a valid claim, types of negligence, effects of doctor-patient relationships, informed consent requirements, and trial procedures. Sprinkled throughout are vignettes and analogies that serve to make the account readable and highly interesting. Clearly, Gots attempts to present a balanced view of the malpractice problem, showing both the injured patient's and the accused physician's viewpoints, but his bias toward protection of the physician is sometimes evident. Although he reviews a number of currently discussed solutions such as mediation and arbitration boards and new methods of insurance coverage, in the end he pleads, perhaps too simplistically, for both patients and physicians to be mindful of the other's rights.—Beatrice J. Kalisch, Dept. of Parent-Child Health, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor

Hypnotics: methods of development and evaluation by Fred Kagan & others, eds.

Halsted: Wiley. (Proceedings of the Book Lodge Conference on Hypnotics, July, 1974, Augusta, Michigan). 1975. 432p. illus. index. LC 75-20474. ISBN 0-470-45418-0. $30. MED

Because of the number of drugs that are prescribed to reduce insomnia, a report concerning current and past drug research in sleep laboratories is of extreme importance at this time. The range of drugs discussed is broad since this volume's definition of hypnotics includes any drug which helps induce sleep and decrease spontaneous nocturnal awakenings. Thus, the drugs discussed range from warm milk to phenobarbital, meprobamate, chlorpromazine, flurazepam, chloral hydrate, methaqualone, and heroin. These and other drugs are discussed in terms of present experimental methodology and problems with past methodologies. Also covered are misuse of hypnotics, dependency, and areas of future development of sleep-inducing drugs. The book is written essentially for the professional, but knowledgeable laymen may obtain a great deal of information concerning what's going on in the world of drugs and sleep.—Eugene Smith, Dept. of Psychology, Ricker Coll., Houlton, Me.

Natural History & Zoology

Borland, Hal. The History of Wildlife in America.

National Wildlife Federation. 1975. 208p. illus., mainly color. maps. bibliog. index. intro. by Thomas L. Kimball. LC 75-15494. ISBN 0-912186-20-8. $14.95. HIST/NAT HIST

This profusely and beautifully illustrated book is not only a history of American wildlife but also a panorama of American history from prehistoric times to the present. Borland, who needs no introduction to nature lovers, has skillfully combined human and animal history, clearly showing how man, although often unaware of his needs, has throughout his history depended upon animals. He provides information on the wildlife conservation movement and details of what happens when man, "ignoring wildlife and ecology, plunges arrogantly ahead on his own." There is one heartening section, "Triumphs of Concern," which describes the successful attempts to save certain once-endangered species. This is a graphic, informative, and beautiful book.—Lola Dudley, Mamaroneck Free Lib., N.Y.

Emmel, Thomas C. Butterflies.

Knopf. 1975. 260p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-10407. ISBN-0-394-49958-1. $35.

Watson, Allan & Paul E. S. Whalley. The Dictionary of Butterflies and Moths in Color.

McGraw. 1975. 296p. intro. by W. Donald Duckworth. color illus. bibliog. LC 74-30433. ISBN 0-07-068490-1. $39.95; until May 5, 1976 $29.95. REF/ZOOLOGY

The primary appeal of both these large-format volumes is their magnificent color plates. Emmel's work has 317 of these, some small but many full-page or double-page photographs of living butterflies and caterpillars. The text is divided into three sections, the first dealing with the general biology of butterflies in nontechnical language, the second and longest

ALCOHOL AND YOUR HEALTH
by Louise Bailey Burgess

"— for the layman, student or sociologist concerned with the damaging effects of alcohol on society and on the individual."
— American Journal of Psychiatry

"— an indispensable reference book for the professional field."
— The College Store Journal

"— a veritable mine of important information."
— Modern Medicine

"Masterful research combines with meticulous detail, organization and analysis to shed much light on the alcohol problem, leaving little room for myths and half-truths."
— Library Journal

Charles Publishing Company
12125 Riverside Drive
North Hollywood, CA 91607

512 pages
$14.50 FOB (discount in quantity)

describing butterflies from various countries (with occasional accounts of and quotes from famous collectors), and the last section discussing the use of butterflies by man and including short descriptions of collecting and photographic methods. The book's text alone would be welcomed by amateur lepidopterists; combined with its superb illustrations, it will be treasured by many nature lovers.

Watson and Whalley's dictionary covers all Lepidoptera; more than 2000 species are illustrated in 405 color plates. The work is extensive, with information listed under family, genus, and species names, and with common names fully cross-referenced. Information provided includes descriptions, distribution, habits and life history, economic importance, and sometimes anecdotes about famous collectors. However, some drab but economically important genera are not given as much coverage as are, e.g., the birdwing butterflies so prized by collectors. Suitable for more advanced or serious amateur lepidopterists.—Walter P. Coombs Jr., Associate Curator of Vertebrate Paleontology, Pratt Museum, Amherst Coll., Mass.

Johnsgard, Paul A. North American Game Birds of Upland and Shoreline.

Univ. of Nebraska Pr. 1975. 183p. illus., some color, by the author. maps. bibliog. index. LC 74-15274. ISBN 0-8032-0701-8. $11.95. NAT HIST

Zoologist Johnsgard intends this guide to the identification of some common species of American game birds to appeal to sportsmen, students, and those who enjoy watching or photographing birds. He describes each of 29 species by vernacular name, range, identification, field marks, age and sex criteria, habitat and food, and social and reproductive biology. An especially useful feature is a detailed diagram of the current distribution for each species. Tables include weights and annual harvest. The author's excellent drawings and photos, many in color, accompany each description. Recommended for those wanting more information than is available in general surveys (such as the Peterson guides) but less than is available in monographs on each species. Roland Person, Southern Illinois Univ. Lib., Carbondale

The Magnificent Continent by Eric Newby & others.

Rand McNally. 1975. 320p. illus., some color. maps. index. LC 75-1928. ISBN 0-528-81011-1. $30 NAT HIST

One hundred spectacular natural and man-made wonders of North America are highlighted in this unique guidebook to the continent's heritage. Introductory chapters give a concise account of the forces - geological, ecological, and human - that have affected the continent. Over 200 pages are devoted to photographs of breath-taking sites, accompanied by a brief discussion of North America's history, culture, landscape, flora, and fauna. A supplementary "Gazetteer of Great Places" lists, locates, and describes by region nearly 1000 additional points of interest. This book's fresh prose and memorable photographs will appeal to many readers. Regina Brown, Ohio State Univ. Libs., Columbus

Olendorff, Richard. Golden Eagle Country.

Knopf. 1975. 208p. illus. by Robert Katona. LC 75-5211. ISBN 0-394-48292-1. $12.95. NAT HIST

In this fine book on the behavior of eagles and other birds of prey nesting in the grasslands east of the Rockies, biologist Olendorff tells of two summers he spent studying these birds in their natural habitat. With a colleague, he drove hundreds of dusty miles to locate and observe nests and often climbed to exposed aeries to band the birds. He also discusses the place of other birds and animals in the ecology of the short-grass prairie. Even experienced bird watchers will find much that is new in this detailed study. The style is enthusiastic; the drawings are excellent; and a large-type format adds to the book's readability. Recommended for libraries and anyone who enjoys the out-of-doors.—Helen J. Stiles, NOAA-ERL Lib., Dept. of Commerce, Boulder, Colo.

Our Magnificent Wildlife: how to enjoy and preserve it.

Reader's Digest Pr., dist. by Norton. 1975. 352p. illus., mostly color. maps. bibliog. index. LC 74-30861. $15.95. ZOOLOGY

A collection of articles condensed from natural history books and magazines, profusely illustrated with color photos, line drawings, maps, and charts. There are over 90 articles discussing wildlife in all climates and continents. There is a commendable lack of American chauvinism; European zoos and international conservation efforts are given equal time with U.S. groups. Human-made problems to wildlife are sometimes mentioned, but no solutions are proposed, no action recommended. Still, the book is informative; and though it suffers from a lack of depth (as condensations must), its scope is impressive and it gives a real-world view of the work of zoologists and natural scientists. An appendix lists major wildlife parks and zoos all over the world. Where a general book on wildlife addressed to nonspecialists is needed, this would be an appropriate purchase; consider for YA's too.—Bonnie J. Dopp, San Francisco P.L.

Pettingill, Olin Sewall, Jr. Another Penguin Summer.

Scribners. 1975. 72p. photogs., some color. by the author. ISBN 0-684-14331-3. $10. NAT HIST

Pettingill, a noted ornithologist, lecturer, wildlife photographer, writer, and editor, gives us a delightful look at five species of penguins inhabiting the Falkland Islands. Pettingill first photographed these appealing birds on a trip sponsored by Walt Disney; then he returned for "a second penguin summer" to study them, collect more photographs, and gather material for this book. He writes of the penguins' almost human antics and personality foibles as revealed in such daily life activities as nesting, rearing young birds, and squabbling with neighbors. The text provides sound information and is accompanied by superb color photos, each captioned with amusing notes. A most appealing book.—Evelyn G. Callaway, Nebraska Library Commission, Fairbury

Rood, Ronald. It's Going To Sting Me!

S. & S. Feb. 1976. 125p. illus. index. LC 75-26533. ISBN 0-671-22192-2. $7.95. NAT HIST

A conversational and witty introduction to wasps, ticks, bats, jellyfish, bears, poison ivy, and other things of which man tends to be afraid, Rood's book succeeds admirably in replacing this fear with understanding and respect. Readers' curiosity will be aroused; many will want to read more about some of the creatures discussed here. Rood, author of several other popular adult and juvenile natural history books, conveys his close knowledge of the subject in a titillating style. Recommended.—Paul M. Duckworth, Springfield-Greene County P.L., Springfield, Mo.

Sutton, George Miksch. Portraits of Mexican Birds: fifty selected paintings.

Univ. of Oklahoma Pr. 1975. 160p. fwd. by Enrique Beltran. color illus. LC 74-15911. ISBN 0-8061-1236-0. $35. ART/NAT HIST

Sutton is one of the most accomplished and respected of contemporary wildlife artists. He is also a trained scientist, author, and professor, and his experience with Mexican birds spans several decades. With these qualifications it is not surprising that this group of 50 of his paintings is of outstanding quality. All of these were done in Mexico, between 1938 and 1973, in the field. Most of the birds are depicted in the midst of vegetation typical of their habitats. The paintings of specific plants are exquisite and add much to both the aesthetic appeal and scientific authority of this book. It is to be hoped that this volume may stimulate conservation in Mexico, whose unique, teeming forests are being irreparably destroyed. In a world full of overpriced and mediocre large books this one stands out by a mile.—Henry T. Armistead, Thomas Jefferson Univ. Lib., Philadelphia

Warner, William R. Watermen, Crabs, and the Chesapeake Bay.

Atlantic: Little. Feb. 1976. 288p. illus. bibliog. $10.95 SOC SCI/NAT HIST

This is an unusual, and - to anyone who likes the waterfront - a fascinating book. It tells the story of the "watermen" (those who make a living on the water) of Chesapeake Bay, and of the blue crab, their major resource. There is also information about oystering and other kinds of fishing. The author accompanied the crab fishermen in all seasons, and describes well their hard and tedious yet sometimes satisfying work. There is much information about the anatomy and habits of the blue crab, and there are chapters on the history of the watermen and on how the crabs finally get to the table. There is an annotated list for further reading, a section on visiting some of the places mentioned, and line drawings (not seen by this reviewer).—John S. Robotham, N.Y.P.L.

Technology

Fendell, Bob. The New Era Car Book and Auto Survival Guide.

Holt. 1976. 247p. illus. LC 75-5466. ISBN 0-03-014031-5. $8.95. TECH

If you are planning to buy, sell, lease, repair, or just drive a car, this book will have something for you. It gives advice on how to cope with the rising costs of fuel, on new and used cars, on repair, and on insurance. Chapters on how to decide to buy or repair, on what type of car to choose, and on the advantages and disadvantages of leasing and renting are helpful. The sections that cover driving techniques, what to check when buying a used car, calculating insurance costs, and how to avoid repair gyps include material found elsewhere but are well written and informative. Armed with this title and Leroi Smith's Money Savers' Do-It-Yourself Car Repair (LJ, 4/1/75), amateur mechanics will be able to handle most minor problems themselves. Recommended for most public libraries.—Susan Ebershoff-Coles, Indianapolis-Marion County P.L.

Lewis, John. Restoring Vintage Boats.
Internat. Marine Pub. 1975. 191p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-4329. ISBN 0-87742-054-8. $20. TECH
This is not a how-to book on old boat restoration, but it will encourage would-be restorers to try their hand. Between the lines are guidelines for identifying major questions of old boat restoration: Is the boat restorable? How much wood needs replacement? Are there costly obstacles? What skills are needed? Through generally detailed examples of vintage boat restorations (fishing craft, an oyster smack, large schooners, etc.), Lewis essentially achieves his goal—to encourage serious restorers to proceed. Some readers will be annoyed by unfamiliar British nomenclature or by occasionally inadequate details, but the overall impression will be very favorable. Even nonrestorers will find much of interest on the various craft used as examples. There is also an interesting survey report of a Swedish galleass.—James Tazelaar, U.S. Army Engineer Topographic Labs., Ft. Belvoir, Va.

Nunn, Richard V. Saving Home Energy.
Oxmoor House. (Family Guidebooks). 1975. 96p. illus. index. LC 75-2871. pap. $1.95. TECH
This is a picture book with explanatory text on energy-saving methods for the cost-minded home handyman. Requires only commonly available tools. Worthwhile for public and high school libraries.—Paula M. Strain, MITRE Corp., McLean, Va.

Nunn, Richard V. & Robert K. Tews. Easy Auto Repairs.
Oxmoor House. (Family Guidebooks). 1975. 96p. photogs. LC 75-2873. pap. $1.95. TECH
Here's a book that's required reading for everyone who drives a car and dislikes that helpless feeling when mechanical problems occur. The book discusses the function and operation of each major mechanical component on an elementary level and offers practical troubleshooting techniques for most of the common automotive problems. The techniques described require only simple hardware-store tools. Through the use of large and clear photos with accompanying text, the reader is taken on a complete tour of a contemporary automobile. The book also covers general preventive maintenance, and it would be useful in evaluating a used car since it points out common wear areas. Although it joins at least three other books of this level of coverage currently in print, Easy Auto Repairs is well done and will serve readers who want to take that next step beyond the owner's manual.—Gerard Cullen, Datapoint Business Computers, San Antonio, Tex.

Vale, Brenda & Robert Vale. The Autonomous House: design and planning for self-sufficiency.
Universe Bks. 1975. 224p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-15354. ISBN 0-87663-254-1. $10. TECH
An "autonomous house" is a shelter that operates on the energy income of its immediate environment. Thus, with the idea that one working experiment is worth more than a shelf full of theoretical reports, the Vales (both architects) unveil their own award-winning design of such a house. Apparently, the authors' antipathy toward big technology and their disdain for economic "growth-ism" has sparked their drive for self-sufficiency. And though the book is not long, its concise explication of the idiosyncracies of heat pumps, fuel cells, recycled wastes, etc. has been braced with more than 100 diagrams and tables, plumbed by apposite and plentiful references, and founded on a functional index. Strongly recommended.—Frank D. Doble Jr., Onondaga Community Coll. Lib., Syracuse, N.Y.

Social Science

Bond, George C. The Politics of Change in a Zambian Community.
Univ. of Chicago Pr. Apr. 1976. 232p. bibliog. index. LC 75-12228. $13.50.
POL SCI REGIONAL STUDY
Good studies similar to this one on emerging African institutions, although specialized in appeal, deserve the attention of major university libraries at least. This book focuses on leadership in a small African area that is experiencing change. It deals with conflicts between traditional and modernizing groups and thus could interest sociologists, anthropologists, and political scientists. Despite the small study area, the findings appear to be applicable to many other parts of developing Africa, especially to rural villages. This study of segmented societies in rural areas stands in welcome contrast to the large number of urban studies or works based on major kingdoms. The author's style is satisfactory, and his research seems to be thorough—John J. Grotpeter, Dept. of Political Science, St. Louis Coll. of Pharmacy

Davis, Hubert J., ed. The Silver Bullet and other American Witch Stories.
Jonathan David. 1975. 231p. LC 75-11953. ISBN 0-8246-0199-8. $9.95. FOLKLORE
In the 1930s, the Virginia W.P.A. Writers Project collected stories of witchcraft and other folk beliefs which had been passed down from generation to generation. That collection, never published, is the basis for the material presented here. Although collected in the Virginia Mountains, some of the stories have their origin in other parts of the country. Davis' introductory discussion of the influence of ancestry, geography, and the whole mountain way of life gives

"A must for futurologists, industrial planners, and engineers"*

The Third Industrial Revolution

By G. HARRY STINE

"The first industrial revolution was ushered in by the steam engine and the second by the computer. The third, says Stine ...will see all of earth's industry moved into space, where it can pollute to its heart's content.... And this will be accomplished not by lifting industry from our planet, but by utilizing the resources elsewhere in our solar system."—*Publishers Weekly. "In a text notably free from jargon, clearly and persuasively written, Stine makes his far-out proposals sound convincingly down-to-earth."—Library Journal. Photos. Bibliography. $7.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N. Y. 10016

LIBRARY JOURNAL RECOMMENDS
THE HAZARDS OF BEING MALE
Surviving the Myth of Masculine Privilege

By HERB GOLDBERG, Ph.D.,
co-author with Dr. George Bach of the bestseller "Creative Aggression"

"This book, written in a sympathetic tone, ... reflects the new maturity on the part of males in response to issues raised by the women's movement. Goldberg looks at the female-dominated male upbringing, the male dependence on his wife, and the male drive to succeed as obstacles to men becoming more self-filled. His objective is to put men back in touch with their emotions and their bodies, and to restore confidence in their proclivities. Goldberg is largely successful in this effort." — LIBRARY JOURNAL (12/15/75)

Bibliography $8.95

A FEATURED SELECTION OF THE PSYCHOLOGY TODAY BOOK CLUB

NASH PUBLISHING
distributed by E.P. Dutton & Co., Inc.

good background for the stories. The 76 tales he has chosen illustrate the rituals and practices of witchcraft and some ways of counteracting witchcraft. A good acquisition for large collections.—Patrice Callaghan, P.L. of Cincinnati and Hamilton County

Gainer, Patrick W. Witches, Ghosts and Signs: folklore of the Southern Appalachians.

Seneca Bks., Grantsville, W. Va. 1975. 177p. LC 75-29893. ISBN 0-89092-006-0. $7.95. FOLKLORE

A folklorist has collected material from the West Virginia mountain people for over 50 years. Defending their belief in witchcraft and superstition, he gives a short background of the people and their oral tradition. Almost 70 ghost tales and stories of witchcraft form the larger part of the book. Entertaining bits and pieces of regional folk history are included: words used; social activities; medicine; and superstitions about nature. A slight book, less than scholarly, but libraries in the area may want to purchase.—Patrice Callaghan, P.L. of Cincinnati and Hamilton County

Howell, Mary C. Helping Ourselves.

Beacon, dist. by Harper. 1975. 256p. bibliog. index. LC 75-5291. ISBN 0-8070-2758-8. $8.95. SOC SCI

Howell, a pediatrician and former Harvard professor, has written a self-help book for individuals and families that encompasses suggestions for dealing with and changing institutions which affect the family unit. Included are chapters on the school systems, medical care, child care, the government, and working situations. She also deals with the problem of communication within the family and communication from the family to the institution. The main value of the book is in its exploration of alternatives and in its affirmation that institutions are not immutable. Recommended for academic collections and for public libraries with strong collections on marriage and the family and sociology.—Donna J. McColman, Charles Taylor Lib., Hampton, Va.

Mitchell, George. Yessir, I've Been Here a Long Time: the faces and words of Americans who have lived a century.

Dutton. 1975. 124p. photogs. LC 75-16182. ISBN 0-525-23900-6. $8.95. PHOTOG/SOC SCI

Mitchell has interviewed and photographed some 30 Americans who are more than 100 years of age, and he attempts to convey a sense of what it feels like to be so old and to look back on a century of life and change. Certain common threads run through the interviews: most of these centenarians express a desire to live on —even though life is not as safe as it once was; almost all of them reminisce about their parents and early childhood; and most of them talk about marriage and children and death. This sensitive treatment includes some very poignant passages and photographs interspersed with passages that capture great humor.—Kathryn Scarich, Trumbull Lib., Conn.

Mode, Heinz. Fabulous Beasts and Demons.

Phaidon, dist. by Praeger. Feb. 1976. 280p. illus., some color. LC 74-5582. ISBN 0-7148-1642-6. $30. ARCHAEOLOGY/MYTHOLOGY

This handsome volume will stir keen interest amongst scholars of different disciplines, especially those concerned with the origins and functions of symbolism. The author successfully shows how imaginary creatures (like fossils in amber) preserve the history of civilization and offers a comprehensive method of classification, as he disentangles origins and sources from misconceptions. Mode's position is that these creatures represent the personification of forces and powers associated with societies as they split into classes. He notes that the astonishing vitality of compositor symbolic images, crossing all cultures, was due to both a subliminal continuity in man and sound observations of nature. It is unfortunate that the author neglects Paleolithic imaginary creatures (for instance, the "sorcerer" at Lascaux), since they surely qualify for inclusion. This work offers the modern reader a grand adventure seldom otherwise afforded, and it represents a significant aesthetic and intellectual achievement.—Robert S. McCully, Dept. of Psychiatry & Behavioral Science, Medical Univ. of South Carolina, Charleston

Palmore, Erdman. The Honorable Elders: a cross-cultural analysis of aging in Japan.

Duke Univ. Pr. 1975. 148p. index. LC 75-13808. ISBN 0-8223-0345-0. $8.95; pap. $3.75. SOC SCI

Palmore's timely study of aging in contemporary Japan does not focus on the stereotypes that have long depicted respect, even reverence, for the elders as the norm in Eastern cultures. Instead, it examines the question of whether this situation has been altered by industrialization and its concomitant rapid social change. Palmore's answer is unequivocal: "The status of Japanese elders has suffered little decline." But the reader, examining the evidence he presents, will wonder how Palmore ever reached this conclusion. For example, although he correctly notes that compulsory retirement comes much earlier in Japan than in the U.S. and that workers thereafter earn greatly reduced pay, he concludes that "the trends indicate little decline in employment status" for the aged. And reporting extremely high suicide rates for Japanese over 65, Palmore simply discounts the significance of this arresting fact. The book contains valuable data on the problems of aged Japanese, and for this reason is of general interest. But readers should take the author's conclusions with more than a grain of salt.—Susan J. Pharr, Social Science Research Council, New York

Peter, Laurence J. The Peter Plan: a proposal for survival.

Morrow. 1976. 224p. illus. by Walter Griba. index LC 75-22327. ISBN 0-688-02972-8. $6.95. SOC SCI

Perhaps the most generous thing to be said about The Peter Plan is that its intentions are good. Peter's peppery wit and impish spirit are nearly self-defeating. He has a number of original, intelligent, and serious things to say about surviving in the future, but his message is obscured by his too numerous and distracting quotations, his playful and silly names, his tendency to ramble all over the place in his reasoning, and his peculiar blend of cynicism and idealism—all of which failed him, by the way, in The Peter Prescription. What the present book makes unmistakably clear is that a first-rate satirist has a lot to lose and nothing to gain from allowing himself to take a casual approach to serious material. Overwork, perhaps.—A. J. Anderson, Sch. of Library Science, Simmons Coll., Boston

Shorter, Edward. The Making of the Modern Family.

Basic Bks. 1975. illus. index. 369p. LC 75-7266. ISBN 0-465-04327-5. $15. SOC SCI

This book should be read by any serious scholar involved in the study of the family. Drawing on available historical and sociological data about the lives of ordinary people, Shorter examines trends in family life, changing sex-role definitions, and sexuality. He shows that while affective and hedonistic sexual expression have replaced more traditional instrumental sexual behavior, the marital dyad is of increasing importance and that there has been a breakdown of ties between the family and community. The book is provocative, although admittedly lacking full documentation, due in part to a dearth of precise historical data. Some may take issue with Shorter's generalizations about the impact of the Women's Liberation Movement on the family, and his spotty references to sociological studies will make some wonder about his thoroughness in covering current research. Additionally, that he fails to discuss singlehood as an emerging life-style weighs rather heavily on his arguments about the importance of marriage in today's world. In spite of some limitations in Shorter's analysis of the present and future of the family, this book adds much to the available knowledge and there are many hypotheses for historians and sociologists to test, which is one of Shorter's goals.—Roger W. Libby, Inst. for Family Research and Education, Syracuse Univ., N.Y.

Vucinich, Alexander. Social Thought in Tsarist Russia: the quest for a general science of society, 1861-1917.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. Apr. 1976. 304p. bibliog. index. LC 75-12229. ISBN 0-226-86624-6. $15.50. HIST/SOC SCI

This book provides a history of early sociology as seen through the abstract filters of philosophy and the sociology of knowledge. It is difficult reading owing to the detailed treatment of complex ideas. The author describes influential figures in chronological order, presenting short biographies, analyzing basic elements in their writings, comparing their views, and specifying contributions to the scientific study of Russian society. He emphasizes the structure of their ideas, not the knowledge that those ideas generate about real conditions. As an addition to the rich literature on the background to the Russian Revolution, the book has some merit. It also shows how the state of sociology can serve as a barometer of views about progress.—Gilbert Rozman, Dept. of Sociology, Princeton Univ.

SOCIOLOGY reviewers interested in the sociology of religion and able to write concise, critical reviews please contact Anneliese Schwarzer, The Book Review.

Law & Criminology

Adler, Mortimer J. & William Gorman. The American Testament.

pub. for the Inst. for Philosophical Research & the Aspen Inst. for Humanistic Studies by Praeger. 1975. 160p. index. LC 75-[illegible]. ISBN 0-27[illegible] 34060-0 $7.95. [illegible]

Three documents constitute the "American Testament"—the Declaration of Independence, the Preamble to the Constitution, and the Gettysburg Address. Adler and Gorman provide running commentaries on the three texts based on contributions made at the 1974 Aspen Conference. Their approach is basically legalistic as they focus on the fundamental principles of human rights and liberty expressed in the documents. Their work would be of interest to many libraries except for the price tag.—Jerry V. Caswell, Univ. of Wisconsin-Madison Libs.

Astor, Gerald. Hot Paper.

Saturday Review Pr./Dutton. 1976. 224p. LC 75-[illegible] 16155. ISBN 0-8415-0405-9. $8.95. [illegible]

Astor's book recounts the theft of $13,194,000 of Treasury bills from Morgan Guaranty Trust in October, 1969. Efforts to discover the thief, tracing the flow of "hot paper," and the arrest and prosecution of suspects are all outlined. Combined local and federal law enforcement agencies were only minimally successful in apprehending anyone. The actual thief was never caught nor, despite definite suspicions, was any link-up made with organized crime. Hot Paper describes all the minor actors and warns of a lack of bank and brokerage house security on stocks, bonds, and notes; however, the writing style is dull and the pace is lethargic.—Saul J. Amdursky, Albion P.L., Mich.

Barnes, Margaret Anne. Murder in Coweta County.

Reader's Digest Pr., dist. by Crowell. Feb. 1976. 282p. index. LC 75-23340. $[illegible]. [illegible]

Wilson Turner was publicly killed by John Wallace before eight witnesses in Coweta County, Georgia, in 1948. Wallace at that time literally owned neighboring Meriwether County and had gotten away with murder previously. Sheriff Lamar Potts of Coweta County was determined that the law should be enforced and worked arduous hours collecting evidence from intimidated witnesses, interviewing intransigent friends of Wallace, and tracking Turner's body. As a result of these efforts, Wallace was eventually tried, convicted, and executed. This book is clearly written, but the murder and its aftermath hold more regional than national interest.—Saul J. Amdursky, Albion P.L., Mich.

Noonan, T., Jr. Persons and Masks of the Law: Cardozo, Holmes, Jefferson, and Wythe as Makers of the Masks.

Farrar. 1976. 198p. LC 75-30994. $10. [illegible]

Since Aristotle, philosophers have wrestled with the insoluble dilemma of law as an instrument of certainty and as the embodiment of justice. Should "rules" or equity prevail when the rights of individuals are at stake? Jerome Frank and the "legal realists" added another dimension—the creative role of the judge in adapting extant formulas to meet changing human and social needs. Noonan follows Frank and demonstrates that even the greatest of jurists failed in crucial situations to humanize the law. Why men of the caliber of a Holmes or Cardozo enforced one value rather than another where genuine, though often unrecognized, choices existed may be attributable to the judges' varied experiences and psyches. Although we are informed that "Rules cannot be the sole . . . object of legal study . . . and legal philosophy" (for they distort "the place of persons"), the author never precisely notes how rules "must address [us] as persons" or how legal study can be changed to reflect this need. No matter, for a powerful issue has been raised and sensitively discussed. Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

Switzer, Ellen in assn. with Wendy W. Susco. The Law for a Woman: real cases and what happened.

Scribners. 1975. 246p. index. LC 75-12722. ISBN 0-684-14[illegible]. $8.95. [illegible]

This book brings the general reader up to date on the legal rights of women while retaining the reliability of a scholarly treatment, such as Leo Kanowitz's Sex Roles In Law and Society (Univ. of New Mexico Pr., 1973). The Law for a Woman presents readable, contemporary case histories and case solutions for problems relating to such subjects as employment, the family, and education. Chapters on rape, the rights of children, and the ERA are welcome because they are not usually included together in one source. Appendixes list fair employment practices, commissions, grounds for divorce, and law schools by state, making this almost a handbook. Within five years much of the practical legal information may be superseded, but the authors' persuasive conviction of the value in knowing legal rights will remain.—Janice Dunham, N.Y.P.L.

SPORTS & RECREATION

Brokefield, Tom. The Sportsman's Complete Book of Trophy and Meat Care.

Stackpole. 1975. 235p. illus. index. LC 75-[illegible]. $8.95. SPORTS

The main thrust of this excellent book is on trophy care, but the section on meat care (in the field and at home) is also very good. There are other good books on this subject, such as Charles Elliott's Care of Game Meats and Trophies (LJ 11/15/75), but Brokefield's has many little extras useful to sportsmen. The section on selecting a knife is interesting; the advantages of taking photographs of downed game are amply discussed; and types of mounts are treated in detail. Some other topics of interest are selecting the taxidermist, field care of trophy game, and cleaning and care of trophies. Recommended.—Steve George, Yuma City-County Lib., Ariz.

Chalk, Ocania. Black College Sport.

Dodd. 1976. 350p. illus. index. ISBN 0-396-07[illegible]-X. $8.95. SPORTS

The story of blacks in American college sports from the beginning of intercollegiate competition until World War II is told in this thoroughly researched

MODERN BODYBUILDING

Revised Edition

By OSCAR HEIDENSTAM

A complete guide to the promotion of fitness, strength, and physique. A new, authoritative, dynamic approach based on medically approved progressive-resistance exercises, suitable for home or gym use. Of use to trainers, remedial gymnasts and physiotherapists. Library Journal. SBN 87523-105-5. 134 line drawings and 12 photographs. $5.95

NET MAKING

By Charles Holdgate

This book opens up a whole new field to anyone with an interest in handcrafts.

Net making offers the advantages of a simple technique, inexpensive materials and immediate results.

Detailed instructions on how to make such diverse objects as a football or basketball carrier, a bottle bag, one or two-color shopping bags, a shoulder bag, a hammock, and a crab pot—all with string and a netting needle. The numerous line drawings illustrate procedures on a step-by-step basis, while photos are used to show completed projects."—Library Journal

136 pages, 9 photographs, 104 line drawings SBN 87523-180-2 $5.95

EMERSON BOOKS, INC.

Buchanan, New York 10511

A HAWTHORN BOOK

Recommended for Libraries

MAGIC FOR NON-MAGICIANS

by Shari Lewis and Abraham B. Hurwitz

A host of tricks appropriate for the non-professional enthusiast are shared by ventriloquist Lewis and her magician professor father. Such readily accessible props as playing cards, coins, and handkerchiefs are called for: step-by-step instructions, including advance preparation, and simple, lucid diagrams are provided. A list of books suggested as further reading for amateurs is appended." The Booklist 11/15/75. Drawings. Bibliography. ISBN: 0-87477-043-2. $5.95 A Tarcher Book.

HAWTHORN BOOKS

New [illegible]

volume. This is not just the story of black colleges, (blacks performed at white schools almost from the very beginning), but the amazing achievement of the black athlete at his own institution in spite of the lack of proper facilities, travel restrictions, poor funding, and other handicaps is the main focus of the book. This is an important story, even though it could have been more readable; and it should be a part of most sports and black-studies collections. Kenneth Tracy, Oklahoma State Univ. Lib., Stillwater

Davies, Gilbert W. The Trivia Quiz Book.

[illegible] ISBN [illegible] $4.[illegible] GAMES

What did Captain Marvel's "Shazam" mean? Who said "Our Country right or wrong"? What is the name Crispus Attucks remembered for? The reader is challenged to test his/her knowledge by answering these questions, plus hundreds more, on a wide range of topics from advertising slogans to women in history. Each of the 112 categories is preceded by a brief essay of facts and events relevant to that topic, followed by statements and questions to be answered or columns of terms and phrases to be matched. Answers are provided. This work will be of interest to informed readers or travelers with time on their hands, but it's of little value to reference collections. For libraries with game and puzzle collections and the money to spare. Peter P. Olevnik, SUNY at Brockport Lib.

Forsberg, Ray. Beginner's Guide to Shorecasting.

Transatlantic. 1975. 183p. drawings by Baz East. photogs. index. ISBN 0-7207-0753-6. $9.50. SPORTS

A good book describing the rugged and often lonely sport of shore fishing. Unfortunately its content and terminology are entirely British, thereby lessening its usefulness in North American libraries. John A. Moldenhauer, Univ. of Guelph Lib., Ontario, Canada

Gauld, Graham. Jim Clark Remembered.

Arco. 1976. 143p. fwd. by Jackie Stewart. illus. index. LC 75-13551. ISBN 0-668-03848-9. $10. BIOG. SPORTS

An objective look at the life of Jim Clark, who began as an amateur racer in Scotland in 1956 and progressed to world driving champion in 1965. (His racing record has only been surpassed by Jackie Stewart.) It is a well-written book, with an easy-flowing style, and it's full of photographs (both racing and nonracing) that document Clark's career. (Showing excellent taste, Gauld has not included a photograph of the 1968 accident in which Clark was killed.) This book should circulate well in most school and public libraries due to the popularity of Clark and of the sport. Connie L. Jenks, Los Angeles County P.L., Norwalk, Calif.

Houghton, George. Believe It Or Not That's Golf: a miscellany of 1,000 oddities, facts, and personal profiles.

Hippocrene, dist. by Optimum Bk. Marketing. 1975. 199p. cartoons by the author. ISBN 0-88002-040-1. $12.50. SPORTS

An unclassified collection of trivia that reads like Ripley's Believe It Or Not and the Guinness Book of World Records. Houghton covers historical firsts (the first green keeper, etc.) and reports statistics on the longest hole, the fastest game, the record number of strokes, etc. Items on ball-stealing animals (snakes, cows, birds, panthers, monkeys) and weird shots (the golfer who hit a human foot out of a deep bunker) will enliven many 19th-hole discussions. Golf addicts will enjoy this book; recommended for public libraries. –Walter H. Roeder, California State Polytechnic Univ. Lib., Pomona

Howe, Colleen. My Three Hockey Players.

Hawthorn. 1975. 224p. illus. LC 74-33591. ISBN 0-8015-5294-X. $8.95. PER NAR/SPORTS

Devoted mother, proud wife, shrewd business person - Colleen Howe is all these and feisty to boot as she reveals in this memoir of her 30 years' association with pro hockey. As wife of Gordie Howe, longtime star of the Detroit Red Wings and now a player with his sons Mark and Marty for the Houston Aeros, Colleen has become something of a queen mother among sports wives. Using a topical rather than a chronological approach, she covers the hectic life of her hockey family both at the rink and at home. Outspoken, she is quick to acknowledge what the Howes owe to hockey but feels free to criticize the sport also. Not a polished piece of writing, but its honesty and viewpoint make it worth reading. –Milton E. Mitchell, Oshkosh P.L., Wis.

Imhoff, Fred & Lex Pranger. This Is Boat Tuning for Speed.

Sail Bks., dist. by Norton. 1975. 143p. color illus. ISBN 0-914814-02-8. $12.95. TECH/SPORTS

Getting the most speed out of a sailboat is frequently a subtle combination of small, seemingly trivial factors. This work attempts to show what some of these factors are, how they affect performance, and what can be done to maximize speed. The first part of the book deals with factors to be considered before the boat gets into the water: hull finish, sail faults, fittings, etc. The final part covers boat tuning and discusses adjustments and modifications (to sails, mast, trim and fittings etc.) that can be carried out while under way to improve performance. The color illustrations are helpful and pertinent; the text is clear and readable. All in all, a useful work for sailing enthusiasts. –Jay Schwartz, Suffolk County Community Coll. Lib., Selden, N.Y.

Kidd, Billy with Douglas Kent Hall. Ski in Six Days.

Regnery. 1975. 105p. illus. index. LC 75-14246. ISBN 0-8092-8310-7. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-8092-8309-3. $4.95. SPORTS

Similar in content to Kidd's Winning Skiing (LJ 10/1/75), this book gives detailed instructions for basic ski maneuvers. The text is accompanied by helpful photographs and diagrams. Whether a person can master these maneuvers in six days or not is debatable, but this book does present a reasonable step-by-step program for learning to ski. The book is a good technical manual and is worth purchase as such. However, libraries desiring a book that treats aspects of skiing beyond the strictly technical would do better to buy Harold Evans and others' We Learned to Ski (LJ 12/15/75). –Janice Marie Zinkl, Downers Grove P.L., Ill.

Korn, Walter. American Chess Art: 250 portraits of endgame study.

Pitman. 1975. 384p. illus. index. bibliog. LC 74-18409. ISBN 0-273-07215-3. $12.95. GAMES

The endgame study, a composed position in which the solver is to find a win or draw in an unspecified number of moves, is undeservedly neglected by many practical chess players. Like musical études, studies are instructive because they resemble practical situations and are often strikingly beautiful. This collection, by a famed authority, focuses on American composers, an idea long overdue; Americans have played a crucial role in the development of the art. Each example includes a clear explanation of the relevant themes as well as the full solution. I would have liked to see more detailed notes for the novice; nevertheless, this is an important and engrossing book that can be heartily recommended. –Burt Hochberg, Editor, "Chess Life & Review," Newburgh, N.Y.

Kuenster, John, ed. From Cobb to "Catfish": 128 illustrated stories from "Baseball Digest".

Rand McNally. 1975. 286p. fwd. by Joe Garagiola. illus. LC 75-15828. ISBN 0-528-81017-0. $14.95. SPORTS

Stories from Baseball Digest that are sure to lengthen the bleacher buff's reading season. Herein are included tales of Hank Aaron's debut, Ted Williams' farewell, Bobby Thompson's homer, Ebbets Field's demise, Casey's "Stengelese," Nolan Ryan's fastball, Rip Sewell's "Ephus Ball," Bill Veeck's midget, Ty Cobb's spikes, Pie Traynor's arm, Lou Gehrig's endurance, Babe Ruth's magnetism, the A's antics tidbits fashioned to tap most any memory. A nice selection buttressed by some equally fine photographs. William H. Hoffman, Kansas City P.L., Mo.

Mead, Robert Douglas. The Canoer's Bible.

Doubleday (Outdoor Bible). 1976. c. 200p. illus. LC 74-33610. pap. ISBN 0-385-07276-7. $2.50 RECREATION

Of the many recent titles that attempt to broadly cover canoeing, this is by far the best buy. Note that it is another work that covers a popular subject widely, but only in limited detail, and as such should be supplemented by material that deals with the various aspects of canoeing in greater detail. Thus although this title covers more or less the normal material, it is well written and is a very adequate volume at a very low price. Recommended. Ronald J. Nimmer, Ohio State Univ. Lib., Columbus

Nemes, Sylvester. The Soft-Hackled Fly.

Chatham, dist. by Dutton. 1975. 130p. photogs., some color. bibliog. LC 75-25235. ISBN 0-85699-124-4. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-85699-125-2. $4.95 SPORTS

For years the soft-hackled fly has been more popular in Britain (both in the water and in print) than in North America. When James Leisenring and Vernon S. Hidy's The Art of Tying the Wet Fly and Fishing the Flymph was reprinted (Crown, 1971) with added material, the wingless, subsurface flies saw a comeback with American anglers. This excellent little book will strengthen that comeback. Nemes describes the history of the fly, its current use, and tying instructions; the latter are illustrated with clear photos. Two color plates show the finished product. A specialized book recommended for subject collections. —John A. Moldenhauer, Univ. of Guelph Lib., Ontario, Canada

Posey, Sam. The Mudge Pond Express.
Putnam. Feb. 1976. 309p. photogs. LC 75-27384. ISBN 0-399-11569-2. $8.95. AUTOBIOG/SPORTS
Posey, like many of his contemporaries, grew up in the 1950's and 1960's dreaming of becoming a racing driver. The difference between Posey and the rest of us is that he made it: Can Am, Indy, Formula 5000, Grand Prix, and this year IMSA BMW's. He takes us from his youth with the "Mudge Pond express," a soap-box affair, through the beginning of 1975 and his decision to drive for BMW. Along the way he writes an honest and sometimes eloquent account of "what it's like out there." He is honest in dealing with the complex interpersonal relationships that sometimes complicate the sport. Eloquence shows in passages about a perfect lap, or in a description of the long day's drive at Le Mans, or in his thoughts about the death of his friend Peter Revson. Posey's book is not a ghost written puff piece, but a work of some depth and perception about both the sport and himself. Highly recommended. —Charles A. Seavey, Univ. of Northern Iowa Lib., Cedar Falls

Swisher, Doug & Carl Richards. Fly Fishing Strategy.
Crown. 1975. 184p. illus. by Dave Whitlock. index. LC 75-25880. ISBN 0-517-52371-X. $10. SPORTS
In Selective Trout (Crown, 1971) Swisher and Richards detailed their quest for the most effective fly patterns. Here, ably assisted by Whitlock's drawings, they turn their attention to the second part of the fisherman's problem—presenting the fly properly. Essentially, this means good casting, with mastery of curves, loops, accuracy, and technique for realistic presentation in all kinds of water. The authors are experienced instructors at casting clinics and schools, and they include many exercises that should benefit both the veteran fly fisherman and the beginner. The directions are clear, thorough, and well illustrated and include instruction on streams, lake, and saltwater fishing, as well as information on the latest equipment and patterns. Recommended for fly fishermen and for libraries catering to them. —Roland Person, Southern Illinois Univ. Lib., Carbondale

That Old Ball Game: rare photographs from baseball's glorious past.
Regnery. 1975. 229p. text by Lawrence Kart, comp. & ed. by David R. Phillips. illus. index. LC 75-13240. ISBN 0-8092-8101-1. $17.95. SPORTS
And still the coffee-table baseball books keep on coming. This one specializes in rare photographs spanning the years 1850 to 1930, and they're beauties. The photographs are part of the collection of David Phillips, and most will be new to even the most devout baseball fanatic. The sullen critic might wish for more action shots, and some may complain that the Chicago teams receive too much attention. But let us not niggle, especially with spring training just round the corner again. And my goodness Christy Mathewson was a handsome man.—Keith Cushman, Dept. of English, Univ. of Chicago

Thompson, Danny with Bob Fowler. E-6: the diary of a major league shortstop.
Dillon Pr. 1975. 234p. photogs. pap. ISBN 0-87518-128-7. $3.95. BIOG/SPORTS
Baseball diaries are commonplace items. Every year a score of such books flood the market, and most lack social perspective and literary grace. E-6, a recount of Minnesota Twin Danny Thompson's 1975 season, suffers in some measure from these liabilities. Thompson's redeeming quality, ironically, is his leukemia, an account of which lends to the book a poignant quality it would otherwise not possess. The author includes vignettes of clubhouse events and game pranks and tries to recapture the spirit of his team's past season. Minnesota's 1975 season failed to arouse either its fans or its players. Unfortunately, to readers Thompson's book may have much the same effect. Curt Smith, Assistant Director of Public Relations, Hamilton Coll., Clinton, N.Y.

THEATER

Baumann, Charly with Leonard A. Stevens. Tiger Tiger: my 25 years with the big cats.
Playboy, dist. by S. & S. 1976. 279p. illus. LC 75-17264. ISBN 0-87223-437-1. $10.
Chipperfield, Jimmy. My Wild Life.
Putnam. 1975. 219p. illus. index. LC 75-23497. ISBN 0-399-11616-8. $8.95. AUTOBIOG/CIRCUS
Written in vintage "True Confessions" prose, Tiger, Tiger is the story of a noted tiger trainer and circus performer. The book traces Baumann's life from his boyhood in Berlin through his current position as performance director of Ringling Brothers. Never one to play down his accomplishments, Baumann nevertheless does give the reader some interesting information on the care and training of the big cats. The problem lies in his depiction of circus life, a depiction which is superficial, especially when compared to that in Fred Powledge's excellent Mud Show (LJ 11/1/75).

My Wild Life, on the other hand, is a charming book, completely devoid of the egotism that runs rampant in Tiger, Tiger. Chipperfield comes from a family with a long history of circus work, but his book is more than just another circus story. Chipperfield has led a fascinating life; he did a stint in the RAF as a fighter pilot, had a job as a provider of animals for films, and developed safari parks in Europe and North America. There is a vitality and a love of adventure and wildlife in this book, and it should prove enormously popular. Highly recommended for high school and public libraries.—Alan C. Hochberg, SUNY at Farmingdale Lib.

Dalrymple, Jean. From the Last Row.
James T. White & Co., 1700 State Hwy 3, Clifton, N.J. 07013. 1975. 301p. illus. index. LC 75-17958. ISBN 0-88371-008-0. $15. MEMOIR/THEATER
Dalrymple's very personal view of the formation of the New York City Center of Music and Drama is useful in pointing out the dramatic and "light opera" presentations that she produced. Although one might get the impression that she practically ran City Center (along with Newbold Morris and Morton Baum), she does give considerable insight into the general problems of a large, small-budget production company and the special problems of a city sponsored (and partially controlled) performing arts center. The book's main emphasis rightly enough is on the work involved in trying to establish the drama and musical repertory companies at City Center, and Dalrymple is at her best discussing these elements. She may be the last of a dying breed, at least as far as New York City is concerned; it is the public's loss.—Richard M. Buck, N.Y.P.L.

Parker, Derek & Julia Parker. The Natural History of the Chorus Girl.
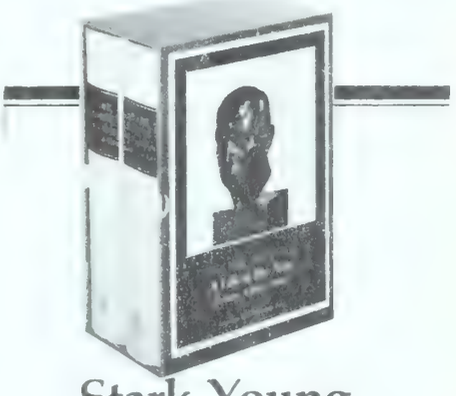
Bobbs. 1975. 192p. photogs., some color. index. LC 75-10717. ISBN 0-672-52155-5. $15.95. THEATER
An amiable, if empty-headed account of the world of the chorus girl. The authors display a decidedly British bias, but they are generous enough to include information on the Ziegfeld Follies, Busby Berkeley movies, the Folies Bergere, and the Las Vegas scene. They also spend an inordinate amount of time defending the



Stark Young
A Life in the Arts
Letters, 1900–1962
Edited by JOHN PILKINGTON

An award-winning edition of the letters of Stark Young, one of the foremost drama critics in the history of the American theater and a contributor to virtually all of the fine arts. Two handsome volumes in an attractive slipcase. 1500 pages, $50.00

Louisiana State University Press
Baton Rouge 70803

moral reputation of the girls. However, this bewildering defense of the chorus girl's virtue, accompanied by an insanely tasteful chapter on the chorus boy and his sexual preferences, injects a sort of foolish grandeur into the basically mediocre text. The book does contain a grand assortment of photographs and poster reproductions which, more than the text, evoke the giddy, mindless, sensual spirit of the chorus girl. Since there is little else published on the subject, this handsome, harmless volume will be of interest to most large-sized libraries. –William J. Harding, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Cinema

Cagney, James. Cagney By Cagney.

Doubleday. Feb. 1976. 216p. illus. LC 74-18784. ISBN 0-385-04587-5. $8.95. AUTOBIOG/CINEMA

Cagney briefly describes his early life on New York's Lower East Side, his struggling days in vaudeville and his graduation to Broadway and to Hollywood, his stormy overworked years at Warners and his eventual stardom, his life with Frances Vernon (whom he married in 1922), his retirement, and his ecological concerns. He also gives a bit on acting and politics and a final note on the AFI award given to him in 1974. Interspersed are examples of his occasionally bitter rhyming poetry, a life-long hobby. There will be fans disappointed by this collection of "reminiscences that might add up to a book." It is very informally written, at times sounding like an oral history; and Cagney's surprising lack of concern for his acting skills and the way he skips through his career in rapid-fire fashion slights his many memorable films. However, he delivers what he promises: "a chance to talk about the wonderful people who have enriched my life"; and the anecdotes fly in all directions. Cagney is not convincingly humble he's too feisty and somewhat opinionated for that but, overall, his "autobiography" makes an enjoyable fast read.—David Bartholomew, N.Y.P.L.

Chaplin, Charles. My Life in Pictures.

Grosset. 1975. 320p. intro. by Francis Wyndham color illus. LC 75-18583. ISBN 0-448-12037-2 $19.95. AUTOBIOG/CINEMA

The little tramp has never looked better; nor has he ever been presented in so many of his various aspects. Here are the Spanish cigarette card collections depicting Chaplin in fictitious adventures (and I thought Davy Crockett was marketed!); posters, stills, and other photographs relating to virtually every film he worked on; production sheets, publicity shots, and some lovely portraits of Charlie with family and friends (Chaplin is here publishing some of this material, taken from his own archives, for the first time). Chaplin's brief comments alongside some of the illustrations serve to give context to the visuals and to provide a perspective on Hollywood in its early years. But the picture's the thing here; and these fairly resonate with the humor, pathos, and humanity that were at the core of Chaplin's genius and his art. Carey A. Horwitz, formerly with "Library Journal"

Fry, William, Jr. & Michelle Allen. Make 'Em Laugh: life studies of comedy writers.

Science & Behavior. 1975. ISBN 0-8314-0041-2. $6.95. COMM/CINEMA

Seven comedy writers (Norman Lear, Jack Elinson, Ruth Flippen, Bob Henry, Billy Barnes, Arnie Rosen, and Herbie Baker) have been interviewed by the authors in an attempt to analyze why these people have been successful in writing funny material for TV and the movies. Each interview is preceded by a short biographical sketch and a partial listing of his/her film and TV credits. Unfortunately, what interest the interviews build up is negated by the psychological mumbo-jumbo the authors place before and after the interviews. This material is dull and makes the book neither entertaining reading nor psychological study, but a rather strange hybrid. James L. Limbacher, Henry Ford Centennial Lib., Dearborn, Mich.

MacBean, James Roy. Film and Revolution.

Indiana Univ. Pr. 1975. 384p. photogs. index. LC 75-1936. ISBN 0-253-32189-1. $15; pap. ISBN 0-253-20191-8. $4.95. CINEMA

Challenging film critics who he believes implicitly accept the political status quo by approaching films as an immutable "reflection of reality," MacBean forges a persuasive argument for an unabashedly Marxist aesthetic of film. He focuses chiefly on European and Third World films that he feels attack capitalist ideology and argue for a socialist alternative (only one American film, Robert Kramer's Ice, is treated, and not too kindly, at that). Concentrating on the films of Godard, Godard and Gorin, and their "Dziga Vertov Group," MacBean offers perhaps the best sustained criticism of their works to date. He also deals with films by Solanas, Rossellini, Makavejev, Petri, and Marcel Ophuls. Finally, he clarifies his Marxist theoretical stand vis-à-vis the currently popular "post-Bazin" systems of structuralism and semiology (as expressed chiefly in the works of Christian Metz). MacBean's jargon-free analysis of art as a tool of ideology makes compelling reading. An important book. Roger Shatzkin, Dept. of English, Rutgers Univ., New Brunswick, N.J.

fiction

Arias, Ron. The Road to Tamazunchale.

West Coast. 1975. 109p. ISBN 0-915596-12-1. $3. I

This charming and imaginative first novel looks over the stooped shoulders of an old Chicano, Fausto, who seems too busy to die. He is cared for by his niece and by his wife (who is dead but keeps reappearing to say "I told you so."). As the women urge him to take it easy, Mario, an engaging petty thief, and Marcelino, a wandering shepherd flutist, urge him on (in opposite directions). In a rare mixture of fantastical and realistic modes, Arias manages to have Fausto thread through everything on his way to saving a band of starving countrymen (who've entered the states illegally). Besides the novel's undeniable intrinsic value, which would recommend it for any contemporary fiction collection, The Road to Tamazunchale is one of the first achieved works of Chicano consciousness and spirit.—Robert Bonazzi, Austin, Tex.

Arnold, June. Sister Gin.

Daughters, Inc. 1975. 215p. LC 75-16510. pap. ISBN 0-913780-09-X. $4 I

Su, the central character in this unusual novel, is a woman of 46 "who had long ago surrendered to the loneliness of being right . . . right in her health, her weight, her hairstyle . . . Everything in her life had been corrected" —everything, that is, except her biology (she is going through a difficult menopause) and her deteriorating 20-year relationship with Bettina. Su tries to leave Bettina and can't, loses her job and a book contract, tries to write a play (and can't). Along the way she begins to act like a free woman, although it is never clear whether she has actually become free from "being right" or has simply lost her inhibitions under the influence of Mamie (her new 77-year-old love) and "Sister Gin" sometimes the juniper-berry type and sometimes Su's own alter ego. This brief summary of plot, however, does not do justice to what is essentially a very wise, droll, and even when dealing with grotesqueries strangely jolly book. Arnold writes with great insight and understanding of women, lesbians, menopause, aging and the aged, and especially of the strictures within which women who are no longer "young" are forced to live in our society. –Audrey B. Eaglen, Cuyahoga County P.L., Cleveland

Auchincloss, Louis. The Winthrop Covenant.

Houghton. Feb. 1976. 246p. $8.95 I

In a collection of nine short stories, Auchincloss traces the course of the Puritan ethic as expressed in the distinguished Winthrop family from 1630 to the present. All Winthrops have a sense of mission, "presumably divinely inspired," which preoccupies them in regard to their fellow man, and they cope with it in widely differing ways. The stories are ingeniously plotted; all characters are members of the tight little upper-class facet of society where a great deal goes on beneath the highly civilized surface. Albert Hausmann, Wallingford P. L., Conn.

Bonazzi, Robert & Rochelle Bonazzi, eds. Making a Break.

Latitudes Pr. 3514 Lafayette Ave., Austin, Tex. 78722. (New Departures in Fiction. Vol. 2). 1975. 243p. illus. LC 74-31752. $7.50; pap. $4.50. F

The second volume of a series of experimental prose, representing eleven contemporary writers. The selections (mostly reprinted from literary magazines) tend toward surrealistic fantasies, disjointed narrative structures, and a general searching for original ways of describing experience. Charles Baxter's humorous Verdi in America, Henry H. Roth's street-wise Cruz Stories, and Stephen Dixon's deadpan descriptions of physical and emotional violence are among the more impressive pieces. While the concentration on language and style as opposed to clarity of action sometimes makes it difficult for the reader to get involved, the writing is vivid, witty, and worth attending to.—Norman Stock, Brooklyn Coll. Lib.

Buckley, Brian & Jim Hamilton, ed. & sel. Festival and Other Stories.
David & Charles. 1975. 248p. $9.95. I
This volume contains 38 Australian short stories, selected from those published in a Melbourne newspaper's short story festival, some by established writers and some first efforts. The overall quality of the stories is high and the variety considerable. Included are science fiction, humor, character studies, adventure, lyricism, grim realism—something for every taste. Despite the heavy dose of Australian slang in some of the stories, they're all entertaining, and this collection will prove popular with browsers of all persuasions.—Melanie Axel-Lute, formerly with Elmwood Park P.L., N.J.

Carver, Raymond. Will You Please Be Quiet, Please?
McGraw. Mar. 1976. 249p. LC 75-23333. ISBN 0-07-010193-0. $8.95. I
Twenty-two short stories—the shortest is only two pages—by the author of three books of poems. Carver uses his experience as a poet to the best of advantages: his stories are compact, brief, sharply focused on particular places, people, and events. Although he occasionally uses flashbacks, his central interest is in those brief happenings—Joyce called them epiphanies—in which an essential quality of an individual's character or life is summed up in the objective correlatives of a particular situation. Carver would not describe the matter so academically. His stories take place in the Pacific Northwest; his characters are ordinary people fitting uneasily into ordinary lives; his attitude toward them is sympathetic, perceptive, and excellently expressed. His prose is admirable. -J. D. O'Hara, Dept. of English, Univ. of Connecticut, Storrs

Crowther, John. Firebase.
St. Martin's. Mar. 1976. 207p. LC 75-9489. $7.95. I
Alpha Company of the 11th Infantry Brigade, manning an outpost in Vietnam, is composed of blacks and whites. In the boredom and frustration of an idiotic war, racial antagonism erupts. CO Captain Pontius, a white Southerner, railroads two blacks for the murder of a white, but covers up the murder of a black as a killing in action. Lieutenant Mather, an excellent officer and a black, learns about "the man" the hard way. The details of apathy, lack of discipline, racial tensions, drugs, liquor, and homosexuality are sharply drawn, and the novel is quite readable.—Albert Hausmann, Wallingford P. L., Conn.

Davis, John Gordon. Taller Than Trees.
Doubleday. 1975. 210p. LC 75-13392. ISBN 0-385-11069-3. $6.95. F
Dhlulamiti ("taller than trees") is an aging, scarred, man-killing elephant. When he is wounded yet again by man, he goes on a destructive rampage, crushing and killing men and destroying villages. Jumbo McGuire is an aging, hard-drinking former elephant hunter. It is, he feels, his duty to track down and kill the elephant. In alternating sequences the paths of these two larger-than-life characters draw closer and closer together. The shattering climax is an elemental duel of man and beast against nature and each other. The African background in this fine adventure story is beautifully done, and the pace is appropriately suspenseful. Recommended for adult and YA collections.—Robert H. Donahugh, Youngstown P.L.

Hochman, Sandra. Happiness Is Too Much Trouble.
Putnam. Feb. 1976. 250p. ISBN 0-399-11638-9. $7.95. I
The novel opens on the eve of Lulu Cartwright's success. Lawyer-cum-porno comedy-writer, she has just been appointed head of a major Hollywood movie studio. Memories, fantasies, anecdotes intending to show how Lulu got to be queen of "Suck City" are of a miserable boarding school childhood, two husbands—one egomaniacal cellist, one indifferent suburbanite -a faithless lover named Dumbo Lavitch, and other losers. Now Lulu prefers power to love, and her idea of women's liberation is having power to "kick ass." Hochman can make funny cracks amid the polemics and famous name-dropping. But this is really one hundred characters in search of a plot; it tries so hard to be Fear of Flying that negative comparisons are inevitable. Hara L. Seltzer, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Lindsay, John V. The Edge.
Norton. Feb. 1976. 240p. ISBN 0-393-08732-8. $7.95. F
The time is vaguely the future. The USA is under martial law, wracked by massive unemployment and street vigilantism. Congress is debating the Special Powers bill which would, in effect, nullify the Bill of Rights. Young congressman Mike Stuart, the Lindsay-like hero, opposes the legislation, gets roughed up by some neofascist types, but eventually saves himself and the country. This it-couldn't-happen-here saga by the former mayor of New York City is amateurishly plotted, embarrassingly written (Stuart to an aide: "Stay cool and walk tall"), and curiously unsophisticated in a political sense.—Kenneth F. Kister, West Palm Beach P.L., Fla.

McCauley, Carole Spearin. Happenthing in Travel On.
Daughters, Inc. 1975. 273p. LC 75-16508. pap. ISBN 0-913780-08-1. $4. F
Daughters, Inc., a small and relatively new publisher of feminist fiction, can be proud of its decision to issue McCauley's first novel. On one level this account of seven women who survive a winter plane crash in the mountains of New England is a suspenseful thriller—unique in being an adventure story without men. On a deeper level, it examines the past lives of the women and explores their relationships with one another during this period of enforced communal living. Since the protagonist, Ivy, is a computer programmer, several sections of the novel are written in computer language; although these sections may at first confound the reader, one gradually realizes that McCauley has employed random language as a metaphor for the randomness of life. Despite occasional plot contrivances and a failure to develop several characters completely, McCauley makes us wonder and care about the fate of these women until the final pages.—Marlene Kondelik, Olivet Coll. Lib., Mich.

Nwankwo, Nkem. My Mercedes Is Bigger Than Yours.
Harper. 1975. 177p. LC 75-6374. ISBN 0-06-013208-6. $6.95. I
Nwankwo's second novel is a light and amusing contribution to the growing and varied body of Nigerian literature originating in Iboland. In a lively, picaresque style he narrates the tale of Onuma, a young graduate from Nigeria's first university, who has discovered the joys of fast cars and loose women. The Anglo-Nigerian Shipping Company hires him as a "public relations" man whose primary task is to hunt up foreign exchange on the black market in Lagos. An accident and a series of encounters involving him in local elections mark the bizarre return of the prodigal son to his home village, Aniocha. Nwankwo's uncluttered prose and fast-paced dialogue make this stab at African materialism a pleasure to read.—Thomas A. Hale, Dept. of French & Comparative Literature Program, Pennsylvania State Univ., University Park

Olsen, Jack. Massey's Game.
Playboy, dist. by S. & S. 1976. 271p. $8.95. F
There is no excuse for the juvenile humor, sloppy writing, and poor plot development in this novel about professional basketball. What story line exists revolves around Broussard Massey, an 8'2" center with a mysterious past who joins

LJ reviews HBJ

"Delicately nuanced stories of Italian Jews caught between cultures and between wars.... [the] volume's centerpiece—a revised version of the 1958 novella, The Gold-rimmed Eyeglasses... is a matchless and moving piece of neorealism, one of the finest works to have emerged from post-war Italy."
—Library Journal

Translated by William Weaver
$7.95
ISBN: 0-15-183146-7
A Helen and Kurt Wolff Book

by Giorgio Bassani
THE SMELL OF HAY
HARCOURT BRACE JOVANOVICH

the NBA's worst team, the Wasps, and leads them to the playoffs. The level of humor achieved is indicated by the names given the Wasps' management: Abraham Gross, owner; Jack Carbon, PR man; and Darius Guile, general manager. Mascot's Game is a rip-off at any price. Saul J. Amdursky, Albion, P.L., Mich

Oren, Uri. Loving Strangers.
[illegible] F

This book is a cliché. He is an Israeli soldier; she, a Jordanian student living in London. They meet when he seeks her out to return the letters of her Egyptian lover, killed in the Sinai Campaign. They fall in love and plan to marry in spite of the opposition of friends and family. But reality makes them abandon their plans, and they do not meet again until he is mortally wounded while retaking Jerusalem during the Six Day War and is assigned to the hospital where she is a nurse. The problems of the Middle East deserve a more sensitive and original treatment. Sentimental and predictable reading. Nina Kahn Fenenbock, formerly with City-County Lib., Glasgow, Mont.

Reybold, Malcolm. The Inspector's Opinion: the Chappaquiddick incident.
Saturday Review Pr: Dutton, 1975. 312p. LC 75-15731. ISBN 0-8415-0399-0. $7.95. F

What happened at Chappaquiddick in 1969 remains largely a mystery and casts a cloud over the political future of Senator Edward Kennedy. The unexplained incidents in this tragedy are the basis for a novel whose main character Inspector Charles Darby, a retired Scotland Yard detective purports to study the evidence from the official inquest and then gives an alternative explanation of what occurred at Chappaquiddick. Darby's thesis is that Kennedy and Mary Jo Kopechne stopped by the water and bridge to have a drink of vodka after leaving the party and that later Mary Jo drove the car over the bridge. Kennedy and his two friends then tried to save her, but, according to the Inspector, gave up without considering the possibility that an air pocket inside the car could be keeping her alive. The Inspector's rendering of the tragedy appears to make more sense than the official story of the incident, but no amount of credibility can make up for the novel's artificiality and stiltedness. Reybold would have done better to put his theories concerning Chappaquiddick into an article and never to have invented Inspector Darby. Jack Forman, Eastern Massachusetts Regional Lib. System, Boston

Savage, Thomas. Midnight Line.
[illegible] F

Author of a number of sensitively written novels which probe the human condition, Savage focuses here on that 20th-Century phenomenon, the late-night radio talk show. Tom Westbrook, greatest and most powerful of the talkmasters, has risen to pre-eminence because he can speak with kindness, sympathy, simple friendship, and wisdom to the uneducated, the lonely, the misfits, and also because of his daring in introducing topics which have never been dealt with before on radio. Westbrook is king of the M.C.'s, but he is also the product of an inconsequential family in an inconsequential Montana town which he hates. Twice divorced, his goal in marriage has eluded him: to produce children in whom he could achieve continuity and a measure of immortality. So at once success and failure, Westbrook continues to satisfy his public until an unknown Voice precipitates a climax, calling at the end of a program to insinuate a private knowledge of Westbrook's past and to suggest in succeeding calls that his impregnation of a local girl in his hometown long ago had had consequences unknown to him. Though it thins out somewhat at the end, this is a well-written, thoughtful, interestingly structured novel. –L. W. Griffin, Univ. of Wisconsin Lib., Madison

Taylor, Gordon. Place of the Dawn.
Holt, 1975. 184p. LC 75-513. ISBN 0-03-014531-7. $6.95. F

Anatolia is the setting for this story about an attractive American widow who volunteers as a worker on an archaeological dig. Determined to climb a volcanic mountain near the site, she flouts Turkish custom and the climb ends in disaster. The story is told from three viewpoints: that of a college friend of the heroine, living in Turkey; that of a female archaeologist on the excavation staff; and that of the heroine. The characters are not very well developed, but the book will probably appeal to those who like adventure stories. Deborah W. Harrison, Social Science Div., Catonsville Community Coll., Md.

Thomas, Audrey. Blown Figures.
Knopf, 1976. 222p. illus. ISBN 0-394-47613-1. $7.95. F

"Isobel doesn't live," says Jason, her husband, perplexed by the inanition that is a symptom of her madness, "she exits." He means "exists," but his verbal slip is apt. In Blown Figures, Isobel abandons the structure of sanity imperfectly supplied in Canada by Jason and their children and embarks on a solitary, demon-haunted journey to recover the lost traces of her life. From London, where she seeks in vain the lover who deserted her, Isobel sails for West Africa to find the remains of a child she aborted in Ghana years before. The dark forces of Africa either real or imagined –hound the tormented young woman to her ultimate destruction. The terrain is surreal, teeming with images of terror that suggest life's wrenching transitions from egg to creature to corpse. By expanding and contracting perceptions, by quick shifts of focus, Thomas (an American novelist now living in Canada), succeeds in capturing the quality of imagination run amok. Elizabeth Tingom, New York

Science Fiction

Knight, Damon, ed. & intro. Science Fiction of the Thirties.
Bobbs, 1975. bibliog. LC 74-17669. ISBN 0-672-52087-7. $12.50.

Zebrowski, George, ed. Tomorrow Today
Unit. (Planet Series), 1975. 188p. LC 73-82547. ISBN 0-913300-33-0. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-913300-31-4. $3.95. F

It is interesting to consider these two collections from today's perspective; and, having done so, it is my opinion that, in comparison with Knight's selections, the stories in the Zebrowski anthology fail, in the present and the future, for two reasons. First, while some of the stories do develop interesting angles on the destiny of our biosphere (the apparent intention of the entire series of which this is the first volume), the range and depth of vision that so clearly comes through the Knight collection is simply not present in the new stories. But that may be excused: it's difficult even to keep up with, let alone second guess, real science these days. Now the second failing of virtually all of the Tomorrow Today stories concerns the fatal matter of style. The early stories –even those by Leinster, Weinbaum, and Del Rey—are at times unpolished and naïve. But they are stories; and sf, as genre writing, must boil down to telling a good tale. It is most unfortunate that so many contemporary writers desert the story in their quest for a style that will set the literary world on its ear. As a result, Tomorrow Today is of little interest or value. But buy Science Fiction of the Thirties; taken with Asimov's Before the Golden Age, it provides a good view of what we thought then that we would be becoming now.—Carey A. Horwitz, formerly with "Library Journal"

mystery ... detective ...suspense...

The Day That I Die (Bobbs. Feb. 1976. $7.95) by P. F. KLUGE is a gripping tale of the murder of an American World War II hero, now on the skids, returned to the South Pacific to Peleliu. The star reporter for a New Yorker-type magazine is sent to investigate and turns up, in the astonishing sordidness of the South Pacific, a story of stragglers from the war, Japanese seekers for their war dead, and a Micronesian revolutionary agitator. For freshness, for verisimilitude, and for spare but effective violence, a big cut above most.

In The Aelian Fragment (Putnam. Feb. 1976. ISBN 0-399-11625-7. $7.95) by George BARTRAM a collector of manuscripts, a disagreeable, avaricious, and narrow American professor, is in Turkey, on the trail of a rare fragment. At the same time, a samizdat manuscript surfaces and turns out to be of vital interest not only to the Russians, but also to the CIA, to the PLO, to the Israelis, and to the Turks. The American, trapped by his greed, lands in a pretty mess and is tormented and in turn abandoned by these agents; he barely escapes, wiser but not undamaged. Compelling and engrossing; the characters are lively, the unpleasantness is realistic, and the action is brutally frank.

In Ripoff (Harper. Mar. 1976. ISBN 0-06-012809-7. $6.95) by Arthur MALING a securities analyst, the partner of a New York brokerage firm, gets roped into investigating a possible fraud in an insurance company, which may involve the theft of $23 million in securities. The holding company is a Chicago-based conglomerate, and a very fishy crew they are. Things come to a head when a junior member of the broker's staff is shot while trying to protect him. This is a fast, fluent read, full of authentic if slightly rancid information about the business world; and what better motive can one ask for than tremendous sums of money?

MYSTERY

Gavin BLACK switches from the Far East to Arran in A Big Wind for Summer (Harper. Mar. 1976. LC 75-25076. ISBN 0-06-010366-3. $7.95). A flinty old dowager, an ex-Colonial, has what may or may not be an unknown Renoir, and fearing that she may be being cheated by a dishonest dealer (a most likely possibility), calls for help from another ex-Colonial. The atmosphere is slightly sour, a realistic view of the leftovers of the British raj. Black has produced yet another excellent adventure, although I hope that his next one again will take place in the Orient.

A Waiting Game (St. Martin's. Feb. 1976. ISBN 0-7181-1368-3. $7.95) by Michael POWELL is a charming, unsophisticatedly romantic little thriller that takes place in Ireland. A gamekeeper, a Canadian with Irish antecedents, is employed by a local landowner, but soon gets entangled in the investigation of the murder of a family of three Americans found dead on a local lake. A closely knit family in the neighborhood is suspected of knowing more than it should, and the daughter provides the romantic interest. The suspense comes about through events harking back to the Troubles, but the main interest comes from the small change of country life and the important activities of poaching, hunting, and the like. Old-fashioned, perhaps, but in a valid tradition.

Drummer in the Dark (HBJ. Feb. 1976. ISBN 0-15-126580-1. $7.95) by Francis CLIFFORD also involves Ireland but is quite another matter. In this one the IRA has discovered an entirely new method of blowing people up—a kind of long-distance explosive. The British are understandably exercised by the endless attacks, and their interest focuses on an English traveling salesman drumming up trade in Poland. Might he be a spy or might he be the source of the new and secret machinery? He falls in love with a pretty Polish girl, and that is the beginning of the end of the race between the pursuer and the quarry, which turns into a vendetta. Well up to Clifford's professional standards.

Final Proof (Harper. Mar. 1976. ISBN 0-06-013564-6. $6.95) by Marie RENO is a chatty, slight thriller about the New York publishing business in which the head of a book club is shot to death. The suspense editor, an inquisitive young woman, is made much of by the investigating policeman, an attractive lieutenant. The clues are few: the victim's failed ten-year-old novel, a corpse stuffed into a car trunk in Brooklyn, an ex-husband perhaps wanting to remarry, the line of succession in the business. However, tidy, respectable, and entertaining.

John Buxton HILTON's No Birds Sang (St. Martin's. Feb. 1976. ISBN 0-333-18610-9. $7.95) takes place in East Anglia and has its origins in World War II. A man has been caught in the middle of maneuvers in a deserted village. He turns out to be a local nuisance, a longtime trespasser involved in an ancient scandal with a crippled woman and perhaps a connection with a deplorable family of local hooligans, one of whom gets killed. The investigation is in the hands of an ill-tempered, irascible but brilliant policeman. The detection is serious, the plotting is elaborate but sound, and the clues are skillfully paid out.

Navona 1000 (Bobbs. Feb. 1976. $7.95) by Mel ARRIGHI is totally readable, but on close inspection, not a bit sensible. The story starts out with a bang; in the red-light district of Amsterdam, a professional murderer working for the Arabs shoots an American fund raiser. Since the assassin is getting a little tired, he decides to do only one more job before he retires to his cottage in the country. This last assignment consists of a murder to be effected in Rome: the victim turns out to be a young woman whom he loves. Alas, the crux of the plot turns on not one but two damaging coincidences, and the ending is cobbled together, which is a pity.

A Witchdance in Bavaria (Doubleday. Feb. 1976. LC 75-14846. ISBN 0-385-11225-4. $5.95) by Noah WEBSTER is a pleasant enough novel involving a Scottish civil servant, an expert auditor set to look into a vanishing company; a trio of disappearing directors; and a large debt. One of the trio shows up in Munich during Fasching, a sort of German carnival and apparently a time for murder and mayhem. There is considerable expertise about dubious business practices, which is unfortunately diluted by some unlikely activity having to do with smuggling in a troubled area of Africa. Competent, nevertheless, and up to a point straightforward.

Jackdaw (Holt. Feb. 1976. LC 75-21460. ISBN 0-03-016626-8. $6.95) by Christopher HILL is full of palpably sinister atmosphere, although the plot is a little creaky. A young Belgian woman goes as a companion to mad Empress Carlotta in the 1920's and is presumed to have been given a fortune in jewels. Some 50 years later a rather stupid young Englishman goes to an ugly village in France where he rents a house in which the selfsame jewels are reputed to be hidden. This leads to mysterious assaults, complicated by an odd infatuation, and the ending is hectic, disheveled, and quite unexpected.

The Zhukov Briefing (St. Martin's. 1976. LC 74-83584. $7.95) by Antony TREW is a British naval thriller for confirmed seadogs. A secret Russian submarine has an accident off the coast of a small Norwegian island. The English, French, and American secret services long to get a look at this vessel before the Russians fix it and sail away. The English show up dressed as Chinese, and the French and the Americans come as themselves; all take part in a murderous tug of war, ending in a defection. There is a great deal of technical detail, but the plot is quite good of its kind. For those who understand engineering and naval matters.

The Ninth Man (Doubleday. 1976. LC 75-14989. ISBN 0-385-11261-0. $8.95) by John LEE is due to get the full sales pitch. It concerns the well-known landing

"A remarkably imaginative thriller"*

A BIG ENOUGH WREATH

By William Garner

Author of The Us or Them War and The Deep Deep Freeze

"Self-made electronics tycoon Henry Harper is goaded by a TV interviewer into threatening to leave behind him a name that's 'immortal.' He can do it, too—by his ability to control a deadly missile called Sky Baby, now orbiting the earth. When Harper disappears...matters come to an exciting head on a tiny Caribbean island....Garner isn't simply telling a story in this unusually intelligent spy novel: he's exploring the hidden springs of political power." —Publishers Weekly. "Highly amusing in a surrealistic way." —Library Journal*. $7.95

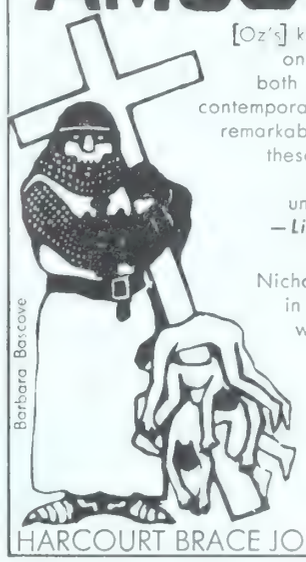
G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

LJ reviews HBJ

UNTO DEATH

Two novellas
Crusade and Late Love

AMOS OZ



[Oz's] keen comments on anti-Semitism both medieval and contemporary, and...his remarkable style make these brief stories haunting and unforgettable."
—Library Journal

Translated by Nicholas de Lange in collaboration with the author

$6.95

ISBN: 0-15-193095-3

A Helen and Kurt Wolff Book

HARCOURT BRACE JOVANOVICH

of German saboteurs in the United States during World War II. Less well known, however, was the presence of a ninth man, a highly trained Texas-bred German assassin, specially landed to attack Churchill and Roosevelt during one of their meetings. The eight are routinely picked up by the FBI, but the ninth man is tracked down by the inspired investigating of an army officer, an ornamental stud being kept by a woman of political importance in Washington. The pace is painstaking rather than exciting, but there is a good deal of interesting and nostalgic information about the 1940's for those old enough to remember them.

The title of Possession (Doubleday. Feb. 1976. LC 75-6155. ISBN 0-385-11075-8. $5.95) by L. P. DAVIES is entirely too sensational for the content, even though it does start out with a desecration in a driving rainstorm in a Wiltshire graveyard. A young motorcyclist, quiet and respectable, dies in what may not be an accident, and this sad event is being investigated by his brother. There is some sort of alarming skullduggery involving an ancient property speculator and some quite unlikely nonsense about Macumba (a sort of Brazilian voodoo) and transmigration of souls. It is a comfort to know that money is at the bottom of the mystery, which is otherwise not particularly interesting.

Bledding Sorrow (Putnam. 1976. ISBN 0-399-11657-5. $8.95) by Marilyn HARRIS is a great disappointment after her last bit of spooky grue. This one also takes place in England. A Yorkshire manor house has become haunted by the ghosts of an ill-treated woman and her coachman lover, brutally tortured and killed in Tudor times by her mad husband. In the present the family has fallen on hard times, and the house is open to the public, in spite of the fact that the husband is most peculiar and the wife quite mad. The tale is highly romantic; the wife has terrifying hallucinations, rather long ones, the husband does unspeakable things to her in bed, and an attractive and sensitive young bus driver becomes her lover. Unfortunately the Tudor ghosts appear entirely too frequently and familiarity does breed contempt. The ending is delirious and pat, not an easy combination. By the way, the title is not a misprint.

A Madness of the Heart (Crowell. Feb. 1976. LC 75-20338. ISBN 0-690-01016-8. $6.95) by Richard NEELY is horrifyingly vulgar and manipulative. A writer, living on the West Side of New York, has a rich wife in and out of expensive lunatic asylums for some mysterious complaint. He is foolish as well as antsy, and picks up a woman in a bar, during which time his wife is raped and wounded. There is what seems to be a desultory search for the rapist; at the same time the writer has an affair with an old-time sweetheart who, oddly, surfaces after 18 years and has the hots for him. The ending is, God knows, a surprise, but a meretricious one. The way to cope with this book is to read the last line and not to bother with the rest.

Leslie WALLER's new book is called The Swiss Account (Doubleday. 1976. LC 75-62740. ISBN 0-385-09661-5. $8.95); the newest John WAINWRIGHT to come to this country is Landscape of Violence (St. Martin's. Feb. 1976. ISBN 0-333-18523-4. $7.95); there is a new Saint book signed by Leslie Charteris but written by Christopher SHORT called The Saint and the Hapsburg Necklace (Doubleday. Feb. 1976. LC 75-14811. ISBN 0-385-11226-2. $5.95).—Henri C. Veit, Brooklyn P.L.

INDEX:

Ackermann, R. J., 531
Adler, M. J., 543
African books in print, 516
Ahl, F. M., 529
Allsopp, B., 519
American book trade directory, 1975-1976, 519
Angulo, D., 520
Arias, R., 546
Arnold, J., 546
Arrighi, M., 549
Artemidorus Daldianus, 529
Arwas, V., 520
Astor, G., 543
Atkin, E., 535
Auchincloss, L., 546
Auerbach, S., 534

Bacou, R., 520
Barnes, M. A., 543
Bartram, G., 548
Bassoff, B., 529
Bauer, G. C., 519
Baumann, C., 545
Benagh, J., 515
Benson, H., M.D., 538
Bergon, F., 529
Black, G., 549
Blackburn, J., 522
Blodgett, R., 519
Boer, C., 522
Bonazzi, R., 546
Bond, G. C., 541
Borland, H., 539
Braly, M., 522
Branca, P., 525
Broadhead, R. H., 529
Brokefield, T., 543
Brown, R. A., 525
Buckley, B., 547

CIA file, 534
Caen, H., 528
Cagney, J., 546
Campbell, M., 531
Carlton, J. M., 528
Caruba, R., 528
Carver, R., 547
Chalk, O., 543
Chaplin, C., 546
Christowe, S., 522
Claiborne, C., 528
Clarke, D. A., 488
Clifford, F., 549
Colson, F. A., 520
Crowther, J., 547

Dalrymple, J., 545
Davidson, M. B., 526
Davies, G. W., 544
Davies, L. P., 550
Davies, M., 522
Davis, H. J., 541
Davis, J. G., 547
Davis, L. E., 525
De Gramont, S., 526
de Holanda Ferreira, A. B., 516
Denbigh, K. G., 531
Dorn, E., 533
Drysdale, R., 520
Duncan, A. A. M., 526

Edgar, N. L., 516
Ein, M., 516
Elverson, V. T., 528
Emmel, T. C., 539
Ewy, D., 539

Feldberg, M., 526
Fendell, B., 540
Flint, R., 533
Forsberg, R., 544
Foster, D. W., 516
Frajndlich, A., 521
Freedman, J. I., 535
Friedrich, O., 535
Fry, W., Jr., 546
Funnell, C. E., 526

Gainer, P. W., 542
Gauld, G., 544
Gibson, M., 533
Gilmour, R. S., 515
Glassman, J., 518
Gleason, H. W., 521
Goodman, M. B., 518
Gots, R. E., M.D., 539
Grant, Z., 522
Grun, B., 526

Hacking, I., 532
Haddle, J., 538
Harmer, R. M., 515
Harris, M., 550
Harris, M. H., 488
Harris, R. B., 532
Hartley, R. E., 534
Harvey, J., 526
Haugey, J. C., S. J., 537
Heller, R., 524
Herodotus, T., 526
Hertz, F., 526
Heymann, C. D., 523
Hill, C., 549
Hill, G., 533
Hilton, J. B., 549
Hochman, S., 547
Hoffmann, Y., 537
Honour, H., 519
Howe, C., 544
Howe, I., 527
Howe, J., 538
Howell, M. C., 542
Houghton, G., 544
Huttenback, R. A., 527
Hypnotics, 539

Imhoff, F., 544
Johnsgard, P. A., 540
Johnson, J. T., 532
Johnson, W. W., 523
Jones, D. B., 520

Kao, C. C. L., 538
Kelleher, C. M., 534
Kertész, A., 521
Kidd, B., 544
Kluge, P. F., 548
Knight, D., 548
Korn, W., 544
Koudelka, J., 521
Krafft, M., 538
Kraus, D., 519
Kris, E., 535
Kuenster, J., 544
Kumler, K., 521

Lane, H., 535
Laporte, G., 523
Larousse treasury of country cooking, 528
Lee, J., 549
Lehrer, J., 523
Lewis, J., 541
Lincoln, D. B., 533
Lindsay, J. V., 547
Logan, J., 533
Look book, 522
Low, A., 524
Lysaght, A. M., 519

MacBean, J. R., 546
McCauley, C. S., 547
McClure, M., 533
Magnificent continent, 540
Makkreel, R. A., 532
Maling, A., 548
Mansfield, H. C., Sr., 534
Mead, R. D., 544
Miller, H. H., 523
Minick, B., 522
Mitchell, G., 542
Mitchell, T. W., 488
Mode, H., 542
Mollenhoff, C. R., 534
Moreton, H. A., 527
Murphy, J. V., 530
Murphy, L. B., 536

Needleman, J., 538
Neely, R., 550
Nemes, S., 544
New woman's survival sourcebook, 518
New York Times Staff, 534
Nisbet, R., 532
Noonan, T., Jr., 543
Novack, G., 532
Nunn, R. V., 541
Nwankwo, N., 547

Ognibene, P. J., 515
Olendorff, R., 540
Olsen, J., 547
Olson, E., 530
Oren, U., 548
Orr, J., 520
Orsini, G. N. G., 530
Our magnificent wildlife, 540

Palmore, E., 542
Page, M., 527
Paine, L., 536
Parker, D., 545
Paton, A., 530
Peter, L. J., 542
Pettingill, O. S., Jr., 540
Phan Thein Chau, 518
Polking, K., 519
Posey, S., 545
Powell, M., 549
Proudley, B., 539

Ramos, S., 536
Reader's Digest family word finder, 518
Reno, M., 549
Reybold, M., 548
Roberson, E., 534
Rood, R., 540
Rosenblatt, D., 536
Rowe, J. C., 530

Sanders, S., 523
Savage, T., 548
Scheick, W. J., 530
Schneider, E., 530
Seagull, L. M., 534
Sebert, S. R., 538
Seltzer, G., 531
Seranne, A., 538
Sewter, A. C., 518
Shea, J. G., 520
Short, C., 550
Shorter, E., 542
Shulvass, M. A., 538
Siegel, R. K., 536
Simbari, N., 519
Simenon, G., 523
Sircello, G., 532
Slote, M. A., 532
Smith, J. F., 527
Snyder, S. H., M.D., 536
Sorlier, C., 521
Sowards, J. K., 530
Sperber, A., 523
Stevens, N. D., 488
Stoumen, L., 522
Strong, T. B., 533
Sutton, G. M., 540
Swisher, D., 545
Switzer, E., 543

Targ, W., 524
Tart, C. T., 536
Taylor, G., 548
Taylor, R. L., 538
Terraine, J., 527
Terrell, J. U., 528
That old ball game, 545
Thomas, A., 548
Thomas, H., 525
Thompson, D., 545
Thompson, J. D., 520
Tignor, R. L., 528
Tihany, L. C., 528
Tilton, T. A., 528
Trew, A., 549
Tunney, J. V., 535

Ulrich's international periodicals directory, 1975-1976, 519

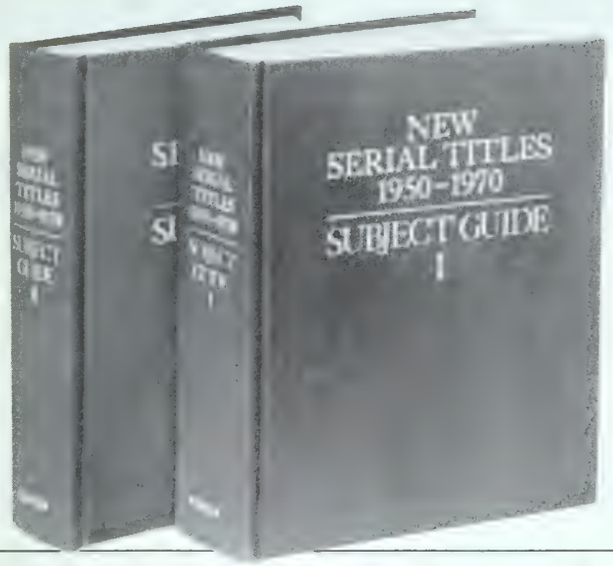
Vale, B., 541
van den Haag, E., 515
Viscardi, H., Jr., 525
Vladimirov, P., 523
Vucinich, A., 542

Wadlington, W., 531
Wagenheim, K., 524
Wainwright, J., 550
Wall, B., 518
Waller, L., 550
Warner, W. R., 540
Watson, B., 531
Webster, N., 549
Wegener, E., 535
Weil, G. L., 524
Weizmann, C., 524
Wheeler, H. R., 518
Who's who in American politics, 1975-1976, 519
Wilcock, M., 538
Wilson, C. L., 539
Wilson, E., 520
Wood, J. T., 536

Xántus, J., 524

Yeterian, D., 537
York, J., 529

Zebrowski, G., 548



*"a most important tool and a much needed one" *

*"a monumental bibliographic work" *

*"invaluable for any university department or other research organization" *

New Serial Titles 1950-1970 Subject Guide

This major new contribution to serial librarianship is now available, offering unprecedented subject access to serials from all over the world.

220,000 serials are arranged by country and title under 255 major subject headings, with 1,200 more narrowly defined subject cross references. Title information, ISSN, country code and Dewey numbers are provided in each entry.

*Hilda Feinberg, Manager, Library Services, Revlon Research Center, Inc.
 Siegfried Ruschin, Serials Librarian, Linda Hall Library
 Stephen Juhasz, Editor of Applied Mechanics Reviews

Here are just a few of the ways it will help you:

- in providing systematic and direct subject access to serial citations for serials which began publication between 1950 and 1970
- in compiling serial bibliographies by subject matter and nationality
- in collection evaluation and acquisition in particular subject areas
- in cooperative collection development and sharing
- as a complement to New Serial Titles 1950-1970.

Put this vital new tool to work for you now! Order on 30-day approval.

Edited by the Bowker Serials Bibliography Department. Emery I. Koltay, Director. 8½" x 11". 3,692 pages. LC 75-15145. ISSN 0098-2237. ISBN 0-8352-0820-6. $138.50 the 2-vol. set.

R.R. Bowker Company
P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Mich. 48106
Outside Western Hemisphere: Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England.

All orders plus shipping and handling. Sales tax added where applicable. (Price subject to change without notice.)

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

LJ

FIRST NOVELISTS

Twenty-four new writers—Spring 1976 discuss their first published novels

Deborah Hill Allen
This Is the House
(Putnam February)
"The old diaries, letters, pictures and sketches had been collected over the years and stored by my husband's Cape Cod family, dragged out occasionally, looked at, put away again. We had never considered them particularly interesting or even unusual, because many families of the Cape have similar collections. Not until I began to look more closely into United States history—inspired, among other things, by the Bicentennial—did I discover that these records were a faithful reflection of the early days of the American Republic, as seen through the eye and experience of the Cape Cod Mariner. I was irresistably drawn to the human story of those days—the uncertainties and the attempts to cope with something so new as a republic—the effects of that republic on ordinary people, on their dreams and aspirations. I wandered far afield of the diaries, to be sure, but using them as a guide, the past became as vital and real as the present, and the more I thought about it, the less I could resist trying to make a novel out of it. All the tools were at hand—the more personal aspect of the family collection, the records and memorabilia of Cape history to be dug out of vaults and town records, as well as the historic facts of the days of the Federalist.

"To bring the past into continuity with the present is the most vital service the historical novel can perform. Next to that service, the historical novel has always been, for me, the greatest of entertainment, and so it was a real pleasure to write my book, to join the creative mainstream of something I have always loved, and through it bring to life part of our nation's past. It was a fine adventure to create characters whose path and destiny I knew already, but whose personalities I had to fabricate so as their travels through their lives would make sense to us today."

Paul Allen
Apeland
(Viking June)
"A novel should be strong, atmospheric, dramatic, evocative, powerful. If effective, it should envelope the reader and be an experience, clear, distilled and meaningful, which he could not have in any real world; something he is unable to ignore.

"My novel, Apeland, strives to do these things. It creates a land on Florida's Gulf shore, lush, wild, a way stop of roadside attractions, where men once tried to be men, but are more often, and often willingly, beasts and brutals. Because being an animal is something about which I have no shame, it is then, not uncomplimentary to my characters that they are sometimes beasts in the best sense, reveling in their passions or basking in the hot sun and Gulf breezes. At other times, the treachery of their little world overwhelms them, and they become mean, consuming themselves and each other. There is little choice for them in Apeland. Enduring their violent existence, they are unaware of it, and survive on blind foolishness and humor. My characters fight, lust, and when an ape escapes from a roadside attraction, go on a gorilla hunt. . . ."

Wm. Allan Bales
The Seeker
(McGraw April)
"This is a story of survival. It tells of a young man who is thrust by circumstances onto a deserted, tropical beach. His plane has gone down in the sea and he arrives on the beach alone and without tools. In short, he is simply an intelligent, upright anthropoid, stripped of the cultural accumulations of a million years or so and forced to rediscover the ancient, atavistic techniques that won survival for his earliest human ancestors. It is a novel of adventure, not alone the adventures of one man in a harsh, impersonal environment, but the ultimate adventure of a man seeking and finding the childhood and youth of his kind.

"I was impelled to write The Seeker because of a fact of biology which, it seems to me, is profoundly meaningful. Simply it is this: in the birth process of vertebrate animals the developing embryo proceeds through successive stages in which it rehearses or recapitulates the evolutionary history of the species. With man, as with all other living creatures, prenatal life begins with a fertilized egg, a single cell which is the earliest, simplist and most primitive organization of life. This cell soon divides and proceeds through levels of increasing complexity in which the anatomy of ancestral forms (sponges, fish, amphibia, mammals, primates) are momentarily imitated in the sequence in which they appeared on earth. It is as though each evolving individual must serve a kind of solitary apprenticeship in ancestral simplicity before it falls heir to recently acquired complexities or can, in turn, give birth to new mutations and new grandeur.

"The account of this man's survival is basically an adventure story, a triumph of skill and courage (and luck) over primal chaos. But the human experience has dimensions that transcend mere physical survival, and throughout our existence there have been individuals who have striven to achieve new horizons and unperceived dimensions of the human experience.

"The Seeker is such a person. This is his story."

Diane Balson
Yo-Yo
(Morrow March)
"I was born and grew up in New York City, and spent summers on Long Island. My husband and I live in New York with our son and daughter. I've written many articles, but fiction has always been my major interest.

Yo-Yo is my first novel. It's a funny book, sad too, as most funny books are.

Diane Balson

Wm. Allan Bales

The central character is a 34-year-old woman, married, with three small children, who takes a close look at the insanity of her life and decides to try to save herself by following step-by-step, the rules to live by society is currently handing down (in this case Women's Liberation). Each step, however, only serves to embroil her further in her supposedly mad state.

"But Yo-Yo is not about Women's Liberation. It is about one human being's struggle to make sense out of chaos, find meaning in no meaning. The fact that this woman is finally able to accept the insanity of existence, not only accept, but delight, in it, quite literally saves her life.

"This is my personal philosophy, I guess . . . that life doesn't make much sense, and that it's very important to know and accept this, but still go on living and searching. And laughing. Laughter is probably the most important thing of all. . . ."

Pat Conroy
The Great Santini
(Houghton—May)
"In The Great Santini I have tried to define the experience of growing up in a military family. Since my own father was a Marine Corps fighter pilot I have always longed to read something about those women and children whose destinies are fastened to the careers of soldiers. The military brat is an invisible citizen in American literature. But there are millions of us and in interviewing other military children around the country, I discovered that we had much in common. We were the unrooted, the exiled, and the strangers in whatever community we invaded. Because of the nature of our fathers' vocation, we often found our family life touched with the discipline and love of order our fathers imposed on battalions and squadrons. Our mothers became the interpreters of our fathers' strange moods. They were the peacemakers in homes whose patriarchs had chosen the profession of war, whose livelihoods reduced to the most basic terms was the killing of other men. All military children know about ID cards, PX privileges, long dashes across country, the trauma of changing schools and leaving friends, and houses decorated in oriental motifs. The Great Santini is the story of a single year in the life of a Marine Corps family. I wanted to write a novel about a military man who brought the military into his home and explain to friends of mine who are puzzled when I tell them that I had 18 years in the Corps before I went to college. In growing up, I played with children whose fathers were doctors, lawyers, bankers, laborers, and insurance salesmen. I was never very impressed, for the secret I protected in my psyche was the knowledge that my father, because of extraordinary skills and dark gifts could set whole cities on fire. It is a dazzling mythology for any child. I wanted to write about this mythology, to explore it, to criticize it, and to celebrate it. The Great Santini is my letter written to all men and women who have known the military life in America."

Will Cooper
Death Has a Thousand Doors
(Bobbs—April)
". . . The world is full of men without respect for the rights of others, men who deny individual rights as a matter of principle. They will stop at nothing to force their will upon as many people as will submit to them. Therefore, conflict is inevitable, and conflict is the backbone of plot. Writing the story then becomes a process of rationally resolving the conflict through the actions of the hero, who acts in his own interest to preserve his life, his freedom, and his property. . . .

"A story without a moral purpose isn't worth writing (or reading). My purpose is to state the terms of the conflict between rational, responsible, moral individuals who love their lives and respect the rights of other men to live, and the great collective beast that calls itself society. That beast respects nothing, and loves only death. It completes the great circle of self-destructive logic by munching its own tail. Your daily newspaper will detail the menu for you.

"I prefer the adventure-suspense genre because the mainstream of American fiction has defected to the enemy. Only in the adventure novel is the hero permitted to oppose the collective destruction of mankind in a straightforward, uncompromising fashion. Only thriller heroes are permitted to be large enough to combat the forces which threaten to engulf us all. Only James Bond, Mike Hammer, and John T. McLaren can approach that battle with an honest joy, without regard to the nameless fears that beset lesser men. They are anachronisms, yes—but they have an unconquerable will to survive. I expect them to be around for a very long time. . . ."

Charles Durden
No Bugles, No Drums
(Viking—June)
"No Bugles, No Drums is a novel set in Vietnam. The title is the shortest possible summary I can make of the book's theme. No bugles, no drums, no glory, no grand plans to save the world from or for anything. The story is told, in the first person, by a 20-year-old Georgia-born Army private named Hawkins. Born with a jaundiced eye and a judicious disregard for authority, Hawkins has what is widely known as a bad attitude. He refuses to accept the Army's standard-issue clichés and can't bring himself to take much of his experience or the Army's expectations seriously. Beyond the images of old war movies he (and 90 percent of his combat infantry company) has nothing else on which to base his own expectations. And from the first moment it's obvious that the John Wayne four-reel cellulose primary on how to win the war doesn't apply. The war in Nam, Hawkins decides, is a real-life epic as f----- up as Hogan's goat. Surrounded by absurdity (that frequently spills over into insanity) he defines his role as a walk-on. But absurdity and circumstances he can't control rewrite his part, again and again, until finally he is forced into active participation. The more savage he becomes the more acceptable he is to his peers. Despite his best efforts his psyche parts at the seams and he becomes, for one fierce moment, the thing he most disliked and distrusted: a soldier with a mission. Filled with fear and hate, he goes out to hunt down a one-time friend who has deserted to the VC.

"What I hope I've done in this book, simply, is to put some nonromantic validity into the eternal cliché: War is hell.

"And with the 12 words I have left I'll say: buy the book, I need the money."

Joseph E. Finley
Missouri Blue
(Putnam—February)
"The story of Missouri Blue is essentially that of a man's struggle against events not of his own making. His unwillingness to yield, his determination to try to advance his soul and his family and to search for hope in a world in disarray from the years of the Great Depression seemed to me to be an important story to tell. Many of the events in the book did occur, and as such, are sound history of the times. They are interwoven with fiction and what I hope is some poetry of expression to make Missouri Blue a novel of what all men can do as long as they nurture dreams. . . ."

Eleanor Fischer
Unfinished Things
(Morrow—March)
"Unfinished Things, concerns the lives of a young woman who inhabits two dimensions of time. Maggie Templeton, pregnant with her second child, lives with her husband and small son in Brooklyn. The strong, conflicting relationships she had in a previous existence reappear first in her dreams, then begin to dominate even her waking hours. As her urban surroundings become increasingly unfamiliar Maggie clings tenaciously to her other life, reliving her affair with the husband of her closest friend, her conflicting feelings for that couple's many children, and other strong relationships that bind her to a life she lived a hundred years ago. Maggie's behavior is judged to be unacceptable. She becomes, in her words, one of '. . . those poor people whose habits have become distasteful to their loved ones, whose attitudes were so unconstructive that it became necessary to collect them like lint and keep them behind a curtained door.' Yet she fights bravely to meet the standards of strangers who presume that her life is bound with theirs in order to keep her children, who she feels were fathered by the man she loved. The novel suggests that strong bonds between people transcend time. . . ."

Elizabeth Foote-Smith
The Gentle Albatross
(Putman—May)
". . . Upon choosing the genre of the crime novel, I hoped to create multidimensional, authentically contemporary characters, an intellectually challenging crime puzzle, and an appealingly romantic relationship.

"I found I did not enjoy crime novels in which human sadism, bestiality, destructive aggression, and perversity were exploited. My preference lay with different categories of character—for example, those whose criminal conflict stemmed from their contempt for arbitrary and unjust law and the substitution of their own code; those who were victims of chance; those blinded by passion; and those tricked into error by their own self-ignorance or driven by desperation to violate their own principles.

"The central idea of The Gentle Albatross is cautionary, warning of the dangers when a zealous pioneer in brain research (specifically, ESP, electrostimulation of the brain) overrides individual rights and places scientific progress and self above humanistic considerations. If scientists are to influence the direction of man's evolution, they must be guided by his spiritual-cultural heritage. . . ."

John V. Lindsay

Frank Fowles
The Peruvian Contracts
(Putman—April)
"The Peruvian Contracts is semi-documentary suspense fiction. Based on the 1972 Soviet-American grain deal, it attempts to appeal to the reader's interest on several levels: by so closely paralleling historical fact that even those with intimate knowledge of the grain deal will have difficulty saying where history leaves off and invention begins, by faithfully rendering in kind the observable behavior and motivation of the involved governments and their officials, and by making the complexities of the commodities and international food markets understandable to the layman.

"The story's main character is an Englishman hired by the Peruvian Government in early 1972 to speculate for its account in the U.S. commodities market. Peru's design is to recoup foreign exchange losses it is about to incur through the failure of its anchovy crop on which the country depends for a major part of its exports. The plan is simple enough, but its designers do not reckon on a massive Russian entry into the market. As a result, Peru's agent quickly finds himself caught between the White House and the Soviet buyers both of whom have interests diametrically opposed to his. Under political pressure, Peru agrees to abort the plan only to find that its agent cannot be turned off."

R. E. Harrington
The Seven of Swords
(Putnam—February)
"In writing The Seven of Swords my primary objective was to create a novel that was publishable—that would be judged by a publisher as appealing to a wide enough readership to take the considerable financial risk inherent in putting out a first novel. I tried to create a story that was fresh, believable and gripping. I tried not to preach or force a 'message' on the reader. I tried simply to entertain. The result is a suspense story about a mind-control experiment run by the United States government and involving scientists and Air Force officers, one of whom is a drug dealer and murderer attempting to take over the experiment to save his life. There is love, erotic and otherwise, violence and intrigue—all, I hope, appropriate to the characters and their situations. . . ."

Barbara Howar
Making Ends Meet
(Random—April)
"Perhaps an established novelist is able to explain exactly what he or she set out to do in a work of fiction, but lacking such distinction and direction, I found myself facing down a ream of yellow paper with little more in mind than a working title and a handful of sketchy things I wanted to say about men and women and the funny lives we make for ourselves. What I did have was determination, an encouraging editor, and a publishing house wise enough to withhold the bulk of my advance to carrot me on to completion.

"Every single day, regardless of household or humor, I sat down at the typewriter and wrote, and on every single one of those days, I was reminded of my limitations, of my monumental lack of experience in the intricacies of fiction, of my anemic imagination as opposed to my gigantic ego—who was I to closet myself off to write an amusing story for grown-up people?

"Eventually some life was breathed into my characters; Lilly the heroine became real, so real she seemed to be sitting in a nearby chair talking to me mch as one Southern woman of an age talks to another, sometimes sharply questioning the things I was writing about her. Keeping the two of us separate was difficult until Lilly became a strong, distinctive being, someone to argue with, confide in, be annoyed by, to care about and worry over as if she had somehow always been my friend, almost family. When she reached that stage, she and the other characters went about their business with precious little concern for me. Occasionally I would remind the whole lot of them who was in charge but seldom did they pay me any heed; they ran right over me and did precisely as they pleased. When the book was finished, I thought I'd be glad to get her and the rest of them out of the house, be quit of them all, but the worst and perhaps saddest part is that I miss Lilly and the others; it just isn't the same without them underfoot."

Steve Knickmeyer
Straight
(Random—April)
"Straight is a combination of mystery and suspense, with the emphasis on suspense. It features a private detective team comprised of Steve Cranmer and Butch Maneri, and I expect it to be the first of a series. I believe the characters in Straight raise it above the run-of-the-mill suspense tales; hopefully, they are compelling. The novel is set in Oklahoma, my home."

"To me, the story and the characters are the primary facets of any novel. Telling a good story and creating characters who cast shadows are what it's all about. A writer's philosophy should appear subtly through his story and characters. . . ."

John V. Lindsay
The Edge
(Norton—February)
"When I retired from politics and took a year's sabbatical abroad I wanted to write about some of the things I had learned in 17 years of public life. But after a few months at the typewriter, wandering slowly through fascinating parts of Europe, I became thoroughly frustrated and, frankly, bored, writing articles about public affairs for magazines which in any event would probably reject them, and sometimes did, for the same reasons that turned me off. I then started having some fun writing fictional scenes based in part on lives and people that I had known.

"By the time I had finished a rough draft—a pile of words—and had come back to the United States—a few publishers told me I had the makings of a novel. They all told me how much work I had ahead of me, to shape it and make it move. I rewrote it twice, and by then found it a tormenting mistress indeed.

"Why a novel? So more people, you hope, will listen to what you have to say. What makes people listen, and what are they prepared to take? People like stories, not just to have something that relates to themselves, even in their dreams, but also to be diverted from daily dreariness. So why not use the medium of story-telling to say what you want to say?

"I happen to think that the country is in a lot of trouble, and that people are scared and deeply uncertain. People sense that something is wrong and don't quite understand why. I think the 'why' is the absence of any kind of leadership for a very long time. The novel tries to show what can happen to a people, even a country like the United States, when there is leaderlessness and division long enough. It also tries to glimpse into the lives of politicians in very human terms. And it tries to give people something to think about, whether or not it appears to them real or unreal."

Elisabeth Macdonald
The House at Gray Eagle
(Scribners—April)
"As a child I lived in a wild and lonely country where the frontier lingered on into the 1930's. Perhaps because of this I have had an abiding interest in the Old West. The House at Gray Eagle grew out of that interest, although the novel is not a 'western' except in time and place. It is a novel of romantic suspense in which the shadows of the past color the events of the present. The plot concerns the house and its inhabitants: the new young wife, unsure of her place; her aloof and troubled husband; his dying father; the women from the past, both alive and dead, who bring the story to its fearful denouement. . . ."

Elisabeth Macdonald

Hugh Nissenson
My Own Ground
(Farrar—April)
"The theme of My Own Ground is the renunciation of redemption—either from God or History. Technically, it is a Bildungsroman. The narrative is in the form of a memoir by Jacob Brody written in Elmira, New York at the age of 68 about his sexual initiation and spiritual enlightenment as a Jewish immigrant boy from Russia on the Lower East Side in 1912. It concerns his involvement with the struggle for the body and soul of Hannah Isaacs, the daughter of a rabbi, between a Jewish Marxist in exile and a Jewish pimp with whom she falls in love and prostitutes herself. The boy, Jake, is ultimately confronted with the mystery of evil: the capacity of the human heart to actively degrade itself. Written in a particularly spare style, which is characteristic of all my prose, the novel re-creates the sights, sounds and smells of a bygone era but it is essentially mythic. The characters and leit motifs are drawn from a fusion of the story of Jacob in the Bible and the Epic of Gilgamesh; the final epiphany was inspired by the climax of The Golden Ass. The vision of the book, which is my vision as an artist at 42, is an anguished acceptance of the horror and the holiness of the earth."

J. Bradford Olesker
No Place Like Home
(Putnam—February)
"No Place Like Home concerns itself with an aging baseball player whose uncaring, unfeeling family has left him both lonely and disillusioned. Upon the decision to murder his family and his ensuing discovery that he is emotionally unable to carry out the deed, George McKay seeks out surrogates . . .[where] he resides.

"My goal was to show that in an era where our manner of living is becoming increasingly insular (i.e., highrises with complex security systems and closed circuit monitoring), given the proper motivation, man is capable of compromising all of these defenses and coming face to face with another human being in a confrontation as primitive as the pre-historic homicides in the caves of milleniums ago.

"With respect to that motivation, I wanted to make a statement—albeit a personal one—regarding my feeling that man has actually changed very little from what he was when he lived in those caves. Take away the ties of family, take away the status of Mercedes-Benz, take away the obedience to love, the learned respect for law and man-the-contemporary becomes man-the-primitive. That capacity for murder, for brutality inherent in species since the beginning of time, has been successfully suppressed by man in just the last five to ten thousand years. How incredibly close it must still lay to the surface. How incredible it is that it is kept from surfacing more often."

Donald Olson
If I Don't Tell
(Putnam—April)
"In one of my more than 40 short stories published before I wrote If I Don't Tell I alluded to the only real mystery in life, which is the mystery of why and how things happen as they do. If my fictional explorations into this mystery establish me as a 'suspense writer,' I wear the label with pride and respect although my claim to it is less than absolute, writing as I do at the far end of that spectrum whose opposite wave length is the classical detective story, a form for which my lack of analytical gifts renders me incompetent. Yet I feel in good company: Henry James's The Aspern Papers is in my view the best 'suspense' story ever written; certain novels by Trollope, Dickens, and Dostoevski are mystery stories in every sense of the genre, while at the same time they seek to explore that alienation of the human spirit—call it loneliness, call it lovelessness—which in one way or another excites those acts of desperation from which their 'plots' evolve. Likewise, in my work, I aspire to examine those same aberrant human drives that produce a complex of tensions which, set forth in fictional terms, become 'novels of suspense.' If I Don't Tell, for example, is the story of a lonely woman whose fears of the past oblige her to become the pawn in a cat-and-mouse game between two unscrupulous antagonists, while another contest . . . is waged between warring elements of her own nature. . . ."

Gail Pass
Zoe's Book
(Houghton—April)
Zoe's Book grew out of a fascination with Bloomsbury and a near fixation on Virginia Woolf. In writing it, everything seemed to come together for me: I was intensely interested in the people, both real and fictional; I was intrigued by the themes I wished to explore; I felt I had finally struck the right balance between the cerebral and the emotional.

"I hoped to tell a story which would involve the reader sufficiently for us to share other considerations. Aside from depicting what it might have been like to have been a Bloomsbury, or to have loved among them, I wanted to look at the relationship between creativity and madness. Virginia Woolf, of course, epitomized the issue, but rather than use her so directly, I turned to my fictional characters, and to the very nature of the fictional experience.

"Once into the writing, things happened that I simply hadn't planned on. Those were the most exciting moments for me, when the unconscious took over. It's unfortunately a most undependable source; that's why, I suppose, one needs discipline and tenacity. . . ."

Stuart Rosenberg
When the Bough Breaks
(Crowell—February)
"When I first started writing When the Bough Breaks, I suppose I thought of it as a crime-and-action novel. The story would be based loosely on a case, then in the headlines, in which a father and his son, barely in his teens, committed a series of crimes culminating in the brutal murder of a young woman. The book would be a genuine work of fiction, however, rather than a more or less disguised piece of journalism.

"The subject of a father and son teaming up to kill interested me, as I imagine it did many people, because it seemed to possess a kind of moral shock value tragically hard to come by in these violence-saturated times. Whatever stake we all have in understanding the seemingly "senseless" acts of savagery that take place all around us would be multiplied in a case of this nature. Beyond simply 'telling a story,' I wanted to explore how it could happen that a man and a boy became killers.

"Indeed, as the book began to take shape I saw all the more clearly that the subject I had chosen could not be treated adequately as a conventional 'murder mystery.' The real heart of the story lay in the relationship between the totally fictitious father and son I had created . . . in the context in which such a relationship could develop . . . and above all in the emotional impact an intimate knowledge of that relationship would have on the reader. I wanted to make the reader an involved spectator--simultaneously a witness and a participant. I tried to write the book so that everything in it, from the setting to the secondary characters, would highlight or counterpoint what I saw going on in the twisted lives of my protagonists. In the end, if When the Bough Breaks has any validity as a novel, it is because it invites the reader to try to understand characters whose actions are beyond all understanding—to sympathize, at least to some extent, with characters who have forfeited all right to sympathy."

Sylvia Wallace

Louis Swann
The Mists of Manittoo
(Scribners—June)
"I spent my adolescence up in the second balconies of Broadway theaters memorizing and loving plays. At 17 though, I seemed to require unfamiliar horizons and I left New York and an understanding family for a city campus in the mid West. Settling and resettling has not ceased. Wisconsin, Connecticut, California, and now Ohio have allowed me, with my husband and children, to touch life in the vital places of the United States.

"In The Mists of Manittoo, I record some of the process which demanded of me, as a woman, flexibility and independence. The main character, Elizabeth Dowland, acts to free herself from roles demanded of her by 18th-century custom. She discovers her powers as a person, and her connection with the land through her relationship with a native American man. This mixture of red-and-white-culture mirroring the current of assertive thought which resulted in the American Revolution is the subject of the second book about Elizabeth, now in progress. . . ."

Maria Talwick
The Leaning Tower
(Putnam—April)
"Moved and excited by a trip to Italy, I hated to have to return home. So I began to write little notes of recollection to myself, to retain it. Little by little these notes piled up, imaginary people invaded them, hidden thoughts and fantasies emerged. I devoured everything I could find on Italy, plunged deep into Catholicism (and came out again), studied, read and wrote day and night—still with no clear purpose in mind. After a couple of years these notes had grown to nearly 2000 pages and appeared to be a story. I was urged to cut it down to manageable size and offer it for publication, and was astonished to have it accepted.

"The main locale of this book is of course Pisa, and the Leaning Tower is one of the characters. There are also a tyrannical Jew with a nostalgia for Fascism, abusive to his daughter and her plodding, secretly poetic husband; an ex-priest who is now a leader in the Italian film industry; a brilliant flamboyant journalist famous for her merciless interviews; a somewhat retarded boy who is also partly an angel; the judges and witnesses at a court trial, and numerous others. Questions of sex and sanity, murder and incest arise and must be dealt with. The story dips back to the war and goes forward past the devastating flood of 1966.

"Now I find myself suddenly a writer, deeply involved in a second novel which is entirely different.

"I don't know how to account for all this, how to explain it. It's almost uncanny. It's almost as though I'd been in a stupor, and now all sorts of things keep pouring out of obscure corners. That's all I can tell you; that's all I know about it."

Sylvia Wallace
The Fountains
(Morrow—June)
"Becoming a novelist is the realization of my own impossible dream. Without question, I am a late bloomer, inhibited for years by my own near-speechless awe in the presence of other novelists (the single exception being my husband, author Irving Wallace, who has never found me lacking words).

"Although I spent a decade as a magazine editor and still edit my husband's books, my previous writing had been confined to nonfiction—articles in women's magazines and ghostwriting for Hollywood celebrities (dabs of fiction there!).

I don't know what broke the dam and led me to write The Fountains. I believe it was observing the varied predicaments of women everywhere, the confusion, the rage, the ambivalence and sometimes the blessing, all bubbling up at once it seemed, because of the enormous societal changes of the 70's. I wanted to define some of those women as I saw them, to catch them at a dramatic moment, and to explore the different ways they—and their men—cope with the bewildering facts of their lives. A luxurious Southern California beauty spa became the device to bring together for a single week a group of 20 women ranging in age from 23 to 44. Because of the glamorous background of the story, they may seem atypical but they are, in fact, today's women in microcosm.

"Having discovered the sweet joy of novelizing, I plan never to let go. I have a new novel gestating. The subject: women—and their men."

LJ/CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

All advertisements for the Positions Open and the Positions Wanted classifications will be edited to exclude direct or indirect references to race, creed, color, age, and sex as conditions of employment. Positions open and positions wanted, $1.70 per line, minimum charge, $5.10, all other types of ads, $2.60 per line, minimum charge $7.80. If voucher forms are required for billing, please send them at the time advertisements are submitted for insertion. Copy for ads and requests for cancellations must be received at the LJ office 45 days preceding date of issue. Write: Classified Advertising Department, Library Journal, 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10036.

OUT-OF-PRINT

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS get prompt attention, wide search, reasonable prices, from International Bookfinders, Inc., Box 1-LJ, Pacific Palisades, Calif. 90272.

COLONIAL "out-of-print" Book Service, Inc. Want Lists invited, 23 E. 4th St., New York City 10003.

BUILDING SPECIAL COLLECTIONS is one of our specialties. Foreign books and periodicals, current and out-of-print. Albert J. Phiebig Inc., Box 352, White Plains, N.Y. 10602.

WE FIND BOOKS. Free International Search. Exclusive want lists invited. Realistic prices. Eva Davis Books. 108 Prince Charles, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

OP BOOKS in literature; social science, humanities. EGLI; BCL; Lamont, etc. Book Lande, 8926 National Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90034.

MAGAZINES—BACK NUMBER

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC Magazine: (1888-1976) Any issue from 1910. (Fine cond.) Reasonable. Price list furn. Don Smith, 3930 Rankin St., Louisville, KY 40214.

BACK ISSUE MAGAZINES, general scholarly, technical. Designed to serve high school and jr. college libraries. Please send want lists to Back Issues West; P.O. Box 6688, Tucson, Arizona 85716.

OVER 2,000,000 backdate magazines on file. Send want lists for immediate attention. Magazine Center, Dept. LJ, 145 West 29th Street., New York, N.Y. 10001.

INTERNATIONAL University Booksellers, Inc. 101 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10003 carries one of the most comprehensive inventories of periodical backfiles. We invite inquiries for complete sets, runs, volumes, and issues required. We also buy scientific and scholarly journals in all fields for cash or credit.

SPECIAL SALES list of back date periodicals; hundreds of titles $2.22 per issue. Write for listing of various titles available. Charterhouse, 5393 West 16th St., Parma, OH 44134.

BUY, TRADE, SELL National Geographic Magazines & related material. Box 30045, Denver, CO 80230.

SERVICES—PERSONNEL

THERESA M. BURKE Employment Agency, 8 West 40th St., N.Y., N.Y. 10018. Specializing in the recruitment of library and information personnel for special, academic, and public libraries.

CAREER BLAZERS AGENCY—nonfiction, best selling jobs for career-minded publishing professionals. 36 W. 46 St., YU 6-1285.

MICROFORMS

MICROFORMS. Good second-hand microfilm of periodicals of established micropublishers bought and sold. Write or call Microforms International Marketing Company, Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523. (914) 592-9141.

FOR SALE

BOOKMOBILE, 1960. Good condition. Int'l. Harvester chassis; Thos. F. Moroney Co. body. Book capacity 3,000. New air conditioner & power supply generator installed 1 year ago. Contact: Town Manager, 100 Maple Ave., Shrewsbury, MA 01545.

POSITIONS WANTED

M.L.S. 1975, also grad degree in humanities; 4 years varied library experience; 10 years plus teaching. Prefer school, college, or federal reference and/or serials. G 49.

SEEK BEGINNING level reference or other public service position. MLS Rutgers. Five years' publishing experience. G 53.

CHILDREN'S LIBRARIAN seeking head or assistant position of children's department in public library. Varied experience; prefer relocation in community 25,000 population and over. G 51.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHEAST

SOCIAL AND BEHAVIORAL Sciences Reference Librarian. Position open September 3, 1976 due to retirement. Reference, orientation, and collection development responsibilities. Accredited M.L.S. and undergraduate major in psychology, sociology, political science, geography, or anthropology in that order of preference. Salary as instructor $10,108-$13,540 for 9 months; possibility of summer employment. Appointment at higher rank and salary possible. Send letter of intent and résumé by March 1, 1976 to: Martha Donahue, Chairperson, Recruitment Committee, Mansfield State College Library, Mansfield, PA 16933. An equal opportunity employer.

HEAD CATALOG LIBRARIAN

Position now available in New Jersey for a cataloging manager with M.L.S. Responsible for supervising a major department consisting of 3 major areas: Professional Librarians, Annotators and Data Entry Operators. Must have the ability to do original descriptive cataloging and have experience in LC, Dewey Decimal, and nonprint cataloging. Meaningful knowledge of on-line cataloging applications and previous administrative experience required. Salary is open depending upon qualifications. Excellent fringe benefits.

Apply by letter with résumé, including salary history, salary required, and availability data, to:

PERSONNEL MANAGER
THE BAKER & TAYLOR COMPANIES
DIVISION OF W.R. GRACE & CO.
50 Kirby Ave. Somerville, N.J. 08876

An Equal Opportunity Employer, M/F

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHEAST

GOVERNMENTAL REFERENCE Service. Develop new department within public library to provide special collection and services to employees of city and county government. Qualifications: relevant prior experience, library degree not required. Present salary range: $11,320-$15,730; probable range effective July 1, 1976, $12,650-$17,600. Beginning salary negotiable. Send resume to: Director, Washington County Free Library, 100 South Potomac Street, Hagerstown, Maryland 21740. Equal opportunity employer.

DIRECTOR for city library serving a community of 46,000, with a beautiful new million dollar building. Responsible for overall operation of the library, budget supervision, library personnel, developing collection and administer general functions. M.L.S. from accredited library school with three years administrative experience in public library desirable. Position open March 1, 1976. Submit references and résumé to: Board of Trustees, Woonsocket Harris Public Library, 303 Clinton Street, Woonsocket, R.I. 02895.

POSITIONS OPEN—MIDWEST

REFERENCE LIBRARIAN for library in suburb adjacent to Columbus. Minimum qualifications: ALA accredited M.L.S.; experience in reference work with interest in collection development; ability to organize. Salary $9,000-$11,000 depending on experience. Paid Blue Cross/Blue Shield and 4 weeks vacation. Send résumé to: Bernice Daniels, Librarian, Worthington Public Library, 752 High St. Worthington, Ohio 43085.

ASSISTANT OR ASSOCIATE Professor of Library Science. Library Science Department is seeking applicants for a faculty vacancy. Must have specialty in school media center administration and audio-visual instructional materials. Assignment may include supervision of students enrolled in field experiences in addition to teaching of library science courses in specialty area. Master's degree in library science and doctorate in library science or in educational technology required. Must have 3-5 years' experience as a media center specialist and 1 year teaching experience at college or university level. Send résumé to: Dr. Marina E. Axeen, Chairman, Department of Library Science, Ball State University, Muncie, IN 47306. Applications requested by February 20, 1976. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

LIBRARIAN, life sciences: directs operations of life sciences library, which has principal responsibility for library service to school of agriculture: agronomy, botany and plant pathology, and animal sciences, as well as to department of biological sciences of the school of science, and separate collections for forestry-horticulture, biochemistry, entomology, and agricultural engineering. Desired qualifications: master's degree in library science (ALA accredited), and in agriculture, biological sciences, or related areas. Record of successful experience in management of library in agriculture/science/technology fields. Experience with, or knowledge of computer based information retrieval systems. Position carries faculty status and responsibilities. Salary $15,000 or more depending on qualifications. Request application and detailed notice of vacancy from John Thomas, Personnel Officer, Libraries/AVC, Purdue University, West Lafayette, Indiana 47907. Deadline for applications: March 1, 1976. An equal access/equal opportunity employer.

BALL STATE UNIVERSITY has the following positions available immediately. (1) Reference Librarian. Three years reference experience in academic library required. Additional professional experience in other areas desirable. (2) Map Librarian. Two or more years experience in map librarianship and general reference required with undergraduate degree in geography-geology. Graduate work in cartography highly desirable. Supervisory experience necessary. (3) Educational Resources Librarian. Media specialist with three to five years experience in media service to users required. Doctorate or education specialist degree with major course work in educational systems technology, instructional media, or audio-visual education is desirable and two Master's degrees in one of these fields or a combination thereof, including library science, would be beneficial. (4) Order Librarian. Three or more years experience in order work plus other technical service activities and bibliography required with knowledge of the book trade in general and its specialized sources. Supervisory and teaching ability necessary. (5) Catalog Librarian. Three to five years experience in cataloging required with expertise in cataloging and classification theory, rules and procedures. Subject specialty must be in arts and humanities cataloging. Work experience with OCLC terminals highly desirable. Knowledge of Western European and other languages preferred. (6) Continuations Catalog Librarian. Three years of cataloging experience with particular emphasis on serials required. Knowledge and interpretation of serials records necessary. Some knowledge of automation approaches to serials desirable. (7) Continuations Catalog Librarian. Three years of cataloging experience required with ability to organize and interpret microform cataloging records. Work entails cataloging variety of microforms ranging from newspapers to books and periodicals. Service to users may be required. All candidates must possess M.L.S. accredited degrees except as specified in No. 3. Academic ranks based upon the educational background and years of experience. Salary depends upon rank, e.g., instructor $7,833-$14,101, assistant professor $10,173-$16,739, etc. Send résumé and official transcripts before February 29, 1976 to: Dr. Ray R. Suput, Department of Library Service, Ball State University, Muncie, Indiana 47306. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

TWO POSITION vacancies: Library Science, Assistant/Associate Professor. (1) Responsible for teaching courses in technical services plus another major core area (2) Responsible for teaching courses in library administration and management plus another core area. Qualifications for both: Ph.D. in library and information science; professional library experience; ability in teaching, research, and service. Salary: open, dependent upon qualifications and experience. Excellent fringe benefits. Positions open August, 1976. Send application, résumé, and references by March 15, 1976 to: Dr. Eva Kiewitt, Chairperson, Search and Screen Committee, Graduate Library School, Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana 47401. An equal opportunity, affirmative action employer.

ASSOCIATE DEAN for Libraries and Learning Resources. Eastern Kentucky University is seeking applications for the position of associate dean for libraries and learning resources. The position will be available March 1, 1976. Applicants should possess the terminal degree and have a broad range of library experience including administration. Application materials should be submitted by February 1, 1976 to: Mr. Ernest E. Weyhrauch, Dean for Libraries and Learning Resources, Eastern Kentucky University 40475. Eastern Kentucky University is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

LIBRARY DIRECTOR of Oak Lawn, a fast-growing suburban public library in Chicago metropolitan area serving over 60,000. Operating budget $600,000+. We seek an individual strong in budgeting and financial administration, acquisitions, programming, planning, and staff development. Require graduate library science degree from ALA-accredited school and 7 years' public library experience, including 3 years in an administrative capacity. Salary negotiable from $18,000. Apply to: Lester L. Stoffel, Executive Director, Suburban Library System, 125 Tower Drive, Hinsdale, Illinois 60521.

REGIONAL LIBRARY System Director, Lewis & Clark Library System, Illinois. Director for a seven county cooperative library system serving an urban/rural population of 388,000 people through 30 member libraries, 8 reading centers, and direct bookmobile service. The Headquarters is in Edwardsville near the Southern Illinois University campus and located in the Greater St. Louis Metropolitan Area. The Headquarters houses over 150,000 volumes, A-V department, and a unique law enforcement collection. The System employs 28 staff including 6 professional librarians. Administrative position responsible for all library functions and carrying out policy as determined by the library board. The personnel committee invites applications from persons with substantial professional qualifications, including considerable administrative experience and a M.L.S. degree from an ALA accredited library school. Salary range $18,000 up. Send résumés to Mrs. Olive Potter, Chairman, Personnel Committee, Lewis & Clark Library System, P. O. Box 368, Edwardsville, Illinois 62025.

TWO POSITIONS: 1) Open January 1, 1976. Emphasis on American and English literature, foreign languages and literature and related disciplines. Second masters in literature/language; reading knowledge of at least one modern European language desirable. 2) Open July 1, 1976. Emphasis on social science, education and related disciplines. Second masters in education or social sciences, reading knowledge of one modern European language desirable. Assignments in both positions include reference service, liaison work with teaching faculty, and participation in collection development, etc. ALA accredited MLS, two years academic library reference experience desirable. Positions carry faculty status and responsibilities. Salary $10,000 or more depending on qualifications and experience. Request application and detailed notice of vacancy (please specify) from John Thomas, Personnel Officer, Libraries/AVC, Purdue University; West Lafayette, Indiana 47907. Deadline for applications: March 1, 1976. An equal access/equal opportunity employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHEAST

DIRECTOR of Public Library System position open. Prefer applicant with M.L.S. degree. Public library background with a minimum of 5 years' experience in administrative capacity. Must have ability to innovate, initiate and work effectively with others. To direct staff of 64 full and part-time, including 7 librarians. Minimum salary $15,732. Regular city benefits. Challenging opportunity in city of 135,000. Four libraries, one of 15,000 sq. ft. under construction. Send résumé and letter of application before Feb. 28, 1976 to: Mrs. Gladys Caywood, Secretary, Advisory Board, 12465 Warwick Blvd., Newport News, VA 23606. Equal opportunity employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHWEST

CATALOGER. Position available February 1 in large university library. Responsibility for monographs in all subject fields, using LC classification. Staff of 14 (4 professional). Two OCLC terminals. Minimum requirements: M.L.S. from ALA accredited school; knowledge of one foreign language. Beginning salary: $9,200. One month vacation, usual benefits. Send résumé and references to: Wilson Snodgrass, Director, Processing Services, Fondren Library, Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas 75275. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—WEST

THE UNIVERSITY of California, Davis is now accepting applications for the position of Principal Cataloger/Assistant Head of the Catalog Department. Responsibilities: Training and supervision of professional and paraprofessional staff numbering 15 FTE positions. This assignment entails continuing review on a sample rather than a full-time revision basis. The ability to plan, organize, and supervise cataloging operations is essential as is the ability to write with clarity and precision. The Principal Cataloger/Assistant Head works closely with the department head in the planning and coordination of departmental procedures and is in charge of the department during the head's absence. The appointee will be expected to spend 2 to 4 hours per week answering questions at the catalog information desk. This will include occasional weekend work. Qualifications: A graduate degree in librarianship from an ALA accredited institution; a minimum of three years cataloging experience in an academic library using the LC classification. Salary: Hiring range is $14,256-$16,872, dependent upon qualifications and experience, with the rank of Associate Librarian. The salary range for this position runs to $20,868. Send résumés to: Wm. F. McCoy, Associate University Librarian, 108 Shields Library, University of California, Davis, California 95616.

REFERENCE. Two positions as Assistant Librarian ($10,716-$15,084) or Senior Assistant Librarian ($12,600-$17,292). Both levels require second Master's degree or progress toward same; Senior Assistant requires two years experience. Applicants must show evidence of formal preparation for reference duties. Background in physical science, business, or computerized data bases highly desirable. Department is a unified service with seven librarians. One evening each week and four or five weekends each semester. Request application form from: Henry Madden, University Librarian, California State University, Fresno, CA 93740. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

ART AND ARCHITECTURE Librarian. The University of Colorado Libraries is seeking candidates for the position of Art and Architecture Librarian. This librarian (who holds faculty status) directs the Art and Architecture Library, a branch library of 45,000 volumes. Requirements: Fifth-year degree in Library Science and three years relevant library experience. In addition, a Master's degree in the arts or architecture is highly desirable. Salary: $12,500 minimum. Position now open. Apply to: John Lubans, Jr., University of Colorado Libraries, Boulder, CO 80309. The University of Colorado is an equal employment/affirmative action employer.

Lifesaving isn't only at swimming pools.

It's our guess you've never even heard of cardiopulmonary resuscitation—right? Well, there are some new lifeguards around these days, trained by the Heart Association in a lifesaving technique called cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR).

You'll see them in hospitals, industrial plants, ambulances, football stadiums . . . even large offices. Many are doctors, but others are firemen, nurses, ambulance and rescue personnel, policemen . . . and just plain people.

When someone's heart stops, his brain begins to die. Minutes count.

Prompt application of mouth-to-mouth breathing and chest compression keeps blood flowing to the brain. CPR can restore life, or sustain it until complete cardiac care can be started. Thousands of victims of sudden heart arrest have been saved by these CPR "lifeguards."

A lot is being done these days to prevent premature death, to save hearts "too good to die"—and the Heart Association is doing it. Your gift to the Heart Fund will keep us at it.

Give Heart Fund
American Heart Association

Contributed by the Publisher

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS

Abingdon Press 537
Ambassador International Cultural Foundation 370
American Society of Agricultural Engineers 507
Arlington House 374
Atheneum Publishers 374

Baker & Taylor Co. 467
Barnes & Noble 378
Blackwell North America 3d Cover
Boardman Co. 472
Bobbs-Merrill Co. 377
R.R. Bowker Co. 376, 529, 551
George Braziller 378

Cahners Books 497
Cambridge University Press 380
Canadian Newspaper Services International 381
Canyon Records 472
Charles Publishing Co. 539
Columbia University Press 527
Congressional Quarterly 535
Cornell University Press 382
Corning Museum of Glass 507
Coward, McCann & Geoghegan 516
Thomas Y. Crowell Co. 383, 384, 385
Crown Publishers 386

Marcel Dekker 387
Delacorte Press 388
Dial Press 389
Dodd, Mead & Co. 390, 521, 531
Douglas-West Publishers 391
Down East 465
E. P. Dutton & Co. 392

Economists' Bookshop 470
Emerson Books 543
Encyclopaedia Britannica 393
Environment Information Center 517
M. Evans & Co. 394

Facts on File 493
Faith and Life Press 509
Frederick Fell Publishers 395
Fortress Press 497
Free Press 396

Gale Research Co. 514
Gaylord Bros. 2d Cover
Greenwood Press 397

G. K. Hall & Co. 398
Harcourt Brace Jovanovich 400, 401, 547, 549
Harper & Row, Publishers 525
Harvard University Press 399
Hastings House 402
Hawthorn Books 543
Highsmith Co. 468, 472
Houghton Mifflin Co. 464

Independent Publishers Group 404
International Pictorial Publications 495

Johns Hopkins University Press 405
Josten's Library Services Division 464, 516

Alfred A. Knopf 406
Kodansha International 407

Larousse & Co. 499
Library Binding Institute 471
Library Binding Service 462, 463
Library Filmstrip Center 470
Library Microfilms & Materials Co. 468
J. B. Lippincott Co. 408
Literary Enterprises 472
Louisiana State University Press 545

McGraw-Hill Book Co. 410, 411
David McKay Co. 412, 413
Macmillan Co. 414, 415, 416, 417, 418
Mason/Charter Publishers 419
M.I.T. Press 409
Microcard Editions 460
Microfilming Corp. of America 4th Cover
Military Affairs/Aerospace Historian Publishing 505
William Morrow & Co. 420

Nash Publishing Corp. 541
National Geographic Society 421
New American Library 422
Newsbank 466
New York Graphic Society 423
W. W. Norton & Co. 425

Ohio University Press 426
Orbis Books 501
Oxford University Press 503

Pantheon Books 427
Pergamon Press 470
Prentice-Hall 430
Princeton University Press 428, 429
G. P. Putnam's Sons 529, 530, 541, 549

Quality Books 507

Random House 431
Rodale Press 432

Saturday Review Press 433
Abner Schram 507
Charles Scribner's Sons 434
Security World Books 507
Sheed & Ward 435
Simon & Schuster 436
Stackpole Books 437
Standard Change-Makers 469
Stanford University Press 438
Stein & Day Publishers 439

Taplinger Publishing Co. 440
Temple University Press 495
Transatlantic Arts 441

United Nations 503
University of Illinois Press 403
University of Massachusetts Press 499
University of North Carolina Press 424
University of Oklahoma Press 493

Vanguard Press 446
Viking Press 442, 443, 444, 445

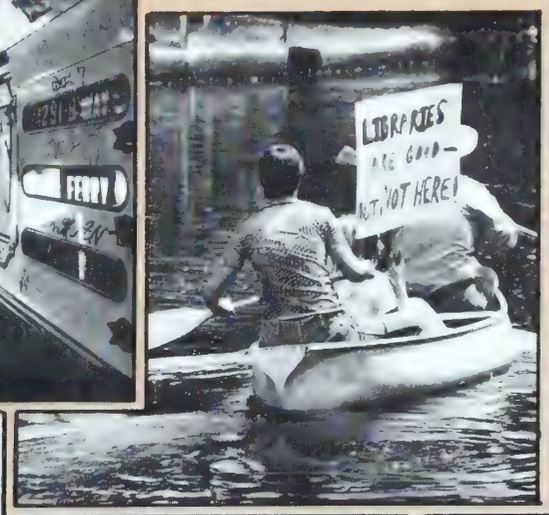
Walker & Co. 447
Frederick Warne & Co. 448
Franklin Watts 449
John Weatherhill 450
Wesleyan University Press 505
Westminster Press 451, 505
Winchester Press 453
Who's Who Among Black Americans 452
Word 458

Xerox Corp. 474

Yale University Press 454

Zondervan Corp. 455

FEBRUARY 15, 1976/ISSN 0000-0027



.....news report 1975

941UBurl22020 41jd06306
Burlingame Pub Lib
480 Primrose Rd.
Burlingame, CA 94010

LJ LIBRARY JOURNAL

News of the Year, 1975
The Catalog: Its Nature and Prospects
In the News: Nat'l Periodicals System planning underway; "Interim Action" on photocopying law urged; LSCA threat fought; $$ devastation of N.Y.; Calif. pros v. nonpros

Both these books have been treated for use with detection systems.

We salute the AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION
1876–1976
Promoting Excellence in Library Service

ALA 100

FEB 2 1976
LIBRARY

So why do we believe the book on the left is more likely to be stolen?

Because the book on the right has been treated with a "Tattle-Tape"® book detection strip.

It's no secret there are other detection systems on the market besides ours. And some people might be tempted to think they're all the same.

Wrong.

One of the most important things in a book detection system is to make sure people don't find out how it works. A book thief doesn't mind ripping something out of a book, if that will let him steal it.

The big advantage of the "Tattle-Tape" system is virtual undetectability of treated books. The marker is out of sight.

Another is that with our system, you can also treat magazines and other periodicals.

And, since the "Tattle-Tape" system is full-circulating, patrons can re-enter and leave the library as they please once their books have been charged out.

There are a lot of other differences between the "Tattle-Tape" Brand Book Detection System and our competitors' systems. Before you commit yourself to an investment, we think you should know these important differences.

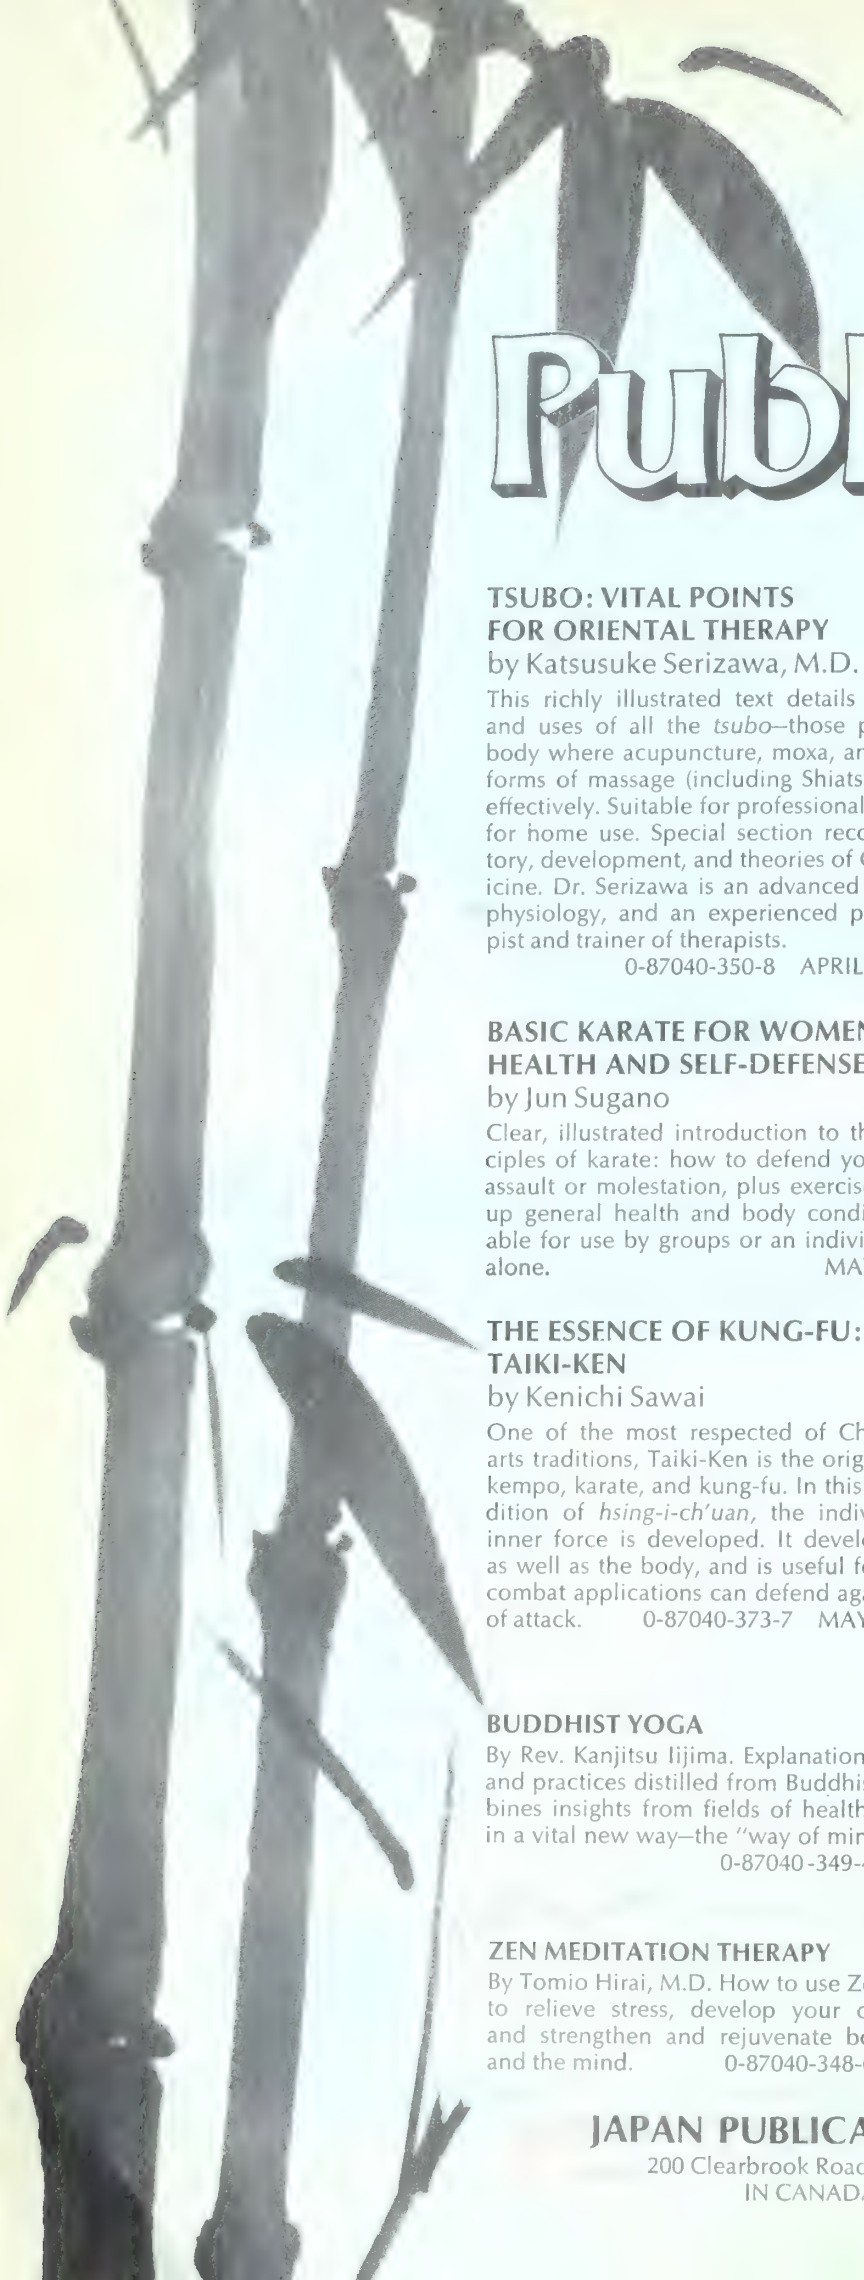
Whatever your priorities are—whether better service for your patrons, using your budget to put new books on the shelves rather than replacing those stolen, or adding new technology (such as our new 3M Brand Inventory Control System) — a "Tattle-Tape" Book Detection System can help you reach them faster.

To learn more, write to 3M Company, Detection Systems, 3M Center, Bldg. 220-9E, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101.

Tattle-Tape. So you can run a lending library. Instead of a stealing library.

3M COMPANY

Detection Systems



SPRING 1976

Japan Publications

NEW TITLES

TSUBO: VITAL POINTS FOR ORIENTAL THERAPY

by Katsusuke Serizawa, M.D.

This richly illustrated text details the locations and uses of all the tsubo—those places on the body where acupuncture, moxa, and the various forms of massage (including Shiatsu) work most effectively. Suitable for professional therapists, or for home use. Special section recounts the history, development, and theories of Oriental medicine. Dr. Serizawa is an advanced researcher in physiology, and an experienced physical therapist and trainer of therapists.

0-87040-350-8 APRIL. $18.00, cloth

BASIC KARATE FOR WOMEN: HEALTH AND SELF-DEFENSE

by Jun Sugano

Clear, illustrated introduction to the basic principles of karate: how to defend yourself against assault or molestation, plus exercises to sharpen up general health and body conditioning. Suitable for use by groups or an individual studying alone. MAY. $9.95, cloth

THE ESSENCE OF KUNG-FU: TAIKI-KEN

by Kenichi Sawai

One of the most respected of Chinese martial arts traditions, Taiki-Ken is the original source of kempo, karate, and kung-fu. In this orthodox tradition of hsing-i-ch'uan, the individual's ki or inner force is developed. It develops the mind as well as the body, and is useful for all ages. Its combat applications can defend against any kind of attack. 0-87040-373-7 MAY. $6.95, paper

ILLUSTRATED T'AI-CHI CH'UAN FOR HEALTH AND BEAUTY

by Yang Ming-shih

The Chinese have been practicing the slow, simple, ballet-like exercises of the T'ai-Chi Ch'uan for over 3000 years, because of the wonderful sense of health and well-being it gives them. Practiced daily, they will benefit the whole person: banish stress and fatigue; improve digestion, circulation, and other internal functions; develop intrinsic energy; stabilize equilibrium; and improve the figure. MAY. $6.95, pape

SCIENTIFIC KARATE

by Masayuki Hisataka

The most logical and comprehensive text available on karate, covering both its technical and its spiritual/philosophical aspects: includes scientific analyses of all standard techniques and clear, well-founded explanations of all basic karate rules. Special section on armed techniques utilizing common tools and household objects.

0-87040-362-1 MAY. $19.95, cloth

VITAL JUDO: GRAPPLING TECHNIQUES

by Isao Okano

Companion volume to the classic VITAL JUDO: THROWING TECHNIQUES, this book deals exclusively with actual problems faced in real judo meets and tournaments. Detailed, exhaustive explanations, and illustrative photographs featuring top judo experts as models. (Improvement of grappling techniques will also, incidentally, improve one's throwing skills.)

0-87040-352-4 MAY. $13.95, cloth

RECENT PUBLICATIONS

BUDDHIST YOGA

By Rev. Kanjitsu Iijima. Explanation of principles and practices distilled from Buddhist yoga. Combines insights from fields of health and religion in a vital new way—the "way of mind and body."

0-87040-349-4/$6.95, paper

ZEN MEDITATION THERAPY

By Tomio Hirai, M.D. How to use Zen meditation to relieve stress, develop your concentration, and strengthen and rejuvenate both the body and the mind. 0-87040-348-6/$3.25, paper

TEN WEEKS TO A BEAUTIFUL FIGURE

By Kohtaro Wada. The famous "Wada Figuring" method—how to lose weight without strenuous exercise, medicines, or a stringent diet. Balanced method of improving health and body proportions. 0-87040-236-6/$4.95, paper

COMPLETE SUMI-E TECHNIQUES

By Sadami Yamoda. Thorough instruction book on Oriental brush painting, for beginner or specialist. Combines the four previous "Sumi-E in Three Weeks" volumes.

0-87040-361-3/$8.95, paper

JAPAN PUBLICATIONS TRADING CO., (U.S.A.) INC.
200 Clearbrook Road, Elmsford, New York 10523/Telephone: (914) 592-2077
IN CANADA: Longman Canada Limited—Ontario, Canada

LJ

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF: John N. Berry III
SENIOR EDITORS: Shirley Havens, Karl Nyren
EDITOR, BOOK REVIEW: Janet Fletcher
ASSOCIATE EDITORS:
Book Review: Robert R. Harris
Bibliographic: Irene S. Land
News: Noël Savage
PRODUCTION EDITOR: Ellen Mangin
ART EDITOR: Carlos Delgado
REVIEW EDITORS: Marlene Charnizon, Ellen Levy, Anneliese Schwarzer, Katharine Scott
ASSISTANT EDITOR: Maureen Crowley
PRODUCTION ASSISTANTS: Nancy Brown, Ann Yazejian
EDITORIAL ASSISTANTS: Bette-Lee Fox, Ann Sankar
ADV. SALES MANAGER: Richard H. Brown
ADV. PRODUCTION: Maureen J. Rose
PUBLISHER: Paul J. Carnese

LJ/LIBRARY JOURNAL is published by R. R. Bowker Co., a Xerox company. Robert F. Asleson, President.

Direct editorial and advertising correspondence to 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York 10036. Telephone: (212) 764-5100. Subscription inquiries and changes of address should be directed to R. R. Bowker Company, Subscription Dept., P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588. Publications Offices at 117 Church Street, Whitinsville, Mass. 01488. Issued twice a month, September through June, monthly in July and August. Second class postage paid at Whitinsville, Mass. and additional mailing offices. Copyright © 1976 Xerox Corporation.

LJ/LIBRARY JOURNAL is indexed in Library Literature, Library & Information Science Abstracts, and Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature. SUBSCRIPTIONS: USA: 1 year $19.00; 2 years $36.00; 3 years $51.00. Canada and Postal Union of the Americas and Spain, add $2 per year; elsewhere, add $3 per year. Single copy $1.35. Spring, fall, and winter announcement numbers, $3.25 each. POSTMASTER: Please send Form 3579 to R. R. Bowker Company, P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588.

LJ/LIBRARY JOURNAL reserves the right to make its own independent judgment as to the acceptability of advertising copy and illustrations in advertisements. Advertiser and advertising agency assume liability for all content (including text, representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assume responsibility for any claims arising therefrom against the publisher. Offers to sell products, which appear in LJ/LIBRARY JOURNAL, are subject to all laws and regulations and are void where so prohibited.

Letters 564
Calendar 565
Editorial 567

News:
NCLIS plans for Natl. Periodicals System . . . LSCA threat fought . . . "interim action" on photocopying urged . . . N.Y. libraries face more $$ cuts . . . Calif. librarians unite against nonpro threat . . . Women Library Workers plot strategies . . . losses in directorships for women pegged . . . budget-pinched N.Y. library to quit system . . . Western biblio network to serve B.C. . . . Ill. co-op eyes database center . . . radio history, phonics prep, independent study . . . latest Bicentennial projects . . . inmate volunteers, Ohio mailbooks 568

FEATURES

News Report 1975
BY NOËL SAVAGE 579

The Catalog: Its Nature and Prospects
BY MAURICE J. FREEDMAN 594

Professional Reading 596
Checklist 597
Magazines 599

THE BOOK REVIEW

Book Reviews 601
Index to Reviews and Professional Reading 637

Classified 638
Index to Advertisers 640

LJ LETTERS

Union clash in Ottawa

Kenneth B. Moore

Librarian, CAUT Collective Bargaining Committee, Irving Library, University of New Brunswick, Fredericton, Canada:

I must take issue with a news item in LJ's "Personnel" section (October 1, 1975, p. 1760). The reluctance of some members of the University of Ottawa Librarians Association (UOLA) to be represented by the Association of Professors of the University of Ottawa (APUO) may be understandable in the light of the fact that full membership was refused in the past. However, nothing can justify the manner in which the executive of UOLA attempted to secure representation for its members Having agreed to appluy for certification, it was appropriate that the librarians hold a vote to decide on a bargaining agent. But why was the Canadian Association of University Teachers (CAUT) not informed that it was listed as an altenative on the ballot. And why were all librarians allowed to vote, even those who would expect to be excluded as being part of management. Of 41 librarians voting, 19 cast ballots for the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), and 13 for CAUT; 13 librarians did not vote.

The president of the Librarians Association took this as a mandate to encourage members of the association to sign CUPE cards, claiming that it was "the only action open". Under this kind of pressure 34 librarians signed with CUPE and the application for certification was in the hands of the Ontario Labour Relations Board one week after the vote. All of this took place without the knowledge of CAUT.

One week after the application for certification was filed several librarians approached CAUT with the suggestion that all alternatives might not have been considered. It was at the request of those librarians, some of whom had signed with CUPE, that the APUO, with the support of CAUT, applied for certification as a bargaining unit which included librarians. Sixteen librarians signed APUO cards.

It was at approximately this time that all of the librarians in the proposed unit became aware that CUPE's goal was not a unit of professional librarians, but one which would ultimately include over 200 members of the library support staff.

The intention of the APUO/CAUT intervention before the Ontario Labour Relations Board was to give the librarians an opportunity to make an informed decision.

The statemeent from which your quotation was taken implied that APUO and CAUT attempted to interfere with the librarians free choice of a bargaining agent. Nothing could be farther from the truth. APUO and CAUT requested that the Labour Relations Board hold a legally sanctioned formal vote so the librarians would have an opportunity to make their decision in full awareness of all the fact.

This second election contrasted with the first in that management personnel were naturally excluded. The result of the vote was 21 in favour of CUPE and 17 for APUO. This majority vote established CUPE as the librarians' bargaining agent, but it was far from the 75 percent originally claimed by UOLA and CUPE. The second election under the supervision of the Ontario Labour Relations Board guaranteed that the democratic process was upheld and the requirements of the Ontario Labour Relations Act fulfilled.

Flanagan's "farrago"

Winston Broadfoot

Director, The George Washington Flowers Memorial Collection, Duke University Library, Durham, North Carolina:

Leo Flanagan's article (LJ, October 15, 1975, p. 1887-91) is a curious anachronism, one sufficiently full of mischief to be worth a reply. To take literally the words "free speech" or "free society" is, of course, absurd. To properly qualify the introduction to the Intellectual Freedom Manual, one would best begin by citing all the relevant decisions of the U.S. Supreme Court. It doesn't bother me, as it does Flanagan, that qualifying caveats were not put in that brief introduction.

What does bother me is the further point Flanagan makes: librarians have a professional duty to advocate the good materials and to restrict the bad materials in order to support the purposes of a "benevolent society." Hogwash! Who's being benevolent to whom and where does he get the right? A benevolent democracy is an impossibility. If Flanagan has some funny word he prefers to democracy, that's OK with me. But, however called, the state does not sit over us with some purpose which we are under obligation to carry out. It works the other way 'round, Mr. Flanagan, which is why we must make all viewpoints available.

Flanagan doesn't like pornography and neither do I. Librarians who operate under the umbrella of "intellectual freedom" are confused by this new and virulent genre. Some say any expression, including pornography, has intellectual content. Others say they have no interest in defending pornography, only the good stuff. In this last group, you have the beginnings of an alliance, Mr. Flanagan.

For my part, I would defend pornography under the right of privacy, something an individual is entitled to read or see or do in a free society, that does no harm to other persons. I also think librarians have a special stake in this issue. The recent action of the ALA in protecting the privacy of a borrower's reading habits gives me hope of an alliance.

One of these days a group of residents is going to present its local library with a collection of pornography. Right now we don't even want to think about it. But we must, for an answer will be required.

Alan Edward Schorr

Government Publications and Map Librarian, University of Alaska, Fairbanks:

Flanagan has hit the nail on the head. Many librarians are far more comfortable filing cards or checking out books (please, I realize the necessity of both) than selecting, as opposed to acquiring, materials for the collection. How many librarians even bother to check the reviewing media in order to select titles—obviously it is easier to acquire instead of deciding the merits of specific titles.

One of the weaknesses that leads to this attitude is inadequate preparation for a career in librarianship and the lack of interest in either continuing education or activities that might enhance their professional capabilities. One cannot blame the public's neglect and lack of faith in the importance of libraries and librarians inasmuch as some only have had contact with a clerk (either "professional" or paraprofessional) and assume that clerks and librarians are one and the same.

If librarians would accept the demanding challenges of an active professional commitment, the public someday might expect and respect their professional opinions regarding book selection. The first (and most difficult) step is to convince librarians that librarians should be competent to judge and recommend titles: that professional activities, publications, etc. can be worthwhile and rewarding. My God, is it really possible! Perhaps one day the majority of librarians will be confident to stand up and decide not to add certain books to their collections (obviously for a variety of good reasons). In addition to competence it will take guts, a commodity lacking in a profession that often does not distinguish between service and subservience.

Judith F. Krug
Director, Office for Intellectual Freedom, American Library Association, Chicago:

Contrary to what Flanagan thinks about "professionalism," I refuse to believe that the world, libraries or librarianship will go to hell if library patrons are given the communicative materials they desire, even if those materials deal with explicit s-x, or government p-wer, or—hush— the Central Intelligence (sic) Agency.

As for the remainder of his article, it is a curious combination of deliberate misquotation and pretentious intellectualism. Flanagan begins his attack on intellectual freedom with the startling claim that a one-paragraph introductory remark (which, by the way, opens with the words: "In basic terms") represents an "oversimplification." He asserts that part of his difficulty with the introduction stems from its "partial attempt to divide thought from action, a recent attempt in human history, and one with unfortunate implications." Well, how recent? Aristotle's references to nous theoretikos and nous praktikos assume that thought and action are in certain respects both distinguishable and separable. And what "unfortunate implications"? That ideas (whether good or bad) do not have effects? Absurd! Anyone can fling charges of anti-intellectualism, but it is to be noted that Flanagan fails to demonstrate how his "implication" follows from the "division" of thought and action. And without a demonstration, his case collapses.

If Flanagan wants to make "judgments regarding materials and patrons," let him proceed directly with a presentation of the merits of his own case.

CALENDAR

MAR. 7-9—ALASKA LA, Juneau.

MAR. 9-10—NATIONAL FEDERATION OF ABSTRACTING AND INDEXING SERVICES, Columbus, Ohio. Christopher Inn. "Information—Dilemmas, Decisions, Directions." Contact: NFAIS, 3401 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa. 19104.

MAR. 10-12—ALA INFORMATION SCIENCE AND AUTOMATION DIVISION, "Processing and Automation at the Library of Congress," Washington, D.C., the Library of Congress and Old Town Holiday Inn, Alexandria, Va. Contact: Donald P. Hammer, Exec. Secy., ISAD, ALA, 50 E. Huron St., Chicago, 60611. (312) 944-6780.

MAR. 31-APR. 2—UTAH LA, Salt Lake City, Salt Lake Hilton Hotel.

APR. 1-2—UNIV. OF MINNESOTA LIBRARY SCHOOL AND MINNEAPOLIS PUBLIC LIBRARY AND INFORMATION CENTER, "The Mythic Image: Mythology, Folklore, and Librariaes," Minneapolis. Harris McClaskey coordinator. Leaders: Joseph Campbell, Beverly Brodsky McDermott, Gerald McDermott. Contact: Joan Leigh, Asst. to Director, Library School, 419 Walter Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis 55455. Deadline: March 1, 1976.

APR. 3—SCHOOL OF INFORMATION STUDIES, SYRACUSE UNIV. "Information Broker/Free Lance Librarian, New Careers, New Library Services," Syracuse. Contact: Ruth Patrick, School of Information Studies, Syracuse Univ., 113 Euclid Ave., Syracuse, N.Y. 13210. (315) 423-4930, (315) 423-2911.

APR 29-30—MARYLAND LA, Baltimore, Baltimore Hilton Inn. Contact: Jean Barry Molz, Maryland LA, c/o Baltimore County Public Library, Admin. Offices, 320 York Rd., Towson, Md. 21617. (301) 758-0980.

APR. 29-MAY 1—OEE OREGON LA, Lincoln City, Dunes Ocean Front Resort. Contact: Carol Ventgen, Coos Bay Public Library, 525 Anderson, Coos Bay, Ore. 97420.

APR. 30-MAY 1—OHIO VALLEY GROUP OF TECHNICAL SERVICES LIBRARIANS, Ball State Univ., Muncie, Indiana 47304. Contact: Frances E. Reynolds, Acquisitions Librarian, Bracken Library, Ball State Univ.

MAY 2-4—IDAHO LA, Burley, Ponderosa Inn. Contact Exhibits Chairperson Anna Green, Portneuf District Library, 5210 Stuart, Chubbuck 83201. (208) 237-2192.

MAY 6-8—MIDWEST ACADEMIC LIBRARIANS CONFERENCE, Cedar Falls, U. of Northern Iowa Library. Contact: Douglas Hieber, Head of Circulation, U. of Northern Iowa, Cedar Falls 50613.

MAY 6-8—MONTANA LA, Helena, Colonial Inn.

MAY 10-11—GRAD. SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SERVICE, UNIV. OF ALABAMA, "Symposium on the Book Arts." Contact: James D. Ramer, Grad School of Library Service, Univ. of Alabama, University, Ala. 35486.

MAY 10-11—MASSACHUSETTS LA, Seacrest, North Falmouth, Mass. Contact: Patricia A. Demit, Box 7, Nahant, Mass. 01908. (617) 581-0663.

MAY 10-21—GRAD. SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SERVICE, UNIV. OF ALABAMA, "Typographic Workshop." Contact: James D. Ramer, Grad. School of Library Service, Univ. of Alabama, University, Ala. 35486.

MAY 12-14—SCHOOL OF BUSINESS, UNIV. OF SOUTH DAKOTA, Vermillion, "Library Management Seminar," $125. Contact: C. N. Kaufman, School of Business, Vermillion, S.D. 57069. (605) 677-5232.

MAY 13-14—MAINE LA, Treadway-Samoset Resort, Rockport, Me. Contact: Richard Gross, Lewiston Public Library, 118 Park St., Lewiston 04240.

MAY 13-15—6TH ANNUAL CONF. ON LIBRARY ORIENTATION FOR ACADEMIC LIBRARIES, Center of Educational Resources, Eastern Michigan Univ. $55, limited to 100. Contact: Hannelore Rader, Center of Educational Resources, Eastern Michigan Univ., Ypsilanti 48197.

JUNE 6-12—GRAD. SCHOOL OF LIBRARY AND INFO. SCIENCES, Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11205. "Educating Library Users."

JUNE 9-12—CHRISTIAN LIBRARIANS' FELLOWSHIP, Washington Bible College, Lanham, Md. Contact: William F. Abernathy, Columbia Bible College, P.O. Box 3122, Columbia, S.C. 29203.

JUNE 21-25—AMERICAN THEOLOGICAL LA, Grand Rapids, Mich., Calvin Theological Seminary. Contact: Rev. Erich R. W. Schultz, U. Librarian, Wilfrid Laurier U., Waterloo, Ontario, Canada N21 3C5.

JULY 18-24—ALA ANNUAL CONFERENCE, Chicago, Palmer House.

JULY 26-30—SCHOOL OF LIBRARIANSHIP, UNIV. OF WASHINGTON, "Evaluating and Selecting Nonprint Media for Libraries Serving Children and Young People," Seattle, Univ. of Washington Campus. Guests: Diana L. Spirt of Previews magazine, Paul L. Brawley of Booklist. Contact: Eleanor E. Ahlers, School of Librarianship, Univ. of Washington, 133 Suzzallo Library, BL-20, Seattle 98195.

Thinking of freezing your card file?

Well you might be, considering the fast pace of current acquisitions and the growing expense of space utilization.

We'll Supply the Freezing Power

Xerox University Microfilms has made technological breakthroughs that enable you to freeze your catalog instantly—and make it actually desirable to do so! By combining the capabilities of our automated catalog card camera system with those of a recently developed optical converter, we can produce catalog cards on microfiche, or on 35mm or 16mm roll microfilm, in almost any standard reduction ratio. And we can do it at prices that are lower than ever!

Imagine your present card catalog on microfiche .... You'll never have to file another card! We can get as many as 1600 cards—or an entire average file drawer—on a single fiche. As for image and alignment quality ... you'll have to see it to believe it!

If you prefer, we can put your card catalog on an indexed roll film reader for fast, trouble-free retrieval by patrons. They'll be able to get from Author A to Subject Z in seconds.

What Happens After the Freeze?

Xerox has some interesting capabilities to help provide patrons with bibliographic access to current acquisitions, as well. With just the LC numbers, we can produce full bibliographic data on microfiche or roll microfilm, or in book catalog format. You'll probably want us to put your currents in the same format as your backfile, for user convenience and resource recognition, and to conserve space.

For additional details, and price information, call or write: Michael M. Misna, Manager, Automated Bibliographic Services, Department A, University Microfilms, 300 North Zeeb Road, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106. Telephone: 800-521-0600 or (313) 761-4700.

XEROX

Urban libraries & the "united front"

"Officials play one library jurisdiction against another in the scrap for funds. The ALA Washington Office pursues one approach to federal library funding; the Urban Libraries Council publicly pursues another," according to Art Plotnik in the January American Libraries. In the previous issue (December 1975) Art offered this report: "The library lobby is further weakened, says Cooke (Eileen Cooke, Director of the ALA Washington Office), when groups within the field come at Congress with conflicting demands: for instance, a band of urban libraries currently seeking a separate and relatively large appropriation to help support basic services in the ailing inner cities. 'The education interests sharing the pie just won't let us get away with it,' says Cooke."

We read these emanations from the Washington and Chicago Headquarters of ALA with a measure of skepticism. Oh sure, we all agree that a "united front" is the best legislative tactic, and that to achieve it will require compromise. We're sure that Art and Eileen are sincere in their view that ULC represents some kind of threat to the "united front." But we disagree.

To build a successful "united front," you must share goals. While it is obvious that ULC and ALA share a great many goals, it is also obvious that they are very much at odds on one goal—the goal that was the raison d'etre for the founding of the Urban Libraries Council. ULC's basic purpose is to increase fiscal support for badly depressed urban libraries, primarily from the federal level, but really from any level that such support can be achieved.

Perhaps our view of all of this is jaundiced by our own location here in the collapsing center of one urban area. Just a few days ago the word came that our public library, the Branch Libraries of the New York Public Library, is about to suffer another round of blows from the budgetary axe. For the first time, branches (eight of them) will close—and spokesmen for NYPL predict another 33 branch closings by the end of next year. Another 100 library staff will be added to the more than twice that figure already fired, along with 56 staffers supported by CETA funds that the library will lose. In neighboring Queens, Brooklyn, Nassau, and over in New Jersey, similar disasters are in the making. We hear similar stories from Detroit, San Jose, Tucson, from cities—large and small—all across the land. Their message is that every dollar received has required bloody battle in city hall, or a budget cut elsewhere. The reason an Urban Libraries Council was formed is that the profession, the various governments, and the legislative leadership have simply let the cities face this disastrous depression alone. ULC would like very much to be part of that mythical "united front" but they are blocked by intransigent state library leadership opposed "in principle" to being by-passed by direct federal aid to libraries, and jealous of their long-standing control of ALA's lobbying efforts. The ad hoc committee created to come up with a compromise recently threw up its hands, and suggested to ULC that it go ahead and frame separate legislation, since there was no way ALA's "united front" could support any revision of LSCA Title I, even though ALA's own Public Library Association supported that effort.

Meanwhile, in the official publication of ALA, the only group singled out for attack by Cooke and Plotnik is that "band of urban libraries." They are under attack because they had the audacity to ask for help from our professional lobby and because they have publicly stated that their position is so desperate that they'll have to "go it alone" with little hope of success, if they can't get ALA help on the Hill.

There's no doubt about the ULC's willingness to join in a "united front," they even tried it once, but were received less than enthusiastically at 50 East Huron Street. An unexpected glimmer of hope has come from the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science, which recently went on record favoring aid to urban libraries through LSCA. But so far, despite many sessions of the ad hoc committee and with ALA's Legislation Committee, the urban libraries have come away with little, except a recommendation at a December hearing on LSCA extension that urban libraries get a "fair share" of LSCA Title I funds. The urban libraries are forced to "go it alone" because, for all the talk of a "united front" no one really wants them to join one and possibly upset the "delicate balance" that has left them out of our legislative priorities for so long.

These debates must be brought out of the caucus rooms of Chicago and Washington to be openly discussed by the whole profession. ALA's Chicago Centennial Conference would be a perfect forum, or there are always the pages of LJ or AL. We'd like to hear from someone besides the two ALA staffers on ALA and the question of urban library aid. John Berry

LJ NEWS

NCLIS Task Force to plan Nat'l Periodicals System

Taking another step towards getting its national network going, the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science has appointed representatives of large research libraries, national libraries, and regional and state networks to a Task Force, charged with planning a National Periodicals System. Vernon E. Palmour (Public Research Institute) is Task Force Director.

NCLIS decided to try to get "a specific plan for the establishment of a National Periodicals System" following a conference held to review a 1974 Westat study, Resource and Bibliographic Support for a Nationwide Library Program; participants had zeroed in on the need for a concrete system plan. Palmour, who worked on the Westat study for NCLIS, reports that the Task Force will try to build on an earlier Association of Research Libraries study, Access to Periodical Resources: a National Plan. The Task Force will review the alternatives suggested by the ARL study: regional centers with strong resource library backup or a center modeled on the British Lending Library. One key question to be addressed: how many centers would be needed.

Besides exploring such things as financing and costs, the Task Force is expected to plot the steps required to bring the desired National Periodicals System into being: specification, organization, management, service obligations, and implementation strategy.

Appointed to the Task Force are: Melvin Day (National Library of Medicine); Richard Farley (National Agriculture Library); William Welsh (Library of Congress); Richard Boss (Princeton); Leslie Dunlap (University of Iowa); David Weber (Stanford); Eugene Garfield (Institute for Scientific Information); Warren Haas (Center for Research Libraries); Arthur Hamlin (Temple); John Humphrey (New York Education Department); Stephen McCarthy (Council on Library Resources); Robert McClarren (North Suburban Library System, Ill.); Russell Shank (Universal Serials & Book Exchange); Alice Wilcox (MINITEX, Minnesota); and James Wood (Chemical Abstracts Service).

Responding to a query from LJ, Task Force Director Palmour admitted that no one from the national Convention of Serials (CONSER) project, the Ohio College Library Center, or Stanford's BALLOTs had been named to the Task Force; he claimed, however, that CONSER will help in "coordinating" the project.

Library community rallies against LSCA threat

The National Commission on Libraries and Information Science, the American Library Association, the Urban Libraries Council, and the Chief Officers of State Library Agencies are among the library organizations now urging Congress to vote for a five-year extension of the Library Services and Construction Act, thus preventing a termination of that 20-year-old program on June 30. LSCA is also in jeopardy because of a recent change in the fiscal cycle: transitional funding is needed to carry over many federal programs—including LSCA—from the old fiscal year end (June 30) to the September 1 start of the new one. LSCA has been left off the administration's priority list for bail out funding, and so far efforts to get it back on have failed.

The LSCA extension has Congressional backing from both sides of the aisle, but it must win heavily in Congress—by a margin which will promise to defeat the expected Ford veto. One example of retrenchment at the federal level: the Office of Education has echoed the administration's position that the federal government has no business funding libraries. But Congress doesn't agree: Congressman Brademas was one to shoot back by saying: "The White House had better get the message; this is not a political thing, it's a bipartisan thing."

Meanwhile, library organizations are trying to win over more legislators in efforts to keep LSCA alive. Many admit, however, that the program needs to be revamped: NCLIS has already urged that LSCA be revised with provisions for more money for libraries and networks, a forward funding mechanism, and safeguards against the substitution of federal funds for state support (LJ, February 1, p. 461). The Urban Libraries Council wants LSCA to be revised to provide direct aid to both public and academic libraries, especially financially strapped urban facilities—a proposal that has thus far won the endorsement of only one group, ALA's Public Library Association. Although the library leadership is still against the direct aid concept, it's growing more receptive to the needs of urban libraries. ALA urged that more Title I funds go to urban libraries.

NCLIS on photocopying: "interim action" urged

The National Commission on Libraries and Information Science urged Congress via a resolution to take only "interim action on the photocopying issue in the revision of copyright law"—pending the results of a NCLIS study on the feasibility of a royalty payment mechanism. NCLIS asserted that it would be foolhardy to set anything but "interim" guidelines before the newly established Commission on New Technological Uses of Copyrighted Works (CONTU) makes its recommendations (expected by 1977) on library photocopying. Any legislation adopted, argued NCLIS, must be flexible—designed to adapt to new technological developments and important information to be presented in the forthcoming studies mentioned.

NCLIS also urged Congress to "incorporate in any copyright legislation enacted in 1976 a provision mandating a review and reconsideration to reflect technological developments not later than 1980, with subsequent reviews for the same purpose at intervals no greater than five years."

NCLIS had tried earlier to get CONTU to urge a holding pattern in photocopying, but CONTU voted to table the resolution "without prejudice" on the grounds that it was not prepared to take any action.

Virginia & Florida libraries provide legislative info

Virginia's Fairfax County Public Library and the Florida State Library are the latest to report new information services aimed at keeping citizens informed about annual legislative sessions.

•Legislative hotline: The Fairfax County Public Library is again helping residents note what's happening at the annual session of the Virginia General Assembly via a Legislative Information Service, operating out of Central's Virginia Room. Among the services offered: a daily posting of all proposed legislation, resolutions, and documents; a House and Senate calendar showing the status of proposed bills; information sources such as the Chamber of Commerce's White Paper, the Environmental Legislation Report, and the Richmond Times-Dispatch; background and specific files in subject areas (such as scenic rivers, death-with-dignity, mass transit) under legislative consideration. Individual bills are "tracked" on request: organizations or individuals get daily reports on legislation at each step from the introduction of a proposed bill to its final disposition.

•Recording legislative history: Thanks to the Jacksonville public broadcasting station WJCT, the State Library of Florida has on deposit videotapes of the 1975 session of the Florida legislature—a project that will be repeated annually, reports Ronald Kanen, Chief of the Bureau of Library Services. The tapes, which include the highlights of the annual session—floor debates, speeches, ceremonial events, and appearances by the governor—are day-by-day, hour-long summary programs called "Today in the Legislature." WJCT produced the tapes and dubbed them for the State Library, which plans to make them available via interlibrary loan.

ALA alerts libraries to microform ripoffs

ALA has cautioned libraries to be wary when buying microforms: at least one micropublisher is reproducing microforms and selling the duplicates (which are substantially inferior to the originals) at prices as much as double that of the original. One example of the price differential: an 84-reel microfilm that went for $1,260 was sold for $2200 by another vendor. The firms engaging in this "objectional business practice," notes ALA, "are not acting illegally": they duplicate only those materials that

Make your library a nicer place to browse and study, with furniture designed for contemporary beauty ...and tight budgets

Create a more inviting atmosphere with bright, colorful, contemporary furniture from Demco. It's not gunmetal gray or boring beige.

And it's actually priced lower than comparable wood units.

Demco furniture features tough, durable designs. Smooth, rounded aluminum supports are strong and safe. And the walnut woodgrain, brushed metal and warm contemporary colors blend into any decor.

Send today for the complete Demco Library Supplies Catalog ... and the Supplement, featuring 10 pages of new furniture.

Gentlemen:

☐ Please send me the Demco Library Supplies Catalog and Supplement, featuring more than 10,000 items.

☐ I already have your '75-'76 Catalog. Just send the new Supplement.

Mail to Demco, Box 1488, Dept. L12
Madison, Wis. 53701

Name_____
Title_____
School or Library_____
Address_____
City_____
State_____ Zip_____

DEMCO

Your Dependable Center for Books, Media and Supplies
Demco Educational Corp., Madison, Wis., Fresno, Cal., Book Division, Paramus, N.J

...in the public domain or are not protected by copyright.

Library says ALA can guard against the purchase of defective, excessively priced microforms by checking prices in such sources as the Micropublishers Trade List Annual, the National Register of Microform Masters, the Guide to Microforms in Print, International Microforms in Prints, and publishers' catalogs. Libraries should also insist upon written warranties covering any defects and omissions which are discovered after purchase, and they should try to get warranties on what ANSI/NAPM standards were used to assure technical quality.

Concerned librarians should write: Harriet K. Rebuldela, Chairperson, ALA/RTSD/RS Bookdealer-Library Relations Committee, University of Colorado Libraries, Boulder, Colo. 80302.

Public & instructional TV: limits on duplication set

Three broadcasting organizations have issued a policy statement aimed at curtailing reproduction of their programming to limited in-school use. The Public Broadcasting Service, the Agency for Instructional Television, and the Great Plains National Instructional Television Library said in their joint statement that any taping must be done by school personnel, can be held for seven days and must then be erased, and that no copies may be retained.

Certain Public Broadcasting Service programs, however, will not be open to any reproduction; Sesame Street is one example.

1976 NLW promotion includes TV & radio spots

The American Library Association and the advertising agency N. W. Ayer have turned out a dazzling variety of materials celebrating the 1976 running of National Library Week, scheduled for April 4-10. New this year are six pre-recorded radio spots including library endorsements by such people as Henry Mancini and Marvin Hamlish, plus a public service 30-second TV spot—each available for the cost of film and tape alone. ALA is also offering a variety of posters, banners, buttons, bookmarks, and mobiles—designed to publicize the library as an institution offering residents a wide array of services. This year's themes include: "Information Power" and "At the Library! Come see what's new besides books."

For more information, contact ALA's Public Information Office, 50 E. Huron St., Chicago, Ill. 60611.

THE LIBRARY DOLLAR

N.Y. libraries face more $$ & staff cutbacks

New York City government has ordered yet another funding cutback, and for the first time in history city branches will be shut down. The budget squeeze is also being felt at the county level: the Buffalo and Erie County Public Library reports the impact of a year-end furlough of part-time workers—it lost more than a third of its staff temporarily. And some communities are unwilling to put up the money for a needed library facility: Brighton, New York was one such. Disaster bulletins to come to LJ include:

• NYPL's latest disaster bulletin: A new city budget cutback of $1 million, says New York Public Library, will force the boarding up of eight neighborhood branch libraries (three in Manhattan, three in the Bronx, two in Staten Island), a further 15 percent reduction in branch service hours, plus the termination of 100 library positions. Says NYPL, this is the first time in city history that budget slashing has resulted in branch closings, but if projected budget cuts go through, 33 more branches will be shut down by July 1977; others will be reduced to two-day schedules; and central and support services will be cut back further. NYPL branches also lost out on 56 CETA (Comprehensive Training and Employment Act) people when the city ordered their termination; the library is reportedly exploring the use of more volunteers.

• Yonkers demands five-day service: Having rejected as "totally unacceptable" a proposed budget cut of $525,000, Yonkers, New York trustees have urged the community's Emergency Control Board to "reorder its priorities" and come up with enough funding to prevent sharp reductions in service and the layoff of 40 library staffers. The Control Board has already approved a plan whereby two branches would be open only 48 hours a week and the remaining three would go on a meagre 16-hour schedule. The library board wants all facilities open at least five days a week, though it has agreed to combine bookmobile and minimobile service under either plan. The 131-member Yonkers Public Library Staff Association backed the board in its protest.

• Year-end trauma in Erie County: When the financially cramped county ordered the December 6-January 1 furlough of county agency part-time workers, New York's Buffalo & Erie County Public Library was faced with the loss of more than a third of its staff: 241 people in all, including library pages, clerical staff, and security guards. The staff shortage forced the elimination of Sunday hours and the shutdown of Central during the evening hours; night service was restored on December 22, when full-time staffers (who were briefed on everything from checkout procedures to shelving) were brought in from the branches and other departments. The reassignment of staff brought children's programming to a standstill at many branches. Meanwhile, the loss of all 74 pages was being felt: stack service at Central had to be discontinued; everyone on deck pitched in on reshelving, but huge backlogs of unshelved materials piled up just as the student Christmas rush got started. In efforts to avoid a similar catastrophe in 1976, the library has come up with a plan to cut its salary account by ten percent—mostly by freezing jobs as they become vacant and transferring staff in efforts to keep vital services going.

• New Yorkers nix new facility: The town of Brighton, New York (Monroe County Library System) voted down a $1.5 million bond issue for a new library and community meeting center that was to have replaced crowded old facilities in the basement of a municipal building. Opponents in this wealthy community had even taken out paid newspaper ads in efforts to block the project.

• Budget slashing in Ontario: A $10.8 million library facility was one of many projects "deferred" when North York controllers slashed the budget by $23 million. But North York's finance board still wants to borrow $13.7 million for sidewalks, sewers, swimming pools, and tennis courts.

Community Education Act: $$ opportunity

Sarah Case of ALA's Washington Office urges libraries to try for Community Education Program (P.L. 93-380) funding. Local education agencies, state departments of education, and institutions of higher education are the top candidates for this kind of aid, she said, but some libraries that are cooperating with colleges in offering independent study opportunities might also qualify. The deadline for 1976 was February 11; an appropriation of $3,553,000 got okayed.

Case urges libraries to try to get in on the program next time around, checking criteria (appearing in the December 12 Federal Register, p. 57926-45) to "tailor applications"; local and state education agencies review the grant applications. (The December 22 Federal Register, p. 59233, specifies application procedures.) She cautioned libraries against querying the Office of Education on their eligibility for CEP, saying that OE could turn down a library which actually qualified under the current guidelines.

Minneapolis wins $$; big votes for libraries

The Minneapolis Public Library and Information Center is one library that recently won a restoration of funding that enabled it to restore service. A few communities are still voting for libraries despite concern about the slumping economy.

• Minneapolis restores Saturday service: Thanks to an increase in state funds to the city, the Minneapolis Public Library and Information Center got enough 1976 funding to restore regular Saturday hours of service. Minneapolis had terminated Saturday service at 12 locations in efforts to offset a $300,000 deficit last year.

• Vicksburg votes for new building: More than 64 percent of the voters in the Mississippi community of Vicksburg have backed a $1.3 million bond issue for a new library to replace its present 59-year-old facility.

• Louisiana tax tallies: The Louisiana State Library reports that Ouachita Parish voters recently approved a $1.6 million bond issue for a new branch in West Monroe and the enlargement of Monroe's main library. They also okayed an increase in maintenance tax—up from 1½ to 3 mills. In Jackson Parish, the vote was 3,017 to 1,226 in favor of renewing the 4 mill tax for library maintenance. But one setback was reported: renewal of a 4 mill tax for Rapides Parish Library maintenance support failed by a close vote. The 34-year-old library, which has won support at the polls in the past, plans to try again before its current tax expires.

• Bequest for children's programming: The Minneapolis Public Library and Information Center has received a bequest from children's author and former staffer Emma L. Brock: royalties from books she wrote for Knopf will fuel children's programming at Minneapolis. The library's Emma Brock Memorial fund will pay for visiting authors and illustrators for children's programs; new staff for storytelling sessions, workshops, and institutes; and important books which were bypassed before because of their high cost.

• Shrinking construction bids: From Brookings, North Dakota comes one

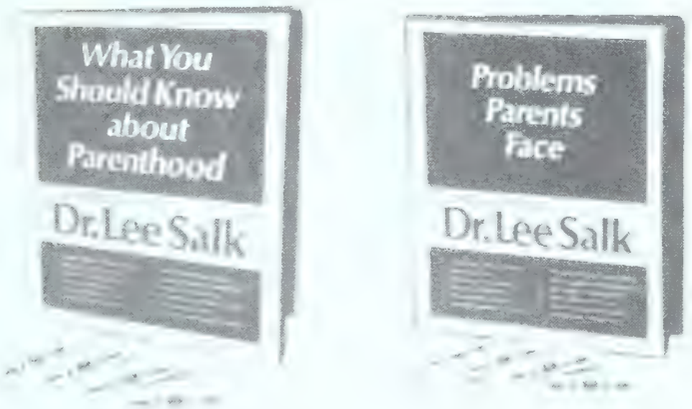
SOUND ADVICE
ABOUT CHILD DEVELOPMENT AND FAMILY RELATIONS



In these audio cassette programs, Dr. Lee Salk, Director of Pediatric Psychology & Clinical Professor at the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical College, presents in relaxed conversational style, discussions of child-rearing's most perplexing problems. His clear practical advice helps students, prospective parents, parents & others who are involved with children, lay the groundwork for healthy & happy relationships.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT PARENTHOOD includes the following topics:

The Responsibilities of Parenthood ■ Some Things to Know about Selecting an Obstetrician ■ Changing Emotions During Pregnancy and After Birth ■ What "Natural Childbirth" Means ■ What a Newborn Baby is Like ■ Whether to Breast Feed or Bottle Feed ■ The Importance of Being an Involved Father ■ How to Deal with Advice from Other People ■ Sharing Parental Responsibilities between Men and Women ■ Understanding Toilet Training ■ The Spoiled Child ■ Planning and Spacing Your Children ■

PROBLEMS PARENTS FACE includes the following topics:

Organizing a Life of Your Own ■ Preventing Jealousy and Rivalry among Your Children ■ Disciplining and Punishing Your Child ■ Dealing with Your Child's Defiance and Rebellion ■ Developing Your Child's Responsibility and a Sense of "Right and Wrong" ■ Parental Arguments and Telling Your Child about Divorce ■ Answering Your Child's Questions about Death ■ Talking with Your Child about the Facts of Reproduction ■ Discussing the Feelings of Sex with Your Child ■ Handling Your Child's Problems in School ■ Developing Your Child's Individuality and Coping with Pressure from Peers ■ Letting Your Teenager Go ■

Produced by Visual Education Corporation Ω. What You Should Know About Parenthood and Problems Parents Face each come in a vinyl storage binder. Price $57 per binder purchased individually, or $109 complete. Available exclusively from the Baker & Taylor Companies

Please send me ___ copy(ies) of both programs at $109 ea.
___ copy(ies) of WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT PARENTHOOD at $57 ea.
___ copy(ies) of PROBLEMS PARENTS FACE at $57 ea.
Please send for free catalog

Name _____
Title _____
Institution _____
Address _____
City _____
State _____ Zip _____

Mail to: The Baker & Taylor Companies, P.O. Box 230, Momence, Illinois 60954 example of the kind of price shaving predicted as a byproduct of the economic slump: bids for a new public library building were $80,000 below estimates.

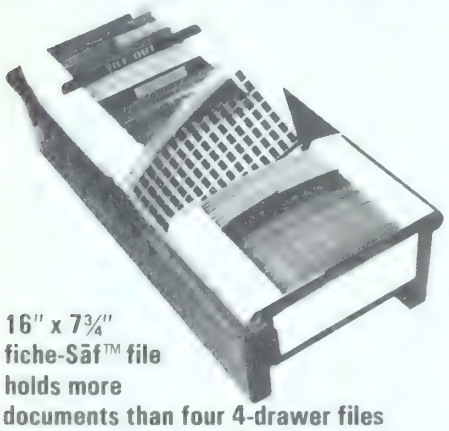
Columbus Public designated as county library

Both city and county councils plus the State Library have approved the redesignation of the Columbus Public Library; it's now officially the Public Library of Columbus and Franklin County, with Donald Sager staying on as director of the new system. In the process, the old board of trustees voted itself out of office.

The change in status, says Sager, will include broader board representation, recognition of the library's actual service area, plus a go-ahead to try to win a tax levy covering the library's whole service area. Both inner city and suburban groups backed the move.

Among the tactics tried in efforts to win tax support: Columbus had threatened to sue the county on the grounds that the present distribution of county taxes did not take into account service provided by the library to the bulk of the minority and disadvantaged population, and was thus "discriminatory."

e-fiche-iency



16" x 7¾" fiche-Sāf™ file holds more documents than four 4-drawer files

LUXOR's compact fiche-Sāf file holds up to 500 microfiche. Since each fiche reproduces up to 98 pages of 8½ x 11 size, that's a total of 49,000 documents. Enough to fill four 4-drawer files.

The complete, self-contained fiche-Sāf file is available with dividers, separators, and envelopes to keep fiche efficiently organized for easy retrieval. Plus optional dust cover for extra protection and easy stacking.

LUXOR's Microform Filing Center includes a variety of modules for large-capacity fiche — and microfilm — storage. Send for FREE brochure.

LUXOR

LUXOR CORPORATION
104 LAKEVIEW AVE • WAUKEGAN, ILL. 60085 (312) 244-1800

PERSONNEL

Calif. librarians unite against nonpro threat

California librarians (in Los Angeles and Orange County) joined together in an organization, called Concerned Librarians Opposing Unprofessional Trends (CLOUT), with the aim of combatting what they see as a byproduct of the infusion of nonpros and volunteers: "the downgrading of the professional librarian." CLOUT charges that "the role of both the paraprofessional and the upper administrative levels of Civil Service has often been to devaluate the role and capabilities of Librarians I, II, and III . . . clerical workers and even unpaid volunteers are taking over many library tasks that require the advanced training of a master's degree, to the detriment of library service and the danger of the degreed librarian."

CLOUT alleges that "these substitutions are being made more than ever . . . because many libraries are in financial trouble, and are acting on the mistaken notion that, by replacing highly trained subject experts with untrained people, they can save money and get the same job done." The group, which describes its members as "middle management librarians," charges that many California libraries are consequently not meeting ALA personnel standards. The contact person is: Hazel Ho, 1862 West Crone, Anaheim, Calif. 92804; (714) 532-0421.

Ohio personnel survey pegs staff, salary patterns

Reporting on the results of a 1974 survey of Ohio public libraries, Assistant to the State Librarian Diana Cohen notes that 5,099 persons staff Ohio public libraries, that 2,329 are identified as "librarians" (by virtue of responsibility or education), but only 1,041 have a graduate degree. A total of 598 "librarians" have their bachelors', and 690 have less than an undergraduate degree.

The 93 libraries participating reported professional salaries ranging from $6000 to $12,000, with an $8,618 average; the Ohio Library Association recommends in its standards a salary of $9,660. But salaries have gone up slightly; a 1973 survey pegged the average salary at $8,377, and projections based on this data pinpoint 1975 salaries at a $9,239 average.

As for job openings statewide, there were only 27 positions open for graduate librarians.

Women Library Workers plot strategies

Women Library Workers, a national network of professional and nonprofessional librarians who organized at ALA-San Francisco to "change the existing distribution of power in libraries where women are the workers and men are making the decisions," reports target areas for action. Says WLW, a national survey has pointed up the need for local chapters (so far, nine have been established, with 16 more possibles) to combat discrimination and peg issues, as well as a "national network providing information and support through a newsletter, a directory of member's resources, workshops, and other publications."

WLW plans to recruit for full voting membership both professional and nonprofessional women involved in library or information services; nonvoting membership will be offered to WLW supporters, including library users, men, and institutions. Dues will range from $3 (the minimum for the newsletter) to a $10 average. Union affiliation is under discussion.

WLW expects to meet again in Chicago this July during the ALA Centennial Conference. For information, contact Carole Leiter, WLA Coordinator, 55 29th St., San Francisco, Calif. 94131; phone: (415) 552-2922.

Professional women's group starts info network

"A loosely formed network of Women's Information Services" held its first meeting recently at the Center for Research on Women in Higher Education and the Professions, Wellesley College, reports Elizabeth Eddison of the library consultant firm of Warner Eddison Associates. The purpose of the meeting was to "explore the information resources available to women and to establish a process which could discover gaps in those services and resources. It was felt very strongly that duplication should be minimized and that therefore special services and collections should be made known widely." The following target groups were identified as in need of better information services: high school students and low-income women.

Women's Information Services members agreed to keep detailed records on the kind of queries received and how these were answered, and to continue cooperation among participants. Another meeting is planned for September 1976.

To report a need in the area of women's information, contact: Jean Felmley, Business & Professional Women's Foundation Library, 2012 Massachusetts Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

N.J. cataloger wins round in fight for reappointment

A faculty review board at Montclair State College has ruled in favor of a Sprague Library cataloger, who charged that the sudden reversal of a decision to rehire her for the coming academic year was a violation of contract and constituted unfair treatment. Cataloger Rosanne LaPaglia also has going a grievance complaint, but MSC President David Dickson has not yet rescinded his decision not to recommend her for reappointment—one based on the recommendations of Library Director Blanche Haller and LaPaglia's immediate supervisor, Ruth Wang.

According to a report in the Montclarion, Haller had recommended LaPaglia's reappointment "with reservations" on October 27, but she reversed her decision on November 26. LaPaglia asserted that insubordination charges (lodged against her by Wang) were inserted into her personnel file while she was attending the Boston meet of the American Society for Information Science. LaPaglia provided the faculty review board with evidence supporting her charge that she was given "inadequate consideration." Included were memos indicating that the Haller administration frowned upon the amount of time requested for conference attendance (LaPaglia used vacation time to get to some meets) and for continuing education. A flap between LaPaglia and her supervisor Wang developed when the former started a law cataloging project without first getting Wang's okay. Wang demanded that the project be halted, and later charged that the project was continued in violation of her orders. Wang's charges were refuted by Law Department Head Vincent Jennings.

LJ called Haller for her interpretation of the situation, but she refused to comment, claiming it would violate personnel policies.

Detroit volunteers in action; Missouri's "Women's Place"

Volunteers are helping financially pressed libraries (the Detroit Public Library is one such) keep vital services going; they're also staffing special centers, such as Columbia, Missouri's new bookstore-library, "The Women's Place."

The Detroit Public Library reports that volunteers are an essential staff resource—active at Main, the branches, and deposit collections throughout the city. Over 60 of them provide administrative coordination of other volunteers, professional service (reader-advisory), and clerical work. They also clip newspapers, teach chess, push bookcarts, and act as hostesses at library functions. Detroit's Historical Collection and Service to Shut-Ins and Retirees are the two departments depending most heavily on volunteer help: 13 volunteers work in the Burton collection; another 20 circulate 700-odd books monthly to area hospitals and nursing homes. Volunteers, reports DPL's newsletter, include retirees and women for the most part, but there are males, too, and even persons of high school and elementary school age.

In Columbia, Missouri, a group of volunteers has set up "the Women's Place"—a combination bookstore, library, and community information center. TWP either sells or loans out feminist and nonsexist children's books; the lending library's collection was donated by the Columbia Women's Political Caucus. The Center also plans to set up a "Sisterhood Support System," a telephone information and referral service for women.

Loses in directorships for women pegged

In the 1960s, many librarians started replacing female directors with males in efforts to enhance the image of the library as an institution, and this trend is growing. A survey of four Midwestern states, reported by the Focus on Indiana Libraries newsletter, notes that male directors are in the majority in the largest cities in Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, and Ohio. Meanwhile, the number of women in leadership positions is steadily decreasing.

The specifics: between 1950 and 1975, the number of female directors has declined by a whopping 47 percent in Ohio, 32 percent in Indiana, 19 percent in Michigan, and 12 percent in Kentucky—an overall loss of 27 percent.

Among the new items in Highsmith's 75-76 Library/AV catalog . . .

- children's library furniture
- steel bookends with colorful, lasting, epoxy or vinyl finish
- efficient roll laminators
- handy 4-way rubber bands
- rugged plastic media files
- steel book trucks with 2 easy-steer rigid casters
- one paperback rack with 3 pocket sizes
- adhere-anywhere fabric labels
- time-saving tape strips
- charming angel posters
- library skills test
- complete reading club kits
- foam-padded mailers
- hanging-bag storage system
- truck for oversize books
- card catalog-style microfiche sectionals
- complete audio adapter set
- book album for boxed cassette
- over 100 more new items

In addition to the many new and exclusive items, you'll find a larger-than-ever selection of familiar equipment, furniture and supplies to fill all your traditional needs. If you don't have a copy of our 1975-76 catalog, just let us know and we'll send you one free!

The Highsmith Co., Inc.
P.O. Box 25J
Fort Atkinson, Wis. 53538

Shared staffing projects launched in Illinois

Two state-funded experiments in providing professional staff to be shared among public libraries unable to afford full time staff at this level are reported underway in Illinois.

The Illinois State Library publication Illinois Nodes reports a grant of $20,250 to the public libraries in Batavia, Geneva, and St. Charles, and one of $18,344 to Poplar Creek and Roselle Library Districts. Professionals hired with the funds will be coordinated by the system to which the individual libraries belong.

The Batavia/Geneva/St. Charles project will provide professional service to 1,645 homebound and handicapped persons. The Poplar Creek Roselle project will provide a reference specialist to coordinate the reference staff, resources, and programs of the participating libraries.

Further information on the Illinois Shared Staffing projects is available from Mary Quint, Manpower Utilization Consultant, Library Development Group, 701 South 2nd St., Springfield, Ill. 62704.

COOPERATION

$$ cuts hit N.Y. library: system pullout planned

Sharp reductions in city revenue have forced the Utica Public Library (N.Y.) to cut hours of service, reduce book buying, and put its bookmobiles in cold storage. Utica's budget went down from $380,670 in 1974 to $275,000 this year; it expects no more than $150,000 next year. The library, reports Board President Richard Kehoe, won't have enough revenue to qualify as a "co-central library" in the three-county Mid-York system (Oneida, Herkimer, and Madison), and Utica will consequently lose such system benefits as state aid for book buying and government documents, access to the collections of other system members, and free book-ordering and processing services.

The loss of these system benefits prompted Utica's board to vote to pull out of the system; it's now trying to get the 18 other libraries in the county to withdraw from Mid-York and form a single Oneida County service. Such a county system, it is hoped, could qualify for state aid that presently goes to Mid-York. The 19 Oneida libraries generated about $375,000 in state aid in 1974.

When it withdrew from the system, Utica tried to get a $50,000 subsidy from the town of New Hartford for service to its residents. City fathers balked, and Utica then imposed membership fees of $25 per person and $40 per family. But the Office of Legal Counsel of the State Education Department then issued a legal opinion stating that the village was a separate municipality with a population too small to have the fees imposed on it.

Vancouver public libraries form new federation

In British Columbia, seven public library systems have formed the Greater Vancouver Library Federation (a successor to the Greater Vancouver Library Council) with the overall aim of "developing a library network and promoting greater cooperation among members." One byproduct of the merger: the 730,000 residents in the municipalities of Burnaby, New Westminster, North Vancouver City, North Vancouver, and West Vancouver will have equal access to books and services throughout the area.

As for funding, the federation will make system members eligible for more provincial money to improve book collections and add new services. Other federation funds will be used to establish a network of area resource libraries, the first to be located at the Burnaby Public Library. The Vancouver Public Library will house the Federation's central resource collection.

Each of the seven libraries has in turn promised to maintain its own collections and services at present levels, with provisions for future improvement to meet standards set by the Federation. The system will continue to be municipally funded; each library (via its board of trustees) will still have control over its own expenditure, operations, and policies.

The federation will train professional librarians and clerical staff in services provided by the organization. Plans for the establishment of a telecommunication network are now under study.

The Federation Coordinator is Joy Scudamore, formerly Deputy Chief Librarian at Burnaby. Federation HQs: 3622 E. 1st Ave., Vancouver, B.C. V5M 1C3.

New Western biblio network to serve British Columbia too

The proposed Western Bibliographic Network, which will serve 17 western states and British Columbia, has secured start-up grant funding and has hired staff to design a bibliographic network and do the associated funding studies. WBN is a project of WICHE, the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education.

Headed by Eleanor A. Montague, former BALLOTS assistant manager, WBN will "link to and cooperate with other emerging regional and national library and information networks. . . . goals will be to extend computer-supported services to libraries throughout the region and to increase equitable access to all of the West's library holdings for better service to individual patrons."

WBN is part of WICHE's Program on Continuing Education and Library Resources, which is directed by Maryann Duggan.

Monroe County (N.Y.) system to operate county info system

The Monroe County Library System's Human Services Directory, reports Director Harold Hacker, has been chosen to serve as the base for a projected countywide I&R system which will be automated and programmed for quick access on county data processing facilities.

The Monroe County Library System has been recommended as the sole agency to operate and update the directory service and will participate in the substantial federal grant received for the project, reports Hacker, who names MCLS staffers Sue Bovay, Ann Abbott, and John Pearsall as staffers to be credited.

Illinois co-op may run database center

The Illinois Regional Library Council (Beth Hamilton, executive director) is considering a task force recommendation for the establishment and operation by IRLC of a data base center which would provide its members, (including school, public, academic, and special libraries) with access to some 35 automated database services.

The current proposal calls for a two-year pilot operation, with free service to members, to be followed by a fee-based service planned to be self-sustaining. The project, which could involve hundreds of libraries and acquaint thousands of users with the possibilities of services such as the Lockheed DIALOG system, SDC's Search Service, and The New York Times Information Bank, would cost an estimated $250,000.

Miss. co-op resource center serves jr. college and university

Students at both the Itawamba Junior College and those at the Tupelo Campus branch of the University of Mississippi will be served by a shared Learning Resources Center.

The new facility was built by a local nonprofit foundation named CREATE and will be directed by Margaret Mason. The address: Learning Resources Center, Drawer 1588, Tupelo, Miss. 38801.

Illinois system to try OCLC

The Illinois Valley Library System (Peoria) is considering plugging into the OCLC (Ohio College Library Center) data base—to search out possible locations for interloan requests which can't be filled by the system membership. The board of the system gave its approval to the proposal contingent upon a successful trial run on the OCLC data base in which 100 interloan requests not found at IVLS would be searched for and found successfully at an OCLC library one third of the time. Two earlier trial runs of 50 search requests each yielded an 80 and 84 percent recovery rate, says IVLS.

Massachusetts mini-coop

Five relatively small libraries in the Massachusetts communities of Brockton, Randolph, Avon, Stoughton, and Holbrook have formed the BRASH Library Cooperative. For starters, they assembled—with the aid of business classes at Brockton High—a union list of periodicals, and will also do a union list of reference holdings in the same way. They do interloan, share films, plan joint programming, and hope to get into staff development.

Library for all seasons

The idea of shared, multipurpose facilities is being taken pretty close to the limit in the city of Mesa, Arizona, where the city is contemplating the setting up of neighborhood centers which would combine police and fire stations, libraries, and parks. One proposal under consideration has the police and firefighting force alarmed; it calls for the cross-training of both, making possible staff reductions and big savings.

CARD WRECKERS CAN'T BREAK TUF GUYDS . . . THEY'RE THE GOOD GUIDES!

PRACTICALLY INDESTRUCTIBLE TUF GUYDS are made of 4-mil polyester. Save space too — get hundreds more cards into your catalog drawers than with pressboard guides.

SEE PAGE 50 in your Josten's '75-6 catalog. If you can't find yours, write or call Customer Service for another copy.

Josten's
LIBRARY SERVICES DIVISION
1301 CLIFF RD., BURNSVILLE MN 55337
800-328-2980 TOLL FREE

G. E. & Sylvania

PROJECTOR LAMPS

Please don't give us lamp orders at list price. We'd rather give you

32% TO 42% OFF

Compare Sitler's Prices.
Satisfaction Guaranteed!

LAMP NO.	LIST PRICE	6-23 (32% OFF)	24-UP (42% OFF)
CWA	$11.40	$7.75	$6.61
DCF	9.60	6.53	5.57
DEK	8.30	5.64	4.81
DYS	12.25	8.33	7.11
ELH	13.70	9.32	7.95
EMM/EKS	13.55	9.21	7.86
FCS	7.85	5.34	4.55

Assortable for best price. Many other numbers in stock. Transportation paid on $100.00 or more net orders. Minimum order $25.00 net. You may assort for best price. ORDER TODAY, OR WRITE FOR OUR COMPLETE PRICE SHEET!

Sitler's SUPPLIES, INC.
P.O. Box 10-X
Washington, Iowa 52353

Please send.
(Quantity) (Lamp No.) (Net Due)
$
$
$
NAME
ADDRESS
CITY
STATE ZIP

Radio history, phonics prep, independent study

Libraries are trying to reach young and old alike with such programming as a display of radio memorabilia, reading readiness sessions for preschoolers, a public access computer, and varied independent study courses.

•Radio history: Baltimore County's Towson Area Branch has on display a collection of memorabilia—owned by members of the Maryland Golden Radio Buffs—from the early days of radio and recording. Included in the display are: a 1928 model Radiola 60 radio with ear phones and speaker; a 1940 spring-powered phonograph, with a collection of 78 rpm records; plus books, advertisements, and pictures of radio personalities.

•Phonics prep for preschoolers: The New Mexico State Library reports that some 20 preschoolers have been showing up at the Truth or Consequences Public Library for reading readiness sessions (scheduled before the regular story hour)—run by a retired teacher and a high school student, who earns a school credit for helping out. Parents are showing their appreciation by picking up the tab for reading materials.

•"Matchless" annual reporting: California's San Mateo County Library has come up with a "Matchless 1974-75 Annual Report" that's an attention grabber. It looks like a big matchbook, and opens up to section headings—set up to look like matches—on affiliations, summary of use, budget, resources, and income. By flipping the section cards, a patron can get to concisely presented information on such things as San Mateo's membership in the four-county Cooperative Information Network of 250 libraries of all types; the total population served (220,800), registered borrowers (115,816), and circulation (1,378,388); the library's total budget ($3,142,604); its resources—a book collection of 557,005, with 47,194 books added and 14,796 withdrawn; and its income from taxes, the general fund, and reserves.

•LC patrons use computers to search science collections: The Library of Congress reports on the success of an experiment (started last April), whereby patrons got their first opportunity to search two automated data bases via a video display terminal (CRT) set up in the Science Reading Room. Patrons got tutorial assistance (via learning aids, the computer itself, or a reference librarian) to make SCORPIO (Subject-Content-Oriented Retriever for Processing Information Online) search requests. They were able to search the National Referral Center Master file of engineering, biological, and social science organizations and the Selected Science and Technology file, an automated card catalog containing science entries selected from the MARC data base. LC was able to keep track of the success of patrons by means of the computer itself, which records search statistics.

•"Dragnet" library PR spot: The Wisconsin Division for Library Services and a Madison firm, Coordinated Library Information Program, Inc., have produced a 30-second TV spot that's a takeoff on the old "Dragnet" TV series. Two officers question a character loaded down with records, books, tapes, and a framed picture, but he exonerates himself by flashing his library card and reporting that this booty is available free at the library. The PR spot, which was produced for distribution in Wisconsin, can be purchased for out-of-state use. To get a copy of the script and a rough story board, contact: Coordinated Library Information Program, Inc., Box 1437, Madison, Wis. 53701.

•U.S. debut of Polish poet: Prize-winning Polish poet Tadeusz Różewicz made his U.S. debut recently, giving a reading of his poetry at New York Public Library's Donnell Center. The long-running Donnell poetry series is sponsored by the Academy of American Poets.

•Boston's 1976 "Learning Library" program: The Boston Public Library, which was the first institution to get a hefty National Endowment for the Humanities grant to serve as the first NEH "Learning Library"—offering the public a three-year series of top-notch education programs—has announced its 1976 course offerings. Andrew Buni of Boston College will teach a sequence on "The Emerging Immigrants of Boston"; Gerald Bernstein of Brandeis will repeat the sequence on "From Grass to Glass: a History of Boston's Architecture"; Robert Gross of Worcester Polytechnic will take up "The American Revolution and the Common Man"; and William Davis of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology will lecture on "Law, Justice, and Equality: Case Studies from the Boston Experience."

•N.Y. "Learn Your Way" Centers: The Queens Borough Public Library has set up "Learn Your Way" centers at Central and at three branches (Broadway, Far Rockaway, and Lefrak City) where residents can get assistance on independent study projects. Librarians, who have been trained to serve as learning advisors, are on deck to provide advice on such things as external degree programs, high school equivalency diplomas, career changes, and self-improvement programs. They also supply special materials and refer patrons to community and library resources.

The least expensive and most up-to-date source of cataloging:
MARCFICHE
$3" per week includes five cumulative indexes.
Free trial use and/or samples available from:
MARC APPLIED RESEARCH COMPANY
Post Office Box 40035, Washington, D.C. 20016
A Division of The Library Corporation

Coin-operated computer tried by N.Y. library

New York's White Plains Public Library has put into service a coin-operated public access computer—possibly a first for libraries. It's a Wang 2200B minicomputer that uses BASIC programming language. For $3.50 an hour, patrons can play computer football, tic-tac-toe, or bowling; balance their checkbooks; or try more serious applications—ranging from building basic math skills (for elementary school youngsters) to solving complex physics problems (for graduate students). White Plains' Reference Desk also has on stock digital magnetic tape cassettes for engineers plus educational demonstration programs for high schoolers. The library has expanded its adult Education Program to include courses in BASIC language computer programming—designed to help patrons design their own programs.

White Plains is stirring up interest in its computer by running such events as a bowling tournament. In the offing are a stock market contest and a football league.

Bicentennial library eyed; history recorded; jigsaws

The latest projects hatched in celebration of the Bicentennial include: a drive to create a permanent library at Mississippi's Governor's Mansion; the restoration of historical documents at Westborough, Massachusetts; and the preparation of a multimedia Bicentennial package by the Watertown Public Library, Massachusetts. Among the latest reports on Bicentennial programming to come to LJ:

•Library for Mississippi Governor's Mansion: Acting on the suggestion of First Lady Carroll Waller, the Mississippi Library Commission has taken up as a Bicentennial project the creation of a permanent library of Mississippi authors at the Governor's Mansion. A fund-raising drive is underway: contributions large enough to buy a volume or more will be acknowledged through a book plate; all donors will be listed in a Friends of the Mansion Library volume. Works by contemporary authors will be bought first so that they can be autographed. The Commission also wants works dating back at least to the 1840s (when the Mansion was built); donations of old works by state writers are asked. The Mansion library will be maintained by the curator from the Archives and by representatives of the Library Commission. Tax deductible contributions should be made payable to "Books for the Mansion" and mailed to the Mississippi Library Commission, P.O. Box 3260, Jackson, Miss. 39207.

•Preserving history: The Westborough Public Library (Massachusetts) reports the completion of an unusual historical project: the restoration and conservation of over 1000 valuable handwritten town documents, dating as far back as 1702. Librarian Dorothy Cowern initiated the project; staffer Jacqueline Tidman (who got specialized training at the New England Document Conservation Center, North Andover) did the restoration work. Helping in the project was a University of Maine history major, who spent the summer on a work study grant.

•Michigan descendants honored: As part of its Bicentennial observance, the Michigan State Library and Michigan Genealogical Council are offering Michigan Centennial Family Certificates to residents able to prove (via an official record—anything from tombstone inscriptions to school and church records) that they are descendants of people who settled in Michigan before 1876. Governor William G. Milliken got the first certificate. Both residents and nonresidents of Michigan can apply for a certificate by contacting the Michigan State Library, Michigan Unit, 735 E. Michigan Ave., Lansing, Mich. 48913. A charge of $2 covers printing and postal costs.

•Watertown gets Bicentennial $$: An $11,900 matching grant from the Massachusetts Bicentennial Commission will fuel the Watertown Free Public Library's Bicentennial programming, including preparation of multimedia information packets focusing on the town's contribution to American history since its founding in 1630 as the first inland settlement. Work on Bicentennial projects began last year when the library got Comprehensive Training and Employment Act (CETA) funding to hire a graphic artist, a researcher, and a media specialist. Under the supervision of Community Services Librarian Karen Day, the CETA crew has thus far completed such projects as: a slide-tape on Watertown's historical sites; a tour brochure (also translated into Braille for students of the Perkins Institute for the Blind), exhibits, bus tours, lectures, plus historical articles for local newspapers. A second grant—$2000 from the Watertown Historical Society—will pay for a slide show and photographic essay on Watertown history.

•Bicentennial jigsaw puzzle: Baltimore's Enoch Pratt Free Library is trying to get to both history and jigsaw puzzle buffs with a 551-piece puzzle version of its popular "Historical and Literary Map of the Old Line State of Maryland." The five-color map from which the puzzle was made was designed and drawn by the late Edwin Tunis, a Baltimore author-illustrator. The boxed puzzles cost $3.50 each and can be ordered from Enoch Pratt's Publications Office, 400 Cathedral St., Baltimore, Md. 21201.

SFPL's "Times" $$ venture

The San Francisco Public Library, reports Director Kevin Starr, is trying to raise extra revenue by selling at its Presidio Branch advance copies of the New York Times Book Review: for 25¢ patrons can pick up on Friday next Sunday's edition of the Review. Responding to a query, Warren Abrams of the NYT subscription office reported that bulk shipments (20 is the minimum) of the Book Review have been going to bookstores for two years at 7½ cents a copy, but that the San Francisco venture is a first for the library community. SFPL is paying 10¢ per copy (the bookstore rate is set to go up soon, too), and after some problems have been worked out—like possible competition between the Independent Book Review and the regular Sunday NYT sales as well as library encroachment on bookstore sales—the offer may be extended to all libraries. (Single subscriptions to the Independent Book Review now go for $13 annually).

Inmate volunteers; Ohio mailbooks; large-print books

Besides providing service to the homebound, libraries are doing such things as meeting with publishers in efforts to get them to publish more large-print books; trying out mailbook service in previously unserved areas; and getting inmates to help fix talking book machines for the handicapped.

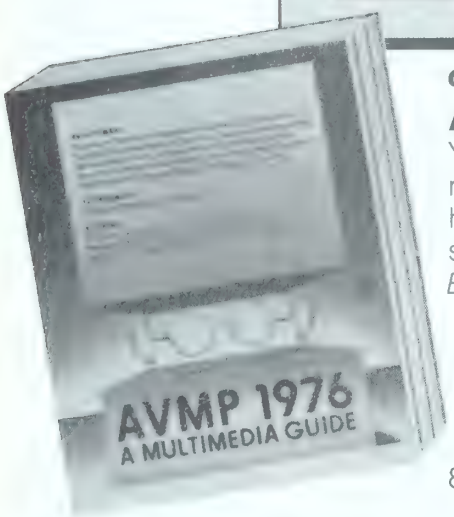
•Vermont inmates repair talking book machines: When volunteer Telephone Pioneers in Vermont were faced with a backlog of unrepaired talking book machines because of illness or vacation time, Dorothy Allen of the Department of Libraries asked residents of the Chittenden Community Correctional Center (South Burlington) to help get the machines ready for distribution to the state's blind and handicapped. With the blessing of the jailers, inmates—working under the direction of one resident—repaired some 50 machines. The Telephone Pioneers will still handle most repairs, but Chittenden Center residents will serve as their backup when necessary.

•Large-print books: Readers, government agency people, librarians, and publishers came to a recent conference on large-print books—one sponsored by Rhode Island's Division of Special Library Services and the Pawtucket Public Library's Senior Awareness Program. Participants heard a college student and two elderly readers complain that not enough books are available in the large-print format, and agreed that there's a real need for both recreational and educational materials. But such publishers as Ulverscroft, G. K. Hall, and Magna Print reported that there isn't a big demand for large-print books—something that's contributing to the high costs of such materials. Publishers, it was learned, will probably hold back on issuing paperback editions, despite repeated requests from libraries.

•Braillegrams: Of interest to libraries serving the handicapped are two mail-delivery services offered by Western Union: Braillegrams (messages in Braille) and large-print messages (set in 14 point type). These special messages are less than half the price of ordinary telegrams.

•Mailbooks moving in Ohio: Clyde Scoles of the Zanesville Public Library (Ohio) reports that the first try at providing countywide mailbook service was a success: in the first three weeks alone, some 4500 books were circulated to 10,000 rural patrons, who picked their selections from an 800-title annotated catalog. The program, he says, will be expanded to include the circulation of large-print books and cassettes.

A BOWKER LIBRARY OF AUDIOVISUAL WISDOM



Coming in February–with a brand-new look!

Audiovisual Market Place 1976

You won't recognize the new AVMP. It's totally revised, enlarged, redesigned, restructured, and still the best place to look for current facts on thousands of hardware and software producers/distributors, review sources, associations, services, educational radio and TV stations, calendar of events, etc.

But now you get more information for less money yearly instead of biennially!

- Coverage more geared to your professional needs.
- New sections of production services like sound recording houses and stock shot libraries.
- New information on AV reference materials like AV periodical ad rates.
- And much more.

8½" x 11". LC 69-18201. ISBN 0-8352-0838-9. $19.95.

The Film User's Handbook

A blueprint for every librarian, educator, community organizer who wants to build a successful film service. How to choose and run equipment. When to purchase films and when to rent. How to classify short films. How film affects behavior. How to avoid film damage in projection. And much more. Several existing film programs are described and analyzed. October, 1975. By George Rehrauer. 6" x 9". 300 pages. LC 75-15884. ISBN 0-8352-0659-9. $14.95. CIP.

International Index to Multi-Media Information 1970-1972

An enriched three-year cumulation of the quarterly, International Index to Non-Print Media Information, indexing and excerpting some 20,000 reviews and citations for all kinds of AV items. Coverage spans 80 major publications. 1975. By Wesley A. Doak and William J. Speed. 8½" x 11". 367 pages. LC 75-960. ISBN 0-8352-0749-8. $30.00.

International Index to Film Periodicals

Indexes by film title, author and subject—and annotates every article, review, interview, etc. that appeared in 60 of the world's finest film periodicals in 1972 and 1973. Published in cooperation with the International Federation of Film Archives. "The standard against which other indexes must be judged" said Take One. 8½" x 11". ISSN 0000-0388. LC 72-1964.

1972 volume. By Karen Jones. 344 pages. ISBN 0-8352-0582-7. $17.95.

1973 volume. By Michael Moulds. 395 pages. ISBN 0-8352-0742-0. $28.50.

Retrospective Index to Film Periodicals 1930-1971

Indexes and provides full bibliographic data on the entire contents of 14 leading English-language journals devoted to film. Arrangement is by subject and title—with a separate book review section. 1975. By Linda Batty. 8½" x 11". 425 pages. LC 74-34246. ISBN 0-8352-0660-2. $24.50.

Index to Instructional Media Catalogs

Helps teachers, media specialists, librarians keep on top of the massive amount of catalog information they receive. 30,000 entries cover 38 different kinds of media in 149 subject areas, and tell you what materials are available, and who produces them. "Immensely useful" said American Reference Books Annual. 1974. Compiled by Olga Weber. 8½" x 11". 272 pages. ISSN 0093-6189. LC 74-9255. ISBN 0-8352-0661-0. $19.95.

A Reference Guide to Audiovisual Information

Contains annotated lists of over 400 AV reference books and 110 key periodicals; a 155-heading subject index to them; a how-to-do-it manual for building your own question and answer reference file; a glossary of over 300 AV terms, and more. "A five-star rating" said Resources for Teaching and Learning. 1972. By James L. Limbacher. 6" x 9". 197 pages. LC 72-1737. ISBN 0-8352-0546-0. $15.50.

Order on 30-day approval from R.R. Bowker Order Dept., P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106.

Outside Western Hemisphere:
Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England.

All orders plus shipping and handling. Sales tax added where applicable. (Prices subject to change without notice.)

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

News Report 1975

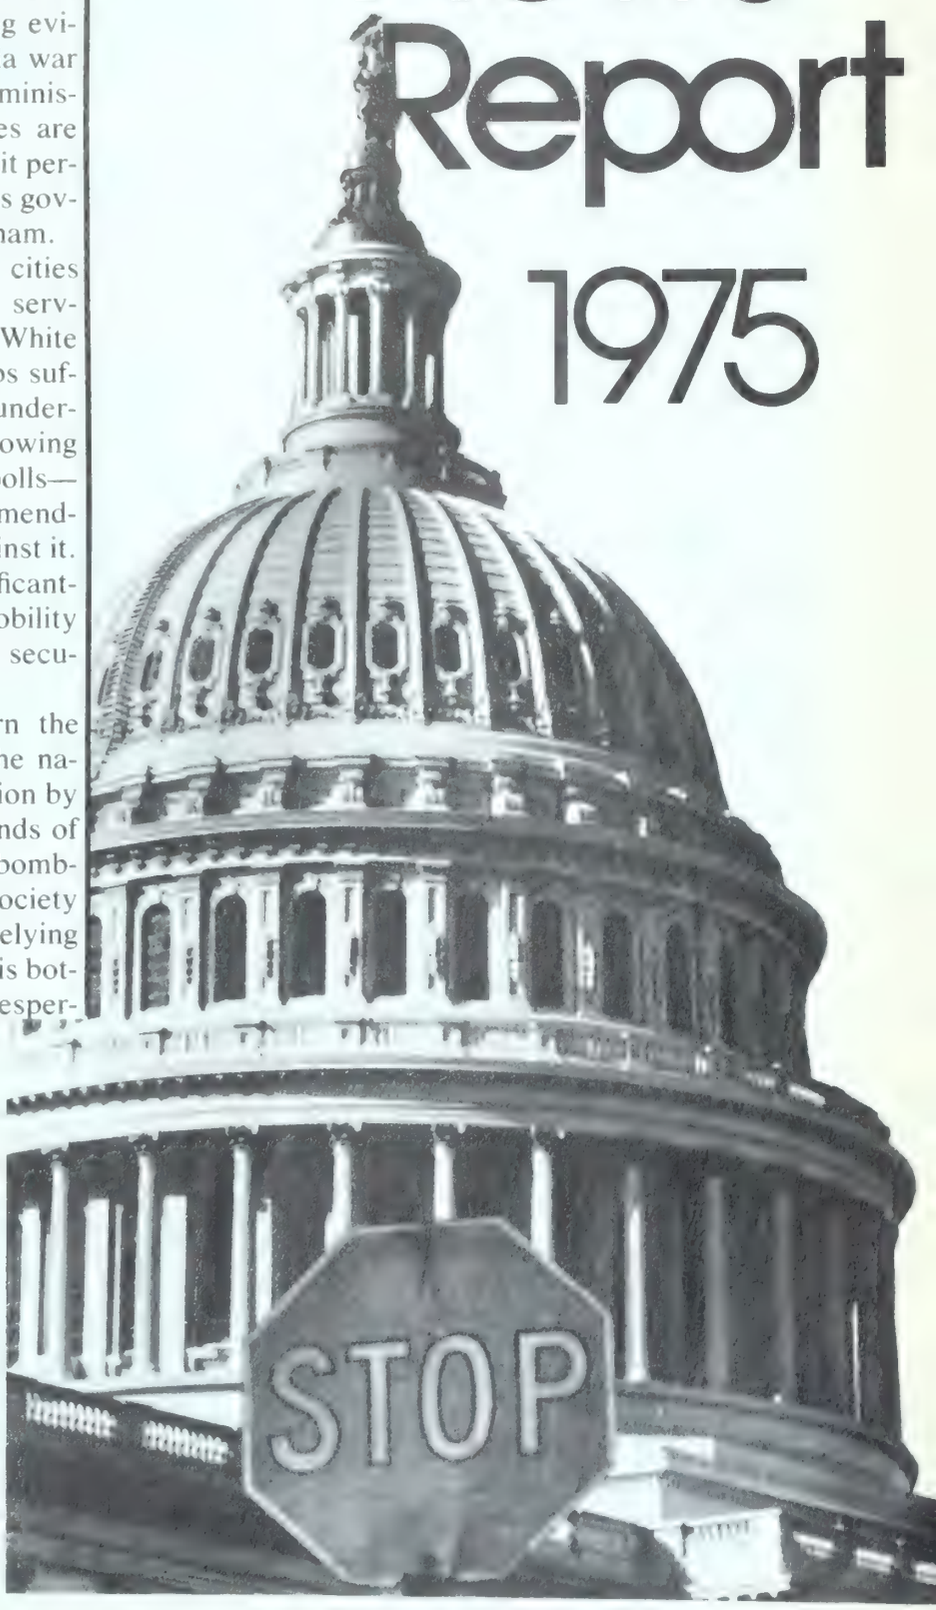
1975 was a year of spiralling inflation, mushrooming unemployment, and an end to the economic joyride that in years past had helped Americans ignore disquieting signs of poverty in the land of plenty, long-standing racial and sex inequities, and other emerging social problems. The American public tried to forget the first clear-cut signals of approaching global famine and the depletion of the world's resources as it girded for the lean years ahead. But fuel and food shortages coupled with zooming prices served as harsh reminders of crises yet to be faced.

Survival dominated the minds of a people who had grown weary of the Watergate scandal. But belief in American institutions was assailed anew as news leaked out of broad-gauge FBI eavesdropping and CIA assassination attempts. At year's end, mounting evidence of covert U.S. involvement in the Angola war caused many to question the integrity of an Administration which claims huge defense expenditures are needed to ward off America's enemies, but finds it perfectly legitimate to interfere with another nation's governance, thus risking the horrors of another Vietnam.

Americans monitored the plight of U.S. cities struggling against default by cutting back vital services, including libraries. They were alarmed by White House insensitivity to urban blight and hardships suffered by the growing pool of unemployed and underemployed. The American public showed its growing sense of helplessness by staying away from the polls—something that helped defeat the Equal Rights Amendment. Ironically, women voted most heavily against it. Support for affirmative action has fallen off significantly since the "Great Society" years; minority mobility is beginning to be seen as a threat to fragile job security.

The Ford Administration's failure to turn the economy around is stirring up resentment in the nation. Some people are working out their frustration by trying to shoot down political leaders. Other kinds of violence such as street crime, arson, and airport bombings are on the upswing—a foreboding sign of a society going out of control. But many Americans are relying more heavily on libraries now that the economy is bottoming out; these vital institutions are fighting desperately for survival.

By Noël Savage



"Despite emerging resistance to funding schemes designed to relieve the federal government of responsibility for library funding—gradually transferring it to the states instead, President Ford is for this kind of high-shrinkage federal aid"

Noël Savage is a staff member of Library Journal

The economic slump dominated 1975: state and local government started cutting back drastically, and a great many libraries were hard hit. A major threat to federal categorical grant aid to libraries was overcome, however, thanks to Congress, which overwhelmingly voted to override President Ford's veto of 1976 education appropriations. Schools got a $10 million boost in forward funding for book buying, but state library agencies (that depend on federal funding to cover their own operating expenses and to fuel special outreach and cooperative projects) are going to have to stretch the library dollar. Library Services and Construction Act and Higher Education Act funding are frozen at the 1974 level, while prices of books, periodicals, government documents, and postal and TWX services keep going up.

To make matters worse, libraries face the prospect of having to make that sparse funding last for 15 instead of 12 months (because of a change in the start of the fiscal cycle) unless Congress comes through with "transitional" appropriations to tide them over. Some libraries are counting on state government to put up funding to get them through the crisis as they did in 1975, when LSCA money was held up indefinitely. Ohio was one state that "advanced" a $1 million "loan" to its libraries pending receipt of 1975 LSCA appropriations; but it's now trying to get that money back.

Libraries did score one major breakthrough in the fight for federal funding last year: ALA put the heat on the Department of Housing and Urban Development, getting it to put both main libraries (in small cities) and neighborhood branches clearly in contention for Housing and Community Development Act funding for urban library construction projects—as had the Model Cities Act that CDA replaces. Libraries also won substantial chunks of Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) funding to replenish their shrinking staffs: Los Angeles hired 200 CETA people; El Paso, Texas got a Spanish community outreach project going with CETA help.

But city government is becoming suspicious about federal funding packages (like CETA and LSCA) that require a substantial funding commitment in return for a less than certain promise of federal revenue. That was the case in San Francisco, where city fathers tried to withdraw the city's share of CETA, but later relented when SFPL supporters fought back. The city wanted to demote CETA professionals making over $10,000 in order to reduce their salaries—a move interpreted as a threat to the professional status of all librarians.

County and municipal government are growing more receptive to Revenue Sharing, which seems to be more reliable than CETA and LSCA. They also favor RS because it gives local government considerable latitude to use money as it sees fit. Not everyone is happy with RS, however: a statewide survey of Wisconsin libraries confirmed widespread suspicions that local government is using RS as replacement funding. A Brookings Institute study pinpointed other RS shortcomings: hard-pressed city governments are losing out in the battle for RS funds, and too much of it is perpetuating "essentially obsolete and limited jurisdictions."

Despite emerging resistance to funding schemes designed to relieve the federal government of responsibility for library funding—gradually transferring it to the states instead, President Ford is for this kind of high-shrinkage federal aid. He wants RS extended through September of 1982, and still backs Nixon's Partnership Act—which would work like RS and also "consolidate" sparsely funded programs with the aim of eventually phasing them out. One such consolidation puts libraries in competition with schools, museums, and recreation centers for ESEA money.

The library community has its own ideas on how libraries should be funded, but there's a lack of consensus on where the money should go. The Urban Libraries Council tried again in 1975 to win support for its proposal to amend LSCA to include the authorization of $400 million in direct aid to public libraries (mostly urban) for operating expenses. ULC's proposal got no support from library systems or from state agencies (many of which are still oriented to predominantly rural areas), although both have since won ULC's support for their priorities. (Urban libraries complain that the old LSCA formula neglects city libraries.) ULC's latest stance: direct aid to both public and academic libraries, state aid at double the level of federal funding, and more support for networks. At year's end, the library leadership, which is still hostile to the direct aid concept, had at least clearly recognized the plight of urban libraries. ALA urged Congress to get more LSCA, Title I funds to city libraries.

The National Commission on Libraries and Information Science finally recanted its earlier—and much disputed—recommendation that states put up most of the funding for its national network. It also revised its position on LSCA, urging increases in this kind of funding, more aid to networks, and a forward funding mechanism to prevent hardships occurring when LSCA is held up. Both NCLIS and ULC agree that too much LSCA is going to state agencies for operating expenses; they want the states to support these agencies, thus freeing LSCA money for library support.

Threat to the state dollar

Many libraries that usually can count on state and local government for operating revenue were in for a rude shock when the economy crunch prompted widespread cutbacks. Among the setbacks on the state level alone: Maryland's Senate gave local government the okay to use state library aid to plug budget deficits; Connecticut slashed aid to law libraries from $388,000 to a mere $80,000; and New York cut its meager prison library service budget by 50 percent.

In New Jersey, where property tax for education is definitely out—something viewed as a forward step towards equalizing education and eventually library service—state aid to libraries was cut back 25 percent to help the state come up with education revenue to make up for income from property tax. Some Oklahoma libraries depend on county property tax revenue for a substantial chunk of their income; the state wants such tax support equalized statewide, but it's eyeing an equalization policy that could slash tax revenue for such forward-looking libraries as the Oklahoma County Libraries system. In 1975, the Wyoming Library Association put on a strong lobbying drive aimed at winning extra funding to equalize county library support, but tight-fisted legislators nixed the proposal.

Other state-level lobbying efforts are paying off. At year's end, Michigan library supporters had moved the legislature closer to resolving a legal problem which could wipe out state per capita library support. Minnesota's state agency beat back an attempt to decimate its budget: massive library support also convinced legislators to turn down a proposed 50 percent state aid cutback and okay a 25 percent boost instead. And Massachusetts libraries—which were to have been cut along with all other state services—came out ahead, though the state agency will have to hold the line.

But some states are still pumping new money into libraries: South Dakota and Texas (which nearly doubled biennium state aid) are among them. Mississippi was another: it pledged $4 million for library construction last year.

Retrenchment on the local level

Losses in tax revenue forced many U.S. cities to start pulling back. New York City libraries got hit with a $6.2 million cutback for starters; city-supported academic libraries also had to take in sail. A drop in tax support and the loss of Revenue Sharing money were blamed for a $1.5 million deficit that the Chicago Public Library was faced with in 1975. Shrinking municipal funding also hurt libraries in such scattered places as Denver, St. Louis, Hartford, and Pawtucket, Rhode Island.

One library fought back: the Columbus Public Library threatened in 1975 to sue the county on the grounds that the current distribution of Ohio's intangibles tax discriminates against urban libraries, and finally won approval to claim new funding as the Public Library of Columbus and Franklin County.

The crippled economy prodded some government officials to pull back their commitment to libraries. New York's proposed $17 million Nassau Research Library was one facility scuttled last year when legislators backed off; it's now operating in makeshift headquarters. County government refused to bail out the Suffolk County Library System (New York), which finally ran out of short-term credit and barely escaped default at year's end after firing most of its staff. New York's Nassau County pulled back a $300,000 subsidy to its county system, arguing that the latter had plenty of money in the bank to pay its bills. And Dutchess County, New York legislators cut library support to offset mounting welfare bills.

A question of priorities

Despite the limping economy, some government units still rate libraries as a top priority. The Los Angeles County Public Library System was exempted from a countywide budget pullback, and its budget was then boosted 20 percent; County Commissioners upped tax support for Utah's Salt Lake County Library to the new state maximum; Minnesota's Hennepin County Library won a $1 million budget hike; and Mississippi's forward-looking Jackson Metropolitan Library System got hefty budget increases plus increased tax support from the counties it serves.

The recession has created a circulation boom—something that's helping some libraries (North Carolina's Cumberland County Public Library and South Carolina's Greenville County Library) win substantial boosts in funding. This increased dependence on libraries may explain why some communities are still voting for libraries. Cleveland nixed a giant public works referendum, but voted for another that will provide CPL with $4.1 million extra a year for operating expenses. Bloomington, Illinois; Dallas; and Austin voters said yes to hefty building referenda. And Birmingham, Alabama voted the funding that will put a school librarian in every elementary school. Successful book bond issues were reported by libraries in Arlington, Virginia; Tucson, Arizona; San Jose, California; and Montgomery County, Maryland. And California's Dixon Unified School District Library won out in an unusual tax override election.

The business of coping

Financially pressed libraries (in Canada and England as well as the U.S.) are cutting hours, curtailing or eliminating services, and cutting back acquisitions. Libraries, especially the prestigious academic institutions that once took pride in their soaring collection growth, are curbing book buying, and developing new strategies for resource sharing. Public libraries are shifting staff around in efforts to keep facilities going, but many a branch opening was postponed last year because of the staff shortage. One indication of how far a library will go in trying to cut costs: the Wapisti Regional Library in Saskatchewan replaced its bookmobile with a canoe.

A few attempts at cutting back have drawn opposition from government and community groups. When Denver offered to shut down its storefront facilities, city fathers said no and a compromise cutback package had to be worked out. Queens, New York had to hold up on its plans to close seven neighborhood branches (it fired more staffers instead) when the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People filed suit against the closings on the grounds that they were "discriminatory."

Some libraries are trying to pull themselves out of a hole with fund-raising gimmicks ranging from efforts at drumming up revenue at county fairs to trying to get people to put libraries in their wills. New York Public got a $1 million Astor gift for operating expenses, and is also trying to match a new National Endowment for the Humanities challenge grant; Chicago's Newberry Library set up a fund-raising office; and one Pennsylvania library put the arm on local banks and got money for Sunday hours and programming.

Traditional resistance to user fees is waning. More university libraries are charging for services (like computer searches) which couldn't be provided otherwise; they're also upping fees for alumni and visiting scholars. Library systems are starting to charge for formerly free services, and more public libraries are initiating or increasing fines for overdues—despite their possible negative impact on poor communities.

The economy crunch proved too severe a crisis in some cases: Abel was one major jobber that was forced to go out of business in 1975; the Hartford Seminary Foundation was one of a growing number of private institutions forced to sell out. But some libraries are taking advantage of the closing of many supermarket chains (like Grant's); they're buying library space at bottom dollar cost.

The NCLIS national plan

After nearly two years of regional road shows, and research studies running to 1000's of pages, the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science issued in 1975 the final version of its blueprint for national library service: Toward a National Program for Library and Information Services. The impossibly written document promises something for everyone—libraries, information scientists, and private industry—while ignoring any potential conflicts between these disparate groups. One example of the kind of jurisdictional politics dominating the document: NCLIS wants the federal government to keep up categorical library aid until it comes up with something better, support various components of the national network, beef up research libraries, and subsidize private industry as well.

"Losses in tax revenue forced many U.S. cities to start pulling back. New York City Libraries got hit with a $6.2 million cutback for starters"

Although offered up as a "consensus" document addressing the concerns of all, there are curious gaps in the NCLIS plan: school libraries, the Office of Education's library bureau, and such ongoing networks as the Regional Medical Library program are barely mentioned. There's also a recurrent bias toward private industry in the document.

At its most basic level, the NCLIS plan sticks with the contention that what the country needs is a complicated network of computers—one that may further alienate the information poor and institutionalize the culture gap. Some segments of the library community aren't happy with the NCLIS plan, which is viewed by some people as primarily a vehicle for the enrichment of the private sector; there's also concern that local libraries (and the communities they serve) will be left out in the cold. Some fear that the national network may create more unemployment—another problem that NCLIS has failed to address. And an issue now being debated is whether NCLIS, which is viewed by some as a group too much dominated by private sector members, should run the national network.

Steps toward a national network

NCLIS warns that "information chaos" is in the offing unless the library and information science communities get cracking now on coordinated network development. Some major steps vital to national networking were logged last year by various other sectors of the library community: progress in standards, the Conversion of Serials project (CONSER) and a similar project in the humanities, National Bibliographical Control, and the revision of Anglo-American Cataloging Rules.

At the same time, however, uncoordinated system development—pegged by NCLIS as the major roadblock to getting a national network going—grew. Networks like OCLC and Stanford's BALLOTS started competing with each other nationally—doing just what NCLIS warns against. Such emerging networks as that of the Western Interstate Commission on Higher Education (WICHE) and the Southwest's AMIGOS bibliographic network are growing rapidly and could also become competitors vying for national and/or regional dominance. Reacting to the network explosion, NCLIS asked for a halt to regional and interstate networking, just as the Midwest Region Library Network (MIDLNET) was announced as still another contender.

Not everyone is sure that the NCLIS macro-network will work: interpreted as one foreboding sign was the predicament of OCLC, which started to overload in 1975. Everyone agrees that existing services vital to the national network (like LC's Machine Readable Computer Tapes and International Standard Bibliographical Description) have their shortcomings. Some people want to stick with problem-riddled services as components of the future network because "they're all we've got"; others feel that unless they're scrapped now or improved dramatically any national network that depends on them will surely come to grief.

State agency role debated

NCLIS expects state library agencies to assume responsibility for getting its national program going. Some key library people argue, however, that state agencies have an uneven record in the development of library service and that this pattern isn't likely to change. Pointed up as examples: the dismal record of Delaware's poorly funded agency (still without a state librarian) and the plight of Hawaii's embattled library agency—once again at odds with legislators who in 1975 tried to demote the Department of Libraries. Even formerly weak state agencies that have assumed a stronger leadership role are finding the going rough. The Massachusetts Bureau of Library Extension had to scuttle a statewide conference on cooperation because of hostilities generated by confusion over who would run the show. Strong state agencies are also vulnerable: New York's state library agency faced a loss of status with a proposed new legislative library—a plan that was vetoed at the last minute.

Breakthroughs at the state level

NCLIS is counting on pioneering state agencies to play a leadership role in national networking—motivating their weak sisters to follow suit. Illinois' state agency last year broke new ground; it made a strong bid for permanent funding for regional multi-type library coordinating councils; put school libraries into the state network; got the John Crerar Library to serve as a backup state resource center; put up money for staff sharing at the system level; and got a statewide library PR experiment going.

California is another state that's committed itself to statewide networking: it's testing two competing networks (OCLC and Stanford's BALLOTS)—both contenders for a statewide role. The state library participated in the formation of the California Library Authority for Systems and Services (CLASS) consortium, which will centralize bibliographic data and set state-level policy on cooperation.

But coordinated statewide system development is difficult to achieve—even in states that have made it a top priority. That was a major conclusion of the Peat, Marwick, Mitchell study, which zeroed in on haphazard system development in California. PMM predicted that interlibrary loan and reference service demands will continue to skyrocket (more so because of the shaky economy) and will probably overload systems which can't handle them adequately now. Other significant shortcomings noted: the State Library is a flop as an interlibrary loan and reference backup, and California reference librarians are much in need of refresher courses—they're botching up ILL and IRL requests too often. California is backing its public library systems as the key nodes in statewide networking instead of the "regional intermediate libraries" that the PMM study had recommended be designated to handle ILL/ILR traffic—one more example of the tendency to stick with something that works, however imperfectly, instead of breaking new trails.

Roadblocks to cooperation

Sparse funding is holding back state-level cooperation to a large extent; it can also foil smaller cooperative efforts. When its budget got slashed, Florida's Broward County Library System lost considerable ground in its battle to win over a number of municipal libraries that are dead set against joining on the grounds that they face "double taxation" plus loss of autonomy.

Now that money is tight, some library systems face the prospect of being held accountable for how they spend their money and the level of services provided. New York's Suffolk County Library System last year got nailed for fiscal irresponsibility and mismanagement; it had been faced earlier with the secession of a group of well-heeled western sector members, which felt that the neighboring Nassau system would provide them with better and cheaper services. That flap simmered down somewhat when Suffolk (under pressure from the legislature) agreed to give the dissidents more representation on its board, and also promised to reimburse them for service to nonresidents. (At year's end, Suffolk was reportedly awaiting the outcome of a strong push by some board members to oust Director Guenter Jansen.)

School/library cooperation

Despite its negative impact elsewhere, the budget crunch is providing an incentive for school/library cooperation—a trend that's inching along steadily. Local government is starting to back cost-saving merged facilities. Guin, Alabama city fathers put up Revenue Sharing money to cover 1975-76 operating expenses for the town's yearling school/library cooperative. Australia's Minister of Education voiced his support for facilities serving school-college clientele as well as the public; one such in that country is a Queenstown public library that serves students from the nearby School of Mines. Another is in Vancouver, British Columbia, which has a community complex with a library serving three clienteles and three institutions (the elementary school, the high school, and the public library); it's jointly funded, staffed, and stocked by the three administrations.

The jurisdictional squabbles that were so common in the fat sixties—flaps over who's to run the show, school or library personnel—are less frequently mentioned, though some observers still peg problems of getting people to work together as the biggest barrier to cooperation. A few libraries are starting to view merger as a means of upgrading their staff: funding provided for a new joint facility in Cripple Creek, Colorado enabled both school and public libraries involved to hire their first professionals. The town voted tax revenue for library books plus service hours; the school district is paying for the librarians' salaries and school materials.

More communities are opting for school/library cooperation as one means of broadening service. Pipestone, Minnesota voters approved a joint facility that serves anyone in the school district as well as town residents.

Sometimes a major disaster can pave the way for sharing: when North Dakota's Crosby Elementary School went up in flames, community leaders opted for a merged facility (the Divide County Public Library) instead of a single-use building. Fire insurance money helped pay for the cooperative—the first in the state planned as a merger from the start.

Intertype cooperation is also on the upswing; libraries of all types are working together and forming liaisons with city agencies as well. Public, school, college, and hospital libraries plus the Children's Aid and Family Society in one Massachusetts community formed the Haverhill Library Resources Consortium with the goal of "coordinating the purchase and use of materials and increasing access to all libraries in the city."

"Register of Copyrights Barbara Ringer came out against any photocopy exemptions for schools and libraries, while blasting both for 'blatant' copyright infringement"

The copyright tangle

Copyright (especially its application to computers) is a key issue that must be resolved before a national information network can get going. It looks as if Congress will have on the books by next year new copyright legislation defining "fair use." Congress still favors a licensed royalty scheme to reimburse publishers for "systematic" photocopying; it's less certain, however, about copyright guidelines for computer systems. The neophyte National Commission on New Technological Uses of Copyrighted Works (CONTU) started work on this aspect of the copyright tangle last year.

Warning against a flood of "harassing but unjustifiable suits" for "imagined" copyright infringement, six major library associations came out squarely against pending copyright legislation last year. But U.S. libraries that had hoped for clear-cut guidelines were disappointed when the Supreme Court deadlocked on the photocopying issue, though the tie vote served to uphold a Court of Claims decision against publisher Williams & Wilkins. One major setback logged last year: Register of Copyrights Barbara Ringer came out against any photocopying exemptions for schools and libraries, while blasting both for "blatant" copyright infringement.

Similar setbacks were clocked in such places as Australia, where New South Wales University lost out in its appeal of a decision making universities (and presumably libraries as well) responsible for any photocopying done on their premises. Public lending reimbursement seems to be in the offing in England where the Department of Education and Science commissioned a study of two tentative royalty schemes. There was a strong push for public lending legislation in Canada, but the Canadian Library Association held back its support until the issues are more fully aired.

Little forward progress was made last year in getting publishers and library people to iron out their differences. The rhetoric spewed out by such groups as the Information Industry Association (which warned of "an iron curtain forged out of free information") isn't helping. Publishers still blame cooperative sharing and the photocopying boom for their slipping revenue (a claim not substantiated by the rosy sales reports by major publishing associations). Librarians, on the other hand, argue that tight budgets (and not photocopying) are keeping book and periodical buying down. Defending resource sharing, which is seen as vital to the survival of the library as an institution, library people point out that periodicals with a low demand are getting axed, that journals most in demand tend to be in healthy financial shape, and that much of what is published isn't worth photocopying. Some libraries admit that they're sacrificing book buying to prevent the "irretrievable" loss of periodical runs of high value.

Libraries and cooperatives faced with rising acquisitions costs and "differential (higher) pricing schemes" aren't happy with the books they're getting: the Lake County, Ohio, Librarians Association complained to the Association of American Publishers about "the poor quality and shoddy workmanship of books" published in the last few years.

New efforts at getting the private and public sectors to agree were tried last year: the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science and LC's Copyright Office brought publishing and library people together for a series of "resolution of copyright issues" meetings, and finally got both parties to back the development of "workable licensing procedures." And when the Association of American Publishers and ALA got together on a study of bookselling and library buying, they found out that publishers depend on libraries to keep afloat.

The new internationalism

The decision of the Pratt Institute of Brooklyn and the School of Information Science at Rabat, Morocco to link up educational programs is one more indication that the American library community is broadening its conception of international involvement. It's now trying to get more foreign librarians into the U.S., instead of going international via the exportation of U.S. technology and librarians: ALA's Library Education Division wants to book, on a regular basis, touring lecturers from developing countries.

The U.S. library community is also starting to get actively involved in international library planning: Pratt continued its work with Iran's Pahlavi National Library in a program aimed at creating a national information network and setting up centers for both Iranian studies and library education. The 100-strong International Association of Metropolitan Libraries last year sent a fact-finding team to Nigeria for more discussions on ongoing library development in that nation.

Other forward-looking projects reported in 1975: the expansion of Proyecto Leer (a Latin American book reviewing project that was resurrected thanks to the Ford Foundation) to include the running of institutes in Latin American acquisitions for U.S. librarians and educators; and involvement by members of the Seminar on the Acquisitions of Latin American Library Materials (SALALM) in such things as Latin American library and archives development and a Latin American Microform Project.

In one country, at least, nationalism is on the upsurge, thanks to the sagging economy. One segment of the Canadian publishing community wants Canadian libraries to bolster that struggling industry by buying Canadian and severing its ties with the U.S. marketplace. The Toronto Public Library is one institution that promised to buy more Canadian books. The fear has been voiced, however, that book collection strength will drop if libraries go Canadian exclusively.

Intellectual freedom

The controversial 1973 Supreme Court ruling on obscenity is still motivating self-appointed censors: the board president at St. Mary's Public Library (Pennsylvania) spearheaded a drive aimed at getting "offensive" books (and the director as well) out of the library. But some headway was gained elsewhere last year in the fight against censorship: a controversial national clearinghouse that had been set up to help prosecutors nail purveyors of porno lost its federal funding, and the Oregon Senate exempted librarians from obscenity liability.

Meanwhile, the library community girded for new confrontations: public libraries in both Indiana and Oklahoma participated in high-powered statewide "issues forums" aimed at pegging the implications of community standards and other new censorship problems. Washington librarians got advice on how to handle irate patrons at a workshop aptly titled, Off that Book! Or How To Avoid Getting Bashed over the Head at the Circulation Desk!

Some librarians are taking on the censors: Canada faced a major challenge to its censorship laws in 1975, and Canadian libraries successfully fought off the Church of Scientology, which dropped lawsuits aimed at barring circulation of books negative to its "religion."

Other confrontations paid off: Strongville, Ohio parents finally won a court ban of alternate classroom selections. One Pennsylvania school played it safe, barring use of both occult and Bible readings.

Outraged parents are using such tactics as getting high office holders to put the heat on schools backing multicultural education. An East Baton Rouge parents group got the District Attorney in on its purge attempt. Randolph, New York educators stood firm against a similar assault until the associate commissioner of education threatened to close the school; the books in question were locked in a safe pending review.

"There were a few new twists to the textbook wars that flared up again last year: a new wave of protestors . . . zeroed in on 'inaccurate, sexist, and racist' textbooks"

The anti-censorship drive in the U.S. seemed to be losing momentum: ALA didn't get enough registrants for a December 1974 HEW-funded intellectual freedom seminar. The Rhode Island Library Association's Intellectual Freedom Committee rejected the new introduction to ALA's 1974 IF Manual on the grounds that it goes too far; but the RILA membership nixed the stand taken by its own committee. There was unexpected resistance to the ALA "American Issues Forum" bicentennial booklist; it was scored as a leftist "propaganda bath" by two former Nixon aides (writing for the New York Times and TV Guide) and by the Wall Street Journal.

There were a few new twists to the textbook wars that flared up again last year: a new wave of protestors (in Montgomery County, Maryland and York, Ontario) zeroed in on "inaccurate, sexist, and racist" textbooks. Meanwhile, old guard defenders of God and country were going "door to door" in anti-textbook campaigns at home and converging on Capitol Hill in efforts to get Congress to step in. At one point, some Congressmen tried to get the National Science Foundation to stop funding the controversial MACOS (Man: a Course of Study) series.

A National Education Association panel that looked into the fracas in West Virginia's Kanawha County sized up the situation. NEA blamed "outsiders" (the Ku Klux Klan and John Birchers) for instigating much of the violence; it faulted the school board for failing to "communicate" with a community alienated by urban encroachment and for "capitulating instead of compromising" when the crisis reached the boiling point. Kanawha took NEA's advice by providing alternate textbooks to rural youngsters from mostly fundamentalist families, but the melees continued.

But help can sometimes come from unexpected quarters: the Kansas City Environmental Council forbade a planned book burning because of pollution hazards.

Other broader censorship initiatives were foiled: a Tennessee court rescinded a 1974 law aimed at curbing use of textbooks promulgating Darwin's theory. Other victories: a Queen's (New York) school board pulled back its four-year ban of Piri Thomas' Down These Mean Streets, and Bruce Severy, a Drake, North Dakota teacher fired in a row over what kids should read in school, won a court settlement, and the books he fought for are now in use.

Some educators tried to establish communications with potential dissidents: public hearings on disputed textbooks were held in Virginia and Maryland counties; Orange County, California put on display textbooks up for state adoption. Some publishers tried to work out "strategies" for winning communities over, but one (Ginn) promised to "expurgate" offensive selections. One publisher fought back: Economy Company of Oklahoma sued Texas residents it held responsible for the state's rejection of its wares.

The textbook confrontations point to the possible emergence of a national trend whereby teachers and librarians are regarded as employees of parents rather than as independent professionals. The National Council of Teachers of English is one of several groups backing the right of schools to decide what to teach and how. But the concept of citizen control has supporters in both government and education.

Moving backwards, the U.S. government tried last year to prevent too much government information from leaking out. One Senate bill (S 1) clearly aims to muzzle journalists and prevent future Watergate and CIA exposés. And the State Department prevented a U.S. tour by Peruvian revolutionary and author Hugo Blanco, despite protests of violation of the Helsinki agreement.

Counter offensives were launched in 1975: another Senate bill (S 2) would bar government interference with broadcast content; the Social Responsibilities Round Table demanded (at ALA Midwinter) hearings on CIA eavesdropping; and the Rochester Public Library got the city to agree to let its own board (rather than the city attorney) handle appeals of the state's "freedom of information" law. The secrecy of circulation records was at issue in such places as Los Alamos, New Mexico and Ector County, Texas, where libraries won out against demands that they allow inspection of circulation records by police or roving reporters.

Similar challenges to government snooping occurred abroad: England, which barred publication of the Crossman Diary because of possible "embarrassment" to other office holders, faced a campaign to allow people to see government files containing their personal histories. Meanwhile, such things as book burning (Chile) and censorship of the press (Nepal and South Vietnam) were still going on, reminders that intellectual freedom is as scarce as ever in the world.

The embattled profession

The concept of librarianship as a profession is changing: newly graduated library professionals and a sizeable portion of the old guard as well are starting to view the library as a vital community resource for all persons and with a broader mission than was formerly conceived. Many are no longer satisfied with merely serving patrons who grew up with libraries; they want to get to the nonuser—people in the ghetto and in isolated rural areas, plus members of the professional community who are unaware of highly sophisticated services which the library has to offer them.

The new breed of library professional has sought reform within the profession—prodding management to address discriminatory employment practices, to try out shared management schemes, and to back continuing education. Nonprofessionals and volunteers have slowly been earning acceptance as important components of the library team. And despite earlier misgivings within the profession, unions have established themselves in many public and university libraries.

But the economy bottomed out in 1975, undermining the new goals. Widespread budget cutting jeopardized outreach efforts and other kinds of special programming first. Jobs evaporated and many professionals found themselves in competition with nonpros and volunteers. The profession is concerned about job security—something which could make unions more attractive than faculty senates as vehicles for dealing with academic administrators. Libraries are committed under law to affirmative action against discrimination, but they're also vulnerable to reverse discrimination lawsuits.

The shrinking job market

1975 was a year of spiralling unemployment, vacancy freezes, staff cutbacks, and an end of the easy mobility that librarians once enjoyed: beginning and senior librarians both found the going rough. In some cases, lower-paid nonprofessionals had the best chances of surviving cutbacks: many New York City elementary school librarians lost out to nonpros, though secondary school librarians are still holding on.

The job shortage, a "cadre" of unemployed librarians charged, has created a "buyers market": employers are demanding unheard of qualifications (three languages for a cataloger), and all too often choice jobs, they say, go to people with connections in the "old boy network." One New York system reported that over 100 pros and nonpros scrambled for a $6500 technical services nonpro job opening. Almost 200 job hunters tried for a $10,500 cataloging post at Idaho University. Fewer federal library jobs than ever were advertised last year, and Federal salary raises were limited to five percent.

As for salaries at the academic level, librarians got raises averaging eight percent, but inflation still cut their buying power, reports a 1974-75 Association of Research Libraries survey. North Dakota academic librarians did somewhat better, with state-okayed increases ranging from 12 percent for "classified" professionals to 64 percent for nonpros with their BAs. But beginning librarians at the State University of New York are getting shortchanged, charged SUNY's library association, with starting salaries far below the Northeast average.

Public libraries battling for better wages for their staffers were faced with the refusal of city hall to budget for such increases. The Los Angeles Public Library was told it could increase salaries only if it took the money from another use—such as the book budget. Tucson staffers got healthy raises thanks to a police and firemen strike, but the city then told the library to cut its budget by $52,000 to pay for the raises.

Unemployed librarians can take heart in the growing number of job hotlines and newsletters that got going last year. New services were launched by the Florida State Library, the Georgia Library Association, the New York Library Association, the American Society for Information Science, and the Iowa State Library. Virginia State College's Department of Library Science is helping black librarians zero in on minority group opportunity via a new national data bank. ALA's Social Responsibilities Round Table Task Force on Women is still trying to get more women into top management positions, but it's not having much success in getting public and special libraries to post openings in its Job Bulletin.

Ambivalence towards CETA

Although many librarians recognize that Comprehensive Training and Employment Act funding helped ease the job crisis, not all view CETA as a godsend. San Francisco and Los Angeles library unions last year warned that the infusion of federally-funded personnel could serve to weaken local funding responsibility (hence job security for the regular staffer) and could also jeopardize gains (like Civil Service benefits) made in recent years. Other cautions raised: there's a built-in danger of replacing employees that were laid off with CETA people, and if responsibility for normal staff needs has indeed been written out of the city budget, libraries will face a crisis of major proportions when CETA funding runs out.

There were some clear-cut signs of financial abdication at the local level: service hours at San Jose's library were restored only after CETA money came through; and Detroit's library lost 21 percent of its work force (it was hit 400 percent harder than other city departments) and got bailed out later by CETA.

"1975 was a year of spiralling unemployment, vacancy freezes, staff cutbacks, and an end of the easy mobility that librarians once enjoyed. . ."

Volunteers

In recent years, volunteers have become a vital part of the library team; the harsh austerity of 1975 prompted more libraries to utilize them for specialized as well as standard routine duties. Chicago's Newberry Library is one institution now relying heavily on volunteers. Besides handling desk traffic, Newberry volunteers are taking on professional duties, such as reference and research, manuscript sorting, and cataloging.

Public library volunteers—young and old—are also doing more than just staffing the circulation desk: they're getting library materials to the homebound (Ohio's Meigs County volunteers use senior citizen buses); keeping jail service running; and publicizing outreach service (Spokane, Washington "neighborhood librarians" are given credit for zooming bookmobile service). Indiana's Monroe County Public Library reports that its army of volunteers (professors, students, housewives, senior citizens, and the unemployed) is building an impressive oral history archive that wouldn't have been possible otherwise. Albuquerque recruited its first volunteers for a special art exhibit; the experience prompted many to try for other kinds of library volunteer work and to get others to enlist.

There are some barriers to the use of volunteers: New York Public Library had to forego the use of volunteers (and the opening of its Pelham Bay Branch, where volunteers were considered as a last ditch staff backup) because a union contract forbade their use. Unions don't all oppose volunteers: the union representing Los Angeles Public Library staffers urged the board to get more volunteers to help ease the work overload.

Nonpro mobility gaining ground

The job squeeze created a new demand for the nonpro—something that's fueling professional resistance to "career ladders" enabling the nonpro to try for professional status. Not everyone fears that the status of the professional would be endangered by the invasion of nonpros. Some administrators blasted librarians' "degree fever" as discriminatory against the many paraprofessionals who have taken on professional duties in financially pressed libraries. More debate on the status of the profession was generated last year by the appointment of historian Daniel Boorstin as Librarian of Congress.

The trend towards providing the nonpro with opportunity for entry into professional ranks inched along in 1975. California's Sacramento City-County Library, which sparked heated controversy with its pioneering nonpro "career ladder," ran the first exam enabling nonpros in the system to earn bottom level professional status. Cleveland worked out a nonpro mobility scheme that goes even farther: a team of supervisors are to pick nonpros that deserve to move up, counting job experience as the equivalent of both undergraduate and master's level schooling.

"More debate on the status of the profession was generated . . . by the appointment of Daniel Boorstin as Librarian of Congress"

The Council on Library Technicians (COLT) announced its intent to serve as the representative for all types of paraprofessionals, from the clerical worker to the subject specialist; it also urged libraries to give the nonpro more supervisory responsibilities. LTA associations in British Columbia and Ontario reported new growth gains.

In 1975 the Minnesota Library Association's Professional Welfare Committee set as its new target correcting unfairness to nonpros in such areas as salaries, "career ladders," and participatory management. And at year's end, paraprofessionals within the New York Library Association started pushing for a new association unit addressing their needs. At the NYLA meeting, nonpros complained bitterly that a master-slave mentality dominates the profession and that unions, more often than not, help keep them locked into their positions.

Librarians were more threatened by competition from nonpros in 1975. Among the reactions: school librarians fearful of their own job security barred support staff from meetings of the Orange County (N.Y.) School Libraries Association; the Orange Sullivan Public Library Association, however, decided to let them in. In Orange County, California, a new group called Concerned Librarians Opposing Unprofessional Trends (CLOUT) complained that nonpros and volunteers are taking over professional jobs, and thus devaluing the role and capabilities of professionals.

The nonpro population grew in 1975 (on paper) thanks to the U.S. Labor Department, which downgraded to nonprofessional status all army librarians. This decision, which drew sharp criticism from the Special Libraries Association, affected Picatinny Arsenal (Dover, New Jersey) librarians, who had to settle for representation by the newly-elected union's nonpro (instead of professional) unit.

Hazards in the profession

Many librarians lost their jobs in 1975 because of the budget crisis; others were ousted because of personality clashes and differences of opinion on how a library should be run. But library associations still tend to back the institution instead of the individual library staffer: the new ethics code of the American Library Association was one that put loyalty to the institution above the professional integrity of the librarian. At year's end, the California Society of Librarians, a group without heavy management representation, reviewed a new code that contrasts with the norm: it urges the professional to heed his own conscience rather than the rules of the institution.

ALA's Staff Committee on Mediation, Arbitration, and Inquiry reported little in 1975 to change its lackluster reputation in the handling of grievance matters. SCMAI investigated the complaint of an Ohio children's librarian (Faye Lander)—who had moved up after just two years on the job as a paraprofessional, only to be fired later by the Kent Free Library's new head librarian. SCMAI decided that all parties involved were to blame: the new librarian and the complainant (both of whom lacked "administrative experience") and the library board, which adopted a grievance policy at the time of the dismissal.

Some library staffers who have gotten axed are going beyond library associations in efforts to get their jobs back. Patricia Chalfant Trivets lodged a court suit, challenging her dismissal as processing head by Wilmington, Delaware Institute's former Director Jack Bryant; her chances of winning $180,000 in damages may have improved when Bryant himself got indicted for using library money to build up his art collection. SCMAI has refused to file an amicus curiae brief in her favor.

Former children's librarian Toni Mitchell appealed her dismissal from a Los Angeles Public Library branch to the Civil Service Commission. Mitchell, who got the backing of LAPL's union, contends that her dismissal—after five years of service—is in retaliation for fighting for improved service to the disadvantaged; LAPL administration holds that Mitchell has been a personnel problem for quite some time. And Rosanne LaPaglia, a Montclair College cataloger whose recommendation for reappointment was rescinded at the last minute, is first trying regular grievance channels (a faculty review board) in efforts to win restoration of her contract. At last report, the review board voted in her favor.

Resentment stemming from old political battles can influence the appointment of top library personnel. Rhode Island's Governor Phillip Noel let the top two state library agency posts stay vacant—ignoring the recommendations of retiring agency head Elizabeth Myer (who had won out in a clash with him much earlier). Noel appointed a search committee, and then appointed Myer's choice anyway: former Deputy Director Jewel Drickamer.

Despite the job squeeze, some librarians would rather quit than continue to buck the administration. Such was the case in Rock Island, Illinois, where ten staffers resigned because they couldn't get the director or the board to address their grievances.

Some libraries are trying harder to build rapport with their staffers. The Librarians' Association of the University of California got the go-ahead from administration to work to improve communications between the line staffer and the top brass. Alarmed by the high turnover in staff in its cataloging division, the National Library of Canada (Ottawa, Ontario) came up with a career incentive program aimed at providing alternatives to the regular job routine.

Ohio's Cuyahoga County Library was one institution that decided to face up to an unexpected problem that's indicative of societal change: it backed its clerk-treasurer when he changed his sexual identity and announced plans for a sex change.

Faculty status

Little forward progress in the battle for faculty status was logged last year. Among the setbacks: a three-year faculty parity battle waged by the Ontario Community College Librarians got stalled when an Arbitration Board refused to rule on OCCL's discrimination complaint; action by Canadian library groups and the resignation of the head librarian failed to get Saint Mary's University to bow to demands for academic status; and the University of Washington (Seattle) is still holding back despite renewed pressure on behalf of librarians from the American Association of University Professors.

But one faculty status threat was offset last year thanks to an impressive lobbying effort: Wisconsin legislators overrode the governor's veto of a long fought for compromise bill okaying the old system of faculty appointments within newly merged state universities—instead of a new system under which universities would have the option of dispensing with faculty privileges.

Not everyone is sure that tenure is worth fighting for: Richard Chait of Harvard's Institute for Educational Management predicted that tenure would eventually be eclipsed by the union contract because of growing concern about job security.

Unions

Faculty unions are still clocking impressive growth gains: by 1979 about 50 percent of all public universities are expected to go union. One indication of their acceptance by the library community: ALA's Association of College and Research Libraries last year urged the inclusion of librarians in faculty unions. But librarians on some campuses (the State University of New York is one) feel that unions haven't done much in the fight for faculty status. Librarians participating in one 1975 survey (by Jean Kennelly of the University of Washington) said that collective bargaining does little to change conditions, but it does help get better salaries, job security, due process, and to some extent participation in decision making. One indication of union clout: a strike action by nonpros at the University of Toronto shut down the library for several weeks; pay raises ranging from ten to 18 percent were okayed.

Unions pose a major threat to faculty senates as protectors of the academic status of librarians: Pennsylvania bargaining agents charged in 1974 that faculty senates are company unions and therefore illegal; and at Central Michigan they challenged the right of the senate to make "teaching effectiveness" a criterion for academic promotion.

Union people faced a few major setbacks in 1975: the economy crunch plus lack of agreement on the issues were blamed for the failure of legislation that would allow state and local government workers, including college staffers, to bargain collectively under the National Labor Relations Act. One significant problem yet to be ironed out: the question of the constitutionality of federal interference in state labor practices. New Hampshire, incidentally, is the only state still barring collective bargaining rights to all academic employees: the University of New Hampshire Chapter of the American Association of University Professors last year failed to win the repeal of a state statute denying such rights.

A library administration can undermine a union drive by addressing the needs of its staff: such was the case in Princeton, where nonpros nixed representation by a union mostly because the university had already okayed substantial salary boosts in efforts to correct past inequities.

Unions are slowly working their way into public libraries, but not everyone is for them. While admitting that unions might be an asset when budgets are getting slashed, library administrators are still against losing the prerogatives of management to union leaders. Some librarians feel that unions conflict with professionalism and that too often they are indifferent to the needs of library patrons when bartering for higher salaries.

Unions are trying to win over converts in the profession by doing such things as fighting for restoration of library funding and service hours (the Los Angeles Public Library's Librarians' Guild). They're also addressing the specific needs of library professionals: thanks to the union, Worcester, Massachusetts, Public Library trust funds now go for work-related staff education. The Canadian Union of Public Employees won for Thunder Bay Public Library professionals the assurance that they can act on their professional judgment without fear of retribution by employers. And the Los Angeles Librarians' Guild is fighting the transfer of five staffers, charging they're being moved because of their union involvement.

One indication of growing acceptance of collective bargaining: the Minnesota Library Association considered last year serving as a union representative for nonunion library staff in the state.

Participative management

Many experiments in participative management were tried out last year. Rochester, New York librarians mapped out and got board approval for a plan for upgrading library service. A Support Staff Organization at Indiana University gets in on both policy and grievance matters. And Milwaukee's Marquette University library is the latest to give its professionals a say in appointments and promotions. One new development: Potsdam and Albany components of the State University of New York started talking about consulting LTAs on their own evaluation procedures.

A few participatory management schemes came under fire last year: the Toronto Public Libraries had to scrap its first model when outraged staffers demanded more than "just another level of bureaucracy." Similar criticism got Seattle's pioneering King County Library System to revamp its participative management scheme; its staff wants to be in on decisions affecting their own jobs and not broader administrative problems. New York's Monroe County Library System tried to avert misunderstanding about how far participative management can go; it developed a widely read position paper that clearly sets forth concessions which must be made by both management and staff.

Education

Recognition of the importance of coordinating library education on the national and state levels is growing. Ten state library agencies last year committed start-up funding to the NCLIS-endorsed Continuing Library Education Network Exchange. CLENE appointed its first officers, adopted bylaws, and launched a newsletter. Meanwhile, more state and multi-state initiatives got going. Illinois set up a committee to chart new directions in education statewide. The Wyoming State Library offered state agency training to top candidates from library schools in nine states. And the Council on Library Resources put up money for programs to train the library leaders of tomorrow—management people, subject specialists, and librarians committed to bringing their institutions into the academic mainstream.

Libraries and library schools are trying to provide the professional and nonprofessional alike with the expertise needed to meet new service demands. There were new courses and institutes on such things as crisis budgeting, security, community information, service to special clienteles (like business), networks, and the new technology. The University of Southern California and Catholic University tried out independent study programs in librarianship and information science. The Chicago Public Library was another institution to okay paid time off for staff education. Harvard ran courses on professional development for its supervisors. And the California Library Association urged libraries to get more staff out to library conferences. One indication of the demand for continuing education: the Library of Congress reported that staff participation in training programs zoomed by 521 percent over a six-year period.

The library education community also is experimenting in internationalism: Kent State and the College of Librarianship Wales launched a program in comparative and international librarianship—one requiring study in both countries. The State College at Shippensburg, Pennsylvania offered a course entailing a tour of European libraries. The University of California at Berkeley has a new double master's in Near Eastern Studies and Librarianship; Kent State has a new degree program in West African Librarianship.

Concern about the library science student explosion grew in 1975. The District of Columbia Library Association voted on a resolution calling for a halt to further ALA accreditations, nixing the idea finally because of local concern about winning accreditation for the program at Washington, D.C.'s Federal City College. What could be interpreted as another response to the job crisis is the University of Michigan's decision to up the number of credit hours required for an M.L.S.—something that will slow down the output of new librarians somewhat.

ALA faced a new challenge to the findings of its accreditation committee in 1975: San Jose State College is appealing to an adverse report, as Dalhousie has done successfully. And a California Chicano group charged that ALA's failure to accredit a school (California State College, Fullerton) offering a specialist program for Mexican-American librarians is holding this minority group back.

Some schools are fighting to stay afloat: the University of Wisconsin opted (pending an okay from the legislature) to cut tuition in half—a possible signal of a "no holds barred" competition between universities—which could involve library schools. The University of Maine is cutting costs by dropping its library science department—an action getting stiff opposition from alumni. But at the University of South Florida, where a Library Science/Audiovisual Program just won ALA accreditation, there's a move afoot to remove the program from the College of Education and create a separate library school.

Trustees

More library boards were faced with threats to their power in 1975. When New York Public Library's board tried to close three popular libraries in a futile try for more city funds, community leaders demanded representation on what they characterized as a "self-perpetuating, incestuous, elitist" board. (But the board seats in question went to businessmen instead.) In Pittsfield, Massachusetts, city fathers voted to replace the old self-perpetuating board with an appointed one when the old board refused to include in the new Berkshire Athenaeum library building a special room to house a donation of Lincoln memorabilia.

Other city administrations are demoting library boards from administrative to advisory bodies on the grounds that library financing is now too complicated a matter to handle, and a board would be more effective in an advisory capacity. Dallas and Forest Grove, Oregon boards were recast to advisory status.

Tucson's library board got demoted earlier because city fathers felt it stepped out of line when it fired Director Frank Van Zanten. But Tucson's board attempted in 1975 to chart a "more meaningful role" in its new capacity as advisor. Its goals: longer board terms to give the board continuity and more representation for Pima County, which contributes a substantial chunk of operating income.

Not all moves to demote a library board were successful: New York's Buffalo and Erie County Library board held onto its administrative status thanks to the many residents who turned out to protest the demotion at a special meeting on the board's status. The Los Angeles Public Library board was another that warded off—with support from the library union and the community—a similar threat to its status.

Individual board members can also come under fire. A Huntington, Long Island attorney was reported fighting an attempt by his library board to get him to don a jacket and tie at board meetings.

Library trustees face new threats of liability stemming from the shaky economy and Supreme Court sanctioned community censorship. New York trustees were urged anew last year to exercise caution when making investments and to keep bank deposits under the maximum covered by federal insurance in case of a bank's default. In Illinois, a new law stipulates that trustees in charge of library funds must now be bonded.

Women

Sex bias skirmishes were abundant in 1975. Five women's rights and education organizations filed a "class action" suit against certain federal agencies in an effort to get them to withhold funding from schools that pay short shrift to anti-bias laws. New York's Frick Art Reference Library faced the first challenge to its 50-year-old policy of barring women wearing pants. And despite the threat of the loss of its charter, an Elk Grove, Illinois Kiwanis Club bucked Kiwanis International and fought for its first female member, Librarian Mary Clark. But she quit when barred from running for office.

There were new setbacks in the battle for women rights. The Equal Rights Amendment failed in many states, and a nationwide women's strike ("Alice Doesn't Day") didn't turn out to be much of a demonstration of solidarity. Only one library (Stanislaus County, Calif.) reported its participation, and the librarians who stayed home lost a day's pay. An unwed pregnant teacher, who filed a discrimination suit protesting her transfer from a classroom to a special library, got little sympathy from the presiding judge, who declared that male unwed fathers wouldn't be treated differently. And the Virginia Library Association nixed a ban on sexism in its publications.

The University of Wisconsin-Madison was one institution that ran a workshop aimed at helping female librarians move up. The prescribed route: go after more continuing education; break the "myth" of incompetency in budget matters; and try to get into participatory schemes where administrative experience can be had.

ALA has lagged behind in the area of women's rights. The California Library Association—and not ALA—was the first to pass a resolution barring sexist terminology from its own association publications. ALA's Women's Task Force is pushing ahead, however: it voted to set up a national group (Women Library Workers) outside ALA to fight for women's rights. The Women's National Book Association was one organization to put on the record its commitment to upward mobility for women; it also voted to let men into the organization.

Discrimination

Libraries and library schools are trying to eradicate discrimination. Among the forward-looking programs reported in 1975: Cleveland Public set up a discrimination complaint hotline and launched a program aimed at pegging areas of discrimination; Tucson Public and the California State Library offered scholarships to minority group members; and Fisk University (Nashville) and the University of Texas at Austin tried innovative courses in ethnic studies research and intercultural communication.

The Library of Congress last year urged library schools to include more minority students in their nominations for LC's intern program. An LC survey put total minority enrollment in the U.S. at 585. But enrollment of black librarians at predominantly black Atlanta University has reportedly fallen off, and at least one library (Cleveland) complained that the shortage of minority librarians is foiling recruitment efforts.

LC had to face up to new charges of discrimination in 1975, despite its efforts to upgrade its training and promotion program, to develop action programs for women and Spanish-surnamed employees, and to study job relatedness and mobility patterns. One LC report showed that blacks and other minority group members are still the majority in the bottom-drawer GS categories, while "all others" (whites) dominate the GS 9 range and up. LC's union staff zeroed in on what it saw as LC's lack of progress to date. The union wants affirmative action funds to go directly into benefits for its members and not for the administration of the program, but LC feels it's legitimate to use such funding to cover "all aspects of personnel and management."

Universities last year faced new pressure to follow through on their affirmative action responsibilities: the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission told them that they must measure up to the guidelines of the 1964 Civil Rights Act without the benefit of any special tailoring of the law to the academic situation.

Libraries that have committed themselves to affirmative action could get hit with reverse discrimination lawsuits. In Los Angeles, the Superior Court ruled that the Los Angeles County Public Library had violated county Civil Service regulations when it promoted a black and a Hispanic who had scored lower than seven whites in a competitive exam. The impact of the decision: libraries could get sued and lose cases both when they engage in affirmative action and when they don't.

The library as an institution

The library is establishing itself within the community as an institution committed to helping people cope with the modern world—serving as an information retrieval and referral center, a town meeting hall, a mini-museum and theater, and an open university. Libraries are getting involved with social problems like prostitution and home security; encouraging experimentation in such things as transcendental meditation, T'ai Chi Ch'uan, and yoga; and addressing medical problems by setting up VD information centers, providing checkups for breast cancer and sickle cell anemia, and dispensing rodent control packets.

Libraries are trying to get to sports enthusiasts with demonstrations of hang gliding, mountain climbing, skiing, and sky diving; they're providing the video generation with facilities for film-making and photo development; and they're trying to reach kids with tricycle races, Little League clubs, chick incubators, water beds, and homework hotlines.

The diving economy of 1975 prompted many a library to try to help out: Pennsylvania's Osterhout Free Library ran a job hunting clinic; a Fairfax County, Virginia branch matched youngsters with potential employers. New York's Onondaga Library System helped housewives pare food costs by setting up a swap box for the exchange of store discount coupons; and the Suburban Library System (Ill.) opened up its grounds for vegetable gardening. In Michigan, the Saginaw Public Library ran a series of free concerts for a community hard hit by auto layoffs.

Libraries attempting to move with the modern world can run into opposition from community or special interest groups that question the propriety of their programming. Kentucky's Pikeville Public Library last year was assailed by the Pikeville Ministerial Association, which demanded that a transcendental meditation group be barred from the library on the grounds that TM is really a religion and thus improper for a library setting. Pikeville, which gets paid for meeting room use and sorely needs the extra revenue, stood firm against the ministers' demands. A similar confrontation developed in Utah, where the Cache Public Library's 39-year-old policy of providing rent-free space to the local Latter Day Saints Genealogical Library was challenged by the American Civil Liberties Union. But Utah's Attorney General ruled in the library's favor.

"Libraries attempting to move with the modern world can run into opposition from community or special interest groups that question the propriety of their programming"

The National Association of Broadcasters tried to bar the broadcast in Washington, D.C. of a highly successful library publicity TV spot (developed by the Houston Public Library) with a format suggesting a Watergatish interrogation. NAB objected to the PR spot on the grounds that it looks too much like a newscast. The District of Columbia Public Library (whose telephone reference service business tripled since the ad's running) balked, refusing to stop the ad or even to doctor it with a "public service message" credit.

in Social Security funds that were to fuel the project. Not to be discounted and another reason for the pullback: the realization by New York politicos that the opening up of information to the people might not be to their own political advantage.

Information centers

Libraries, particularly urban libraries, are beginning to view information and referral service as a logical extension of the library's traditional role. One reason is the belief that libraries must establish themselves as an information resource vital to the community if they are to survive. But there is concern within the profession that libraries are going too far in asking information retrieval specialists to take up an advocacy role, serving as social workers instead of just librarians. Other problems to be faced: the possibility of conflict with established agencies and difficulties in getting the community itself to alter its old conception of the library.

Houston got around the problem of possible clashes with city agencies by getting them in on planning for its information center. In Tennessee, the Memphis Library and Information Center found itself in competition with other agencies for the countywide information service contract; it won out over United Way.

"Libraries, particularly urban libraries, are beginning to view information and referral service as a logical extension of the library's traditional role"

On the whole, library programming is winning over converts in the community at large and attracting the attention of politicians as well. Office holders took note of the success of Ohio's Columbus Public Library in getting to voter registrants in minority neighborhoods—something that paid off when Columbus tried for extra funding. In a year when its mayoral aspirants campaigned on the theme that the city must be saved from New York style fiscal disaster, the Houston Public Library credits its participation in the five-city Neighborhood Information Center project with a 50 percent budget boost from city hall and the revitalization of the library system itself.

But the money drought can undermine a forward looking library program. Such was the case in New York City, where the city administration decided to pull out of the Citizens Urban Information Center project (planned originally for every city library, but finally narrowed down to the Brooklyn Public Library's branch system) and make other use of the several millions

The failure of the Enoch Pratt Free Library to publicize its trial-run information center was one factor in that project's failure; understaffing and almost total reliance on walk-in (instead of the more popular telephone) service were also blamed. But Pratt plans to revitalize its information center—starting with an updating of its file of some 4000 community organizations.

Other ventures down this promising path: Baltimore County launched a countywide library information service; Los Angeles got CETA funding to staff its new telephone plus walk-in Community Information and Referral Service; and Queens Borough (N.Y.) set up nine Neighborhood Information Centers and installed seven wire service machines.

Michigan's Grand Valley State College got together for public use a storehouse of local and county government documents. Wyoming's Natrona County Public Library is microfilming government, health, and hospital records. And San Francisco is getting the community information concept across to kids with an info service on candy stores, tree climbing, and the like.

Libraries & culture

The concept of the library as a cultural center is catching on. Congress is working on a bill to fund an American Folklife Center at LC. Washington, D.C.'s Martin Luther King Library wants to set up an arts center to get information on area happenings out to the people. And the Southwestern Library Association plans a series of regional programs on the effectiveness of the library as a cultural center.

Libraries are working with other agencies in getting high-powered cultural programming going. New York Public Library teamed up with other city organizations in running the first citywide celebration of theater for teenagers. The Los Angeles Public Library helped get a citywide street mural project started. In Albuquerque, the library and the museum put together a display of valuable French posters—with the aid of a consultant from France. And a musicians union helped pay for two rock concerts at Indiana's Lake County Public Library.

Libraries are also doubling as museums, booking authors and poets for lectures, and getting people together to discuss such TV shows as the prize-winning NOVA science series. Illinois launched a program to give greater visibility to Illinois writers, who are to lecture at 36 public libraries. New York Public Library and Pennsylvania's Osterhout Free Library ran TV shows featuring authors and other celebrities. Fair Lawn, New Jersey ran an author/book series; Great Neck, Long Island had lectures and an exhibit on its native son, F. Scott Fitzgerald; and New York's Mid-Hudson Library System booked filmmakers into local libraries to show and explain their craft.

Special programming for kids included a teach-in by local drama students at Washington's Spokane County Library and a creative writing course by a children's author at California's Riverside City and County Library.

Projects undertaken by the Art Libraries Society/North America and Indiana's Monroe County Public Library will give libraries everywhere access to valuable documentaries of New York artists and Indiana craftsmen.

Education for the people

There is debate within the profession on the propriety of libraries serving as open universities, but this trend is growing. Miami-Dade tried to counter staff resistance by getting both line staffers (including minority people) and supervisors in on project book selection.

Libraries participating in the College Entrance Examination Board's national "people's university" are breaking new trails. Besides designating certain branches as "adult learning centers," Enoch Pratt offers guidance via mail or telephone and mails books to its students. Atlanta set up a system-wide consulting service; Portland, Maine tried to get to such target groups as women, the unemployed, the handicapped, and the aging with a program that will eventually utilize everything from CATV to computers. St. Louis Public was the first to designate itself as a CLEP (College Level Examination Program) testing center.

The need for more cooperation between colleges offering nonresidential degree programs and libraries was pointed up by one study which found that students more often head for the public library instead of convenient college libraries. Cooperation is going on in such places as New York, where the Westchester Library System works with area colleges in assessing adult alternate education needs, and in California, where Chabor College and area public libraries work together in a home study project. In Illinois, the Great River Library System and area colleges have going a series of 45 college-level courses, scheduled on a circuit of 14 member libraries.

U.S. public libraries providing library service to colleges and universities didn't get much support from the Office of Education, which last year nixed their bid for Title II-A education funding. In Ontario, where public libraries have already been identified with higher education at provincial government levels, a drive is underway to help libraries—via direct government aid—buy more materials to support their new responsibilities. The Kitchener Public Library was one Ontario facility which couldn't handle the demand for titles during a trial-run lunch hour course series; it will rely on university backup next time around.

Some federal aid for alternate education is available: Ohio's Columbus Public Library got LSCA money to transform branches in nine inner city neighborhoods into "electronic learning centers"; Immaculate Heart College (Los Angeles) got an HEW demonstration grant for a prototype CLEP tutorial program. Foundations are also helping; the National Endowment for the Humanities fueled a second experiment in integrating public libraries with formal education when the Chicago Public Library was designated as the second "NEH Learning Library." (Boston Public was the first.)

"The concept of the library as a cultural center is catching on"

Outreach

Broad-gauge outreach programming is going on: the Chicago Public Library last year set up a new unit to consolidate its outreach efforts; the Hidalgo County Library System (Texas) won LSCA money to set up 17 bilingual centers for its Mexican American community. One indication of the scope of programming: the Berkshire Athenaeum library (Massachusetts) has run some 255 cultural events since 1970 for Pittsfield senior citizens. Budget cramped libraries, reported the New York Library Association, are trying to keep outreach projects going by stretching existing funding, shuffling staff, and calling on volunteers. Concern about the environment can undermine outreach: such was the case in Dade County, Florida, where citizens concerned about preserving Greynolds Park convinced Metro commissioners—via row-in protests—to find a new site for a branch library that was to have served senior citizens.

Besides such standard outreach as service to the homebound, libraries are reaching the deaf with sign language story hours and films, as well as teletypewriter reference service; and alerting patrons to national and area "hotline" numbers for consumer aid, alcoholism, and the like. New York's Suffolk Library System was the latest to help the handicapped and elderly get transportation and phone bill discounts. And Tulsa's library was picked as the home for a new Senior Citizen's Information and Referral Center because it keeps the longest hours of any municipal agency.

The college library community is doing such things as setting up a Braille map to help blind students get around campus, letting the handicapped check out microfiche readers, and delivering their books to dormitory rooms.

In 1975 ALA, various state agencies, and individual libraries worked to help out America's newest immigrants, Viet refugees, with books and special services. Tulsa Public made a tape to help Viet residents find their way around town.

Mailbook service, a vital element in many outreach programs, is too expensive to survive, say its detractors. One survey of U.S. libraries found that about half of them are having trouble getting mailbook operations off the ground. The Salt Lake County Library tried to revive its faltering service via a massive PR drive; it also started deliveries to emotionally disturbed kids. A few libraries have established thriving mailbook programs: Washington's North Central Regional Library and Wisconsin's Manitowoc County Library are among them.

Prisons

Libraries are committed to improving prison library service. A few managed to get money for prison programming under the Law Enforcement Administration Act, which too often pays for police artillery and presidential fortresses. Houston is using LEAA to get AV into the Harris County Juvenile Detention Center; Virginia Beach bought crime books to educate the public. Houston was one library that dipped into its own budget to get library service started; its pioneering work finally convinced the county to put up money for a new jail library—a first for Texas. Others are getting foundation aid. A grant to the San Francisco Public Library is paying for "a comprehensive educational and recreational library program for four county jails."

Resistance to prison programs from the jailers themselves has been pegged as a major obstacle to getting books behind bars. The California State Library tried to re-educate prison staff by putting on a Jail Library Services workshop at the Second National Jail Manager's Seminar in Sacramento. The Illinois State Library took another step with a new document on county jail library standards—one that goes a long way toward setting new rights for prisoners in both access to resources and participation in planning. One major breakthrough clocked last year: a new amendment to the Illinois Code of Corrections prevents the barring of inmates from prison libraries as a disciplinary measure—except for abuse of the library itself.

Libraries are helping in rehabilitation work on the outside: The Holmes Public Library is one of several Massachusetts libraries providing service to kids from halfway houses. California's Riverside City and County Public Library participated in an unusual experiment that gives young first offenders a chance to do community service rather than suffer a court record.

Some libraries are trying to break stereotypes about inmates: Washington, D.C.'s Martin Luther King Memorial Library displayed art work by prisoners, while hosting poetry and drama presentations by Lorton reformatory inmates.

AV in libraries

The Carnegie Commission on Education pointed up the desirability of getting more new educational technology into universities and their libraries, but the realization of this goal has been sporadic, mostly because of faculty resistance. If the academic community doesn't more clearly demonstrate its need for educational cable, the Federal Communications Commission could rescind its 1972 requirement that a free educational channel be provided.

But low academic standing coupled with a money shortage can stimulate AV involvement. Such was the case in South Carolina, where the state invested in Educational Television in an effort to get out of the academic basement. South Carolina, which now has the third-ranked ETV effort, pumped $6.8 million into ETV last year, while other states are curbing such spending. The economy crunch was a major incentive in the launching of a cable program at the University of Illinois at Chicago Circle; UI also offers a doctoral program for the scholar-technologists of tomorrow.

The student population explosion made cable a necessity at Oregon State University, which now has one of the most extensive programs in the country. Students are beginning to rely more heavily on AV: videocassette use at the University of Utah Libraries has zoomed from a mere 45 requests in 1973 to close to 5000 by 1975.

On the whole, public libraries are for AV, which is viewed as another means of getting to people who wouldn't tap library services otherwise. But not everyone believes video prophets who say CATV will transform daily life: Connecticut State Librarian Walter Brahm ticked off disappointing cable experiments by libraries in such scattered places as Suffolk County, New York and Oakland, California, while sardonically questioning claims that CATV can provide "just about every service except artificial insemination."

Meanwhile, successful AV programming keeps going on: the Mobile, Alabama, Public Library upgraded its CATV effort with new equipment for full-service video programming; the Framingham, Massachusetts, Public Library started broadcasting varied programming to the Puerto Rican community; and Maryland's Dorchester County Public Library got flooded with requests for the videotaping of community events and university workshops. The Public Library of Huntsville is the first in Alabama to get approval for a library operated radio station.

Promising cooperative efforts are getting started. A new network of public, school, and college libraries in the Lowell, Massachusetts area is running regular public affairs radio programming; the River Bend Library System (Illinois) and a nearby junior college are cooperating in a project that enables residents to take in, via audio or video cassette, college level courses; and New York's newly established Adirondack Bibliographical Library is circulating its growing collection of tapes free to individuals, schools, and service organizations. In Wethersfield, Connecticut, the public can borrow school-owned projectors through their public library.

Debate on AV copyright violations is still going on. But the National Archives and the CBS-TV network negotiated an agreement, whereby videotape copies of CBS broadcasts are available for research use at the Archives' Washington headquarters. Three broadcasting organizations (the Public Broadcasting Service, the Agency for Instructional Television, and the Great Plains National Instructional Television Library) tried last year to curb reproduction of their broadcasts, announcing that only school personnel can make reproductions, and that they must destroy tapes within seven days.

Bicentennial celebrations

U.S. libraries climbed aboard the Bicentennial bandwagon in 1975, coming up with wide-ranging programs celebrating the birth of the nation. State library agencies in Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Massachusetts coordinated such projects as Bicentennial workshops, bibliographies, displays, and traveling slide-tape shows. Iowa's State Library spearheaded a statewide effort to locate historical materials for a massive oral history project aimed at some 477,000 older Iowans. In some cases, libraries are serving as community Bicentennial headquarters: libraries in the Central Massachusetts Regional Library System were designated as Bicentennial information centers by the state commission.

Libraries in such scattered places as Mississippi and North Carolina planned American Issues Forum discussion series; Boston Public got area literary figures to participate in an impressive lecture series; and the Cleveland Public Library showcased historical contributions of its ethnic community via lectures, music, and dance performances. Libraries elsewhere are putting Bicentennial covered wagons on the road (California's Contra Costa Library System); broadcasting Bicentennial radio programs (Chicago Public Library); and recording newspaper history (W.A. Rankin Memorial Library, Kansas).

The Bicentennial is promoting gift giving in such places as Orange County, New York (where the Brotherhood Winery did the giving) and St. Augustine, Florida, where a women's group started the ball rolling by setting up a Bicentennial bookshelf.

"The National Endowment for the Humanities fueled a second experiment in integrating public libraries with formal education"

The first "NEH Learning Library" at Boston PL

Library security

Libraries that serve as community cultural centers are more often targets of theft. In 1975, the Malden Public Library (Massachusetts) got hit by energetic thieves, who vaulted a gate during daylight hours, and made off with a 1873 Winslow Homer oil. Portland, Maine's library lost the costliest items in its art archives. And Cleveland, which suffered the theft of five 18th Century chess sets, is trying to protect its rare books by an expensive locked shelving machine.

Older security problems, such as book theft, are reaching crisis proportions. One New Yorker stole over 15,000 books from NYPL branches in the past decade—a heist that was discovered only when the floor of the culprit's apartment library started to buckle. Canadian libraries now report annual losses in the neighborhood of $1 million; NYPL counts its annual losses at ten percent of its collection; and one Massachusetts library says at least 20 percent of its collection has vanished in 15 years. A major study being undertaken by the Society of American Archivists could pinpoint the extent of thievery from a new group of victims: archives and historical libraries.

Fraudulent library cards are helping book lovers in such places as Rochester, New York and Baltimore County build impressive private record collections.

Libraries aren't getting much help from police squads in curbing theft because most losses go undetected. They were urged at one New York workshop on library security to carry out regular inventories (few do); to develop concrete security policies—making sure staffers know exactly what to do in a crisis; and to consider closed circuit TV and alarm systems as a backup to such basics as adequate locks, burglarproof doors, and high intensity lighting (especially in remote, high crime areas).

Such security measures as tattle tale systems are curbing the theft of periodical volumes. But university and medical libraries are faced with a new problem: zooming periodical mutilation. Book mutilation is on the upswing at such places as the San Francisco Public Library, where a new "Jack the Ripper" got to scores of books on literary criticism and communism.

Libraries are getting back some stolen books and nonreturns by setting fines moratoriums: this strategy worked in 1975 for Iowa's Wartburg College and Waverly Public Libraries. The Boston Public will try amnesty during its Bicentennial celebration, but at its end, Boston will get tough with delinquent patrons. There is, however, a growing disenchantment with no fines and amnesty policies; many feel that they encourage holdouts.

Libraries are trying out new approaches to vandalism: the Lake Forest Public Library (Illinois) is trying to handle unruly kids with a volunteer security committee. The Salt Lake County Library System's Peterson branch installed a burglar alarm system following an assault by vandals who made off with anything not tied down. Dogs were put on the trail of vandals held responsible for a series of stack fires at the University of Chicago. And the Waterbury, Connecticut, Public Library was only one urban library that had to shut down branches because of problems with vandals.

New social problems are triggering new security problems, including muggings (Los Angeles Public Library); rape (Pittsburgh University's Hillman Library); butcherknife assaults (Lewis and Clark, Illinois, Library System); and problems in handling Viet Nam veterans wandering in from nearby VA Mental hospitals. These incidents point up the vulnerability of both library staff and patrons to violence of any kind—a problem growing in proportion. Libraries are trying to cope by providing staffers with escorts to their cars and self-defense programming.

There were a few new twists to the problem of staff dishonesty: Librarian of Congress Daniel Boorstin got nailed for "unwittingly" engaging in the "illegal practice" of using federally paid research assistants to write a book while he was at the Smithsonian. Jack Bryant, head of the Wilmington Institute Free Library and a Vigo County, Indiana, library business consultant got caught filching library funds. And Chicago Public Library Board President Ralph Newman got convicted for his involvement in Nixon's tax fraud, though Nixon's tax lawyer got off.

Arson is on the upswing and too frequently libraries lack basic protection. Vandals were blamed for fires that devastated the King County (Washington) Federal Way branch and the New Rochelle, New York, Public Library. A triple roman candle caused a fire which destroyed the library of the Bellemer Junior Public School in Ontario. And a fire of undetermined origin caused substantial damage to the Smith College library. Despite the rising damage, a great many libraries are still against sprinkler systems, though firemen view them as the best means of preventing massive fire loss.

There was one major flood catastrophe last year: a four-hour rainstorm led to the flooding of floor to ceiling basement stacks at Case Western Reserve's Sears Library. Harvard's Loeb Library sustained overnight water damage from a second floor leak, but a salvage crew managed to save all but three of the soaked books.

"Arson is on the upswing and too frequently libraries lack basic protection"

Valley Pub. Co. photo

Arson at King County, Washington's Federal Way branch

Looking ahead

The budget crises dominating 1975 will linger on, forcing many libraries (especially urban) to make the hard choices of deciding what services and programs must go. Libraries that have built up a constituency within the community and have won friends in political circles may prosper, but others may have to take in sail further, giving up the kind of special programming that is serving to establish libraries as a vital community resource. Next year will probably be a year of decision in such vital areas as the national network and copyright. Libraries will face further drains on their resources as more positions are eliminated and collection-building falters. And affirmative action may come to a standstill as threats of reverse discrimination suits grow, while the job market shrinks.

Caught between the exciting challenges of new roles, new technologies, and new visions of professional excellence—and a money drought which could last for years, American libraries in 1976 will have to fight against the prophets of retreat and take the new stringencies as an opportunity for creative development of library institutions and their fertilization with the insights of other technologies and other sectors of the society.

THE ISAD/RASD/RTSD-CCS sponsored Institute on The Catalog: Its Nature and Prospects, held in New York City on October 9–10, proved that interest in cataloging and catalogs is alive and well. The greatest living theoretician on descriptive cataloging, Professor Emeritus Seymour Lubetzky, maintained a fierce dedication to the integrity of the catalog, and to the importance of this integrity in making the catalog a useful tool for the user. Joe Rosenthal of the University of California, Berkeley, and Sanford Berman, Hennepin County Library (Minnesota), served as official reactors to each presentation. They both did a commendable job of reflecting a sense of unity in the program and providing a perspective for audience discussion, which at times became quite lively.

Highlights were a presentation by Joan Marshall (cataloger, Brooklyn College), who called for an alternative catalog code which would be designed to serve the needs of the nonresearch libraries of the country; Bill Welsh, director of the LC Processing Department, expounded on LC's current and future plans and its dedication to service to the nation's libraries; he felt that LC could be sufficiently responsive to eliminate the need for an alternative service; and the presentations by Kilgour and Malinconico, which stated diametrically opposed views regarding the role and impact of the computer on the catalog. Fred Kilgour, director of the Ohio College Library Center (OCLC) and hailed as the father of library networking, made a speech which attacked the traditional rules of cataloging with their focus on bringing together all the works of an author under the same heading. OCLC's data base does not include this traditional organization, but it does provide, through its on-line service, a search procedure using the first three letters of an author's name and the first three words in the title in question. This procedure (the OCLC "3,3 search key"), claims Kilgour, will provide an average of 32 items in the response, and will within this "mini catalog" bring together all the works of an author or versions of a title. This, in addition to the virtually unlimited access points possible with a computer based catalog, obviate—according to Kilgour—the need for rigorous control over the heading data used in a cataloging record. Mike Malinconico, a solid-state disciple of Dr. Lubetzky, who contributed significantly to the New York Public Library's book catalog and Automated Bibliographic Control system, countered with a vigorous argument for the integrity of the catalog and for the importance of the computer being an integral component in controlling cataloging data. He argued that sophisticated access techniques and the computer's intrinsic properties cannot by themselves compensate for lack of rigorous control over bibliographic data—if the catalog is to remain a truly useful library tool.

In his keynote speech and in his responses to all of the speakers who espoused a tolerance for the "degradation of the catalog's integrity," Professor Lubetzky demonstrated how essential it is to ordinary library service to have the catalog properly organize the works of an author, not to be unnecessarily redundant, and to avoid doing the catalog:

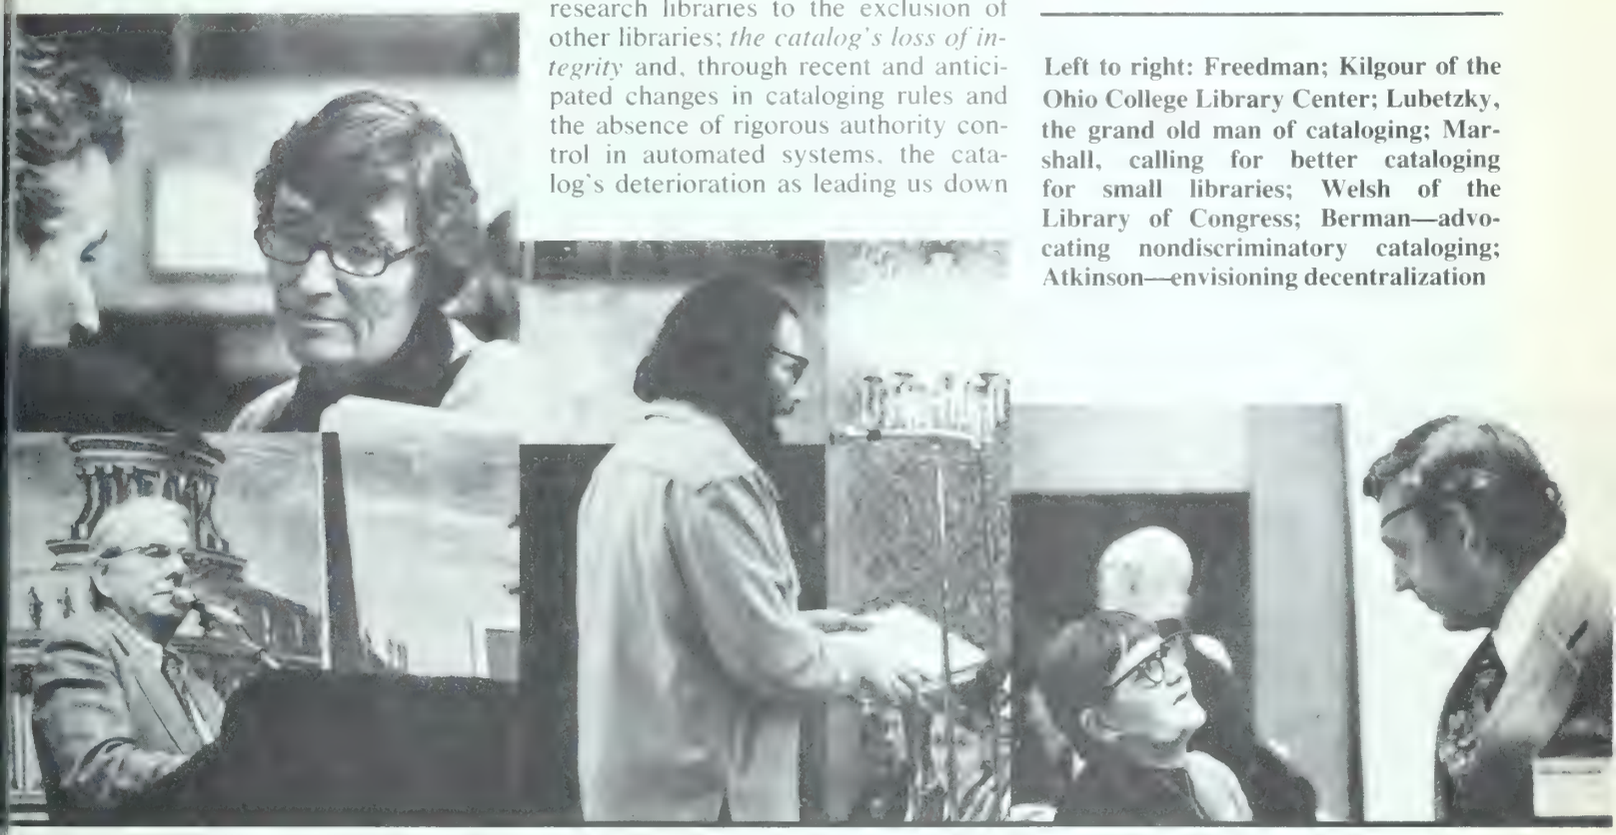
Maurice J. Freedman is Coordinator of Technical Services, The Branch System, at the New York Public Library

anything which would confuse the catalog user. Tracing a history of the ideology of cataloging, he viewed current events as essentially an ideological retrogression. For example, universal title entry for serials, he pointed out, advocated by many of the code revision people, would create severe problems for the user trying to find the work of a corporate body where the authorship was constant but the title changed each year (e.g., the annual reports of many public libraries). ISBD (the International Standard Bibliographical Description), said Lubetzky, is a step backwards because it introduces confusing punctuation, unnecessarily repeats the author's name in the title statement (for long corporate authors this is especially painful), and it is an example of "cooperation for its own sake"; he felt that meaningful participation in international standards and practices should include at least something useful for each participant.

Among the other speakers were Marvin Scilken (Orange, New Jersey, Public Library) with his totally user-oriented catalog cards; Hugh Atkinson with his Ohio State University Library electronic catalogs, which were concerned less with cataloging and more with library use; and Ken Bierman, the only noncontroversial speaker, who reviewed the present and future formats of alternatives, such as microform, to the card catalog.

There were three themes that regularly recurred during the Institute: the dissatisfaction with LC's subject cataloging, particularly its lack of sensitivity and contemporaneity and its seeming dedication to the service of research libraries to the exclusion of other libraries; the catalog's loss of integrity and, through recent and anticipated changes in cataloging rules and the absence of rigorous authority control in automated systems, the catalog's deterioration as leading us down the road to lower quality library service; and the catalog as a luxury no longer affordable, and the on-line computer, through automated search keys, providing even better access and lending all of the integrity a user really requires; present cataloging rules in this view are deficient and even anachronistic.

The institute on The Catalog was probably the single biggest ALA institute not associated with an annual or midwinter conference; it drew over 400 people. It is planned that the proceedings will be published, and ISAD (ALA's Information Science and Automation Division) is also planning to offer cassette recordings of the individual presentations. For further information, contact Donald Hammer, Executive Secretary, ISAD, ALA, Chicago, Ill. 60611.



Left to right: Freedman; Kilgour of the Ohio College Library Center; Lubetzky, the grand old man of cataloging; Marshall, calling for better cataloging for small libraries; Welsh of the Library of Congress; Berman—advocating nondiscriminatory cataloging; Atkinson—envisioning decentralization its nature & prospects

by maurice j. freedman

German libraries

WELSCH, Erwin K. Libraries and Archives in Germany.

Council for European Studies; dist. by University Center for International Studies, University of Pittsburgh, G-6 Mervis Hall, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15260. 1975. 275p. spiral-bound pap. $4.95.

This is a companion to the well-established French Libraries and Archives. Welsch, Bibliographer for Western Europe at the Memorial Library, University of Wisconsin-Madison, has put librarians, graduate students, and mature scholars alike in his debt by his well organized, up-to-date, comprehensive survey of major libraries and archives of West and East Germany. After an informative general introduction, he deals with individual libraries of the Federal Republic and then the G.D.R. Included are name of director, character and scope of collection, opening hours, restrictions of use for visitors, size of reading facilities, etc. The second part is devoted to a similarly thorough report on archives. This reviewer, who has visited many of these institutions, is impressed by the lucidity and accuracy of Welsch's presentation.—FELIX E. HIRSCH, PROFESSOR EMERITUS, TRENTON STATE COLLEGE, N.J.

LRC overview

VEIT, Fritz. The Community College Library.

Greenwood Pr. (Contributions in Librarianship and Information Science series, No. 14). 1975. 221p. index. ISBN 0-8371-6412-5. LC 72-843. $13.95.

At last a book that can be recommended as a text for graduate library school courses covering community college library/learning resource centers. This overview of library/media services in community colleges is appropriately oriented toward the total LRC approach as described in the ALA-AECT-AACJC "Guidelines for Two-Year College Learning Resources Programs." What a pity the author outdated this excellent work by using the term "library" in the title—even though he explains it in the preface. There is nothing wrong with a "library," but what he is describing is an LRC.

The brief introduction to community colleges is good for persons who are unfamiliar with these institutions. The various administrative charts show that there are many ways to organize an LRC for effective service. The same can be said of the floor plans shown.

Services to the faculty should include the role of the LRC in design and production of learning materials. The discussion of cooperative agencies did not mention those involving public and college libraries, and the information about California cooperatives was incorrect. The author also used 1968 California guidelines as one example of standards; these were changed long before the book was published. The same is true in the personnel section. ALA changed LTA to LMTA several years ago, and no mention was made of COLT, an important organization relating to paraprofessionals.

Despite these and a few more minor errors, this is an excellent overview of the community college LRC as it exists today and is an important addition to the literature in this field.—JOLEEN BOCK, INSTRUCTIONAL RESOURCE CENTER, COLLEGE OF THE CANYONS, VALENCIA, CALIF.

Automation for the novice

KIMBER, R. T. Automation in Libraries: Second Edition.

Pergamon. 1974. 240p. index. ISBN 0-08-017969-X. LC 74-13847. $15.

This book, like its 1968 predecessor, is predicated on the single library-single system philosophy of library automation development—an approach rapidly disappearing in favor of less hazardous, less costly methods. In the U.S., at least, the approach to automated systems is turning toward sharing responsibility and costs through network development or through leasing a commercial system, either of which avoids most of the burdens and risks of trial and error, tinker toy development. Our professional literature, with rare exceptions, has not yet begun to reflect these changes. Unfortunately, this book is not one of those exceptions. It is a typical, very elementary discussion of library automation and much of it was said in many places in the early 1960's.

Also, unfortunately, some statements are not correct and others lack currency. Referring to LC's RECON experiment as an operational data conversion project is incorrect as is referring to BALLOTS as a system designed for use by a number of cooperating institutions. To say that computer-based loan systems are most appropriate to the needs of large libraries and are restricted to situations where there is a large volume of loans ignores the trend toward networks of small libraries that has made computer circulation systems available to any library.

On the positive side is the clarity of writing; the chapter on bibliographic record structures, usually a muddy subject, is easy to understand. The illustrations are generally clear and appropriate. Occasionally a reference is obviously an out-of-date remnant of the earlier edition. Also, some statements make the reader wonder for whom the book was written. One classic example: "Most libraries lend books, periodicals and other materials to be read elsewhere by users."

In general, the book is useful to the novice who wants nothing more than a quick view of the library automation field and does not want information in any depth. There, are, however, many better sources available.—DONALD P. HAMMER, INFORMATION SCIENCE AND AUTOMATION DIVISION, AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION

Reference model

COWLEY, John, ed. Libraries in Higher Education: the User Approach to Service.

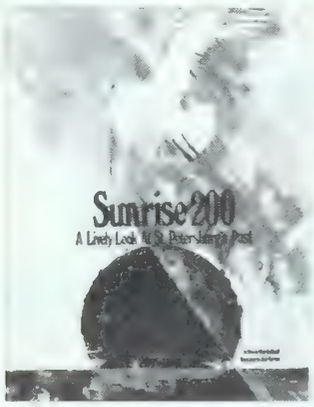
Clive Bingley & Linnet. 1975. 163p. bibliog. ISBN 0-208-01371-7 (Linnet). $11.50.

This too broadly titled book deals primarily with the work of the 15 subject specialist librarians at the Polytechnic of North London Library. Their job, which is given top priority, is to provide full reference services to students and faculty in only one or two departments. This is done through book selection, teaching library use, information service, and preparing current awareness bulletins. Of course their program depends on having librarians who can develop good rapport with faculty. Since most of the 29 other polytechnics (an entity comparable to our community colleges) have similar programs, the model has proven to be adoptable.

Although British in origin, the book reads much like a state-of-the-art of library instruction in the U.S. If you know enough about this field, Cowley is not required reading.—JAMES R. KENNEDY, JR., EARLHAM COLLEGE LIBRARY, RICHMOND, IND.

LJ:CHECKLIST



Chemistry news

What's Happening in Chemistry is freelance writer John Henahan's selection and accessible version of the significant developments in chemistry during 1975. Subjects covered include new chemical clues to diabetes; advances in immunochemistry; chemistry by laser light; lead poisoning; new polymers; insect control; new insights to the detection and treatment of cancer; future foods; old energy sources, new ideas; ozone and aerosol spray; the 1975 Nobel Prize; and the National Medal of Science. The 62-page booklet costs $1.50 (75¢ each for 15 or more) from Special Issues Sales, American Chemical Society, 1155 Sixteenth St., N.W., Washington D.C. 20036.

Geography guides

A Bibliography for Geographic Education, by John M. Ball, is a revision of a 1969 publication which, to its author's knowledge, was the first attempt to compile a general bibliography on the subject. Entries are listed alphabetically by author under general subject headings, which include curriculum, teaching methods, teacher education, college and university teaching, and research in geographic education. The 113-page publication, No. 2 in the Geography Curriculum Project of the University of Georgia, costs $2. The Project is also offering Bibliography on Geographic Thought, Philosophy, and Methodology, 1950—1974 (42p., $1) and Inventory of Recent U.S. Research in Geographic Education (48p., $1.50). Request copies from M. J. Rice, Project Director, Geography Curriculum Project, University of Georgia, 107 Dudley Hall, Athens, Ga. 30601.

Bantam boast

Bantam Books crows over its successes in The Bantam Story: Thirty Years of Paperback Publishing, by Clarence Petersen, a revised and updated version of a 1970 publication. The 167-page, indexed book is a paperback, of course. It is being distributed free by the company, 666 Fifth Ave., New York City, N.Y. 10019.

Film catalog

The Rhode Island Library Film Cooperative offers its 1975 catalog, which lists over 800 16mm films and includes short annotations. A subject index is appended. Send $1 plus 25¢ postage for the 58-page publication to David A. Green, Director of the Co-op, Warwick Public Library, 600 Sandy La., Warwick R.I. 02886. Checks should be made payable to the Rhodes Island Library Film Cooperative.

A Southern exposure

The life and times of the Sunshine City are explored in the splashy Sunrise 200: a Lively Look at St. Petersburg's Past. The collection of historical vignettes includes, among others, "The Search for Gold and Slaves,""Hurricanes That Made History,""Spring Training: Baseball in the Sun,""Historic Hostelry," "Shuffleboard Capital of the U.S.," and "The Waterfront," with a few puffs to the publisher, The St. Petersburg Times. Written by Times' staff member Dick Bothwell and illustrated by Times' artist Jack Barrett, the 11" x 13½" paperback is printed in full process color and black and white on high quality enamel stock. The 96-page publication costs $2.40 from Times Publishing Co., 490 First Ave. S., Box 1121, St. Petersburg, Fla. 33731

AV catalog

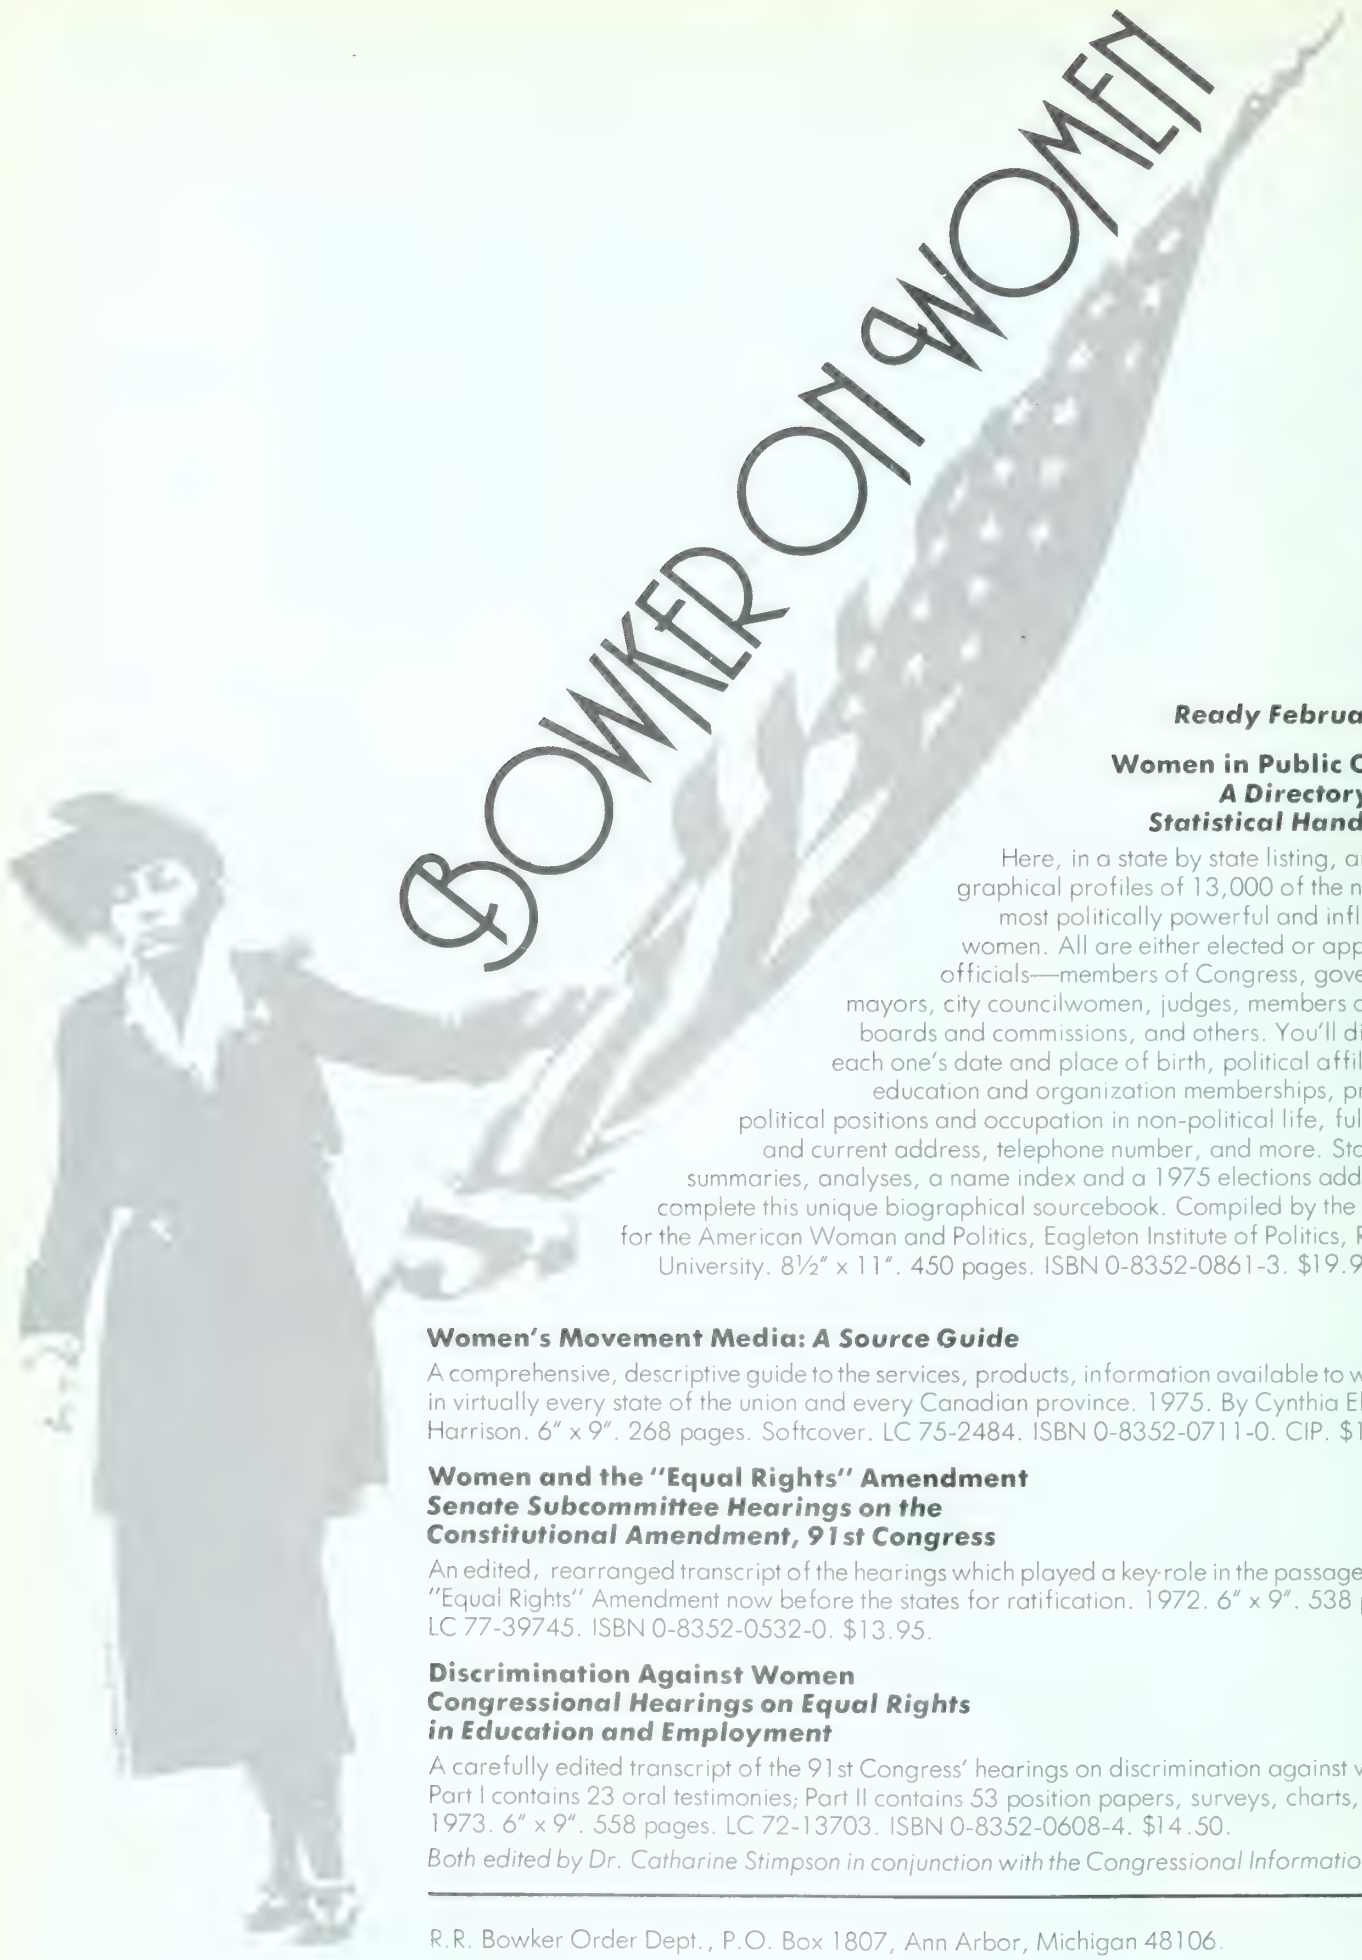
Catalog of Audiovisual Materials would be of particular interest to academic institutions serving bilingual-bicultural students, as many of the offerings listed are geared toward the Spanish-American community. Prepared by Hostos Community College of the City University of New York, the publication is arranged by types of materials (audio cassettes, motion pictures, video cassettes, etc.) and by subjects. The 54-page catalog is available for $1 to cover production and shipping costs from Professor Daniel Davila, Director, Instructional Resources Division, Hostos Community College, 475 Grand Concourse, Bronx, N.Y. 10451. Payment should accompany orders.

Guide to aging

Aging is a list of materials available in the Government Publications Department of the University of Connecticut Library. The annotated bibliography covers the period 1960-74, and lists those state, national, foreign and international documents which seemed most significant to the compilers. It is organized by subjects, which include demographics, process of aging, quality of life, employment, retirement, Social Security and Medicare, health care, mental health, long term care, economic and legal problems, housing, nutrition, transportation, safety, consumer problems, elderly minorities, volunteer programs, and government programs and conferences. Title and series indexes are included. The 68-page publication costs $3 from Acquisitions Dept., The University of Connecticut Library, Storrs, Conn. 06268. Payment must accompany orders.

Picture books

Two publications from the Department of Printing and Graphic Arts of Harvard's Houghton Library feature illustrations by Toulouse-Lautrec. A Bestiary reproduces 17 lithographic illustrations originally published in Jules Renard's Histoires Naturelles, a collection of simple prose poems of animal life. Numbered among the rabbits, deer, and birds which are sure to delight young and old is a pig, which in Renard's words, "already makes one think of sausages!" This third edition is 7¾" by 5¼" and is bound in soft green and white illustrated wrappers. It costs $2. Book Covers and Brochures contains reproductions of 24 little-known Lautrec "ephemera." Its 63 pages, 7½" by 5½", are contained within red, black, and white wrappers illustrated with a clown in poodle mask. Single copies cost $2.75. There is a mailing and handling charge of $1 for orders of $10 and less, and $2 for orders over $10. Please make checks payable to Harvard College Library and mail to: Dept. of Printing and Graphic Arts, the Houghton Library, Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass. 02138.



Ready February –

Women in Public Office
A Directory and Statistical Handbook

Here, in a state by state listing, are biographical profiles of 13,000 of the nation's most politically powerful and influential women. All are either elected or appointed officials—members of Congress, governors, mayors, city councilwomen, judges, members of state boards and commissions, and others. You'll discover each one's date and place of birth, political affiliation, education and organization memberships, previous political positions and occupation in non-political life, full name and current address, telephone number, and more. Statistical summaries, analyses, a name index and a 1975 elections addendum complete this unique biographical sourcebook. Compiled by the Center for the American Woman and Politics, Eagleton Institute of Politics, Rutgers University. 8½" x 11". 450 pages. ISBN 0-8352-0861-3. $19.95.

Women's Movement Media: A Source Guide

A comprehensive, descriptive guide to the services, products, information available to women in virtually every state of the union and every Canadian province. 1975. By Cynthia Ellen Harrison. 6" x 9". 268 pages. Softcover. LC 75-2484. ISBN 0-8352-0711-0. CIP. $13.95.

Women and the "Equal Rights" Amendment
Senate Subcommittee Hearings on the Constitutional Amendment, 91st Congress

An edited, rearranged transcript of the hearings which played a key role in the passage of the "Equal Rights" Amendment now before the states for ratification. 1972. 6" x 9". 538 pages. LC 77-39745. ISBN 0-8352-0532-0. $13.95.

Discrimination Against Women
Congressional Hearings on Equal Rights in Education and Employment

A carefully edited transcript of the 91st Congress' hearings on discrimination against women. Part I contains 23 oral testimonies; Part II contains 53 position papers, surveys, charts, tables. 1973. 6" x 9". 558 pages. LC 72-13703. ISBN 0-8352-0608-4. $14.50.

Both edited by Dr. Catharine Stimpson in conjunction with the Congressional Information Service.

R.R. Bowker Order Dept., P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106.
Outside Western Hemisphere: Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England.
All orders plus shipping and handling. Sales tax added where applicable.
(Prices subject to change without notice.)

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

Bill Katz, PROFESSOR, SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SCIENCE, STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK, ALBANY

Aviation magazines & annuals

By William McCall, Technical Information Library, Caterpillar Tractor Co., Peoria, Illinois

The following titles are suggested by Mr. McCall, a flyer and librarian of no mean experience. Most of the suggested titles are not in Magazines for Libraries—an oversight which Mr. McCall is endeavoring to remedy here.

Pilot's Yearbook

1974. Annual. $1.50. Ed: D. N. Werner. Werner & Werner Corp., 631 Wilshire Blvd., Santa Moni ca, Calif. 90401. Illus. adv. Aud: Ga, Hs, Sa.

Another Werner and Werner publication of the annual variety is the Pilot's Yearbook. Aimed at promotion of the sport to a general audience and to those already hooked, this contains articles of a diverse nature on the fun and safety aspects of the aeronautical world. Weather, controlled airspace, cross-country hops, instrument approaches, and the ever present possibility of emergency are topics explored by experienced pilot-authors. Trip reports, nostalgic reminiscences of winning one's wings, tense moments, and joyful times are wrapped up in this package publication of sport aircraft fun. "Psych" photos and really good b&w reproductions of exotic places, aircraft, and graphics add to the overall easy reading, pleasantly enjoyable effect of PY. Rating is difficult since PY does not take the form of the usual av-annual. Let it suffice to say that a varied audience of all ages and backgrounds with interest in sport aviation would appreciate this yearbook of flying adventure.

Airpower

1970. Bimonthly. $5.50. Ed: Joseph V. Mizrahi. Sentry Magazines, Inc., 1120 Ave. of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036. Illus. adv. Aud: Ga, Hs.

Airpower is of value to WWI and WWII aircraft buffs, modellers, and aircraft historians. Authentic good quality air combat photos are shown alongside actual pre-production and prototype photos rescued from the Smithsonian Institution. Designer corporation archives offer previously unseen and unpublished data on the world's combat aircraft. Detailed histories and pilot experiences are interwoven with the well captioned photos. A lithographed centerfold presents a reproduction of one of the aircraft discussed and appropriate squadron insignias. More important to the modeller is the color scheme which gives a true representation of the aircraft combat camouflage or dazzle pattern, and exact placement of rescue points and commander names. Wings, a sister avpub parallel in format and content, is again of significant value to the interest groups mentioned. Both magazines present in-depth, well researched, factual material linked to personal interviews with designers, combat aces, and aviation pioneers. A gold mine for those who desire detail concerning combat aviation history.

Homebuilt Aircraft Annual

1974. Annual. $1.50. Ed: Don Werner. Werner & Werner Corp., 631 Wilshire Blvd., Santa Mon ica, Calif. 90406. Illus. adv. Aud: Ga, Hs.

Now here is an annual that supports the egos of home-aircrafters and manages to convey that soul satisfying, dream-come-true mystique of the home fabricated plane. From kit plans to first test flight the homebuilt aircraft hobby is reviewed by a talented and knowledgeable staff. Exploring such intricate homebuilt aircraft secrets as center of gravity determination, aileron linkages, and test flighting, there is also a look at aircraft engines and adaptions. Multiple designs including exact scale replicas, amphibians, trainers, racers, and the elusive maximum performance on a minumum budget aircraft (the cry of the homecrafter) are presented to the reader in an entertaining, detailed, idea provoking style. Black and white photos of the most unusual aspects and ingenious equipment found aboard these experimental aircraft are interspersed with "psych" shots of these flying and ramp sitting labors of love. Mathematical formulas for equating various aerodynamic stresses are found in the articles as an aid to the aspiring hobbyist. Potential kit marketing entrepreneurs will find a medium in which to explain their Herculean efforts in producing fine aircraft kits, and also will undoubtedly attract an avid consumer-audience for those efforts. Excellent reading for the enthusiast which could be supplemented by some aircraft magazines during the year, including the parent of Homebuilt Aircraft, Plane and Pilot. A general audience, if not checked out in aviation, will still find the rampant enthusiasm of these intrepid designer-inventor-mechanic-pilots fascinating.

All Hands

Monthly. $8. Ed: John A. Oudine. Bureau of Naval Personnel, Nav-Pers-O, Supt. of Government Documents, U.S. GPO, Washington, D.C. 20402. Illus. Aud: Sa, Ga, Hs.

All Hands offers a unique look at the U.S. Navy. Offering feature articles involving naval history and individual unit memoirs, the magazine embarks on a recruitment centered drive by baring all faults and displaying the humanness of the service. The "New Action Navy" is presented to the reader with human interest flashes and mystique shrouded views of life at sea. Endless group portraits of beaming interest groups and inspection teams, threading their way through impeccable young people, serve the psychologically aimed objectives of the magazine. Film reviews, advice from senior personnel, an amateur cartoon section, and tradition centered articles make up the regular features of the journal. Scientific data and fleet improvements are part and parcel of All Hands, causing this work to be useful in another manner. Mainly an interest prodding publication with propaganda value for recruitment purposes, its secondary role does keep one abreast of the Navy, its changing attitudes, and its equipment variations.

Aviation mags and annuals will be concluded in the March 1 column.

TO HELP YOU KNOW NOW... AND TOMORROW...

BASIC REFERENCE BOOKS FROM GALE

Librarians rely on standard Gale books for the facts they need and for guidance to sources of information. The fundamental titles described below help satisfy information needs of the present . . . and future information needs will be met by revised editions of Gale books and by new volumes in our continuing series. Standing orders placed now will assure you of receiving future editions/volumes automatically.

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF ASSOCIATIONS:

A Guide to National and International Organizations. 10th Edition. (Ready March, 1976) Vol. 1, National Organizations of the U.S. The basic volume; over 25,000 changes plus over 1,000 new entries. $64.00. Vol. 2, Geographic and Executive Index. $45.00. Vol. 3, New Associations and Projects. Inter-edition subscription, with binder for new subscribers, $55.00.

DIRECTORY OF SPECIAL LIBRARIES AND INFORMATION CENTERS:

A Guide to Special Libraries, Research Libraries, Information Centers, Archives, and Data Centers. 3rd Edition. Vol. 1 covers 13,078 special libraries in 2,000 fields. $55.00. Vol. 2, Geographic-Personnel Index. $35.00. Vol. 3, New Special Libraries. Inter-edition subscription, with binder for new subscribers, $57.50.

RESEARCH CENTERS DIRECTORY:

A Guide to University-Related and Other Nonprofit Research Organizations Established on a Permanent Basis and Carrying on Continuing Research Programs. 5th Edition. 5,491 entries, of which 1,200 are new. $68.00. New Research Centers. Inter-edition subscription, with binder for new subscribers, $64.00.

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF GOVERNMENTAL ADVISORY ORGANIZATIONS:

A Reference Guide to Presidential Advisory Committees, Public Advisory Committees, Interagency Committees and Other Government-Related Boards, Panels, Task Forces, Commissions, Conferences and Other Similar Bodies. 2nd Edition. Gives up to 20 points of information on 2,678 organizations. $75.00. New Governmental Advisory Organizations. Inter-edition subscription, with binder for new subscribers, $65.00.

CONTEMPORARY AUTHORS:

A Bio-Bibliographical Guide to Current Authors and Their Works. Volumes 1-4 to 53-56 of the continuing series are in print. CA now covers 42,000 different authors. Volumes are revised regularly. $38.00/4-vol. unit.

CONTEMPORARY LITERARY CRITICISM:

Excerpts from Criticism of the Works of Today's Novelists, Poets, Playwrights, and Other Creative Writers. Four volumes in the continuing series are now in print. $38.00/vol.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE AUTHOR:

Facts and Pictures about Contemporary Authors and Illustrators of Books for Young People. Volume 8 just published. The continuing series now covers 1,600 different authors. $25.00/vol.

ACRONYMS, INITIALISMS, AND ABBREVIATIONS DICTIONARY:

A Guide to Alphabetic Designations, Contractions, Acronyms, Initialisms, Abbreviations, and Similar Condensed Appellations. 5th Edition. Vol. 1 contains about 130,000 entries. $38.50. (Ready February, 1976) Vol. 2, New Acronyms, Initialisms, and Abbreviations Dictionary. 1977 and 1978 supplements, each adding thousands of new acronyms. Subscription, $35.00. Vol. 3, Reverse Acronyms, Initialisms, and Abbreviations Dictionary. Entries arranged alphabetically by the meaning of the term acronymized. $45.00. (Ready Spring, 1976)

BOOK REVIEW INDEX.

Now indexes all reviews in over 250 periodicals. Subscription to bimonthly issues, $85.00/year. Annual clothbound cumulations from 1965 through 1974 are in print. $85.00/year.

BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARIES MASTER INDEX—1975-1976:

A Guide to More Than 800,000 Listings in Over Fifty Current Who's Whos and Other Works of Collective Biography. A new biennial index to biographical works emphasizing prominent living Americans. 3 Volumes. $65.00/set.

All Gale Books are sent on 30-day approval/write for complete catalog

GALE RESEARCH COMPANY

BOOK TOWER • DETROIT, MICHIGAN 48226

LJ BOOK REVIEW

The Contemporary Scene

Hixson, Joseph. The Patchwork Mouse.
Anchor: Doubleday. Feb. 1976. 240p. illus. LC 74-27583. ISBN 0-385-02852-0. $7.95. SCI

In 1974, Dr. W. Summerlin was suspended from his research position at the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center because he was found to have used ink to make his tissue transplant work appear successful. Hixson's book provides a detailed analysis of the ensuing scandal that rocked the scientific community with its charges of misrepresentation of experimental results. But on a much broader level, The Patchwork Mouse is a highly readable and engrossing account of cancer research in this country today, using the above incident as the thread which binds the story together. The roles that politicians, journalists, and private organizations have assumed in this emotion-laden area are also scrutinized. Recommended for both public and medical libraries.—Phyllis S. Mirsky, U.C.L.A. Biomedical Lib.

Krickus, Richard. Pursuing the American Dream: white ethnics and the new populism.
Anchor: Doubleday. 1976. index. pap. ISBN 0-385-05150-6. $3.50. SOC SCI/POL SCI

Krickus calls for the formation of a "New Populist" movement to be made up largely of white ethnic workers. It is his hope that this new coalition, working within the Democratic Party structure, would strike the proper balance between traditional party concerns for the working man and the more recent liberal leftist philosophy that proved so destructive during the McGovern campaign. Moreover, he believes that a caucus of labor and minorities, emanating from strong community bases, can press for a more equal distribution of wealth and a radical diffusion of power. Krickus is an ardent and effective spokesman for the white ethnic position, and his forceful analyses of the social and economic ills heaped on this silent majority cannot be ignored by thoughtful Americans. However, he leans heavily on the side of overgeneralization, and charges of racism will certainly be leveled at the author for his critical views on civil rights legislation. But these flaws should not detract from the importance of its message. Potentially the Krickus study could have the same impact on the Democratic party as Kevin Phillips' The Emerging Republican Majority had on the GOP in 1969.—Philip F. Mooney, Balch Inst., Philadelphia

Mayer, Martin. Today and Tomorrow in America.
Harper. Feb. 1976. 247p. LC 73-14273. ISBN 0-06-012872-0. $8.95. SOC SCI/PUBLIC ADMIN

Having spent many years investigating and reporting on various segments of American society (schools, advertising, television, banking), Mayer now offers a personal overview of the economic and political ills of our society as a whole. The planners of the 1960's, he believes, strained so hard for abstract justice that they lost sight of operational realities and did not respond to evidence that programs were not working. Mayer suggests that the proper function of government is to keep a "thumb on the scale" by manipulating economic variables to work toward politically agreed upon goals. The analysis is fundamentally conservative and, as Mayer says, "one man's meat." Specialists in many fields may want to argue with some of his unqualified pronouncements and proposals. (The Alaskan pipeline, nuclear power plants, and high land taxes are good; busing for desegregation, Medicaid, bilingual education are bad.) But all will find his arguments provocative and at least occasionally enlightening. It's not Mayer's best book, but he never writes a dull one.—Nancy C. Cridland, Indiana Univ. Lib., Bloomington

Perkus, Cathy, ed. COINTELPRO: the FBI's secret war on political freedom.
Monad, dist. by Pathfinder. Mar. 1976. 192p. illus. intro. by Noam Chomsky. LC 75-34818. ISBN 0-913460-41-9. $8; pap. ISBN 0-913460-42-7. $1.95. POL SCI/GOVT

The FBI's counterintelligence program (COINTELPRO) supposedly ceased in 1971, but during the 1960's it illegally spied on, harassed, and disrupted dissident racial and political groups, including the Socialist Workers' Party (SWP) and the Black Panthers. The Martin Luther King smear campaign was part of this operation. The COINTELPRO story is partially revealed in the some 100 sanitized FBI documents included in this book. Most of the documents concern SWP, the organization which secured them last year via the Freedom of Information Act. The facts and cases in this book are no longer shocking; they should, however, be available to every citizen who cares about freedom.—Kenneth F. Kister, West Palm Beach P.L., Fla.

CONTENTS

The Contemporary Scene 601
Reference 602
Art 605
Biography 609
Business & Economics 612
Communications 614
Education 614
History 614
Home Economics 617
Literature 618
Music 620
Philosophy 620
Poetry 621
Political Science & International Affairs 622
Psychology & Psychiatry 623
Religion 624
Science & Technology 625
Social Science 628
Sports & Recreation 630
Theater 631
Fiction 632
Book Review & Professional Reading Author Index 637

Library Journal reviews are indexed in Book Review Index and in Book Review Digest.

"Construction"

Recommended*

CONSTRUCTION
A Guide for the Profession
by Thomas A. Grow

"Legal and technical aspects of construction management. . . .Various chapters of the book are dedicated to estimating, bidding, contract preparation, business law, and the critical-path method. . . . Recommended."
—*Choice (November, 1975)
0-13-169326-3 $11.95

PRENTICE-HALL CIP
General Book Marketing Division
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632

Index to America:
Life and Customs-18th Century
by Norma Olin Ireland

A long-needed reference tool on American social life and customs is now being published in a 4-volume series. In conjunction with the nation's Bicentennial, the first available volume is the 18th Century; future volumes will cover the 17th, 19th, and 20th centuries. Social and home life, amusements and entertainment, educational progress, village and city development, agriculture and industry, personalities and politics are emphasized in each volume, with a brief inclusion of history and wars. The series is selective rather than comprehensive, concentrating on the most recent publications and including some classic, standard works available in university, public, and school library collections. Arrangement is alphabetical by subject. For complete description of the Series, write for a copy of our Publications Catalog.

In the Useful Reference Series of Library Books. ISBN 0-87305-108-4
Avail. Summer 1976.

F.W. FAXON COMPANY, INC.
Publishing Division
15 Southwest Park, Westwood, MA 02090

REFERENCE

Apple, Nick P. & Gene Gurney. The Air Force Museum.

Crown. 1975. 200p. photogs. index. LC 75-8670. ISBN 0-517-52018-4. $8.95. AERONAUTICS/REF

Essentially a guidebook to the museum located at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, this thorough examination of that collection of aircraft, weapons, and memorabilia greatly adds to, but does not replace, a visit to the 400-acre facility. Among literally hundreds of photos are occasional pictures of the planes in action, and the rather lightweight text packs a fair amount of aviation history into short essays that introduce the captioned photos. Sections on the Wright brothers and the space program are of interest also.—Mel D. Lane, Auburn, Calif.

Bawden, Liz-Anne, ed. The Oxford Companion to Film.

Oxford Univ. Pr. May 1976. 742p. illus., some color. $29.95. CINEMA/REF

A responsible production well up to the Oxford standard, and like the other Companions, loaded with rich nuggets that make it delightful to browse through as well as an indispensable reference tool. International in scope, wide-ranging but not all-inclusive, it treats film as an art form, as an industry, and as mass entertainment. Included are notes on 700 films, histories of companies, discussions of theory, explanations of technical processes, and biographies of actors, directors, writers, composers, producers. Illustrations are frame enlargements, not publicity stills, and (as a result?) mainly European. A two-column, self-indexing dictionary arrangement is employed. Entries tend to be brief, crisply written, and judgmental, but several pages may be devoted to a subject such as animation. The cut-off date is 1974, but there is permanent value here for student and buff.—Nina K. Wilson, Los Angeles County P. L. System

Brown, Joseph F. Dictionary of Speech & Hearing: anatomy & physiology.

Speech & Hearing Serv., Box 26361, Sacramento, Calif. 95826. 1975. 322p. illus. LC 74-76789. ISBN 0-914592-02-5. $10; pap. ISBN 0-914592-01-7. $7. BIOLOGY/REF

This specialized volume provides working definitions for more than 3200 anatomical and physiological terms relating to human speech and hearing. Terms and concepts from allied areas (embryology, acoustics, etc.) are also included. Concise definitions, the inclusion of synonyms, good format, large print, and the compact size are positive features of the book; however, it fails to provide pronunciation, syllabification, or etymology. In some instances the definitions found in this volume are more complete and more extensive than those found in Dorland's and/or Stedman's medical dictionaries. The appendix consists of 50 full-page anatomical illustrations.—James E. Bobick, Temple Univ. Libs., Philadelphia deMause, Lloyd, ed. A Bibliography of Psychohistory.

Garland. (Reference Library of Social Science, Vol. 6) 1975. 81p. index. LC 75-5140. ISBN 0-8240-9999-0. $18. HIST/BIBLIOG

Defining psychohistory as a complete "history of the psyche . . . a new science of patterns of historical motivations," and "the use of modern psychology in interpreting history," deMause discusses a number of converging developments in intellectual history that have been responsible for this new discipline. The bibliography of over 1300 items is arranged by author within six sections. Items of more than usual interest have been marked with an asterisk. The list is designed to aid historians, psychiatrists, psychoanalysts, political psychologists, sociologists, and educators. It includes journal articles, books, unpublished papers, and doctoral dissertations. An appendix provides an extensive annotated guide to the interdisciplinary literature of the history of childhood, including all forms of reference sources.—Fred Batt, Univ. of Cincinnati Lib.

Ferguson-Lees, James & others, eds. A Guide to Bird-Watching in Europe.

Scribners. Mar. 1976. 335p. illus. maps. LC 75-13937. ISBN 0-684-14475-1. $9.95. ZOOLOGY/REF

This book is designed for use by the amateur bird watcher in conjunction with one of the standard field guides for identification of European birds (e.g., those by Peterson, Heinzel, or Bruun). Leading field ornithologists from all over Europe have contributed one-chapter narrative accounts of the best places to go to see each country's birds. Each chapter contains brief information on ornithological societies and publications. There are simplified maps for each country, indicating the main geographical features and some areas of ornithological significance. A convenient table at the end of the book gives the status of 432 species in each of the countries discussed. An index would have made the book more useful for quick reference, but would also have added to its bulk (it's now a handy size for the traveler). Well worth considering.—Jean W. Boyer, UCLA Lib.

Green, William & Gordon Swanborough, comps. with additional material by M. J. Hardy. The Observer's World Airlines and Airliners Directory.

Warne. 1975. 384p. illus. index. LC 74-21043. ISBN 0-7232-1547-2. $15. AERONAUTICS/REF

This book provides comprehensive, detailed, and accurate information on the airlines of the world and the aircraft which they fly. The first section covers all airlines that fly scheduled services with aircraft with 30 seats or more, major charter operators, and important "third-level" airlines which use smaller equipment. A brief history of each airline is given, in addition to the route structure and the type and number of aircraft in its fleet. The second section includes a concise history, description, and specifications for principal airliners not in production, along with entries for all airliners currently being built. Multiview line drawings and a photograph of every airliner accompany each entry. The quality of these illustrations is excellent. This volume is clearly written and arranged for easy use.—Jerold M. Bernstein, Wickliffe P.L., Ohio

Havlice, Patricia Pate. Popular Song Index.

Scarecrow. 1975. 933p. LC 75-9896. ISBN 0-8108-0820-X. $30. MUSIC/REF

The 301 song books indexed here are collections of traditional songs; pop and rock songs; spirituals; hymns; children's songs; early madrigals and motets; sea chanteys; carols; humorous, protest, topical and game songs; and folk songs from all over the world. About 15 percent of these song books are also indexed in Robert Leigh's Index to Song Books (1964) and in Desiree De Charms and Paul Breed's Songs in Collections, an Index (1966). A few of the older collections are indexed in Minnie Sears's Song Index (1926) and Song Index Supplement (1934) and a few of the popular song folios are indexed in the J. B. Cook & Company's elusive series Finding List of Vocal Music (1948-). The song books are arranged alphabetically in the first part of Popular Song Index and are supplied with consecutive numbers for citation purposes. Part 2, the index of titles and first lines, is arranged by title and furnishes first lines, first lines of the chorus and the composer and lyricist if known, along with the number of the collection where the song may be found. A "see" reference appears from every first line to the appropriate title. Different songs with identical titles are easily identified through this feature. However, the same songs in two or more languages are listed separately. Part 3 lists alphabetically each composer and lyricist with his or her works indexed in Part 2. This is a substantial song index which will become a well-used guide to many current and retrospective collections common to larger public and university libraries.—Stephen Fry, UCLA Music Lib.

Hixon, Don L. & Don Hennessee. Women in Music: a biobibliography.

Scarecrow. 1975. 347p. LC 75-23075. ISBN 0-8108-0869-2. $12.50 MUSIC/REF

With the proliferation of women's studies there is increasing demand for such a book. However, this one doesn't completely fill the bill. A grave drawback is the omission of performers in the popular field. Some important contemporary figures are slighted; thus, among conductors we get a listing for the Countess of Radnor(19th Century) but none for Sarah Caldwell. There are misspellings, mistakes in dates, and faulty cross referencing ("Elfrieda Winn, Mary see Williams, Mary Lou"; no listing for Williams, however, occurs—since she is a jazz performer!) The "relatively detailed entries" promised often turn out to be something like "20th Century American soprano." The book does refer one to 48 more detailed biographical sources. Reference librarians will doubtless buy this any way. However, it badly needs revision and supplementation.—Dika Newlin, Sch. of Fine & Performing Arts, Montclair State Coll., N.J.

Larousse Encyclopedia of the Animal World.

Larousse. 1975. 640p. ed. by A. R. Waterston. intro. by Desmond Morris. color illus. index. LC 75-7569. ISBN 0-88332-028-2. $50.

ZOOLOGY/REF

With more than 1000 superb photographs, this remarkable volume is a systematic descriptive survey of the animal kingdom commencing with the protozoans and terminating with mammals. Each order, class, or genus is given a general yet detailed description followed by individual treatment of typical species, with notes on structure, function, and habitat. The photographs vividly capture the vast domain of the animal world, and the illustrations and intriguing text are nicely balanced, with emphasis on vertebrates yet sufficient coverage of invertebrates. This is a magnificent treasury combining popular appeal with impeccable scholarship. Particulary recommended for school and public libraries.—James E. Bobick, Temple Univ. Libs., Philadelphia

a milestone in literary exploration

COMPREHENSIVE INDEX TO ENGLISH-LANGUAGE LITTLE MAGAZINES, 1890-1970

now available

For the first time, 100 important English-language little magazine titles (both foreign and American) have been completely indexed from their beginning issues through their last issues, or 1970. These 100 distinct "experiments in literature" characterized as "little magazines" have been chosen for Series One by two distinguished experts in the field of literature: Professors Charles Allen and Felix Pollack. The Index provides access for the first time to many existing works until now "lost" to scholars. In addition to early texts of major authors, the only published works of secondary authors can now be easily located.

. . . over 6,000 pages
. . . over 200,000 entries
. . . over 33,000 contributors

Edited by Marion Sader.
Series One. 9 volumes.
Millwood, N.Y., 1976.

LC 74-11742 ISBN 0-527-00370-0 clothbound $590.00

For further information, or to place an order, please write or call:

Kraus-Thomson Organization Limited
Route 100, Millwood, New York 10546
(914) 762-2200

See the most complete reference work on animal life.

The International Wildlife Encyclopedia

20 volumes magnificently illustrated.

"An excellent encyclopedia!...The information provided is the most recent, particularly on such things as recent classification changes for certain animals and figures on animal populations, especially of endangered species..."

—Instructor

"There is no other publication to which Encyclopedia of Wildlife can be readily compared in scope and treatment...It is recommended."

—Booklist

For your FREE World of Animals wall chart and further information, write to:

Purnell Educational
850 Seventh Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10019

Milgram, Gail Gleason, ed. Alcohol Education Materials: an annotated bibliography.

Rutgers Center of Alcohol Studies, New Brunswick, New Jersey 08903. 1975. 304p. index. LC 74-620158. ISBN 0-911290-44-3. pap. $12.50. HEALTH/BIBLIOG

This bibliography is different from the others put out by the Rutgers Center in that audience level is indicated for each item listed. Milgram claims that the items included represent all the material gleaned from the Rutgers Center, from approximately 600 public and private publishers and organizations in the U.S. and Canada, from state departments of education, mental health agencies, and liquor control boards for the period from 1950 to May 1973. Maybe so, but why then is a book like Andrew Sinclair's excellent study of prohibition (1963) missing? Despite important omissions, this bibliography, because of its intelligent annotations, is useful for anyone who needs or wants to know something about current alcohol use. Recommended.—Carol Gelderman, Dept. of English, Univ. of New Orleans

Morini, Simona. Simona Morini's Encyclopedia of Health and Beauty.

Bobbs. 1976. 426p. illus. index. LC 75-6403. ISBN 0-672-51913-5. $17.50. HEALTH/REF

Although topics are arranged alphabetically in this book, its coverage is hardly encyclopedic. It is an intriguing potpourri with entries ranging from a few lines to three or four pages in length, from abortion to wigs by way of brassieres, breast cancer, obesity, and tennis toe. Adequately researched and well written by a former Vogue editor, it is best on subjects relating to plastic surgery, about which she has written before (Body Sculpture, Delacorte, 1972). It covers typical women's complaints (backache, fatigue, insomnia) and some of their remedies; nutrition; birth control; many types of cosmetics. Nothing under depression, stress, cervical cancer, uterus or most diseases. Capitalized words within articles indicate related pieces, and there is an index. Incompleteness makes the book of minor usefulness as a reference work, but most readers will enjoy it for browsing.—Peggy Champlin, California State Univ. Lib., Los Angeles

Newby, Eric. The Rand McNally World Atlas of Exploration.

Rand McNally. 1975. 288p. intro. by Sir Vivian Fuchs. illus., some color, maps, some color. bibliog. index. LC 74-27897. ISBN 0-528-83015-5. $25. EXPLORATION/REF

Newby, author of numerous books on travel, has written a straightforward, comprehensive but superficial history of exploration from the Phoenicians to the Space Age. The explorers of America, the Poles, Africa, the Pacific, as well as those of Arabia and Asia (who are usually slighted by the historians), are fairly well covered. Unfortunately the physical volume is cumbersome and the text is printed in three columns, which makes reading difficult. This book falls uneasily between the coffee table and the reference shelf. Its superficial maps are not as useful for reference as the maps in Gail Roberts' Atlas of Discovery (LJ 2/15/74).—J. F. Husband, Boston State Coll. Lib.

Photo-Atlas of the United States: a complete photographic atlas of the U.S.A. using satellite photography.

Ritchie. 1975. 127p. LC 75-18099. ISBN 0-378-04690-X. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-378-04692-6. $5.95. REF

This volume incorporates more than 70 selected color and duotone photos taken by high altitude aircraft and orbiting space vehicles. Each picture encompasses about 60,000 square miles and is reproduced in formats up to 12" x 15". Larger cities, major political boundaries, mountain ranges, and drainage patterns are annotated and described in a concise marginal text. Photo legibility ranges from fair to excellent. Coverage extends to all 50 states but excludes American Samoa, Guam, Puerto Rico, and the US Virgin Islands. Technical photographic data and locational indexes are omitted. Overall, a valuable adjunct to conventional atlases, containing uniquely explicit information on site, shape, and extent of both manmade and natural features in the USA.—Lawrence E. Spellman, Princeton Univ. Lib.

Ricks, Beatrice, comp. Henry James: a bibliography of secondary works.

Scarecrow. (Author Bibliographies) 1975. 461p. index. LC 75-22128. ISBN 0-8108-0853-6. $17.50. LIT/BIBLIOG

This extensive compilation lists upwards of 4000 items, which are grouped under four headings: biography, works (where critical studies of specific works are listed under the specific works' titles), general criticism, and bibliography. Entries are cross-referenced, and many are annotated; where they are not, it is sometimes difficult to estimate the usefulness of a given entry. Reviews, dissertations, and foreign-language items (I noticed entries from French, German, Italian, Japanese, and Hungarian journals) are covered. There are both topical and name indexes. There are errors, but far fewer than might be expected.—David Kirby, Dept. of English, Florida State Univ., Tallahassee

Rimer, J. Thomas & Robert E. Morrell. Guide to Japanese Poetry.

G. K. Hall. (Asian Literature Bibliography). Mar. 1976. index. LC 74-20610. ISBN 0-8161-1111-1. $12. LIT/BIBLIOG

This annotated bibliography focuses on English translations of Japanese poetry from the beginnings of the Japanese poetic tradition to the present. It follows the general pattern set out in earlier volumes of the series. There is a general introduction to the subject and a historical sketch outlining the development of Japanese poetry accompanied by references to the pertinent secondary literature. The bibliography proper is arranged chronologically and includes studies and anthologies as well as translations of the works of individual poets. Each citation is accompanied by a descriptive and evaluative annotation. The usefulness of the volumes in this series cannot be overemphasized. In any reference collection they will constitute basic reference sources for both the general reader and the specialist.—Warren Collins, Time-Life Educational Systems, Ltd., Tokyo

ART

Boisselier, Jean. The Heritage of Thai Sculpture.

Weatherhill, dist. by Lippincott. 1975. 269p. photogs., mainly color by Hans Hinz. commentaries by Jean-Michel Beurdeley. LC 75-7515. ISBN 0-8348-0109-4. $60.

ARCHAEOLOGY ART

A detailed, scholarly study of the stylistic development of Thai sculpture, handsomely produced and illustrated with 40 color plates and more than 100 black-and-white illustrations. Boisselier's discussions draw heavily on recent discoveries and on his archaeological on-site expertise, as well as on his knowledge of the Theravada Buddhist tradition. Beurdeley adds chapters on collecting Thai sculpture and on iconography (much of this has been explained previously by Alexander B. Griswold). A glossary, a complex chronology, a bibliography, and an index are also included. The translation seems adequate. Larger art and university collections will find this a valuable addition to the two catalogs edited by Theodore Bowie, The Sculpture of Thailand (Asia Society, 1972) and The Arts of Thailand (LJ 5/15/61).—Margot Karp, Pratt Inst. Lib., Brooklyn

Butler, Ruth. Western Sculpture: definitions of man.

New York Graphic Society: Little. 1975. 304p. illus. index. LC 74-21497. ISBN 0-8212-0429-7. $17.50. ART

There is a great need for general surveys of sculpture, and thus Butler's comprehensive study (covering 30,000 B.C. to the present) will be most welcome. While the author discusses sculpture as an independent art form, she also considers, where pertinent, its relationship to architecture and painting. She presents works of familiar and lesser-known sculptors, and emphasizes the different ways that individual cultures approach themes. The illustrations are well-chosen and they afford good, close-up details. Butler's penetrating analysis and the illustrations clearly depict the development of sculpture through the centuries and its relevance to other contemporary art forms. —Elsie M. Schmutz, Graduate Sch. Lib., C.U.N.Y.

The Chase, the Capture: collecting at the Metropolitan.

Metropolitan Museum of Art. 1975. 234p. essays by Thomas Hoving & Others. illus. LC 75-34076. ISBN 0-87099-139-6. $7.95.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art: notable acquisitions, 1965-1975.

Metropolitan Museum of Art. 1975. 300p. fwd. by Thomas Hoving. pref. by Olga Raggio. illus. LC 75-31761. ISBN 0-87099-141-8. $12.50. ART

Over the past decade the Metropolitan Museum has aggressively acquired more than 15,000 works of art. To display a sampling of these wide-ranging treasures, the museum has organized a show entitled "Patterns of Collecting." The two volumes under consideration grow out of this current exhibition. In The Chase the curatorial staff—and particularly Director Hoving—describe with varing degrees of completeness the procedures and protocols of collecting. The most extensive and detailed of the chapters is Hoving's, in which he relates with detective-like suspense and readability the processes by which masterpieces (e.g., the Euphronios krater and the Bury St. Edmunds Cross) were acquired.

PLEASE NOTE that the photographs in "Hills of Home" (LJ 2/1, p. 522), incorrectly attributed to Bob Minick in the text of the review, were taken by Roger Minick.

Excellent*

TWO HUNDRED YEARS OF AMERICAN CLOCKS AND WATCHES

by Chris Bailey
Photography by John Garetti

"If a library has only one book on the subject, it should be this fine general history. With a thorough index making it an excellent reference tool . . . will satisfy almost every library patron interested in American clocks and watches."
—*Library Journal
A Rutledge Book
0-13-935130-2 $25.00

PRENTICE-HALL CIP
General Book Marketing Division
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632

Know & claim your AFRICAN NAME
40 Page Paperback
Full of African names, their meaning and pronunciation.
$3.50 p.p.

RUCKER PRESS INC.
118 So. Broadway, Sta. B
P.O. Box 7025 Dayton, Ohio 45407

THE WOMEN'S LIBRARY

"A well-researched and helpful series... a publishing program dedicated to open, factual discussion of the special medical and personal needs of women. The style is conversational and designed to allay fears and misconceptions. Each volume has qualified medical personnel as consultants."—ALA Booklist.
"Straightforward, readable...The primary authors are not medical specialists (though the books have been read by physicians for accuracy); they use little jargon, but do choose appropriate medical terminology and explain the terms in the text and glossary. The content of the volumes... is accessible for referral through the good organization and section headings; and the diagrams are uncomplicated and easy to refer to from the text... These works would be popular in general library collections...."—Library Journal.

BIRTH CONTROL
by Tarvez Tucker.
Paperback, $2.95
440-04624-6

MENSTRUATION
by Hilary C. Maddux.
$5.95 440-05840-6

PREPARED CHILDBIRTH
by Tarvez Tucker with Elisabeth Bing.
$5.95 440-07259-X

VAGINAL HEALTH
by Carol V. Horos.
$5.95 440-09296-5

RAPE
by Carol V. Horos.
$5.95 440-05996-8

Each volume illustrated with line drawings.

Published by
The Tobey Publishing Co., Inc.
Distributed by
Dial/Delacorte

DELL PUBLISHING CO., INC.
1 Dag Hammarskjold Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10017

Notable Acquisitions is merely a selective catalog of some 1300 items reflecting these last ten years of aggrandizement. There seems little purpose to this latter volume—the spectrum of works is so broad, the plates are so modest, and the citations are so minimal. Whereas The Chase affords useful insights into the museum's operations and the ongoing development of our most important artistic repository, Notable Acquisitions is little more than a dull potpourri, perhaps useful for the gallery goer but without value for libraries.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York de Walterskirchen, Katalin. Paul Klee.

Rizzoli Internat. Pubs., 712 Fifth Ave., N.Y.C. 10019. 1975. 72p. tr. by Jack Altman. illus., mainly color. bibliog. LC 75-18525. ISBN 0-8478-0002-4. $14.95; pap. ISBN 0-8478-0007-5. $8.95. ART

A readable, popular survey of the basic themes and concepts in Klee's work. Organized under predominate elements ("The Show," "The Animals," "Light"), this is essentially a well-illustrated picture book. Each section contains an introductory paragraph and there are numerous illustrations (96 total, 53 in color). Included in the interesting, informative annotations are frequent quotes from Klee's writings. Not much here for the specialist, but an excellent introduction for the general reader.—John Harvath Jr., Houston P.L.

Excellent*

OBJECT AND IMAGE
An Introduction to Photography
by George M. Craven

"Unique . . . [an] excellent explanation of the relevance of an image to its subject. . . . Presents the student with a rich choice of expressive style. . . . One of the best. . . . Maintains the importance of the end product—the photograph—and will retain its importance for years to come."
—*Choice (October, 1975)
Photographs
0-13-628925-8 $11.50

PRENTICE-HALL CIP
General Book Marketing Division
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632

Emilia Romagna by Riccardo Bacchelli & others.

Abner Schram. 1975. 440p. tr. by Rudolf G. Carpanini & Margaret Meringer. illus., some color. bibliog. $50.

Toscana. by Umberto Baldini & others.

Abner Schram. Feb. 1976. 511p. illus., some color. bibliog. $50. HIST. ART

Emilia Romagna has a considerable visual heritage, best expressed in the works by its painters, including Correggio, the Caracci, Reni, and Guercino. This volume is concerned essentially with that area's artistic tradition, although it contains shorter essays on the geography, economy, history, and literature of the region, including also archaeological material from earliest times through the period of Roman domination. Late antique Christian Ravenna merits a chapter of its own and the remainder of the volume is divided into six sections on painting, sculpture, and architecture before and after 1600. As with the preceding volume (Lombardia, LJ 11/15/75) in this handsomely produced series, there are some defects of format. Again, however, the positive value of the work transcends these problems and recommends Emilia Romagna to larger collections.

Toscana includes a summary consideration of Tuscan geography, economy, history, and literary heritage, but most of its coverage is devoted to a regional art historical survey. Actually, the art of Tuscany is too rich, complex, and significant to be treated comfortably within a single tome. The terse commentaries provided here will be of small service to either the novice or the serious student. Although there are more than 500 reproductions, they are drawn from a visual tradition which is already well documented in most collections. The absence of a serviceable map, an index, and figure numbers in the text detracts further.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Fong, Wen. Summer Mountains: the timeless landscape.

Metropolitan Museum of Art. 1975. unpaged. illus. LC 75-23008. ISBN 0-87099-135-3. slipcased $25. ART

Summer Mountain, a Northern Sung handscroll in the Metropolitan Museum is the focal point of Fong's interesting stylistic analysis of 25 paintings (from 1000 to 1070 A.D.). The importance of landscape in Chinese life, art, and thought, and the development and application of the theorists' views on the technique of landscape painting are the primary concern of this concise yet comprehensive text. The structural analyses of scrolls located in various museums are accompanied by sepia illustrations and details. Sizes are rarely provided, a surprising omission in a museum publication. The final third of this book is devoted to a color fold-out and to details of Summer Mountain. This volume complements Fong's Sung and Yuan Paintings (LJ 6/15/74). Specialized libraries will want to add this handsome new publication; but other libraries should find the earlier publication sufficient.—Jacqueline Sisson, Fine Arts Lib., Ohio State Univ., Columbus

McMullen, Roy. Mona Lisa: the picture and the myth.

Houghton. 1975. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-17837. $12.95. ART

The genesis of the Mona Lisa and the attendant artistic and cultural accretions are the themes of this unusual work. The book focuses first on Leonardo's personality, the dating of the panel, and the unresolved identity of the sitter. Then it offers an informed consideration of the formal and iconographic aspects of the compositions, including the fluent pose, the position of the pudgy hands, the infamous smile, and the artists's techniques. The second half of the book surveys Mona Lisa's continuing artistic and intellectual impact, and this is even more interesting than the earlier discussions. There are also chapters devoted to Freud's faulty analysis of the artist and the 1911 theft of the painting. The aesthetic ambivalence, popular enthusiasm, and commercial exploitation of our own century are also nicely delineated. Although not without flaws, this well-narrated and engaging book should have a wide popular appeal.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Rodriguez-Aguilera, Cesareo. Picassos in Barcelona.

Rizzoli Internat. Pubs., 712 Fifth Ave., N.Y.C. 10019. 1975. 224p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 75-20950. ISBN 0-8478-0005-9. $45. ART

This attractive volume, published originally in Spain, is a valuable catalog of Picasso works (excluding the early pieces given by the artist in 1970 to the Picasso Museum) in public and private Barcelona collections. It offers the opportunity to examine, both visually and textually, the range of his oeuvre, his development of themes, and the versatility of his technique in all media—painting, graphics, ceramics, and sculpture. Additionally there are brief discussions of the history of the Picasso Museum and of Barcelonian collectors. The bibliography in this work informs us of otherwise inaccessible Spanish references, and the high-quality reproductions (128 in color, 1074 in black and white), with accompanying entries, supplement the descriptive text.—Robin Kaplan, Los Angeles County Museum of Art Lib.

Seuphor, Michel. Abstract Painting in Flanders.

Abner Schram. Feb. 1976. 315p. color illus. bibliog. index. slipcased $70. ART

Seuphor, a well-known Belgian critic and painter, and three collaborators have produced an extravagant survey of modern Flemish painting. They provide numerous tipped-in plates accompanied by an overview of the work of more than 100 Flemish painters, with brief biographical commentaries on major artists. Seuphor, in particular, writes in an anecdotal but insightful manner, decrying the provincialism of his native land while revealing the precocity of abstract Flemish painting. A selective chronological table ranks Flemish developments in correspondence with modern artistic events.

Strictly a collector's item or for specialized libraries.—Barbara Hornick, Univ. of Pittsburgh at Bradford Lib.

Van Der Marck, Jan. George Segal.

Abrams. 1975. 233p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 74-13110. ISBN 0-8109-0488-8. $37.50. ART

Segal, who casts in white plaster directly on his models and then places them in the context of other assembled objects, is the subject of the burdensomely heavy prose of Van Der Marck. The author, who attempts to remove Segal from "art-historical limbo," gives in-depth coverage to Segal's work from the years 1961-1972; unfortunately, the text seems to be a premature entombment of breathing artist. However, the plates are first rate. Comprehensive art libraries will therefore want to acquire this for visual content; other libraries should look for William Seitz's George Segal (Abrams, 1972), which gives briefer coverage at a lower price.—Hara L. Seltzer, Rutgers Univ., Graduate Sch. Lib. Service

Architecture

Alpern, Andrew. Apartments for the Affluent: a historical survey of buildings in New York.

McGraw. 1975. 166p. fwd. by Harmon H. Goldstone. illus. index. LC 75-17692. ISBN 0-07-001372-1. $24.50.

URBAN AFFAIRS/ARCHITECTURE

Before the late 1870's, affluent American city dwellers lived either in detached houses or in some variation of the row house. But Richard Morris Hunt's Stuyvesant apartment house changed this trend and forever altered the face of New York. Alpern's book not only traces the century-long evolution of construction method and apartment layout, but it also serves as a documentation of urban social history. Much attention is given to those structures that reflect the exuberance of Beaux-Arts New York and that provide the city with many of its most enduring and beloved landmarks. The book also traces the impact of more sophisticated technology, limited site space, and restricted personal wealth. Contributing significantly to the value of Alpern's study is its inclusion of a wealth of photographs and original floor plans (unfortunately, some of the plans are drastically reduced in size). A worthy addition to the study on New York architecture.—Samuel Allen Streit, C.C.N.Y. Lib.

Puppi, Lionello. Andrea Palladio.

New York Graphic Society: Little. 1975. 465p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 74-21496. ISBN 0-8212-0645-1. $47.50. ARCHITECTURE

The intellectual subtlety and serene classicism manifested in Palladio's architecture set him apart even in that era of extraordinary talents. A prodigious master, his buildings and theoretical writings have had a pan-European impact. This beautifully produced monograph richly documents the totality of his known oeuvre. At the heart of this volume are its 629 vivid reproductions. These are complemented by a carefully detailed, chronologically ordered catalogue raisonné. The palaces, villas, churches, and theaters, as well as the destroyed, uncompleted, or unexecuted projects, are included and are fully elaborated in considerable scholarly detail. The brief but rather bewildering opening essays constitute the work's only serious defect; much of Puppi's terminology is eccentric, and the exposition of ideas often lacks clarity. James Ackerman's Palladio (Penguin), a reasonably priced and more lucid essay, makes a useful companion to the Puppi work and should by itself fulfill the needs of smaller collections.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Decorative Arts & Crafts

Braun, Susan Rogers. Miniature Vignettes.

Scribners. 1975. 128p. illus., some color. index. LC 75-11962. ISBN 0-684-14378-X. $14.95. CRAFTS

Here, vignette applies to a certain type of three-dimensional setting within a frame. Actual miniature furniture, household effects, etc., are placed against a pictorial background. The quality emphasized that separates the vignette from a diorama is the establishment of a feeling of habitation in the scene while omitting actual human and animal figures. The book is comprehensive in its directions, particularly as to determining scales, creating pieces, and selecting backgrounds; it has lists of suggestions, it is well-illustrated with excellent color photographs and line drawings, and gives supply sources. Especially good bazaar and Bicentennial source; a good hobby for both the crafts beginner and the more advanced.—Myreen Nicholson, Norfolk P. L., Va.

Méras, Phyllis. A Yankee Way with Wood.

Houghton. 1975. 255p. illus. LC 75-14221. ISBN 0-395-20423-2. $14.95. CRAFTS

Méras has written a capsulized narrative about wood crafts of New England. In a sense it is a Yankee Foxfire Book, for she presents each craftsperson and explores not only his individual craft but also describes his way of life and, usually, a bit of personal philosophy. There are instructions for building such diverse items as a ship's wheel, a briar pipe, an apple ladder, a birch-bark canoe, and a duck decoy. Often one starts by chopping down just the right tree. The book exudes a feeling of love for wood and what it represents, a certain relaxation with Nature.—Ellen L. Turner, formerly with the Inst. for Sex Research, Bloomington, Ind.

Morrow, Mable. Indian Rawhide: an American folk art.

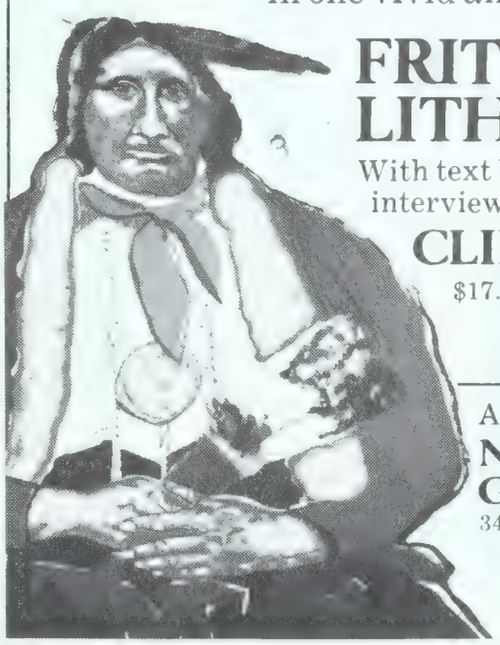
Univ. of Oklahoma Pr. (Civilization of the American Indian). 1975. 243p. illus., some color by the author. fwd. by Alice Marriott. bibliog. index. LC 73-7427. ISBN 0-8061-1136-4. $20.

CULTURAL STUDY/CRAFTS

Morrow has produced an important and memorable work, of interest to craftsmen and students of native American cultures. With meticulous care, she describes how skins were prepared, worked, decorated, and used, how this

The 20th-century Indian...

. . . perceived and depicted with the wit and compassion due a profoundly human being. Fritz Scholder, the celebrated artist of American Indian descent, presents for the first time all of his lithographs—nearly 100 to date—in one vivid and compelling volume.



FRITZ SCHOLDER LITHOGRAPHS

With text based on extensive interviews with the artist by

CLINTON ADAMS

$17.50

At all bookstores or direct from

NEW YORK GRAPHIC SOCIETY

34 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass. 02106

"Zestful reading... should be popular"*

My Wild Life

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY

By

Jimmy Chipperfield

"By turns droll, suspenseful, and moving, this British adventurer's autobiography is compelling from first to last. Jimmy was born into a circus family... and, as soon as he was old enough, the boy got into the act. His anecdotes on animals, acrobats, clowns, and other people in an unusual world are a mixture of the awesome and the ridiculous. . . . Later, Jimmy and son Richard took to collecting animals in the wilds of Africa. Thanks to them, England America, Canada, and Japan now boast several wildlife parks and zoos."—Publishers Weekly.

Illus. with photos. Index.

YA. $8.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS

200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

The genius of light and water...

TURNER:

Paintings, Watercolors, Prints and Drawings by Luke Herrmann

Here, commemorating the 200th anniversary of his birth is the largest single group of Turner's work ever published. The 190 plates, 48 in full color, plus up-to-date research make this "a beautiful book" (New York Times) and "the closest thing to a catalogue raisonné yet compiled." (Art Gallery). $37.50 at all bookstores or from process differed among tribes, and where these activities fit in larger cultural contexts. The emphasis is on Plains tribes, as they were the main rawhide manufacturers. The illustrations, which include photographs, are mostly of design motifs, which are adaptable. Native informants were consulted and museum collections studied, along with the usual written sources. An informative, illuminating book.—Judith McPheron, Oklahoma County Libs.

NEW YORK GRAPHIC SOCIETY

14 Beacon St.

Boston, Mass. 02108

Torrens, Deborah. Fashion Illustrated: a review of women's dress 1920-1950.

Hawthorn. 1975. 288p. illus., some color. LC 75-647. ISBN 0-8015-2559-4. $25. COSTUME

Here is an interesting hybrid which is a cross between a reference work and the type of coffee-table fashion book which is so plentiful today. The chatty, fashion-magazine text may disappoint those looking for a meatier, more academic survey, but it is nonetheless fascinating and fun reading. The real value of the book comes through its many illustrations, all of which, whether photographs or drawings, are from the period, giving the reader a better "feel" for the era than some other books available in which renderings are done by the author. Although lacking an index, the book is arranged in such a manner as to make location of styles fairly easy; i.e., the year being covered on each page is printed at the bottom of the page, and the text is in chronological order. An added bonus is a 20-page collection of various scaled-down patterns which this reviewer finds accurate, and which provide excellent basic garments that allow latitude for elaboration or simplification of detail. For libraries with an inclusive fashion/costume collection.—James A. Word, formerly with Cortland Repertory Theatre, N.Y.

Graphic Arts

Bloch, E. Maurice. The Drawings of George Caleb Bingham: with a catalogue raisonné.

Univ. of Missouri Pr. 1975. 272p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-15613. ISBN 0-8262-0180-6 $45. GRAPHIC ARTS

Bloch is the best known authority on Bingham in America today. This work, a handsome, well-bound folio, relates all of Bingham's known drawings to extant and recorded paintings. Bloch's introduction and notes and his careful ordering of the superb reproductions (mainly from the John How Collection of the St. Louis Mercantile Library Association) ably reflects the artistic development of this talented Missourian who remains a significant figure in American art and history. An important addition to all but the smallest collections in U.S. art.—Richard Lietz, Graduate Sch. of Librarianship, Univ. of Denver

Eisler, Colin. The Seeing Hand: a treasury of great master drawings.

Harper. 1975. 265p. illus., half color. bibliog. LC 74-1804. ISBN 0-06-011143-7. $37.50. GRAPHIC ARTS

The more than 300 well-reproduced drawings in this volume exemplify the diverse creativity of post-medieval European art. Organized thematically, the material is divided into sections dealing with portraiture, landscape, the human figure, animals, allegory and myth, religious subjects, genre, still life, ornament, and architecture. Eisler attempts to evoke, within the compass of his four-page introductory essays to each section, the peculiar qualities and history of these categories. However, the almost belletristic essays are too short to be very informative. The 132 color plates are the work's main asset. Each color plate is accompanied by a paragraph of text and the usual data concerning collection, material, date, provenance, dimension, and bibliography. In many instances, these cryptic bibliographical citations are not amplified in the rather random general bibliography. There is a short historical overview and a note on graphic techniques and conservation problems.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Kraemer, Ruth S. Drawings by Benjamin West and His Son Raphael Lamar West.

Godine and Pierpont Morgan Lib. 1975. 240p. illus. LC 75-7300. $30; Pierpont Morgan Lib. pap. $16.75. GRAPHIC ARTS

This is the catalog of the 1975 exhibition of West's drawings (with selections by his son as well) in the Morgan Library collection representing the largest corpus of drawings by this important artist. The book is a model of scholarship and beautiful production (150 of the 250 entries are illustrated). Entries are arranged typologically according to religion, history, myth, portrait, and landscape. Each drawing is carefully related to West's paintings and other drawings, and there are 60 comparative illustrations. The drawings span West's entire career, and the text gives thorough consideration to West's technical as well as thematic development. Essential for scholarly collections.—Jack Perry Brown, Yale Univ. Center for British Art Lib.

Mucha, Alphonse. Alphonse Mucha Lectures on Art: a supplement to "The Graphic Work of Alphonse Mucha."

St. Martin's. 1975. 80p. illus., some color. LC 73-89571. $17.50. GRAPHIC ARTS

While The Graphic Work of Alphonse Mucha, edited by Jiri Mucha and Marina Henderson (LJ 3/1/74), has the appropriate bibliographical apparatus, the book in hand is completely lacking in that respect. There is no indication of who compiled the chronology or the illustrations or who wrote the foreword. No information is given as to whether Mucha actually delivered these as lectures or whether they were simply among his unpublished notes. Still, Mucha's text does have an intimate relationship to his art, and so the book will be a useful tool despite its shortcomings. The numerous small sketches and diagrams that are included supplement the text well. General collections will be satisfied with the earlier book; research collections will want this one also.—GraceAnne A. DeCandido, N.Y.P.L.

Photography

Naef, Weston J. in collab. with James N. Wood. Era of Exploration: the rise of landscape photography in the American West, 1860-1885.

Albright-Knox Art Gallery/Metropolitan Museum of Art, dist. by New York Graphic Society: Little. 1975. 260p. essay by Therese Thau Heyman. index. LC 75-9694. ISBN 0-87099-128-0. $25. PHOTOG

Naef, assistant curator of the Department of prints and photographs of the Metropolitan, and Wood, associate director of the Albright-Knox, have drawn on the resources of some 35 collections in preparing this book. Opening with a 64-page illustrated text, it represents both the actual exploration of lands in the West by government and railroad survey teams, and the photographic coverage of these newly discovered lands for an eager public. The modern tourist, traveling the highways with Instamatic, can scarcely conceive the hardships of these pioneers who had to backpack food as well as gear—equipment for sensitizing and developing wet-collodion glass plate negatives, plus cameras and tripods for exposing plates ranging up to 20″ x 24″. The major portion of the book is devoted to the five foremost American landscape photographers of the period (Carleton E. Watkins, Timothy O'Sullivan, Eadweard Muybridge, A. J. Russell, and William Henry Jackson), providing biocritical essays and examples of their work in the form of halves of stereo pairs and full-page reductions from much larger photographs. Unfortunately, detail in shadow areas is frequently absent; otherwise the reproductions are good. Highly recommended for most collections.—John Whitling Hall, Dept. of Social Sciences, Louisiana State Univ., Shreveport

National Portrait Gallery. Portraits from The Americans: the Democratic experience; an exhibition at the National Portrait Gallery based on Daniel J. Boorstin's Pulitzer Prize-winning book.

Random. 1975. 159p. excerpts from the text & intro. by Daniel J. Boorstin. photogs. LC 75-10269. ISBN 0-394-49896-8. $15; pap. ISBN 0-394-73105-0. $6.95. HIST/PHOTOG

Using the same section headings as Boorstin's The Americans: The Democratic Experience (LJ 7/73), this collection of 200-plus photographs from an exhibition at the National Portrait Gallery at the Smithsonian might well have served as the basis for illustrating that earlier volume. While it is certainly of interest to see portraits of such little known but seminal figures as Alexander Turney Stewart, "father of the department store," or Clarence Birdseye of frozen foods fame, one wonders why at least some of these illustrations could not have been included in the original book, eliminating the need for a second volume. While Boorstin makes a case in his introduction for the importance of the photographs in deepening the understanding of his written history (a true but rather obvious observation), one feels that the audience for this work is necessarily a limited one. The photographs themselves, printed in sepia, are of excellent quality.—Scott Wright, Coll. of St. Thomas Lib. St. Paul, Minn.

BIOGRAPHY

Artaud, Antonin. The Peyote Dance.

Farrar. 1976. 64p. tr. from French by Helen Weaver. $7.95; pap. $2.45. PER NAR

First published anonymously in the Nouvelle Revue Française in 1937, this book recounts Artaud's search for enlightenment among the peyote-worshipping Tarahumara Indians of Mexico. Disillusioned with the European indifference to his theories of language and the theater and near emotional collapse, he found in the peyote rite an experience of wholeness and an articulation of his own Theater of Cruelty. His descriptions of the ritual and the effects of peyote are an interesting addition to drug literature, but they are in no sense scientific and are more significant as an illumination of the mind and work of this influential poète maudit. Letters to Jean Paulhan and Henri Parisot concerning the text as well as a poem (Tutuguri: The Rite of Black Night) written in 1948 are included.—Elaine F. Palencia, formerly with Harvard Univ. Lib.

RECENT AND RECOMMENDED

BLUEGRASS

by Bob Artis

"That bluegrass has become a widely accepted part of American culture is indicated in growing attendance at many weekend festivals. . . . Bluegrass introduces the music and, in chapters for each, treats its leaders: Bill Monroe, the Stanley Brothers, Flatt and Scruggs, Jimmy Martin, Jim and Jesse McReynolds, the Osborne Brothers, and a few others. . . . (The) book is written in a very descriptive and readable style and is both informative and clear to all levels of readers. Good photography backs up the written biographies of bluegrass leaders. Appendix of recordings, publications, radio stations, and organizations; index. Bluegrass is a significant human experience involving not only the musical performance but also the full day and night life of the festivals and other sessions. Bluegrass is one of the creative activities that is good for America today."—Choice. Photos. Appendix, bibliography, index. ISBN 0-8015-0758-8. $8.95.

ALL ABOUT MOTORCYCLES

by Max Alth

"A well-illustrated handbook for motorcyclists by the author of All About Bikes and Bicycling: Care, Repair, and Safety. Alth gives advice on bike selection and a wealth of information on maintenance, repairs, adjustments, and troubleshooting for the wheels and tires, brakes, steering and suspension, engine, power train, and electrical, ignition, and fuel systems. He also discusses frame care and repair, touring, and—briefly—safety."—The Booklist 7/1/75. Drawings, photos. Index. ISBN 0-8015-0152-0. $6.95.

GET ME A TAMBOURINE!

by Mary Jane Chambers

"This is the true story of how the author, mother of two boys and a member of the Methodist church, weathered the effects of the whirlwind conversion of her son Craig at age thirteen to a Fundamentalist glossolalia-and-tambourine sect. Craig's new near-fanaticism presented all sorts of upsetting problems: he gave it his all from public evangelizing in supermarkets to frontal attacks of Bible-quoting and sermonettes . . . Craig is now seventeen and seeking a happy medium between 'over-evangelism' and what his mother calls the 'empty well-polished mansion' which could be the Protestant church. Mrs. Chambers, who admits to having learned much from her son's adventures, writes simply and with humor. . . ."—Kirkus Reviews. ISBN 0-8015-2948-4. Paper $3.95.

HAWTHORN BOOKS

260 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016

Evocative*

WINCHELL EXCLUSIVE
"Things That Happened to Me—And Me to Them"
by Walter Winchell
Intro. by Ernest Cuneo

"Celebrity anecdotes, quips, 'skewps,' underworld intrigues, political intrigues . . . you name it. Winchell covered it first, and does it here again."
—*Library Journal (October 1, 1975)
Photographs
0-13-960286-0 $8.95

PRENTICE-HALL CIP
General Book Marketing Division
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632

"Readable, sympathetic portrait"*

PURITAN'S PROGRESS

A Study of John Bunyan

Monica Furlong

"The first biography in recent years of the 17th-century English Puritan preacher...Monica Furlong capably traces John Bunyan's humble origins as a tinker, his spiritual conversion, long imprisonment, literary fame and influence, and Puritan background. She assesses all Bunyan's major writings and performs a post-mortem psychoanalysis of the man...a perceptive overview of the great writer, moralist and religious thinker."—Publishers Weekly*. Illustrated, index.
224 pp. $8.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

Barton, H. Arnold. Count Hans Axel von Fersen: aristocrat in an age of revolution.

Twayne. (Lib. of Scandinavian Studies). 1975. 530p. bibliog. index. LC 74-22113. ISBN 0-8057-5363-X. $12.50. HIST/BIOG

Fersen, a Swedish nobleman who spent three years in America during the Revolution and later became one of the most dedicated opponents of the revolutionary tides that were sweeping Europe, is a fascinating subject for a biography. In his antirevolutionary fervor he sought to restore the French monarchy and, when that effort failed, devoted himself to counterrevolutionary causes. He took part in organizing the allied effort against the French armies and was one of the leaders of the anti-Jacobin movement in Sweden. Barton, a scholar of this period of Swedish history, has used manuscript and printed sources exhaustively—the notes and bibliography take up more than 100 pages—to give us the most comprehensive documentation of Fersen's life in English. Clearly and precisely written, the book is also designed to attract a popular audience; but those not familiar with this period may be deterred by the author's assumption of prior knowledge.—Erwin K. Welsch, Univ. of Wisconsin Lib., Madison

Bevington, Helen. Along Came the Witch: a journal of the 1960's.

Harcourt. Mar. 1976. 215p. ISBN 0-15-105080-5. $8.95. AUTOBIOG

In a time when autobiographies abound, Bevington's third volume of autobiographical writing stands out for its quality of truthfulness. Although she struggles with loneliness and isolation, the image in her journal is of a person with many connections—with her past, with literature, with family, friends, and students. Some connections resound with meaning; others are purely playful. But all her links are existential attempts at survival against the threat of witches, those unpredictable and destructive forces erupting when we least expect them in ourselves and the world around us. Avoiding excessive subjectivity, Bevington shows what it is like to be a poet, teacher, wife, mother in the 1960's. For anyone who enjoys words well put together.—Myra McMurry, Dept. of English, Valdosta State Coll., Ga.

Cornelisen, Ann. Women of the Shadows.

Atlantic: Little. Mar. 1976. 228p. photogs. LC 75-28345. ISBN 0-316-15745-7. $8.95. PER NAR

The "bare sepia world" of southern Italy, familiar from the author's Torregreca (LJ 11/1/68) and Vendetta of Silence (LJ 9/15/71), is again the setting for this gallery of fresh and masterly word portraits. Cornelisen introduces five neighbors and acquaintances, whose children attend her nursery school, whose violent family arguments penetrate her apartment walls, who parade past her balcony at the evening passeggiata. The husbands work in Germany, in northern Italian cities, or as minor town functionaries; the women toil endlessly on the land, as domestics, burdened with too many children, lack of privacy, and with little hope for a better future. Cornelisen learns to admire them, especially the peasant women, for their "wit and resourcefulness and a kind of bludgeoning courage." During her ten years of living in the province of Lucania, Cornelisen has seen the arrival of miniskirts, TV, and survey-bearing sociologists; she bears witness to the "slow extinction of one of the last feudal societies." Highly recommended.—Ruth R. Gambee, Chapel Hill, N.C.

Eberhardt, Isabelle. The Oblivion Seekers & Other Writings.

City Lights. 1975. 88p. tr. & preface by Paul Bowles. LC 75-12962. pap. ISBN 0-87286-082-5. $2. LIT/PER NAR

In the late 19th Century, Eberhardt left Europe for French Africa where she adopted the Islamic faith and lived a nomadic life among tribes of the Sahara desert. (See Cecily Mackworth's biography, The Destiny of Isabelle Eberhardt, LJ 11/15/75.) The selections of her writings here collected depict ordinary people at vulnerable moments. Her particular perspective combines European concepts of justice and individual rights with an acceptance of Islamic ideas about property, society, and destiny. Some of the vulnerable moments happen when these concepts clash. Eberhardt's style is often immature; she piles up adjectives and strains for images. Yet, when she tells a story, she writes with restraint, control, and power. The Oblivion Seekers is of value as a glimpse of a world we have rarely seen and of a most unusual woman.—Myra McMurry, Dept. of English, Valdosta State Coll., Ga.

Erté. Erté: things I remember.

Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. 208p. illus., some color. index. 1975. LC 75-8286. ISBN 0-8129-0575-X. $13.50. AUTOBIOG

"I firmly believe that every human being has a duty to make himself as attractive as possible," says Erté, ending his account of a still active career of designing couturier clothes (for Poiret and others), for musicals, plays, the Folies Bergeres, George White Scandals; sets and décors for cabarets; years of covers for Harper's Bazaar. Today he astonishes a new public. In this latest Erté book, the artist reveals—among much listing of persons known, exhibits held, triumphs tasted—that he dotes on cats, has a psychic bent, "enjoys sex." The man is more sprightly than his book, but for the illustrations and the record, costume libraries must have it.—Sarah Chokla Gross, formerly Editor, "Broadside," Theatre Lib. Assn., East Rockaway, N.Y.

Fernea, Elizabeth Warnock. A Street in Marrakech.

Doubleday. 1975. 382p. LC 74-12686. ISBN 0-385-00096-0. $8.95. PER NAR

With her anthropologist husband and three school-age children, the author spent a year in a picturesque house in the traditional sector of the conservative Moroccan city of Marrakech. Having lived in Iraq and Egypt, she felt confident about adapting to life in these congested quarters, where rich and poor lived side by side, small shops and craftsmen lined the streets, and children, beggars, veiled women, and an occasional donkey jostled on the sidewalk. The family's objective of living with Moroccans in order to learn about them was hindered by the hostility of street encounters and the sharp separation between public and private lives in Morocco; only gradually did suspicion give way to understanding and friendship. Fernea portrays the experience of an American family trying to understand a foreign culture with vivid detail and convincing warmth, and her narrative can be highly recommended to those interested in life in a North African city, or to readers curious about the human dimension of cross-cultural contact. Like her first two books, Guests of the Sheik (LJ 3/1/65) and A View of the Nile (LJ 5/15/70), this is not only a delight to read, but is also worthy of serious thought.—Elizabeth R. Hayford, Assistant Dean for International Education, Oberlin Coll., Ohio

Hobbs, May. Born To Struggle.

Daughters, Inc. 1975. 164p. pap. $3.50. AUTOBIOG

Outraged by the exploitation of workers in England, Hobbs became interested in politics and succeeded in unionizing London cleaning women. This autobiography describes her activity in part, but mostly it is an affectionate portrait of the lower-class community where she grew up and a tribute to the cunning with which the have-nots in society survive—the last third of the book is a gleeful survey of confidence games. One may object to Hobbs's simplistic attempt to blame capitalism for all problems yet enjoy her immensely. The book's strength lies not in social analysis but in its street-wise presentation of slum culture. Hobbs uses vivid details and vigorous angry language. It is also refreshing finally to have a feminist work by and about a poor woman.—Rita Weinberg Tesler, Dept. of English, Jersey City State Coll.

Horgan, Paul. Lamy of Santa Fe: his life and times.

Farrar. 1975. 385p. illus. index. $15. HIST/BIOG

Like his prize-winning Great River, Horgan's biography of Archbishop Jean Baptiste Lamy (1814-1888) is a major addition to the history of the Southwest. Based upon impressive research in European and American libraries, this detailed biography examines Lamy's experiences as a missioner priest in isolated Ohio, and, more importantly, as a missioner bishop in even more isolated Santa Fe, beginning in 1851. Horgan chronicles the bishop's many difficulties, including the hardships of desert travel, Indian attack, poverty, frontier distance, and the native clergy's lengthy revolt. The author shows that Lamy's intention to reform certain abuses, particularly excessive fees, had the effect of a "hot coal touched to a fuse" (a native clergyman even led a mob to his home), and he fully explains the factors contributing to the church controversy. Horgan's study of Lamy's life and distinguished career clearly demonstrates the problems, growth, and importance of the Roman Catholic Church in the history of the Midwest and the Southwest. This well-written biography deserves wide readership.—G. Thomas Edwards, Dept. of History, Whitman Coll., Walla Walla, Wash.

Jasny, Naum. To Live Long Enough: the memoirs of Naum Jasny, scientific analyst.

Univ. Pr. of Kansas. Mar. 1976. ed. & comm. by Betty A. Laird & Roy D. Laird. ISBN 0-7006-0140-6. $11. SCI/MEMOIR

Jasny (1883-1967) regarded himself as an economic analyst, whose specialties were agriculture and the Soviet economy. Within these technical fields, his publications, spanning 50 years and two continents, established him as a major but controversial figure. The editors have woven portions of Jasny's memoirs with lengthy biographical sections of their own, and they have added a bibliography of his works. Jasny emerges as a talented, proud, and independent researcher who frequently disagreed with established institutions. The study should be of value to those interested in Jasny's work. However, it is a quite personal record of his career, and the editors' failure to provide a more adequate introduction makes the book initially confusing. Yet, overall, the Lairds have created a readable ac-

"An important literary event... a work to delight and inform the general reader. Recommended."
— Library Journal

Photo John D Schiff

"In addition to a poet's life, an age of poetry stands revealed. This is a poet's biography in every sense — a biography about a poet by a poet employing the language and logic of poetry."
— CHRISTOPHER LEHMANN-HAUPT, The New York Times

"Almost the first of its kind about a major 20th-century poet... A fine book... a book that sees Williams clearly."
— ARTHUR MIZENER

"Superb biography... Whittemore gives us Williams's life better than we're going to get it for a long time... Whittemore's contribution to Williams's literature is in seeing the life complete."
— WEBSTER SCHOTT, Washington Post

"A warm and human work about our most human modern poet."
— KARL SHAPIRO

WILLIAM CARLOS WILLIAMS
Poet from Jersey By REED WHITTEMORE

ISBN: 0-395-20735-5 $10.95 HOUGHTON MIFFLIN COMPANY
Publisher of the American Heritage Dictionary count, honoring a significant, if highly specialized, researcher.—Rena Fowler, Hoover Inst., Stanford, Calif.

Knef, Hildegard. The Verdict.
Farrar. 1976. 377p. tr. from German by David Anthony Palastanga. LC 75-34174. ISBN 0-374-28322-2. $10. THEATER/AUTOBIOG
Knef continues her autobiographical The Gift Horse (LJ 7/71). This work focuses mainly on the author's experiences as a patient in various hospitals in Europe and the U.S.; she has undergone numerous operations in the last several years, including a mastectomy. Knef has taken poetic liberties with the characters and dialogue of her personal story; it reads like a fast-moving documentary novel that occasionally loses its way when Knef's prose becomes long-winded or when she disturbingly shifts the point of view of the narrator in the middle of a chapter. The Verdict is a bitter, one-sided portrait of the medical profession, mostly showing the incompetence and dehumanization Knef has observed and very little of the doctors' and nurses' dedication and skill. It's also an engaging portrait of an actress/singer/writer who, despite years of pain and discouragement, continues to say a loud "yes" to life.—Henry Halpern, Rider Coll. Lib., Lawrenceville, N.J.

Comprehensive*

LAURENCE OLIVIER
by John Cottrell

"A lengthy and comprehensive biography designed for the general adult reader. . . . Appropriate for academic and public libraries."
—*Choice (November, 1975)
Photographs
0-13-526152-X $10.95

PRENTICE-HALL CIP
General Book Marketing Division
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N J. 07632

Recommended...

INFORMATION SYSTEMS HANDBOOK

Edited by Warren McFarlan and Richard L. Nolan

Forty chapters by 47 authorities, 887 pages
"Recommended for libraries with an information-systems audience."
—Library Journal
$30.00

Dow Jones-Irwin
1818 Ridge Road, Homewood, Ill. 60430

Neary, John. Whom the Gods Destroy.
Atheneum. 1975. 403p. LC 75-13133. ISBN 0-689-10681-5. $12.50. PSYCH/PER NAR
Jack McCabe, 33 years old, handsome, intelligent, a brilliantly successful reporter, drifts slowly into a schizophrenic depression, spends several months in mental institutions, and only through the help of his wife and influential friends is he able to make his way back into normal life. His 55-year-old uncle Ken Wrightson withdrew into symptoms of mental illness during his early twenties and has deteriorated for 30 years in mental hospitals, unrescued. McCabe, stirred by his own experience, finds him and unravels his past. The names have been changed, the events are true. Neary has investigated the two life stories with the assistance of the people involved, their memories, their journals and tapes, their photographs, their friends. Neary presents his narrative with a creative touch for psychological detail and with a responsible concern for political questions to be asked, social criticisms to be stated. He manages a close look into mental health care in America that is terrifying.—Inge Judd, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Running, Leona Glidden & David Noel Freedman. William Foxwell Albright: a twentieth-Century genius.
Two Continents Pr. 1975. 447p. index. LC 75-11180. ISBN 0-8467-0071-9. $15.
ARCHAEOLOGY BIOG
The whole world of Near Eastern scholarship knows of Albright's prodigious accomplishments in excavation, teaching, lecturing, and publication (about 900 separate items) covering every phase of ancient Near Eastern studies, historical, philological, philosophical, sociological, and religious. This biography lets the reader share the excitement and drama that made up Albright's life, from his childhood in Chile to the final years of world-wide acclaim and innumerable honors, achieved in spite of serious physical handicaps. In it all the man comes through, simple, humble, yet sometimes imperious, with all his idiosyncracies and foibles, but with such total and undeviating devotion to truth that he could always afford to change his mind as new evidence might demand.—R. Vernon Ritter, formerly with Dept. of Religious Studies, Westmont Coll., Santa Barbara, Calif.

Smith, Charles Merrill. Different Drums: how a father and son overcame the generation gap with love and understanding.
Saturday Review Pr: Dutton. 1976. fwd. & afterword by Terrence Lore Smith. 168p. LC 75-15539. ISBN 0-8415-0404-0. $6.95. PER NAR
A former Methodist minister and his son, both successful authors on their own, here combine their talents to describe the conflicts in values and life styles which they (as most middle class American families) experienced. The father, product of a strict upbringing himself, attempts to raise his son in the same way towards the same goals: a college education, a responsible job, and a respected position in the community. His son rebels by dropping out of school, letting his hair grow long and moving into a commune. It's a personal story and the Smiths write in a low-key, conversational style. The generation gap still exists in many families, and this book may be of interest to them.— Don Halberstadt, Haverford State Hosp. Lib., Pa.

BUSINESS & ECONOMICS

Barnes, John. How To Cut Your Taxes.
Morrow. 1976. 318p. index. LC 75-17515. ISBN 0-688-02952-3. $9.95. ECON/BUS
It is a bit difficult to determine just what audience Barnes is trying to reach. He covers such topics as the child-care deduction problems of a widow, the apartment owner's depreciation allowance, oil and timber depletion allowances, and tax shelters in cattle feeding and vineyards. Obviously the needs of such a diverse group of taxpayers cannot be covered satisfactorily in 300 pages. The author provides two extensive chapters on estate planning to maximize tax benefits and one good chapter on tax planning after age 65. In the rest of the chapters he attempts to cover too much ground in too little detail. However, the facts and statistics, as far as I checked them, seem accurate, and the index is reasonably complete. Barnes's book can be recommended as a starting point, because it will give the reader ideas of points to clarify with local experts. I only wish that the author had provided more detail in areas which would be useful to lower- and middle-income taxpayers.—Susan S. DiMattia, Commack P.L., L.I., N.Y.

Baron, Salo W. & others. The Economic History of the Jews.
Schocken. 1975. 304p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-534. $15. HIST/ECON
A collection of essays originally published in the Encyclopaedia Judaica, this volume provides an excellent introduction to an often neglected aspect of Jewish history: the duality of Jewish economic activity. Though Jews were traditionally isolated and limited to economic relations within the confines of the Jewish community, it was through economic contact and interaction with their surrounding societies that they achieved their greatest degree of sustained integration with those societies.

As an initial, comprehensive survey, this work represents an important contribution to an enhanced understanding not only of Jewish history but of general economic history as well. Extensive bibliographies are provided. The work merits inclusion in most academic libraries.—Steven Wecker, Lehman Coll. Lib., CUNY

Labor

Dickson, Paul. The Future of the Workplace: the coming revolution in jobs.

Weybright & Talley, dist. by McKay. 1976. 351p. index. $15. LABOR

A useful though at times overly optimistic review of the wave of recent experiments in workplace reform in the U.S. and abroad. Dickson covers, for example, worker participation in management, job enrichment programs, and workgroup democracy schemes, as well as flexibility in scheduling, profit sharing, and even some of the older human relations school approaches. The quality of his evidence is sometimes uneven and although major changes in personnel policy and especially ideology are indicated in the text, nowhere does the evidence he presents add up to a "coming revolution in jobs." Further, despite the fact that the common denominator of these reforms is the attempt to treat workers as adults, rank-and-file reaction to these developments has not been solicited. Still, Dickson's book is valuable in that it pulls together in popular form a great deal of recent material. In this, it is a good supplement to a much better and more sober introductory work, David Jenkins' Job Power (LJ 4/15/73).—Ken Nash, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Kreps, Juanita & Robert Clark. Sex, Age, and Work: the changing composition of the labor force.

Johns Hopkins. 1976. 112p. bibliog. $7.50; pap. $2.65. LABOR

Primarily a compendium of earlier studies, this is a statistically oriented book. The numerous tables and figures are well placed and are provided with comprehensive explanations. However, the text is difficult to follow, and the audience will be limited primarily to scholars and researchers. The unique contribution of the book is its suggestion of a "lifetime utility function," by which workers would be allowed to determine how many years they will spend in the labor force at what period during their lives. Interesting, but all of the ramifications of such a plan are not discussed.—Susan S. DiMattia, Commack P.L., L.I., N.Y.

Lĕvitan, Sar A. & Benjamin H. Johnston. The Job Corps: a social experiment that works.

Johns Hopkins. 1976. 128p. illus. index. ISBN 0-8018-1804-4. $8.50; pap. ISBN 0-8018-1805-2. $2.95. LABOR

Levitan and Johnston's compact review of the first decade of the Job Corps is sympathetic and favorable, although they do not ignore or minimize faults and problems. The authors trace the history and operations of what was "possibly the most controversial social program inaugurated by the Great Society in the quest to reduce poverty in the U.S." Steering a course between the extravagant claims of its supporters and the unfounded attacks of its detractors, they present a balanced perspective on this unique social experiment. They find that while a great many of the half-million enrollees in the first ten years were not helped, others gained a great deal, and their lives were redirected positively by the Job Corps experience. They conclude that there is a reasonable degree of evidence to support a finding that the Job Corps approach is an essential element in making it possible for the "have-not" youths (for whom no other such program exists) to function effectively in the complex American society. Primarily for specialists in government policy, education, and manpower training.—Harry Frumerman, Dept. of Economics, Hunter Coll., New York

Woolley, Bryan, (text) & Ford Reid (photogs.). We Be Here When the Morning Comes.

Univ. Pr. of Kentucky. 1975. 103p. fwd. by Robert Coles. LC 75-18285. ISBN 0-8131-1337-7. $7.50. PER NAR/LABOR

Admittedly we have been inundated in recent years with "expert" descriptions of and prescriptions for Appalachia; but it would be a mistake to overlook this brief and sensitive vol-

A Selection of the History Book Club

The Character of

John Adams

by Peter Shaw

"Mr. Shaw has probed more deeply into the mind of John Adams than anybody else I know of and has provided an illuminating study of that paradoxical character. I found his book fascinating and regard it as important."

—Dumas Malone

Mar. 1 335 pp. illus. $14.95 Tr.

Published for the Institute of Early American History and Culture

The University of North Carolina Press Chapel Hill

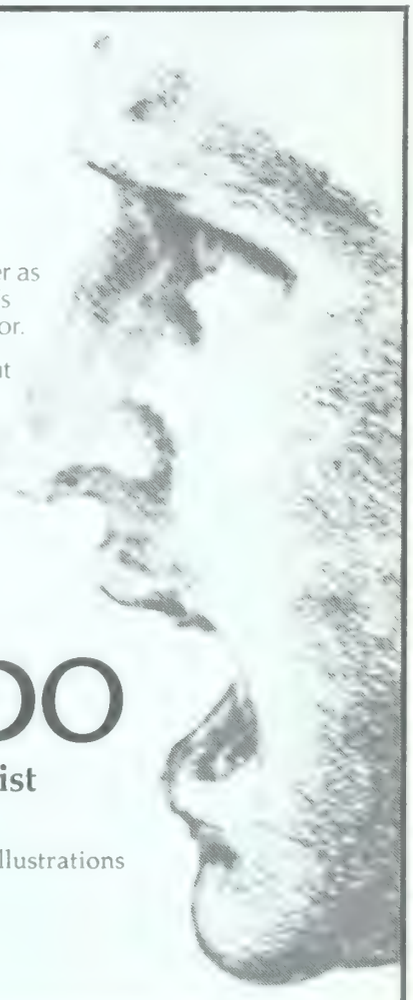
A Leonardo for our time.



An up-to-date account of Leonardo's career as an artist, in light of the present generation's tendency to see him primarily as an inventor.

"There is something new to be said about Leonardo and Cecil Gould has said it... a major monograph, highly readable."
—Art Gallery Magazine

"Among the most enlightening volumes devoted to him."—Los Angeles Times

Incorporating the most recent research... I can thoroughly recommend it."
—Kenneth Clark

LEONARDO

The Artist and the Non-Artist
by CECIL GOULD

With 8 color pages, 100 black-and-white illustrations
$22.50 at all bookstores or direct from

NEW YORK GRAPHIC SOCIETY
34 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass. 02106

ume. The authors, journalists long familiar with the region and its people, allow some of the people of Harlan County, Kentucky, to tell their own stories against the backdrop of a bitter 13-month strike at one mine for recognition of the United Mine Workers of America. The result is more than the record of a strike or a glimpse into the dangerous, violence-prone environment of the mine fields. In the final analysis, Woolley and Reid have provided a social document about the dignity, courage, and faith of ordinary men and women trying, against difficult odds, to improve their lives and gain a measure of control over their destinies.—Ronald L. Filippelli, Pennsylvania State Univ. Libs., State Park

communications

Murray, Michael. The Videotape Book: a basic guide to portable TV production.

Taplinger. 1975. 248p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 75-8413. ISBN 0-8008-8020-X. $9.95; Bantam pap. $1.95. TECH COMM

The cliché, "outdated by the time it's published," applies to any electronic how-to-do-it material. Even so, this manual will get interested and persistent beginners into video technology and practice and satisfy projects of many kinds. The book's length is partly due to its talky style—sometimes I feel Murray is jiving me a little—but the instructions are all there in sequence, understandable by many age groups and levels of sophistication. Chapter headings include "Portapack," "Video and Film," "Working with People," "Editing." There's also a useful list, "Resource Organizations." There are quotations from various practitioners on "how we did it." Beginners would have appreciated a greater number of method diagrams; the paperback lacks an index.—Julia Morrison, Member, ASCAP, New York

Williams, Raymond. Television: technology and cultural form.

Schocken. 1975. 160p. bibliog. index. LC 75-10714. ISBN 0-8052-3597-3. $7.50; pap. ISBN 0-8052-0501-2. $3.45. COMM

Although Williams' presents a readable overview in which he compares and contrasts American and British television, he offers no new insights. The chapter "Programming: Distribution and Flow" employs the usual weekly program analysis (in this case for a week in March, 1973) for five different British and American networks. In more than 30 pages he details the "Forms of Television," analyzing what each form is and does. Much of this information is common sense and seems somewhat trite. "Alternative Technology, Alternative Uses" details computer/cable distribution, etc. The book is of limited appeal because it is at once too remote from the experience of the beginner and too obvious and repetitive for the specialist.—Allan A. Mussehl, Dept. of Library Science and Communication Media, Bemidji State Univ., Minn.

EDUCATION

Burt, Cyril. The Gifted Child.

Halsted: Wiley. 1975. 214p. bibliog. index. LC 75-12892. ISBN 0-470-12532-2. $14.75. PSYCH/ED

Burt has written a conceptual–theoretical book primarily for teachers but it is probably more useful to educational and clinical psychologists involved in working with gifted and talented children. There is a great emphasis on quantitative analysis to back up the author's theoretical statements and conclusions. Burt goes to excessive lengths to describe the historical antecedents of the assessment of intelligence and evolutionary and neurological concepts, presents a strong position for multifactorial inheritance, and concludes that there is a general, innate cognitive ability. He then discusses the identification and characteristics of the gifted child, and in an important chapter packed with numerous case studies, the gifted child in later life. A summary of the major findings of Burt's many years of personal work is outlined in his chapter on educating gifted children which is consistent with the current information from programs in special education.—Leon D. Silber, Coordinator, Learning Disabilities Section, State Dept. of Public Instruction, Raleigh, N.C.

Taylor, Anne P. & George Vlastos. School Zone: learning environments for children.

Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1975. 144p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 74-5950. ISBN 0-442-28451-9. pap. $7.95. ED

The authors detail methods for designing schools to serve effectively as learning environments for young children. They stress that the physical settings of classrooms and outdoor spaces such as playgrounds have a direct impact on learning, and that traditional classrooms turn off students. The open classroom is praised as a vehicle for bringing out the best in children's creativity and and native abilities. This book is recommended as a guide to those seeking more innovative ways to design school facilities and more effective methods of instructing elementary school students.—Richard Seth Rosenblum, Seton Hall Univ. Lib., South Orange, N.J.

HISTORY

Best, Gary Dean. The Politics of American Individualism: Herbert Hoover in transition, 1918-1921.

Greenwood. 1975. 240p. bibliog. index. LC 75-16960. ISBN 0-8371-8160-7. $13.50. HIST

This model study is clearly a work for scholars. As the book shows, Hoover, an international mining engineer, burst into public notice with his administration of food relief during World War I. On return he was immediately involved in high-level planning for peacetime economic readjustment. In 1919, he was touted for both Democratic and Republican nominations for President and remained a major figure in the general election campaign on the issue of the League of Nations. The book ends with Hoover's entry into Harding's cabinet in order to further his own goals. This study reflects exhaustive research; it is well narrated and offers cogent explainations of Hoover's general social ideas of market capitalism buttressed by cooperative planning of business and labor.—James Levin, Dept. of Special Programs, C.C.N.Y.

A Bicentennial Portrait of the American People.

U.S. News & World Report Bks., 2300 N St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20037. 1975. 384p. photogs., half color. index. LC 75-18902. ISBN 0-89193-221-6. $25. HIST

A Bicentennial publication with a somewhat different twist. The text and photos, arranged according to seven regions, focus on life in the U.S. today, rather than on historical events of 200 years ago. Although the text is well narrated, it consists of a surprising mixture of reality and myth. For example, do we still believe in the "rugged character of the Alaskan oil rigger . . . as compared with the easy going sunny nature of the Hawaiian pineapple picker?" However, there are many accurate portraits of today's life styles. The pictures are of good quality, but they are not unusual in content. A popular item which provides a balance for many of the books now being published on America's past.—Dorothy D. Siles, Holden, Mass.

Burgess, Robert F. Ships Beneath the Sea: a history of subs and submersibles.

McGraw. 1975. 260p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 75-8659. ISBN 0-07-008958-2. $12.50. HIST

Well-written, well-told tales which survey submarine history from the 16th Century to our own times. Burgess, a diver and journalist, has done his research well, but he does take a few liberties (creating imaginary conversations or attributing thoughts to the heroes and protagonists of his stories); however, his narrative is generally reliable. In a lengthy appendix, he records chronologically the "Evolution of Diving Machines" from 333 B.C. to 1972. Mostly for public libraries; good for YA collections.—Frank J. Anderson, Wofford Coll. Lib., Spartanburg, S.C.

Bustin, Edouard. Lunda Under Belgian Rule: the politics of ethnicity.

Harvard Univ. Pr. 1975. 303p. bibliog. index. LC 75-9995. ISBN 0-674-53953-2. $11. POL SCI/HIST

"Lunda" is one of several terms used to describe the region historically controlled by the Lunda people in what is now Zaire. Bustin studies this important region through more than 70 years of administrative history. However, what the author is concerned with is not simply history but rather the process of interaction between the colonial civil service and traditional Lunda political forces. He has provided the first detailed study of Belgian administration in action, and he amply demonstrates the impossibility of making accurate generalizations about the nature of European colonial policy in Zaire, or anywhere else for that matter. Recommended for larger Africana collections.—R. Kent Rasmussen, Dept. of History, UCLA

Carter, William. Middle West Country

San Francisco Bk. Co./Houghton. 1975. 278p. photogs., some color by the author. index. LC 75-23209. ISBN 0-395-20732-0. $25. PHOTOG/GEOG

This book attempts in a rather unsystematic and often impressionistic fashion to capture the essence of the Middle West region of the U.S. Combining geography, history, economics, oral interviews, nature writing, and photography, the result is an uneven accomplishment. The author has read all of the sources and traveled extensively through the region, but he fails to find an underlying theme or purpose to give meaning to his experience. Some greater ordering of material is required to save a book of this type from being a mere coffee-table ornament. Unfortunately, Carter fails to provide this type of coherent pattern.—Scott Wright, Coll. of St. Thomas Lib., St. Paul, Minn.

Ch'i, Hsi-sheng. Warlord Politics in China, 1916-1928.

Stanford Univ. Pr. 1975. 282p. index. LC 75-7482. ISBN 0-8047-0894-0. $11.50. HIST

Though marked by political disintegration and chaos, the warlord period in 20th-century China offers valuable material for a study of the militarists' approach to competitive politics and their pragmatism in calculating power—themes which continue to have some relevance even in contemporary China. Thus far, the subject has attracted limited scholarly interest, and so Ch'i's well-written and capably organized work will be greatly appreciated by scholars. In his incisive analysis, the author examines the rise of military factions and the complex balance-of-power system that evolved from shifting alliances. He gives details of the warlords' economic bases, their military recruitment and training systems, the weaponry and tactics used, and the role of geopolitics. Ch'i's use of systems theory to prove how the Kuomintang gained success and concluded the warlord era may be debated, but this would not detract from the value of his book. Essential for academic libraries collecting on modern China.—Ranbir Vohra, Dept. of Political Science, Trinity Coll., Hartford, Conn.

"The Dye Is Now Cast": the road to American independence, 1774-1776. by Lillian B. Miller & others.

pub. for the National Portrait Gallery by Smithsonian, dist. by Braziller. 1975. 328p. illus. index. LC 74-24843. $17.50; pap. $11. HIST

This exhibition catalog is a product of a cooperative effort between Miller, National Portrait Gallery historian, and the Gallery's curatorial staff. The emphasis is on biography: illustrative material includes portraits of key participants in the two-year period preceding the Revolutionary War, along with documents they signed, their personal effects, caricatures, etc. The highly readable text, which reflects painstaking and thorough scholarship, is documented with 166 full-captioned illustrations that are well integrated into the historical account. Abundant footnotes (480 in fact), an extensive bibliography, and an analytical index are included. Drawing not only from their own collection, the curators are to be commended for their choice of subtle and revealing portraits and their ingenuity in bringing together some 239 pieces from 100 lenders here and abroad.—Raissa Fomerand, Librarian, Sleepy Hollow Restorations, Tarrytown, N.Y.

Elting, John R. The Battle of Bunker's Hill.

Philip Freneau. (Bicentennial Series on the American Revolution). 1975. 56p. fwd. by Harold L. Peterson. maps. index. LC 75-3540. ISBN 0-912480-11-4. $10.95. HIST

The author has made good use of primary sources and of his own background as a professional soldier in evaluating the preparations and maneuvers of both British and Colonial military units in this battle. As Elting shows, neither side was well prepared for battle. In the end superior British firepower and discipline prevailed, though at a terrible cost, and the war was truly begun. The author has included some fine maps, both recent and historical, to illustrate the battlefield movements. However, one wishes that the book's dimensions (12″ x 10″) had been reduced for easier shelving. Nevertheless, highly recommended for general collections.—Ronald B. Hubbs, Melrose P.L., Mass.

Hawke, David Freeman. Honorable Treason: the Declaration of Independence and the men who signed it.

Viking. Apr. 1976. 216p. $8.95. BIOG/HIST

This Bicentennial book consists of 56 character sketches of the men who signed the Declaration of Independence; these profiles are tied together by a narrative of the events in the Continental Congress during the summer of 1776. The sketches themselves are interesting and informative; the same, however, cannot be said for the connecting narrative. There are no footnotes and the bibliography is too casual, but it is apparent that most of the research was done in secondary sources. Public libraries and general collections may wish to purchase.—John H. Ashby, Dept. of Social Sciences, Catonsville Community Coll., Md.

Jensen, Oliver. The American Heritage History of Railroads in America.

American Heritage, dist. by McGraw. 1975. 320p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 75-19438. ISBN 0-07-032526-X. $29.95. HIST

This informative, lavishly illustrated work will be a joy to anyone even mildly touched by railroad mania. The volume is crammed with essays, anecdotes, biographical inserts, and illustrations. Much attention is given to the financial aspects of railroading, and this material, particularly on the 19th-Century railway machinations, is detailed and scholarly. Yet there is much on such popular delights as old depots, railroad and locomotive decorations, and the now nearly extinct interurban trolleys. There is also a good deal of contemporary data. One might quarrel with a few points (Jensen's intense antiregulatory stance, for example), but this is nitpicking. An excellent bibliography and index are included.—Richard H. Rosichan, Dade County Schs., Miami, Fla.

Kohlstedt, Sally Gregory. The Formation of the American Scientific Community: the American Association for the Advancement of Science, 1848-1860.

Univ. of Illinois Pr. Feb. 1976. 320p. illus. bibliog. ISBN 0-252-00419-1. $10.95. SCI/HIST

This thoroughly researched and documented work examines the period that was crucial to the formation of the American scientific establishment. The footnotes are numerous and the style is very scholarly (the work was begun as a dissertation). There is an extensive bibliography and a microfiche appendix (not included in the review proofs) which gives the names of all AAAS members during 1848—1860 and brief biographies of those who held office or presented papers. The role that the AAAS played in giving the U.S. scientific community a visible and viable presence is traced in detail, and its organization is compared with its European counterparts. Valuable historical material is also provided on the Smithsonian Institution, American college development, and programs of the federal government such as the U.S. Geological Survey. This is a very valuable book, not only for the gap it fills in studying the AAAS, but also for the thoroughness of its treatment of a very important period of American scientific history.— Hilary D. Burton, Data Systems Applications Div., U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, Beltsville, Md.

Meisner, Maurice & Rhoads Murphy, eds. The Mozartian Historian: essays on the works of Joseph R. Levenson.

Univ. of California Pr. Apr. 1976. 250p. ISBN 0-520-02826-0. $12. HIST

In this excellent volume, the colleagues and students of the late Chinese intellectual historian Levenson pay him the highest tribute of rigorous critical confrontation with his life's work. Particularly outstanding are Angus McDonald's and Benjamin Schwartz's challenges to what McDonald calls Levenson's "search for transcendent cosmopolitanism," James Cahill's critique of Levenson's treatment of Chinese art, and Ralph Crozier's analysis of Levenson's views on China's cultural identity. The book also contains a fascinating essay on "The Choice of Jewish Identity," which Levenson left unfinished; this essay throws much light on both the man and his understanding of China (among other things, raising the question of whether there was a Levensonian search for transcendent cosmopolitanism). This is in one sense a specialized book, since it assumes familiarity with Levenson's work; in another sense, because it shows China scholars working—and working so well—it is a far more human and widely interesting work than the technical monographs in the field.—Andrew J. Nathan, East Asian Inst., Columbia Univ.

Morris, Ivan. The Nobility of Failure: tragic heroes in the history of Japan.

Holt. 1975. 500p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 73-[illegible] ISBN [illegible] HIST

"Spontaneous sympathy with the courageous loser . . . has deep roots among the Japanese, who, since ancient times, have recognized a special nobility in the sincere, unsuccessful sacrifice." Morris delves into 17 centuries of Japanese history and presents portraits of nine heroic individuals and the Kamikaze pilots. Maintaining that "this predilection for heroes who were unable to achieve their concrete objectives can teach us much about Japanese values and sensibility," the author resists the effort to analyze the materials in order to produce a cogent thesis. Instead, Morris relies largely on previously translated works to record a vivid series of near-legendary tales. He is writing primarily for a popular audience; however, the book also aspires to serious scholarship. While the factual material is usually accurate, the interpretive background is sometimes flawed by simplistic or erroneous assertions based on a casual use of outdated sources. Nonetheless, the book makes engaging reading.—Gary D. Allinson, Dept. of History, Univ. of Pittsburgh

Roland, Charles P. The Improbable Era: the South since World War II.

Univ. Pr. of Kentucky. 1975. 228p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-12082. ISBN 0-8131-1335-0. $11.95. SOC SCI HIST

In this outstanding overview of the last 30 years of Southern life, Roland deals with such diverse topics as economic development, political change, the race issue, education, literature, music, and the visual arts. The author brings to this task a unique combination of his own personal perspective as a Southerner and the objectivity and erudition of a renowned scholar. The result is a well-documented work enhanced by individual insight and a balanced tone. Moreover, because Roland includes chapters on religion, education, the visual arts, and music, his volume provides a special comprehensive treatment not found elsewhere, and this scope more than compensates for minor quibbles about some of the parts on politics.—James Levin, Dept. of Special Programs, C.C.N.Y.

Sewell, Richard H. Ballots for Freedom: antislavery politics in the United States, 1837-1860.

Oxford Univ. Pr. May 1976. 352p. index. $12.95. HIST

This book explains the development of the antislavery movement from its origins as a moral crusade through the tentative political involvements, the third party and fusion efforts, until the 1860 Republican Presidential election victory. Both the content and the thesis are accurate, although they are not especially original. Further, the text is flat with regard to personality description, and a host of colorful people become mere ciphers. But the book has value for scholars, in that it shows more clearly than elsewhere how the original abolition movement was progressively diluted to obtain political majorities, and it offers a fine state-by-state analysis of elections and issues. It also underscores the continued tension between moral idealism and political pragmatism in the movement.—James Levin, Dept. of Special Programs, C.C.N.Y.

Simmons, Edwin H. The United States Marines: the first two hundred years 1775-1975.

Viking. Feb. 1976. 329p. maps. LC 75-35719. $8.95. HIST

This concise and unadorned history serves as a guide or handbook to the combat actions of the U.S. Marine Corps (little attention is given to the study of policy affecting the Corps and its administration). Simmons' well-paced, solidly packed volume covers the actions of the Marines in the Revolution and the Quasi-War with France, through numerous Oriental and Latin American adventures and two World Wars, to the post-Vietnam era. Though not the definitive history of the Corps, it compares favorably with other one-volume narratives, such as Philip N. Pierce and Frank O. Hough's Compact History of the Marine Corps (Hawthorn, 1964, rev. ed.). For large collections and libraries having no other histories of the Corps.—John Buechler, Univ. of Vermont Lib.

Smith, Bradley. THE USA: a history in art.

Gemini Smith Inc. pub. by Crowell. 1975. 296p. color illus. index. LC 75-6016. ISBN 0-690-00966-6. $30. ART/HIST

Smith's preface states that this work is an "informal sketchbook." The sketchbook is clearly designed to depict the history of America in art rather than a history of art in America. The coverage of THE USA lacks balance, since the 20th Century is allotted a mere 38 pages, and there is not a single illustration from the historical Federal Art Project of the Depression. However, Smith does include useful historical and art chronologies for the 11 topical sections. An attractive work, primarily for the coffee-table circuit, or for large, inclusive collections in American art and history.—Richard Lietz, Sch. of Librarianship, Univ. of Denver

Archaeology

Bascom, Willard. Deep Water, Ancient Ships: the treasure vault of the Mediterranean.

Doubleday. Feb. 1976. illus. LC 73-2503. ISBN 0-385-08982-1. $8.95. ARCHAEOLOGY

Making use of charts, tables, schematic drawings, and photographs, and tracing the ancient shipping patterns and naval battles, Bascom tries to provide a guide to possible locations of ancient shipwrecks in the Mediterranean. He describes the use of sophisticated undersea equipment, and takes the reader on a salvage dive aboard the "Alcoa Seaprobe," a unique floating laboratory. The reference sources, as well as the appendix dealing with the legal aspects of deep-sea salvaging should be of great interest to those wishing to pursue deep water searches.—Richard J. Russo, Museum of Modern Art Lib., New York

Chevallier, Raymond. Roman Roads.

Univ. of California Pr. Mar. 1976. illus. maps. $25. HIST/ARCHAEOLOGY

This work gives a wealth of material for the specialist, particularly in the excellent notes. A brief survey of the literary source material for Roman travel accompanies a review of ancient maps and inscriptions (this analysis presumes some rather specific background). The chapter on archaeology studies the pattern of roads in Rome and in the country, with useful discussion of engineering realities and modern archaeological methods. The book then surveys the chief routes throughout the Empire, with emphasis on Gaul. The final two chapters sketch the modes of transport, services available on, and functions of the Roman highway system. A useful, but difficult treatment.—James S. Ruebel, Dept. of Classics, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis

Grinsell, Leslie V. Barrow, Pyramid and Tomb: ancient burial customs in Egypt, the Mediterranean and the British Isles.

Westview Pr., 1898 Flatiron Ct., Boulder, Colo. 80301. 1975. 240p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-20050. ISBN 0-89158-504-4. $18.50. ARCHAEOLOGY

Man's treatment of his dead has long been a subject of fascination for archaeologist and layman alike. As a result, any general discussion of the subject can at best only highlight particular topics, briefly compare the practices of various cultures, and whet the reader's interest for further exploration on his own. This volume's emphasis is indicated by the subtitle, although Part 1 does go somewhat farther afield in including other European areas in its discussion of a multitude of funerary rites and customs (among them inhumation, cremation, sacrifices, and grave goods). Part 2 reflects the author's own interests; it is a descriptive gazetteer of monuments, mainly accessible, which he himself has visited. A useful appendix gives practical information helpful for visiting the sites listed, and an exhaustive bibliography effectively channels the reader's special interests. For general as well as archaeological collections.—Priscilla Wegars, Claremont Junior H.S. Lib., Oakland, Calif.

Kraus, Theodor (text) & Leonard von Matt (photogs.). Pompeii and Herculaneum: the living cities of the dead.

Abrams. 1975. 230p. tr. by Robert Erich Wolf. photogs., some color. bibliog. index. LC 74-19453. ISBN 0-8109-0418-7. $35. ARCHAEOLOGY

Here Pompeii and Herculaneum are given the lavish treatment they deserve. Magnificent photographs are accompanied by an excellent text. While he concentrates on the surviving buildings and their contents, Kraus also offers a brief history of the sites, an assessment of Pompeiian and Herculanean life, and a proper evaluation of the place of these towns in Roman history. Major sections are devoted to Pom-peii's theaters, thermae, palaestrae, and houses outside the gates. At Herculaneum, the Villa of the Papyri justly occupies center stage. Specialists will appreciate this volume for its superb photographs; amateurs will enjoy the accompanying text as well. A useful addition to both the academic and the public library.—William E. Metcalf, Assoc. Curator, American Numismatic Society, New York

Travel, Exploration & Adventure

Barnard, Charles N. I Drank the Water Everywhere.

Dodd. 1976. 239p. $7.95 TRAV

A rather haphazard collection of anecdotes culled from what must surely be a lifetime of worldwide travel. Most are interesting, a few are funny, and several describe very unusual experiences. How many of us, even if we are seasoned travelers, have ever slept in a Buddhist monastery or visited a camel market? Unfortunately, there are no dates in this casual melange of history and personal observation. The author says in his introduction that this is an account of "the last few years," but it would be interesting to know exactly when he was in places like Lebanon or Malaysia—conditions change very rapidly today. Otherwise, this is an entertaining book which will make pleasant armchair traveling.—Lola Dudley, Mamaroneck Free Lib., N.Y.

Feldkamp, Fred. Not Everybody's Europe.

Harper's Magazine Pr. Mar. 1976. 240p. photogs. LC 75-18633. ISBN 0-06-122481-2. $8.95.

Whitman, John. Whitman's Off Season Travel Guide to Europe: Europe at its best from September to May.

St. Martin's. 1976. 680p. LC 73-91600. $8.95; pap. $3.95. TRAV

Neither work is of particular distinction. Feldkamp has assembled travel essays on nine locales ranging from the expected Dubrovnik and Salzburg to the less expected Dingle Peninsula of Ireland. While well crafted, the pieces sometimes fall prey to the clichés of the genre ("in Granada no one hurries"). Feldkamp likes to stay in lavish hotels and overeat. The Whitman book is a where-to-sleep, where-to-eat, barebones description of places type of guidebook. It will be no more helpful in planning off season travel than any competent general guidebook, and stylistically it falls short of many of them.—Harold M. Otness, Southern Oregon State Coll. Lib., Ashland

Park, Ruth. The Companion Guide to Sydney.

Scribners. Mar. 1976. 448p. photogs. index. $8.95. TRAV

For conveying understanding and cultivating appreciation of places, the Companion Guides (originating from the English publisher Collins) are among the very best on the market today. Each volume is written by an accomplished author who knows his area well. The emphasis is on description of what there is to see rather than hotel advice, and there is enough of it to give these works reference value in libraries, yet they make for delightful leisure reading as well. Sydney, we are told, is "croaking and huffing and squealing like some fabulous toad." Most of the two dozen titles so far issued have concerned Europe. Librarians should be pleased to see this series reaching out to parts of the world where better guidebook coverage is needed. This title should become the standard work on Sydney.—Harold M. Otness, Southern Oregon State Coll. Lib., Ashland

Scott, Jack Denton. Journey into Silence.

Reader's Digest Pr., dist. by Crowell. Feb. 1976. 224p. ISBN 0-88349-083-8. $7.95.

PER NAR/ADVENTURE

Scott is an author of cook and travel books. This is the narrative of his voyage in the "Havella," a small Norwegian ship, to a "lost" lake in Svalbard, a Norwegian island group north of the Arctic Circle, where he found the silence he coveted. Scott meets with a few adventures, gets to know the admirable crew of the "Havella," and acquires (and passes on to the reader) a good deal of knowledge about Arctic fauna, glaciers, mirages, Norwegian cuisine, and kindred topics. His book is pleasant, readable, and fairly informative. It is similar to Louis J. Halle's The Sea and the Ice although it's not in the same literary league.—Jonathan F. Husband, Boston State Coll. Lib.

Home Economics

Heidi, Gloria. Winning the Age Game.

Doubleday. Feb. 1976. illus. LC 75-14826. ISBN 0-385-09859-6. $8.95. HEALTH/HOME ECON

With the many books on how to be thin and beautiful on the market, an author might be accused of hubris to produce another. Yet, Heidi's fast and humor-dabbled monolog on the war against age is welcome. It is delivered directly to me, the former hausfrau who, at 40, picked up a career. It deals with all my problems at once: the face—many good tips on simple cosmetics; the figure—go out and do your aerobics; fashion—be with it; diet—liver is the thing; sex—I won't tell you. Many other helpful chapters are there, such as the one on facial expressions, neatly divided into dual columns "You'll look older if . . ." and "You'll look ageless if. . . ." Much of Heidi's advice is just good common sense and we've known it for years, but it is nice to be reminded in a tactful way.—Gerda Haas, Bates Coll. Lib., Lewiston, Me.

Cookery

Bailey, Adrian. The Blessings of Bread.

Paddington Pr: Two Continents. 1975. 287p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-11173. ISBN 0-8467-0061-1. $14.95. COOKERY

This history of bread is attractive, readable, profusely illustrated, and up to date. It would be a useful addition to any public library collection. But the large recipe section leaves me with some questions. I made three good loaves, but the Haiddi—Welsh barley bread—was a disaster. (Glutenless barley flour will not rise with yeast without the addition of some wheat flour, which the recipe lacks.) So, if you are in the market for a book of bread recipes, I would suggest Bernard Clayton Jr.'s The Complete Book of Breads (LJ 2/15/74), which has never failed me yet.—Johanna Ezell, Washington County Free Lib., Hagerstown, Md.

Liebman, Malvina W. Jewish Cookery from Boston to Baghdad.

Seemann. 1975. 270p. illus. index. LC 75-2186. ISBN 0-912458-52-6. $9.95. COOKERY

"Jewish" cooking includes more than the familiar bagels and cholent. Wherever Jews have migrated, they have adapted local food to meet their own dietary restrictions, producing such dishes as Chinese walnut fried chicken, Moroccan hamin, and kosher frijoles refritos. In addition to traditional recipes, this book provides local variations produced by necessity and some of the history and lore surrounding their creation. Its broad international scope plus the food lore make the book a good choice for libraries wanting to add a Jewish cookbook to their collections.—Nina Kahn Fenenbock, formerly with City-County Lib., Glasgow, Mont.

Price, Pamela Vandyke. The Taste of Wine.

Random. 1975. 192p. fwd. by Baron Elie de Rothschild. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 75-10309. ISBN 0-394-49819-4. $14.95. BEVERAGES

"And another book on wine" writes De Rothschild in the foreword; this one by a British author. Of course Rothschild qualifies his statement by saying the book is unusual and "a really good one"; I am not so sure. There are the usual chapters on the history of wine, varieties of grapes (including the anatomy of a grape), wine making, tasting, storing, and classification. The classifications use unusual designations such as bone dry and straightforward. The sections on wine cellars and wine with food are good and list types and styles, not specific wines. The maps accompanying the chapters on wine regions of the world are not easy to read or completely accurate—Ithaca, New York is placed on Seneca Lake rather than Cayuga. A book only for complete wine collections.—Christine Bulson, SUNY at Oneonta Lib.

Rossant, Colette. Cooking with Colette.

Scribners. 1975. 198p. ed. by Lorraine Davis. illus. by James Rossant. index. LC 75-16113. ISBN 0-684-14267-8. $7.95. COOKERY

The introduction states that this book "is a cooking course" not just a catalog of recipes. Rossant teaches children, and the writing reflects this—almost every ingredient is "yours"—your liquid aspic, your chicken backs, etc. Ignore the style of writing—her method of cooking is excellent, a step-by-step approach beginning with the basics. Desserts are the first chapter because everyone likes them. Appetizers; soups; vegetables; salads; and poultry, meat, and fish follow. All the directions are exceptionally clear and easy to follow and the buying and preparation of the ingredients are included in detail. Many of the recipes are French in origin—soufflé, pot-au-feu, pâté—and are delicious. A cookbook for the beginning cook with gourmet talent and taste.—Christine Bulson, SUNY at Oneonta Lib.

Scott, Maria Luisa & Jack Denton Scott. Informal Dinners for Easy Entertaining: over 150 easy but elegant meals you can eat with a fork.

S.& S. 1976. 213p. index. $8.95. COOKERY

The dishes here are intended for those cooks who enjoy entertaining but who agree that the less formal "fork dinner" is more enjoyable for everyone involved than the traditional sit-down meal. The recipes are from simple to moderately difficult to prepare and use ingredients that are readily obtainable. When prepared, two of the recipes, "Chicken and Sausage Pie Basque Style" and "M.L.'s Cold Lemon Soufflé," produced attractive, tasty results. The idea of informality is timely, and the book, though not a necessity, provides pleasant browsing for the cookbook addict. An Italian emphasis pervades.—Carolyn Johnson, Hamden Public Schs., Conn.

Sturges, Lena. For the Love of Cooking.

Oxmoor House. 1975. illus., some color. index. $9.95. COOKERY

A collection of 1500 of the best recipes sent to Southern Living during the last five years, and companion volume to Sturges' Our Best Recipes (Oxmoor House, 1970). Arranged in categories from appetizers to vegetables, these reflect the plain but hearty fare for which the South is well known. (The wide variety and innovative use of spices and seasonings will have wide appeal.) An excellent, timely feature of the book is that those recipes that are economical are indicated as such.—Terry M. Cole, formerly with Carthage Central High Sch. Lib., N.Y.

Literature

Bickley, R. Bruce, Jr. The Method of Melville's Short Fiction.

Duke Univ. Pr. 1975. 142p. index. LC 74-28904. ISBN 0-8223-0334-5. $7.75. LIT

Bickley has written another study of the techniques Melville used in his magazine fiction following the popular failures of Moby-Dick and Pierre and of "ways in which these techniques shaped his complex vision artistically." Analyzing the craftsmanship in 16 short stories and showing how Melville was indebted to Irving and Hawthorne, Bickley contributes a readable, fully researched, and convincing addition to Melville studies. The book is aimed largely at specialists and university and larger libraries. Strongly recommended.—William White, Journalism Program, Oakland Univ., Rochester, Mich.

Halpern, Joseph. Critical Fictions: the literary criticism of Jean-Paul Sartre.

Yale Univ. Pr. Feb. 1976. 171p. bibliog. $10. LIT

This level-headed study presents Sartre's major critical works (Baudelaire, Saint Genet, Situations 1-9, L'Idiot de la famille) as biased fictionalized biographies which attempt to prove Sartre's obsessive conviction: committed writers are masculine; artful writers are feminine. Sartre's equations are not only simplistic (e.g., male is active; female is passive), they are chauvinistically skewed (active is good; passive is bad). Halpern studies each Sartrian essay with an eye to both the announced protagonist and Sartre as implied hero and manages to be sympathetic with both while showing that the latter is better as a polemical novelist than as a critical biographer. Because of its limited purview, this study is suitable chiefly for graduate collections in literature and critical theory.—Marilyn Gaddis Rose, Dept. of Comparative Literature, SUNY at Binghamton

Hayman, Ronald. Eugene Ionesco.

Ungar. (World Dramatists). Apr. 1976. c.125p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-10103. ISBN 0-8044-2388-1. $8.50. LIT

The most interesting, if not the most useful, section in Hayman's study is his interview with Ionesco. It serves as a useful introduction to a useful book. Combining plot summaries with critical analyses of varying quality, Hayman surveys deftly, but occasionally too quickly, Ionesco's dramatic activity. The final discussion, "Ionesco's Achievement," is particularly disappointing. But Hayman knows theater and he knows Ionesco's limitations, and this helps to sustain the reader's interest. This is a compact book, filled with essential information: a chronology of Ionesco's life, a list of stage and broadcast productions, a series of notes, and a bibliography. Ultimately, it is also a good book, because it quickly orients the general reader, while providing the specialist with a convenient collection of data. Recommended for public and academic libraries.— Gari R. Muller, Div. of Humanities, New Coll., Sarasota, Fla.

Hubbard, Margaret. Propertius.

Scribners. Mar. 1976. 182p. bibliog. index. LC 75-11481. ISBN 0-684-14464-6. $10. LIT

Although Propertius merits considerable scholarly attention both for his place in the Latin poetic tradition and for his influence on later writers, there has been no recent and comprehensive study in English devoted solely to him. This fine little book is therefore as welcome as it is useful. Hubbard examines Propertius and his work in the context of the Augustan Age and its poetry, and she pays careful attention to problems of interpretation and provides close analyses of key poems (quoted in Latin and in English). Clear notes and a helpful bibliographical essay increase the considerable scholarly value of this book.—Elizabeth A. Fisher, Dept. of Classics, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis

Laird, J. T. The Shaping of Tess of the D'Urbervilles.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1975. 194p. ISBN 0-19-812060-5. $25.50. LIT

Hardy revised his work continually, and the circumstances of the composition of Tess required unusually vigorous efforts at revision. Hardy's conceptions of his characters and their meaning were evolving while he was writing the book and even continued after it was published. But changes were also forced on him by the sexual reserve of the age, which caused him to bowdlerize some crucial passages. Laird has been able to identify five "layers" in the final manuscript. Each represents a stage in composition. He convincingly traces the development of Hardy's thinking about his characters and the themes with which he surrounded them. He scrutinizes the bowdlerizations required by the initial, serial, publication; and he follows the less extensive alterations in later editions. This is an original, interesting, and convincing study of Hardy's methods—but its coverage is too limited to justify its price.—Stephen R. Rounds, Dept. of English, Gustavus Adolphus Coll., St. Peter, Minn.

Lane, Gary. I Am: a study of E. E. Cummings' poems.

Univ. Pr. of Kansas. May 1976. 134p. bibliog. index. LC 75-38757. $9.50; pap. $3.50. LIT

In this welcome, rational appraisal the author sheds light upon influences, goals, and themes of Cummings' verse by explicating in detail 25 of the poet's finest works (many of which have never been closely examined). Lane objectively assesses Cummings' strengths and weaknesses. Though an overview of Cummings' work and philosophy emerges, a complete reading of the book is attained only through great concentration due to its stiff organization (one explication after another—25 times). The book's primary value, therefore, would seem to lie in its use as a reference tool for the close examination of a few particular poems. Although scholars should be rewarded by Lane's insight, general readers (even those with a genuine interest in Cummings) may not have the patience to wait for enlightenment to intensify their intrigue.—Dennis Petticoffer, California Inst. of Technology Lib., Pasadena

Lardner, Ring W. Some Champions: previously uncollected autobiographical sketches and fiction.

Scribners. Mar. 1976. 208p. ed. by Matthew J. Bruccoli & Richard Layman. $6.95. AUTOBIOG/LIT

When Lardner died in 1933, he left behind many stories and nonfiction pieces in various newspapers and magazines. Here the editors have selected from these sources 25 unpublished works. The first 16 items are nonfiction, ranging from broad humor to straight sports profiles to personal essays. The remaining nine pieces are short stories, some light-heartedly funny, others in a more tragicomic vein. The first section comes off least successfully, especially the baseball essays, which are not very humorous and require the reader to know something about teams and players around the turn of the century. The nonsports sketches, however, such as "What I Ought To Of Learnt in School," are still funny. The fiction portion, which includes two very good Jack Keefe stories, is vastly superior. Particularly memorable are the pathos of "Mamma," the sharp characterization in "Cured," and the dark humor of "Poodle" and "Second Curtain." All in all, recommended for general collections.—Morris A. Hounion, New York City Community Coll. Lib., Brooklyn

Mills, William. The Stillness in Moving Things: the world of Howard Nemerov.

Memphis State Univ. Pr. 1975. 150p. index. LC 75-31619. ISBN 0-87870-026-9. $8.95. LIT

Mills reconstructs Nemerov's phenomenological world, and sees his work as philosophically deriving from and poetically expounding upon some of the basic concepts of Hegel, Husserl, and Heidegger. Analyses of Nemerov's views of nature and contemporary urban life conclude the book. Mills writes with perceptive attentiveness to the texts of the poems, and he employs careful scholarship. Although he rightly believes that a comprehensive analysis of Nemerov, placing him in his proper literary tradition, would be premature, he has presented us with a thus necessarily limited but nonetheless seminal investigation of Nemerov's work, a fine companion to Julia Bartholomay's Shield of Perseus (Univ. of Florida Pr., 1972), as well as a springboard to further studies of the poet. Highly recommended for contemporary subject collections.—Marcia G. Fuchs, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Munro, H. H. The Complete Works of Saki.

Doubleday. 1976. 944p. intro. by Noël Coward. ISBN 0-385-05373-8. $9.95. LIT

This will serve to replace the o.p. Viking two-volume set, although it does not include the fragmentary memoir by Munro's sister that was part of it. (However, the biographical sketch is included in the Modern Library edition of the short stories. Apparently it is a reprinting of one of the Viking volumes.) It may be well for libraries to have so much of Munro at such a modest price, but any reader confronting Saki in toto faces a wit that grows methodical and wearisome and a feral cruelty suggesting that the childhood revenge fantasies had become pathological. The introduction, written in 1967, is jejune.—G. A. Masterton, Wayne State Univ. Libs., Detroit

Spender, Stephen. T. S. Eliot.

Viking. (Modern Masters). Mar. 1976. c. 200p. bibliog. LC 72-78997. ISBN 0-670-29184-6. $10; pap. ISBN 0-670-01988-7. $3.95. LIT

Of the mountain of criticism on Eliot, this will surely become one of the dozen or so indispensable works. To his analysis of Eliot's poems, poetic dramas, and prose, Spender brings the insights of his own distinguished career as poet, critic, and man of letters. There is wide agreement that Eliot never repeated himself and that his work seems to proceed from three almost totally distinct states of consciousness: the early one of the individual conditioned by aesthetic values ("Prufrock"); the middle one of consciousness conditioned by the values of civilization (The Waste Land); and the later one of the individual alone with God (The Four Quartets). Spender argues that it is Eliot's "ritualistic sensibility" (i.e., his "vision of the relationship between the living with the dead through the patterns of ritual") that links these various stages of development. He sees Eliot as one of the great poets of heaven and hell, but concedes that his vision of ordinary living was weak. This is a stimulating, luminous book.—Richard J. Kelly, Univ. of Minnesota Lib., Minneapolis

Springer, Mary Doyle. Forms of the Modern Novella.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. Feb. 1976. 224p. bibliog. index. $12. LIT

Defining the novella through close textual and formal criticism, Springer successfully achieves a sense of relationships in the rhetoric of fiction by analyzing masters, including James, Mann, Kafka, Crane, Faulkner, Lawrence, and Melville. Artfully structuring analysis through neatly categorized formal functions, she expertly defines, illustrates, discusses, then summarizes her insights about this distinctly beautiful form of creative writing. To provide a continuity for enthusiasm and curiosity aroused about this unique genre, Springer offers an appendix (lists for further reading), extensive notes, and a bibliography. The study exhibits the finest stylistic and academic qualities of truly helpful literary criticism. Recommended for graduate school libraries because of the specialized manner used to enhance the total aesthetic experience of the novella.—Laura M. Zaidman, formerly with Cherokee County P.L., Gaffney, S.C.

Terdiman, Richard. The Dialectics of Isolation: hero and society in the French novel from the realists to Proust.

Yale Univ. Pr. 1976. c. 270p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-300-01888-6. $12.50. LIT

The first part of this study deals with "the Great Century" of Stendhal, Balzac and Flaubert; the second, of equal length, with Proust. Terdiman shows how successive novels in "the great period" display a gradual "closing down of possibilities" for the hero's development. The hero who quests for happiness in the social world is turned back upon himself. With novelists, similarly, the subject-matter shifts from the outer world to immediate consciousness. This shift affects narrative techniques: history and suspense are devalued, meaning is revealed through metaphors, transitions become arbitrary or associational. Although Terdiman's thesis is not new and although one may wonder whether he must (as he claims) use two different critical approaches for the two parts of his book, the study is clearly and informatively written.—Ralph Flores, Dept. of English & Comparative Literature, Univ. of California, Irvine

MAKE YOUR SUMMER GARDEN LAST ALL YEAR

Patricia Shannon Kulla

...details ways other than conventional freezing and canning to bring fresh produce to the table the year round. Three main sections are devoted to drying, storing, and winter growing; each begins with general instructions and ends with individual directions for handling specific fruits, vegetables, edible flowers (such as marigold and nasturtiums), herbs, and nuts. Helpful drawings show how to build solar, oven, and electric dryers and storage facilities above and below ground. The section on winter growing stresses salad greens and sprouts (and again, there is a directory of plants suited for winter cultivation). This valuable guide offers a wealth of practical information, in clear, concise form.

—LIBRARY JOURNAL

LC 75-8460 $7.95

Lyceum Books
Post Office Box 113
Wilton, Connecticut 06897

"...Entertaining and delightful ...reproductions are excellent... ...the book is recommended..."
(Library Journal 10/15/75)

Graphic Arts/Lit.

Lear in the Original

Drawings and Limericks by Edward Lear, now first published in facsimile.

Introduction and notes by Herman W. Liebert, former Beinecke Librarian, Yale University.

234 pages, 110 illustrations
LC 75-2375 (CIP) $25.00

H. P. KRAUS
16 E. 46th St., New York, N.Y. 10017

Willcock, Malcolm M. A Commentary on the Iliad: based on the translation by Richmond Lattimore.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. May 1976. 293p. bibliog. index. LC 75-20894. $12.50; pap. $4.50. LIT

Willcock is one of our best Homer scholars. His commentary will serve students and teachers of literature, as well as the general reader, better than any other reference book. Each book of the poem is introduced by a summary. Literary, mythological, historical, geographical, cultural, and interpretive comments are referenced to lines. Illuminating, longer excursuses appear at the right places. Four short appendixes articulately discuss further scholarly and critical matters. Willcock's use of the Lattimore translation has the advantage of easier line reference, but Robert Fitzgerald's translation (LJ 10/1/74), had it been available to Willcock, might have offered a better literary counterpart to his superb scholarship.—Robert P. Sonkowsky, Dept. of Classics, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis

MUSIC

Balliett, Whitney. New York Notes: a journal of jazz, 1972-1975.

Houghton. Mar. 1976. 247p. ISBN 0-395-24296-7. $8.95. MUSIC

Balliett has been writing about jazz for almost 30 years, mostly for the New Yorker. During his career he has published several collections of criticism and biographical studies of jazz people. Selections of his New Yorker essays have appeared at intervals of about every five years, and New York Notes is a gathering of highly edited versions of these columns that fits into this timetable. The chronological arrangement of these essays allows an almost random sampling of the jazz scene in New York which, during this period, encompasses a great variety of styles, "schools," and performers. He writes about the great jazz performers who have passed on, such as Charlie Parker and Art Tatum, but who have left a valuable legacy to the exciting younger jazz generation. He describes the careers of those septuagenarians still performing, Sonny Greer, Mabel Mercer, the indestructible Eubie Blake, and he offers appropriate memorials for Duke Ellington, Harry Carney, and other great ones gone only recently. This is a provocative, thoughtful, and well-written chronology of the last four years. Balliett's approach and style are reminiscent of those of his late West Coast colleague Ralph Gleason, a high recommendation indeed.—Stephen M. Fry, UCLA Music Lib.

Culshaw, John. Reflections on Wagner's Ring.

Viking. Mar. 1976. 105p. $6.95. MUSIC

In his Ring Resounding (LJ 1/1/68) Culshaw told the story of his seven years as musical director for the first complete recording of Wagner's Ring of the Nibelung. Having lived so long with the work, he was uniquely qualified to deliver a series of broadcast talks in connection with the Metropolitan Opera production last season. This book is a response to the many requests received for copies of the transcripts. The volume falls naturally into five chapters, one each for the four parts of the giant drama and one for the author's conclusions (which were not broadcast). Culshaw is keenly aware of the tremendous existing Wagner literature; his aim is to present in sensitive and readable English what he finds to be Wagner's implications and intentions. Summing up, he explains—if he does not altogether justify—the Wieland Wagner style of production, suggesting further possible developments by the use of films as well as lights. And he discusses the mounting economic problems. Further, he considers the relationship between recording and Wagner's "impossible dream" in the theater.—Philip L. Miller, formerly with N.Y.P.L.

Gammond, Peter. Scott Joplin and the Ragtime Era.

St. Martin's. 1975. 223p. fwd. by Eubie Blake. illus. LC 75-25758. $8.95. MUSIC

Gammond's volume is the current entry in the ragtime sweepstakes, and it is an attempt to offer an account of ragtime for "the thousands of people who have just made a casual acquaintance with ragtime and Joplin." The book seems to have two aims. First, toward a simple account of Joplin's life and the development of the ragtime genre, it popularizes the more scholarly work of Rudi Blesh and Harriet Janis, They All Played Ragtime (LJ 10/15/50) and William J. Schafer and Johannes Riedel's The Art of Ragtime (LJ 1/15/74). Second, toward the updating and expansion of earlier published lists of piano rolls and recordings, it provides a thorough and very useful discography—especially with regard to material available on microgroove. The total impression, however, is a curious mixture of the slapdash and the meticulous. Recommended, as the author suggests, primarily to the "casually acquainted."—James Patrick, Cornell Univ.

Levy, Lester S. Give Me Yesterday: American history in song, 1890-1920.

Univ. of Oklahoma Pr. 1975. 420p. calligraphy by Henry W. Hoffman. illus. bibliog. index. LC 74-18119. ISBN 0-8061-1241-7. $17.50. MUSIC

The spirit of events and institutions which helped bring our country into modern times is preserved in the songs inspired by them; songs that, as the author points out in his introduction, "help keep green the fading laurels that our heritage has earned." Levy cites scores of songs from this bygone era that tell the stories of local anecdotes or monumental events, and he liberally quotes their lyrics in his delightful essays linking each song with its historical context. The title, taken from Ernest R. Ball's maudlin song of 1906, "Turn Back the Universe and Give Me Yesterday," appropriately indicates the pervading element of nostalgia in this book. It is the author's third volume devoted to popular music of earlier days, following Grace Notes in American History: Popular Sheet Music from 1820 to 1900 (LJ 11/15/67) and Flashes of Merriment: a Century of Humorous Songs in America, 1805-1905 (LJ 1/15/72). The original covers and the tunes (without accompaniment) are reproduced for 53 songs, and four appear in full color plates. As you open the first pages of this book prepare to be caught up in the excitement of the events portrayed in these songs and also to wipe a nostalgic tear from your eye.—Stephen M. Fry, UCLA Music Lib.

Philosophy

Adams, E. M. Philosophy and the Modern Mind.

Univ. of North Carolina Pr. 1975. 312p. index. LC 74-23458. ISBN 0-8078-1242-0. $12.95. PHIL

This fine book has four main theses. Though man is a biological being, he is primarily a cultural being capable of selfhood, which he finds in his mental life, in his semantic, logical, and value dimensions. If he embraces false assumptions about the principles and powers of the human mind, he creates a gulf between himself and the reality which he must understand if he is to live a meaningful, civilized life. Contemporary Western man has embraced false assumptions and consequently is thwarted in his efforts to live successfully. Once the humanistic categories of value and meaning are validated by sound epistemological and ontological principles, the humanities can reassert themselves as the rightful determinant of his self-image and world view. Adams' discussion of our malaise is grounded in a sophisticated consideration of basic principles and is subtle, humane, and synoptic, making the book much superior to others of similar intent.—Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philosophy, York Coll., CUNY

Allen, Michael J. B. Marsilio Ficino: the "Philebus" commentary.

pub. under the auspices of the Center for Medieval & Renaissance Studies by Univ. of California Pr. 1975. 560p. bibliog. index. LC 73-80826. ISBN 0-520-02503-2. $20. PHIL

Marsilio Ficino, the greatest and most influential of the Florentine Platonists, published a commentary on Plato's Philebus in 1496. The commentary in one sense does not cover more than one-fifth of the dialogue; but since Ficino, along with the whole Neo-Platonic tradition, believes in the essential unity of Plato's teaching, he does not hesitate to appeal to other dialogues, particularly Republic, Timaeus, Parmenides, to explicate the Philebus. In this way, his commentary becomes a series of meditations on all of Plato's text. Allen's annotated translation, which accompanies his edition of the Latin text, allows English readers to study Ficino's Platonism firsthand. It is a worthy complement to Marcel's text and French translation of Ficino's commentary on the Symposium.—Seth Benardete, Dept. of Classics, New York Univ.

Coughlan, Neil. Young John Dewey: an essay in American intellectual history.
Univ. of Chicago Pr. 1975. bibliog. index. $10.75. PHIL
Dewey's youthful concern to bring religious knowledge and moral insight into line with his belief in science and his sense of human freedom makes a fascinating if complicated story. For Dewey, Hegelianism reconciled science and religion but gave each a perspective which he finally could not accept. It also prompted but did not satisfy Dewey's interest in psychology. The theme Coughlan takes unifies his material but, as social history, obscures political and economic influences. The version of Hegelianism he chooses makes Dewey's break seem sharper than it probably was. The minor characters, especially Torrey, Morris, and Mead, are portrayed deftly but given weaker minds than they seem really to have had. Still, the book is a delight to read and provides a great deal of social history, relaxed rummaging, and explanation for the nonphilosopher.—Leslie Armour, Dept. of Philosophy, Cleveland State Univ.

Gadamer, Hans-Georg. Hegel's Dialectic: five hermeneutical studies.
Yale Univ. Pr. Feb. 1976. 116p. tr. by P. Christopher Smith. ISBN 0-300-01909-2. $10. PHIL
Gadamer's essays focus on the development of Hegel's dialectic in his two major works, the Phenomenology of Mind and Science of Logic. Tracing the development of the notion of the dialectic from the classical Greek thinkers to the modern thinkers, Gadamer demonstrates that Hegel "worked out his own dialectical method by extending the dialectic of the Ancients." Specific topics covered in the text are the doctrine of the inverted world, the dialectic of self-consciousness, the idea of Hegel's logic, and the relationship of Hegel's thought to that of Martin Heidegger. The essay on Heidegger reveals that Heidegger's dependence on Hegel (even though Gadamer is careful to point out that Heidegger rejected Hegel's notion of logical science) would be sufficient to explain the various levels of intelligibility in Heidegger's work. Excellently translated, this book is a valuable if demanding addition to Gadamer's philosophical work now available in English.—George D. Dalin, Dept. of Philosophy, DePaul Univ., Chicago

Ingle, Dwight J. Is It Really So?: a guide to clear thinking.
Westminster. Mar. 1976. 160p. pap. $2.95. PHIL
This competent, concise, and plainly written introductory work is addressed to the general reader, especially to young adults. The author presents his views on mind, nature, science, pseudo-science, freedom, and reasoning in the spirit of tolerance, touching on alternatives and inviting criticism. Several chapters explain common fallacies in reasoning. Brief illustrations are drawn from familiar sources (bits of poetry, Lewis Carroll, etc.) and the author's own life experience. There is also a valuable chapter on the need for ethical guides to the uses of knowledge.—William Cunningham, Dept. of Philosophy, Cheyney State Coll., Pa.

Warnock, Mary. Imagination.
Univ. of California Pr. May 1976. 209p. index. illus. ISBN 0-571-10397-9. $13.95. PHIL
Beginning arbitrarily with a notion of imagination found in Hume's Treatise—according to which it is an image-making faculty that compels us to believe in a world of continuously existing objects, enables us to recognize or reidentify them, and is the foundation of all our thought and action—Warnock traces the notion's development through Kant's transcendental imagination, conceived as the ground of our perceptual understanding of the world; through Kant's and Schelling's notion of the imagination as free of the concepts of the understanding and therefore able to assume the aesthetic role of creative representation; through the Coleridge/Wordsworth notion of the imagination as a distinctive kind of power feelingly to represent an image so that it has universal significance; to the phenomenological accounts of imagination of Sartre, Ryle, and Wittgenstein. The book concludes with a brief chapter arguing that education should be chiefly concerned with cultivating imagination. A useful historical study which would have been better if the last chapter had been either omitted or argued at greater length and in greater detail.—Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philosophy, York Coll., CUNY

POETRY

Hadas, Rachel. Starting from Troy.
47p. LC 74-25957. ISBN 0-87923-119-X.
Hall, Donald. The Town of Hill.
44p. LC 74-25959. ISBN 0-87923-126-2.
Rubin, Larry. All My Mirrors Lie.
48p. LC 74-25956. ISBN 0-87923-120-3.
Spacks, Barry. Teaching the Penguins to Fly.
48p. LC 74-25958. ISBN 0-87923-118-1.
Sullivan, Nancy. Telling It.
47p. LC 74-30909. ISBN 0-87923-121-1.
ea. vol.: Godine. (Chapbook Series). 1975. $4; set $18. POETRY
All the authors represented in this second installment of the series are based in a more or less traditional, iambic poetry, too frequently rejected by poets today.

Larry Rubin is the best of the group; his poems give tight, revealing glimpses of his life. The "Bachelor" poems, spread throughout, are excellent in their irony. A precise, driving intensity chisels the poems to his dead sister.

Nancy Sullivan is also a competent poet. Maybe a third of her poems break through their forms to touch something very close to herself. Most of the others pass well enough, quiet and unimposing. The long first sequence, "Life Suite," might have been improved had the poet used "I" instead of "she."

Donald Hall, the best known of these poets, has produced a very mediocre book. Various small towns appear, distinguished from each other only by their place names, with no real landscape coming into view. Poems in the final section begin to face up to the personal, but even here one gets the impression that Hall has opted for the easy image.

Hadas speaks of the death of her father, then other deaths, and attempts to give meaning by using literary and biblical references, and boring rhymes. Her own feelings never come anywhere near the surface.

Spacks also continually ruins his poems by inserting literary references, but really he has nothing to write about. His poems are sometimes ambitious, for the most part well crafted, but they leave the reader dry.—Rochelle Ratner, Poetry Columnist, "Soho Weekly News," New York

Hogan, Michael. Letters for My Son.
Unicorn Pr. 1975. 23p. LC 75-12196. ISBN 0-87775-087-4. $10; pap. $3 POETRY
One would expect these poems—written in the maximum security cellblock in Arizona State Prison—to be fierce, angry, overly confessional. Quite the contrary, Hogan is a master craftsman, quiet, with a positive, uplifting humor. He writes playfully about experiences within the prison: in one poem he imagines a dripping faucet to be rain while he is sitting under a fir tree; in another poem a guard pretends to be an army sergeant. The marvelous "Confessions Of A Jailhouse Lawyer" begins: "I grow old/ Searching through dog-eared tomes/ For the one case, the clincher/

Subject: Poetry
Title: Season Songs
Author: Ted Hughes
Illus.: Leonard Baskin
Remarks: "A picture of life, terrible and triumphant.... Splendid....A wise investment." —Starred Review, School Library Journal
"The superior quality of both the poems and illustrations recommends this volume." —Starred Review, ALA Booklist
670-62725-9 $10.00
THE VIKING PRESS
625 Madison Avenue, New York 10022
Nothing in this advertisement prevents anyone from quoting or charging any price for Viking books.

Which will set me free."-These poems alternate with tender, gentle recollections of home and family. A small book that pleads for a wide readership. (Unicorn plans to issue a complete collection of Hogan's work in 1977.)—Rochelle Ratner, Poetry Columnist, Soho Weekly News," New York

Meyer, Thomas. The Umbrella of Aesculapius.

Jargon Society. 1975. unpaged. drawings by Paul Sinodhinos. LC 75-21930. ISBN 0-912-330-04-X. signed ltd. ed. $17.50. pap. ISBN 0-912-33005-8. $7.50. POETRY

"Who will preserve the old names, not as lore in aging books . . . but will set them to dance in the new days, the new discourse we have after all (Amerikanoi!) fashioned?" asks Robert Kelly, introducing this handsomely designed and illustrated book. Meyer offers to do so, in poems full of lore and rite, myth and magic, drawing on Greek, Egyptian, Norse, and Tibetan source material, among others. He views poetry as "that Art, that branch of magic & kabbalistic root that celebrates presence or simply there." So the poems are quietly impersonal, well crafted, rhythmically alive; if they seem slight, they are nevertheless emotionally clean and refreshing. From "Ten Love Notes": "Even Eros/ stops.// caught/ midair, by your/ eyes." To read is to relive the presences of the old gods.—Seamus Cooney, Dept. of English, Western Michigan Univ., Kalamazoo

Morris, John N. The Life Beside This One.

Atheneum. 1975. 66p. LC 75-4086. ISBN 0-689-10669-6. $7.95. POETRY

One way the success of a book of poems can be measured is by the number of brief, quiet, pleasurable jolts it can deliver to the imagination. A half-dozen or so fine poems attest that Morris can provide such impulses; yet they are generated too infrequently in the 46 pieces gathered in his second book. When Morris sacrifices his brilliant, hard-edged re-creations of the familiar and the commonplace ("Burning the Houses: A History," "Running It Backward," "A Child's Nativity") for philosophical, ontological musings, he neglects the source of his strength. His power lies in his incisive social commentary ("Among the Alternatives"), his perception of childhood memories ("Thanksgiving"), and in his sensitivity for tenuous links between human and animal life ("Jacob," "Looking at Animals").—Charles R. Andrews, Southeastern Massachusetts Univ. Lib., North Dartmouth

St. George, Mark. Los Angeles: city of dreams; up the mellow yellow brick road.

Crown. 1976. 192p. illus. ISBN 0-517-52325-6. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-517-52449-X. $6.95. POETRY

At times one has the feeling that St. George, a screenwriter and filmmaker by profession, sees himself as doing for Los Angeles what Hart Crane did for New York. Sadly, he lacks the intelligence, poetic skill, or taste for such a formidable task. His subject matter, a panorama of L.A. street scenes, types, and clichés is nearly always trivial or banal, and his vocabulary is littered with the detritus of the "acid" age. Even as light verse goes, this would be a fairly dismal and tasteless performance, but St. George's pretensions toward "vision" and his uninterrupted stream of clichés put this work in a category all its own, a kind of McLuhanized pop blitz.—James Venit, Dept. of English, Queens Coll., CUNY

Saner, Reg. Climbing into the Roots.

Harper. 1976. 96p. ISBN 0-06-013762-2. $6.95; pap. ISBN 0-06-013763-0. $2.95. POETRY

Saner is the recipient of the first Walt Whitman Award, given by the Copernicus Society to a previously unpublished poet, but most of these poems are dismal attempts to convey a sense of nature as it appears near the Continental Divide. Always ill at ease, Saner uses images which inadvertently stress the separation between man and nature: "I can hear each prosperous frog/ wind himself up/ like a thick green watch." One must struggle through the book (whose logical construction eludes me) to find a few poems rooted in Saner's everyday world. He is comfortable here, so the poems convince. "And your small, thick hands./ Their anger has made my own hand/ tremble, passing it on."—Deborah H. Williams, Binghamton P.L., N.Y.

The Soldier and the Lady: poems of Archilochos and Sappho.

Elizabeth Pr. 1975. 37p. tr. by Barriss Mills. $16; pap. $8. POETRY

This handsomely printed volume pays homage to the fragments of two of the earliest and most delicious Greek lyricists. Archilochos, prized as a great innovator in meter and subject matter, was highly regarded by the Greeks (who were brought up on his poems as well as those of Homer and Hesiod). Mills translates the fragments—sometimes straining to demonstrate the poet's energy and investment in living for the moment—"If they don't put an end soon to this public mourning, Perikles, neither the city nor the citizens/ will enjoy the feasting." Faithful to colloquial language and images, the fragments (sometimes three on a page) have the startling effect of an almost haiku: "Her hair and her breasts smelling so good/ even an old man would love her." Archilochos the soldier clearly knew how to run from the battlefield: "Remember/ how chancy it is to be a man." The lady, Sappho, speaks to us in a clear voice also: all the world and nature must properly submit to love. Mills captures more of the lyric rhythms in Sappho's poems, particularly in the longer "Hymn to Aphrodite" and the famous ode in which Sappho describes how she feels at the sight of the beloved "and the seductive laughter/ that makes the heart in my breast beat fast./ When I look at you for a moment, I can't speak." As in any translation of these two lyricists this book leaves us yearning for more music, yet grateful to the gods that we have something from "the tenth muse."—Rosaly DeMaios Roffman, Dept. of English, Indiana Univ. of Pennsylvania

Political Science & International Affairs

Beard, Edmund & Stephen Horn. Congressional Ethics: the view from the House.

Brookings. 1975. 87p. LC 74-1434. pap. ISBN 0-8157-0855-6. $2.50. POLSCI/GOVT

The public's opinion of Congress has made congressmen more aware of the ethical issues that surround their official conduct. Yet the survey and in-depth interview data analyzed by these political scientists document a widespread sense of confusion among House members as to what constitutes proper or improper behavior in matters involving nepotism, campaign finance, relations with lobbyists, and the like. Confusion about ethical standards, coupled with the fact that most Representatives feel their behavior is not especially bad, helps explain congressional restraint and inaction in instituting reform measures. An important addition to the scant literature on the role and influence of ethics in the legislative process.—Edward C. Dreyer, Dept. of Political Science, Univ. of Tulsa, Okla.

Dinerstein, Herbert S. The Making of a Missile Crisis: October 1962.

Johns Hopkins. Apr. 1976. 336p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-8018-1788-9. $14.95. INT AFFAIRS

Dinerstein skillfully demonstrates how the 1962 Cuban missile crisis resulted from long years of Cold War rivalries and Latin American revolutionism. Starting with the 1954 U.S. intervention in Guatemala, he shows how the many aspects of America's anti-Communist politics, the Soviet quest for strategic supremacy, the ambitions of the Latin Left, and Castro's clumsy revolution slowly became entwined and then knotted in the October crisis. Dinerstein's account offers exhaustive analysis of the Soviet and Cuban press, keen insight, and the demonstration of a simple but forceful lesson: statesmen, like generals, are always fighting the last crisis; in spite of their acclaimed rationality and access to secret data, international politicians are locked by remembered experiences into dealing with new situations with outmoded "mental furniture." Viewed from the basis of the upbuilding Cuban crisis and subsequent events, they seem determined, like the Bourbons, never to learn and never to forget.—Charles DeBenedetti, Dept. of History, Univ. of Toledo, Ohio

Guttman, Daniel & Barry Willner. The Shadow Government: the government's multibillion-dollar giveaway of its decision-making powers to private management consultants, "experts," and think tanks.

Pantheon. 1976. 352p. intro. by Ralph Nader. index. LC 75-10365. ISBN 0-394-49244-7. $10. BUS/GOVT

This investigative report centers on alleged abuses in that "invisible" arena of governmental activity involving the awarding of lucrative contracts to private industry. The problem is that along with the contracts go the decision-making powers as well. In light of the rapid proliferation of bureaucratic agencies and their constituencies, such contractual arrangements amount to a potentially serious usurpation of government power. The public-private distinction is difficult to define as lines of authority and accountability become increasingly diffused, with the decision makers often ending up responsible to no one. Though these detailed case studies are couched in bureaucratic terminology that can be suffocating at times, they undoubtedly merit the attention of a concerned citizenry.—William H. Hoffman, Kansas City P.L., Mo.

Hull, Roger H. The Irish Triangle: conflict in Northern Ireland.

Princeton Univ. Pr. Apr. 1976. 305p. bibliog. index. $15. POL SCI

In this book, Hull has the courage to offer a solution to the Irish tangle. His plan seems reasonable and considered and, aside from suggestions for the creation of a UN (or NATO, or EEC) peacekeeping force, it looks workable. Hull bases his proposals on an analysis of the history and the legal aspects of the Irish troubles. He tries to achieve objectivity by presenting the case from three viewpoints—those of London, of Belfast, and of Dublin. Because Hull is a careful and thorough researcher, this device is most instructive and should be especially helpful to readers without extensive background. Although his style is self-conscious and turgid at times, Hull's attention to the causes and possible cures of the conflict is disciplined. His work will certainly cause much discussion. His solutions may look fanciful to those with close familiarity with Ireland's problems, but his scholarship will be appreciated by all.—Walter Darnell Jacobs, Dept. of Government & Politics, Univ. of Maryland, College Park

Israel, John & Donald W. Klein. Rebels and Bureaucrats: China's December 9ers.

Univ. of California Pr. (Studies of the East Asian Inst., Columbia Univ.). 1975. 300p. illus. LC 74-18757. ISBN 0-520-02861-9. $15. HIST POL SCI

The December 9ers take their name from the 1935 student demonstrations held in Peking in protest of Japanese encroachments in North China. This account examines the December 9ers from three perspectives. First, it discusses the concerns which brought the students into the protest, and describes from contemporary records the character of several student leaders. Then it traces the careers of these former student rebels from 1936 to 1966. (The denouement of their careers came unexpectedly early when most of them served as targets for a new generation of student rebels, the Red Guards of 1966.) The book also attempts to provide a consideration of the role of former student rebels in revolutionary regimes. The study concludes that the December 9ers were only "utilitarian Marxists" who saw the Communist party as a means to achieve the nationalistic goal of China's liberation from foreign domination. It suggests that they rejected the populist element of Mao's ideas and so were part of the remnants of the bourgeois class against which the Cultural Revolution was directed. This well-researched book will interest China specialists and readers concerned with the social rules of student rebels.—David D. Buck, Dept. of History, Univ. of Wisconsin-Milwaukee

Meltsner, Arnold J. Policy Analysts in the Bureaucracy.

Univ. of California Pr. May 1976. 350p. index. LC 74-30529. ISBN 0-520-02948-8. $12. GOVT POL SCI

Meltsner has written a detailed, vivid, and penetrating account of what functions policy analysts perform and how the analysts behave in the federal bureaucracy. Furthermore, the author must be lauded for his systematic analysis of the ways that policy advisers' input can be influenced by the people they advise and by the bureaucratic environment; this is a public policy linkage which has not received sufficient scholarly attention in the past. Meltsner has based his fine study on interviews with numerous analysts and on his own experience as a government consultant. He is writing primarily for students of the subject, but his clear prose renders the book accessible to lay readers interested in policy making and evaluating processes.—Jacques Fomerand, Dept. of Political Science, Queens Coll., CUNY

Ogul, Morris. Congress Oversees the Bureaucracy.

Univ. of Pittsburgh Pr. Apr. 1976. 232p. bibliog. index. LC 75-33546. $9.95. POL SCI GOVT

Ogul explores a series of factors affecting Congressional oversight or supervision of the federal bureaucracy's "carrying out" of legislative policy. The author examines the oversight activities of three House committees: the Post Office and Civil Service; the Judiciary, especially Subcommittee 5; and the Government Operation's Special Subcommittee on Invasion of Privacy. In the process, he introduces a new concept of legislative oversight, and concludes that Congressional committees only give intermittent supervision to agencies' activities. Ogul pays particular attention to the influences of a committee's staff, as well as the manner in which the legislators' personal regard for top agency officials promotes or inhibits oversight. The author's analysis of the dimensions of legislative oversight marks this book as an important study.—Steven Puro, Dept. of Political Science, St. Louis Univ.

Sakharov, Andrei D. My Country and the World.

Knopf. 1975. 109p. tr. by Guy V. Daniels. LC 75-24963. ISBN 0-394-40226-X. $5.95. INT AFFAIRS

Physicist, political dissident, and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, Sakharov has written a thematically similar, but more pessimistic and politically sophisticated version of his 1968 work, Progress, Coexistence and Intellectual Freedom (LJ 12/15/68). The earlier essay stressed the need for detente and for a respect of individual rights, and in that essay Sakharov revealed a belief in the basic good of the Soviet system. In this second essay, however, Sakharov is very critical of Soviet institutions and believes that detente is worthless unless the U.S. makes it contingent upon liberalization of Soviet society. Also, he fears that disunity among Western countries will enable the U.S.S.R. to use detente for undermining Western democracy. The book is well organized and clearly written, and the translation is excellent. An extremely important work, which should be read in conjunction with his earlier work.—Pamela Joan Hersh, Librarian, New Jersey State Dept. of Education

Psychology&Psychiatry

Benziger, Barbara Field. Speaking Out: therapists and patients—how they cure and cope with mental illness today.

Walker. Apr. 1976. 320p. index. ISBN 0-8027-0484-0. $15. PSYCH

I was delighted with the idea of this work, a description of the practical experience of psychiatric treatment through interviews with therapists and patients involved in "good" (according to the author) hospitals, aftercare facilities, outpatient therapy, and biochemical therapies. The chapters on hospitals and half-way houses contain particularly valuable descriptions of admission procedures, daily activities, and even the physical appearance of the wards and day-care units. Other chapters on behavior modification, TA, and on psychopharmacy are equally successful in clearly outlining the theoretical basis for and the actual experience of treatment. However, the author's uncritical acceptance of such questionable systems as diet, mega-vitamin, and scream therapy is troublesome. Their presentation as medical certainties, with no hint of the controversies they have generated, seriously compromises what is otherwise a well-balanced contribution toward the education of the psychiatric consumer.—James Charney, Dept. of Psychiatry, Univ. of Washington, Seattle

Evans, Richard I. R. D. Laing: the man and his ideas.

Dutton. 1976. 210p. index. LC 75-14294. ISBN 0-525-18765-0. $10.95; pap. ISBN 0-525-47411-0. $3.95 PSYCH

In this latest volume of his interview series, the author includes some of Laing's previously unpublished papers; since Laing does most of the talking, the book is as much Laing's as Evans'. Their discussions are structured in a pleasantly loose way, and though many of the ideas may be familiar to Laing devotees, the book succeeds admirably in evoking a sense of Laing's mind and personality in action. The interviews cover a wide range of topics: Freud and Jung; drugs, war, mind-control and Watergate; Eastern meditation techniques as "schizoid" therapy; the shortcomings of psychiatric training and methods; the current political and therapeutic scene. Evans, in short, puts to Laing the kind of questions which Laing's best readers might very well have wished to ask. He gives those readers a voice.—Ralph Reeves, Dept. of English & Comparative Literature, Univ. of California, Irvine

Fast, Julius. The Pleasure Book.
Stein & Day. 1975. 260p. illus. index. LC 75-15815. ISBN 0-8128-1871-7. $8.95. PSYCH
Seventy-five lightweight vignettes on how people enjoy themselves are the substance of this book. Pleasures brought by the five senses, by creativity and contemplation, by bringing order out of chaos, by flirting with danger, even by work, are among those talked of with varying degrees of clarity (lots of "oh-wow's," "right-on's," and "far-out's" here). Pleasures of mate-finding, sex, bearing and raising children, are not among those discussed. The idea behind the book seems to be to introduce the idea that it is o.k. to enjoy yourself and that you can "expand your consciousness" by listening non-judgmentally to other people talk about their pleasures and by trying some of these yourself. Not a bad idea, but not a new one either. Because of Fast's earlier Body Language the book may be asked for.—Bonnie Jo Dopp, San Francisco P.L.

James, Muriel & Louis M. Savary. The Heart of Friendship.
Harper. Feb. 1976. 224p. illus. ISBN 0-06-064117-7. $6.95. PSYCH
Integrating Eric Berne's T. A., Maslow's theory of needs, and Fromm's ideas about the art of love, the authors examine friendship (prerequisites, process, needs, interactions, expectancies, joys, and stresses) to define and celebrate its most rewarding form—the "third self" friendship. There—while preserving their own uniqueness—two or more people create a new entity, a relationship with a life and self of its own. Such a "third self" friendship is a potential in any kind of relationship, though it rarely becomes a reality. The authors provide numerous vignettes about real-life friendships and quotes from Plato to Doris Day. Instead of being convinced over and over again how great the "third self" friendship is, I would have liked to learn more about how to make it happen and last. Breezily written and inspiring, the book may be popular, even though, for me, it falls short of its potential.—Marie Bednar, Pennsylvania State Univ. Libs., University Park

White, John. Everything You Want To Know About TM—Including How To Do It.
Pocket Bks: S. & S., dist. by Pocket Bks-Ace. 1976. 191p. $1.95. PARAPSYCH/PSYCH
While White makes no claim to infallibility, he does approach the Transcendental Meditation phenomenon as a former practitioner of TM and a careful explorer of other similar groups. His interest in the nature of consciousness and human potential has already resulted in numerous books and articles—as well as an open mind governed by caution and skepticism. He examines systems of meditation in general and TM in particular, going into detail about how to meditate, leaving his readers to decide if TM is the answer for them. He does touch on the unpleasant effects which some experience in meditation, as well as the centrality in TM of the secret word or "mantra" which can only be obtained from qualified TM teachers. While his appendix includes an eyeopening report on the costs, holdings, etc. of the movement headed by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, White's book is not an exposé. Although he makes clear why the system fell short for him, he always retains his good will and balance.—Ruth S. Haas, formerly with Harvard Coll. Lib.

Parapsychology & Occultism

Godwin, John. Unsolved: the World of the Unknown.
Doubleday. Feb. 1976. ISBN 0-385-05823-3. $8.95. PARAPSYCH
I had hoped this book might fill one of those deplorable reference gaps and describe some of the famous missing person cases. But it doesn't—it's just another grab-bag like Godwin's previous This Baffling World, capitalizing on the current fad for the gruesome aspects of exorcism, vampires, werewolves, Jack the Ripper, zombies, hauntings, etc. To give an idea of its lack of focus, it also includes missing ships, lost Aztec and Inca treasure, ESP, unlucky gems, the disappearance of Michael Rockefeller and a rather interesting chapter on Australian aborigine magic. Without copious catalog notes, this means information you can't possibly retrieve. Another serious drawback for librarians is the book's sensationalism and superficiality. The emphasis on blood lust is disturbing, coming from an author who appears to pride himself on his journalistic expertise.—Jeanne S. Bagby, Tucson P.L., Ariz.

Welding, Patsy Ruth. Let ESP Work for You.
Dial. Feb. 1976. 256p. ISBN 0-8037-5346-2. $7.95. PARAPSYCH
Autobiographical accounts by "lay" psychics are becoming plentiful. This one follows the usual pattern, describing how the author discovered her ESP, developed it, and how others can do the same. Claude Bristol wrote popular books on this decades ago, but each person who discovers the "power of positive thinking" for himself seems to think he is doing it for the first time and shares the good news with a book. The tone of this one is less inflated and more level-headed than most, but it too is written in a vacuum, with no recognition of the extensive parapsychological literature. No matter how well intentioned, such books are misleading, since they make no allowance for "normal" explanations of the feats described. Moreover, no one yet knows if following the prescription of a natural psychic would work as well for someone without such a gift. If you have Upton Sinclair's Mental Radio (Thomas, 1962) or Rosalind Heywood's ESP (Dutton, 1964), you don't need this.—Rhea A. White, East Meadow P.L., N.Y.

Religion

Dunn, James D. G. Jesus and the Spirit.
Westminster. 1975. 515p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-334-00785-2. $19.50. REL
Interest in religious experience, especially charismatic experience, is increasing. Dunn's thorough New Testament study concentrates on the religious experience of Jesus and the early Christians and tries to identify how they knew God and what was distinctive about their experience. For Jesus, the experience of God is a power to heal man's brokenness, as a sign of the end-time. Dunn also discusses the ecstatic experiences of Jesus' followers, such as speaking in tongues and the gift of healing in their biblical context. A solid, clearly written biblical study of an important issue, quite accessible to the general reader.—James S. Nelson, Dept. of Religion & Philosophy, North Park Coll., Chicago

Katz, Steven T., ed. Jewish Philosophers.
Bloch. 1975. 299p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-7590. ISBN 0-8197-0387-7. $10.95; pap. $5.95. PHIL/REL
Katz, who teaches at Dartmouth, surveys the ideas of the great Jewish philosophers from early Biblical and medieval times down to the present, describing among many others, the works of Philo, Halevi, Maimonides, Albo, Spinoza, Mendelssohn, Buber, and Heschel. An especially valuable section reviews post-Holocaust thought. The background analyses bring the reviews of each man's ideas into a logical, connected conspectus that beautifully illustrates the interaction of the religion with secular thought. This is a scholarly and readable survey that is highly recommended to both philosophy and religion collections.—George Adelman, Neurosciences Research Program, M.I.T., Boston

Miller, Glenn T. Religious Liberty in America: history and prospects.
Westminster. Mar. 1976. pap. $3.50. HIST/REL
Freedom of religion in America will be a prominent topic in Bicentennial discussions and programs. This study began as a revision of a lecture by Robert T. Handy on the subject, was developed in the context of a church study group, and evolved into an independent study warmly commended by Handy. Miller gives a concise and succinct survey of the concept of religious liberty from Colonial America through the constitutional process and through the complex social and political forces that have shaped church-state relationships in our day, pointing up issues and raising questions without taking a dogmatic stance. The author draws on a wide range of primary and secondary literature in the text and in the supplementary bibliography. A balanced and helpful survey.—John B. Trotti, Union Theological Seminary Lib., Richmond, Va.

Parker, T. H. L. John Calvin: a biography.
Westminster. Apr. 1976. 190p. illus. bibliog. index. $10.95. BIOG/REL

The Reformation scholar will find that this new Calvin biography, the first substantial work of its kind to appear in nearly 40 years, adds little to known facts about the personal history of the Genevan reformer, though it does draw more attention to Calvin's university days than previous biographies and makes more of his biblical scholarship and preaching. The uniqueness of the work lies in its interpretation. Animated by the ecumenical spirit of post-Vatican II and the influence of the century's greatest protestant theologian, Karl Barth, Parker's portrait of Calvin draws the character and stature of a man who is seen not so much a provincial reformer as a doctor of the Catholic Church. While Calvin is pictured as a man who at once insisted on the religious rigorism of the sect and had an aristocratic disposition for order, shaded paths, and classical learning, the accent in Parker's assessment of Calvin's theology is on the universal claims of the church. Though critics may take issue with an "overly Catholic" portrayal of Calvin, this superb biography by an established Calvin scholar will survive the current popular appeals of "theology as biography" to become a standard work in the field of Reformation history.—Murray L. Wagner, Bethany Theological Seminary Lib., Oak Brook, Ill.

Sekida, Katsuki. Zen Training: methods and philosophy.
Weatherhill, dist. by Lippincott. 1975. 258p. LC 75-17573. ISBN 0-8348-0111-6. $8.95. REL

Though there are many fine books on Zen that may be considered inspirational or theoretical, anyone looking for specific information on how to start practicing zazen (Zen meditation) has been restricted mainly to the valuable but limited Three Pillars of Zen by Philip Kapleau. Written by a lay teacher with 60 years of experience in zazen, this book provides everyone from absolute beginner to experienced student with detailed, progressive information and discussion on breathing, posture, distraction, actions of mind, physiology, mood, laughter, kensho, and samadhi. The author's point of view puts practice into perspective, emphasizing the lifelong development of samadhi rather than overemphasizing the instantaneous experience of kensho. This book will be a classic.—M. V. W. Wolfe, Los Angeles County P.L. System, Huntington Park

Soelle, Dorothee. Suffering.
Fortress. 1975. 192p. tr. by Everett Kalin. LC 75-13036. ISBN 0-8006-0419-9. $8.95. PHIL REL

This book deals with the socio-political sufferings of our times—the suffering of victims of wars, economic exploitation, political oppression, and the like. The author rejects the Calvinistic view that such sufferings are chastisements of God; similarly, she criticizes other popular views on suffering which she characterizes as "Christian masochism" and "theological sadism." Social and political conditions under which people suffer should be changed; where suffering has reached a stage of irreversible mutilation and brutalization, the proper response is to follow the example of Christ as formulated by Simone Weil: one should share the suffering of the victims. The book's treatment, being popular rather than scholarly, would be of interest to the layman.—Wesley Teo, Dept. of Philosophy, Chicago State Univ.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

Hunt, Charles B. Death Valley: geology, ecology, archaeology.
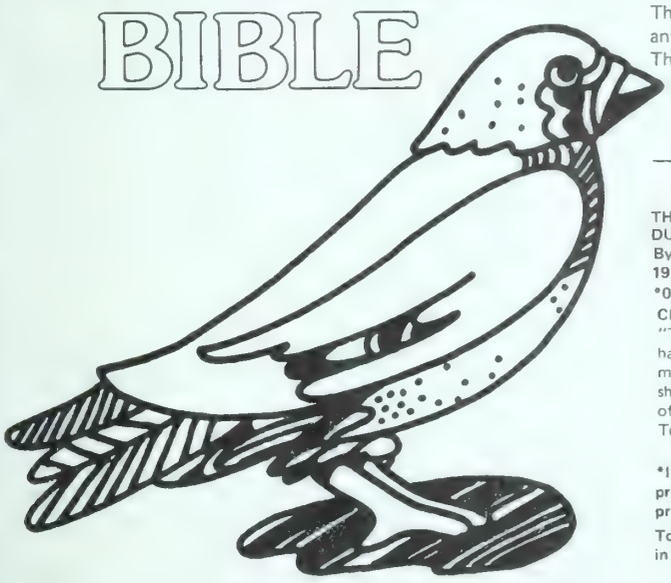
Univ. of California Pr. 1975. 234p. illus. maps. bibliog. index. LC 74-84094. ISBN 0-520-02460-5. $14.95. EARTH SCI

Three out-of-print U.S. Geological Survey papers by Hunt et al. and one by Alice Hunt have been combined in a less-technical format. The text is sometimes a little too brief: e.g., The "Present Problem in Death Valley" is covered by only one page of text; mining history in less than eight; archaeology is presented in 30; and biogeography in 20. The book is well illustrated with line drawings and photographs. Suitable for public and high school li-

FROM JOHN WILEY

A BIRD WATCHER'S BIBLE



A biologists reference. A students guide. A fundamental and comprehensive book in avian biology. Essential for every library collection.

FUNDAMENTALS OF ORNITHOLOGY, 2nd Ed.
By Josselyn Van Tyne; and Andrew J. Berger, University of Hawaii.

Everything you want to know about birds. With 528 original pen and ink drawings by George M. Sutton. A Classification of World Birds by Families, with physical characteristics, range, habits, food, breeding, technical diagnosis, classification, and references for each family.

This new edition has been updated to reflect advances in the field over the last 15 years. Topics covered include: anatomical structures and functions of birds; behavior patterns; voice and other sound production related to behavior; world wide distribution of bird families; migration; treatment of courtship; nest building; and introduction to taxonomy and nomenclature.

The first edition, published in 1959 has been called: ". . . the best Ornithology in any language . . . a volume of great competence and good balance." Ernst Mayr, The Wilson Bulletin

FUNDAMENTALS OF ORNITHOLOGY, 2nd Ed.
By Josselyn Van Tyne and Andrew J. Berger
1976 808 pp. $22.50 *0-471-89965-8 CIP +75-20430

Also for nature hobbyists:

THE SHELL MAKERS: INTRODUCING MOLLUSKS
By Alan Solem.
1974 289 pp.
*0-471-81210-2 +73-20315
CIP $9.95
"The serious shell collector who has always wanted to know what manner of creature produced a shell will welcome the publication of this book." American Biology Teacher, 1/75.

MARINE AQUARIUM KEEPING: THE SCIENCE, ANIMALS, AND ART
By Stephen Spotte.
1973 171 pp.
*0-471-81759-7 +73-4425
CIP $11.95
"The amateur aquarist is the fortunate recipient of this comprehensive manual on marine fish keeping." Transactions of American Fisheries Society, No. 4, 1974.

*ISBN +LC
prices subject to change without notice.
prices slightly higher in Canada.
To order, use underlined word(s) in title and ISBN

For information on these and other titles, write:
JOHN WILEY & SONS, INC.
LIBRARY SERVICES DEPARTMENT
605 THIRD AVENUE
NEW YORK, N.Y. 10016

USE ISBN – IT'S SPEEDIER BY NUMBER

braries that do not possess the original reports.—Barbara Barth, Southeast Arizona Regional Lib., Bisbee

Moore, Patrick. The Next Fifty Years in Space.

Taplinger. Feb. 1976. 144p. drawings by Andrew Farmer. photogs., some color. index. LC 75-26326. ISBN 0-8008-5528-0. $12.95. ASTRONOMY

Written by the author of several books on astronomy and space-related topics, this work is a brief summary of scientific aspects of space probes, space colonies, and the tantalizing question of the likelihood of intelligent life existing somewhere out there. After a succinct prologue on the history of space exploration, succeeding chapters discuss current and future prospects of shuttles, satellites, lunar and Martian colonies, space probes to the planets, and the issues of intergalactic communications. The book is nicely illustrated, with several color plates, and the text is clear and enjoyable to read. Recommended for high school and public libraries.—Roger E. Bilstein, Univ. of Houston at Clear Lake City, Houston

Botany & Horticulture

Frederick, William H., Jr. 100 Great Garden Plants.

Knopf. 1975. 203p. color illus. bibliog. index. LC 74-21280. ISBN 0-394-48822-9. $15. HORT

Frederick is a gardener turned landscape architect whose 100 choices here include many old favorites, such as the American Holly, and some that are not so familiar, such as the Paperback Maple. Each plant is listed with information on its needs and possible uses. Of special interest are the author's comments on effective combinations of plants. The history of many of these plants is included and is highly entertaining. An introductory essay discusses philosophical and practical aspects of gardening. The book is illustrated with excellent color photographs of each plant; however, a major flaw is the small size of these photographs. This is a very personal book that will appeal to those who love gardening. A worthwhile acquisition for most public libraries.—John Albert, Licking Valley Schs. Media Center, Newark, Ohio

Harrison, Charles R. Ornamental Conifers.

Hafner: Macmillan. 1975. 224p. color illus. bibliog. index. LC 74-11229. ISBN 0-02-845760-X. $17.95. HORT

It is sad that the 554 color photographs in this otherwise commendable book exhibit the startling greens, blues, and yellows that characterize some nurseries' catalogs. In fact, at first sight, I opined that they had been gathered from such sources. But not so, they are originals by Harrison and his wife, New Zealanders who traveled around the world to take them. Actually, except for the poisonous hues the illustrations are clear enough and helpful in identifying a great many cultivated conifers. The descriptive text that accompanies each picture is well done and useful, as is the other explanatory text.—Elizabeth C. Hall, Horticultural Society of New York Lib.

Hebb, Robert S. Low Maintenance Perennials.

Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. 1975. 220p. illus. index. LC 75-8421. ISBN 0-8129-0587-3. pap. $4.95. HORT

This authoritative book by a horticulturist is a compendium of perennial plants which meet the author's standards for minimum care—attractive foliage, sturdy stems, tolerance of a wide range of growing conditions, resistance to insects and disease, and ability to survive without frequent division. Hebb observed and recorded the performance of plants at the Low Maintenance Garden of the Arnold Arboretum in Boston. For each plant he gives growth directions and lists the most desirable species and cultivars. Arrangement is by botanical names, with common names in the index. Contents include a section on ornamental grasses, a list of retail and wholesale nurseries, advice on staking and dividing plants, and a chart of basic information about each plant mentioned. A useful, timesaving book for the busy gardener.—Evelyn G. Callaway, Nebraska Library Commission, Fairbury

Jaynes, Richard A. The Laurel Book: rediscovery of the North American laurels.

Hafner: Macmillan. 1975. 180p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 75-20015. ISBN 0-02-847180-6. $10.95. HORT

This most excellent offering should be titled "The Mountain Laurel Book" because it deals with mountain laurels (Kalmia), not classical laurels (Laurus). It is the first book to deal comprehensively and exclusively with this splendid, entirely American group of rhododendron relatives. Mountain laurels have long been favored for landscape planting, since they exhibit amazing variety, and they offer rewarding possibilities to plant breeders. Although seeds give by far the surest results, vegetative propagation can be achieved, and this book tells how. It also covers mountain laurels in the wild, raising seedlings, garden care, principles of hybridization, and many other facets of mountain-laurel lore and management. Unfortunately, the color photographs by no means do full justice to their subjects. Nevertheless, very highly recommended.—Elizabeth C. Hall, Horticultural Society of New York Lib.

Mirov, Nicholas T. & Jean Hasbrouck. The Story of Pines.

Indiana Univ. Pr. Mar. 1976. 192p. illus. LC 74-30899. ISBN 0-253-35462-5. $6.95. BOTANY

This well-written book presents the genus Pinus in a pleasing blend of scientific fact, history, and folklore. Though the book is intended for the lay reader, the coverage is extensive, including the anatomy, fossil history, ecology, economics, and cultural influence of the pines. The scientific material is presented in a lucid manner and is enlivened with anecdotes and references to pines from the classics. The book argues for thoughtful management and appreciation of pines, and, by extension, for the aesthetic and economic value of other natural resources. Mirov, a leading authority on the subject, is also author of the monograph The Genus Pinus (Ronald, 1967). The present book is a work of love for pines, and though some professionals may object to occasional oversimplification, it is an excellent choice for both public libraries and technical collections.—Bruce H. Tiffney, Paleobotanical Laboratories, Dept. of Biology, Harvard Univ.

Health & Medicine

Fielder, Mildred. Plant Medicine and Folklore.

Winchester. 1975. 268p. photogs. by the author. line drawings by Juan C. Barberis. bibliog. index. LC 75-9262. ISBN 0-87691-205-6. $12.95. FOLKLORE/MED

Fielder, the author of several historical studies of South Dakota, has taken much of the plant folklore for this book from early travelers' journals which she researched for her previous studies. This, then, is not just another repetitious compilation of herbal facts and fallacies but an honest attempt at presenting varying remedies obtainable from plants. Arranged in chapters by ailment rather than by plant type, the book is both highly readable for the novice and a good reference source for the initiated. Most plants are illustrated, though some rather poorly, and the index is thorough. Recommended for subject collections.—Timothy Daum, Ohio Univ. Lib., Athens

Mitchell, Curtis. The Perfect Exercise: the hop, skip, and jump way to health.

S. & S. Mar. 1976. 120p. illus. by Judy Francis. bibliog. index. $6.95. HEALTH

Although the title of this book suggests that here is another work promoting a questionable exercise regimen, nothing could be farther from the truth. With the interests of the lay person in mind, Mitchell explains the health value of exercise in a physiologically accurate manner. He provides research evidence to show the value of rope skipping (the "perfect exercise"), and then presents an easy-to-follow rope-skipping progra that requires a minimum amount of time. The coverage of rope-skipping regimens is well balanced with information related to the functioning of the body. Topics that are effectively presented include the use of the heart rate to determine exercise needs, caloric expenditure, blood pressure, and stress factors. Highly recommended.—Kenneth Tillman, Dept. of Health & Physical Education, Trenton State Coll., N.J.

Moghissi, Kamran S., M.D. & Tommy N. Evans, M.D., eds. Regulation of Human Fertility.

Wayne State Univ. Pr. 296p. 1976. illus. index. bibliog. LC 75-29482. ISBN 0-8143-1551-8. $22. MED

Written for a professional audience, this collection of research papers from a 1973 symposium focuses on chemical, hormonal, and surgical techniques used to prevent conception. Emphasis is upon the human female as the experimental subject largely because "the fear of genetic damage and impotency remain . . . major roadblocks to development of a chemical male contraceptive" and perhaps because "vasectomy remains one of the safest surgical procedures now known to man." The 16 papers vary considerably in quality, content, and scope: those concerned with population dynamics, principles of contraceptive technology, hypothalamic-releasing hormones, and the biologic-immunologic consequences of vasectomy are well written, while other chapters are filled with hesitant jargon or are solidly dull. Valuable for upper-level collections in the health sciences, but not an adequate account of current knowledge in the field.—Dade T. Curtis, Illinois State Univ. Libs., Normal

Sehnert, Keith W., M.D., with Howard Eisenberg. How To Be Your Own Doctor—Sometimes.

Grosset. 1975. 416p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 74-18878. ISBN 0-448-11894-7. $9.95. HEALTH

Sehnert, a middle-aged, imaginative, and caring physician, has written this book to educate patients and to make the physician-patient relationship more effective and efficient. He believes that the best way to improve health care is to lessen the number of persons entering the "health machine" by teaching potential patients the difference between what looks alarming—but isn't—and what doesn't look alarming—but should. Sehnert gives advice on what should go into the patient's own "black bag," how and when he should test himself or members of his family, and how he should report to his physician. "Score Cards" for evaluating your new physician, your medical age, and other health-care elements add to the book's usefulness. About one-third of the text consists of a "Self-Help Medical Guide" which gives descriptions and practical pointers for common illnesses, injuries, and emergencies, and also includes annotated indexes to basic information on drugs, treatments, symptom/concept, and testing. For all public and home libraries.—William K. Beaty, Professor of Medical Bibliography, Northwestern Univ. Med. Sch., Chicago

Natural History & Zoology

Godfrey, Michael A. A Closer Look.

Sierra Club, dist. by Scribners. 1975. 148p. color photogs. index. LC 75-8961. ISBN 0-87156-143-3. $14.95. NAT HIST

Another stunning Sierra Club book for your natural history shelves, this one takes a "closer look" at the animal and vegetable life—grasses, insects, wild flowers, and garden snakes—that can be found in or near human habitats. One chapter gives a detailed description of a city yard left to grow wild for 100 years; while another discusses the importance of grasses. The book is filled with outstanding color photographs. Godfrey possesses a contemplative mind that is interested in the relationships of life, and he engenders a similar interest in others through his enthusiastic writing. An excellent book for town and country dwellers who want to better appreciate the wildlife near them.—Bonnie Jo Dopp, San Francisco P.L.

Helm, Thomas. Dangerous Sea Creatures: complete guide to hazardous marine life.

Crowell. Mar. 1976. 308p. photogs. LC 75-25960. ISBN 0-308-10225-8. $8.95. NAT HIST

In this book, Helm, the author of A World of Snakes (LJ 10/15/65), Fishing Southern Salt Waters (LJ 10/1/72), and other books, describes many of the marine animals that might be considered dangerous to man. He tells something of their habits and anatomies, describes some of the symptoms when they sting or bite, and gives some first-aid measures. The informtion appears accurate, but the book is not well organized. Much of it is devoted to personal experiences, and the reader must wade through those—and other irrelevant material—to discover symptoms or treatment, if any is given. I have not seen the illustrations. It probably won't hurt to have this book, since some might enjoy reading it, but those wanting to know what to do when bit or stung will do better with Bruce W. Halstead's Dangerous Marine Animals (LJ 6/1/59).—John S. Robotham, N.Y.P.L.

Snow, D. W. The Web of Adaptation: bird studies in the American tropics.

Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. Apr. 1976. 180p. bibliog. LC 75-24891. ISBN 0-8129-0603-9. $8.95. NAT HIST

One of Britain's leading ornithologists and former editor of the prestigious journal Ibis, Snow is a recognized authority on tropical birds. His book should appeal not just to academic biologists but to intelligent lay readers as well. It is always gratifying when a great scientist can write popularly about complex phenomena such as tropical birds, whose behavior and ecology differ in so many ways from the much more intensively studied birds of temperate areas. Snow describes how tremendous numbers of tropical species—and the unique natural areas they inhabit—are being irreparably destroyed by deforestation. His text focuses mainly on the biology of the many species with which he has had first-hand research experience. Recommended for most libraries.—Henry T. Armistead, Thomas Jefferson Univ. Lib., Philadelphia

Technology

Albers, Vernon M. How To Use Woodworking Tools Effectively and Safely.

A. S. Barnes. 1975. 190p. illus. index. LC 74-9277. ISBN 0-498-01551-3. $6.95. TECH

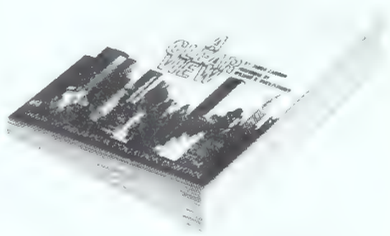
To provide information on methods of use, adjustment, and maintenance of hand and power tools used in woodworking is the purpose of this book. Hand cutting tools such as saws, planes, and chisels are covered, but most of the book is devoted to power saws (table, radial, band, jig, and saber), drills, lathes, routers, and sanders. Information is also given on measuring and layout, and safety is stressed throughout. The book is a

Now there's an answer to:

"What can I do?"

Indeed, there are many answers for everyone troubled by the growing menace of industrial pollution.

And they're all in A Clear View — the action manual for concerned citizens.



This utterly practical book shows how to identify potential sources of industrial pollution ...how to arm oneself with the necessary statistics... evaluating the data...and then how to use the data effectively through legal, legislative, and public pressure tactics.

"An invaluable reference." —Prof. Raymond Bauer, Harvard Graduate School of Business

"A model of clarity and completeness.... It contains everything you wanted to know and much you never thought of before." —Prof. Lawrence G. Lavengood, Graduate School of Management, Northwestern University

"A very useful and practical document." —Ingo Walter, Assoc. Dean, Graduate School of Business Administration, New York University

A CLEAR VIEW

Guide to Industrial Pollution Control

by James Cannon

Foreword by William D. Ruckelhaus

$6.95 hardcover, $3.95 paperback

RODALE PRESS, INC.
Emmaus, PA 18049

good, basic introduction to tool use, although some sections (such as that on the router) are stronger than others (e.g., that on the saber saw). Those who are beginning to advance in woodworking will probably find too little detail in this title. Suggested for collections with few or no titles in this area.—W. T. Johnston, Coastal Plain Regional Lib., Tifton, Ga.

Other Homes and Garbage: designs for self-sufficient living by Jim Leckie & Others.

Sierra Club, dist. by Scribners. 1975. 302p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-8913. ISBN 0-87156-141-7. pap. $7.95. ARCHITECTURE/TECH

An excellent reference source for those who wish to study, design, construct, or renovate a building while reducing demands on the environment. Various ways of saving energy are described in sufficient detail to enable the reader not only to understand the processes but also to apply them. Topics treated include site determination, home lighting, building materials, electrical power generation, solar heating, waste handling, water supply, and food raising. Mathematical equations are presented accurately and in easily understandable form. Sources for materials, sample calculations, tables of properties, and many appropriate sketches all contribute to the excellence of this handbook. A reasonably thorough bibliography, a detailed index, and a handy table of conversion factors are other valuable features.—Richard J. Peppin, Science Applications, Inc., McLean, Va.

Social Science

Fairlie, Henry. The Spoiled Child of the Western World: the miscarriage of the American idea in our time.

Doubleday. 1976. index. ISBN 0-385-04936-6. $8.95. SOC SCI

The concept of the "spoiled child" is a phenomenon especially marked in the generations of the decades following World War II. The salient characteristic of the "spoiled child" is an obsessive preoccupation with the "self" to the point where one feels that everything should be permitted to him without obligation. There is a correspondingly total disregard of the individual's debt and obligations to what Fairlie calls the Human Estate—the entire milieu of the social and cultural setting, and the myriad aspects of the "human condition." The author traces the emergence of this and related phenomena to a variety of causes including the breakdown in the confidence, resourcefulness, and strengths of the middle class of the 1930's and 1940's; misinterpretations of the writings of such figures as Marx, Darwin, Freud, and Einstein; and a general permissiveness arising from American technology and scientific advances. Fairlie, an acerbic, iconoclastic, incisive observer of American society, has written a significant book—essential for public and academic libraries.—Marcel Pittet, Univ. of Maine at Fort Kent Lib.

Geyer, Georgie Anne. The Young Russians.

ETC Pubns. 1975. 295p. bibliog. index. LC 74-23874. ISBN 0-88280-021-3. $10.50. SOC SCI

Journalist Geyer presents her "informed and carefully thought-out observations on Russian youth." Curious as to why Soviet youth failed to participate in the "youth revolutions" of the 1960's, the author visited the U.S.S.R. several times to study the 15-35 year-old generation, and here she offers sensitive insights not only into the character of these rather individualistic, secure, truth-seeking "children of victory," but also into Soviet people of all ages. Some of Geyer's conclusions are not necessarily startling; but overall she gives a well-researched, well-organized, clearly (and sometimes poetically) written presentation. Important for those interested in dealing with the future leaders of the U.S.S.R. Highly recommended for public and academic libraries.—Pamela J. Hersh, Librarian, New Jersey State Dept. of Education

Koch, Joanne & Lew Koch. The Marriage Savers.

Coward. Feb. 1976. 240p. index. LC 75-10479. ISBN 0-698-10692-X. $8.95. SOC SCI

The subject of this book is the highly variable quality of "marriage counseling," "family therapy," and "sex therapy." The authors' intent is to distinguish between unethical and incompetent "therapists" and qualified professionals. Important problems, such as the lack of training and certification for therapists and ways to find suitable therapists, are addressed. The authors interviewed therapists and others; but, like most journalistic exposés, their book lacks a precise description of the sample and the interview methods, not to mention a thorough review of relevant professional studies. Findings of previous researchers are accepted uncritically as a basis for the authors' claims, and the relative worth of pertinent studies is never evaluated. Research on alternative sexual and marital life styles is not covered. Issues addressed are not well defined; sweeping generalizations are made about American sexual behavior. A helpful book if one is "shopping" for a therapist, but hardly a balanced review of the subject.—Roger W. Libby, Inst. for Family Research & Education, Syracuse Univ., N.Y.

Mandell, Betty Reid, ed. Welfare in America: controlling the "dangerous classes."

Spectrum: Prentice-Hall. 1975. 200p. LC 75-19207. ISBN 0-13-949313-1. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-13-949305-0. $3.65. SOC SCI

Welfare in this case refers to any action taken by an agency or person that affects the poor or disadvantaged. The socialist point of view of each contributor to this group of essays is that such action will ultimately keep the poor and disadvantaged in the same place on the social and economic scale, thereby protecting the interests of the ruling classes. Examples of such protective policies include legislated levels of unemployment of the New Deal programs and the current CETA program, foster homes as a destructive element to family structure, birth control and involuntary sterilization to reduce the minority population and reduce control of their destiny, the criminal justice system that punishes crimes against property but rarely punishes white-collar crime. Although the essays are powerful and well-documented, they lack a unifying thread.—Kathryn Scarich, Trumbull P.L., Conn.

Mowat, Farley. The Snow Walker.

Atlantic: Little. 1976. 222p. $8.95. PER NAR/FOLKLORE

This is a collection of tales (somewhat fictionalized in the telling) about the Eskimos of the Canadian Arctic, their heritage, and their grim struggle for survival against the Canadian winter and the "Snow Walker," who is Death. Several of the stories, such as "The White Canoe," have a strong supernatural element. Others, such as "Dark Odyssey of Soosie," show the disastrous effects contacts with whites have had for Eskimos. Always at one with their environment, the Eskimos are contrasted favorably with the greedy and destructive whites. The tales are well told and show considerable knowledge of, and empathy for, the Eskimos, as might be expected from the author of The People of the Deer and The Desperate People. A readable and worthwhile collection.—Jonathan F. Husband, Boston State Coll. Lib.

Ramey, James W. Intimate Friendships.

Spectrum c/o Prentice-Hall. 1976. 176p. bibliog. LC 75-28206. ISBN 0-13-476903-1. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-13-476895-7. $3.95. PSYCH/SOC SCI

If it is indeed true "that the average married couple engages in 17½ minutes of conversation per week," it is no wonder that people seek relationships outside the nuclear family. Ramey, Director of the Center for the Study of Innovative Life Styles, describes different kinds of intimate friendships (contract, homosexual, and group marriage, threesomes, cohabitation, complex living groups, etc.) which are defined as having some degree of social, emotional, intellectual, family, or career intimacy with sexual relations a potential if not actual ingredient. Though the prediction is that more open marriage will be the ultimate choice for most, this is interesting reading for parents who will better understand why their offspring might try cohabitation first—and for young people who might in turn understand why some parents experiment with adultery.—Marion Hanscom, SUNY at Binghamton Lib.

Roszak, Theodore. Unfinished Animal: the Aquarian frontier and the evolution of consciousness.

Harper. 1975. 224p. ISBN 0-06-067016-9. $10. PSYCH/SOC SCI

Addressing himself to the widespread renewal of interest in the sacred dimention of human life, Roszak explores the myriad forms that this interest has taken along the growing edge of our spiritual evolution. He feels we have lost touch with "the primordial sources of spiritual growth" and are in danger of losing ourselves, but that we are, at the same time, in the midst of an "open, planetary dialogue between modern experience and sacred tradition." Roszak always keeps before us the insights that spiritual transformation is the "treasure hard to attain" and that the transcendent meaning for which we search is an important, even essential, requirement for our wholeness as human beings. A valuable guide to one of the most fascinating cultural phenomena of our time.—Michael E. Monbeck, formerly with American Fdn. for the Blind, New York

SOC SCI

Samuel, Dorothy T. Love, Liberation, and Marriage.

F. & W., dist. by Crowell. 1976. 180p. LC 75-23230. ISBN 0-308-10219-3. $5.95. SOC SCI

Samuel, a Boston radio commentator and leader of Marriage Enrichment Week-Ends for Quakers, sets out to prove that the positive benefits of a good marriage more than make up for its problems and pitfalls. She provides convincing examples, culled from history and the current scene (e.g., Shirley and Conrad Chisholm) of what she calls "triumphant marriages." In these unions both partners have fulfilled themselves, largely because of the mutual moral support they have gained from their relationship. Samuel writes from a humanistic perspective in a clear, intelligent style which makes her book useful to both general readers and to those involved in the marriage encounter movement. Couples who are about to be married and those who want to make a good marriage better will find encouragement here. Those with problems should turn elsewhere.—Victoria K. Musmann, Glendale P.L., Calif.

Sklar, Anna. Runaway Wives.

Coward. 1975. 184p. LC 74-30614. ISBN 0-698-10670-9. $8.95. SOC SCI

In increasing numbers, women are deserting husbands and sometimes children as well. The author uncovered a "network" of such women whom she interviewed in depth about their defections and changed lives. Are their stories typical? Do many runaways live communally? Is their vague Movement rhetoric characteristic? Are there no more of what Sklar calls "yesterday's" runaways, those who have run away with or to other men? While most of the women apparently escaped from intolerable or at best unfulfilling situations, they still seem unsympathetic and somewhat incomprehensible. Certainly parenting and custody deserve attention from a feminist perspective, as do the issues of female independence and self-determination. This book will elicit interest and identification, but it falls short of making sense of the phenomenon of runaway wives.—Mary Pradt Ziegler, Brooklyn P.L.

Whitten, Norman E., Jr., with assist of Marcelo Naranjo & others. Sacha Runa: ethnicity and adaptation of Ecuadorian jungle Quichua.

Univ. of Illinois Pr. 1975. 374p. illus. maps. bibliog. ISBN 0-252-00553-8. $10.95.

CULTURAL STUDY

A penetrating study of a South American Indian group and its resilience in maintaining identity and dignity in a modernizing world. Whitten describes the Canelos Quichua creative adaptation to national and international expansion into the Andes, and the attendant exploitation of Quichua resources, labor, and knowledge. If this very timely book has one fault, it is the exclusion of comparative analysis. The disappearance of many South American tribal groups as the result of conquest and internal colonialization has been documented; and a brief comparison of strategies for survival and accommodation among these groups might have furthered our understanding of culture contact and the modernization process. But this is a minor deficiency when compared to what the book skillfully presents: a sensitive portrayal of the Canelos Quichua world view and social organization; and an intimate lesson in resourcefulness and ethnic pride by a people who are neither Rousseau-like primitives nor passive masses.—Patricia R. Pessar, Social Science Research Council, New York

Law & Criminology

Anson, Robert Sam. "They've Killed the President!": the search for the murderers of John F. Kennedy.

Bantam. 1975 408p. photogs., some color. index. pap. $2.50. GOVT/CRIME

Anson, a journalist, reviews the history of JFK assassinology and adds his own circumstantial findings. He concludes that Kennedy was the victim of a conspiracy fueled by a "peculiar overlapping of interests that existed among the anti-Castro exiles, organized crime, and the Central Intelligence Agency" in the early 1960s. He also postulates that there was an Oswald double, that Jim Garrison's farcical efforts were cleverly designed to discredit critics of the Warren Commission, and that important government agencies have engaged in a cover-up of the facts. The book is a solid contribution to the assassination-speculation literature; it is rich in both documentation and theory. At the very least it should convince even the most skeptical reader that Oswald did not act alone.—Kenneth F. Kister, West Palm Beach P.L., Fla.

Franks, Maurice R. How To Avoid Alimony.

Saturday Review Pr: Dutton. 1975. 173p. index. LC 75-14231. ISBN 0-8415-0410-5. $6.95.

SOC SCI/LAW

Attorney Franks believes that men have been the traditional victims in divorce cases: they are barred from their homes, denied custody of their children, and condemned to a lifetime of outrageous alimony. The author, who hopes for sweeping changes in divorce procedures, advocates in the meantime the use of a "federal approach," which, he claims, would prevent some of these injustices. This approach involves suing the local divorce judge in federal court or actually removing the divorce case to federal court, on the grounds that state divorce laws violate the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, and further,

Stimulating*

RACES, TYPES, AND ETHNIC GROUPS

The Problem of Human Variation

by Stephen Molnar

"More factual and relevantly integrated than the usual oversimplified. . . . coverage, yet more sensitive, intellectually stimulating, and comprehensible. . . . This book deserves a wide audience." —*Library Journal (October 1, 1975)

0-13-750257-5 $9.95

PRENTICE-HALL CIP
General Book Marketing Division
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632

THEY CAME TO STAY

Marjorie Margolies and Ruth Gruber

"The authors give a faithful, often heartbreaking, but ultimately inspiriting account of Ms. Margolies's long battle to adopt a child. A single woman, Marjorie Margolies, a New York TV reporter, was not considered a candidate for parenthood back in 1968 when she applied. But she persevered. . . . Engrossed readers will learn what devotion and love mean as they find out how Ms. Margolies coped."—Publishers Weekly. "An honest, heartening chronicle of one woman's patience, courage, and love."—Cosmopolitan*. Photographs.

352 pp. $8.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

that alimony constitutes slavery. Franks bolsters his arguments with statistics and legal references on divorce discrimination, and he also expounds on such issues as selecting the right lawyer, setting reasonable amounts for child support, and dealing with no-fault divorce laws. Franks' interest in the subject grew out of his own divorce (his wife's idea), and it is clear that this experience influenced his point of view. He directs his comments to the man forced into divorce against his will, offering only a few passing remarks about other situations. His discussions are frequently tinged with "bad guy" versus "good guy" morality, with little attention to the psychological ramifications of divorce. Still he offers a provocative exploration of a timely subject.—Barbara Zelenko, U.S. Attorney's Lib., Southern District of N.Y.

Nash, Jay Robert. Hustlers and Con Men: an anecdotal history of the confidence man and his game.

Evans, dist. by Lippincott. Mar. 1976. 384p. bibliog. index. $14.95. CRIME

Con men are a breed apart from the everyday criminal. Generally witty, intelligent, and sociable, they play upon the greed and gullibility of their victims. This lively book relates the exploits of some of the most notorious as well as lesser known hustlers, such as Oscar Hartzell, who bilked thousands of his Midwest neighbors in the Drake inheritance swindle of the 1920's and 1930's, and "Match King" Ivar Kruger who took banks for $500 million in loans. Various methods used by con men such as the "big store," the "bubble," and the "magic wallet" are all explained. The victims range from the poor and pathetic to the vulgar and greedy. An entertainingly written book which will enhance any true crime collection.—Saul J. Amdursky, Albion P.L., Mich.

Von Hirsch, Andrew. Doing Justice: the choice of punishments.

Hill & Wang: Farrar. Feb. 1976. 156p. intro. by Willard Gaylin & David J. Rothman. pref. by Charles Goodell. $9.95.

LAW CRIMINOLOGY

This rather philosophical treatise, based on a three-year project by the Committee for the Study of Incarceration, maintains that, although punishment is necessary, incarceration of criminal offenders should take place in extremely limited circumstances, and then rarely for more than three years. The committee, cognizant of the harshness of criminal sentences and the degradation of imprisonment, began with the premise that incarceration was not an efficacious end in itself. Thus incarceration should be limited as punishment; alternatives to incarceration should be assigned in the bulk of criminal cases; sentencing discretion, disparity, and indeterminacy should be ended; and penalties for first offenders should be scaled down. As Goodell has stated in the preface, the goal was not to solve the crime problem by experimenting with penal methods, but to set some principles to alleviate suffering in society, of which criminal offenders remain a part. A useful and thought-provoking book for comprehensive criminal justice collections.—Vincent P. Schmidt, Cumberland Trail Lib. System, Flora, Ill.

SPORTS & RECREATION

Attner, Paul. The Terrapins: Maryland football.

348p. LC 75-012204. ISBN 0-87397-066-7.

Freeman, Denne H. That Good Old Baylor Line: Baylor football.

284p. LC 75-26070. ISBN 0-87397-063-2.

Hardesty, Dan. The Louisiana Tigers: LSU football.

345p. LC 75-012205. ISBN 0-87397-064-0.

Hunter, Jim. The Gamecocks: South Carolina football.

272p. LC 75-26073. ISBN 0-87397-069-1.

Merrick, Fred. Down on the Farm: a story of Stanford football.

370p. LC 75-012202. ISBN 0-87397-070-5.

Rice, Russell. The Wildcats: a story of Kentucky football.

387p. LC 75-26071. ISBN 0-87397-075-6.

Stabley, Fred W. The Spartans: Michigan State Football.

313p. LC 75-012206. ISBN 0-87397-067-5.

ea. vol: Strode. 1975. photogs. $7.95. SPORTS

These are the latest entries in a formula series of college football histories; each is an enjoyable blend of recent interviews and contemporary newspaper accounts. Previous titles in the series have set high standards for readability and illustration, and of the present titles only Freeman's fails to measure up. Perhaps it is due to Baylor's lack of success over the years (only two conference titles in 50 years), but whatever the reason, the sparse text has been padded with too many superfluous game photos, many of inferior quality. All the books have appendixes giving the schools' complete football records; these add to the books' reference value. Worthwhile purchases where these schools have a following.—Don Marion, Univ. of Minnesota Libs., Minneapolis de Groote, Roger. Olympic Sports Official Album: Montreal 1976.

Sports Illustrated: Little. 1976. 311p. tr. & adapted from French by Betty Howell. illus., some color. LC 75-29984. ISBN 0-316-17932-9. $19.95. SPORTS

This official album of the 1976 Summer Olympic Games examines the history and current status of every event in the men's and women's competition. Emphasizing the outstanding challengers through the years, the author provides a list of Olympic champions for each contest. In many instances, the world record holder, as of 1975, is also given. There are nearly 200 photographs, many of them in color. The author is on the French Olympic Committee and has extensive knowledge of the games. However, the editors have chosen a disconcerting bilingual approach, with two columns on each page, one column for the French text and the other for the English translation. In addition, the lack of an index hinders the book's reference value. Nevertheless, for browsing and for a general introduction to Olympic events, this work has no equal and is valuable even at its relatively high price.—Scott Cohen, Jackson State Comm. Coll. Lib., Tenn.

Huey, Lynda. A Running Start: an athlete, a woman.

Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. 1976. 241p. illus. LC 74-24289. ISBN 0-8129-0523-7. $8.95.

PER NAR/SPORTS

This book was sponsored by Jack Scott's Institute for the Study of Sport and Society, an organization that examines the social implications of sport in America. The Institute was also responsible for Dave Meggyesy's Out of Their League and Gary Shaw's Meat on the Hoof. Huey focuses on the problems faced by women athletes as she traces her own development from high school cheerleader to serious athlete. Huey's path has crossed that of many sports stars—from Tommie Smith, a gold-medal winner whose black power salute on the victory stand stunned the 1968 Olympics, to Wilt Chamberlain, who sponsors the Wonder Women track club of which she is a member. For a long time, association with these male athletes provided more gratification for her than did her own performance on the track. Huey's struggle "to be successful as both a woman and an athlete" has not been unique, and this book will be of interest to other women who share her dilemma.—Josephine A. DeLapo, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Landers, Daniel M., ed. & pref. Social Problems in Athletics: essays in the sociology of sport.

Univ. of Illinois Pr. 1976. 280p. bibliog. ISBN 0-252-00461-2. $10. SPORTS

This collection of scholarly essays examines the many contemporary problems in the world of sports, from children's play to professional leagues. Such topics as the impact of competition on children and adults, racial discrimination in athletics, social mobility through sports, deviance in sports, and the influence of the New Left on the athletic establishment are discussed from several points of view, and many of the ideas are supported by empirical data. The essays are all well written and awaken the interest of the reader to a new way of looking at sports and athletics.—Kenneth Tracy, Oklahoma State Univ. Lib., Stillwater

Mohney, Russ. The Master Backpacker.

Stackpole. Mar. 1976. 288p. illus. pap. $3.50.

RECREATION

A general overview of the fundamental elements of hiking wilderness trails and backpacking into weekend overnight campsites. The basics of selecting food, clothing, and shelter are discussed matter-of-factly; and simple techniques of compass work, coping with potentially dangerous wildlife, and a general discussion of the survival experience are presented from a no-nonsense approach. The author's ethic of lessening man's impact on wilderness areas prevails throughout as he implores the reader to leave dogs and guns at home, to build no campfires, and to leave no mark on the trail except footprints. The common-sense techniques, the environmentalist philosophy, and the uncomplicated presentation will provide a beginning hiker with a source for basic knowledge.—Donald C. Rowland, Black Hawk Coll. Lib., Moline, Ill.

Neely, Bill, John Lamm & the Eds. of Motor Trend Magazine. Cars To Remember: thirty-seven great automobiles in retrospect.

Regnery. 1975. 222p. illus., mainly color. LC 75-13234. ISBN 0-8092-8241-0. $15.
TECH/HOBBIES

A collection of 37 autos the authors feel are memorable in some way. Early cars, such as the Model T, are represented, along with cars of a more recent vintage (e.g., the 1954 Corvette and the 1963 Ferrari 250 GTO). Race cars included are a 1929 Miller and the 1963 Indianapolis winning Agajanian Willard Special. All the cars do meet the main requirement of being "distinctive in the eyes of many." The articles are short and of uneven quality, although the majority are well done. The photographs are excellent; many appeared in the "Retrospect" section of Motor Trend and are in color. Black-and-white shots supplement the color, and the illustrations are the book's strongest point. Car buffs and nostalgia freaks will enjoy this, but the price may be steep for small libraries.—Susan Ebershoff-Coles, Indianapolis-Marion County P.L.

Pachman, Luděk. Checkmate in Prague: the memoirs of a grandmaster.

Macmillan. 1975. 216p. tr. by Rosemary Brown. LC 75-23432. ISBN 0-02-594300-6. $8.95.

Pachman, Luděk. Complete Chess Strategy: first principles of the middle game.

Doubleday. 1975. 166p. tr. by John Littlewood. illus. index. LC 75-4165. ISBN 0-385-11160-6. $8.95.
MEMOIR/GAMES

Like Pachman's previous works on chess strategy and tactics, Complete Chess Strategy is a welcome addition to instructive chess literature. Although there are a glut of volumes examining chess openings and endings, a primer for the middle game is frequently difficult to locate. Each chess piece and its potential significance in middle-game play is examined. Even experienced players may find useful guidelines they have overlooked.

On the other hand, Checkmate in Prague will teach nothing about chess, but it will teach something about the Czechs. After a brief look at his past, especially his politics and chess, Pachman brings us to August 1968 and the Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia. Through his eyes we see the attempted resistance by the people and the manner in which they were forced to capitulate. In this book Pachman's chess playing is a side issue, but his political involvement is of major importance. Under duress, Pachman and his family left Czechoslovakia in 1972. This is not a political analysis of the situation, but a humanistic view from a man seeing basic human rights being denied. From this point of view it is well worth reading.—Harold L. Bogart, Mohave County Libs., Lake Havasu City, Ariz.

SPORTS

Wright, Leonard M., Jr. Fly-Fishing Heresies: a new gospel for American anglers.

Winchester. 1975. 239p. illus. index. LC 75-9260. ISBN 0-87691-203-X. $8.95.
SPORTS

The articulate Leonard Wright writes glibly about his unorthodox views and ideas on fly-fishing. He gives information and tips on angling, fishing rods, lures, flies, and fly-making. He has extensive knowledge of fly-fishing history, and he shares his practical expertise with the reader. For those anglers who have tried the classic fly-fishing techniques with no results, Wright offers promising alternative methods. A nice addition to a library with a large fishing collection.—Carl Cox, Indian Valley Coll. Lib., Novato, Calif.

Yolen, Will. The Complete Book of Kites and Kite Flying.

S. & S. Mar. 1976. 161p. illus. bibliog. LC 75-30747. ISBN 0-671-22191-4. $9.95.
RECREATION

There are many books available on kites, but in this one Yolen relies on personal experience to present the fascinating world of kite flying. Accompanying his interesting history of kites from antiquity to the present day is a survey of the uses for kites. A large section, written in clear and simple language, describes a variety of kites and how to construct and fly them. Appended is a list of kiting organizations, contests, and kite manufacturers. Both the novice and experienced kite flyer will find this book useful as well as intriguing.—Jerold M. Bernstein, Wickliffe P.L., Ohio

THEATER

Ebon, Martin, ed. Five Chinese Communist Plays.

John Day. 1975. 328p. LC 74-9366. ISBN 0-381-98281-5. $12.
MUSIC/THEATER

This collection serves to introduce the layman to the effects of the Cultural Revolution on traditional opera. Ebon's brief introduction highlights the political struggles that brought to the stage contemporary revolutionary themes, soldiers and workers in street dress, realistic scenery and lighting, and Western music. Helpful, also, are the pertinent political documents, including Chiang Ching's statement "On the Revolution of the Peking Opera." The plays are The White-Haired Girl, The Red Detachment of Women, Taking Tiger Mountain by Strategy, The Red Lantern, and Azalea Mountain. The translations are serviceable but uneven. Recommended as an introduction to the literature of the past decade.—Chuck Broadbent, Ursinus Coll. Lib., Collegeville, Pa.

Knapp, Betina. Off-Stage Voices: interviews with modern French dramatists.

Whitston. 1975. 324p. ed. by Alba Amoia. index. LC 74-18198. ISBN 0-87875-065-7. $13.50.
LIT/THEATER

This collection of 26 interviews with directors, dramatists, and actors provides a comprehensive view of the major forces in contemporary French dra-

"Informative"
—Murray Geller, Pres.,
U.S. Paddle Tennis Assn.

PADDLE
The Beginner's Guide to Platform Tennis
George Sullivan

"An introduction to the increasingly popular game known both as paddle and platform tennis. Assisted by numerous instructional photographs and diagrams, guidance is given in choice of equipment, and how to execute forehand, back hand, and other strokes... reviews official rules of platform tennis.... Appended are addresses of ball and paddle manufacturers, court builders, state-by-state platform tennis facilities, and a glossary." YA—Booklist.
224 pp. $8.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

EVERY BOY'S JUDO
By A. P. HARRINGTON

"Youngsters . . . will be fascinated by the information concerning proper footwork, various throws and counters, balance and position, and specific holds and locks. Comprehensive, detailed account written simply and vividly, ranging from simple to more complex techniques and further clarified by 87 illustrations. Glossary of Japanese terms."—School Library Journal 87 line drawings
SBN #87523-125-X $4.95

EVERY GIRL'S JUDO
By A. P. HARRINGTON

"Designed as a basic introduction to Judo exclusively for girls and young women. Although due attention is given to self-defense, the author keeps in mind throughout the book the exercise value of the art. An introductory chapter covers preparatory exercises intended to increase suppleness and strength. Speed and smoothness of action are emphasized throughout. Line drawings and photographs are used for illustration."—Strength and Health.
SBN #87523-127-6 $4.95

EMERSON BOOKS, INC.
Buchanan, New York 10511

LIPPINCOTT

"Footloose and funny."
—ALA Booklist

THE MONKEY WRENCH GANG
Edward Abbey

"An improbable foursome . . . star in what might be called the first environmentalist Western . . . with terrific chase sequences, vivid orgies of destruction and always eloquent landscapes." —Publishers Weekly. "A well-paced, information-crammed, up-to-date farce." —The Kirkus Reviews. "A new fictional genre, the ecological caper. . . . A laconic comedy played out in a vast open space Abbey loves and knows well. . . . Endangered as it is, the air in this novel is a pleasure to breathe." —Newsweek.

LC 75-831
ISBN 0-397-01084-2 $8.95

Write Library Service Dept. for FREE graded catalog

J. B. Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105

The Napoleon of Crime returns ...again!

The Revenge of Moriarty

By JOHN GARDNER
Author of
The Return of Moriarty

"YA's who enjoyed The Return of Moriarty will also like his latest appearance. This time, Moriarty's goal is to bring not only the greatest criminals of Europe under his control, but also both the Inspector and Sherlock Holmes. Fast-paced, readers will have fun following Moriarty's adventures, crimes, disguises, plots, and counter-schemes."—School Library Journal. "The pace seems as leisurely as that of a Conan Doyle story, but a lot more is happening . . . in a lovingly re-created Victorian London."
—Publishers Weekly. YA. $8.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

ma. Knapp's excellent knowledge of the theater and her ability to direct conversation toward topics of real interest to both theater buffs and drama historians result in a valuable resource and reference work. The variety and diversity in thought and orientation that characterize modern French theater clearly emerge. The general introduction and notes effectively situate the dramatists in historical context. Highly recommended.—Anthony S. Caprio, Dept. of Romance Languages, Lehman Coll., CUNY

Loney, Glen & Patricia MacKay. The Shakespeare Complex: a guide to summer festivals and year-round repertory in North America.

Drama Bk. Specialists. 1976. 182p. photogs. LC 75-15594. ISBN 0-910482-61-6. $12.50; pap. ISBN 0-910482-62-4. $7.95. REF/THEATER

This handsomely illustrated guide to the American and Canadian Shakespeare festivals and the many colleges and universities that have Shakespeare production seasons provides historical background on each of the organizations, touches upon the highlights of their careers, and offers fine production photographs. Containing a vast amount of information that would require much research to pull together, this work will be of use to scholars and itinerant theatergoers.—Paul Myers, N.Y.P.L.

Cinema

Bazelon, Irwin. Knowing the Score: notes on film music.

Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1975. 352p. illus. index. LC 73-16701. ISBN 0-442-20594-5. $12.50. MUSIC/CINEMA

This is a serious technical book about film music for film makers and musicians. There are sample score pages and cue sheets from famous film scores for illustration. It is similar to Frank Skinner's Underscore (Criterion Mus. 1960). Bazelon, however, has a deeper motif in this book—he is interested in bringing more serious contemporary concert composers to film scoring. Unlike some recent film music books, this one includes verbatim interviews with prominent film composers. Some of the stories that have been reported anonymously in earlier accounts are told here by the principals, e.g., how David Raksin wrote the theme song for Laura. (When Hitchkock asked where, in the movie Lifeboat, the music could come from, it was Raksin who said, "Tell me first where the camera comes from".) Recommended for all music libraries.—Vernon Martin, Hartford P.L., Conn.

Hotchner, A. E. Doris Day: her own story.

Morrow. 1976. 305p. photogs. LC 75-22354. ISBN 0-688-02968-X. $8.95. PER NAR/CINEMA

At last, after more than 25 years of wholesome virginity and blonde, middle-American blandness, Doris Day reveals the unexpurgated truth behind the movie-star legend, through Hotchner's slickly professional prose, for anyone who cares. Justifying her desire for self-exposure to Hotchner, she states: "I have finally come to a time in my life when I have evolved a personal philosophy which I think others may want to know about." What it seems to be is one of curious aloofness and a cool lack of concern merely supporting the "Miss Chastity Belt" image she so dislikes. The basic facts are few and unexciting, varied only through Hotchner's careful style and the inclusion of short interviews with those who knew Day or worked with her. A few pictures and a filmography are the trimmings. For anyone who cares.—Donald McCormick, N.Y.P.L.

Kael, Pauline. Reeling.

Atlantic: Little. Mar. 1976. 477p. index. $12.95. CINEMA

Kael's reviews are a total turn-on—a combination of uncanny perceptions and an idiosyncratic prose style that takes its rhythms and patterns from the movies themselves. She packs in everything and sometimes she's so deep inside her own responses, so far beneath the surface of a film, that the reader is momentarily befuddled. But this seeming failure may be Kael's greatest strength—as she sorts out her reactions, she pushes further and gives more of herself than other critics. She allows us to share her excitement and confusion in coming to terms with the movies; and she not only makes us defend our opinions and sharpen our perceptions, she also deepens our enthusiasm. After finishing Reeling, you want to run out and see a movie.—Gary Carey, Dept. of Film & Theater History, Sch. of Visual Arts, New York

Lindsay, Cynthia. Dear Boris: the life of William Henry Pratt, a.k.a. Boris Karloff.

Knopf. 1975. 273p. photogs. filmography. LC 74-21295. ISBN 0-394-47579-8. $12.50. BIOG/CINEMA

This chatty biography, written with the cooperation of the late actor's family, is crammed with anecdotes, personal opinions, and warm humor. The author, a personal friend of the Karloffs, has an endless stream of stories—and insists on telling each one. There is little in the way of scandal or salacious gossip. The volume is heavily illustrated, and there is an excellent and complete filmography. Should be popular in public library collections.—Andrew Aros, Montebello P.L., Calif.

fiction

Adler, Warren. Banquet Before Dawn.

Putnam. Feb. 1976. 275p. ISBN 0-399-11642-7. $7.95. F

Aha! we say at the beginning, another exposé of political life, sprinkled with the requisite sex, swearing, racial slurs, and social commentary, flagrant in its use of coincidence and dull stereotypes. By the end, however, we have come to realize that a skimpy and threadbare notion has become an effective indictment of contemporary society and parody of contemporary writing. The story revolves around the struggles of incumbent John J. Sullivan, an old-line politician of Irish stock and an unscrupulous deceiver, to ward off the challenge of Aram Yomarian, a young upstart of Armenian descent and a horrible twerp, for his congressional seat in Brooklyn's Eighth District primaries. The writing is first-rate and the book has plenty of bite.—A. J. Anderson, Sch. of Library Science, Simmons Coll., Boston

Aldridge, James. The Untouchable Juli.
Little. 1976. 255p. $6.95. F
Aldridge again explores the people and character of the small Australian town of St. Helen during the 1930's (A Sporting Proposition, LJ 8/73, and My Brother Tom, LJ 5/15/67, are similarly set). Juli, a teenager, lives with his fundamentalist mother in a section of town known as the "Bible-block." Block inhabitants are isolated and ridiculed by the rest of the town for their puritanism (non-religious music, dancing, and all non-biblical literature are strictly forbidden), so it is not surprising that the sensitive Juli emerges from his repressive environment a strange, uncommunicative loner. His troubles are compounded by his musical genius, which he is forced to explore with the local jazz group, since they're the only creative musicians in town. The inevitable clash with his mother ends in her death, and Juli is charged with murder. The climax is the sensational murder trial, but the real defendant is the mocking, intolerant attitude of all the townspeople. For adult and YA collections.—Thomas N. Jewell, Goodnow Lib., Sudbury, Mass.

"An entertaining, colorful, slick Gothic"*

Danger at Dahlkari

By EDWINA MARLOW
Author of
Midnight at Mallyncourt

"Young, beautiful, orphaned Lauren Gray sets out to join her godmother at a remote army outpost in India. Although most of her traveling companions are soon massacred by hostile thuggees, Lauren is rescued by a mysterious stranger. Life at Dahlkari proves equally exciting — danger and romance lurk everywhere."—Library Journal.* "Edwina Marlow's second exuberant Gothic, set in 19th-century India, features deeds and characters so romantic as to make reality seem like sorry stuff indeed. That shouldn't spoil the enjoyment of her readers, however."—Publishers Weekly. A BERKLEY/PUTNAM BOOK. YA. $7.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

Alexander, Alfred, ed., tr. & intro. Stories of Sicily.
Schocken. 1975. 208p. LC 75-9843. $8.95. F
Too much of our vision of Sicily has filtered across the Atlantic via romantic or horrific rumor of a rocky, unyielding terrain where patrones, vendettas, and poverty contend for possession of the dark Sicilian soul. This view affords us almost no insight into the major contribution Sicilian writers have made to modern Italian letters. In this collection, which he has ably translated and assembled, Alfred Alexander fills in our picture of Sicilian life and literary achievement. He draws from the previously untranslated work of such known figures as Pirandello and Lampedusa, and introduces other notable artists to English-speaking audiences, including the remarkable Luigi Capuana, who, with his close friend Giovanni Verga, founded the Verismo movement, Italy's refinement of French Realism. The bonds of love, of family, of friendship, of honor, often contorted to murderous manacles, provide the basis of many of these skillfully wrought stories. The authors' methods are diverse, ranging from stark naturalism to graceful irony, but the tales they tell all capture the imagination and delight the reader.—Elizabeth Tingom, New York

Amis, Martin. Dead Babies.
Knopf. 1976. 206p. LC 75-8216. ISBN 0-394-49285-9. $6.95. F
Amis' novel, like A Clockwork Orange, is set in a socially declining England of the near future, where elitist delinquents raise hell and abuse their "inferiors" with almost feudal impunity. His irresponsible and loveless characters convene at a country house for three days of drinking, violence, sex, and drugs, enacting a catastrophic parody of the weekend house party. The power situations, hallucinations, and obscene routines are reminiscent of William Burroughs, but this novel lacks his vital insights. Amis' satirical concern is with contemporary society, but there is no radical criticism in the book, rather a detached voyeurism which makes it disturbing more for what it says about Amis than for what he says about his world.—Michael Page, Dept. of English, Kalamazoo Valley Community Coll., Mich.

Bainbridge, Beryl. Sweet William.
Braziller. Mar. 1976. 192p. ISBN 0-7156-0927-0. $7.95. F
Bainbridge's latest novel offers a bleak vision of contemporary relationships. Set in London, the novel portrays the affair between Ann, who lives to please other people, and William, who pleases only himself. Ann is unwillingly engaged to Gerald when she meets William, who moves in with her and dominates her life, insisting that she quit her job and concentrate solely on him. Romantic idyll degenerates into a nightmare, however, as Ann's total dependency on William complicates her life in ways she is ill-equipped to handle. Ann is unable either to free herself from traditional morality or to accept the pain which William's myriad bisexual rela-

New Putnam Science Fiction

Starmother

By SYDNEY J. VAN SCYOC. In this highly imaginative tale, an Interstellar Peace Corps volunteer must decide whether to become "Starmother" to a race of human mutants on a strange planet—or retreat to civilization. "A compelling tale, vivid in its portrayal of a totally alien world."—Library Journal. "Nicely plotted . . . ingenious . . . an attractive achievement."—Kirkus Reviews. A BERKLEY/PUTNAM BOOK. YA. $6.95

The Triune Man

By RICHARD A. LUPOFF. "Superior and stimulating . . . the split-identity story of a gentle middle-aged cartoonist unaccountably locked in the same body as an American Nazi leader. . . . The action spins between a posh Earthside funny farm and a robot super-civilization to which the multiple selves are summoned to save the universe."—Kirkus Reviews. A BERKLEY/PUTNAM BOOK. YA. $6.95

Epoch

Edited by ROBERT SILVERBERG & ROGER ELWOOD. The ultimate all-original SF anthology of the '70s! "25 authors, some well-known, some not, are represented in a variety of formats: short stories, novellas, a fascinating television script (Harlan Ellison), and a full-length novel (Jack Vance). A superb anthology, highly recommended for any SF collection."—Library Journal. Nearly 700 pages. A BERKLEY/PUTNAM BOOK. YA. $10.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

"A richly satisfying curse-and-murder thriller"*

BLEDDING SORROW

By MARILYN HARRIS

Author of Hatter Fox

"Yorkshire's desolate moors and an ancient grand house provide the setting for this tale of crossed love and brutal punishment reincarnated. . . . Novelist Harris skillfully evokes past and present horror."—The Booklist (STARRED REVIEW). "By a novelist whose talents might be considered too good for the genre . . . a skillful hearthside horror tale which will slip down as easily as that brandy you'll toss off before it's over."
—Kirkus Reviews*. $8.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N. Y. 10016

LIPPINCOTT

"One of the best of the year."
—N.Y. Times Book Review

THE WHITE LIE ASSIGNMENT

Peter Driscoll

"A free-lance news photographer living in London is asked by a British intelligence agency to photograph a new missile site in Communist Albania. . . . Of course, it is not that simple as Mannis encounters murders, hostages, and double-crosses. Driscoll (The Wilby Conspiracy, In Connection With Kilshaw) writes with ingenuity and provides plenty of excitement." —ALA Booklist. YA

LC 75-5700
ISBN 0-397-01086-9 $6.95

Write Library Service Dept. for FREE graded catalog

J. B. Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105

tionships cause her. Paradoxically, it is this pain which enables her to define and assert herself by the end of the novel. Bainbridge's masterful writing makes us identify with Ann and obsessed by William in an unpleasant but provocative work.—Julia Parker, Brooklyn Coll., CUNY

Baker, Carlos. The Talismans and Other Stories.
Scribners. Mar. 1976. 150p. $7.95. F
Baker's "talismans" are "the odd little images that stuck in the mind. . . . Links to the distant past that had been forged in a twinkling and then lay there forever." Hence, his stories often take the form of reminiscences or anecdotes. In one, a stranger's drowning upsets an ageing spinster. In another, we witness an inconclusive quarrel between an academic and his wife. In others, a widow refuses the attentions of a much younger man; a middle-aged man recalls an uncle whom he never knew; a modest tailor is contemptuous of Buffalo Bill for being a show-off. Most of these tales have a quantum of charm, but in striving so hard to be casual, to affirm the meaningfulness of unstructured experience, they often come out sounding like chit-chat. The plotting, where there is plotting, is occasionally unbelievable; some stories wander about like Twain's "Grandfather's Old Ram." Only one, "Who Am I?" comes near being fully satisfying.—John Agar, Dept. of English, Valdosta State Coll., Ga.

Blankenship, William. Tiger Ten.
Putnam. 1976. 256p. ISBN 0-399-11679-6. $7.95. F
Tiger Ten is the call sign for Riley Stone, an American mercenary in Claire Chennault's Flying Tigers. His talent as the best fighter pilot in Burma in the early days of World War II brings a special opportunity: enter Japanese-held territory, steal one of their new Zero fighters, and fly it to a British base, all for more money than he had ever seen. This dangerous mission is recounted in all its bloody detail—the stratagems of the cunning Burmese Communist leading the group, the escape from capture by a sadistic Japanese general, and finally the unusual end of the mission. Blankenship tells a good story well. The action and a feeling of suspense are sustained, and all of the characters contribute to the plot. The book will appeal to all who enjoy tales of wartime adventure.—Edward Gibson, Washington Coll. Lib., Chestertown, Md.

Bradbury, Malcolm. The History Man.
Houghton. Feb. 1976. 230p. $6.95. F
This novel explores sexual jealousy in the lives of Howard and Barbara Kirk, "passionate, liberated, consciousness-conscious people," who head a bellwether faculty family at a provincial British university called Watermouth in the late 1960's. Clichés of the period—drugs and mind expansion, academic relevance, sexual liberation, radical activism, and so forth—are subjected to much satire. There are two major sections; one involves an orgiastic party given by the Kirks, the other a fictionally disappointing confrontation between sociology professor Kirk and a student, possessor of a "linear mind," who blackmails Kirk with evidence pointing toward moral terpitude. Bradbury's ear for revealing absurdity through dialogue is surgically accurate, and his talent for pointing up the contradictions built into "teaching" through the campus turbulences of the 1960's results in many poignant vignettes.—Rowe Portis, New York

Brent, Madeleine (pseud.). Stranger at Wildings.
Doubleday. Feb. 1976. LC 75-6152. ISBN 0-385-11101-0. $7.95. F
Chantal, a heroine of unusually doubtful parentage, runs away rather than face an orphanage, and at age 13, with no previous relevant experience, joins a European circus. In three years, she is proficient enough to do trapeze work. If this unlikely set of circumstances does not deter the reader, then the slow-moving plot might. The action, all dealing with Chantal's long-dead-or-not-parents, is very long in starting, but once it does, it moves very well. I hoped for more from this author because I was very partial to Moonraker's Bride (LJ 8/73). However, the heroine is an independent sort, and very likable, and the unusual setting is an extra plus.—Phyllis Gallo, Way P. L., Perrysburg, Ohio

Bustos Domecq, Honorio (pseud.). Chronicles of Bustos Domecq by Jorge Luis Borges & Adolfo Bioy-Casares.
Dutton. Mar. 1976. 160p. tr. by Norman Thomas di Giovanni. LC 75-20182. ISBN 0-525-08047-3. $7.95. F
The imaginary critic Bustos Domecq here continues to discuss possible consequences of implausible ideas for which his creators have justifiably become famous, but these pale and trite copies of past work seldom provoke the vertiginous collision of fact and fantasy in which Borges devotees, especially, delight. We are given nothing but a catalog of half-baked theories: an architect who designs uninhabitable dwellings, a poet whose passion for realism drives him to substitute a rose for a poem about roses, a chef whose search for culinary essences demands no quarter given to nourishment. A slight mockery of past work may be intended, but the point could have been made in far fewer than 21 attempts. Once again, long-time Borges collaborator Di Giovanni expertly captures difficult textual nuances in translation, but this time fidelity to the authors' purpose reveals only a surprising lack of inventiveness.—Daniel Levinson, "Newton Times," Mass.

Cohen, Arthur A. A Hero in His Time.
Random. 1976. 288p. LC 75-10303. ISBN 0-394-49140-8. $8.95. F
Yuri Maximovich Isakovsky for more than 50 years lived a quiet, nearly unnoticed life as a Jew in Russia, editor of a journal of folk music in Moscow, and most of all a poet. His relative anonymity is lost with his trip to an international conference in New York (his first journey from his native Russia) and the assignment of "a little piece of work" from a Russian officer, to transfer a piece of information during a reading of his poetry. In New York Isakovsky is bombarded with pressures—from an aged Russian rabbi to be "a free Jew," from the lovely young American woman who becomes his lover to stay with her, from Soviet agents to fulfill his mission—but his loyalty is, in the end, to his poetry. Cohen's writing is wonderfully evocative of mood, and his language at times literally sings. Despite its pervasive Russian backgrounds, this is a story not of a Russian or of a Jew, but of a man who is absolutely true to himself. A fine novel.—Michele M. Leber, Virginia Beach P.L.

FICTION

Cooper, Dominic. The Dead of Winter: a novel of modern Scotland.
St. Martin's. Feb. 1976. 215p. LC 75-24611. $7.95. F

Alasdair Mór, a simple, plodding fellow, the last survivor of a dead Hebridean village, ekes out a living as a lobster fisherman. Apart from his loneliness—which he hardly recognizes—and the ever-present clouds and storms of the area, his life isn't a bad one, and is even in some respects idyllic. But this is the 20th Century, and the idyll has got to end. The reclusiveness of this archetypal figure is broken in upon by forces that he can neither comprehend nor control. A newcomer to the area, a man known to the locals as "The Fox," envies Alasdair's prowess as a fisherman, and sets out with insane malevolence to wreck his livelihood. Alasdair, bewildered at first by the unprovoked attacks his neighbor makes upon him, is finally driven to seek revenge. A good, singing first novel in which the principal protagonist may be the uncompromising Hebridean environment.—Peter Gellatly, Univ. of Washington Libs., Seattle

Crawford, Max. The Backslider.
Farrar. Feb. 1976. 184p. ISBN 0-374-10800-5. $8.95. F

Imagine, if you can, a hole in the Bible Belt of Texas called Red Alp; people it with one preacher about to leave (the backslider of the title), one preacher newly arrived, one boy preacher, one evangelist, assorted wives, children, and farmers and their families. Let these people be not so much God-obsessed as religion-obsessed; eavesdrop on their conversations, listen with open-mouthed amazement to their surreal prayers and their sermons during a week in June 1946. I dare you. You cannot possibly re-create that desolate hard-scrabble land with its desolate hard-bitten people unless you have the talent, the technique, the humor, the compassion of Crawford. At the end of that week a few people have realized the fact that "the old God is dead" and that they are free to invent a new one. A stunning second novel.—Dennis Pendleton, Roanoke P.L., Va.

Dahlberg, Edward. The Olive of Minerva or the Comedy of a Cuckold.
Crowell. 1976. 192p. ISBN 0-690-00697-7. $6.95. F

This is a difficult and funny book, strewn with mythology both familiar and arcane. It concerns a man, Abel, who goes out "from that steel and glass Gehenna, New York" in search of better things: "coral hills, sapphire vales, the cerulean daughters of Poseidon" to name a few. Abel settles in No Hay Nada, a small town in the Balearic Isles, where he engages some villagers in wide-ranging discussions of sex and cuckoldry. These verbal peregrinations constitute the bulk of the work. Dahlberg's style is dense, aphoristic, and preposterously allusive, drawing from Greek, Roman, biblical, Egyptian, and Indian lore with a facility and diversity that is staggering. It makes for tough reading, for anyone, but it can be enormously funny too, especially when Dahlberg's characters indulge in their fractured aphorisms. The Olive of Minerva is a strange kind of fable/dialogue which will probably find a narrow but enthusiastic readership.—Bruce M. Firestone, Dept. of English, Clemson Univ., S.C.

Heidish, Marcy. A Woman Called Moses: a novel based on the life of Harriet Tubman.
Houghton. Feb. 1976. 308p. ISBN 0-395-21535-8. $8.95. F

A first novel grounded firmly in historical fact, A Woman Called Moses fictionalizes the life of Harriet Tubman, born in slavery on Maryland's Eastern

LIPPINCOTT
"Should be of special interest to librarians."*
PLEASE OMIT FUNERAL
Hildegarde Dolson
"Dolson writes knowledgeably of the field and makes her high school librarian character a deliberate antistereotype. The eternal struggle for intellectual freedom is as central to the plot as the murder of a censored but otherwise unadmirable novelist." —Wilson Library Bulletin. "Engaging suburban suspense." —ALA Booklist. "Lively entertainment." —Publishers Weekly. "The essence of enjoyment, witty and alive." —Library Journal.
LC 74-30007
ISBN 0-397-01081-8 $7.95
Write Library Service Dept. for FREE graded catalog
J. B. Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105

"Vastly entertaining"
—The Booklist
BARONI
By ALFRED HARRIS
Author of The Joseph File
Detective Lou Baroni, one year away from retirement, is the hero of this engaging mystery. When a woman plunges from her apartment, Baroni sees a sergeant's pension in his future if he can make a murder charge stick to her henpecked husband. But the fall is officially labeled "Death by Misadventure" and Baroni finds himself taking on not only a murderer, but the whole homicide department. "You might think of Wambaugh, burlier creator of cops with hearts of gold under their brass badges, but Harris's Baroni wears a warmer smile and you'll be glad to retire with him."—Kirkus Reviews. $7.95
G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N. Y. 10016

The new novel by Jean Plaidy!
THE ITALIAN WOMAN
"Victoria Holt dons her Jean Plaidy hat to write again of Catherine de Medici. . . . The unsettled state of France is depicted . . . but the focus is on Catherine as she comes into her own. With the death of her husband, she can banish his powerful mistress and rule first through her son Francis and then through her manic son Charles. . . . Will be popular . . . [with] the author's huge following."—Publishers Weekly $7.95
Other popular Plaidy novels:
MADAME SERPENT
MADONNA OF THE SEVEN HILLS
THE MURDER IN THE TOWER
DAUGHTER OF SATAN
G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

Shore, who escaped North and spent her life in conducting hundreds of blacks to freedom along the Underground Railroad prior to the Civil War. She bore the physical and psychological scars of slavery, suffering intermittent sleeping fits throughout her life from an overseer's blow, but persisted in returning time after time into the South to rescue more of her people, including her brothers and her aged parents. Friend and confidant of Frederick Douglass, John Brown, and the Northern Abolitionists, Harriet Tubman was a deeply religious woman, a mystic, and a true heroine who earned her nickname by leading her people out of bondage at great danger to herself. The novel built on this exciting and dedicated life is well written, stirring, constantly interesting and suspenseful, reminiscent in many ways of Ernest J. Gaines' The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pitman (LJ 3/1/71), though falling somewhat short of it as a work of art.—L. W. Griffin, Univ. of Wisconsin Lib., Madison

Klein, Norma. Girls Turn Wives.
S. & S. Mar. 1976. 222p. LC 75-35707. $8.95. F
"Trees turn bare and girls turn wives" and then what? More than just living happily after, particularly for women who grew up in the 1950's and now feel the forces of feminism, overpopulation, and self-realization, such as former roommates Hannah King and Jessica Proctor, Barnard '59. Each is happy with her own lifestyle (Hannah, a suburban Connecticut "earth mother" of three and potential photographer, and Jessica, a childless, rather sophisticated scholar of children's literature in Boston) while sometimes envious of the other. The setting is up-to-the-minute East Coast urban, but the story deals with constants, showing the two women with husbands, friends, and lovers, viewing their marriages in light of their parents' marriages, revealing their delights and pain as well as their change and growth. Klein has the same sure, skilled touch she has shown before, plus the understanding and thoughtfulness to make her female characters especially true. As entertaining as it is illuminating—a real pleasure.—Michele M. Leber, Virginia Beach P.L.

Lansdale, Nina (pseud.). The White Island.
Arbor House, dist. by Dutton. 1975. 250p. LC 74-18157. ISBN 0-87795-104-7. $8.95. F
A young American ballerina, Kelley Rogers, receives an urgent demand to join her sister at Ibiza. Once there, Kelley gets involved in murder, idol worship, politics, and, of course, romance. Lansdale can effectively create an exotic setting—Ibiza's bars, beaches, bullfights, ruins, run-down pensions. Her characters are unusual and well defined. The plot, however, is disappointing—meandering and bogged down with many improbabilities.—Carol K. Carey, formerly with Dept. of Film, Museum of Modern Art, New York

Manfred, Frederick. The Manly-Hearted Woman.
Crown. Mar. 1976. 256p. $6.95. F
At first glance, this seems to be the story of a liberated lady. At second glance, it could be an Indian novel with a new twist. Actually, it's just another mediocre story. The tomboy protagonist survives two marriages, then receives a fetish and sacred name, given by the gods to men only. After this experience, she becomes a man, of sorts, and takes a wife, not a lesbian relationship since nothing sexual happens. Meanwhile, a young effeminate man has been growing up in another camp, receives his fetish, and suddenly dedicates his life to the salvation of Manly-Heart's tribe. Of course, they're attracted to each other, and through a strange turn of events, she becomes the source of his manhood and he, her regained womanhood. The premise, that they had a yin/yang type of relationship in the eyes of the gods, is interesting, but doesn't come off here.—Carol M. Klein, Russell Lib., Middletown, Conn.

Price, Richard. Bloodbrothers.
Houghton. Mar. 1976. 271p. ISBN 0-395-24303-3. $8.95. F
Price's second novel is a fascinating study of the DeCoCos, a New York City working-class family. At the beginning of the novel, 17-year-old Stony is just finishing high school. He is being pushed into a hard-hat job that he is not at all sure he wants. Pure chance enables him to work for two weeks as an aide in a children's hospital ward where he really hits it off with the kids (the "blood brothers" of the title). To keep his job, Stony would have to leave home. But his love for his eight-year-old brother (movingly depicted by Price) coupled with his vague feelings of being hopelessly trapped in a way of life that is so meaningless to him prevent him from leaving home. Presumably Stony gives up his job with the children. We do not know what he will do ultimately, but we feel Stony's pain. Price writes very well indeed. With rare skill and insight he evokes the suppressed and overt violence between the family and various other characters as well as the deadly effects the DeCoCo family members and others have on Stony. For all fiction collections. (Vivid sex scenes and colorful language may offend some readers.)—Jean B. Palmer, Stoneham P. L., Mass.

Sisson, C. H. Christopher Homm.
Dufour. 1975. 239p. LC 75-31468. ISBN 0-85635-103-2. $8.95. F
Sisson's novel is likely to arouse some interest as another example of British working-class fiction to be remembered on that long list of works representing the revolt against the aristocracy. In the realistic tradition, Christopher Homm is a novel of manners—lower class manners; about social and personal conditions of poverty. The tone is flat, sensibility: bleak. Its humor? Cynical. At one point a person's mouth is described as "a blind aperture for food, turned by a trick into a vent for the emission of language." The novel's device of representing an ordinary man's life from death back to his birth is neat and orderly but has a simplistic effect.—Clarence Major, Dept. of English, Howard Univ., Washington, D.C.

Tulloch, G. Janet. A Home Is Not a Home: life within a nursing home.
Continuum: Seabury. 1976. 142p. fwd. by Sen. Charles H. Percy. ISBN 0-8164-9269-7. $6.95. F
The infirmities, foibles, and illnesses brought on formerly able bodies and minds by the aging process are vividly described by the author who, for the last decade, has lived in a nursing home. Basic physical and mental functions and the insidious debilitation of these in patients causes a seemingly callous unconcern on the part of the nursing home personnel who, being mortal and human, sometimes lose interest, patience, and understanding from sheer repetition of tiresome duties. The development of the characters as they try to adjust to their advancing diseases in an institutionalized setting makes a stronger, more eloquent plea for kind, humane, and honest treatment of patients than a host of educational treatises with their ever attendant statistical surveys. Thought-provoking reading for nursing home administrators, personnel, and families who are considering selecting a home for a relative.—Ute W. Bestehorn, P.L. of Cincinnati and Hamilton County

Wilhelm, Kate. The Clewiston Test.
Farrar. Feb. 1976. 237p. $8.95. F
The testing of a new pain-killing serum is the cause of mounting tensions among the personnel of a pharmaceuti-

"Crackerjack suspense!"*
Establishment of Innocence
By HARVEY ARONSON & MIKE McGRADY
In this "cliff-hanging whodunit" (Publishers Weekly), a cocktail waitress is brutally murdered . . . a New York State Senator becomes the prime suspect . . . and the real killer waits to strike again! "Superbly entertaining . . . topnotch suspense writing."—MARIO PUZO, author of The Godfather. "Crisp, taut, and gripping from start to finish."—*STEWART KLEIN, WNEW-TV. "A dilly of a surprise ending . . . the kind of entertaining novel that's hard to come by these days."—UPI. "Provocative and cleverly plotted."—Newsday. "A baffler you may not care to put down."—Kirkus Reviews. $8.95
G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

cal research company. Anne Clewiston, the head of the project, is convalescing from an accident when the test chimps one by one become violent, kill their babies, and attack lab workers. The management, anxious for glory and publicity, is moving on to the next stage, the human experimentation, over the protests of the researchers, when Anne begins exhibiting symptoms similar to the chimps'. Horror increases with the realization that Dr. Clewiston may have tested the drug on herself before her accident, but the reader is left dangling as she saves the integrity of her work, but not necessarily her life. Not up to Wilhelm's best, but excitement carries the reader along to the very last page of a novel full of unusual twists.—Marcia R. Hoffman, Woodbridge P.L., Iselin, N.J.

Wright, Patricia. A Space of the Heart
Doubleday. Feb. 1976. 347p. LC 75-17898. ISBN 0-385-03648-5. $8.95. F

In 1852 young Eleanor Lovell's life is transformed as she moves from her quiet Sussex home to the far-off Ukraine, where she is to serve as governess to the family of the governor of a provincial Russian city. Cut off from civilized society as she knows it, she unwittingly becomes involved in political turmoil related to the Crimean war. Three years later, at the end of the book, she is happy and secure and well loved, and a lot has happened. Given that the novel is based on the letters of a distant cousin of Wright's who lived the bare facts of the daily life described, the historical background and atmosphere, though evocative, are not as involving to the reader as one might expect. Readable if not memorable.—Virginia L. Fetscher, Katonah Village Lib., N.Y.

Science Fiction

Carr, Terry, ed. Creatures from Beyond: nine stories of science fiction and fantasy.
Thomas Nelson. 1975. 192p. LC 75-16244. ISBN 0-8407-6459-6. $6.95. F

Carr's latest anthology features an assortment of benevolent and evil nonhumans from outer space or the depths of earth and sea. The retrospective collection includes stories from 1927 to 1973, some in their first reprinting. Carr has included authors of high reputation, but the quality of the writing is very uneven, ranging from the terrifying "The Worm" by David H. Keller, in which an enormous worm bores its way up through the earth, consuming all in its path, and the delightful "Some Are Born Cats" by Terry and Carol Carr, which stars an extraterrestrial secret agent posing as a domestic alley cat, to the mediocre and downright dull. In this case, the desire to center a collection around a common theme has resulted in a strained and not very readable anthology, which is not improved by a lurid dimestore-type cover.—Marcia R. Hoffman, Woodbridge P.L., Iselin, N.J.

Scortia, Thomas N. & George Zebrowski, ed., intro. & notes. Human-Machines: an anthology of stories about cyborgs.
Vintage: Random. 1975. 252p. ISBN 0-394-71607-8. pap. $2.95. F

This collection contains thoughtful and thought-provoking stories of the implications of cyborgs. Ranging in date from 1940 to 1973, the well-chosen tales show varying concepts of man–machine symbiosis. The introduction is an excellent review of serious sf on the topic. Highly recommended.—Deborah W. Harrison, Social Science Div., Catonsville Community Coll., Md.

INDEX:

Adams, E. M., 620
Adler, W., 632
Albers, V. M., 627
Aldridge, J., 633
Alexander, A., 633
Allen, M. J. B., 620
Alpern, A., 607
Amis, M., 633
Anson, R. S., 629
Apple, N. P., 602
Artaud, A., 609
Attner, P., 630

Bacchelli, R., 606
Bailey, A., 617
Bainbridge, B., 633
Baker, C., 634
Baldini, U., 606
Balliett, W., 620
Barnard, C. N., 617
Barnes, J., 612
Baron, S. W., 612
Barton, H. A., 610
Bascom, W., 616
Bawden, L.-A., 602
Bazelon, I., 632
Beard, E., 622
Benziger, B. F., 623
Best, G. D., 614
Bevington, H., 610
Bicentennial portrait of the American people, 614
Bickley, R. B., Jr., 618
Blankenship, W., 634
Bloch, E. M., 608
Boisselier, J., 605
Bradbury, M., 634
Braun, S. R., 607
Brent, M., 634
Brown, J. F., 602
Burgess, R. F., 614
Burt, C., 614
Bustin, E., 614
Bustos Domecq, H., 634
Butler, R., 605

Carr, T., 637
Carter, W., 615
The Chase, the capture, 605
Chevallier, R., 616
Ch'i, H., 615
Cohen, A. A., 634
Cooper, D., 635
Cornelisen, A., 610
Coughlan, N., 621
Cowley, J., 596
Crawford, M., 635
Culshaw, J., 620

Dahlberg, E., 635
de Groote, R., 630
deMause, L., 602
de Wallerskirchen, K., 606
Dickson, P., 613
Dinerstein, H. S., 622
Dunn, J. D. G., 624

Eberhardt, I., 610
Ebon, M., 631
Eisler, C., 608
Elting, J. R., 615
Erté, 610
Evans, R. I., 623

Fairlie, H., 628
Fast, J., 624
Feldkamp, F., 617
Ferguson-Lees, J., 602
Fernea, E. W., 610
Fielder, M., 626
Fong, W., 606
Franks, M. R., 629
Frederick, W. H., Jr., 626
Freeman, D. H., 630

Gadamer, H.-G., 621
Gammond, P., 620
Geyer, G. A., 628
Godfrey, M. A., 627
Godwin, J., 624
Green, W., 602
Grinsell, L. V., 616
Guttman, D., 622

Hadas, R., 621
Hall, D., 621
Halpern, J., 618
Hardesty, D., 630
Harrison, C. R., 626
Havlice, P. P., 603
Hawke, D. F., 615
Hayman, R., 618
Hebb, R. S., 626
Heidi, G., 617
Heidish, M., 635
Helm, T., 627
Hixon, D. L., 603
Hixson, J., 601
Hobbs, M., 611
Hogan, M., 621
Horgan, P., 611
Hotchner, A. E., 632
Hubbard, M., 618
Huey, L., 630
Hull, R. H., 623
Hunt, C. B., 625
Hunter, J., 630

Ingle, D. J., 621
Israel, J., 623

James, M., 624
Jasny, N., 611
Jaynes, R. A., 626
Jensen, O., 615

Kael, P., 632
Katz, S. T., 624
Kimber, R. T., 596
Klein, N., 636
Knapp, B., 631
Knef, H., 612
Koch, J., 628
Kohlstedt, S. G., 615
Kraemer, R. S., 608
Kraus, T., 616
Kreps, J., 613
Krickus, R., 601

Laird, J. T., 618
Landers, D. M., 630
Lane, G., 618
Lansdale, N., 636
Lardner, R. W., 618
Larousse encyclopedia of the animal world, 603
Leckier, J., 628
Levitan, S. A., 613
Levy, L. S., 620
Liebman, M. W., 617
Lindsay, C., 632
Loney, G., 632

McMullen, R., 606
Mandell, B. R., 628
Manfred, F., 636
Mayer, M., 601
Meisner, M., 615
Meltsner, A. J., 623
Méras, P., 607
Merrick, F., 630
Metropolitan Museum of Art, 605
Meyer, T., 622
Milgram, G. G., 604
Miller, G. T., 624
Miller, L. B., 615
Mills, W., 619
Mirov, N. T., 626
Mitchell, C., 626
Moghissi, K. S., M.D., 626
Mohney, R., 630
Moore, P., 626
Morini, S., 604
Morris, I., 616
Morris, J. N., 622
Morrow, M., 607
Mowat, F., 628
Mucha, A., 608
Munro, H. H., 619
Murray, M., 614

Naef, W. J., 609
Nash, J. R., 630
National Portrait Gallery, 609
Neary, J., 612
Neely, B., 630
Newby, E., 604

Ogul, M., 623

Pachman, L., 631
Park, R., 617
Parker, T. H. L., 625
Perkus, C., 601
Photo-atlas of the United States, 604
Price, P. V., 617
Price, R., 636
Puppi, L., 607

Ramey, J. W., 628
Rice, R., 630
Ricks, B., 604
Rimer, J. T., 604
Rodriguez-Aguilera, C., 606
Roland, C. P., 616
Rossant, C., 617
Roszak, T., 628
Rubin, L., 621
Running, L. G., 612

St. George, M., 622
Sakharov, A. D., 623
Samuel, D. T., 629
Saner, R., 622
Scortia, T. N., 637
Scott, J. D., 617
Scott, M. L., 618
Sehnert, K. W., M.D., 627
Sekida, K., 625
Seuphor, M., 606
Sewell, R. H., 616
Simmons, E. H., 616
Sisson, C. H., 636
Sklar, A., 629
Smith, B., 616
Smith, C. M., 612
Snow, D. W., 627
Soelle, D., 625
Soldier and the lady, 622
Spacks, B., 621
Spender, S., 619
Springer, M. D., 619
Stabley, F. W., 630
Sturges, L., 618
Sullivan, N., 621

Taylor, A. P., 614
Terdiman, R., 619
Torrens, D., 608
Tulloch, G. J., 636

Van Der Marck, J., 607
Veit, F., 596
Von Hirsch, A., 630

Warnock, M., 621
Welding, P. R., 624
Welsch, E. K., 596
White, J., 624
Whitten, N. E., 629
Wilhelm, K., 636
Willcock, M. M., 620
Williams, R., 614
Woolley, B., 613
Wright, L. M., Jr., 631
Wright, P., 637

Yolen, W., 631

LJ CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

All advertisements for the Positions Open and the Positions Wanted classifications will be edited to exclude direct or indirect references to race, creed, color, age, and sex as conditions of employment. Positions open and positions wanted, $1.70 per line, minimum charge, $5.10, all other types of ads, $2.60 per line, minimum charge $7.80. If vouches forms are required for billing, please send them at the time advertisements are submitted for insertion. Copy for ads and requests for cancellations must be received at the LJ office 45 days preceding date of issue. Write: Classified Advertising Department, Library Journal, 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10036.

OUT-OF-PRINT

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS get prompt attention, wide search, reasonable prices, from International Bookfinders, Inc., Box 1-LJ, Pacific Palisades, Calif. 90272.

COLONIAL "out-of-print" Book Service, Inc. Want Lists invited, 23 E. 4th St., New York City 10003.

SEARCH SERVICES are one of our specialties. Foreign books and periodicals, current and out-of-print. Albert J. Phiebig Inc., Box 352, White Plains, N.Y. 10602.

WE FIND BOOKS. Free International Search. Exclusive want lists invited. Realistic prices. Eva Davis Books. 108 Prince Charles, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

OP BOOKS in literature: social science, humanities. EGLI; Lamont, etc. Book Lande, 8926 National Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90034.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC Magazine: (1888-1976) Any issue from 1910. (Fine cond.) Reasonable. Price list furn. Don Smith, 3930 Rankin St., Louisville, KY 40214.

SEARCH SERVICE. Out-of-print titles. Free quotes; reasonable prices. Send wants. Smith's Book House, 112 No. Plain St., Ithaca, N.Y. 14850.

MAGAZINES—BACK NUMBER

BACK ISSUE MAGAZINES, general scholarly, technical. Designed to serve high school and jr. college libraries. Please send want lists to Back Issues West; P.O. Box 6688, Tucson, Arizona 85716.

OVER 2,000,000 backdate magazines on file. Send want lists for immediate attention. Magazine Center, Dept. LJ, 145 West 29th Street., New York, N.Y. 10001.

INTERNATIONAL University Booksellers, Inc. 101 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10003 carries one of the most comprehensive inventories of periodical backfiles. We invite inquiries for complete sets, runs, volumes, and issues required. We also buy scientific and scholarly journals in all fields for cash or credit.

SERVICES—PERSONNEL

THERESA M. BURKE Employment Agency, 8 West 40th St., N.Y., N.Y. 10018. Specializing in the recruitment of library and information personnel for special, academic, and public libraries.

CAREER BLAZERS AGENCY non-fiction, best selling jobs for career-minded publishing professionals. 36 W. 46 St., YU 6-1285.

MICROFORMS

MICROFORMS. Good second-hand microfilm of periodicals of established micropublishers bought and sold. Write or call Microforms International Marketing Company, Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523. (914) 592-9141.

FOR SALE

REGISCOPE, Model R, 5 years old, excellent condition, $750. Westerly Public Library, Westerly, R.I. 02891.

BOOKMOBILE, 1600-book Gerstenslager. $2,500 or trade for 3,500-book size. Delivery possible. Templeton Transportation, 4022 Belle Plaine St., Chicago, Illinois 60641.

BOOKMOBILE, 1960. Good condition. Int'l. Harvester chassis; Thos. F. Moroney Co. body. Book capacity 3,000. New air conditioner & power supply generator installed 1 year ago. Contact: Town Manager, 100 Maple Ave., Shrewsbury, MA 01545.

WANTED TO BUY

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHICS: Do you have 1910 or earlier National Geographics that are never used? I will pay top prices, bound or singles. Also reprints. Will buy later volumes if earlier also included. Bob Finch, 23451 Carlow Road, Torrance, CA 90505.

POSITIONS WANTED

SEEK BEGINNING level reference or other public service position. MLS Rutgers. Five years' publishing experience. G 53.

M.L.S. 1975, also grad degree in humanities; 4 years varied library experience; 10 years plus teaching. Prefer school, college, or federal reference and/or serials. G 49.

CHILDREN'S LIBRARIAN seeking head or assistant position of children's department in public library. Varied experience; prefer relocation in community 25,000 population and over. G 51.

RECENT M.L.S. graduate seeking beginning level position. B.A. in humanities and history. Read and write Spanish. Prefer cataloging or government documents. Am willing to relocate. Résumé from: Carol Kropp, 407 Water St. S.W., Sleepy Eye, MN 56085.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHEAST

ASSOCIATE LIBRARY Director, Tulane University. Executive officer in charge of day-to-day operation of library, personnel, physical plant. On occasion acting library director. Graduate degree in library science; experience in academic library administration; ability to deal effectively with staff, faculty, students; strong interest in research library problems and opportunities. 12-month appointment; TIAA-CREF; month's vacation. Résumés before May 1 to: Library Director, Tulane University Library, New Orleans, LA 70118. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

DIRECTOR of Public Library System position open. Prefer applicant with M.L.S. degree. Public library background with a minimum of 5 years' experience in administrative capacity. Must have ability to innovate, initiate and work effectively with others. To direct staff of 65 full and part-time, including 7 librarians. Minimum salary $15,732. Regular city benefits. Challenging opportunity in city of 135,000. Four libraries, one of 15,000 sq. ft. under construction. Send résumé and letter of application before Feb. 28, 1976 to: Mrs. Gladys Caywood, Secretary, Advisory Board, 12465 Warwick Blvd., Newport News, VA 23606. Equal opportunity employer.

LEARNING RESOURCE Center Librarian for technical college. Open immediately. Master's in Library Science from an ALA accredited school. Experience with media desirable. Send résumé to: Dorothy P. Gnann, Beaufort Technical Education Center, Ribaut Road, Beaufort, SC 29902. EOE.

PUBLIC LIBRARY SYSTEM serving city-county population of 150,000 in Blue Ridge-Great Smokies area requires adult services coordinator and children's services coordinator. Adult services position will carry responsibility for system-wide adult services, including development of collection building program and staff training program. Children's services position will have comparable responsibility for children's services, including collection development, staff training and supervision, and expansion of special programming. Superior professional ability and strong motivation vital; will consider candidates with limited experience. ALA accredited degree required. Beginning salary in each position $10,192. Call or write: Kenneth Brown, Pack Memorial Public Library, Asheville, NC 28801. Tel. (704) 252-8701.

REFERENCE/DOCUMENTS Librarian, Stetson University. Position available summer 1976. Qualifications: ALA accredited M.L.S. Some knowledge of documents helpful. Salary open. Submit credentials and references to: Joe I. Myers, Director of Library, Stetson University, DeLand, Fla. 32720. An affirmative action employer.

LEARNING RESOURCE Center Director for technical college. Open immediately. Master's in Library Science from ALA accredited school. Experience with learning resource center administration, audio-visual services, supervision, and budgeting. Send résumé to: Dorothy P. Gnann, Beaufort Technical Education Center, Ribaut Road, Beaufort, SC 29902. EOE.

POSITIONS OPEN—MIDWEST

SYSTEMS AND PLANNING Librarian: Northern Illinois University, an affirmative action, equal opportunity employer, has the following vacancy at its libraries as of February 1, 1976, to review, update, and integrate library routines and procedures, both manual and automated; develop long range plans and recommend procedural, organizational methods which will increase the effectiveness of the library. Also to develop, on a short term basis, the detailed plan for moving the general library into a new building in late 1976. Minimum qualifications include a Master's degree from an accredited library school; three years' experience in an academic library; thorough knowledge of management techniques, including the application of electronic data processing to library operations. A second Master's degree (or equivalent) is desirable. Minimum salary: $14,000 for a twelve month contract. Fringe benefits include Illinois Retirement System benefits, academic status, and one month vacation. Applicants should send thair résumé and personal references to: Mr. George M. Nenonen, Personnel Director, University Libraries, Northern Illinois University, DeKalb, IL 60115, before March 1, 1976.

INTERLIBRARY COOPERATION Project Director to develop a strong program of interlibrary cooperation among academic, public, school and special libraries in a 4-county area near St. Louis. This is a new position funded with a two-year LSCA grant and will require a good deal of travel. Qualifications require a M.L.S. and five years combined experience in two of the four types of libraries. Ability to relate to employees of small town school and public libraries essential. Salary: $12,115. Contact: Edgar Chamberlin, Kaskaskia Library System, 306 N. Main St., Smithton, IL 62285.

TWO POSITION vacancies: Library Science Assistant/Associate Professor. (1) Responsible for teaching courses in technical services plus another major core area (2) Responsible for teaching courses in library administration and management plus another core area. Qualifications for both: Ph.D. in library and information science; professional library experience; ability in teaching, research, and service. Salary: open, dependent upon qualifications and experience. Excellent fringe benefits. Positions open August, 1976. Send application, résumé, and references by March 15, 1976 to: Dr. Eva Kiewitt, Chairperson, Search and Screen Committee, Graduate Library School, Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana 47401. An equal opportunity, affirmative action employer.

GOVERNORS STATE UNIVERSITY. Assistant, Circulation/Media to assist the heads of adjacent departments in administration of general and reserve circulation, collection maintenance, use and control of media collection, and management of self-instructional Materials Center. Qualifications: M.L.S. fron an accredited library school. Experience preferred, but not mandatory. Salary: $13,000+ depending on qualifications. Governors State University is a new upper-division state university with a growing enrollment (approaching 5,000), located 30 miles south of Chicago. Send résumés by March 15, 1976 to: Ms. Barbara Smith, Chairperson, Search Committee, Learning Resources Center, Governors State University, Park Forest South, Illinois 60466. (An affirmative action/equal opportunity employer).

DIRECTOR of Library Services. Administers collection of 175,000 volumes, staff of 8 in liberal arts college of 875 students. In addition to general administrative duties, the director acts as periodicals librarian, being responsible for selection and acquisition, including all business procedures involved. Minimum requirements: 3 years' full-time experience in collegiate library with some supervisory responsibility. Send credentials to: Mary Byerly, Acting Director, Cornell College Library, Mt. Vernon, Iowa 52314.

POSITIONS OPEN—WEST

YOUNG ADULT SERVICES. Imaginative, self-starter to plan and conduct demonstration project for two overcrowded, independent small libraries serving diverse southern Nevada communities, ten miles apart. Eighteen months federally funded, becomes permanent program if successful. Two years minimum experience as graduate librarian. Open now at $11,000. Send résumé to: Boulder City Library, 539 California Street, Boulder City, Nevada 89005.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHEAST

LIBRARIAN, for audio-visual area, with some general circulation duties in four-year college, south-central Pennsylvania. Faculty rank at instructor level, starting salary $10,000 per year. 12-month contract. Must have M.L.S. from accredited library school, experience in audio-visual area and knowledge of LC classification. Position available September, 1976. Apply in writing to: Mrs. Margaret S. Atwood, Head Librarian, York College of Pennsylvania, Country Club Road, York, PA 17405. York College is an equal opportunity employer.

FACULTY POSITION. The Catholic University of America, Graduate Department of Library Science applications are invited for an authorized position, beginning September, 1976. Requirements: M.L.S. plus doctorate (or at least candidacy status), or the equivalent, in library science; some experience in teaching and library work. Teaching load: three graduate classes per term, plus research activity, normal student advising, and committee assignments. Competence in the following areas: foundations of American librarianship, research methods, and preferably public librarianship and technical services. Salary: $14,000 for academic year (September-May) with possible addition of 1/6 base salary for summer session teaching. TIAA, Major Medical. Send vita and information on teaching areas to: Dr. Elizabeth W. Stone, Chairman, Department of Library Science, The Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C. 20064. The Catholic University of America is an equal opportunity employer. Dr. Stone and members of the Catholic University faculty will be pleased to interview applicants during the AALS meeting in Chicago, January 16-18, and the ALA Midwinter meeting, January 19-23.

CHAIRPERSON, Department of Library Science, Graduate School of Library and Information Sciences, University of Pittsburgh. Administrative and teaching responsibility in the department and work with the dean in general management of the school. Qualifications: Earned Doctorate, demonstrated administrative ability, library and teaching experience, recognized professional and research achievements. 12 month appointment. Salary open, dependent upon qualifications and experience. Excellent fringe benefits. Position open July 1976. Send inquiries, applications, nominations and accompanying documents before March 1, 1976 to: Richard Kyzys, Chairperson Search Committee, GSLIS, University of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, PA 15260. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

CATALOG LIBRARIAN. New position in 1976-77 budget available July 1, 1976. M.L.S. degree. Experience with LC. Ability to catalog multimedia and academic library experience desired. Minimum $10,192. Send application with resumé to: James R. Thrash, Director, Blackwell Library, Salisbury State College, Salisbury, Maryland, 21801 by March 30.

PUBLISHER OF PRIMARY books for children needs a bright creative person who has experience in writing promotional copy and ability to handle production details. Educational and art backgrounds helpful but not essential. Small office. Westchester or lower Connecticut. Send full résumé to G 54.

HEAD CATALOG LIBRARIAN

Position now available in New Jersey for a cataloging manager with M.L.S. Responsible for supervising a major department consisting of 3 major areas: Professional Librarians, Annotators and Data Entry Operators. Must have the ability to do original descriptive cataloging and have experience in LC, Dewey Decimal, and nonprint cataloging. Meaningful knowledge of on-line cataloging applications and previous administrative experience required. Salary is open depending upon qualifications. Execellent fringe benefits.

Apply by letter with résumé, including salary history, salary required, and availability data, to:

PERSONNEL MANAGER
THE BAKER & TAYLOR COMPANIES
DIVISION OF W.R. GRACE & CO.
50 Kirby Ave. Somerville, N.J. 08876

An Equal Opportunity Employer, M F

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHEAST

BRANCH REFERENCE Assistant, Business/Engineering Library. ALA/M.L.S. degree, undergraduate degree in business administration or economics and two years of appropriate reference experience required, second Master's in either subject desirable. Duties include reference work with graduate students and faculty, instruction in library use, literature searching and preparation of bibliographies, supervision of interlibrary loans. Library is a branch of the Darmouth College Library system serving the graduate schools of business administration and engineering. Salary $9,350, six weeks vacation. Send applications to: Adelaide B. Lockhart, Baker Library, Dartmouth College, Hanover, New Hampshire 03755. An equal opportunity, affirmative action employer.

COMMISSIONED REPS: America's largest importer of French and Spanish books has more than 50,000 titles for a captive market. Looking for national reps to put our extensive catalogues in the hands of teachers, schools, libraries, especially ultra-lucrative bilingual market. No other line or company like ours in country. Board of Education contacts essential. G 52.

PERGAMON PRESS seeks five market co-ordinators to help create and implement sales/promotion strategies in each of these market areas: University, research and major public libraries, industry: government and special libraries, wholesalers and trade book stores, college adoptions, el/hi and vocational school libraries. Each co-ordinator will be a self-starter, knowledgeable in his/her market segment. Cost and profit conscious, and with a flair for effective promotion. Previous technical/professional publishing and/or library experience helpful. Exciting and rewarding prospects with one of the foremost international publishers and library suppliers. Good salary, plus bonus for achieving objectives. Send résumé with salary required to the Vice President, Marketing, Pergamon Press, Inc., Maxwell House, Fairview Park, Elmsford, NY 10523.

SOCIAL AND BEHAVIORAL Sciences Reference Librarian. Position open September 3, 1976 due to retirement. Reference, orientation, and collection development responsibilities. Accredited M.L.S. and undergraduate major in psychology, sociology, political science, geography, or anthropology in that order of preference. Salary as instructor $10,108-$13,540 for 9 months; possibility of summer employment. Appointment at higher rank and salary possible. Send letter of intent and résumé by March 1, 1976 to: Martha Donahue, Chairperson, Recruitment Committee, Mansfield State College Library, Mansfield, PA 16933. An equal opportunity employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHWEST

LIBRARIANS for Social Science Library. Assignments include reference/government documents cataloging. Appointments begin September 1, 1976. M.L.S., social science background required. Second degree or advanced academic training in psychology, business administration, or law desirable. Cataloging experience with AACR required for one position only. Salary $11,000 up depending upon qualifications. Faculty status. Send resumé and three letters of reference to: Dr. G. Donald Smith, Director of Libraries, Washington State University, Pullman, WA 99163, by April 30, 1976. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

DIRECTOR for university library. Doctorate preferred, minimum M.L.S. plus additional post-baccalaureate degree; at least 10 years professional library experience, primarily administrative, to administer, supervise and coordinate all operations of modern 200,000 volume, three-story well-designed facility serving 3,400 students (2,800 FTE). $18,500 minimum, faculty status, excellent fringe benefits plus moving allowance. Appointment date no later than August 1, 1976. Apply with vitae and references by March 8 to Office of Provost, Attention: Library Director Search Committee, Pacific Lutheran University, Tacoma, Washington 98447. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHWEST

HEAD CENTRAL REFERENCE Librarian: The University of Arizona is seeking a professional librarian to administer the central reference department. This department will be created when the main library is moved to a new building in the fall of 1976 and will include general reference material as well as special tools in the subject areas of the social sciences and humanities. The head central reference librarian will coordinate the development of the collection, supervise a staff of approximately 9 professional librarians and 7 library assistants, oversee interlibrary loan operations, and actively promote the use of the library. Several years of professional service, including administrative experience in a reference department is required. Applicants for this position must be graduates of an ALA accredited library school. Preference will be given to candidates with a broad academic background in the social sciences or humanities and an ability to read and speak Spanish. Librarians at the University of Arizona have 12-month appointments with 22 days per year of paid vacation, and a standard package of academic holidays and other fringe benefits. The minimum salary will be $14,000. Applications will not be accepted after March 15, 1976. The University of Arizona is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. Send résumés and inquiries to: Mary Dale Palsson, Assistant Librarian for Public Services, University of Arizona Library, Tucson, Arizona 85721.

HEAD, PUBLIC SERVICES Department. Position available now. Responsible for coordination and supervision of public services functions, reference, including on-line services, circulation, interlibrary loan, photocopy and stack maintenance. Graduation from ALA accredited library school, biomedical training and experience essential, and working knowledge of two foreign languages required. Three years of extensive public service experience including demonstrated supervisory competence. Medical center library including service to schools of medicine, nursing and pharmacy as well as licensed health professionals statewide. Professional librarians, 13; sub-professionals, 12; FTE students, 25. Collection: 80,000 volumes and 3,000 current serials. Salary: $13,500 negotiable. Affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Apply to: James W. Barry, Librarian, Arizona Medical Center Library, Tucson, Arizona 85724. (602) 882-6121.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS

Baker & Taylor Co.	571
R. R. Bowker Co.	578, 598
Coward, McCann & Geoghegan	610, 629, 631
Dell Publishing Co.	605
Demco Educational Corp.	569
Dow Jones-Irwin	612
Emerson Books	631
F. W. Faxon Co.	602
Gale Research Co.	600
Hawthorn Books	609
Highsmith Co.	574
Houghton Mifflin Co.	611
Japan Publications Trading Co.	562
Josten's Library Services Division	575
H. P. Kraus	619
Kraus-Thomson Organization	603
J. B. Lippincott Co.	632, 634, 635
Luxor Corp.	572
Lyceum Books Publishers	619
Marc Applied Research Co.	576
Micro Design	3d Cover
3M	2d Cover, 561
National Microsales	573
New York Graphic Society	607, 608, 613
Prentice-Hall	602, 605, 606, 610, 612, 629
Purnell Educational	604
G. P. Putnam's Sons	608, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636
Rodale Press	627
Rucker Press	605
Sitler's Supplies	575
University of North Carolina Press	613
Viking Press	621
John Wiley & Sons	625, 4th Cover
Xerox University Microfilms	566

MARCH 1, 1976 ISSN 0000-0027

94010burlzz48z6 51ja06306
Burlingame Pub Lib
480 Primrose Rd.
Burlingame, CA 94010

Recommended Sci/Tech and Business Books of 1975
In the News: GPO under fire; NCLIS for OE library upgrading; state $$ threat in Mich. checked
Spring Sci/Tech, Medical, Business Books

LJ LIBRARY JOURNAL

The Gaylord Circulation Control System

"Its Performance is our Responsibility"

Libraries are our only business.
When we install a circulation system,
we take 100% responsibility for design,
research and development, supply,
installation, maintenance . . .
Total performance.

Who else takes that kind of start-to-finish, complete responsibility?

GLS

GAYLORD

QUALITY... INNOVATION... PRACTICAL LIBRARY EXPERIENCE
SYRACUSE, NY 13201 • STOCKTON, CA 95208

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF: John N. Berry III
SENIOR EDITORS: Shirley Havens, Karl Nyren
EDITOR, BOOK REVIEW: Janet Fletcher
ASSOCIATE EDITORS:
Book Review: Robert R. Harris
Bibliographic: Irene S. Land
News: Noël Savage
PRODUCTION EDITOR: Ellen Mangin
ART EDITOR: Carlos Delgado
REVIEW EDITORS: Marlene Charnizon, Ellen Levy, Anneliese Schwarzer, Katharine Scott
ASSISTANT EDITOR: Maureen Crowley
PRODUCTION ASSISTANTS: Nancy Brown, Ann Yazejian
EDITORIAL ASSISTANTS: Bette-Lee Fox, Ann Sankar
ADV. SALES MANAGER: Richard H. Brown
ADV. PRODUCTION: Maureen J. Rose
PUBLISHER: Paul J. Carnese

LJ/LIBRARY JOURNAL is published by R. R. Bowker Co., a Xerox company. Robert F. Asleson, President.

Direct editorial and advertising correspondence to 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York 10036. Telephone: (212) 764-5100. Subscription inquiries and changes of address should be directed to R. R. Bowker Company, Subscription Dept., P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588. Publications Offices at 117 Church Street, Whitinsville, Mass. 01488. Issued twice a month, September through June, monthly in July and August. Second class postage paid at Whitinsville, Mass. and additional mailing offices. Copyright © 1976 Xerox Corporation.

LJ/LIBRARY JOURNAL is indexed in Library Literature, Library & Information Science Abstracts, and Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature. SUBSCRIPTIONS: USA: 1 year $19.00; 2 years $36.00; 3 years $51.00. Canada and Postal Union of the Americas and Spain, add $2 per year; elsewhere, add $3 per year. Single copy $1.35. Spring, fall, and winter announcement numbers, $3.25 each. POSTMASTER: Please send Form 3579 to R. R. Bowker Company, P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588.

LJ/LIBRARY JOURNAL reserves the right to make its own independent judgment as to the acceptability of advertising copy and illustrations in advertisements. Advertiser and advertising agency assume liability for all content (including text, representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assume responsibility for any claims arising therefrom against the publisher. Offers to sell products, which appear in LJ/LIBRARY JOURNAL, are subject to all laws and regulations and are void where so prohibited.

Letters 643
Calendar 645
Editorial 647

News:
GPO services & costs scored . . . NCLIS backs sci-tech initiatives, urges strengthening of OE library bureau . . . S.D. library law charts new directions . . . NYPL branch closings fought . . . Mich. libraries win state aid victory . . . NCLIS urges extension of Medical Assistance Act . . . new courses in specialized service, law & networks reported . . . chemical info & copyright slated for airing at ACS . . . UW library school to chart staff development at Seattle P.L. 648

People 657

FEATURES

Illus. from "Butterflies" by Thomas C. Emmel (Knopf)

Sci-Tech Books of 1975
One hundred outstanding titles for general library collections
BY EDITH S. CROCKETT & ELLIS MOUNT 660

Business Books of 1975
A selection of recommended books published during the past year
BY A. J. ANDERSON 668

Spring Scientific, Technical, Medical, and Business Books . . 679

Professional Reading 672
Checklist 676
Magazines 677
Buyers' Guide 678

THE BOOK REVIEW

Book Reviews 701
Index to Reviews and Professional Reading 744

Classified 745
Index to Advertisers 748

Announcing
SOVIET SCIENCE
The monthly journal of the USSR Academy of Sciences. Now available in English translation.

SOVIET SCIENCE, the official journal of the USSR Academy of Sciences, is the major forum for the leading Soviet scientists as they inform the scientific community of the progress, developments and new trends in Soviet science.

AUTHORITATIVE

SOVIET SCIENCE has among its distinguished editors and contributors such internationally known scientists as P. Kapitsa, V. Belousov, M. Markov, M. Keldysh, N. Bogolyubov and V. Kovda.

INDISPENSABLE RESOURCE

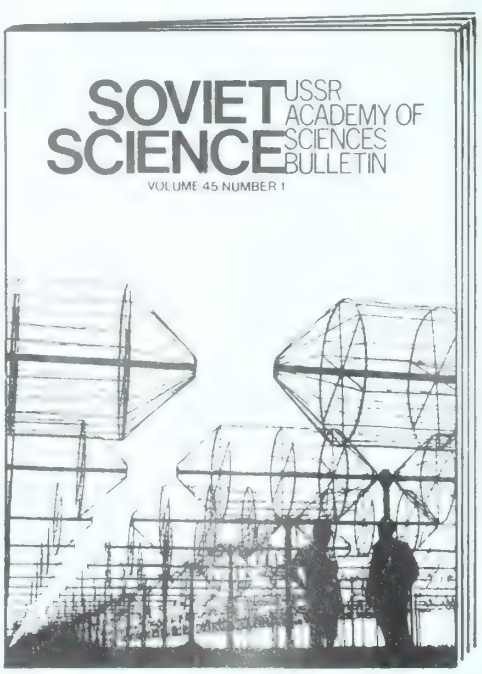
Intended not only for the professional scientist but anyone—regardless of field—who would keep abreast of Soviet contributions to science. Regularly contained are articles, special reports, surveys, highlights of conferences, biography and bibliography.

CURRENT

SOVIET SCIENCE offers those concerned with the study and dissemination of science an awareness of the current Soviet scientific experience and its future course.

"This journal gives the only insight into the activities of the USSR Academy of Sciences and is invaluable for all students of the Soviet scene."

—John Turkevich
Senior Research Chemist,
Eugene Higgins Professor of Chemistry Emeritus,
Princeton University



SAMPLE CONTENTS

Modern Ideas on the Nature of Dust Storms on Mars; Diamonds in Electronics; Ancient Early Neolithic Culture of the Upper Volga; Progress in the Axiomatic Quantum Field Theory; Neurophysiological Code of Man's Simplest Mental Processes; Biological Resources of the Ocean; Quantitative Data for Science and Technology; Chemocommunication of Mammals; Energetics: Present State and Prospects; Theory of Plasma; Structural Behavior of Inner Parts of the Continental Crust; Genetics of Natural Populations and Biosphere Resources; Robototechnology: Present State and Perspectives; Atmosphere Circulation and Climate; The Problem of Prognosis of Nonorganic Compounds by Means of Electronic Computers; Pulsar Radiation; Chemical Crop Protection.

SOVIET SCIENCE
(VESTNIK AKADEMII NAUK SSSR)
Science and science-related contents offered at an UNPRECEDENTED price for a translation journal: $30.00 per year (12 issues)

Allerton Press, Inc.
150 FIFTH AVENUE
NEW YORK, NY 10011

LJ LETTERS

Indefensible: Flanagan, censors?

Eli M. Oboler
University Librarian, Idaho State University, Pocatello:

In nearly 35 years of being part of the honorable profession of librarianship, I cannot remember any more pernicious—indeed, vicious—an attack on one of the basic elements of our profession than the article by Leo N. Flanagan mis-titled as "Defending the Indefensible: the Limits of Intellectual Freedom" (LJ, October 15, p. 1887-91). It should have been titled "Running Up the White Flag: the Limits of Cowardice."

Alexis de Tocqueville, writing about the prospects of American democracy as he saw them in 1840, wrote: "I trace amongst our contemporaries two contrary notions which are equally injurious. One set of men can perceive nothing in the principle of equality but the anarchical tendencies which it engenders: they dread their own free agency—they fear themselves. Other thinkers, less numerous but more enlightened, take a different view: beside that track which starts from the principle of equality to terminate in anarchy, they have at last discovered the road which seems to lead men to inevitable servitude. They shape their souls beforehand to this necessary condition; and, despairing of remaining free, they already do obeisance in their hearts to the master who is soon to appear. The former abandons freedom, because they think it dangerous; the latter, because they hold it to be impossible."

Flanagan, in various ways, seems to hold both opinions. Since Mr. Flanagan cites "heaven" as his authority for the fallibility of "human decision and action," let me use heaven as my own authority, via Robert Browning's well-known call for daring and idealism, "A man's reach should exceed his grasp/ Or what's a heaven for?"

In a brief letter, the errors of fact and informed judgment, explicit and implicit, in Flanagan's farrago of fear cannot be detailed. But there are, I know, many spokesmen for courageous, unlimited professional librarianship who can reply seriatim, if LJ will provide the forum. Surely a man who uses flagrant mis-statements of John Stuart Mill's point of view on the freedom of expression and uses those well-known authorities on the subject, Patrick Williams and J. J. Pearce, as a contemporary "proof" of his own opinions should be answered. I find Flanagan's article full of impracticality, over-simplifications, legal difficulties, anti-intellectualism, and want of professionalism. By some coincidence, these are exactly his charges against the Introduction to the Intellectual Freedom Manual!

The fear of freedom would ill become an ALA Intellectual Freedom Manual; I fervently hope the Office for Intellectual Freedom Manual will not do as freedom-fearing Flanagan suggests. There is no question that the Introduction to the Manual is imperfect—but at least it is not pusillanimous.

Robert Buckeye
Blanchard, Michigan

Central to any consideration of censorship is who does the deed and why. Leo N. Flanagan, in his recent "Defending the indefensible" (LJ, October 15, 1975, p. 1887-91), seems unaware that this might be a problem. He assumes that there might be a group (intelligent, educated, and, you bet, sensitive) who will act in the best interests of the rest of us (those others less well educated, etc., poor and black, women, etc.). It is an elitist concept and one which calls forth one of the strongest arguments against censorship. How strongly Flanagan accepts the notion of an elite is seen in his distinction between public ("entertainment") and university ("information") libraries. Since librarians are college graduates, Flanagan presumably can no longer see that universities are, despite open admission, still the place of the privileged and maintained solely for their use; and that the public library is one of the few places where the wretched of the earth may look for information denied them elsewhere. And if these institutions become known casually as places of entertainment because the poor cannot, like the privileged, pay for their entertainment (nor for that matter their information), that cannot deny their other, most essential function in a democracy. And what are we to make anyway of someone who says that it was our refusal to regulate freedom of expression which led the military into its abuses in Vietnam? Was it not the military and the restrictions it placed on freedom of access and information—classified information, top secret, executive privilege, denial, lies—which aided and fostered a cavalier and contemptuous rape of moral principle? Or don't we understand that such lying and corruption, malfeasance and negligence should not get into the hands of the American people?

Lee Hubbard
Map Librarian, University of Washington Libraries, Seattle:

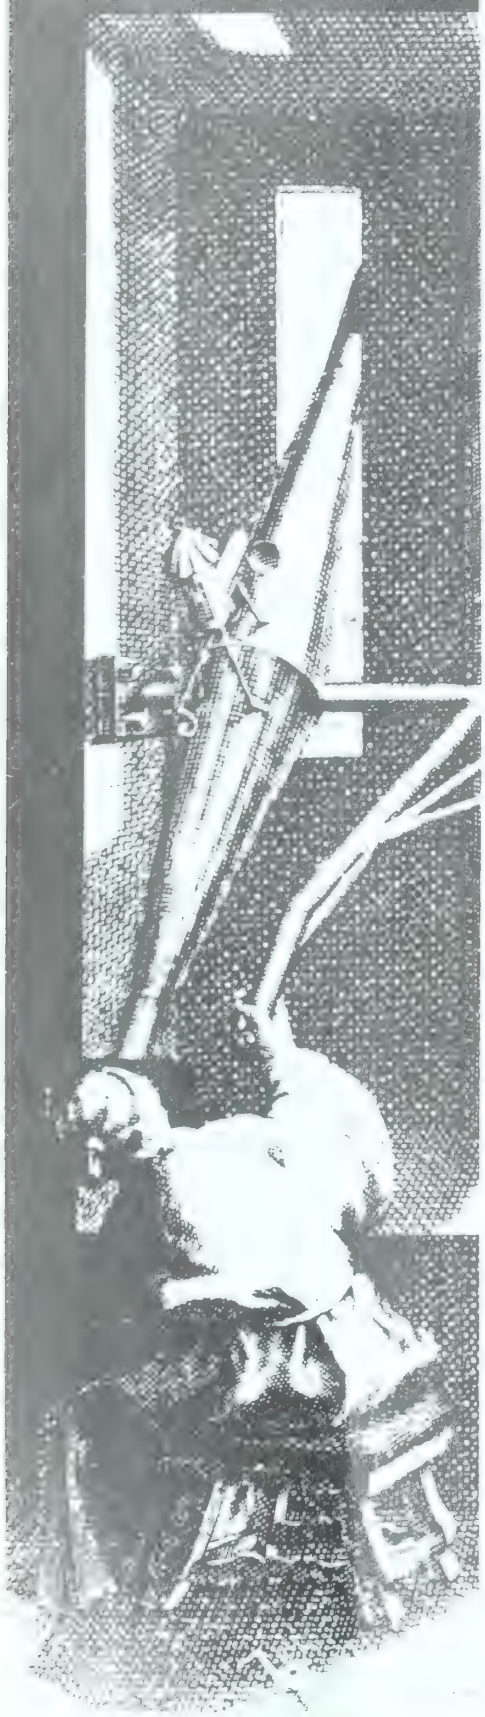
Leo Flanagan's article does suggest that librarians could be leaders within our society, but ends up echoing a disturbingly prevalent approach to achieving this goal. Will still more college courses suddenly produce intellectual Cinderellas throughout our libraries? I would have thought that after seeing the experts' performance in military forecasting and inflation control there would be less reverence for the cult of the expert—particularly in questions that are more matters of personal values than of knowledge, like "pornographic movies in Los Angeles or political rebellions in Afghanistan."

In highly technical subject libraries, extensive subject background may be important in every position from trainee to top administrator. But there are still lots of librarians in such positions who seem to perform just fine without technical education—and most librarians don't work in technical libraries. Even the specialists often move on to positions unrelated to their subject specialties, where a subject Master's could have no direct relevance and little academic prestige.

Less technical subjects can be explored at least as fast working with subject majors in a subject collection as by taking courses. All it requires is enough enthusiasm for the subject to keep you critically examining what you're selecting, arranging, indexing, and helping people explore day in and day out.

Making people go to library school

Bowker tells you where to look when you don't know where to look



LITERARY MARKET PLACE 76-77
It tells you who the major book publishers are, and their specialties.

It tells you who the printers, binders, typesetters, paper mills are, with the people to contact, addresses, phone numbers.

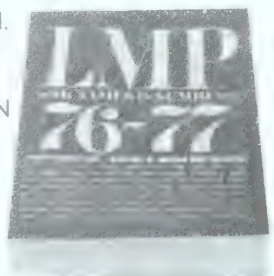
It guides you to promotion agencies, freelance artists, photographers, employment agencies, editing services.

It gives you the wholesalers, the literary agents, the subscription agencies, the book reviewers.

In short, LMP provides you with the names, addresses, phone numbers of about 20,000 companies and individuals in 82 different categories who service the publishing industry.

The new, revised, updated 1976-1977 edition will be ready in April. Buy it. It tells you where to look when you don't know where to look.

Edited by J.A. Neal. 8-1/2" x 11". 700 pages. Soft cover. LC 41-51571. ISSN 0075-9899. ISBN 0-8352-0843-5. $21.50.



INTERNATIONAL LITERARY MARKET PLACE 76-77
Here's an extensive survey of the book trade and library profession throughout the world – with the exception of the U.S. The alphabetically-arranged listings provide descriptive and contact information on associations, publishers and booksellers, antiquarians, directories and journals, literary editors and book reviewers, news and photographic agencies, prizes, and more. Summer, 1976. 8-1/4" x 11-1/4". c. 400 pages. ISBN 0-85935-007-X. $23.00t.

AMERICAN BOOK TRADE DIRECTORY 75-76
The best way to quickly locate, contact and learn about 25,000 booksellers, publishers, wholesalers and other types of book firms in the U.S., Canada, Great Britain and Ireland. Includes listings of library appraisers, book clubs, foreign-language booksellers, and more. 1975. Compiled by Jaques Cattell Press. 8-1/2" x 11". 672 pages. LC 51-23627. ISSN 0065-759X. ISBN 0-8352-0819-2. $45.00.

INTERNATIONAL ACADEMIC AND SPECIALIST PUBLISHERS DIRECTORY
Lists and describes 10,000 English-language specialty publishers throughout the world who confine their activities to such specialized areas as economics, dogs, data processing, education, medicine, and hundreds of others. 1975. Edited by Tim Clarke. 8-1/4" x 11-3/4". 500 pages. ISBN 0-85935-002-9. $25.00.

PUBLISHERS' INTERNATIONAL DIRECTORY
Provides the names, ISBN prefixes, addresses, telephone numbers and subject specialties of 30,000 publishing firms in 150 countries. "Quite a lot," said Reference Services Review. 6th edition. 1974. Published by Verlag Dokumentation (Munich) and dist. in WH by Bowker. 6" x 8-1/2". 1,182 pages. LC 67-47570. ISBN 3-7940-1271-2. $49.50.

BOOK PUBLISHING: WHAT IT IS, WHAT IT DOES
Explains the entire publishing process in a sound introductory fashion – covering how books are created, manufactured, marketed, stored, delivered, as well as basic financial and accounting practices. "A welcome sight," said American Libraries. 1974. By John P. Dessauer. 6" x 9". 231 pages. Ill. LC 74-12162. ISBN 0-8352-0758-7. $11.95.

Order all books on 30-day approval.
R.R. Bowker Order Dept. P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Mich. 48106

Outside Western Hemisphere: Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England

All orders plus shipping and handling. Sales tax added where applicable.
(Prices subject to change without notice.)

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

is restrictive enough, but all that costs is time and money. More ominous are the certification exams that Flanagan recommends. If the questions don't deal with what's necessary to give good service they're pointless. If they do, they're likely to be based on "standard professional practice" and favor the well-trained technicians at the expense of people from progressive libraries or nonlibrary backgrounds who have no interest or experience in the usual Mickey Mouse library procedures.

Back when I was a college student, the Word was that no matter how prestigious the university or how famous the teacher, your education depended on exploring libraries and reading whatever you found exciting. If state libraries or library schools or employers want to get into continuing education for librarians they don't have to try to force them into the sort of "education" that school teachers have to put up with. They might, for instance, try winnowing the current literature dealing with the dissemination of knowledge and distribute offprints as widely as possible—perhaps utilizing individual interest profiles.

We can't talk about intellectual freedom without considering educational freedom. In our profession we need not more rigid educational requirements but a greater variety of career ladders; alternative schools and colleges, apprenticeships, and formal recognition within our own ranks that you can become knowledgeable by using libraries. Such a loosening up is likely to result in more people having a chance to actually utilize the intellectual experience, curiosity, and enthusiasm that truly professional library service requires.

Gary E. Masters
Denton, Texas:

As a graduate student in library science and new member of ALA, I read Flanagan with great interest. Since I lack even the year's graduate work in the field that he seems to think is inadequate to consider selection or censorship, I write with a degree of apprehension. Flanagan's title, while apt, points in the wrong direction. As an apologist for censorship he is working to "defend the indefensible." His well-structured, scholarly, footnoted attack might have been approved by Pope Urban VIII when the latter was concerned with Galileo Galilei's work.

. . . Who can be in favor of "visual rape, turn(ing) people to objects," or "racist, sexist, and exploitative views?" Flanagan even managed to work Vietnam into the picture, but I am not sure which military abused freedom in Vietnam. Does he mean the U.S., the late Government of Vietnam, or the North Vietnamese Army? It doesn't really matter, but it was an indication of the confusion. . . . The section on "want of professionalism," as I read it, suggests that librarians with substantive knowledge would be able to select the good items from the bad and avoid all intellectual freedom problems. Flanagan even provided a place for the bad in "research centers where expert guidance by knowledgeable librarians would be used to aid responsible patrons with ascertained need to know." To Flanagan it is only the unprofessional, ill-trained librarian that hides behind a definition of intellectual freedom.

I maintain that a major responsibility of a professional is to know the limits of the profession and refuse to go beyond them. A professional engineer will refuse to cut cost and produce an unsafe structure. The problem of selecting good materials that will "encourage human growth" from the bad materials is not a matter of training, however long or certified. It is not possible to make this division. The basis of our nation is individual freedom, and the First Amendment of the Constitution emphasizes the concern with freedom of speech. The idea that one person or authority can select what is right from all that might be selected and reject what is bad is in direct opposition to the idea that freedom is necessary for each person to select his own path. . . . The librarian who is aware of his own human prejudices and who respects the freedom of others, not to presume to dictate what is good or bad for them, is one who is a true professional. It is hard to admit that we are not competent to decide what is good for people to read and what is bad for them. Who is to judge? The reader. If each person is not able to decide what is good and bad for his reading, then it will be more than the First Amendment that needs changing.

. . . The question of classified secrets seems to be part of the idea of privacy and limits placed on distribution of items by the producer or the government that sponsors the materials. I do not see the connection with censorship as directly as Flanagan pictures it. The term "visual rape" is so much verbal nonsense. I can understand the value of feminist decoration to the old argument of censorship. A bit like chrome trim on the latest car to cover up the same old chassis and motor. Times change. . . . The rate of change is greater than ever before. The only way we can continue to test old ideas and new ideas is to give them free exchange. Any limit on the freedom of speech will limit our ability to adjust to the new conditions and survive in the future. The library can be the key area for this exchange of ideas. But any effort to limit the free flow of ideas because some consider themselves qualified to pick and choose what is proper and what is not will always end with the elimination of what is vital and necessary. Flanagan's goals are good, but his means will not work.

CALENDAR

MAR. 7-9—ALASKA LA, Juneau.

MAR. 9-10—NATIONAL FEDERATION OF ABSTRACTING AND INDEXING SERVICES, Columbus, Ohio. Christopher Inn. "Information—Dilemmas, Decisions, Directions." Contact: NFAIS, 3401 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa. 19104.

MAR. 10-12—ALA INFORMATION SCIENCE AND AUTOMATION DIVISION, "Processing and Automation at the Library of Congress," Washington, D.C., the Library of Congress and Old Town Holiday Inn, Alexandria, Va. Contact: Donald P. Hammer, Exec. Secy., ISAD, ALA, 50 E. Huron St., Chicago, 60611. (312) 944-6780.

MAR. 31-APR. 2—UTAH LA, Salt Lake City, Salt Lake Hilton Hotel.

APR. 1-2—UNIV. OF MINNESOTA LIBRARY SCHOOL AND MINNEAPOLIS PUBLIC LIBRARY AND INFORMATION CENTER, "The Mythic Image: Mythology, Folklore, and Librariaes," Minneapolis. Harris McClaskey coordinator. Leaders: Joseph Campbell, Beverly Brodsky McDermott, Gerald McDermott. Contact: Joan Leigh, Asst. to Director, Library School, 419 Walter Library, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis 55455. Deadline: March 1, 1976.

APR. 3—SCHOOL OF INFORMATION STUDIES, SYRACUSE UNIV. "Information Broker/Free Lance Librarian, New Careers, New Library Services," Syracuse. Contact: Ruth Patrick, School of Information Studies, Syracuse Univ., 113 Euclid Ave., Syracuse, N.Y. 13210. (315) 423-4930, (315) 423-2911.

APR 29-30—MARYLAND LA, Baltimore, Baltimore Hilton Inn. Contact: Jean Barry Molz, Maryland LA, c/o Baltimore County Public Library, Admin. Offices, 320 York Rd., Towson, Md. 21617. (301) 758-0980.

APR. 29-MAY 1—OEE OREGON LA, Lincoln City, Dunes Ocean Front Resort. Contact: Carol Ventgen, Coos Bay Public Library, 525 Anderson, Coos Bay, Ore. 97420.

APR. 30-MAY 1—OHIO VALLEY GROUP OF TECHNICAL SERVICES LIBRARIANS, Ball State Univ., Muncie, Indiana 47304. Contact: Frances E. Reynolds, Acquisitions Librarian, Bracken Library, Ball State Univ.

MAY 2-4—IDAHO LA, Burley, Ponderosa Inn. Contact Exhibits Chairperson Anna Green, Portneuf District Library, 5210 Stuart, Chubbuck 83201. (208) 237-2192.

The nation's libraries serve community law book needs

Does your library?

Take a few moments to check your law book section. Compare it with the holding of the libraries listed on this page. They represent just a few of the many hundreds of libraries, from the smallest to the largest, who provide their patrons access to the laws that invade every area of their business and personal lives, laws that not only regulate but also provide important rights and benefits. Your patrons deserve such access.

Here's a suggestion: Write today for your FREE copy of "How Lay Libraries Serve Community Law Book Needs". You will find this booklet informative and useful. It provides you a measuring stick of your service in an important area. Write to: Library Counselor, West Publishing Company, 50 W. Kellogg Blvd., St. Paul, MN 55102

CUYAHOGA COUNTY, OHIO, PUBLIC LIBRARY provides access for some 760,000 persons not served by the public library in Cleveland, which is the county seat. The county library facility was founded in 1923 and has 27 branches. Its excellent law book section includes North Eastern Reporter, Ohio Cases, Ohio Digest, United States Code Annotated, United States Code Congressional and Administrative News, Supreme Court Reporter, Internal Revenue Code, Federal Tax Regulations, Cowans on Bankruptcy and Words and Phrases.

RIDLEY TOWNSHIP PUBLIC LIBRARY, Folsom, Pa., does an admirable job of providing its patrons access to their laws. Although it serves a population of only 39,000, the library has available on its law book shelves Purdon's Pennsylvania Statutes Annotated, United States Code Annotated, United States Code Congressional and Administrative News, Real Estate Transactions, Pennsylvania Court Rules, Federal Tax Regulations, Internal Revenue Acts and Internal Revenue Code.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC LIBRARIES, Rockville, Md., offers a wide range of law materials to the community it serves. Publications include West's Maryland Law Encyclopedia, Maryland Reporter and Maryland Digest on the state level. Among the national and federal law publications available at this outstanding library are Corpus Juris Secundum, the complete law encyclopedia, United States Code Annotated, Uniform Laws Annotated, Modern Legal Forms, Supreme Court Reporter, Atlantic Reporter and the federal tax publications.

WEST PUBLISHING COMPANY

LIBRARIES ARE FOR THE PEOPLE,
SO ARE THE LAWS

Spirit of the Sixties

High on the agenda of the Council Orientation Program at the recent ALA Midwinter Meeting was the question of how to increase membership participation in the deliberations of the Association.

ALA is governed by a Council of 160 voting members. On September 30, 1975 there were 28,651 regular personal members of ALA, of whom 26.9 percent (7,690) belong to none of ALA's divisions. More than 3000 regular personal members of ALA chose not to renew their memberships that year.

ALA Division membership was dramatically decreased. Hardest hit was the American Association of School Librarians (AASL) which lost 4,690 members (38.8 percent). Close behind in percentage losses were the Reference and Adult Services Division (RASD), the American Library Trustee Association (ALTA), the Public Library Association (PLA), and the Young Adult Services Division (YASD). ALTA with 2,222 members, the Health and Rehabilitative Library Services Division (HRLSD) with 1,583 members, the Association of State Library Agencies with 1,117 members, and the Library Education Division (LED) with 1,878 members, ended that year so small that many speculated that they would not survive.

Despite LED's small membership, 22.5 percent of the ALA Council (36 Councillors) work in library schools, of whom 11 are deans and directors. One assumes all 36 belong to LED. Academic librarians, who would normally belong to the Association of College and Research Libraries (ACRL is ALA's largest Division with 9,390 members), hold 39 Council seats, or 24 percent. We could only find seven or eight Councillors identified with school library service (4.5 percent of the Council), although their Division (AASL) is ALA's second largest, with 7,384 members. The 29 percent of the Councillors in public libraries probably belong to ALA's fifth largest Division, PLA, overrepresenting PLA's 5,320 members.

More significant, 91 of the 160 Councillors can easily be identified with upper level administrative or management positions in the institutions in which they are employed.

ALA's governing Council, then, represents neither the relative strength of its Divisions, nor the rank and file librarians that belong to the Association. Administrators and library educators have, by far, the best representation. School librarians and non-administrative professionals are the least well represented. Academic and public libraries have the largest Council constituencies.

At that Council Orientation, four thoughtful papers on the question of membership input were distributed. Councillors Gerald Shields, Harry Rowe, Miriam Crawford, and Alice Ihrig grappled with the problem, with passing references to the questions of who a Councillor represents and to whom one is accountable. They did acknowledge that ALA's Chapters could instruct their Councillors on issues and require reports of their votes, but library issues are not geographic in nature. They are either national (the job shortage, the NCLIS report, etc.) or relate to the type of library or activity in which librarians are engaged. While all four Councillors agreed that there were problems, none really devised a method for improved membership participation.

There is little hope that the Council will, of its own accord, solve this problem. It is unrepresentative, overwhelmingly administrative, unwieldy, and apparently reluctant to face the roll call vote. More tinkering with the ALA machinery would do more to confuse than to help.

Ultimately, the members themselves will have to demand and force a more responsive, representative Council. They have done it before. Alice Ihrig's paper shows that this has been most successful when it was well organized, but warns that such pressure ". . . frustrates those who wish for consistency and an orderly method of dealing with issues. There is also reason to question the wisdom of decisions made under pressure. . . ."

We believe that participation and democracy in ALA is more important than consistency and order. All the round tables, task forces, and "pressure groups" we formed in the Sixties still exist. Rank and file librarians must revive these participatory groups in ALA. They may want to endorse "tickets" in elections, caucus on issues, and they'll have to bring pressure wherever they can. The Sixties was a noisy and disorderly time, but it forced ALA to take giant steps toward more participation. A revival of the spirit of the Sixties, if not the decibel level, is the best way to insure membership participation. John Berry

LJ NEWS

GPO shortcomings ticked off by Labor Bureau editor

Henry Lowenstern, associate commissioner at the Bureau of Labor Statistics' Office of Publications, has sent on to LJ a report (prepared in response to inquiries from the Labor Bureau's Business Research Advisory Council) that zeroes in on the Government Printing Office—citing inferior composition and printing quality, unmet deadlines, and "excessive" pricing as just a few of GPO's shortcomings. Lowenstern's report contrasts sharply with GPO claims of greatly improved service—progress reported by Deputy Assistant Public Printer William J. Barrett at a meeting of public and academic librarians in Binghamton, New York (LJ, December 15, 1975, p. 2279) and at similar meetings around the U.S.

In his report to the Business Council, Lowenstern complained that the GPO has failed to resolve long-standing production and distribution problems. Among the problems cited: expensive BLS studies are "cheapened by quality problems ranging from broken type and poor inking to inferior paper and inadequate binding"; "dated periodicals and other documents whose timing is crucial are delivered late because the GPO and GPO contractors fail to meet printing and publishing schedules agreed upon in advance"; "complaints about quality and schedule failure are ignored or handled with indifference"; and the Bureau and other government agencies that want to make use of the GPO's electronic composition equipment often have to buy or create special computer software programs.

Lowenstern stated that the GPO is "overcharging" the public for periodicals and other subscription publications—charging "more than three times the actual cost of printing, postage, and distribution." The BLS, he claimed, has demonstrated that The Monthly Labor Review (which is sold by the GPO for $22.35 a year) costs the GPO less than $7.50 a year to print and distribute. The volume of public complaints about unsatisfactory service is going up, he said, and the BLS is often blamed for GPO service failures. Lowenstern complained that the Bureau is not permitted to control its sales publications, nor does it receive from the GPO accurate data on subscribers, renewals, and other information necesary for publications management.

Responding to Lawenstern's charges, David Brown (in charge of media relations for the GPO) maintained that such problems as poor print quality and missed deadlines do crop up occasionally, but that the GPO is working to improve its publications and distribution program. He held that government agencies have the option of buying software programs (for use on the GPO's sophisticated composition equipment) from the GPO or an outside firm, though he admitted that buying from private industry is going up.

As for pricing, Brown disputed the charge that the GPO is overcharging, maintaining that rising postal, paper, and labor costs have forced the GPO to hike prices about 75 percent overall; private industry prices, he claimed, have gone up 155 percent. Government agencies, explained Brown, pay for runs of publications for their own use; additional copies are sold to the public at a price consisting of "incremental"—their actual—cost plus a 50 percent surcharge. The GPO now has underway a study to evaluate its pricing and distribution procedures.

Commenting on the study, Deputy Assistant Public Printer William Barrett said that a new pricing scheme (requiring changes in law) may be in the offing. The General Accounting Office, he noted, had tried to nail down the basis of GPO "cost plus 50 percent" last year and concluded that GPO methods of pricing have not changed over the years. In defending the GPO's pricing policy, Barrett noted that the GPO has been hit harder than private industry by rising postal costs: it "had to absorb such costs overnight" while the industry got a five-year phase-in period.

NCLIS on science technology: three initiatives praised

The National Commission on Libraries and Information Science has gone on record in support of "three major initiatives in the area of science technology policy," thus taking another step towards laying the groundwork for coordinated national library development. In its resolution on science technology policy, NCLIS pointed up the importance of efficient national and international scientific information and communication processes—pegged by the Commission as vital to improved library services.

NCLIS then applauded the Special Committee on the National Science Foundation, Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare (Senator Edward Kennedy, chairperson) for its efforts to "improve the federal government stewardship of scientific and technical information programs." It praised Representatives Teague and Mosher (Committee on Science and Technology) for their sponsorship of H.R. 9058, which calls for "a comprehensive survey of ways and means for improving the federal effort in scientific research and information-handling, and in the use thereof." And NCLIS urged development of a strengthened program of the Office of Scientific and Technical Information Services, National Science Foundation, "whose activities, research, and other actions are so vital to the Commission's national program."

NCLIS urges strengthening of OE library bureau

At year's end, the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science adopted a resolution urging the U.S. Office of Education "to strengthen and increase the effectiveness of its Office of Libraries and Learning Resources so that it can provide leadership to the states and serve as an effective advocate for library service as a vital element of the entire educational process."

In arguing for an upgrading of the OE library bureau, NCLIS made these points: "the basic mission of OE is to promote the cause of education"; "library resources and services are an integral part of the educational process at all levels"; and "the development, extension, and improvement of library and information services are essential factors in the educational programs of the nation."

S.D. library law charts new directions

A proposed new library law—now under consideration by South Dakota legislators as a possible replacement of all existing library laws—is a forward-looking document that could provide a sound basis for future library development. Its most significant features: citizens would be empowered to vote for library service, and library boards would have the option of applying building funds to such other purposes as book buying or library service.

The text of the new law provides for: the responsibility of each governmental unit (municipality or county) to provide library service to its citizens; such cooperative arrangements as contracting for service and the joining of municipal or county units to provide a joint service; mandated library service contingent only upon the approval of a majority of the electors (who voted at the last gubernatorial election); holding such an election upon the petition of five percent of the people within the jurisdiction in question; allowance for established libraries within an area where the election is being held to either be included or not in the election, and in the subsequent taxing procedures; and banning the discontinuance of ongoing library service—except by a vote of the majority of the electors.

As for library trustees, the draft document says that the local governmental unit would be empowered to appoint five library trustees, and it can also name one of its own officers to the board. Trustees responsible for more than one jurisdiction, and/or both, a school and public library must be proportionately representative of the financial support sources of each component of the merger; they can get per diem and expenses for their work at levels set by their respective governing bodies. Library trustees would have the authority to appoint the librarian; adopt bylaws and policies for book selection, library governance, and the use of library services and materials; prepare the annual budget request and adopt the final version—the one approved by its governing body; and prepare and submit an annual report to local government and the state library agency. The librarian, says the draft law, should serve as secretary to the board and keep all its records—including budget documents.

The tentative law also provides for: legitimatizing the existence of pay collections and "reasonable charges for use"; setting library staff pay scales equal to those of comparable pay scales for other employees in the governmental unit; making the governmental unit responsible for the provision and maintenance of library facilities; okaying the use of bond issues or long-term (up to 30 years) lease arrangements not only for building space, but also for library furniture, equipment, and books; authorizing library boards to transfer capital funds originally intended for a building to other uses such as buying books or supporting services; and providing a framework for the establishment of libraries to serve both public and school needs—specifying respective board representation and funding responsibilities.

The new law, says State Librarian Herschel V. Anderson, has been the subject of extensive hearing throughout the state. He has urged librarians to seek legislative sponsors in the House and Senate.

New ALA newsletter

Volume 1, No. 1 of the RTSD Newsletter, a publication of the Resources and Technical Services Division of ALA, was launched in January and is scheduled to appear four times a year, appearing between issues of Library Resources and Technical Services.

The newsletter solicits short news items and articles, including "limited items concerning personnel . . . but not lists of position changes." It is available only to members of RTSD or LRTS (Library Resources and Technical Services) subscribers. Contact: Ms. Mary E. Pound, Editor, RTSD Newsletter, Box 7763, University Station, Austin, Tex. 78712.

LC gets CLR grant to absorb CONSER project

The Library of Congress has received a $165,800 grant from the Council on Library Resources to develop the system capability and programming "required to integrate the functions of the Conversion of Serials project (CONSER) with other technical processing activities . . . in LC's projected national bibliographic service." By November of 1977, LC is expected to assume responsibility for the management and permanent maintenance of the national serials data base.

For starters, senior level serials processing staff at LC will undertake a study to determine the software and hardware requirements for taking over the CONSER project. After design specifications are drawn up, actual programming will begin.

The CONSER project, which is now managed by CLR staff, will culminate in a centralized machine-readable data base of serials records. CONSER participants add new records to the file and also upgrade and correct records in the basic file online. The Library of Congress and the National Library of Canada act as the final bibliographic authorities. CONSER participants include: LC, the National Library of Medicine, the National Agricultural Library, the National Library of Canada, the University of Minnesota, the University of Florida at Gainesville, the Boston Theological Institute, Yale, the State University of New York, Cornell, the University of California, and the New York State Library.

Orientation clearinghouse set up at SUNY-Syracuse

The F. Franklin Moon Library at the State University of New York's College of Environmental Science and Forestry in Syracuse is the home of the newly established New York Library Instruction Clearinghouse. NYLIC aims to improve the exchange of information about mostly academic orientation programs, to help libraries develop such programs, and to aid librarians in orientation research. Its clearinghouse functions include: displaying for inspection by visitors any information and materials (ranging from basic orientation to advanced bibliographic instruction) that have been "deposited" by libraries, and making referrals—putting interested parties in touch with member libraries that can provide detailed information or assistance.

Other NYLIC objectives include: identifying orientation programs at New York universities, colleges, and junior colleges; publishing a directory of library instruction programs; contributing articles to New York library newsletters; and sponsoring workshops throughout the state.

NYLIC is soliciting orientation materials (in duplicate) from mostly academic libraries; input from public and special libraries is also asked. Any material donated should be clearly stamped with the library's name and address. Contact: New York Library Instruction Clearinghouse: (315) 473-8615.

Canada National Library tries German catalog system

The National Library of Canada has entered into negotiations with the University of Dortmund (West Germany) for the acquisition of Dormunder Bibliotheks, an online cataloging system developed by the latter. DOBIS provides online facilities for cataloging, acquisitions, serials control, binding, accounting, circulation, and interlibrary loan.

Before put into use at NLC, the system, reports Canada Weekly, will require modifications, including incorporation of multi-user capability and cataloging capability in Fench and English based on Canadian MARC (Machine Readable Cataloging) Standards. DOBIS is expected to be in use at NLC by November of 1976.

YOU WILL HAVE—
"CONFIDENCE"
In Our Complete Periodicals Service—
All American and Foreign Titles

Promptness is a Traditional part of McGregor Service . . . as well as:

- EXPERIENCE
- TRAINED PERSONNEL
- FINANCIAL STABILITY
- AMPLE FACILITIES
- RESPONSIBLE MANAGEMENT

An attractive brochure is available for the asking.

SUBSCRIBE TO McGREGOR PERIODICALS BULLETIN

OUR 43d YEAR

McGREGOR Magazine Agency

MOUNT MORRIS, ILLINOIS 61054

THE LIBRARY DOLLAR

NY branch closings fought; Conn. $$ loss

The latest wave of budget cutbacks forced the New York Public Library to board up eight of its branches, but communities affected are fighting back—organizing sit-ins to protest the closings. In Connecticut, proposed cutbacks in state aid could jeopardize the level of federal aid provided and severely undermine the state library agency. And a few university libraries are trying to get out of the hole by charging for interlibrary loan: the going rate at the University of Toronto is $8 per transaction. Among the reports of budget disaster to come to LJ:

• N.Y. communities rally against branch closings: When the budget drought prompted New York Public Library to order eight branch closings, a number of communities balked: sit-ins were started in the Morningside Heights Community Library (Manhattan) and the Tremont branch (Bronx)—both were open to protestors, though circulation has come to a standstill. The Van Cortlandt branch (Bronx), which had also been slated for closure, is still open to patrons thanks to a $15,000 donation from a resident (Lawrence Klosk). Meanwhile, a community organization is trying to raise an additional $20,000 to guarantee operations at Van Cortlandt through the end of the year. And a coalition of City Council members and borough presidents is prodding the privately run NYPL to turn the branches over to the city "before the system is destroyed." It held that NYPL trustees are sacrificing the neighborhood branches for the research library and the collection housed at the main library. But a NYPL spokesman told LJ that such charges are groundless: the budget specifies how much money can be spent for each system component. NYPL trustees, incidentally, have "reluctantly approved" a plan to shut down 25 more branches by July of 1977.

• More cutbacks in Queens, N.Y.: The Queens Borough Public Library has failed to get anticipated federal aid (a Title X Department of Commerce grant) needed to replace 28 of the 38 staffers who were laid off in November; it's consequently cutting back service hours—putting 18 branches on a three-day week, and another two on a two-day week. Library staffs are being shuffled—with one staff serving two branches on alternate days. Director Milton Byam predicts that more cutbacks are in the offing; he expects another $1 million cutback (the equivalent of 100 positions) by July 1, and reports that the city has recently been talking about more reductions ranging from five to 15 percent. Queens, incidentally, had tried to close seven branch libraries—picked out, it says, because of their dropping circulation, but it had to keep the branches open when the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People went to court, and won a ruling barring the closings on the grounds that they were "discriminatory" (LJ, January 15, p. 302).

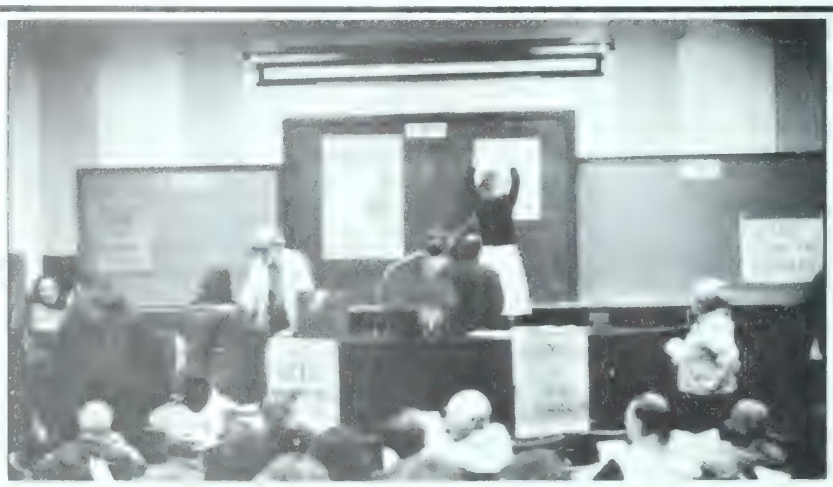
• Auction for Brooklyn, N.Y. cultural institutions: A five-hour benefit auction, slated for national telecast over Channel 5 (WNEW) on March 6, aims to raise at least $1 million to bail out seven financially-pinched Brooklyn cultural institutions—including the Brooklyn Public Library. NBC-TV has donated a working studio for the event (which was conceived by actress Ce-



Branch Closings Opposed: After protests like this sit-in at the Morningside Heights Public Library, the New York Public Library reported that its eight closed branches will be reopened if the Labor Department okays the use of CETA money for 30 positions—including rehiring of fired staffers leste Holm and Charlene Victor, director of the Brooklyn Arts and Culture Association); WNEW is running PR spots in preparation for the live show. To be auctioned off are such hard-to-get items as a performance by comedian Sam Levenson, a party on an old Chinese junk, Kay Mazzo's ballet shoes, and an organically home-grown luncheon for two in the penthouse garden of millionaire Steward R. Mott.

• Connecticut state agency faces $$ threat: The Connecticut Library Association has alerted Governor Ella Grasso to the consequences of threatened cutbacks affecting the state library: the state library's eligibility for federal funding, it says, could be jeopardized if state aid drops below $800,000 for fiscal 1976-77. The loss of federal support, warns CLA, would eliminate another 37 state library jobs, cut book buying, and reduce services to both government and local libraries.

• Charges for interlibrary loan: The libraries at the University of Toronto and the University of British Columbia have started charging fees of $8 per interlibrary loan; McGill and McMaster libraries are expected to follow suit. The University of Toronto claimed that a cost recovery scheme was necessary to recoup the $250,000 it spends annually for some 32,000 interlibrary loans.

Mich. $$ threat checked; Atlanta votes for new bldg.

Despite the limping economy, government and citizens in some areas are still backing libraries: Michigan legislators passed a bill to prevent the loss of per capita support to libraries and Atlanta voters okayed a bond issue for a new central library. The latest reports of budget sunshine to come to LJ include:

• Michigan $$ victory: Dale Pretzer of the Michigan State Library reports that the governor has signed into law a bill that sets forth a new per capita system of state aid for libraries; state aid had been threatened when the attorney general ruled that the old per capita formula was illegal. Cited as one decisive factor in getting legislative action: a lobbying effort by over 400 library supporters, who converged on Capitol Hill in efforts to get legislators to act before the January 1 deadline. Per capita support, says Pretzer, will stay at 30 cents per capita (with supplemental support to systems); it could have dropped to 5 cents if the bill didn't make it.

• Atlanta votes for a new library: Carlton Rochelle, director of the Atlanta Public Library, reports that residents, who voted recently on a $49 million public works referendum, turned down bond issues for storm sewers, city parks, and street improvements, but still approved a $19 million issue to pay for a new central library. Notes Rochelle, while the city's first black administration concentrated on trying to get votes in mostly low-income housing areas, the library's volunteer army reached both black and white voters —using the media, formal presentations, and personal contacts to point up the need for a facility to replace the 75-year-old central library. The result: 54 percent of the community said yes to the new library proposal. The new building will provide five times as much space as the present one does; house an expanded book collection, AV equipment, and a 350-seat auditorium; and provide underground parking and drive-in book pick-up and return facilities.

• Budget boost for N.Y. system: County legislators have decided to up, by 21 percent ($14,437), annual support for New York's Clinton-Essex-Franklin Library System, reports Director Stanley Ransom. Each county will also provide $4000 for the next five years to buy a replacement bookmobile, estimated to cost some $60,000. Said Ransom, a $5000 LSCA

ARE YOU ACQUAINTED WITH RITTENHOUSE?

Rittenhouse Book Distributors, Inc. is a library jobber in the nursing, medical and allied health science fields.

For over twenty-five years college librarians have depended on us for fast, accurate service. We stock the books of all health science publishers, and we'll keep you informed on the progress of any special or continuation orders. Compare our services and discounts.

If you're buying nursing or other allied health science books, then you should get acquainted with Rittenhouse. Write for our free catalogues.

RITTENHOUSE BOOK DISTRIBUTORS
251 S. 24th Street
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19103
(215) 545-4274

library jobbers to the health science professions

Among Highsmith's 10,000 items:

pair of easy-steer fixed casters for Rol-lock steel book trucks . . . only from Highsmith over 30 styles of Shelf-Files, including new AV media files of rugged corrugated plastic

For an easy way to make your steel truck steerable when loaded, and for media files that defy abuse, write for your free copy of Highsmith's 1975-76 Library/AV catalog!

The Highsmith Co., Inc.
P. O. 25 Fort Atkinson, Wis. 53538

SEND THIS COUPON TO RECEIVE JOSTEN'S LIBRARY SERVICES & SUPPLIES NEWSLETTER . . . IT'S FREE!

AND BETTER • WASHINGTON OUTLOOK • HOW TO • HINTS • MONEY SAVING IDEAS • NEW WAYS • HELPFUL HINTS • WHAT'S NEW

Josten's

1301 Cliff Road
Burnsville, MN 55337

• YES! Please send me your newsletter.

Name _____
Library _____
Address _____
City _____
State _____ Zip _____

(Library Services and Construction Act) grant will enable the system to try out a Books-by-Mail service to isolated rural boxholders; it plans to contract with the neighboring North County Library System, which already has running a successful mail service.

• $$ for rare book buying: The Rare Book Department at Washington University (St. Louis) has received a $250,000 bequest from the estate of George N. Meissner, a St. Louis book collector. WU plans to use the money to buy more rare books.

• Booksale profits for Milwaukee: The Milwaukee Public Library reports that over $11,000 was raised during its three-day booksale at year's end. Materials weeded from the library's collection were put on the sale block; sales were handled by 38 members of a private group called the Bookfellows.

• Furniture price spiral halts: A report from one manufacturer of library furniture indicates that prices for this commodity—which were reportedly zooming from month to month when the recession first got started—are now stabilizing. H. Wilson Corporation of South Holland, Illinois says that its line of AV and library furniture will be tagged at the same price as last year even though "some material increases would have easily justified a five percent or more price boost."

• Fund-raising & service hours: New York's Fayetteville Free Library reports that its army of volunteers raised a record $9,030 in extra revenue—that enabled the library to increase hours of service.

CUNY Faculty Senate decries budget cutbacks

The University Faculty Senate of the City University of New York has issued a resolution that zeroes in on the damage done by the latest round of budget cuts affecting CUNY: new book buying has almost come to a standstill; restriction of service hours has severely cut access to libraries; a great number of library faculty members and support staff have been laid off; and the library faculty still on duty are burdened with clerical chores.

The result, says the Faculty Senate, is that CUNY libraries are unable to fulfill their mission of providing support for study and research, and thus face possible adverse judgments from accrediting agencies. The Senate urged CUNY to support its libraries "at a level that does not fall below the minimum standards recommended by ALA; that is, five percent of each institution's total budget."

The budget crunch has prompted the city administration to dicker with the idea of having the state take over CUNY. But Manhattan's two Councilmen at Large (Robert Wagner, Jr. and Henry Stern) oppose the takeover, arguing that administrative costs could be cut 15 percent, and more can be saved be making students work four hours a week as librarians or guards.

Paperbacks for Canadians

Libraries hard hit by the economy crunch are beginning to view paperbacks as one means of maintaining their collections. The Midwestern Regional Library System (Kitchener, Ontario) is one system that's buying mass market paperbacks in quantity—2000 for starters, plus some 100 titles a month. System members can buy direct from Midwestern's centralized paperback display at the system HQ at Victoria. Midwestern also reports a new $25,000 grant to buy Canadian materials for libraries: $10,000 for 16mm films; $5000 for records; $5000 for children's books; $5000 for paperbacks.

NCLIS asks extension of Medical Assistance Act

Responding to pressure from the medical library community (which had complained earlier that its needs were being ignored), the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science has issued a resolution, urging Congress to extend the Medical Library Assistance Act for three more years, and to appropriate a minimum of $20 million for fiscal year 1977. Said NCLIS, this level of support is needed "for training, research, special scientific projects, publications and medical library resources, as well as contracts for . . . [the existing] Network of Regional Medical Libraries"—pegged by NCLIS as "an essential element" of its prospective national library network.

NCLIS ticked off what the Medical Library Assistance Act has accomplished to date: the creation of a nationwide network of medical and health sciences libraries (coordinated through the Regional Medical Libraries); the strengthening of the basic library resources needed by medical practitioners; the fostering of cooperative acquisitions buying and information sharing.

Birthdays are for giving

The Osterhout Free Library (Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania) reports the success of a gift-giving initiative which could be started by libraries elsewhere. Osterhaut patrons are donating books to celebrate birthdays and anniversaries, or to mark the death of loved ones.

EDUCATION

New courses in specialized service, law, networks

Library schools and professional associations are responding to demands for better continuing education by offering courses aimed at giving the professional new subject expertise, training in service to such groups as business communities and the handicapped, and offering updates on networks and the new technology.

• Mythology & libraries: The University of Minnesota Library School reports an offbeat course slated for April 1-2; it's The Mythic Image; Mythology, Folklore and Libraries; and it aims "to relate the subjects of mythology and folklore to library services." The Minneapolis Public Library is the cosponsor.

• Freelance librarians: New York's Syracuse University School of Information Studies will run an April 3 workshop that zeroes in on one new development in librarianship—alternative information services. The session, which is called Information Broker/Free Lance Librarian/New Careers/New Library Services, will feature speakers from the U.S. and Canada; they'll talk about the kind of information services being developed; how they interface with traditional service modes; and new roles and career options for the professional. For information, contact: Ruth Patrick, School of Information Studies, Syracuse University, 113 Euclid Ave., Syracuse, N.Y. 13210.

• Service to the handicapped: Catholic University (Washington, D.C.) announces a new post-master's program in Librarianship To Serve the Handicapped, with summer and fall courses in such things as Bibliotherapy, Media for Handicapped Readers, Library Services to the Hearing Impaired, and Medical Literature and Librarianship. More information is available from CU's Director of Continuing Education, P.O. Box 75, Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C. 20064.

• Service to business: Library Service to the Business Community will be the subject of a March 30-31 Preconference of the Louisiana Library Association in Lafayette, Louisiana. Top business librarians from Dallas, New Orleans, and Orlando, Florida are to speak to an audience that's limited to 100. The contact person is Donald D. Foos, Chairperson, LLA Continuing Education Committee, Graduate School of Library Science, Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, La. 70803.

• Archival librarianship minor: Catholic University (Washington, D.C.) has launched a series of courses leading to a minor in archival librarianship for M.L.S. candidates.

• Law librarianship: St. John's University (Jamaica, New York) has scheduled a spring semester course in Law Literature and Librarianship.

• Math for librarians: St. John's University (Jamaica, New York) has a new one on Mathematics for Librarians; it "will emphasize math as a language for analyzing problems of librarianship and information systems . . . set algebra, graph theory, information structures, probability and statistics, methods of operations research."

• Document preservation workshop: A Conservation Seminar and Workshop will be run March 8-12 at the New England Document Conservation Center (North Andover, Massachusetts); top preservation experts will be on deck to discuss problems in this field. The workshop, which is sponsored by the Library Binding Institute (a trade association of bookbinders), has an enrollment limit of 25. A fee of $275 covers everything (tuition, food, lodging, materials); to reserve a place, send $50 to the Library Binding Institute, 50 Congress St., Suite 630, Boston, Mass. 02109, phone: (617) 227-9614.

• Information science home study courses: The American Society of Information Science and Catholic University (Washington, D.C.) are launching a Home-Based Professional Development Program for library and information professionals; it will start out in April with a course on Motivation: Key to Performance. University faculty will check all assignments mailed in. More information on the program is available from: ASIS, 1155 16th St., N.W., Suite 210, Washington, D.C. 20036.

• Computer-based systems: Columbia University has launched a spring term series of weekly seminars on computer-based library and information systems—lectures aimed primarily at students and school faculty, but also open to interested visitors. Systems specialists will address such topics as bibliographical data bases, computerized cataloging and circulation control, and the use of electronic methods in publishing.

In 104 years you can learn a lot that benefits librarians

When acquisition problems loom large...
When periodicals, continuations/serials on a world-wide scope require uninterrupted volumes...when claims devour weeks of time — that's when Stechert Macmillan's 104 years of experience is a blessing.

Stechert Macmillan takes the burden off your shoulders...
No matter how complicated your acquisition program. No matter where the publisher or what the language. We offer one of the widest ranges of periodicals and continuations/serials titles on a standing order basis. After 104 years, we've developed acquisition into a fine art.

- Periodicals
- Continuations/Serials
- Books
- Bibliographic Services

Why not write or call us?

A WORLD OF DIFFERENCE
Stechert Macmillan, Inc.
Serving Libraries Since 1872
866 Third Avenue • New York, N.Y. 10022
(212) 935-4260

NEW YORK • LONDON • PARIS • STUTTGART • SYDNEY

• Regional online workshop: A workshop on Interactive Online Reference Service, held recently at the Dallas Public Library, was a product of a major inter-associational effort. Speakers were brought in by the sponsoring Special Libraries Association, Texas and Oklahoma Chapters; the Southwestern Library Association; and the American Society for Information Science.

•Information networks: Columbia University has launched a new course titled Library and Information Networks, with Doctoral Candidate R. Kathleen Molz (most recently Chief of Planning at the Office of Education's library bureau) as instructor.

Summer school courses in the U.S. & abroad

Among the summer school options offered this year are tours of such far off places as Denmark and England, plus intensive courses in the U.S. on such topics as OCLC, publishing, and competency-based school library media.

•OCLC summer workshop: Kent State University Library has slated for May 16-21 its second intensive workshop on the Ohio College Library Center system. Middle management and systems personnel attending the five-day session will get individualized training working online and hear lectures (delivered in person or via Kent State's telelecture system) on the OCLC system, the MARC format, terminal use, in-house procedures (work flow adaptations, management implications, and the like), and methods of teaching system use to colleagues. A fee of $250 covers housing, sessions, and materials; attendance is limited to 30. For more information, contact Anne Marie Allison, Assistant Professor, Library Administration, University Libraries, Kent State University, Kent, Ohio 44242.

•Publishing workshop: The University of Denver will bring in for its July 12-August 6 Western Seminar in Publishing and Editing Workshop such lecturers as Publishers' Weekly Editor Arnold Ehrlich, Bowker's former Vice President Elizabeth Geiser, Atheneum Children's Books Director Margaret McElderry, Avon President Peter Mayer, and Wiley President Andrew Nielly. Geiser and Frederick Praeger (president of Westview Press, Boulder) are co-directors of the workshop.

•Competency-based school library media: Library educators are the target audience for a June 6-12 institute on A Process for the Development of Competency-Based School Library Media Education Programs; the State University of New York at Buffalo is running the show. Information is available from Anna Mary Lowrey, Director, Competency-Based Program Institute, School of Information and Library Studies, SUNY-Buffalo, Lawrence Bell Hall, Amherst, N.Y. 14260.

•Junior college library: A course on the junior college library will be offered at the University of Illinois Graduate School of Library Science this summer; Mrs. Deane Hill of Lincoln Land Community College will teach it.

•European summer institute: Speakers from Great Britian and five other European countries (Denmark, Germany, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, and Sweden) will come to Liverpool Polytechnic for its Fourth European Library Summer Seminar, slated for July 15-23. This year's theme is Library Services and their Users, with scheduled sessions on user needs, library resources, management, information retrieval, and library education. More details are available from W. H. Snape, Summer Seminar, Department of Library and Information Studies, Liverpool Polytechnic, Tithebarn St., Liverpool L2 2ER.

•Scandinavian summer: The Denmark Institute reports another Seminar on Public Libraries in Denmark for August 3-12; it's conducted in English, is cosponsored by the Royal Library School, and features visits to libraries of all types. Information is available from: Det Danske Selskab, 2, Kultorvet, DK-1175, Copenhagen K, Denmark.

•International summer school: The College of Librarianship Wales will run the fourth International Graduate Summer School For Librarians July 1-August 21, with cosponsorship by the University of Pittsburgh. This year's session will include courses of particular interest to school librarians, as well as a wide range of other courses that stress internationalism and other aspects of continuing education for working librarians. A ten-day guided tour of major British libraries and cultural centers is also slated. For information, contact: Director, IGSS 1976, College of Librarianship Wales, Llanbadarn Fawr, Aberystwyth, SY 23 3AS Great Britain.

•Ealing summer institutes: The Ealing School of Librarianship (London) offers two (May 24-June 11) summer institutes: The Scene in British Librarianship is a four-year-old course that features visits to such institutions as the British Museum Library, the Bodleian Library, and the London Library; Rare Books and Old Libraries will provide lectures by eminent bibliographers on the literary heritage of many of Britain's older libraries. For details on enrollment contact: Leonard C. Guy, School of Librarianship, Ealing Technical College, Woodlands Ave., Acton, London W3 9DN, England.

SWLA continuing education survey

Of interest to library people who are involved in continuing education is the Southwestern Library Association's publication, Continuing Education for Library Staffs in the Southwest: a Survey with Recommendations. Co-authors Allie Beth Martin (Tulsa City-County Library) and Maryann Duggan (Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education) have assessed continuing education in the six SWLA states, and they've proposed an action plan addressing needs revealed by the survey. Paperback copies are available for $5 from the University of Texas at Austin, Graduate School of Library Science, Box 7576, University Station, Austin, Tex. 78712.

Queens, N.Y. course syllabi

Syllabi for basic courses in librarianship are offered by Queens College's Library Science Department: LS 702, Reference and Bibliography—General, Part I, Systematic Bibliography (James D. Anderson) is $2.85; LS 703 Introduction to Technical Services and Descriptive Cataloging (Richard J. Hyman, et al.) is $1.95; LS 704, Introduction to Technical Services and Subject Analysis (same authors) is $2.05. The syllabi include annotated lists of relevant books and articles. Orders must be prepaid; send checks to Queens College Bookstore, Flushing, N.Y. 11367.

Virgin Islands training institute

The College of the Virgin Islands has received a $38,000 grant under Title II-B of the Higher Education Act to run an Institute for Training in Librarianship. The ten-week institute, which is open to 30 full-time librarians and media specialists, consists of two evening sessions weekly and Saturday half-day workshops in St. Thomas and St. Croix. College Librarian Henry C. Chang is Institute Director.

Aerial photo info expanded

Information on more than seven million aerial photographs has been added to the U.S. Geological Survey files at the National Cartographic Information Center (NCIC) as a result of recent agreements with the Department of Agriculture. Under the agreements, the Soil Conservation Service and the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service are supplying the center with such information as the location, scale, and film characteristics of their aerial photographs, plus information on their plans for collecting new photographs. Contact: the National Cartographic Information Center, 507 National Ctr., Reston, Va. 22092; (703) 860-6045.

PERSONNEL

Chemical info & copyright to be aired at ACS

The American Chemical Society plans to explore the impact of copyright legislation and photocopying on the flow of chemical information at a symposium, slated for April 5 at the New York Hilton. ACS has released abstracts of papers to be presented, thus providing a preview of the range of viewpoints and ideas that are expected to emerge. In his presentation on chemical journals and data bases, ACS Executive Director Robert Cairns is expected to make the following points: the new technologies must yield profits to publishers of journals; but advances in publishing may make journals more cost effective; and alternatives to conventional journal publication may be an economic necessity, and in some cases, an actual improvement on the present system.

In his discussion on the impact of copyright on chemical education and resource libraries, C. G. Overberger (University of Michigan) will describe how libraries are reacting to rising journal prices, the impact foreseen of a copyright fee system, and the alternative of adding to students' tuition bills a fee for use of library resources.

Margaret H. Graham (Exxon) will assert that the industry (chemical) will probably be willing to pay a substantially higher price for the information in journals, if this will assure the flow of information necessary to their operations.

Lee G. Burchinal (National Science Foundation) will deal with the place in the journal literature/copyright picture of the government-funded and noncopyrightable articles and other research literature. The government now subsidizes some not-for-profit journals by paying page charges for publication of research it has funded, but it also supports the distribution of research by providing single photocopies of any published paper related to the mission of a given agency (the Williams and Wilkins photocopying case involves this aspect of the copyright tangle).

Madeline M. Henderson (National Bureau of Standards, Institute for Computer Sciences and Technology) will forecast the effect of new developments in computer technology: lower costs, greater capacity, including full text storage and more rapid retrieval; and online editing and manipulation of data. She'll also talk about new advances in the subsidiary technologies such as facsimile transmission and COM (computer output microfilm).

Benjamin H. Weil (Exxon) will chair the symposium; he'll also review the current status of copyright legislation. To register for this one day event, contact Weil at Exxon Research & Engineering, P. O. Box 121, Linden, N.J. 07036.

Library school to peg staff development needs

Peter Hiatt of the University of Washington's School of Librarianship reports on an unusual experiment in library education that will take place at the Seattle Public Library: a study team of UW faculty members will conduct a study of the staff development needs of SPL. The study, says Hiatt, will peg new directions for the library, its funding needs, and staff competencies that must be developed. Seattle's newly appointed director Ronald Dubberly has given UW the go-ahead to develop an assessment technique that could provide a model for similar experiments conducted elsewhere in the Nation.

The study is due for completion on May 1; Hiatt will direct it, working with Preston Levertown of the UW School of Business, Ruth Hamilton (formerly a consultant at Washington State Library), and UW faculty member Douglas Zweizig.

Parapro experience charted in academic libraries

Large and medium-sized public libraries—as well as the academic libraries at which it is primarily aimed—are potential beneficiaries of the latest number in the Association of Research Libraries' SPEC flyer and SPEC kit on "Paraprofessionals in ARL Libraries."

It describes results of a survey of paraprofessional employment in academic libraries, including a range from clerical to scholarly and covering a gamut of specializations including foreign language abilities, art, and audiovisual production skills. Among the topics discussed: duties, classification schemes, position descriptions, salary scales, and supervisory roles.

Libraries not now subscribers to the SPEC series can get further information on SPEC No. 21 and other sets of flyers and kits from the Association of Research Libraries.

HOW DO YOU FILE YOUR BOOK ORDER FORMS?

TITLE FIRST OR AUTHOR FIRST? Now you can get them either way from Josten's where title-first order forms are an industry first. Four styles to choose from — OCR, carbonless, slip and card.

SEE PAGE 25-6 in your Josten's '76-6 catalog. If you can't find yours, write or call Customer Service for another copy.

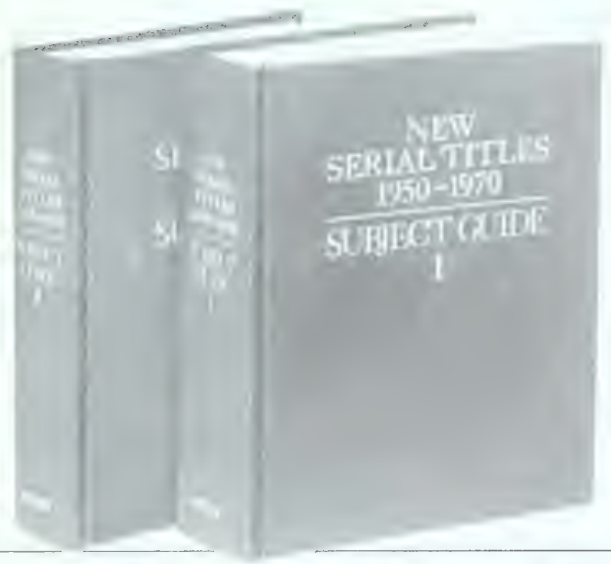
DAVEY

Since 1842 — the standard binder's board for library bindings.

RED LABEL BOARD

Distributors in all principal cities

THE DAVEY COMPANY
164 LAIDLAW AVENUE
JERSEY CITY, N.J. 07308



*"a most important tool and a much needed one" *

*"a monumental bibliographic work" *

*"invaluable for any university department or other research organization" *

New Serial Titles 1950-1970 Subject Guide

This major new contribution to serial librarianship is now available, offering unprecedented subject access to serials from all over the world.

220,000 serials are arranged by country and title under 255 major subject headings, with 1,200 more narrowly defined subject cross references. Title information, ISSN, country code and Dewey numbers are provided in each entry.

* Hilda Feinberg, Manager, Library Services, Revlon Research Center, Inc.
 Siegfried Ruschin, Serials Librarian, Linda Hall Library
 Stephen Juhasz, Editor of Applied Mechanics Reviews

Here are just a few of the ways it will help you:

- in providing systematic and direct subject access to serial citations for serials which began publication between 1950 and 1970
- in compiling serial bibliographies by subject matter and nationality
- in collection evaluation and acquisition in particular subject areas
- in cooperative collection development and sharing
- as a complement to New Serial Titles 1950-1970.

Put this vital new tool to work for you now! Order on 30-day approval.

Edited by the Bowker Serials Bibliography Department. Emery I. Koltay, Director. 8½" x 11". 3,692 pages. LC 75-15145. ISSN 0098-2237. ISBN 0-8352-0820-6. $138.50 the 2-vol. set.

R.R. Bowker Company
P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Mich. 48106
Outside Western Hemisphere: Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England.

All orders plus shipping and handling. Sales tax added where applicable. (Price subject to change without notice.)

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

March 9-10 NFAIS Conference

Information—Dilemmas, Decisions, Directions is the theme of the March 9-10 annual meet of the National Federation of Abstracting and Indexing Services to be held at the Christopher Inn, Columbus, Ohio. Frederick Kilgour, Director of the Ohio College Library Center, will give the Miles Conrad Memorial Lecture. Other speakers and the sessions that they'll chair include: Current Research Projects (Lee Burchinal, National Science Foundation); Changing Patterns of Primary Sources (A. Hood Roberts, Center for Applied Linguistics); Indexing in Interactive Systems (Marvin Wilson, National Technical Information Service); and New Directions in User Education (Roger K. Summit, Lockheed Retrieval Service). There will be tours of the Battelle Institute, the Chemical Abstracts Service headquarters, and OCLC. Contact: NFAIS, at 3401 Market St., Philadelphia, Penn. 19104, or call (215) 349-8495.

Handicapped working in libraries

A survey by the President's Committee on the Employment of the Handicapped found that handicapped people are working in libraries; their posts ranging from director to page. A total of 1,399 public, college, and regional libraries rsponded to the survey: 607 of them reported 907 full-time and 358 part-time handicapped staffers on the payroll. Commenting on the accessibility of library employment to the handicapped, the survey said "libraries go beyond local or state Merit or Civil Service registers to recruit personnel, geting staff from library schools, the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act program, State Divisions of Vocational Rehabilitation, college work-study programs, advertisement of openings, and the National Registry of Librarians."

Chinese-American librarians

The Mid-West Chinese American Librarians Association plans to publish by mid-1976 a Directory of Chinese-American Librarians. Librarians who want to be listed can get a biographical questionnaire from: T. C. Li, Rosary College Graduate School of Library Science, River Forest, Ill. 60305.

LTA program directory

The Council on Library Technical-Assistants (COLT) has started compiling a new directory of LTA programs in the U.S. and Canada. Any institution that offers an LTA program and hasn't yet received a form can get one by contacting: Richard L. Taylor, Editor, COLT Directory, Wilbur Wright College Library, 3400 North Austin, Chicago, Ill. 60634.

LJ PEOPLE

H. C. CHANG

F. N. COLEMAN

M. E. SCHUBERT

WILLIAM BENNETT, formerly Chief, Library Program Staff, U.S. Information Agency, is now Director, U.S. National Focal Point, International Referral System of the U.S. Environmental Program, Environmental Protection Agency, Washington, D.C.

HAROLD J. BLOOMQUIST, Librarian, Francis A. Countway Library of Medicine, Harvard University, has retired.

LINDA BRETZ, formerly Head of the Lincoln Branch of the Rochester Public Library, New York, is now Assistant Director of the Monroe County Library System, Rochester.

LYNNE M. BRODY, formerly a reference librarian in the Reference Department of the Library of the University of Texas at Austin, is now Librarian, Undergraduate Library, at the University.

HENRY C. CHANG, formerly Library Director, College of the Virgin Islands, is now Director of Libraries and Museums and State Librarian, Government of the Virgin Islands of the U.S.

FRANCES N. COLEMAN, formerly Head, Public Services, Mitchell Memorial Library, Mississippi State University, is now Assistant Director and Head, Technical Services in the Library.

DONALD HAUSRATH, formerly a Regional Library Consultant in East Asia is now Chief, Library Program Staff, U.S. Information Agency, Washington, D.C.

GUENTER A. JANSEN, formerly Director, Suffolk Cooperative Library System, Bellport, N.Y. has resigned.

MARIE C. JONES, formerly Head of the Sioux City Public Library Information Service, Iowa, is now Assistant Director of the Library.

ALICE M. LAGE, formerly Regional Library Consultant, West Africa, is now Training Officer, Library Program Staff, U.S. Information Agency, Washington, D.C.

JOHN G. LORENZ, formerly Deputy Librarian of Congress, is now Executive Director, Association of Research Libraries, Washington, D.C.

JOHN P. MCDONALD, formerly Executive Director of the Association of Research Libraries, Washington, D.C. while on leave from the position of Director, University of Connecticut Libraries, Storrs, has returned to the Library Directorship.

HARRIET OSTROFF, formerly Index Editor and Assistant Head, Manuscripts Section, Descriptive Cataloging Division, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C. has been promoted to Editor, National Union Catalog of Manuscript Collections and Head of the Manuscripts Section of the Division.

FOSTER PALMER, who retired from his post as Assistant University Librarian, Harvard University Libraries, in 1974, has returned to serve as Acting Librarian of the Countway Library of Medicine at Harvard.

VIRGINIA PHILLIPS, formerly Coordinator of Reference Service at the University of Maryland Libraries, College Park, is now Assistant Director for Branch Services, University of Texas at Austin Libraries.

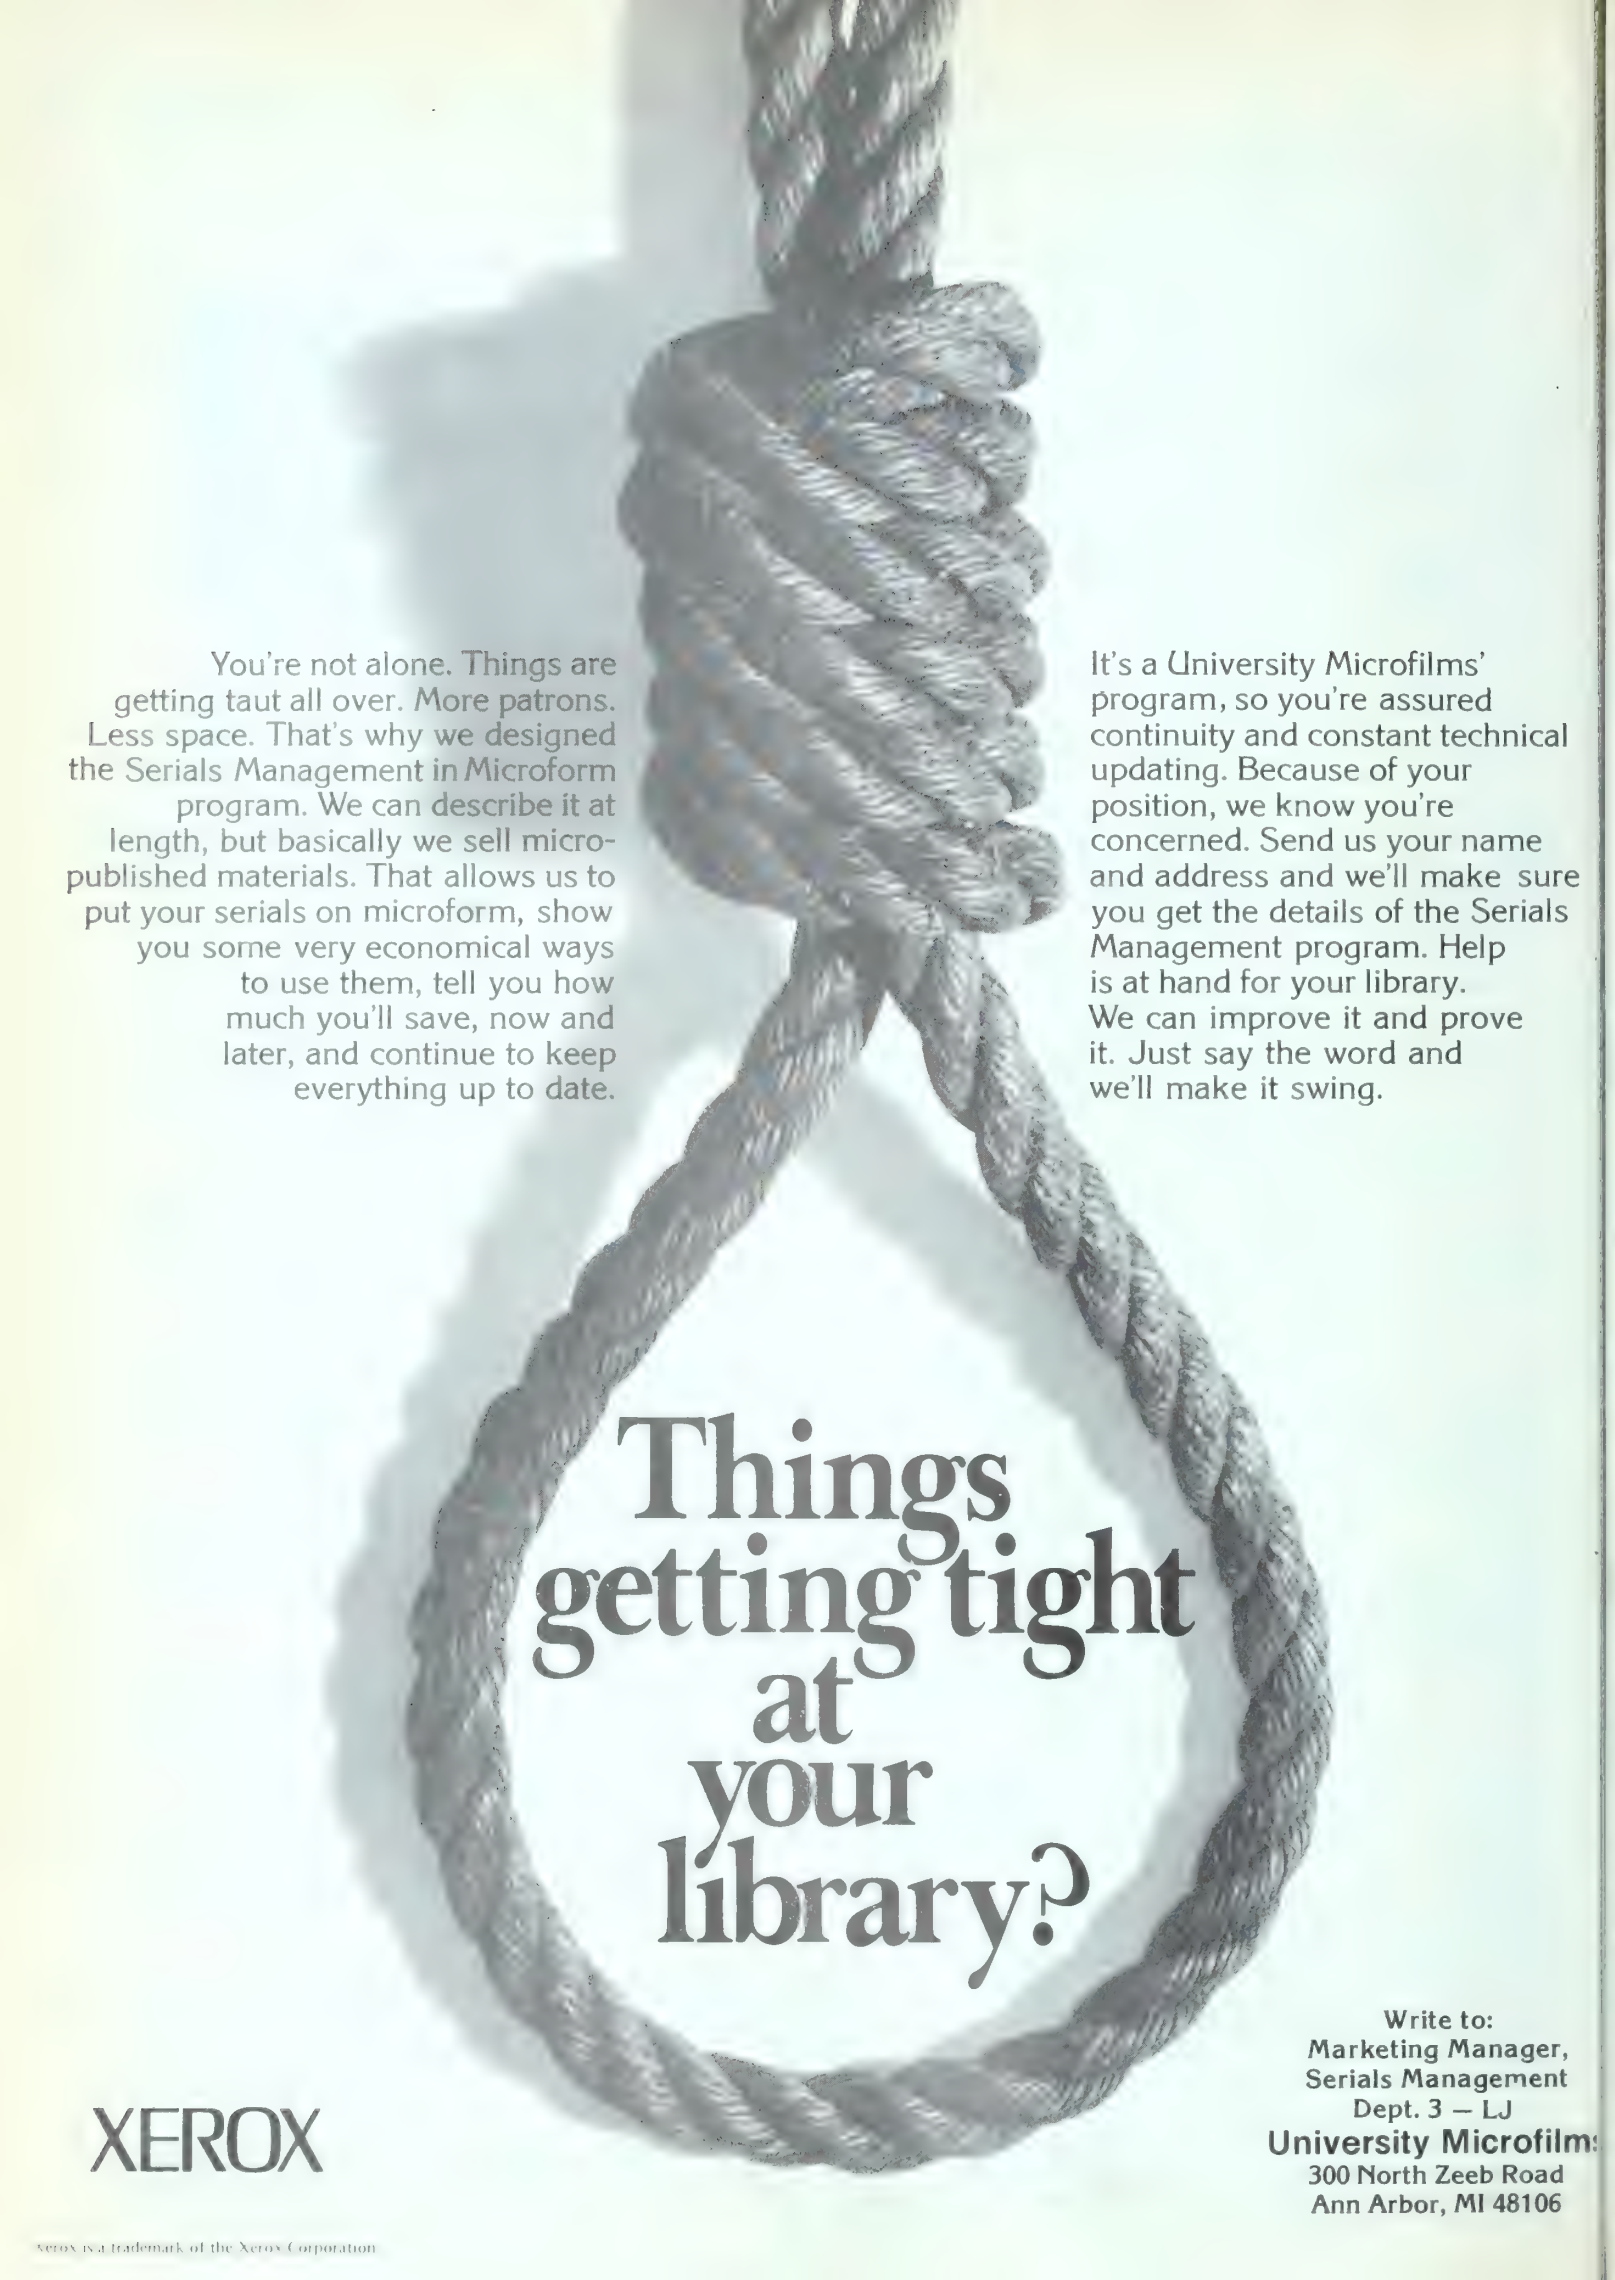
FREDERICK A. PRAEGER, President of Westview Press, Boulder, Colorado and former Chairman of Praeger Publishers, New York, has been appointed Adjunct Professor, Graduate School of Librarianship, University of Denver, Colo.

CLYDE E. PRYCE, formerly Director, Martin Luther King Library, Spring Valley, New York, is now U.S. Information Agency Regional Library Consultant for Venezuela and the Caribbean, Washington, D.C.

MARY LEE SCHUBERT, formerly Librarian of the Brook Park Branch, Cuyahoga County Public Library, Cleveland, Ohio, is now Information Services Coordinator for the Cuyahoga System.

MARIAN SIEGELTUCH, formerly Head Periodicals Librarian, Montclair State College Library, New Jersey, is now Assistant Director for Public Services at the Library.

RUTH A. WEBER, formerly Associate Director, Suffolk Cooperative Library System, Bellport, New York, is now Acting Director of the System.



You're not alone. Things are getting taut all over. More patrons. Less space. That's why we designed the Serials Management in Microform program. We can describe it at length, but basically we sell micro-published materials. That allows us to put your serials on microform, show you some very economical ways to use them, tell you how much you'll save, now and later, and continue to keep everything up to date.

It's a University Microfilms' program, so you're assured continuity and constant technical updating. Because of your position, we know you're concerned. Send us your name and address and we'll make sure you get the details of the Serials Management program. Help is at hand for your library. We can improve it and prove it. Just say the word and we'll make it swing.

Things getting tight at your library?

XEROX

Write to:
Marketing Manager,
Serials Management
Dept. 3 — LJ
University Microfilms
300 North Zeeb Road
Ann Arbor, MI 48106

Xerox is a trademark of the Xerox Corporation

sci-tech books of 1975

THE YEAR 1975 was remarkable for the number and variety of scientific and technological advances, discoveries, and revolutions of thought that directly and—in some cases—almost immediately affected the public in general. Much that came to our attention in journals, at symposia, conferences, etc., was picked up rapidly by the various media and presented to the lay audience in a more digestible form; much of it is, unquestionably, controversial and will be subjected to intensive scrutiny and further investigation by researchers in the near future. New fossil discoveries by Mary Leakey in Africa, for example, pushed back the dawn of man to almost four million years ago; the nationally reported Karen Quinlan case in New Jersey brought the "right to life" issue into such sharp focus that we are at last facing our responsibilities to devise proper guidelines that reconcile technological advances with our collective concern and individual rights to define and direct human life. In another field, geological explorations in 1975 helped complete the giant jigsaw puzzle of the origins of continents by locating and identifying the "missing link" in the southern Atlantic; ongoing earthquake research in California has opened the door to accurate predictions of time and intensity of major earth tremors.

We were interested and pleased to note the growing response to these and other sci/tech activities by publishers, and to see the significant number of titles devoted this year to frequently controversial and complex topics. Selection of this year's nominees for the "best" books in science and technology for public libraries was consequently difficult; narrowing down the list to 100 titles necessitated some regrettable omissions. Once again, a handful of noteworthy titles published too late in 1974 to be reviewed for consideration last year were included, and are so indicated.

Our own nominations for some of the more controversial books of the year include John Fuller's We Almost Lost Detroit; Jonathan Freedman's Crowding and Behavior: the Psychology of High Density Living; and Frederick Leboyer's Birth Without Violence. All three present findings that could have a significant impact on present practices and theories in scientific, medical, and technological circles; all three offer a dramatic departure from the mainstream of current thought on a specific topic; all three raise serious questions that invite further exploration by professionals, and careful consideration by the public.

As might be expected, there was an abundance of books dealing with energy—there were titles about alternate sources of energy, about the merits of older energy sources, about the relationship of energy problems to conservation. The number of entries dealing with the question of ecology and conservation, while still significant, seemed to diminish a bit from last year. Similarly, fewer reference books appeared, as did titles on space travel and research, although a preoccupation with UFO's and life on other planets seems to be a continuing phenomenon.

The nearly simultaneous appearance of several books on identical subjects that were of almost equal merit surely complicated selection for librarians this year. For example, at least four or five handsomely produced books on minerals and gems, all treating the subject almost identically, competed for the same general market. One book, Hough's Technology Diffusion: Federal Programs and Procedures, reviewed here, was published simultaneously in both full size and microfiche. Although savings on the microform edition were small, we were, nevertheless, interested to observe this dual publishing format for the general audience; it is a development libraries should watch.

by EDITH S. CROCKETT & ELLIS MOUNT

Edith Crockett is geology and psychology librarian, and Ellis Mount is science bibliographer at the Columbia University Libraries, New York

Animal Life

ARMSTRONG, Edward A. The Life and Lore of the Bird in Nature, Art, Myth and Literature. Crown. $15.95. ISBN 0-517-52434-1.
An ornithologist, Armstrong traces the relationship that has long existed between man and bird, explores the myths we have created about them, the roles they have played in art and literature, and describes the real world they do occupy—when we have not appropriated their habitat. The ample and interesting illustrations, both color and black and white, support a text that will appeal to a wide audience.

BROWN, Theo W. Sharks: The Silent Savages. 134p. Little. $7.95. 74-30423.
The year 1975 may well go down in literary history as the year of the shark. In addition to a bestselling novel, followed by an even more popular film of the same name, we have seen Jaws T-shirts, key chains, coffee mugs, and other artifacts. Brown's is one of this year's better nonfiction tomes on sharks for the layman. As a marine biologist he has made an extensive study of shark behavior. Our understanding of shark biology and habits is limited at best; this illustrated volume brings much information together that will be of interest.

EMMEL, Thomas C. Butterflies, Their World, Their Life Cycle, Their Behavior. 260p. Knopf. $35.
Spectacular color photographs (317 of them) capture the beauty of the butterfly in its natural habitat. Many of the plates are of rare tropical species that the average lepidopterist is not likely ever to see in vivo, but this book is surely the next best thing. The easily readable text discusses butterfly behavior and life cycles in general terms, and covers a wide variety of habitats frequented by the approximately 100,000 different species recognized today. A good choice for natural history collections, in spite of the price.

GUGGISBERG, C. A. W. Wild Cats of the World. 323p. Taplinger. $15.95. 74-21020.
An impressive amount of background research as well as personal field work findings are collected in this study on the habitats, behavior, and individual features of the wild cats, of which there are 37 distinct species. Includes references to some of the earlier literature to provide a well balanced, comprehensive account; illustrations complement the text. Natural history collections will benefit by this addition.

MOSS, Cynthia. Portraits in the Wild: Behavior Studies of East African Mammals. 348p. Houghton. $12.50. 75-20284.
Recent behavioral studies on 15 African species of wildlife are reviewed and summarized here for the general reader in a well organized presentation. Moss writes from personal experience, having contributed to a good deal of on-going research in this field herself. Some of the mammals studied include the big cats, zebras, antelope, giraffes, and the rhinoceros. Naturalists and conservationists will find much of interest here.

STONEHOUSE, Bernard, ed. The Biology of Penguins. 556p. University Park Pr. $29.50. 74-24874.
A collection of 21 essays that trace the origins of penguins in the Cretaceous period through fossil records, and discuss the evolution of different feeding patterns and physiological adaptations by various distinct species. Although much of the volume concentrates on Antarctic penguins, considerable attention is devoted to northern species, including the semi-migratory Magellanic penguin of Argentina and those of the Galapagos Islands. Much progress has been made in the last 25 years in the study of penguin behavior; this volume includes ethological contributions on eight species. Given the perennial interest in this group of birds, librarians will want to consider this book for natural history or ornithology collections.

WILLIAMSON, M. D. The Year of the Koala. 209p. Scribners. $8.95. ISBN 0-684-14351-8.
The living prototype of every child's teddy bear, the koala almost became extinct half a century ago when millions were slaughtered by fur trappers in Australia. With protection, this little marsupial has made a comeback, but today is once again threatened, as urbanization encroaches upon its limited habitat. The book follows the koala through a year's cycle in an easy-to-read fashion that should have a wide reader appeal.

Anthropology

CLARK, Grahame. The Earlier Stone Age Settlement of Scandinavia. 282p. Cambridge Univ. Pr. $22.50. 73-94358.
A well rounded discussion of early Scandinavian peoples. Clark is a long-time scholar of stone-age archaeology, and presents here an excellent review of the recent literature, supplemented by appropriate maps and illustrations, on the variety of sociological and environmental factors which may have influenced various prehistoric settlements. A scholarly book that knowledgeable amateurs will also enjoy.

COLE, Sonia. Leakey's Luck. 448p. Harcourt. $14.95. ISBN 0-15-149456-8.
An excellent, objective biography by a writer who herself participated in many of the fossil hunts, including a number at Olduvai, with Louis Leakey. The often turbulent life of this highly energetic, determined anthropologist is well narrated and tells us much about the circumstances that surrounded his 30 year search for the earliest ancestors of true man. Leakey's finds at Olduvai Gorge and elsewhere served to stimulate public interest and financial support, enabling him to expand his investigatory activities to promising new sites, and helped to popularize anthropological studies.

HUGHES, J. Donald. Ecology in Ancient Civilizations. Univ. of New Mexico Pr. $9.50. 74-27446.
The influence and impact of early western civilizations on their environment is the subject of this sobering, well researched publication. Many of us are aware that the vast deserts of northern Africa are largely the result of centuries of logging by past cultures; Hughes documents other interesting and not so well known effects of civilization's growing technological advances on surrounding ecosystems. An excellent addition to environmental collections.

MOLNAR, Stephen. Races, Types, and Ethnic Groups: the Problem of Human Variation. 193p. Prentice Hall. $9.95; pap. $5.95. 74-23935.
A difficult and sensitive subject, about which much has been published and more has been said in recent years, with frequently regrettably little integrity or substantive background data. Molnar's anthropological approach considers the environmental and biological bases for diversity among human races, reviewing early literature as well as more recent scientific and sociological theories of variation in group development. Intelligent, sensible reading, and a must for anthropology collections.

WILSON, David. The New Archeology. 384p. Knopf. $10. 74-21321.
A scholarly, thorough review of the various scientific disciplines and techniques applied to professional archeology on an increasingly large scale. Advances in dendrochronology, geochronology, and computer applications, among others, have accounted over the years for a considerable re-interpretation of earlier conclusions about dates, migration patterns, etc., of ancient settlements. Wilson documents the gradual application of more sophisticated methods to archeological explorations and studies. Knowledgeable amateur archeologists will be fascinated.

Astronautics

BRACEWELL, Ronald N. The Galactic Club: Intelligent Life in Outer Space. 141p. Freeman; dist. by Scribner's. $6.95. ISBN 0-7167-0353-X; pap. $3.95. ISBN 0-716-0352-1.
Reviews mankind's long concern about life elsewhere in the universe, including the complications of radio communication and the problems of unmanned probes ranging interstellar space. Should interest the average reader and is recommended for all but the smallest libraries. Includes references for additional reading.

HYNEK, J. Allen & Jacques Vallee. The Edge of Reality: a Progress Report on Unidentified Flying Objects. Regnery. 288p. $14.95; pap. $5.95. ISBN 0-8092-8209-7.
Offers many possible explanations for UFO's, including some of their own. Hynek, once in charge of an Air Force study of the subject, has teamed up with Vallee, a computer expert, to prepare this detailed account. For larger collections.

KLASS, Philip J. UFO's Explained. Random. 369p. $8.95. 74-9054.
The author, an editor of Aviation Week and Space Technology, explains the UFO sightings in terms of terrestrial phenomena, writing from the technical background of an engineer. His efforts vary in effectiveness, but on the whole he presents strong arguments for his point of view. For larger collections.

LEWIS, Richard S. The Voyages of Apollo: the Exploration of the Moon. Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. 1974. 320p. $12.50. ISBN 0-8129-0477-X.
A thorough treatment of the various Apollo lunar landing missions, with one chapter devoted to each. Also discusses lunar geophysical properties and reviews earlier probes (unmanned). Includes 16 pages of black and white photos. Highly recommended, it should be understandable to, and appreciated by, a wide audience.

ORDWAY, Frederick I., III. Pictorial Guide to Planet Earth. Crowell. 191p. $12.95. 74-34291.
Vividly portrays how satellites can provide photographs of the earth and its resources. The author, well-known in this field, has written an interesting text to accompany an excellent selection of photographs taken from satellites, many in superb color. Includes applications to oceanography, meteorology, and agriculture. For libraries of all sizes.

Astronomy

ASIMOV, Isaac. Eyes on the Universe: a History of the Telescope. 274p. Houghton. $8.95. ISBN 0-395-20716-9.
Asimov's lucid writing should make this book desirable for libraries of all sizes. Carefully documented, yet replete with details of human interest, this work covers conditions before the telescope, the contributions of Galileo et al, modern types of instruments, and radio astronomy.

CLAIBORNE, Robert. The Summer Stargazer: Astronomy for Absolute Beginners. Coward. 222p. $7.95. ISBN 0-698-10655-5.
A popular account of astronomy for the amateur with no training or background, written in an off-hand style. Includes diverse information, from how to select a telescope to the use of the several star charts it includes. Also contains a description of the lore of constellations, various charts, and a glossary. Useful to the beginner.

CORNELL, James & E. Nelson Hayes, eds. Man and Cosmos: Nine Guggenheim Lectures on the Solar System. 191p. Norton. $8.95. ISBN 0-393-06402-6.
A collection of nine essays written by such eminent scientists as Carl Sagan, Fred Whipple, and A. G. W. Camerson. The planets and the history of the solar system are typical subjects, written for the layperson; there are ample illustrations. For the medium and larger libraries.

Aviation, see also Astronautics

ALLEN, Jan L. Aviation and Space Museums of America. 287p. Arco. $12. ISBN 0-668-03426-2; pap. $6.95. ISBN 0-668-03631-1.
A novel reference work for those seeking museums to visit, particularly simplified by the geographical index of the 57 U.S. and Canadian museums listed. Gives a detailed list of the outstanding features of each location, as well as sechdules of operation, tours and airshows. Has numerous black and white photos. For libraries of all sizes.

WALSH, John Evangelist. One Day at Kitty Hawk. Crowell. 352p. $10. ISBN 0-690-00103-7.
A fascinating account of the activities of Wilbur and Orville Wright, beginning with their bicycle shop period and growing interest in flying. Written in an interesting style, yet very well documented and well-illustrated. Describes their flights and planes in detail. Should have a place in libraries of all sizes.

Biology

DRABKIN, David L. Fundamental Structure: Nature's Architecture. 30p. Univ. of Pennsylvania Pr. $25. 74-19577.
Last year's photographic masterpiece of biological ultrastructures, Leonard Nilsson's Behold Man, was joined in 1975 by this striking compilation of color transparencies and photographs of hemoglobin crystals. The visually stunning illustrations dramatize the abstract beauty of submicroscopic forms. Drabkin briefly discusses the techniques used to produce his images. If price is not a factor, book selectors will find this volume offers something for everyone.

GOODALL, Vanne, ed. The Quest for Man. Praeger. $17.50. 72-79550.
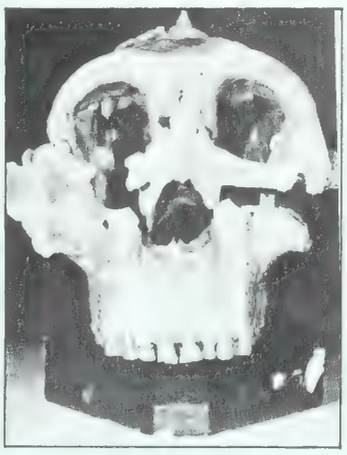
Such distinguished scholars as Irenaus Eibl-Eibesfeldt, Jane Goodall, and the late Theodosius Dobhzhansky are among the contributors to this collection of essays on recent inquiries into the genetical, ethological, and anthropological characteristics that define the human species. The possibility of a biological determination of ethical systems, and the evolution of such "human" traits as love, religion, and altruism are some of the interesting questions raised.

HUTCHINSON, Peter. Evolution Explained. 238p. David & Charles. $12.50. 74-81008.
Carefully selected illustrations supplement an enlightening survey of evolutionary theories that most natural history enthusiasts will enjoy. Hutchinson demonstrates a flair for inter-relating relevant data from such disciplines as anthropology, the earth sciences, and paleontology to explain the basis of our present-day understanding of evolution. One of the better books in the field for a general audience.



L-r: "The Life & Lore of the Bird" by Edward A. Armstrong (Crown); "Butterflies" by Thomas C. Emmel (Knopf); "The Year of the Koala" by H. D. Williamson (Scribners); "The Voyages of Apollo" by Richard S. Lewis (Quadrangle); "Evolution Explained" by Peter Hutchinson (David & Charles)

LENIHAN, John. Human Engineering: the Body Re-examined. 207p. Braziller. $7.95. 74-25318.
An intriguing approach to the study of the human body from the practiced and practical eye of a bioengineer. Lenihan examines defects and problems of design, especially structural, that characterize our bodies, and considers alternate, more efficient blueprints from the engineering standpoint. Interesting reading for a wide audience, offering a better understanding of the workings of the human body than most books of this type.

LEVI-SETTI, Riccardo. Trilobites: a Photographic Atlas. 213p. Univ. of Chicago Pr. $27.50. 74-7555.
Trilobites, long an object of interest to scientists and fossil hobbyists alike, have come into their own in this remarkable photographic panorama of various trilobite groups. The author, a physicist with a special interest in optics, includes in 150 pages of photographs, many of his own extensive personal collection of rare specimens of these marine arthropods. Some of them are unusual x-ray shots. A brief introduction to the morphology of trilobites, along with an appendix of the various photographic techniques used, round out a noteworthy contribution to a widely popular subject.

SAYRE, Anne. Rosalind Franklin and DNA. 224p. Norton. $8.95. ISBN 0-393-07493-5.
Not strictly a biography, this is rather a documentary of Rosalind Franklin's role in describing the structure of DNA, and the deliberate attempts made to minimize her contribution to the effort which gained James Watson and Francis Crick the Nobel prize. Sayre strives to correct some of the negative impressions created about Franklin in Watson's The Double Helix (1968), noting that her portrayal simply as Wilkins' "assistant" is challenged by Crick's own statement that, left on her own, she would probably have arrived at the structure of DNA in "perhaps 3 weeks. Three months is likelier." Watson himself attended an oral presentation by Franklin in 1951, in which she described the structure of the B form of DNA as "helical with the phosphates near the outside." Rosalind Franklin died of cancer in 1958, only 37 years of age, and just a few years before the Nobel prize was awarded for the puzzle she had helped to solve. An immensely readable volume libraries will want to consider.

STRESEMAN, Erwin. Ornithology: from Aristotle to the Present. 432p. Harvard Univ. Pr. $20. 74-25035.
An absorbing journey through the history of ornithology, noteworthy for its careful and thorough treatment of such areas as the rise and growth of museums, and major developments and trends in the biological sciences, particularly as related to the study of birds. Streseman takes us back to the early beginnings of his subject, and leads us through the centuries to Linnaeus, Darwin, and up to the middle of this century, when this volume was first published in German. This welcome translation includes an epilogue by Ernst Mayr that provides valuable new information on American ornithological research in the last 25 years. A classic, definitive work.

WILLIAMS, George C. Sex and Evolution. 200p. Princeton Univ. Pr. $13.50; pap. $4.95. 74-2985.
Questions the process of sexual reproduction in more advanced plant and animal groups, in light of presently accepted theories of evolution, and concludes that it does not follow other anatomical and physiological adaptations that have insured survival and proliferation of species; nor does it conform to the natural economy which characterizes progress on the evolutionary scale as it has been defined. Williams speculates that our current hypotheses about evolution are not adequate, since the phenomenon of sexual reproduction in higher forms of life cannot be accounted for by them. He presents alternate proposals that present the scientific community with a number of interesting challenges for future study.

WILSON, Edward O. Sociobiology: the New Synthesis. 697p. Harvard Univ. Pr. $20. 74-83910.
A Harvard zoologist whose specialty is the study of social insects, Wilson has attempted here to lay a foundation for "the biological basis of all social behavior." He examines particularly various animal groups, including man, whose habits are generally characterized by some form of social organization. The extreme degree of altruism achieved among colonial invertebrates—because of the genetic identity of all colony members—is representative of the most perfect societies, with ever-lessening degrees of self-sacrificing behavior characterizing vertebrate groups, especially mammals, where individual adaptability, status through competition, and independence are achieved at the expense of societal integrity. Wilson feels, however, that human societies, while retaining these vertebrate characteristics, have been able to "approach the insect colonies in cooperativeness and far exceed them in powers of communication," because of man's greater intelligence. A comprehensive coverage of the social systems, ecology, and evolutionary genetics of all animal groups.

Computers & Data Processing

HARMON, Margaret. Stretching Man's Mind: a History of Data Processing. Mason/Charter. 239p. $8.95. ISBN 0-88405-282-6.
Traces the history of calculators from the abacus to early models of electric calculators, then on to modern, sophisticated computers. Stresses the biographical aspects, including Blaise Pascal, George Boole, Charles Babbage, Herman Hollerith, and others. Has a bibliography and a glossary. A useful work, particularly for those wanting an account not hard to follow. Well-illustrated with photos and drawings.

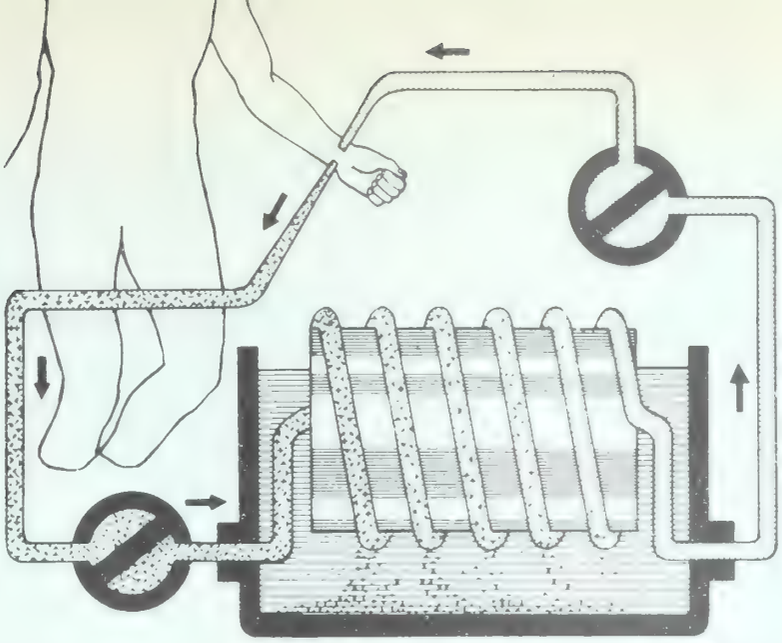
Earth Scienes

ASIMOV, Isaac. The Ends of the Earth: the Polar Regions of the World. 363p. Weybright & Talley. $15. ISBN 0-679-40123-7.
Written in the author's very readable style, this discusses the many influences of the polar regions on the rest of the world. Its chapters cover the discovery of the poles, effects of such features as magnetic fields and glaciers, and meteorological phenomena. Enhanced by charts and illustrations, this book should have a wide appeal.

BORGESE, Elizabeth Mann & David Kriege, eds. The Tides of Change: Peace, Pollution, and Potential of the Oceans. Mason/Charter. 361p. $12.50. 74-23260.
A collection of articles touching on a variety of topics that concern the oceans, such as pollution, sea law, and research. Both economic and legal aspects are presented, along with technical matters. The second volume in a series sponsored by an international organization known as Pacem in Maribus, it is for larger collections.

DEMING, H. G. Water: the Fountain of Opportunity. Oxford Univ. Pr. 342p. $12.50. 74-16657.
Emphasizes the technical aspects of water, ranging from its chemistry to desalination techniques and pollution. Less attention is given to the legal and economic viewpoints. Will be of interest to the serious layman and medium and larger collections.

GÜBELIN, Eduard. The Color Treasury of Gemstones. 138p. Crowell. $9.95. ISBN 0-690-00986-0.
Essentially an illustrated guide to gem-



: "The Color Treasury of Gemstones" Edward Gübelin (Crowell); "Avi- n and Space Museums of America" by L. Allen (Arco); Diagrammatic tch of an artificial kidney from "Hu- n Engineering" by John Lenihan aziller) stones, featuring dazzling full-color photographs of the gems in both uncut and polished state. The text, which is translated from the 1969 German edition, describes the history, chemical composition, and locations of deposits for the gems, as well as mining techniques. Has a glossary but no index. For the price, an exceptional value for libraries of all sizes.

HALACY, D. S., Jr. Earthquakes: a Natural History. 162p. Bobbs. $7.95. 73-13227.
A broad treatment covering the history of earthquakes, their prediction and means of surviving them. Also discusses volcanoes and tsunami, which are closely related to earthquakes. Includes some graphic photographs of the effects of earthquakes. Should appeal to a wide audience.

MATHER, Kirtley F. The Earth Beneath Us: the Random House Illustrated Science Library. 2d ed. 319p. Random. $20.
Designed for the intelligent layman, this well-written work is greatly enriched by its abundance and excellence of illustrations (having over 240 of which 116 are in full color). Ranges widely over the topics of the earth sciences, from earthquakes to glaciers. Includes a glossary, geological time table, a brief bibliography and an index. For libraries of all sizes.

RUFFNER, James A. & Frank E. Bair, eds. The Weather Almanac. Gale. 1974. 578p. $17.50. 73-9342.
A useful collection of data on the climates of major U.S. cities, plus selected ones abroad. Includes chapters on meteorological phenomena such as hurricanes, lightning, and storms in general. Factual data includes precipitation, temperature ranges and norms, wind and sunshine statistics. A short prose account of each city's climate is included. In spite of the lack of an index, this should be considered for the reference collections of libraries of all sizes.

STEIGER, Brad. A Roadmap of Time. Prentice-Hall. 276p. $7.95. ISBN 0-13-781385-6.
Climates and their relationship to history—the ways in which various weather cycles parallel events of a historical nature are described.

TAZIEFF, Maroun. The Making of the Earth: Volcanoes and Continental Drift. 111p. Saxon House, dist. by Atheneum. $7. 74-3910.
One of the best introductory works to the relationship of vulcanology to plate tectonics we have seen in some time, this volume manages to transform a great deal of recently published technical research into a highly readable style for the layman. Veronica Lawson has done an admirable job of translation, and numerous illustrations support the text. For any library with even a modest collection in the geological sciences, especially at this price!

TINDALL, James R. & Roger Thornhill. The Collector's Guide to Rocks and Minerals. 256p. Van Nostrand Reinhold. $17.95. ISBN 0-442-28551-5.
Has many features to interest serious collectors as well as the layman, especially its fine illustrations and photographs, mostly in sparkling color. Following a review of geological features, there is a section on rocks and minerals, followed by a segment on the problems of collecting—equipment needed and typical locations to try. Includes a large mineral identification chart and a glossary.

Energy

Energy: a Guide to Organizations and Information Resources in the United States. Center for California Public Affairs, Claremont. 1974. 204p. pap. $16.50. 74-21231.
One of several recent directories on the subject, other publications were larger, but this is more than adequate for small and medium size libraries and is at the low end of the price range. Arranged by subject with an alphabetical index to organizations listed.

FULLER, John G. We Almost Lost Detroit. Reader's Digest Pr., dist. by Crowell. 288p. $8.95. ISBN 0-88349-070-6.
A controversial book, which may dismay proponents of nuclear energy. The theme is a detailed and very interesting account of an actual accident at a nuclear power station near Detroit in 1966. Tends to overdramatize every facet of the situation, but it is a graphic description of a newsworthy incident, interspersed with an account of the history of the development of nuclear power. In view of the increasing number of nuclear power plants and the public concern about the safety of such installations, this one-sided account should be of great interest, even if it lacks a sense of objectivity.

MADDOX, John. Beyond the Energy Crisis. 208p. McGraw. $8.95. ISBN 0-07-039430-X.
A factual account of the economic, political, and technical ramifications of the sources and supplies of energy, including the question of alternatives. The author favors nuclear energy over other sources but discusses several types. A serious look at a complex problem.

MANN, Martin. Peacetime Uses of Atomic Energy. 3d ed. Crowell. 196p. $8.95. ISBN 0-690-00118-5.
The history of the development of atomic (nuclear) energy is followed by descriptions of its application in a wide range of activities—agriculture, power plants, and industrial uses, among others. Updated to include recent developments such as atomic batteries. Profusely illustrated with black and white photos. Can be understood by high school students yet would probably interest older general readers also. Points out some of the problems of atomic energy devices but does not dwell on them.

MORGAN, M. Granger, ed. Energy and Man: Technical and Social Aspects of Energy. 521p. Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers. $19.95; pap. $9.95. ISBN 0-87942-043-X.
A wide-ranging collection of reprints of articles and technical reports dealing with the technical aspects of the energy crisis. Although the greatest emphasis is on electrical energy, it includes geothermal, solar, wind, and oceanic sources. Has an author and subject index. For larger collections.

PARK, Charles F. Earthbound: Minerals, Energy, and Man's Future. 279p. Freeman, Cooper & Co. $8.95; pap. $3.95. 73-87688.
An intelligent presentation of the argument that industrial and economic growth cannot be sacrificed at the altar of environmental salvation, nor can we neglect the latter for the sake of continued technological advances. Park includes much political and historical information on man's use of various natural resources (primarily fuels and minerals are covered here), and the factors that have influenced their popularity, utilization, and exploitation.

VAN TASSEL, Alfred J. The Environmental Price of Energy. 326p. Lexington Bks. (Heath). $21. ISBN 0-669-97766-7. 74-27746.
A timely treatment of such newsworthy topics as desulfurization of fuel oils, strip mining of coal, and alternate sources of energy (e.g., geothermal and nuclear). Not written in a chatty style yet would be comprehensible to the interested average adult. Well documented. For larger collections.

Engineering (General)
see also Science (General); Technology

BUSH, Donald J. The Streamlined Decade. Braziller. 192p. $15; pap. $7.95. ISBN 0-8076-0792-4. pap. ISBN 0-8076-0793-2. 74-10868.
The history of streamlining, essentially confined to the 1930's, is described and illustrated, including its application to trains and cars, and its appearance in architecture and interior design. A useful book.

CLARK, Ronald W. The Scientific Breakthrough: the Impact of Modern Invention. Putnam. 1974. 204p. $14.95. 73-78629.
A description of six areas of science and engineering in which significant developments have occurred, ranging from nuclear energy to modern biology. Includes such topics as improvements in flight and the many uses of the electromagnetic spectrum (radio, radar, television). Understandable to high school students and adult laymen. Has many photographs and illustrations. Should interest a wide audience.

Environmental Studies

DOUGHTY, Robin W. Feather Fashions and Bird Preservation: a Study in Nature Protection. 177p. Univ. of California Pr. $8.95. 72-619678.
The devastating annihilation of 200 million birds each year for the sole purpose of providing ornamental feathers and even entire birds for fashionable ladies' apparel during the late 19th Century is dramatically chronicled. Only the gradual shift to simpler clothing styles, along with persistent efforts by conservation groups, notably the Audubon Society, helped to prevent the extinction of a considerable number of species around the world. Protective legislation is still in effect today to help certain of these return to adequate population sizes.

Encyclopedia of Environmental Science. 754p. McGraw. $24.50. 74-13065.
A well-illustrated collection of 300 articles which deal with a broad spectrum of topics—ecology, conservation, mining, oceanography, meteorology, and others, all in relation to environmental problems. Has references to related works, as well as an index. For the price, a good addition to all libraries.

HARRAH, David F. & Barbara K. Conservation/Ecology: Resources for Environmental Education. Scarecrow. 323p. $12. 74-23055.
An annotated bibliography aimed at aiding instruction, as well as general readership in environmental problems. Lists books of wide interest, readily available in most public libraries, as well as more specialized items and some out-of-print titles still worth reading. A glossary and a bibliography of periodical articles (1969-73) on environmental education, plus listings of organizations who can supply additional information, round out this worthwhile book for the reference shelf.

KAVALER, Lucy. Noise: the New Menace. 208p. John Day. $7.95. 74-9367.
Noise and its effect on living things, especially man, has received considerable recent attention from the scientific community resulting in much concern about the ever-increasing volume and variety of sounds to which we are subjected on a daily basis. An admirable job researching the topic and drawing together significant findings that should be of interest to all of us. Some data are startling. The implications for the future if noise pollution continues unchecked are alarming. A thought-provoking volume for environmental science collections.

KNEESE, Allen V. & Charles L. Schultze. Pollution, Prices and Public Policy. Sponsored jointly by Resources for the Future, Inc. & Brookings Institution. 125p. $6.95; pap. $2.95. 74-1432.
The economic and the technical aspects of pollution are presented by two economists. Points out the lack of progress in improving production techniques which create pollution while we concentrate on pollution control, thus avoiding the heart of the matter. Describes legislative efforts to improve the situation. Although the treatment is serious, it is a very readable and welcome addition to the literature on the subject.

SHEPHERD, Jack. The Forest Killers: the Destruction of the American Wilderness. 397p. Weybright & Talley, dist. by McKay. $14.95. 74-14022.
A strongly critical study of the policies and practices of the U.S. Forest Service which, although charged by Congress with protecting our national forests, wildlife, and watersheds, has, according to the author, better served the timber, mining, and highway industries. Shepherd cites numerous cases of economic exploitation and devastating practices such as clear-cutting and inadequate re-forestation programs that are rapidly destroying the remains of our national wilderness and recreational areas. Equally destructive logging in other areas of the world, are also discussed, but the main focus of this volume is on the "killing" of our own forests.

SMITH, W. Eugene & Aileen M. Smith. Minamata. 192p. Holt. $20; pap. $10. 74-15467.
A graphic presentation of human death and deformity on a large scale in a prefecture in southern Japan. A brutal, unforgettable reminder of the consequences of unmonitored, unchecked, industrial pollution. The illustrations chronicle the resulting horrors of the methyl-mercury poisoning of Minamata's bay. The text documents the circumstances responsible for the tragedies, and the eventual outcome of the resulting lawsuit. A tragic and timely message that merits wide distribution.

Health Sciences

ASHLEY, Richard. Cocaine: Its History, Uses and Effects. 320p. St. Martin's. $6.95. 74-79960.
The history of cocaine from its discovery by Europeans among the Incas to the present, by an advocate of legalization. Supported by considerable documentation, Ashley refutes long-held beliefs concerning the psychological and physiological effects of cocaine. In the 19th Century the drug was cheap and legal, and was widely used as a general tonic and cure-all. In 1886, John Pemberton's syrup containing cocaine and caffeine was used as the base for a soft drink, Coca-Cola. "Coke" was cocaine-based until 1903. Available as Wine of Cola, Celery Cole, as tea, throat lozenges, chewing paste, nasal spray, and in cigarettes, cocaine was celebrated in the original Cole Porter lyric, "I get no kick from cocaine/ I'm sure that if/ I took even one sniff/ It would bore me terrifically too/ But I get a kick out of you . . ." A fascinating book with a highly readable style.

BOURNE, Gordon & David N. Danforth. Pregnancy. 578p. Harper. $15. 73-14246.
A clear, concise, yet thorough discussion of pregnancy, that should be popular in most libraries. Up-to-date information is offered on a variety of delivery methods, stages in prenatal development, even contraceptives, along with the standard explanations of the anatomical and physiological changes which occur as a result of conception and subsequent growth of the fetus. The psychological impact of pregnancy, an area frequently neglected in books of this type, is also considered in this highly recommended work.

GARDNER, Howard. The Shattered Mind: the Person After Brain Damage. 481p. Knopf. $10. 74-7740.
A readily understandable account of changes in brain activity as the result of a stroke. Using examples from actual cases, Gardner explains the results of different forms and degrees of brain damage, particularly in terms of alterations in language, perceptual, and motor skills. This is an impressive contribution to the literature presently available to the layman on this subject, and should be seriously considered by most public libraries.

GOODFIELD, Jane. The Siege of Cancer. 156p. Random. $8.95. 75-10298.
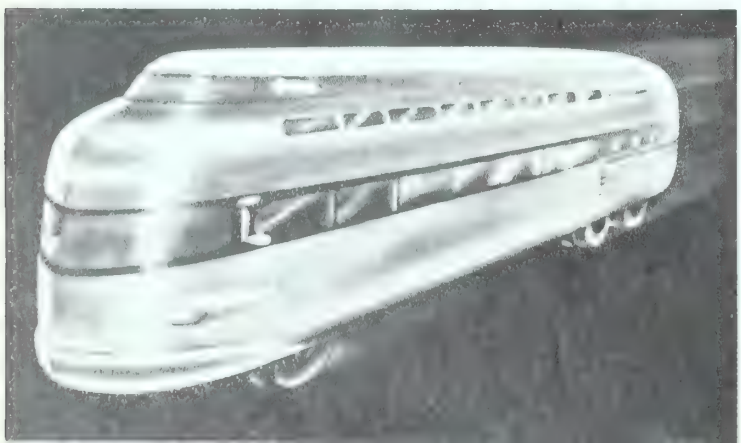
Man's expensive and tireless fight against cancer, personalized for the layman through a close examination of the people and politics that determine research directions and funds in institutes, cancer centers, and hospitals around the world concerned with eradicating and treating this disease.



L-r: "The Streamlined Decade" by Donald J. Bush (Braziller); "Minamata" by W. Eugene Smith (Holt); "Birth without Violence" by Frederick Leboyer (Knopf); "The Precious Metals of Medicine" by Geoffrey Marks & William K. Beatty (Scribners); "Untamed Australia" by Michael Morcombe (Scribners)

INGLIS, Brian. The Forbidden Game: a Social History of Drugs. 256p. Scribners. $9.95.
No newcomer to the field of drug literature, Inglis presents us with an absorbing socio-medical history of such agents as marihuana, LSD, and the usual "hard drugs," but does not neglect those most of us might not consider, such as alcohol and tobacco. Given the present social and legal questions about the availability and use of a wide range of drugs, many public libraries will want to consider this well documented survey.

KUSHNER, Rose. Breast Cancer. 448p. HBJ. $10. 75-17688.
A personal record of one woman's experience with the most common form of cancer in the U.S. today. Kushner's interviews with cancer specialists, both in Europe and locally, and with a large number of women who have had breast cancer and subsequent treatment in a variety of ways, contribute substantially to the average reader's understanding of this disease. As a science writer, the author presents an excellent, up-to-date report on cancer research, that is both sympathetic and objective.

LEBOYER, Frederick. Birth Without Violence. 114p. Knopf. $7.95. 74-21293.
Certainly one of the most controversial and well publicized books of the year, this work by a French obstetrician makes a dramatic plea for an environment of silence, warmth, and dim lighting during the birth process. The author makes strong claims about the influence of delivery on the individual's later adjustment emotionally and intellectually. A thought-provoking, revolutionary concept, meriting further professional investigation.

MARK, Geoffrey & William K. Beatty. The Precious Metals of Medicine. Scribners. 294p. $9.95. ISBN 0-684-13979-0.
A well-documented account of the medical uses of precious metals from ancient times up to the present. Written in a manner that holds one's attention, it shows the changing medical concepts through the years. Includes a selective bibliography and illustrations. For larger libraries.

RESTAK, Richard M. Pre-meditated Man: Bioethics and the Control of Future Human Life. 180p. Viking. $8.95. 75-16171.
The author, a practicing neurologist, argues strongly in favor of a broader base for many of the socio-medical decisions that biomedical researchers are increasingly being asked to make in light of new technological advances. Restak specifically considers such areas as behavior modification, psychosurgery, genetic engineering, experimentation on human subjects, sperm banks, and even the process of amniocentesis. While he does not suggest the cessation of scientific activity in these fields, he does encourage a greater public awareness of the potentialities of continued developments in them, and a more substantive, before-the-fact involvement by society. A timely, thoughtful presentation about the future direction of human life and our responsibility to it.

Mathematics

GARDNER, Martin. Mathematical Carnival. Knopf. 274p. $8.95. ISBN 0-394-49406-7.
A delightful book for those who revel in mathematical puzzles and games. This is the seventh selection of some of Gardner's articles for Scientific American. Readers of all ages should find something of interest. Topics range from lightning calculations to card shuffles, with one essay on how to (almost) trisect an angle. Highly recommended for all libraries.

Natural History

MORCOMBE, Michael. Untamed Australia. 128p. Scribners. $15. 74-9594.
An introduction to Australia's wildlife and geography, remarkable for the quality and quantity of information the author has packed into a small volume. As a result of a variety of geological activities over eons of time, individual adaptations to unique conditions helped create fauna and flora unlike that found anywhere else in the world. Morcombe explains the forces that contributed to this unusual development, concentrating especially on the geology of the Australian continent.

TERNES, Alan, ed. Ants, Indians, and Little Dinosaurs. 386p. Scribners. $8.95. ISBN 0-684-14312-7.
These 40 articles commemorate 75 years of the American Museum of Natural History's publication, Natural History, and give some clue to the breadth of subject matter to be found in that magazine. From the floods in Florence to life among the South Sea natives, from the intelligence of the coyote to searching for the remains of an early civilization in Java, the book should fascinate a large audience, who will recognize many of the authors, such as Margaret Mead and Oliver La Farge.

Plant Sciences

KIMMENS, Andrew C., ed. Tales of the Ginseng. 208p. Morrow. $6.95; pap. $3.95. 75-9888.
Among Oriental cultures, the ginseng root has long been credited with awesome medicinal powers, and encouraged the cultivation of this plant as a cash crop in the U.S. during the 19th Century. It is still grown today for export, and its popularity as a panacea has not waned. This volume recounts the history of the discovery of and exploration for ginseng through the centuries, and amuses us with tales of its remarkable properties and newly elevated status among natural food faddists.

HUXLEY, Anthony. Plant and Planet. 432p. Viking. $12.95. 75-2403.
A highly readable account of the absolute dependence of man and all animals on plants, not only as the base of the food chain, but as the earth's source of oxygen as well. Huxley reminds us that the first visible life forms on our planet were plants; that they made possible the future development and evolution of all other forms of life; that, whatever the habitat, plants in one form or another will usually be found, even in environments far too harsh to support other living things; that without plants all else would die very quickly indeed. His analysis of conservation problems and prospects for the future is thoughtful, and his treatment of the world of plants factual and remarkably complete.

SIMON, Hilda. The Private Lives of Orchids. 160p. Lippincott. $15. 74-18331.
An authoritative and eminently readable survey of a wide variety of orchids—their habitat requirements, geographical distribution, and the many unique and unusual features that have insured their survival in a wide range of environmental conditions, and have made them an object of fascination among horticulturists. An abundance of color illustrations.

STEBBINS, G. Ledyard. Flowering Plants: Evolution Above the Species Level. 399p. Harvard. $18.50. 73-86939.
A noted scholar of plant evolution, Stebbins has written a volume of considerable interest to professional botanists and scientifically-inclined laymen. The origins of angiosperms has long been the subject of much scientific investigation and frequent debate; two fairly recent treatises in the field include Takhtajan's Flowering Plants, Origins and Dispersal, 1969, a considerably revised translation from the Russian of his earlier (1961) Origin of Angiospermous Plants, and Cronquist's The Evolution and Classification of Flowering Plants, 1968. This newest work covers much of the pertinent literature published since as well as offering the author's exploration of the various theories, suggestions of areas for further study, and conclusions.

Psychology

ADELSON, Edward T., ed. Sexuality and Psychoanalysis. 312p. Brunner/Mazel. $13.95. 73-94007.
A well-edited collection of essays by such noted writers as Silvano Arieti, Helen S. Kaplan, and others on the application of modern psychoanalytic concepts to sexuality, in light of recent advances in our understanding of the latter's biological and sociological aspects. The significance of changing public and personal attitudes toward sex roles, greater individual freedom, and revised images of women are not overlooked. This is a noteworthy addition to the literature of psychoanalysis.

FREEDMAN, Jonathan. Crowding and Behavior: the Psychology of High Density Living. 177p. Viking. $7.95. 74-6564.
Probably the most significant challenge to earlier, largely accepted theories about human behavior under crowded conditions, particularly as typified by the urban environment. Freedman, a social psychologist at Columbia University, contends that a high population density has not been demonstrated to influence negatively such factors as life expectancy, crime, infant mortality, or even an individual's ability to perform complex psychological tests, as previously hypothesized. He makes a strong case for continued efforts to develop and design cities responsive to human needs, cultural and social. The results of his own studies on the social effects of crowding suggest a careful re-examination of present assertions about the dehumanizing and destructive influences of city life is warranted. Highly recommended.

MACCOBY, Eleanor E. & Carol N. Jacklin. The Psychology of Sex Differences. 634p. Stanford Univ. Pr. $18.95. 73-94488.
Examines the evidence for differences between the sexes in motivation, dependency, response to social stimuli, higher-level cognitive processes, and other psychological qualities, and finds that "there is not any consistent sex difference" in most areas. Biological bases seem to account for two of the four categories that have been identified as showing marked variation between male and female: visual-spatial ability appears to be genetically sex-linked, and the relationship of testosterone production to aggression suggests that the male is "in a greater state of readiness to learn and display aggressive behavior." In the shaping of sex-typed behavior of children, Maccoby and Jacklin found, surprisingly, "a remarkable degree of uniformity in the socialization of the two sexes." The conclusions seem to indicate that our concepts significantly contribute to subsequent role differentiation of men and women as adults, according to the cognitive view of development held by the authors. Destined to become a classic in its field.

MAY, Rollo. The Courage to Create. 143p. Norton. $7.95. ISBN 0-393-01119-4.
May, in this latest contribution to humanistic psychology, considers the inherent creativity of individuals and of states, and the potential it offers for threatening the established order. His challenge is: "shall we seize the courage necessary to preserve our sensibility, awareness and responsibility in the face of radical change? Shall we consciously participate, on however small the scale, in the forming of the new society?" He defines creativity as an individual's expression of his encounter with the real world; it is, therefore, a continuing process of growth. Based on earlier lectures, this presentation is a persuasive argument for the nurturing of human striving toward a coming to terms with reality.

ROSENTHAL, Robert & Ralph L. Rosnow. The Volunteer Subject. 266p. Wiley-Interscience. $14.95. 74-16378.
The characteristics of volunteer subjects, and the effects associated with the use of such subjects are the focus of this collaboration. The response of volunteers versus that of nonvolunteers, the consistency of individuals in volunteering for experiments, the ethical issues involved in discussing the activity with the potential subject, the subject's awareness that his behavior is being monitored, and similar problems are all shown to affect an individual's reactions, and, therefore, influence the findings and conclusions of the researcher. An important contribution to the methodology of behavioral research.

VAN DER POST, Laurens. Jung and the Story of Our Time. 276p. Pantheon. $10. ISBN 0-394-49207-8. 75-10362.
A perceptive insight, based on a long personal acquaintance, into the shaping of Jung's inquiries and theories of analytic psychology. Much of the author's writing is concerned with elaborating on Jung's own autobiography, Memories, Dreams, Reflections.

Science (General)

AAAA Science Film Catalog. ed. by Ann Seltz-Petrash. 398p. Bowker. $16.95. ISBN 0-8352-0860-5.
Co-published with the American Association for the Advancement of Science, this exceptional reference book lists 5600 16mm films from commercial, government, university, and industrial producers. Updated as of September 1974. Includes annotations. Should be a real asset for those seeking sci-tech films ranging from elementary to adult levels and is highly recommended for all libraries.

ASIMOV, Isaac. Science Past, Science Future. Doubleday. 346p. $8.95. ISBN 0-385-09923-1.
A collection of more than 40 of his essays, roughly divided into "Past" and "Future" categories. Presents a wide range of topics, such as computers, atomic energy, water supplies, evolution and future foods. Even speculates about sex on future space ships. All in the readable Asimov style. Recommended for all libraries.

BEDINI, Silvio A. Thinkers and Tinkers: the Early American Men of Science. Scribner's. 520p. $17.50. ISBN 0-684-14268-6. 72-1174.
The title is not only clever but accurate, since the book describes the work of both pure and applied scientists in America in the 1700's and 1800's. This well-documented account describes and illustrates their inventions, illustrated with photos and drawings. Has hundreds of references to other works plus a glossary. Recommended for the larger collections.

BOFFEY, Phillip M. The Brain Bank of America: an Inquiry Into the Politics of Science. 312p. McGraw. $10.95. 74-23842.
An in-depth view of the activities and membership of the National Academy of Sciences, chartered by Congress in 1863 to advise the federal government on almost every scientific matter of interest to the nation. More recently, it has been involved in such controversial issues as the SST, use of pesticides, and storage of radioactive waste materials. An enlightening and sobering account of the sometimes inept, frequently political, recommendations and proposals issued by this body, and how the academy can and has been manipulated and maneuvered out of its official impartiality by government agencies which support it financially. Boffey has offered us an eye-opening probe into our national science policies and how they are developed.

COTTRELL, Alan. Portrait of Nature: the World as Seen by Modern Science. Scribner's. 236p. $9.95. ISBN 0-684-14355-0.
A very readable series of brief essays spanning the physical sciences and life sciences. Ranges from a description of the famed double helix structure of DNA to a simplified account of relativity. Should appeal to a wide audience.

KERROD, Robin. Concise Color Encyclopedia of Science. 256p. Crowell. $9.95. ISBN 0-690-00683-7.
Aimed at students at the junior and senior high levels, this reference work fills a useful niche. It is profusely illustrated (with many in color), and has a well-written text. Emphasizes technology more than sciences. The rather random order of arrangement of articles make use of the index and table of contents essential.

PRICE, Derek de Solla. Science Since Babylon. enl. ed. Yale Univ. Pr. 215p. $15. ISBN 0-300-01797-9; pap. $3.45 ISBN 0-300-01798-7.
An updated version of the first edition, which was based on a series of lectures given by this eminent researcher in the history of science. Aims at explaining the nature of science and its complexities in terms of examples and episodes that will interest the layman. The author is successful in producing a work which should be both instructive and enjoyable reading to the serious general reader. Chapters discuss the ancient scientists, the problems of modern science, the

Thinkers and by Silvio A.
(Scribners);
d Vehicles"
ald Carpenter, Crown); "The Fiction Book"
Rottensteiner ); "Motorcycle
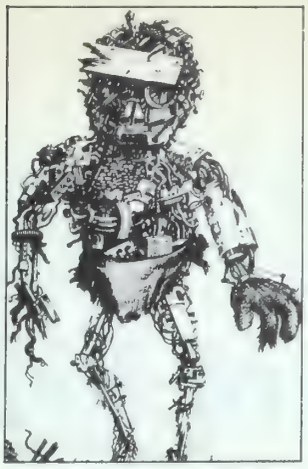
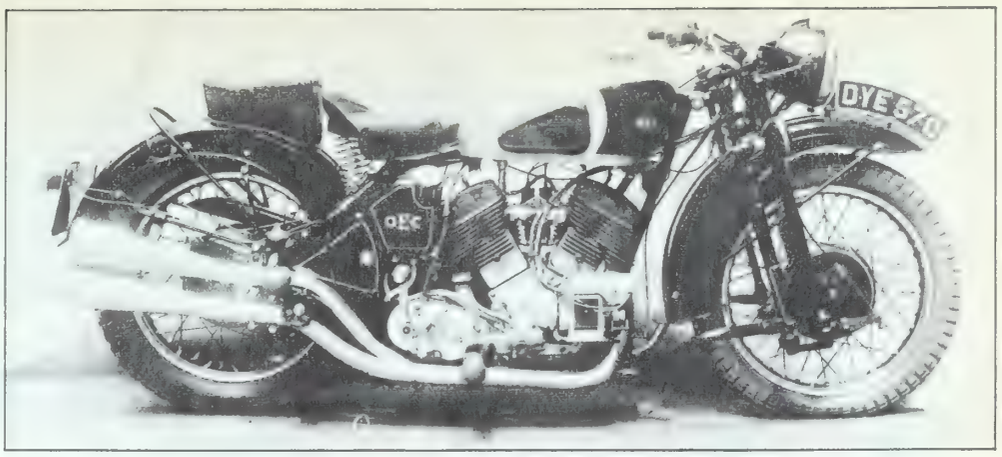
a" by Bob
(Arco)





difference between science and technology, and similar topics. For the medium and larger collections.

ROTTENSTEINER, Franz. The Science Fiction Book: an Illustrated History. Seabury. 160p. $14.95. ISBN 0-8164-9169-0.
One of several histories on the subject, this one is not as expensive as some and presents examples of writings from the first efforts up to modern times, together with copious illustrations. Has several special features, such as a chronology of science fiction writings, lists of periodicals of interest, plus an extensive bibliography of additional references to consult. Recommended for libraries of all sizes.

SINGER, Peter. Animal Liberation: a New Ethic for Our Treatment of Animals. 301p. A New York Review Book, dist. by Random. $10.
Singer presents strong arguments, supported by considerable documentation, against both the continued use of animals in scientific experiments, and the raising of animals for food. Meat is not a necessary part of an adequate diet, he claims, and proceeds to review some of the cruel practices employed in raising and slaughtering a variety of animals to satisfy our concepts of desirable cuts and colors. Similarly, he attacks the procedures followed in laboratories and academic institutions of subjecting animals to painful, injurious, and ultimately lethal experiments, when such have often been previously carried out, and that frequently result in findings inapplicable to human beings. He does not argue for a complete cessation of all such activity; rather, he requires a new morality in our treatment of animals. Controversial, but not hysterical. Singer's arguments are persuasive and logical, well documented, and calmly presented. They need to be heard.

STANTON, William. The Great United States Exploring Expedition of 1838-1842. 433p. Univ. of California Pr. $14.95. 73-84390.
A biography of the government-sponsored scientific expedition of 1838, this narrative recounts the extraordinary accomplishments in the areas of botany, anthropology, geology, cartography, and other sciences resulting from the efforts of the civilian scientists who participated in the venture. Stanton reviews the background and the personalities responsible for the launching of the expedition, and explores the individual strengths, weaknesses, and common aspirations of the exploring party, concentrating particularly on Charles Wilkes, commander of the group and a naval officer, a man of many talents and tantrums. The discovery and charting of new lands, along with the scientific collections brought back from this four-year voyage advanced understanding of the natural world to a remarkable degree, admirably narrated in this highly recommended work.

WOODWARD, David, ed. Five Centuries of Map Printing. Univ. of Chicago Pr. $8.95. 74-11635.
A remarkable overview of the development of cartography in the last 500 years. Six scholars have contributed essays on the history of techniques of mapmaking, considering woodcut and copperplate map production, early lithography, other 19th Century mapmaking processes, and the application of photography and offset lithography. The illustrations are stunning examples of the best of cartographic development. Enthusiastically recommended.

Technology

BELLOW, Saul and others. Technology and the Frontiers of Knowledge. Doubleday. 133p. $6. 73-14077.
Five distinguished writers discuss man's relationship with technology. Saul Bellow points out how man's notion of himself has been altered by technology and its relationship to literature. Sociologist Daniel Bell deals with the effect of technology in transforming our social structure. Historian Edmundo O'Gorman reflects on the relationship of technology to history and man's war against obstacles to his well-being. Nobel Prize winner Peter Medawar considers the relationship of technology to ecology, as seen by a life scientist. Arthur Clarke's contribution is to point out the importance of the ability of technology to influence our intellectual viewpoints. A well rounded collection, probably best suited to larger libraries.

HOUGH, Granville W. Technology Diffusion: Federal Programs and Procedures. Lomond. 388p. $14.50; microfiche, $11.50. 73-88035.
Primarily an appraisal of how well federal agencies are faring in transferring to the general public the fruits of technological advancements made by tax-supported projects. Reports on large agencies such as the Department of Defense and the AEC (now ERDA), then gives views of how improvements might be better made. A carefully-done study, based on a doctoral dissertation. For larger collections.

MORISON, Elting E. From Know-How to Nowhere: the Development of American Technology. 199p. Basic Bks. 1974. $10. ISBN 0-465-02580-3. 74-792-79.
Describes the development of technology by means of selected topics, rather than attempting to cover the subject broadly. Its MIT-based author has included discussion on the social aspects of technology. Well written but for larger collections.

Transportation

CARPENTER, Reginald & others. Powered Vehicles. Crown. 240p. $14.95. 74-78656.
Covers the historical development of all types of transportation—ships, trains, cars, and aircraft. The text is adequate but the main strength lies in the hundreds of illustrations, mostly line drawings with some washed with color. A good candidate for libraries of all sizes.

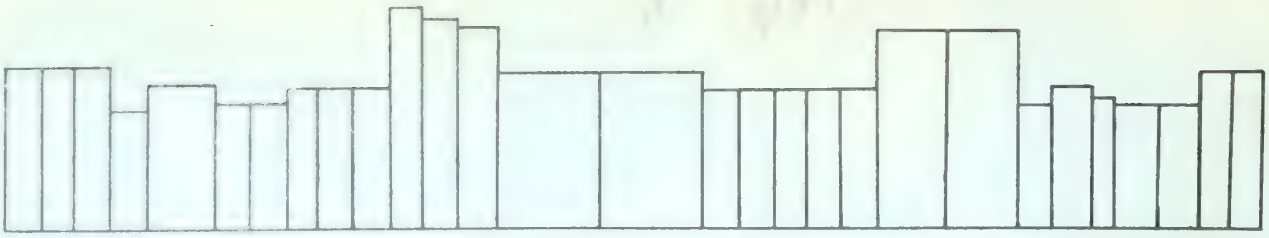
DARK, Harris Edward. Auto Engines of Tomorrow; Power Alternatives for Cars to Come. 180p. Indiana Univ. Pr. $8.95. 74-6518.
A wide array of types of engines, including many still not yet ready for production are described. The style is fully understandable to those interested in things mechanical. Fuel economy, pollution features, and cost factors are all discussed. Includes electric, rotary, and diesel types. A timely publication.

HOLLIDAY, Bob. Motorcycle Panorama: a Pictorial Review of Design and Development. Arco. 112p. $7.95. ISBN 0-668-03647-8.
Presentation on an international scale of the evolution and development of motorcycles, ranging from the Daimler of 1885 to the present. Well-illustrated with black and white photos. Prices given are based on those in Britain in late 1974. For medium to large collections.

NORBYE, Jan P. The Gas Turbine Engine. 557p. Chilton. $19.95. ISBN 0-8019-5753-2.
A very thorough treatment of the newsworthy gas turbine, which may eventually eclipse the reciprocating engine. Sections cover turbine design, historical development, and case histories of 15 commercial models. Profusely illustrated with photos and drawings, and has a 13-page bibliography. Recommended for all but the smallest libraries, as it should interest both the layman as well as those more technically oriented.

OLMSTEAD, Robert P. The Diesel Years. 160p. Golden West. $13.95. ISBN 0-87095-054-1.
Concerned with diesel locomotives, a field not overcrowded with popular works. Has a great number of action photographs, all in black and white. A carefully prepared work on a topic of considerable appeal to many readers.

WHITT, Frank Rowland & David Gordon Wilson. Bicycling Science: Ergonomics and Mechanics. MIT Pr. 247p. $12.95. 74-5165.
A technical analysis of bicycling and bicycles which would be of interest to non-technical devotees of the subject. Includes a discussion of bicycle mechanics and human power. Relies heavily on graphic presentations and cites references for additional reading. Carefully done, this book should have a wide appeal in view of the growing interest in this mode of transportation.



Business Books of 1975

A RATHER ROUTINE YEAR for business book publishing, 1975 spawned the usual shoal of titles on traumatic contemporary events (the energy crisis, the high cost of living, the exploitation of resources and humans), and the more everyday concerns of this genre of literature (investing, administration, marketing, computerization, economics). One can't help being struck by the seemingly endless outpouring of stale advice, warmed-over clichés, and asphyxiating sameness which characterizes so many business books. Many are so little differentiated that they are hard to distinguish from one another—particularly in the areas of investing, managment, real estate, accounting, computers, job-hunting, and, now, even consumerism. All too infrequently a business book comes along that travels virgin territory, or at least presents familiar and shopworn topics in a novel or enticing way. When such a book appears, it is usually snapped up eagerly and placed at the top of the pile for consideration.

This is not to suggest that some very good standard works are not being published. They are. Out of the hundreds of titles published each year, there is—obviously—a substantial amount of worthwhile material. Hopefully, many of last year's are included in this compilation.

Users of this list are reminded that the titles were chosen with the average nonspecialist in mind. They are not reference books in the sense in which librarians understand the term—they are not intended to be placed alongside Moody and Standard and Poor's. The books listed are of the type that patrons should reasonably expect to find on the shelves on their own, or with the help of a reader's advisor or a reference librarian. It is suggested that the librarian using the list as a buying guide consider the specific requirements of his or her community and collection when selecting from it.

A few observations occurred to me as I was working on the project: More and more women are currently writing business books. This area of publishing seems to have been the specialized domain of men in the past, so it is encouraging to see women gaining a foothold in it. Reviewers of business books, especially those connected with business periodicals, tend to be quite—I almost wrote overly—generous in their reviews (the possible explanations for this would take up more space than is available here). Finally, many books in the present list are cheerfully optimistic, which is not a bad thing at a time when the grace of a contented spirit is rare.

A.J. Anderson

A.J. Anderson is Associate Professor, School of Library Science, Simmons College, Boston

Bankruptcy

SLAVICEK, John H. & Robert E. Burger. The Simplified Guide to Personal Bankruptcy. 104p. Crown. $5.95. 75-1491.
In the words of the introduction, "The intent of this book is to remedy the dearth of knowledge among the general public about the touchy subject of personal bankruptcy." The book informs people of their rights under the Federal Bankruptcy Act; it tells them how to "go under"; and it provides a host of answers to other questions they are likely to have on bankruptcy.

Business History & Thought

BAGLEY, Edward R. Beyond the Conglomerates. 213p. AMACOM. $11.95. 74-4601.
Bagley predicts, with optimistic good humor, that by 1990 "supercorporations" and "semi-supercorporations" will emerge. If we nudge them in the right direction, he feels these "supers" could improve the quality of our lives. Although shored up by some rather extended "ifs," the book is nonetheless enthralling and far more plausible than many of its kind.

SOBLE, Ronald L. & Robert E. Dallos. The Impossible Dream: the Equity Funding Story–the Fraud of the Century. 313p. Putnam. $7.95. 74-79643.
Soble and Dallos, reporters with the Los Angeles Times, tell about the biggest business scandal in the nation's history—the equity funding story. How the conglomerates was able to deceive the SEC, state superintendents of insurance, state bank examiners, and investment managers defies imagination. A fascinating account of shady doings and cunning.

TEBBEL, John. A History of Book Publishing in the United States. Vol. 2: The Expansion of an Industry, 1865-1919. 813p. Bowker. $29.95. 71-163903.
If you haven't picked up Volume One in this definitive history of book publishing (1630 to the Civil War), you may want to do so. The present volume surveys publishing for the years 1865 to 1919, tracing the development of the old established houses and marking the arrival of new publishers; it discusses specialized publishing, copyright, and censorship problems.

Business Opportunities

AHLERS, Arvel W. Where & How to Sell Your Photographs. 253p. AMPHOTO. $7.95. 74-83644.
This handsome picture-and-text manual tells just about everything that free-lance photographers (a burgeoning breed these days) need to know about selling their pictures. Ahlers covers where to find information on what kind and size of pictures are wanted and by whom, how to prepare captions, how to submit photographs for possible sale, and much additional how-to, where-to, and what-to information.

COSSMAN, E. Joseph. How to Get $100,000 Worth of Services Free, Each Year, From the U.S. Government. 282p. Fell. $9.95. 75-13973.
Looking for a new product to sell? Interested in running a business out of your own home? Want to sell products overseas? Want to go into a new business? These are just some of the questions answered in this introduction to material that is available for a pittance from the U.S. Government Printing Office. The title is unfortunate, but the contents are worthwhile.

The Food Co-op Handbook: How to Bypass Supermarkets to Control the Quality and Price of Your Food. 382p. Houghton. $8.95. 75-22470.
The work of a group called the Co-op Handbook Collective, this book is intended to provide a useful and accessible introduction to people with little or no experience who are interested in starting or joining a food co-op. It accomplishes its goal: it is comprehensive; it tells people what they need to know; it is intelligently written.

GAINES, Kenneth S. How to Sell (and Buy) Your Home Without a Broker. 160p. Coward. $7.95. 74-24331.
All about determining sales price, financing, marketing one's property, negotiating, closing the sale, title searching, escrow arrangements, drawing up contracts, etc. The book is easy-to-follow and contains chapters on the functions of a broker, preparing a description of the property, and so forth. Glossary and sample forms are included.

Business Practices

HEMPHILL, Charles F. Fr. & Thomas Hemphill. The Secure Company: How to Hire, Retain and Protect Honest, Loyal and Productive Employees. 240p. Dow Jones-Irwin. $12.95. 74-24462.
In this competent treatise, Hemphill hews pretty close to the line of his title. He offers a great deal of practical advice to employers on how to cope with drugs and alcohol in the work environment, gambling and sex, employee theft, absenteeism, moonlighting, insubordination, etc. Precautionary hiring practices are also discussed at some length.

MANDELL, Mel. 1001 Ways to Operate Your Business More Profitably. 306p. Dow Jones-Irwin. $12.95. 75-7278.
Intended primarily for small to medium size businesses, this eye-opening and intelligent guide for improving and streamlining business operations should be brought to the attention of businessmen in your communities. Mandell suggests plugging up all the drains on profit rather than spending more money to try to make more money, and he inventories many ways to accomplish this.

Computer Research

AUERBACH, Isaac L., ed. 1975 Best Computer Papers. 257p. Petrocelli/Charter. $17.50.
This book brings together—and thus makes accessible—what the editor considers the most significant periodical articles in the field of computer science. The material has been selected with skill; the book represents the most current thinking.

MUNYAN, Jack. So You're Going to Automate. 160p. Petrocelli/Charter. $10. 75-11977.
The author's laudable reason for this book is to tell those with little or no background in computer use what they need to know to convert their accounting systems (manual or semi-automated) to fully automated systems. While this has been done many times before, the present volume is by all standards of comparison one of the best on the subject.

Consumerism

BENNING, Lee Edwards. How to Bring Up a Child Without Spending a Fortune. 325p. McKay. $8.95. 74-81974.
Ways to beat the high cost of raising a child. After estimating that cost to be between $194,640 and $233,640, all things considered, Benning offers tips on how to save money on clothes, food, medical expenses, education, and recreation. Includes sample worksheets and a directory of other sources to consult.

Consumer Survival Kit. 302p. Praeger. $10. Adapted by John Dorfman. 74-29312.
This money-saving kit is based on last year's weekly television series on public broadcasting stations across the United States. The information is practical and tactical: it tells what to look for and what to avoid in food, clothing, shelter, money, and other goods and services. The book covers a number of subjects not always found in books of this sort.

HIGHTOWER, Jim. Eat Your Heart Out: How Food Profiteers Victimize the Consumer. 294p. Crown. $8.95. 74-24288.
An attempt to snatch the blinders from the eyes of people who are being mulcted and hoodwinked by huge food conglomerates which charge pretty well what they want for their products and add whatever chemicals they want to our food. The accounts of the practices of some of the major food conglomerates are highly instructive—and disturbing. Hightower concludes with an impassioned plea to his co-consumers to become better informed.

PRESTON, Ivan L. The Great American Blow-Up: Puffery in Advertising and Selling. 368p. Univ. of Wisconsin Pr. $11.95. 74-27313.
Preston's thesis—that puffery is offensive and should be controlled or eliminated—is not new, but it has been brought into arresting focus by the quiet and reasonable way in which he deals with it. The result is a book of enormous interest and variety, but hardly an amusing one.

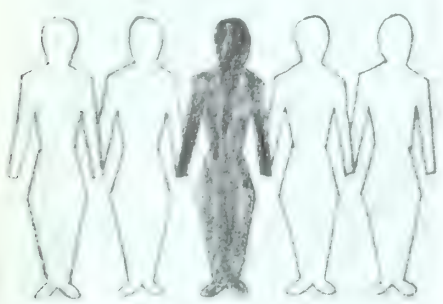
Corporate Behavior

HEIKOFF, Joseph M. Management of Industrial Particulates: Corporate, Government, Citizen Action. 260p. Ann Arbor Science. $14.50. 74-83855.
"The operation of our market economy has demonstrated that pollution cannot be controlled by the voluntary action of individual producers and consumers." So says the author of this case history of class action suits brought against major heavy manufacturing corporations. Included is a discussion of what corporations, government, and citizens can do to help control air pollution.

SELAME, Elinor & Joe Selame. Developing a Corporate Identity: How to Stand Out in the Crowd. 246p. Chain Store Age Books. $14.95. 74-23015.
"This book attempts to provide specific information on the various elements of corporate identity, and is illustrated with case studies of projects as they answer specific identity problems." Suggesting that a company's image is in large part responsible for its success or failure, the authors outline how a favorable image can be created through a corporate identity program.



Credit

COBLEIGH, Ira U. How to Buy on Credit. U.S. News & World Report Bks., dist. by S & S. $6.95.
Designed for the layperson, the book's purpose (fulfilled in terms which the average person can easily comprehend) is to identify the types of consumer credit that are available. Cobleigh favors credit as a way of life, but he does offer advice on what to watch for when borrowing money.

Economic History & Thought

CAIRNCROSS, Frances & Hamish McRae. The Second Great Crash. 120p. Prentice-Hall. $5.95. 75-5740.
Unlike most economic books—the frightening quagmires of jargon and erudition—this one is clear and concise, yet thorough and scholarly. "In one sense," the authors say, "the Second Great Crash has already happened." They describe what they label as the breakdown of the world's economic system.

BOSTOW, W. W. How It All Began: Origins of the Modern Economy. 264p. McGraw-Hill. $11.50. 74-18062.
The well-known expert in economic history and economics here turns his attention to the origins of our modern economy. Rostow's approach is somewhat synthetic, attempting to see in one perspective all the forces that operate in a given society at one time. The thoughtful style makes the book a worthy addition to the work of one of our most brilliant economic thinkers.

Estate Planning

ADLER, Joan. The Retirement Book: A Complete Early-Planning Guide to Finances, New Activities, and Where to Live. 303p. Morrow. $9.95. 74-26942.
Teeming with suggestions and ideas for financing one's future, finding the right place to live, spending one's time profitably, keeping oneself fit as a retired person, and such, the book is designed for the "younger generation" of older people—those between 55 and 80. Virtually everything these soon-to-be-retired-persons would want to know is covered.

ASHLEY, Paul P. You and Your Will: The Planning and Management of Your Estate. 238p. McGraw-Hill. $10.50. 74-28262.
"A wrongly drawn or improperly executed will may spell disaster for loved ones—litigation, undesired results, unnecessary taxes, and other evils. Wills are important documents and should be treated with due respect." An excellent introduction to the subject of wills and the administration of estates.

PORTER, Sylvia. Sylvia Porter's Money Book. 1105p. Doubleday. $14.95. 74-11817.
Here is just a hint of what you get in this hefty, soundly constructed, and highly competent tome: how to get the most out of your checking and savings accounts; how to borrow and use credit wisely; how to invest and what to invest in; how to save money on vacations; how to finance a college education; how to control funeral expenses; your rights as a consumer.

Fund Raising

KIRSTEIN, George G. Better Giving: The New Needs of American Philanthropy. 189p. Houghton. $7.95.
Kirstein has not hesitated to portray philanthropic organizations with warts and all, and if his attitude toward these organizations seems ambivalent, it is because he is bothered by the fact that the money does not always go where it should. The book affords a stimulating glimpse at "worthy causes."

WARNER, Irving R. The Art of Fund Raising. 167p. Harper. $7.95. 71-137558.
A must for those who are involved in fund raising, this book offers all sorts of practical advice and techniques on how to encourage people to contribute to valuable causes.

Health Insurance

DAVIS, Karen. National Health Insurance: Benefits, Costs, and Consequences. 182p. Brookings. $8.95; pap. $2.95. 75-5154.
A sober, measured analysis of a most controversial topic, designed for the general but attentive reader. The author, a recognized authority in the field, identifies the arguments, pro and con, behind the current proposals for public financing of health care. Her assessment of the various concepts are helpful, just as her breadth of view is illuminating.

Home Improvement

DAVIS, Joseph C. & Claxton Walker. Buying Your House: a Complete Guide to Inspection and Evaluation. 254p. Emerson. $8.95. 75-5477.
What people need to know about inspecting and evaluating houses prior to purchasing them. What to look for in evaluating heating and plumbing systems, electrical wiring, foundations, retaining walls, ceilings, roofs, windows, stairs, bathrooms, basements, insulation—everything. The text includes diagrams and drawings of equipment, a glossary, and a bibliography.

WASON, Betty & the Editors of U.S. News & World Report Books. Improving Your Home for Pleasure and Profit. 319p. S & S. $6.95. 74-18912.
All sorts of practical and decorative ideas are suggested in this "how-to" and "what-to" book on home improvement. There are chapters on insulating and temperature control, plumbing, wiring, painting, expanding, converting, remodeling, designing, and such. Photographs, blue prints, and drawings enhance the value of the book.

Interviewing

LOPEZ, Felix M. Personnel Interviewing: Theory & Practice. 2d ed. 356p. McGraw. $12.95. 75-1047.
Most people have great difficulty conducting successful interviews—amateurs, the author calls them—and this book is intended to help improve their effectiveness as interviewers. There are sections on questions to ask job applicants, conducting performance evaluations, current EEO guidelines, handling difficult employees constructively, and several other related concerns.

Investments

FISHER, Philip A. Conservative Investors Sleep Well. 180p. Harper. $7.95. 74-20401.
Not your typical "How-to-do-it" or "Get-rich-quick" type investment book; this is an intelligently reasoned argument for conservative investing. The book is divided neatly into four sections, each of which deals with the various components of a conservative investment. Fisher tends to "play-it-safe," but his method seems to work.

KINSMAN, Robert. Your Swiss Bank Book: When, Why, and How to Profit With a Secret Swiss Bank Account. 283p. Dow Jones-Irwin. $9.95. 75-7277.
Other books on this list attack or at least challenge Swiss bank accounts. For balance Kinsman provides information on how such an account can be opened. Kinsman is fair, objectively stating the advantages and disadvantages of holding a Swiss bank account.

RUTBERG, Sidney. The Money Balloon: Inflation and How to Live With It. 224p. S & S. $7.95. 74-28359.
"How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love Inflation." If you do the right things—invest in floating-rate bonds, money-market (no-load) mutual funds, the option market, blue-chip stocks that pay dividends—you should be able to ensure that your income goes up faster than the price level.

SELDIN, Maury. Land Investment. 242p. Dow Jones-Irwin. $14.95. 74-25813.
Taking a practical, rather than a theoretical approach, this primer on land investment offers the lowdown on investing in this resource—viz., the rewards and hazards, the physical characteristics of land, the changes in land value, the national patterns of economic development and population movement, the long run and short-term possibilities, etc.

SINCLAIR, James E. & Harry D. Schultz. How the Experts Buy and Sell Gold Bullion, Gold Stocks & Gold Coins. 143p. Arlington. $8.95. 75-19110.
A brief survey of practically all that can be said with reasonable certainty about investing in gold. Sinclair and Schultz give a brief history of gold; they discuss American ownership of gold bullion; they offer their thoughts on futures trading and the role of international banks in gold trading (Swiss and Canadian); they outline techniques of coin collecting.

TURNER, Dennis & Stephen H. Blinn. Trading Silver—Profitably. 190p. Arlington. $11.95. 75-25888.
Complete with charts, tables, and a glossary, this book provides what an investor needs to know to trade in silver. There are chapters on the language of the trade, the rules of the game, price channels, using statistics and computers, monitoring the methods, instructing a broker, understanding moving averages, calculating profits and losses, and more.

YOUNGQUIST, Walter. Investing in Natural Resources. 253p. Dow Jones-Irwin. $10.95. 74-24463.
This worthwhile purchase is one of very few investment books that deal with the possibilities in natural resources. It identifies natural resources—land, timber and trees, metals, mines, nonmetalic materials—and where they are to be found, what the principal markets are, how important the resource is, and how investments can be made.

Job Hunting

ERDLEN, John D. Job Hunting Guide. 144p. Herman. $10.95; pap. $5.95. 75-3824.
A concise, no-nonsense guide to job hunting. It includes chapters on planning one's job search, résumés and cover letters (with samples of each), sources of jobs, keeping records, handling oneself during interviews, what to do when a job-offer is made, etc. Also contains an up-to-date list of employment agencies and consultants.

Labor Force

GARSON, Barbara. All the Livelong Day: The Meaning and Demeaning of Routine Work. 221p. Doubleday. $7.95. 74-33983.
Garson interviewed hundreds of people who perform monotonous and uninspiring work. "I expected to find resentment and I found it," she says. "I expected to find boredom and I found it." One surprise she found is that people passionately want to work. She offers some suggestions on how "assembly-line" type workers can be kept from going crazy.

TAFT, Philip. Rights of Union Members and the Government. 348p. Greenwood. $14.95. 74-5994.
The Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act (the Landrum Griffin Act) was enacted in 1959. It concerns itself with corruption and violation of trust, with the problem of the denial of rights, with free speech and assemblage, fairness of disciplinary procedures, union elections, etc. Everything pertaining to the act is assembled in this useful book.

Management & Organization Theory

FLEUTER, Douglas L. The Workweek Revolution: A Guide to the Changing Workweek. 167p. Addison-Wesley. $7.95. 74-21457.
In recent years, many experiments have been conducted in organizations with shorter workweeks and flexible work schedules. The goal has been to lessen job dissatisfaction, improve morale, and make for better utilization of facilities. This book, citing case histories, discusses the various approaches that have been tried.

IRISH, Richard K. If Things Don't Improve Soon I May Ask You to Fire Me. 221p. Anchor. $7.95. 74-12710.
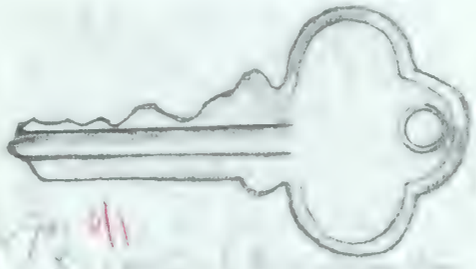
Irish's book should appeal to people who feel that modern management has become too "soft." As an antidote, he offers us a leader who risks being unpopular when he feels firm decisions must be made, and who fires when he feels firing is in order. For its tough-mindedness and ability to stimulate the imagination it is certainly worth reading.

LERBINGER, Otto & Nathaniel H. Sperber. Key to the Executive Head. 156p. Addison-Wesley. $6.95. 74-10352.
This study is concerned with what makes Chief Executive Officers (CEO's) tick. Questionnaires were sent out to 1100 public relations directors (238 were returned) asking them to evaluate their CEO's in terms of ability to express themselves, their truthfulness, how they react to threatening situations, and other pertinent considerations.



ZALEZNIK, Abraham & Manfred F. R. Kets de Vries. Power and the Corporate Mind. 279p. Houghton. $12.50. 75-17784.
Taking their examples from literature and life, the authors of this penetrating study of the corporate mind and its use of power expose the personality structure of two distinct types of leader—minimum man and maximum man. They tell what motivates the two types, tracing their relationships with their parents and peers, and discussing their differing conceptions of the world.

Natural Resources

KNOWLES, Ruth Sheldon. America's Oil Famine: How It Happened and When It Will End. 254p. Coward. $8.95. 73-93769.
Are we really running out of energy? How long will we have an energy problem? How much is energy going to cost? How did we get into this mess? These are some of the questions Knowles tackles in her enlightening, informed, and informative book. A timely purchase, and a good one.

STONER, Carol Hupping, ed. Producing Your Own Power: How to Make Nature's Energy Sources Work For You. 322p. Vintage. $3.95. 74-23118.
Most people know that the fossil fuels (coal, oil, and gas) aren't going to last forever and that alternative sources of energy must be discovered—even on a small scale. Here is a collection of articles by experts in the field of alternative energy which outline ways individuals can harness the sun, the wind, and water, and utilize wood and organic wastes.

Revenue Sharing

NATHAN, Richard P. & others. Monitoring Revenue Sharing. 394p. Brookings. $11.50. 74-28124.
An evaluation of the workings of the revenue sharing program enacted in 1972. Most communities are involved one way or another in revenue sharing, and there is a great deal of interest in the topic, so the book should be used by local officials. Definitive and informative.

Unemployment Benefits

AVRUTIS, Raymond. How to Collect Unemployment Benefits: Complete Information for All 50 States. 128p. Schocken. $1.25.
Everything you wanted to know—and even things you never thought of asking—about collecting unemployment benefits. Organized around five areas (what to expect at the unemployment office, who is covered, disqualifications and suspensions, how benefits are computed, what to ask at the unemployment office), the book is a veritable wealth of information.

Women in Management

POGREBIN, Letty Cottin. Getting Yours: How to Make the System Work for the Working Woman. 349p. McKay. $8.95. 75-2100.
While this book is intended primarily for women, it should be read by men as well. The author deals with handling application forms, fielding indiscreet questions often asked during interviews, dealing with male chauvinist bosses, spotting sexuality traps—indeed, all sorts of discrimination. Up-to-date and authoritative.

HIGGINSON, Margaret V. & Thomas L. Quick. The Ambitious Woman's Guide to a Successful Career. 230p. AMACOM. $9.95. 75-6870.
Concerned with the obstacles women frequently encounter when they attempt to achieve equality with men in the business world, the authors don't spend a great deal of time bemoaning the fact that discrimination exists; they are more interested in what women can do to overcome it. In addition to dealing with job hunting and planning career paths, there is a good analysis of what determines success.

Lib lit anthology

KATZ, Bill & Robert Burgess, eds. Library Lit. 5—The Best of 1974.

Scarecrow. 1975. 437p. ISBN 0-8108-0808-0. LC 78-154842. $11.

As pleasantly varied as those of previous years, the contents of this fifth annual collection include 30 articles by 34 contributors, one third of whom are outside the library field or not practicing librarianship at this time. These include a consultant to publishers, an architecture critic, professors in several subject disciplines, and a distinguished writer and proponent of civil liberties whose identity is overlooked in the notes on contributors. Contents include interesting contributions on such subjects as unions and libraries, black book reviewing, prison libraries, young adult reading, interlibrary loan, filmstrips on children's reading, and business libraries.

In a brief foreword, Robert Burgess, co-editor with his faculty colleague Bill Katz, answers his own question as to the purpose of the anthology by stating that "Principally, it recognizes lively writing on subjects of current and continuing importance to the library profession." The fact that Eric Moon, the continuing member of the selection jury, is a literary stylist may explain the emphasis on "lively writing." And speaking of the jury, the life of faculty members being what it is, the task of finding and selecting the articles should not go unrecognized. Norman Horrocks, Gerald R. Shields, and Ann Prentice, all associated with library schools, comprise the other members of the selection jury.

The trenchant study and review of the ultrafiche package Library of American Civilization by three George Washington University staff members is indeed impressive. Jane Holtz Kay's words on library architecture flow smoothly enough, but the argument is loose and fragmentary. Leonard Rapport provides a brief but fascinating history of the Historical Records Survey. Nat Hentoff's remarks on the librarian's responsibility in censorship are notable for their clarity, sobriety, and challenge. The meretricious razzle dazzle of the machine fanatics in staff-reader relationships is exposed by Janice M. Ladendorf. Daniel Gore, ever challenging and sometimes provocative, contributes an article on the "no-growth" concept in building academic library collections which is a good bit better than his earlier exercises in cataloging, but not entirely innocent of the cloudiness he assumes. Much of what he says, however, has a pleasantly dry, truthful quality. If the jury's verdict is sound, it is instructive to note that only one article came from each of the three major library journals in the U.S. On the other hand, the Wilson Library Bulletin scored with three, while the Hennepin County Library Cataloging Bulletin contribution was the only one to be reprinted before its third appearance in this anthology.—GUY LYLE, FORMERLY AT EMORY UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES, ATLANTA

Performing arts annual

PERRY, Ted, ed. Performing Arts Resources: Volume One, 1974.

Drama Book Specialists. 1975. 231p. LC 74-25848. $12.50.

Through this publication the Theatre Library Association intends to publicize private and public theater, film, broadcasting, and popular entertainment resources for "easier accessibility and higher standards of scholarship." This first in a projected annual series has 18 original essays varying from four to 48 pages, each by a specialist. Eleven pieces are overviews of holdings and services in one collection (Folger, the Motion Picture Section of the Library of Congress, et al), or in one institution (Ohio State University, University of Texas), or a group of resources in one city (N.Y., L.A.). Sampling recently published directories shows Lee Ash's Subject Collections 4th ed., Bowker, 1974 (LJ, February 1, 1975), presents similar information albeit in abridged form; William C. Young's American Theatrical Arts, ALA, 1972 (LJ, April 15, 1972) wavers between unannotated muster rolls and bibliographic descriptions without always attention to scope; while Margaret Labash Young's Social Sciences and Humanities Libraries (Vol. 4 of her Subject Directory of Special Libraries and Information Centers), Gale, 1975, passes over some important collections.

Researchers can only benefit from each attempt at definition of libraries whose shelf list has not been published. Even within Perry's volume, a contributor in a one-paragraph mention of the Vanderbilt TV News Archive offers information that the center's own director omitted from his four-and-one-half pages.

Remaining essays include narratives on the discovery of two theater collections now part of NYPL, the care of theatrical visual arts ephemera, and the American Film Institute catalog project. Two noteworthy chapters are Stoddard and Kozuch's annotated list of theater references in novels cited in Lyle H. Wright's American Fiction, 1774–1850 (2d rev. ed., 1969) and Schlosser's discovery of little known film broadcasting resources in the Los Angeles area.

Containing both directory and library science uses, this excellent anthology is a welcome addition to the literature.—MARK PIEL, UPSALA COLLEGE LIBRARY, EAST ORANGE, N.J.

Basic books, II

Books for College Libraries: a Core Collection of 40,000 Titles. 2d ed.

American Library Assn., Association of College & Research Libraries project. 1975. 6 vols. Vol. I: Humanities, 250p. Vol. II: Language & Literature, 452p. Vol. III: History, 349p. Vol. IV: Social Sciences, 372p. Vol. V: Psychology, Science, Technology, Bibliography, 257p. Vol. VI: Index, 402p. ISBN 0-8389-0178-6. LC 74-13743. pap. $65.

Eight years is a long time to wait, but the revisions of BCL II have been extensive and important, and congratulations are due this ALA/ACRL project. The criteria for selection of titles, the limitations, and the omissions are cited in the Introduction and it is absolutely necessary that all users of the book read this preliminary matter carefully in order to make good use of the tool and not misunderstand it. Once one knows that, among other limitations, the selection of titles is aimed primarily at the undergraduate user of the undergraduate library; that it does not include periodicals; that it is weighted (to a degree of four-fifths) toward liberal arts; and that the sci/tech sections have been "kept deliberately brief so, at best, to encourage local book selection or, at worst, merely to disappoint rather than to mislead"—then the set can be invaluable.

The set has been published in six paperbound volumes to accommodate the vast amount of additional material included in the 40,000 entries: almost all the information on the LC cards, including tracings, in run-on style. Vol. VI has comprehensive Author and Title Indexes (the Title Index even contains form listings, such as Introduction to, History of, etc., which might be more useful if given in inverted keyword style). The Subject Index, also in this volume, is really only a limited index to the LC classification, but is sufficiently useful. The order of classification is broadly LC with certain adaptations. It will take getting used to handling the separate subject volumes and dealing with arguments over placement of titles throughout the classification. If libraries bind the set, limited gutter margins will make for a tight book with reduced visibility of interior entries.

I won't carp about selection. Some specialists, librarians and scholars, have been responsible for selection in each specialized area and their names are listed. From personal information and subjective evaluation, I believe that these have not always been the best qualified individuals. Nothing is perfect and any critic will be able to suggest books that should have been omitted or included in each list. Some will also niggle about the selection of editions, that available reprints are not listed, that too many titles are o.p., or that English editions are frequently listed when American ones are available. Having spent over 20 hours reading lists of familiar subjects, I was frequently disappointed or critical of alternatives selected or areas not covered; on the other hand, where I am uninformed, I was reasonably confident that a usually competent person had provided an introductory guide that would not lead me too far astray. I do not feel, however, that the quality of the lists is consistently high nor always as good as in BCL I.

Considering the volume of book publishing today, one might wish that revisions of BCL subject lists could be more frequent—at least in four-year cycles. As to including a large number of excellent books that are o.p., for which BCL I was severely criticized, inexpensive copies of most o.p. titles can be located easily in the highly organized antiquarian market.

BCL II is another ALA landmark publication that will help—often rescue—anyone who uses it. It will surely assist in improving the character and quality of "core collections," one of its primary purposes.—LEE ASH, LIBRARY CONSULTANT, NEW HAVEN, CONN.

Library intro from Britain

MAIDMENT, William R. Librarianship.

David & Charles. (The Professions Series) 1975. 151p. index. bibliog. appendixes. ISBN 0-7153-6897-4. LC 75-17. $11.95.

The author, who is Director of Libraries and Arts in the Borough of Camden, London, presents a highly personal, gracefully-written, succinct account of the work of British librarians and of the role of libraries in English society. He emphasizes public libraries more than academic, school, or special, and service to the public more than technical services. For American librarians, the book offers a fine introduction to the similarities and differences between British and American library organization and services, education of librarians, and opportunities for advancement as well as differences between American and British English. The enjoyment that Maidment has found in his career shows through clearly. Writers of American books intended to introduce librarianship could profit from a careful reading of this one.—JOE W. KRAUS, ILLINOIS STATE UNIVERSITY LIBRARY, NORMAL

Contemporary African publishing

Publishing in Africa in the Seventies. Proceedings of an International Conference on Publishing and Book Development held at the University of Ife, Ile-Ife, Nigeria, 16-20 December 1973. ed. by Edwina Oluwasanmi & others.

University of Ife Pr. 1975. 377p. index. appendixes. $16.50; pap. $10.50.

Writing. Publishing. Printing. Promotion. Marketing. Those are the main topics, but much also emerges from these anything-but-dull "proceedings" about contemporary African politics, education, economics, and intellectual life. Despite the probably unavoidable emphasis on Anglophone West Africa, especially Nigeria and Ghana, what over 20 editors, authors, booksellers, librarians, teachers, publishers, and printers say regarding both the difficulty and promise of publishing surely applies to nearly the whole continent.

The contributors deal specifically with such problems as illiteracy; exorbitant prices for basic materials and machinery; too few libraries and distribution-outlets; a widespread bias against "reading for pleasure"; insufficient student book-grants; severe foreign-exchange, tariff, and import restrictions; poor transportation; paper shortages; inadequate skills; and continued neo-colonial dependency. Still, however serious and frustrating the problems, they're variously approached with candor, good humor, creativity, and optimism.

Among many highlights: an academic and a librarian make exciting pitches for mass publishing to directly meet popular needs; M. Oduyoye's "Role of Christian publishing houses" remarkably combines common sense and radicalism; S. I. A. Kotei brilliantly examines the cultural and social bases for reading and publishing; the Director of the American University in Cairo Press suggests resurrecting papyrus as a cheap, "in-house" paper source; and the Third Press's Joseph Okpaku forcefully argues for independent, indigenous publishing to break alien domination and nurture a politically alert and necessarily skeptical public.

Heartily recommended not only for Library Science but also Africana and Communications/Book Trade/Publishing collections.—SANFORD BERMAN, HENNEPIN COUNTY LIBRARY, EDINA, MINN.

Book selection analyzed

LUNATI, Rinaldo. Book Selection: Principles and Procedures. trans. by Luciano Marulli of chaps. 2–4 of La Scelta del libro per la formazione e lo sviluppo delle bibliotech.

Scarecrow. 1975. 167p. ISBN 0-8108-0846-3. LC 75-23498. $7.

The principal value of this work lies in the critical review of what has already been written on the subject of book selection. In one long chapter of over 100 pages, Lunati takes us through McColvin, Drury, Ranganathan, Haines, Wilson, Danton, and a number of less well known Anglo-American writers on the subject, capped with recent Italian thought. As though this were not enough, he then dissects the principles espoused by Naudé of the Mazarin Library, Paciaudi (Palatine Library of Parma), and several other early writers who are seldom studied today.

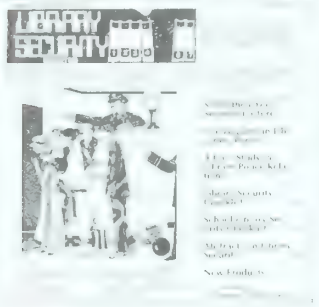
This is no mere condensation, but a lively and provocative critical analysis or running comment, all the more valuable for being done by an Italian scholar raised in an atmosphere far removed from modern library practice. The objectivity is refreshing, although all will not agree with some of his pronouncements as, for example, "lists of the best books should be dismissed as aids in book selection." Index is lacking.—ARTHUR HAMLIN, TEMPLE UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES, PHILADELPHIA

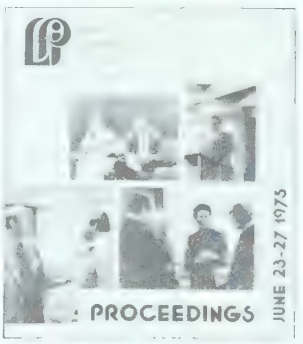
In Brief

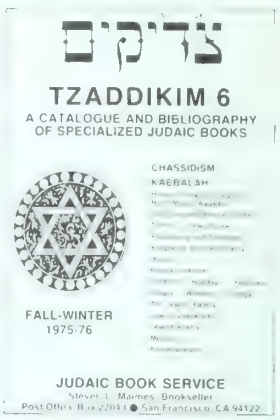
STANDARDS and Planning Guide for Pharmacy Library Service. ed. by Martha Jane Zachert.

Prep. for the Section of Librarians, American Assn. of College of Pharmacy by the Committee on Standards. 1975. 89p. LC 75-30293. pap. members, $4; others, $5.

LJ CHECKLIST







Librarian fare

Fresno librarian cooks banded together to produce a Staff Association Cook Book to raise money for "good works." Recipes are organized in sections, beginning with drinks (first things first), and including soups and salads; casseroles and main dishes; eggs; breads, pancakes and batters; desserts; cookies and candy. Dabblers are asked to notify next of kin before trying the gourmet surprises. The 69-page booklet costs $1 if requested in person or $1.30 by mail from Fresno County Free Library, 2420 Mariposa St., Fresno, Calif. 93721.

Security tips

A checklist for protection of library buildings is included in Library Security Newsletter, No. 2 (March 1975). Subjects covered include protection factors for exterior doors, barriers and fencing, exterior lighting, key control and access restrictions. The 15-page issue will be sent free to librarians. Include a 9" × 12" envelope with 26¢ postage with your request to Library Security Newsletter, Haworth Press, 174 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10010.

Teaching aid

A National Association of Independent Schools publication would be of interest to anyone working with children who do not respond to traditional teaching methods, despite their apparent abilities. The authors of A Teacher's Notebook: Alternatives for Children with Learning Problems polled several hundred independent schools to elicit specific information on what and how schools provide for such children. The resultant book contains descriptions and evaluations of several commercially prepared tests; diagnostic reports on individual children and children working in groups; sample activities for parents working with their children during vacation periods; classroom techniques; notes on how children with learning problems differ from slow learners, and a section on following directions. A bibliography is included in the 130-page publication, which is perforated for a three-ring binder. Send $3 with your request to NAIS, 4 Liberty Square, Boston, Mass. 02109.

Catalog

The 25-page Tzaddikim 6: A Catalogue and Bibliography of Specialized Judaic Books will be sent free to librarians upon request. Write Steven L. Maimes, Judaic Book Service, P. O. Box 22043, San Francicso, Calif. 94122.

Theses list

A Union List of Theses and Dissertations on Microfilm in ten libraries in Northern New York State is available. The list locates 492 master's theses and doctoral dissertations. Copies cost $1 each and may be ordered from North Country Reference and Research Resources Council, 73 Park St., Canton, N.Y. 13617.

Conference proceedings

Proceedings of the Library Planning Institute sponsored by the California State Library in June of 1975 have been published. During the Institute, over 100 librarians, trustees and friends evaluated the report of a study of public library systems by Peat, Marwick & Co., and made recommendations for a new legislative program to finance library development during the next decade in the state. The 222-publication includes speeches, participant comments, working papers and reports prepared for or generated at the Institute. Copies have been distributed to public and academic libraries in California and to library schools and state libraries throughout the country. A limited number of copies is still available, without charge. Send requests to California State Library Public Information Office, Library-Courts Bldg., P. O. Box 2037, Sacramento, Calif. 95809.

Bicentennial PR

The Ferguson Library, Stamford's public library, has available a limited supply of its Bicentennial flier, Make the Ferguson Library Your Bicentennial Resource Center. Send a self-addressed, stamped (13¢) envelope with your request to Diana Statler, The Ferguson Library, 96 Broad St., Stamford, Conn. 06901.

New Jersey histories

Three pamphlets—the first in a proposed series of 26 to be published by the New Jersey Historical Commission—discuss the state's revolutionary experience. In The Press in Revolutionary New Jersey (20p.), author Richard F. Hixson describes the establishment of the first newspapers as instruments of public opinion in the struggle for independence. The cutoff of British map publishers and the need for accurate surveys, as well as American mapmakers and their contributions to war and to American cartography are discussed in The Mapping of New Jersey in the American Revolution (32p.), by John P. Snyder. Morristown: a Crucible of the American Revolution (24p.), by Bruce W. Stewart, focuses especially on the winter encampment of 1779-80, the worst winter of the century, during which the Continental Army survived a smallpox epidemic and two mutinies. The pamphlets, which are illustrated, would be useful to anyone interested in this period but are intended primarily for students. They cost 50¢each (60¢ postpaid) and are accompanied by two teacher's guides for the secondary and elementary schools, which cost $2 each. Send your requests to the Commission at 113 W. State St., Trenton, N.J. 08625. Make checks payable to Treasurer, State of New Jersey.

Foundation Center offerings

Copies of five pamphlets published by The Foundation Center will be furnished free to libraries. They include: The Foundation Center (4p.), which describes the Center's purposes, services and staff; The Foundation Center Collections (2p.), a list of 52 library collections and their addresses; Cumulative Alphabetical and Numerical Listings of Foundation Annual Reports on Film From 1970 through 1974 (32p.); What Makes a Good Proposal?" (8p.), by F. Lee Jacquette and Barbara L. Jacquette; What Will a Foundation Look for When You Submit a Grant Proposal? (8p.), by Robert A. Mayer; and Philanthropy in the United States: History and Structure (48p.), by F. Emerson Andrews. One to five copies of each of these publications may be requested from the Center at 888 Seventh Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Bill Katz, PROFESSOR, SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SCIENCE, STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK, ALBANY

Aviation magazines & annuals

By William McCall, Technical Information Library, Caterpillar Tractor Co., Peoria, Illinois

Sport Flying

1968. Monthly. $15. Ed: Jack Leggatt. Challange Pubs., 7950 Deering Ave., Canoga Park, Calif. 91304. Illus., charts, plans, adv. Aud: Ga, Hs, Sa.

One of the most entertaining and informative publications in the provate pilot category, Sport Flying covers aspects of aviation overlooked by the more firmly established aviation magazines. Special Associations (PRPA, USSPA), amphibian, agriculture, homebuilt, and racing experimental aircraft are featured with excellent layout and photography (color/b&w) including a generous color centerfold. Step-by-step plans concerning homebuilts and vintage aircraft are complemented by articles on soaring and seaplane operations and improvements. Feature articles are written on diverse subjects within the sport aviation community. Histories and first person accounts of special happenings or "airmark" record breakers are enthusiastically presented and are generally well written. Offers the general audience and the serious aviation minded reader a meeting ground that provides the basics and the "inside dope" respectively.

Aviation Annual

1974. Annual. $1.50. Ed: Don Werner. Werner & Werner Corp., 631 Wilshire Blvd., Santa Monica, Calif. 90401. Illus. adv. Aud: Ga, Hs.

Added to the annual aviation magazine cluster is (what else?) Aviation Annual, a perennial child of the editors of Plane and Pilot magazine. Featuring complete coverage of all the new planes of the year, AA also includes first person accounts of interesting events or personages. Safety tips and procedural reruns are provided for the expert and novice alike. Current information on prices, performance, and new improvements on old models are accompanied by b&w photos of the aircraft investigated. Flight testing is conducted by the staff. Lacking information on new avionic improvements and other aircraft besides sport/business birds, AA falls short of the comprehensive showing made by Flying Annual. It is most certainly second in the field and does fulfill its promise concerning new aircraft. Fine for the general audience and those aspiring junior birdmen with the blue of the skies in their eyes.

Air Progress

1940. Monthly. $6. Ed: Richard B. Weeghman. Petersen Publishing Co., 8490 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Illus. adv. Aud: Ga, Sa, Hs.

Air Progress, along with its sister avpub Air Trails, provides a general audience magazine that encompasses aviation in all its facets. It features articles on all types of aircraft, with articles on supportive facilities, air rallies, fly-ins, collegiate meets, air shows, military innovations, FAA enactments, and federal regulations. New design features and analysis of these trends presented in layman readable form are certain plus factors in AP's favor. Color and b&w photography and a sincere effort to evaluate aircraft and avionic equipment, including safety overtones, for the pilot are also positive strokes for Air Progress. A dedicated staff with seemingly unlimited contacts in the aviation world is the foundation fo this variety monthly. AP ranks behind Flying and on a par with Sport Flying for general audiences and reasonably avid private aviation buffs.

Private Pilot

1965. Monthly. $7. Ed: Dennis Shattuck. Macro/Communications Comm. Corp., 291 South La Cienega Blvd., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90211. Illus., charts, adv. Aud: Ga, Sa.

Private Pilot is an attempt to publish a good general private aviation magazine with interest to some of the special groups inherent in flying quarters. PP is similar in construction to Air Progress, generally covering some material (e.g. air rallies) in more detail, but overall not with as comprehensive coverage as the latter. Employing b&w photography it lacks the verve displayed by AP. Articles included are well presented, with topics ranging the world of aeronautical problems, oddities, and note-eye-wells. Rank just below Air Progress on your general audience list.

The Advocate

1970. Biweekly. $9. Ed: John Preston. Liberation Publications, 2121 South El Camino Real, Suite 307, San Mateo, Calif. 94403. Illus. adv. Aud: Ga, Ac. (Subject: Homosexual. Issues examined: Various 1974-75)

Here is the first popular and relatively widely circulated magazine for homosexuals. One may applaud finding it on some newstands, deplore the turn it has taken. It has evolved into a lesser version of the Village Voice for male gays, with a circulation nod, and no more, to the lesbian. The slick 46- to 54-page tabloid is notable for the massive amount of advertising which buries the minimal editorial content. When you find them, the features and columns are acceptable enough because the magazine is professionally edited. The editor claims it "is the largest gay periodical in the country with an ABC circulation over 40,000 and a readership in excess of 100,000." The impression is of a careful marketing effort which has made yesterday's whisper into a profitable shouting match. The Advocate is in step with other popular magazines, but for the intelligent person or the library it is hardly a representative advocate of a cause. Not recommended.—BK

Coldspring Journal

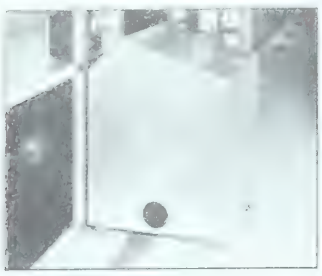
1974. Monthly. $10. Ed: Charles & Pamela Plymell and Joshua Norton. Box 303, Cherry Valley, N.Y. 13320. Illus. Aud: Ac. (Subject: Little magazines. Issues examined: Nos. 1, 6, 7, 1974-75)

Edited by one of the most experienced group of editors in the little magazine world, this is truly "a magazine anthology." Within a typical 80- to 90-page issue are superb graphics and collages, innovative, new and older poets, interviews, fiction essays, and informative letters to the editor. You're just as likely to find an entry here by a high school student as Aram Saroyan or Gerald Malanga. The mixture of talent is amazing. Anyone who thinks little magazines are a special province of the young need only brush up on history, or simply take a look at a typical issue of the Coldspring Journal. The magazine is relatively new, but the spirit is as old as the little press movement. A must for any self respecting library with a meaningful interest in modern writing. (Footnote: Little press publishers or, for that matter, any magazine publisher of small runs should contact the Cherry Valley Press for information on how they use a Xerox 7000 to print their magazine. Apparently it cuts costs, speeds up production.)—BK

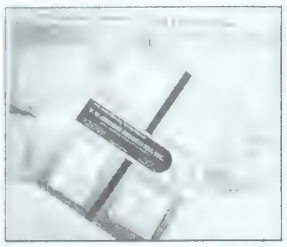
LJ BUYERS' GUIDE

Thomas W. McConkey CHIEF, ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICE, FREE LIBRARY OF PHILADELPHIA

Unless otherwise noted, the products listed in this guide are not recommended by LJ. However, mention here is not an endorsement. Prices are subject to change, and may vary in different geographical areas

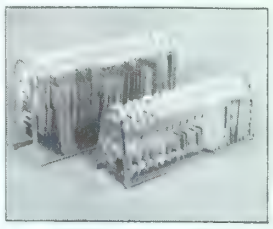


BOOK RETURN TRUCK



DATA FORMS

BOOK BINDER



STORAGE SACKS

Fire-resistant book cart

The Kingsley Fire Deterrent All Metal Book Return Cart is fully enclosed, constructed of heavy-duty aluminum, and rolls flush against the book return opening or return chute. The spring-loaded hinged door is self-closing and freely permits books to pass into the book truck. If burning material is placed in the truck, it should be smothered since its oxygen will be depleted within the truck's metal body.

Books slide down a 30° angle chute to be positioned onto the patented depressible tray, which lowers as loaded and rises when books are removed. A section of the cart is hinged for unloading books and there are two access openings for retrieving library cards. The unit has four ball-bearing wheels, two equipped with front brakes.

Three sizes are available: K-2100-S, approx. 100 books—20″x20″x44″, price $195; K-2100-M, approx. 200 books—30″x30″x44″, price $375; K-2100-L, approx. 350 books—30″x45½″x44″, price $450. Sizes can be modified to meet various heights of book return chutes. For additional protection, a smoke detector or a product combustion detector can be installed. Also the unit can be connected to the building's fire alarm system. Available from Kingsley Library Equipment Co. (Div. of Jackson Co. Mfg.) P.O. Box 2731, Pomona, Calif. 91766. (714) 622-5440.

Personnel forms

Personnel forms designed for use in governmental and private organizations and covering pre-employment selection, personnel administration, morale building, and training are available from V. W. Eimicke Associates. The forms comply with all federal and state laws regarding equal opportunity and with the Fair Credit Reporting Act. To facilitate administration of the library, forms are available for bookkeeping, inventory and inventory control, shipping, receiving, and purchasing, as well as general office work. A free catalog is available from V. W. Eimicke Associates, Inc., Bronxville, N.Y. 10708.

Rebinding system

A system which is particularly suited for the rebinding of paperbacks and should save substantially on rebinding costs has been introduced by General Binding Corp. (GBC). The desk-top components of the Instant ReBind System include a laminator, laminating film, a paper cutter, a GBC Therm-A-Bind 200, and the necessary supplies. Paperback covers are removed, scored, trimmed, and then fed into the laminator, where they are covered on both sides with film. The cover is then replaced on the book, a stick of dry glue (less brittle than that used by most publishers) is inserted in the spine, and the book is placed in the Therm-A-Bind unit. By the application of heat, the adhesive material penetrates the spine and secures the laminated cover. The entire process takes about 30 seconds, and supplies cost about 15¢ per book.

The system may also be used for the preventative prebinding of paperbacks before circulation, in school libraries to bind school annuals, class project reports, etc., and in other libraries for multipage documents and hard cover. Since the GBC laminator laminates one or both sides of materials 9″ wide and any length and will laminate film to one side and paper to the back, applications also include photographs, artwork, maps, and even plant leaves. The system may also be used with theft detection devices. GBC makes a wide range of soft and hard cover binders for use on the Therm-A-Bind. Prices: Therm-A-Bind unit: $895; 9″ laminator, $695 (other models available). Equipment and supplies available at GBC offices in principal cities. From: General Binding Corp., 1101 Skokie Blvd., Northbrook, Ill. 60062. (312) 272-3700.

Multimedia storage

HangUp is a method of storing and displaying a wide variety of multimedia materials. The system consists of different size transparent polyethylene bags with plastic handles which are easily snapped open or shut. Each handle incorporates a hook, enabling the bags to be hung on a rod held up by end supports. The bags can also be hung on a wall bracket.

HangUp's biggest advantage is that it makes possible the storage together by title of various forms of media instead of their being housed in separate cabinets. Filmstrips, cassettes, 7″ and 12″ phonodiscs, super 8 sound cartridges and books of all sizes dealing with a specific subject area can be placed together. Some of the multimedia items, depending upon their size and relationship can be packed in the same bag; others can be placed in separate but adjoining bags. Since the racks which support the bags are made of lightwieght aluminum, a collection of items can be transported to the area where audiovisual materials are needed, creating a portable multimedia center.

HangUp bags come in five different styles ranging in size from 9″ wide x 8″ high (suitable for filmstrips and cassettes) to a 13½″ x 13½″ bag big enough to contain a large book or 12″ LP record. Bag carrying capacities range from 1½ to 4 lbs. Standard book shelving or free standing areas such as desks, counters or tops of map cases provide adequate support for HangUp racks. Those mounted on walls can be attached to almost any type of standard bracket hung from pegboard, wood, metal, or cement.

Price is $24.95 for a set including 50 bags and choice of 12″ or 17″ high rack (30″ long); may be ordered on 30-day approval. Brochure available from Manaco, Georgetown, Conn. 06829. (203) 226-4766.

Scientific, technical, medical, & business books

SCI/TECH & MEDICAL

REFERENCE

American Hospital Assn.
AHA Guide to the Health Care Field. 1975
Directory of Architects for Health Facilities.
Hospital Statistics, 1975

Congressional Quarterly
Washington Information Directory 1976-77. May.

McGraw
Devries, L. French-English Science and Technology Dictionary. 4th ed. May.
Lapedes, D.N. Encyclopedia of Environmental Science. Oct.
1976 Yearbook of Science and Technology. Apr.

Pergamon
Ridge, J. D. Annotated Bibliographies of Mineral Deposits in Africa, Asia, (exclusive of the U.S.S.R.), and Australia. Jan.
Sneddon, I. N. Encyclopaedic Dictionary of Mathematics for Engineers. May.

GENERAL

American Hospital Assn.
Cunningham, R.M., Jr. Governing Hospitals. Jan.
Incani, G. & others. Coordinated Activity Programs for the Aged.

McGraw
Ashley, P.P. You and Your Will. May.
Bloom, B.S. Human Characteristics and School Learning. Apr.
Boffey, P. The Brain Bank of America. May.
Haring, N.G. Teaching Special Children. Jan.
Lin, N. Foundations of Social Research. Feb.
Scanzoni, L. Men, Women, and Change. Jan.
Shaw, M.E. Group Dynamics. Jan.

Pergamon
Allibone, T. E. The Royal Society & Its Dining Clubs. Jan.
Borchardt, D. H. & J. I. Horacek. Librarianship in Australia, New Zealand & Oceania. Feb.
Bugliarello, George & others. The Impact of Noise Pollution. Feb.
Durey, Peter. Staff Management in University & College Libraries. Feb.
Rao, K. K. P. N., ed. Food Consumption and Planning. Feb.

D. Reidel
Holton, G. & W. Blanpied, Eds. Science and Its Public.

AERONAUTICS & ASTRONAUTICS

Aero Pubs.
Airman's Information Manual. Jan.
Burnham, F. Cleared to Land. Jul.
Federal Aviation Regulations. Dec.
Holder, W.G. Convair F-106 "Delta Dart." May.
Holder, W.G. & W.D. Siuru Jr. General Dynamics F-16. Mar.
Jones, L.S. U.S. Fighters. Nov.
Kinert, R. Racing Planes & Air Races. Vol. 12. Apr.
Stevenson, J.P. Grumman F-14 "Tomcat." Dec.
Wagner, W. Reuben. Jun.

Pergamon
Napolitano, L. G. Astronautical Research 1973 & 1974. Feb.

AGRICULTURE & ANIMAL HUSBANDRY

McGraw
Davis, K.P. Land Use. Mar.

Pergamon
Brown, Lester R. & Erik P. Eckholm. By Bread Alone. Jan.
Pinniger, R. Jone's Animal Nursing. May.

ARCHITECTURE & BUILDING

McGraw
Architectural Record Magazine. Great Houses For. . . . Apr.
Curran, J. Drawing Plans for Your Own Home. Jun.
Jones, G.L. How To Prepare Professional Design Brochures. Jun.
Redstone, L.G. The New Downtowns. Mar.
Teets, R. Profitable Management for the Subcontractor. May.
Traister, J.E. Electrical Design for Building Construction. Jun.

Pergamon
Hart, Douglas A. Strategic Planning in London. Mar.
Mohtadi, M. F. Man and His Environment. Vol. 2. Mar.

Structures Pub.
Lytle, R.J. Metric Contruction Handbook. Mar.

ASTRONOMY

Pergamon
Rowman-Robinson, M. Far Infrared Astronomy. Feb.

D. Reidel
Athay, R. G. The Solar Chromosphere and Corona.
Knott, K. & B. Battrick, eds. The Scientific Satellite Programme during the International Magnetospheric Study.
Solid State Astrophysics.
Svestka, Z. Solar Flares.

Springer-Verlag
Neugebuaer, O. A History of Ancient Mathematical Astronomy.

BIOLOGICAL SCIENCES

McGraw
Miller, B.M. Industrial Microbiology. Apr.
Odum, H.T. Energy. Apr.

Oxford Univ. Pr.
Leyton, L. Fluid Behavior in Biological Systems. Oct.

Pergamon
Hochachka, P. W. Biochemistry at Depth. Feb.
Matsuda, R. Morphology & Evolution of the Insect Abdomen. May.
Minkoff, E. C. A Laboratory Guide to Rabbit Anatomy. Jun.
Patton, S. & R. G. Jensen. Biomedical Aspects of Lactation. Feb.

(Continued on p. 682)

Publisher's new titles for the fall season in the fields of science, technology, medicine, and business are listed above. For best use of this list of new books—scan the publisher's advertising, check out the listings, and for more information on any title, look up the publisher's ad in the directory on p. 748.

SPRING, 1976 BOOKS FROM ELSEVIER—NEW YORK

BUSINESS

Technological Substitution: Case Studies in Forecasting Techniques

Edited by Harold A. Linstone and Devendra Sahal

Technological history can be viewed as a series of substitution processes. For example, tanks have been substituted for horses, detergents have been substituted for soaps, and nuclear fuels are being substituted for fossil fuels. This book deals with the techniques which can be used to accurately forecast these substitutions, thus minimizing the risk of the prohibitive cost of error in decision-making by industry, and maximizing the ability of industry to respond to, and satisfy, human needs.

May, 1976 Approx. $16.00, 288 pages
ISBN 0-444-00181-6

Marketing Models and Econometric Research

By Leonard J. Parsons and Randall L. Schultz

This is the first book to use economic research to create models for marketing decisions. It covers market planning and forecasting with particular reference to measuring the sales response to specific advertising campaigns. Marketing managers will find this book significant as a new method of applying scientific research to practical problems. (North Holland Publishing Co.)

April, 1976 Approx. $18.00, 256 pages
ISBN 0-7204-8601-7

Materials Management and Inventory Control Systems

By Richard J. Tersine

Materials management is crucial to running a successful business. Inadequate materials management is a primary cause of business inefficiencies and failures. This work can serve as a text for courses in materials management and inventory control as well as a reference for managers responsible for warehousing, production, purchasing and inventory control. (North Holland Publishing Co.)

June, 1976 Approx. $22.00, 416 pages
ISBN 0-7204-8602-5

LINGUISTICS, LANGUAGES

Conjectures and Refutations in Syntax and Semantics

By Michael K. Brame

This book deals with current and controversial themes in syntax and semantics. The first part deals with generative semantics, delineating the major issues dividing the generative semantics camp and that of the standard theory. The second part considers the (extended) standard theory, focusing attention on the putative rule of Equi-NP Deletion. (North Holland Publishing Co.)

April, 1976 Approx. $16.00, 320 pages
ISBN 0-7204-8604-1

Comparative Romance Grammar II: Proto-Romance Phonology

By Robert A. Hall, Jr.

This book is a presentation of the phonological inventory of Proto-Romance – vowels, diphthongs, consonants, prosodic features – as reconstructed on the basis of comparison of the Romance languages, set forth in over a thousand comparative tables, with nearly five hundred additional sets of correspondences and a discussion of the relation of reconstructed Proto-Romance to Latin and to the earliest Romance developments.

March, 1976 Approx. $20.00, 320 pages
ISBN 0-444-00183-2

Classification and Index of the World's Languages

By C. F. Voegelin and F. M. Voegelin

In summarizing the current state of information on the genetic classifications of all the languages of the world, this unique book discusses relationships of all degrees – from the question of whether different speech forms are dialects of the same language to the most remote relationships for which evidence is so slight as to seem wildly speculative. Alternative classifications are presented and gaps in our knowledge due to insufficient information on the languages in question are pointed out. Linguists and librarians will find this a particularly useful reference.

Summer, 1976 Approx. $37.50, 576 pages
ISBN 0-444-00155-7

ARCHITECTURE AND DESIGN

Architectural Structures - 2nd Edition

By Henry J. Cowan

Written specifically for architects and architectural students, this book covers the fundamental theory of structures and the physical behavior of structures. Numerous problems, appendices, and tables are included. New material includes conversion of American conventional units to metric SI units. Only elementary mathematics is used.

April, 1976 Approx. $18.50, 416 pages
ISBN 0-444-00177-8

Interior Design - 2nd Edition

By Arnold Friedmann, John F. Pile, and Forrest Wilson

The second edition of this popular work includes color illustrations and new topics such as architectural psychology, environmentalism, super graphics, and the office landscape. It offers a bold, original introduction to a visual field set forth in a visual manner, yet it also provides a serious aesthetic and technical discussion of interior design.

April, 1976 — Approx. $17.00, 448 pages
ISBN 0-444-00178-6

SCIENCE AND ENGINEERING

Preliminary Chemical Engineering Plant Design

By William D. Baasel

Highly readable, concise, and authoritative, this book presents a thorough, detailed study of preliminary chemical engineering plant design, from the site selection and writing of a scope through the latest cost estimating techniques. Each basic chapter on a particular stage of design is followed by a case study applying the material in the chapter to a preliminary design of a chemical plant.

February, 1976 — $25.00, 512 pages
ISBN 0-444-00152-2

Microstructural Science, Volume 4

Edited by William Filer, Jon Hoegfeldt, and James L. McCall

The fourth volume in this outstanding series contains the complete proceedings of the eighth Annual International Metallographic Convention, June 29 - July 2, 1975. The volume contains contributions from over 50 metallographers from both industry and the academic world.

May, 1976 — Approx. $35.00, 528 pages
ISBN 0-444-00184-0

Computer-Based Medical Consultations: MYCIN

By Edward H. Shortliffe

This book describes a computer program, termed MYCIN, which is designed to assist doctors with the selection of appropriate therapy for patients with bacterial infections. It describes clinical problems and design considerations, system components, and future applicability of such systems. The program should be of particular interest to doctors, artificial intelligence researchers, and those involved with computers in medical care delivery.

March, 1976 — 260 pages
ISBN 0-444-00180-8 — Paperbound, $ 8.75
ISBN 0-444-00179-4 — Clothbound, $13.50

CURRENT SERIES

The Contemporary Biology Series

General Editors: E.J.W. Barrington, F.R.S. Arthur J. Willis

Established to meet the varying needs of today's undergraduate biology students, the Contemporary Biology Series offers a new and different approach to teaching and learning. Each book in the Series is the work of a leading specialist in a particular branch of the discipline, and each reflects, in concise form, the most useful and up-to-date information available on the topic under consideration.

Geoffrey M. Clarke, Statistics and Experimental Design, 1970, 173 pages, $7.95 (paper)

Kenneth V. Clarke, The Biology of the Arthropoda, 1973, 270 pages, $21.00 (cloth)

Mason E. Hale, Jr., The Biology of Lichens, 2nd Edition, 1975, 181 pages, $8.50 paper; $17.95 cloth

Max Hamburgh, Theories of Differentiation, 1972, 171 pages, $7.95 (paper)

Kenneth R. Lewis and Bernard John, The Organization of Heredity, 1970, 241 pages, $7.95 (paper)

John L. Monteith, Principles of Environmental Physics, 1973, 241 pages, $20.00 (cloth)

Michael A. Sleigh, The Biology of Protozoa, 1973, 256 pages, $12.95 paper; $25.50 cloth

Greta Stevenson, The Biology of Fungi, Bacteria, and Viruses, 1970, 215 pages, $11.00 (cloth)

H. E. Street and Helgi Opik, The Physiology of Flowering Plants, 1970, 271 pages, $11.75 (paper)

E. R. Trueman, The Locomotion of Soft Bodied Animals, 1975, 193 pages, $8.50 (paper)

Hugh Tyndale-Biscoe, The Life of Marsupials, 1973, 254 pages, $18.50 (cloth)

C. P. Whittingham, The Mechanisms of Photosynthesis, 1974, 125 pages, $5.95 (paper)

Bryan L. Williams and Keith Wilson, Principles and Techniques of Practical Biochemistry, 1975, 256 pages, $9.95 paper; $25.00 cloth

Dennis W. Wood, Principles of Animal Physiology, 1974, 329 pages, $11.75 paper; $19.50 cloth

W. B. Yapp, The Life and Organization of Birds, 1970, 256 pages, $7.95 (paper)

52 Vanderbilt Avenue • New York, N.Y. 10017 ELSEVIER

Saunders, D. S. Insect Clocks. Mar.
Threadgold, L. T. The Ultrastructure of the Animal Cell. Apr.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Crane, J. Fiddler Crabs of the World.

D. Reidel
Grene, M. & E. Mendelsohn, eds. Topics in the Philosophy of Physics.

Springer-Verlag
Sybenga, J. Meiotic Configurations.

BOTANICAL SCIENCES

Oxford Univ. Pr.
Henrey, B. British Botanical and Horticultural Literature Before 1800. Dec.

Pergamon
Chapman, V. J. Coastal Vegetation. May.
Sunderland, N. Perspectives in Experimental Biology. Jan.

Springer-Verlag
Zimmermann, M.H. & J.A. Milburn, eds. Transport in Plants 1.

CHEMISTRY & CHEMICAL TECHNOLOGY

McGraw
Jolly, W.L. The Principles of Inorganic Chemistry. Jan.

Pergamon
Brown, H. C. Explorations in the Nonclassical Ion Area. Mar.
Deslongchamps, P. Stereoelectronic Control in the Cleavage of Tetrahedral Intermediates in the Hydrolysis of Esters and Amides. Feb.
Felkin, H. & G. Swierczewski. Activation of Grignard Reagents by Transition Metal Compounds. Feb.
Katz, J. J. & I. Scheft. A Review of Annulation. Feb.
Mazor, L. Analytical Chemistry of Organic Halogen Compounds. Jan.
McLennan, D. J. A Revised Transition State Spectrum for Converted Bimolecular B-Eliminations. Mar.
Ovchinnikov, Y. A. & V. T. Ivanov. Conformational States and Biological Activity of Cyclic Peptides. Jan.
Paquette, L. A. The Renaissance in Cyclooctatetraene Chemistry. Mar.
Pistorius, C. W. F. T. Phase Relations and Structures of Solids at High Pressures. Feb.
Spitsyn, V. I. & J. J. Katz. Chemistry of the Transuranium Elements. Feb.
Stoodley, R. J. Rearrangements of Penicillanic Acid Derivatives. Jan.
Strauss, W. Industrial Gas Cleaning. Jan.

D. Reidel
McQuillin, F. J. Homogeneous Hydrogenation in Organic Chemistry.
Pullman, B., ed. Environmental Effects on Molecular Structure and Properties.

Springer-Verlag
Tsuji, J. Organic Synthesis by Means of Transition Metal Complexes.

COMPUTERS & DATA PROCESSING

Columbia Univ. Pr.
Brier, A. & I. Robinson. Computers and the Social Sciences.
Turn, R. Computers in the 1980's.

McGraw
Lucas, H.C., Jr. The Analysis, Design, and Implementation of Information Systems. Jan.

Pergamon
George, F. H. Precise Models and Theories. Jun.

EARTH SCIENCES

McGraw
Claerbout, J.F. Fundamentals of Geophysical Data Processing. Jan.
Goguel, J. Geothermics. Mar.
Maddox, J. Beyond the Energy Crisis. Aug.

Pergamon
Jenkins, S. H. Water Pollution Research. Jan.
Kraus, E. B. Modelling and Prediction of the Upper Layers of the Ocean. Jun.
Merriam, D. F. Quantitative Techniques for the Analysis of Sediments. Jun.
Merrill, R. B. Sixth Lunar Science Conference. Jan.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Mutch, T.A. & others. The Geology of Mars.

(Continued on p. 686)

OXFORD

British Botanical and Horticultural Literature before 1800
Blanche Henrey
1975 1242 pp. in three volumes: $180.00
32 color plates; 208 illus.

Fluid Behaviour in Biological Systems
Leonard Leyton
1975 252 pp.; 97 illus. $31.25

Society, Stress and Disease
Volume 2: Childhood and Adolescence
Edited by Lennart Levi
1975 576 pp.; 59 illus. $67.50

Handbook of the Birds of India and Pakistan
Together with Those of Bangladesh, Nepal, Sikkim, Bhutan, and Sri Lanka
Volume 10, Flowerpeckers to Buntings
Salim Ali; and S. Dillon Ripley, Smithsonian Institution
1976 280 pp.; 82 maps; 34 figs. 11 color plates $16.50

Electronic and Ionic Impact Phenomena
Second Edition
Volume V: Slow positron and muon collisions—and notes on recent advances
H. S. W. Massey, E. H. S. Burhop, and H. B. Gilbody. (The International Series of Monographs on Physics)
1975 596 pp.; 107 figs. $52.50

Neutron Diffraction
Third Edition
G. E. Bacon. (Monographs on the Physics and Chemistry of Materials)
1975 652 pp.; 377 figs.; 6 plates $73.00

Mechanics of Polymers
R. G. C. Arridge
1975 256 pp.; 94 figs.; 4 plates $21.00

Prices and publication dates are subject to change.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

We salute the AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION 1876–1976

Outstanding Publications in the Sciences

Marijuana and Health Hazards
Methodological Issues in Current Research
by JARED R. TINKLENBERG
1975, 188 pp., $8.50/£4.50

Persons at High Risk of Cancer
An Approach to Cancer Etiology and Control
edited by JOSEPH F. FRAUMENI, JR.
1975, 544 pp., $19.00/£9.90

Biochemistry of Human Cancer
by OSCAR BODANSKY
1975, 635 pp., $39.50/£18.95

Sickle Cell Anemia and Other Hemoglobinopathies
edited by RICHARD D. LEVERE
Proceedings of a Symposium held at the State University of New York, Downstate Medical Center, Brooklyn, New York
1975, 150 pp., $9.95/£4.80

Theoretical Chemistry
Advances and Perspectives/VOLUME 1
edited by HENRY EYRING and DOUGLAS HENDERSON
1975, 240 pp., $19.50/£9.75

Chemical and Biochemical Applications of Lasers
VOLUME 1
edited by C. BRADLEY MOORE
A Volume in the PHYSICAL CHEMISTRY Series
1974, 416 pp., $29.00/£14.15

Second Edition
Chemical Oceanography
VOLUMES 1 and 2
edited by J. P. RILEY and G. SKIRROW
Volume 1/1975, 626 pp., $49.00/£18.50
Volume 2/1975, 668 pp., $51.75/£19.50

Quantum Electronics
A Treatise
VOLUME 1: Nonlinear Optics, Parts A and B
edited by HERBERT RABIN and C. L. TANG Part A/1975, 502 pp., $35.00/£17.50; subscription price, $29.75
Part B/1975, 296 pp., $22.50/£11.25; subscription price, $19.00

Gasdynamic Lasers
AN INTRODUCTION
by JOHN D. ANDERSON, JR.
A Volume in the QUANTUM ELECTRONICS Series
1976, 194 pp., $17.50/£9.10

Macromolecular Physics
VOLUMES 1 and 2
by BERNARD WUNDERLICH
VOLUME 1: Crystal Structure, Morphology, Defects
1973, 568 pp., $39.50/£20.55
VOLUME 2: Crystal Nucleation, Growth, Annealing
1976, 476 pp., $46.50/£24.05

Ninth Edition
Handbook of Mathematical Formulas
by HANS-JOCHEN BARTSCH translation by Herbert Liebscher
1974, 528 pp., $9.50/£4.55

For more information on a specific title or specific field of study, please write to the publisher, attention Promotion Dept.

N.B.: Postage plus 50¢ handling charge on all orders not accompanied by payment.
Prices subject to change without notice.

Academic Press

A Subsidiary of Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, Publishers
111 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK, N.Y. 10003
24-28 OVAL ROAD, LONDON NW1 7DX

LONGMAN INC., new york, n.y.

Longman

IMPENSABLE

longman reference tools
BUSINESS
PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE OF MANAGEMENT, 3RD ED.
E. F. L. Brech
ISBN 0 582 45039 X 1,080 pages appendices, index $39.50
BUSINESS SYSTEMS TECHNIQUES
J. N. Chapple
ISBN 0 582 45066 7 176 pages, illustrated abt. $17.50 Due Summer
INFLATION AND BUSINESS POLICY
David Hussey
ISBN 0 582 45073 X approx. 176 pages, illustrated abt. $17.50 due Fall
SCIENCE
STRASBURGER'S TEXTBOOK OF BOTANY
Translated by P. Bell and D. E. Coombe
ISBN 0 582 44169 2 879 pages abt. $25.00 due Summer
EVOLUTION OF CROP PLANTS
edited by N. W. Simmonds
ISBN 0 582 46678 4 360 pages, illustrated abt. $27.50 due late spring
PERIGLACIAL ENVIRONMENT
by Hugh M. French
ISBN 0 582 48078 7 cloth abt. $22.50
ISBN 0 582 48079 5 paper abt. $12.95 due Summer
TECHNOLOGY
BASIC SHIP THEORY, 2ND EDITION (2 VOLUMES)
by K. J. Rawson and E. C. Tupper
Vol. 1 ISBN 0 582 44523 X 352 pages, illustrated abt. $16.50
Vol. 2 ISBN 0 582 44524 8 304 pages, illustrated abt. $16.50 due Spring

CHURCHILL LIVINGSTONE

Books in MEDICINE

ATLAS OF ANATOMY OF THE HAND

by Johan M. F. Landsmeer

A definitive reference for all whose research or clinical practice demands a thorough grounding in the detailed structure of the hand. Lavishly illustrated with microphotographs of series sections and exquisitely detailed wash drawings—the result of many years' meticulous analysis of hand structure.

ISBN 0 443 01154 0 252 pages $49.50

SYSTEMIC PATHOLOGY, 2ND ED.

edited by William St. Clair Symmers

An extensive revision of the most comprehensive work on special systemic pathology involving the cardiovascular, respiratory, circulatory, digestive, endocrine, urological, skeletal and sensori-neural systems. Contents are divided into four self-indexed volumes. A reference that all departments of pathology and all medical libraries shouldn't do without.

approx. 550 pages per volume — Vol. 1 due Summer 1976; last volume due Spring 1977

WATSON-JONES' FRACTURES AND JOINT INJURIES, 5TH ED.

edited by J. N. Wilson

The long-awaited revival of a classic. This comprehensive working reference provides firm guidance on the management of practically every fracture and joint injury. A must for all hospital and medical libraries; an essential reference for all orthopedists.

L.C. NO. 75-7549 ISBN 0 443 01105 2
approx. 1200 pages illus. Two volumes slipcased — abt. $95.00 due Fall

ALSO FORTHCOMING .... early Winter 1

FAIRBANK AND WYNNE-DAVIES' ATLAS OF THE GENERAL AFFECTIONS OF THE SKELETON

McGraw-Hill Spring 1976

ARCHITECTURE

DRAWING PLANS FOR YOUR OWN HOME (Curran). June. $24.95

GREAT HOUSES FOR... (Architectural Record). April. $16.95

HOW TO PREPARE PROFESSIONAL DESIGN BROCHURES (Jones). June. $16.50

THE NEW DOWNTOWNS (Redstone). April. $21.95

BUSINESS

BUSINESS POLICY, 2/e (Glueck). March. $14.95

CONTRACTS IN PLAIN ENGLISH (Wincor). Published. $9.95

ECONOMICS, 10/e (Samuelson). March. $12.95

HOW TO SUCCEED IN COMPANY POLITICS, 2/e. (Hegarty). June. $11.50

THE HUMAN ECONOMY (Ginzberg). April. $11.00

MANAGEMENT, 6/e (Koontz). Published. $13.95

MANAGEMENT SYSTEMS FOR PROFIT AND GROWTH, 3/e (Neuschel). April. $12.50

THE NEW INDUSTRIAL ORDER (Reid). February. $8.95

THE NEW MANAGEMENT (Gruber). June. $14.95

NEW WAYS OF MANAGING CONFLICT (Likert). April. $12.50

PEOPLE AND PRODUCTIVITY, 3/e (Sutermeister). Published. $10.95

REAL ESTATE LICENSE PREPARATION COURSE FOR THE UNIFORM EXAMINATIONS (Estes). Published. $12.95

RETAILING MANAGEMENT (Redinbaugh). Published. $11.95

EDUCATION

THE DRUG DILEMMA, 2/e (Cohen). Published. $5.95

HUMAN CHARACTERISTICS AND SCHOOL LEARNING (Bloom). April. $8.95

OCCUPATIONAL INFORMATION, 4/e (Hoppock). Published. $12.95

TEACHING SPECIAL CHILDREN (Haring). Published. $12.95

ENGINEERING

AIR POLLUTION CONTROL THEORY (Crawford). March. $23.50

BOILER ROOM QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS, 2/e (Higgins). June. $11.00

ELECTRICAL DESIGN FOR BUILDING CONSTRUCTION (Traister). June. $15.00

ELECTRONIC FUNDAMENTALS (Millman). Published. $13.95

HANDBOOK FOR ELECTRONICS ENGINEERING TECHNICIANS (Kaufman). May. $19.50

HANDBOOK OF HYDRAULICS, 6/e (Brater). June. $24.50

HANDBOOK OF PHYSICAL CALCULATIONS (Tuma). February. $14.95

HEAT TRANSFER, 4/e (Holman). March. $17.50

INDUSTRIAL WASTEWATER MANAGEMENT (Azad). July. $29.50

THE LINEMAN'S AND CABLEMAN'S HANDBOOK, 5/e (Kurtz). March. $24.50

MECHANICS FOR ENGINEERS: STATICS, 3/e (Beer). March. $16.50

MECHANICS FOR ENGINEERS: DYNAMICS, 3/e (Beer). March. $16.50

MECHANICS FOR ENGINEERS: COMBINED EDITION, 3/e (Beer). March. $24.50

PRACTICAL ELECTRICAL WIRING, 10/e (Richter). March. $17.50

PROFITABLE MANAGEMENT FOR THE SUBCONTRACTOR (Teets). May. $16.50

PUMP HANDBOOK (Karassik). May. $34.50

TOOL AND MANUFACTURING ENGINEERS HANDBOOK, 3/e (Society of Manufacturing Engineers). May. $39.50

THE TREATMENT OF INDUSTRIAL WASTES, 2/e (Besselievre). February. $18.95

SCIENCES

THE ANALYSIS, DESIGN, AND IMPLEMENTATION OF INFORMATION SYSTEMS (Lucas). Published. $13.95

THE EKG (Passman). Published. $11.95

ENERGY (Odum). April. $13.50

FUNDAMENTALS OF GEOPHYSICAL DATA PROCESSING (Claerbout). Published. $20.00

FUNDAMENTALS OF OPTICS, 4/e (Jenkins). March. $16.95

GEOTHERMICS (Goguel). March. $13.50

INDUSTRIAL MICROBIOLOGY (Miller). April. $19.00

INTRODUCTION TO OPERATIONS RESEARCH (Gillett). March. $19.00

LAND USE (Davis). March. $14.50

THE PRINCIPLES OF INORGANIC CHEMISTRY (Jolly). Published. $16.00

UNDERSTANDING THE HEART AND ITS DISEASES (Ross). Published. $5.95

SOCIAL SCIENCES

FOUNDATIONS OF SOCIAL RESEARCH (Lin). February. $10.95

GROUP DYNAMICS (Shaw). Published. $13.95

THE MENTALLY RETARDED CHILD, 2/e (Robinson). Published. $14.95

MEN, WOMEN, AND CHANGE (Scanzoni). Published. $12.95

REGULATION (Weiss). Published. $5.95

SPECIAL REFERENCE

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF MYSTERY AND DETECTION (Steinbrunner). April. $19.95

ENCYCLOPEDIA OF THE THIRD REICH (Snyder). April. $24.95

FRENCH-ENGLISH SCIENCE & TECHNOLOGY DICTIONARY, 4/e (DeVries). May. $14.95

LIBERTY'S ROAD (Bradford). April. Vol. One $8.95, Vol. Two $7.95

1976 YEARBOOK OF SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY (McGraw-Hill). April. $29.50

POLITICAL HANDBOOK OF THE WORLD 1976 (Banks). May. $19.95

TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND BOOKS

REPORT OF THE 20TH CENTURY FUND TASK FORCE ON CRIMINAL SENTENCING (20th Century Fund, Inc.). April. $6.95

RIGHTS IN CONFLICT (20th Century Fund, Inc.). March. $6.95

McGraw-Hill Book Company
1221 Avenue of the Americas
New York, New York 10020

ENGINEERING

McGraw
Azad, H.S. Industrial Wastewater Management. Jul.
Beer, F.P. Combined Edition. 3d ed. Mar.
Beer, F.P. Dynamics. 3d ed. Mar.
Beer, F.P. Statics. 3d ed. Mar.
Besselievre, E. The Treatment of Industrial Wastes. 2d ed. Feb.
Brater, E.F. Handbook of Hydraulics. 6th ed. Jun.
Crawford, M. Air Pollution Control Theory. Mar.
Gillett, B.E. Introduction to Operations Research. Mar.
Higgins, A. Boiler Room Questions and Answers. 2d ed. Jun.
Holman, J.P. Heat Transfer. 4th ed. Mar.
Karassik, I. Pump Handbook. May.
Kaufman, M. Handbook for Electronics Engineering Technicians. May.
Kurtz, E.B. The Lineman's and Cableman's Handbook. 5th ed. Mar.
Millman, J. Electronic Fundamentals. Jan.
Richter, H.P. Practical Electrical Wiring. 10th ed. Mar.
Society of Manufacturing Engineers. Tool and Manufacturing Engineers Handbook. 3d ed. May.
Tuma, J. Handbook of Physical Calculations. Feb.

The New World Primates

Adaptive Radiation and the Evolution of Social Behavior, Languages, and Intelligence

Martin Moynihan

This is the first concise book to provide serious coverage of the New World monkeys. Emphasizing natural history, behavior, and ecology, this comparative survey includes recent findings in the field that will be invaluable for ethologists, ecologists, mamologists, and primatologists. ISBN 0-691-08168-9. 47 illus. April. $12.50

The Geology of Mars

Thomas A. Mutch, Raymond E. Arvidson, Kenneth L. Jones, James W. Head III, and R. Stephen Saunders

The eyes of the world will be focused on Mars this year as the U.S. Viking Mission nears the planet for a scheduled landing during the summer. To aid our understanding of the "red planet," this timely book offers a comprehensive photographic survey of Mars and a primer of geological data about the planet. ISBN 0-691-08173-5. 8½ × 11". 100 illus. July. $35.00

A Guide to the Birds of Panama

Robert S. Ridgely • Illustrated by John Gwynne, Jr.

A comprehensive field guide and authoritative checklist to the rich and diverse bird life of Panama. Magnificent four-color illustrations accurately depict almost 650 species, or three-quarters of Panama's entire avifauna. ISBN 0-691-08174-3. 86 illus., 32 in color. April. $15.00

Fiddler Crabs of the World

Ocypodidae: Genus Uca

Jocelyn Crane

"A remarkable achievement. In one monumental work Jocelyn Crane has brought together everything that is known about fiddler crabs and has made a synthesis that will be important to systematists, ecologists, behaviorists, and evolutionists."—J.T. Bonner, Princeton University ISBN 0-691-08102-6. 8½ × 11". 369 photographs, 101 figures. 21 maps (4 in color). $75.00

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS Princeton, New Jersey 08540

Oxford Univ. Pr.
Arridge, R. G. C. Mechanics of Polymers. May.

Pergamon
Baden, F. Worked Examples in Engineering Field Theory. May.
Calder, G. The Principles and Techniques of Engineering Estimating. Apr.
Chen, W. K. Theory and Design of Broadband Matching Networks. May.
Cheung, Y. K. Finite Strip Methods in Structural Analysis. Jan.
Croome, D. J. Noise, Buildings and People. Apr.
Gatland, H. B. Electronic Engineering Applications of Two-Port Networks. Jan.
Hearn, E. J. Mechanics of Materials. Vols. 1 & 2. Jun.
Howatson, A. M. An Introduction to Gas Discharge. 2d ed. Jun.
Jones, I. S. The Effect of Vehicle Characteristics on Road Accidents. May.
Karam, R. A. & K. Z. Morgan. Environmental Impact of Nuclear Power Plants. Feb.
Liebowitz, H. Progress in Fatigue and Fracture. Feb.
Manning, D. Diaster Technology. Apr.
Miller, H. A. Practical Wiring. Vol. 2. Mar.
Nemat-Nasser, S. Mechanics Today. Vol. 3. May
Raudkivi, A. J. Loose Boundary Hydraulics. 2d ed. Mar.
Rozvany, G. I. N. Optical Design of Flexural Systems. Apr.
Salt, B. Movements in Animation. 2 vols. Mar.
Smith, C. B. Efficient Electricity Use. Mar.
Stone, P. A. Building Economy. 2d ed. Jun.
Whitaker, S. Elementary Heat Transfer Analysis. May.

MATHEMATICS & STATISTICS

Pergamon
Kurth, R. Elements of Analytical Dynamics. Feb.

D. Reidel
Harper, W. L. & C. A. Hooker eds. Foundations of Probability Theory, Statistical Inference and Statistical Theories of Science.

Springer-Verlag
Barwise, J. Admissible Sets and Structures.
Fleming, W.H. Deterministic and Stochastic Optimal Control.

METALLURGY & MINING

Pergamon
Carter, G. C. & others. Metallic Shifts in NMR. Jun.
Sarkar, A. D. Wear of Metals. Feb.

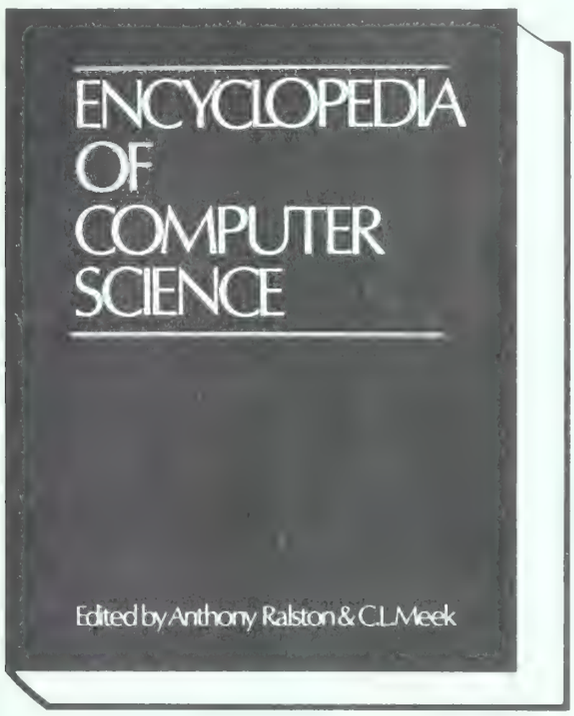
PHYSICS

McGraw
Jenkins, F.A. Fundamentals of Optics. 4th ed. Mar.

(Continued on p. 690)

Coming in May of '76

–the FIRST one-volume Encyclopedia of Computer Science



The comprehensive Encyclopedia of Computer Science will be much more than a useful handbook, dictionary, or glossary—it will be the basic reference for both non-specialists in computer science and for specialists in those areas in which they are not expert. With 208 contributors and over 470 topical areas, the Encyclopedia provides a basic reference to computer science as well as a broad picture of the discipline, its history, and its future directions.

The excellent cross referencing of topical areas and the bibliographic references allow for either a brief view of subjects or a gradation of in-depth examinations.

If you've ever had a question in the computer science area but didn't have a handy source of information, then you'll appreciate this Encyclopedia. And because it has been prepared with an eye on the future, its useful life as a reference can be measured in a sizeable number of years.

Take advantage of the special prepublication discount and save $10.00 by ordering now. The discount price of $50.00 will remain in effect until May at which time it will be priced at $60.00.

May 1976, Illus. (700), est. 1300 pp., P197

Editor: Anthony Ralston; Professor and Chairman, Department of Computer Science, State University of New York at Buffalo and President of AFIPS.

Assistant Editor: Chester L. Meek; Andco, Inc.

Editorial Board: John M. Bennett, University of Sydney. A. S. Douglas, The London School of Economics and Political Science. Nicholas Findler, State University of New York at Buffalo. Aaron Finerman, State University of New York at Stony Brook, Patrick C. Fischer, Pennsylvania State University. C. C. Gotlieb, University of Toronto, John A. N. Lee, Virginia Polytechnic Institute. Saul Rosen, Purdue University. Gerard Salton, Cornell University. Andries Van Dam, Brown University. Eric A. Weiss, Sun Oil Company.

For a copy of our new catalog listing all our new titles, please direct requests to: Advertising Department at the address below.

PETROCELLI/CHARTER

A Division of Mason/Charter Publishers, Inc.

641 Lexington Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10022

PERGAMON NEW BOOK LIST

January - June 1976

Physics & Mathematics

[illegible] Proceedings of the [illegible]

[illegible] Scattering in a Statistically Rough Surface $20.00 approx

[illegible] and Related [illegible] $[illegible]

[illegible] Mechanics 2nd edition

[illegible] Precise Models and Theories $[illegible] approx

MAPLE, J.H.C. Third Topical Conference on Pulsed [illegible]

[illegible] Far Infrared Astronomy $20.00

SNEDDON, I.N. Encyclopaedic Dictionary of Mathe[illegible] [illegible] $85.00 to April 30th

SOLOVIEV, V.G. Theory of Complex Nuclei $35.00

[illegible] Some Statistical Applications in X-Ray Crystallography $20.00 approx

TANNER, B.K. X-Ray Diffraction Topography $15.00 approx

[illegible] Mechanics: Classical and Quantum [illegible]

Social & Behavioral Sciences

BENNETT, J.W. The Ecological Transition: Cultural Anthropology and Human Adaptation $12.00 $7.50 flexi approx

BERNSTEIN, S.J. Computers in Public Administration: An International Perspective $30.00

[illegible] In the Human Interest $10.00 $6.00 flexi

DANZIGER, K. Interpersonal Communication $11.00 $5.50 flexi

DUREY, P. Staff Management in University and College Libraries $8.50

EILON, S., GOLD, B. & SOESAN, J. Applied Product[illegible]ivity Analysis for Industry $15.00 $10.00 flexi

EVERARD, M. An Approach to Teaching Autistic Children [illegible] $4.95 flexi

HALLS, W. Education, Culture and Politics in France $10.00 $6.50 flexi

HEARNDEN, A. Education, Culture and Politics in West Germany $8.95 $5.50 flexi

HERSEN, M. & BARLOW, D.H. Single-Case Experimental Designs: Strategies for Studying Behavior Change $19.50 approx $14.50 approx flexi

IBRAHIM, I.B., SEO, K.K. & VLACHOS, P.G. Readings in Managerial Economics $[illegible] approx $[illegible] approx flexi

JUNIPER, D. Decision-making in Schools and Colleges $20.00 $12.50 flexi

KATZ, P.A. Towards the Elimination of Racism $14.00 $8.75 flexi

KOBAYASHI, T. Society, Schools and Progress in Japan $[illegible]

[illegible] Government and Industry Relationships $[illegible] approx $[illegible] approx flexi

McDANIEL, J.W. Physical Disability and Human Behavior, 2nd Edition $11.00 $6.95 flexi

MAGARO, P.A. The Construction of Madness: Emerging Conceptions and Interventions into the Psychotic Process $11.75 approx $9.00 approx flexi

[illegible] Man and His Environment: Volume 2 Proceedings of the 2nd Banff Conference $20.00 approx

MORRICE, J.K. Crisis Intervention: Studies in Community Care $7.95 $4.50 flexi

PITT, D.C. The Social Dynamics of Development [illegible] approx $[illegible] approx flexi

SEYMANN, M.R. Basic Spanish for Elementary Teachers $10.00

[illegible] The Administrative Waltz $8.00 $4.50 flexi

TWELVETREES, A.C. Community Associations and Centres $[illegible] $[illegible]

Life Sciences

AINSWORTH, W.A. Mechanisms of Speech Recognition $[illegible] $[illegible] flex

[illegible] Transmitters in the Visual Process $16.50

[illegible] Coastal Vegetation, 2nd edition $[illegible] approx $[illegible] approx flex

COLLINS, W.P. & HENMAN, J.F. Radioimmunoassay and Reproductive Endocrinology $8.75

GOLDSTEIN, A. (Ed.) Opiate Narcotics $20.00

HOCHACHKA, P.W. Biochemistry at Depth $20.00

JAMES, V.H.T. & PASQUALINI, J.R. Proceedings of the 4th International Congress on Hormonal Steroids $65.00

KLASTERSKY, J. Infections in Cancer Chemotherapy $15.00

MATSUDA, R. Morphology & Evolution of the Insect Abdomen $35.00

MINKOFF, E.C. A Laboratory Guide to Rabbit Anatomy [illegible]

PATTON, S. & JENSEN, R.G. Biomedical Aspects of Lactation $7.50

PEETERS, H. (Ed.) Protides of the Biological Fluids 23rd Colloquium $75.00

PINNIGER, R. Jones's Animal Nursing, 2nd revised edition $18.00 approx

RAO, K.K.P.N. (Ed.) Food Consumption and Planning $50.00

RICHTER, D. (Ed.) Schizophrenia Today $16.00 approx

SAUNDERS, D.S. Insect Clocks $18.00 approx

SHAH, J.S. Physics of Skeletal Materials $12.50 approx

TUOMISTO, J. & PAASONEN, M. (Gen. Eds.) Proceedings of the 6th International Congress of Pharmacology Volume 1 Receptors and Cellular [illegible] $50.00 Volume 2 Neurotransmission $50.00 Volume 3 Central Nervous System and Behavioural Pharmacology – $50.00 Volume 4 Drug Therapy – $50.00 Volume 5 Clinical Pharmacology – $50.00 Volume 6 Mechanisms of Toxicity and Metabolism $50.00 6 Volume Set $250.00

USDIN, E. et al (Eds.) Catecholamines and Stress $50.00

WEBER, G. Advances in Enzyme Regulation, Volume 14 $60.00 approx

WYBRAN, J. & STAQUET, M.J. (Eds.) Clinical Tumor Immunology $37.00

Multi-disciplinary

ALLIBONE, T.E. The Royal Society and Its Dining Clubs $33.00

Planning

HART, D.A. Strategic Planning in London: The Rise and Fall of the Primary Road Network $10.00

Environmental & Earth Sciences

BROWN, L.R. & ECKHOLM, E.P. By Bread Alone $10.50 $8.50 flexi

JENKINS, S.H. Water Pollution Research (7th International Conference, Paris 1974) $110.00

KRAUSS, E.B. Modelling and Prediction of the Upper Layers of the Ocean $15.00 approx

MERRIAM, D.F. Quantitative Techniques for the Analysis of Sediments $25.00 approx

MERRILL, R.B. Sixth Lunar Science Conference $130.00

RIDGE, J.D. Annotated Bibliographies of Mineral Deposits in Africa, Asia (exclusive of the USSR) and Australasia $35.00

Chemistry & Chemical Engineering

BROWN, H.C. Explorations in the Nonclassical Ion Area $10.00 flexi

DESLONGCHAMPS, P. Stereoelectronic Control in the Cleavage of Tetrahedral Intermediates in the Hydrolysis of Esters and Amides $10.00 flexi

FELKIN, H. & SWIERCZEWSKI, G. Activation of Grignard Reagents by Transition Metal Compounds $10.00 flexi

JUNG, M.E. A Review of Annulation $10.00 flexi

KATZ, J.J. & SHEFT, I. Inorganic & Nuclear Chemistry Herbert H. Hyman Memorial Volume $35.00

LOWE, G. The Cysteine Proteinases $10.00 flexi

McLENNAN, D.J. A Revised Transition State Spectrum for Concerted Bimolecular β-Eliminations $10.00 flexi

OVCHINNIKOV, Yu.A. & IVANOV, V.T. Conformational States and Biological Activity of Cyclic Peptides $10.00 flexi

PAQUETTE, L.A. The Renaissance in Cyclooctatetraene Chemistry $10.00 flexi

PISTORIUS, C.W.F.T. Phase Relations and Structures of Solids at High Pressures $12.50

SAMMES, P.G. Photo-emolisation $10.00 flexi

SPITSYN, V.I. & KATZ, J.J. Chemistry of the Transuranium Elements $35.00

STOODLEY, R.J. Rearrangements of Penicillanic Acid Derivatives $10.00 flexi

STRAUSS, W. Industrial Gas Cleaning, 2nd edition $45.00

Engineering & Materials Science

BADEN FULLER, A.J. Worked Examples in Engineering Field Theory $3.50 approx

CALDER, G. The Principles and Techniques of Engineering Estimating $11.00 $6.00 flexi

CARTER, G.C., BENNETT, L.H. & KAHAN, D.J. Metallic Shifts in NMR $125.00 approx

CHEN, W.K. Theory and Design of Broadband Matching Networks $10.00 approx $6.00 approx flexi

CHEUNG, Y.K. Finite Strip Methods in Structural Analysis $12.50

CROOME, D.J. Noise, Buildings and People $50.00 approx $17.50 approx flexi

HEARN, E.J. Mechanics of Materials Volume 1 – $10.00 approx Volume 2 – $10.00 approx Volumes 1 & 2 combined – $30.00 approx

HOWATSON, A.M. An Introduction to Gas Discharges, 2nd edition $12.00 approx $7.00 approx flexi

KARAM, R.A. & MORGAN, K.Z. Environmental Impact of Nuclear Power Plants $35.00

LIEBOWITZ, H. Progress in Fatigue and Fracture $35.00

MANNING, D. Disaster Technology – An Annotated Bibliography $20.00 approx $15.00 approx flexi

NAPOLITANO, L.G. Astronautical Research 1973 $50.00

NAPOLITANO, L.G. Astronautical Research 1974 $50.00

NEMAT-NASSER, S. Mechanics Today, Volume 3 $30.00 approx

RAUDKIVI, A.J. Loose Boundary Hydraulics, 2nd edition $20.00 approx $13.50 approx flexi

ROZVANY, G.I.N. Optimal Design of Flexural Systems $12.50 approx $7.50 approx flexi

SALT, B. Movements in Animation, 2 volume set $100.00

SARKAR, A.D. Wear of Metals $12.50 approx $6.50 approx flexi

SMITH, C.B. Efficient Electricity Use (A Practical Handbook for an Energy Constrained World) $50.00 $20.00 flexi

STONE, P.A. Building Economy, 2nd edition $15.00 approx $10.00 approx flexi

(All prices are approximate)

AH 833

PERGAMON PRESS Maxwell House, Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523
Headington Hill Hall, Oxford OX3 0BW, England

plenum
the language of science

The Science Report on Cancer Research

Seeds of Destruction

Thomas H. Maugh II and Jean L. Marx
American Association for the Advancement of Science

Now, from the pages of Science comes a report on what is really occurring in cancer research. Two investigative reporters, Tom Maugh and Jean Marx, found out from the experts what they think and what they're doing. And it's all down in language easily understood by nonprofessionals. With candor, they convey what cancer is; what causes it—chemicals, isolated viruses, a tumor; and take a probing look at the disease itself, analyzing how it kills and maims. The reader tours with the authors through laboratories here and abroad discovering past trends and what's happening right now. In exciting detail, all the fascinating paths taken by scientists to determine how chemicals interact with cells, whether the body can create its own defense against cancer, and how doctors are trying new ways of treating cancer patients—all this and more is found in this impressive account. This major book club selection includes an extensive glossary of terms most frequently encountered in discussing cancer. $17.95

All About Climate and Global Survival

The Genesis Strategy

Stephen H. Schneider
National Center for Atmospheric Research
With Lynne E. Mesirow

Directly confronts the impact of climate fluctuation on world agriculture and food supplies.
Critics hail this vital book
"This brilliant book by a young, concerned scientist is just what the world needs . . . A combination of responsible climatology, citizen concern, and relevance to the needs of the people of the world. Relevant, timely, essential . . . buttressed with facts—but not too many for the layman to digest as preparation for action." —Margaret Mead

". . . navigates skilfully between Cassandra and Pollyanna . . . he doesn't hide behind the obscurities of scientific language but writes about the problems that touch us all in plain English we can—and had better—understand." —Harlan Cleveland

". . . one of the most crucial factors in the human predicament . . . written by one of the world's most competent climatologists . . . It is a must for all those interested in what the future holds." —Paul Ehrlich

"An appealing, accessible and significant work . . . proposes practical solutions which, if adopted in time, could greatly ease the world predicament." —Carl Sagan $14.95

Is Medical Science on a Collision Course With the Law?

Genetics and the Law

edited by Aubrey Milunsky, Harvard Medical School and George J. Annas, Boston University School of Law and Medicine

Striking advances in medical technology have brought the legal implications of applied human genetics into sharp focus. In this timely work, a distinguished faculty of scientists, physicians, lawyers, and ethicists explores the major issues in modern genetics which now confront the law. Covers abortion, cloning, prenatal screening, and genetic manipulation. $22.50

How to Find Out About Them and What to Do Next

Grants

Virginia P. White
Graduate School and University Center, CUNY

An invaluable guide prepared by a professional grants administrator, this book explains in an easy-to-read style what the grants business is all about—how to find out where the grants are and how to go about getting your project supported. Enlivened with anecdotes by people responsible for awarding grants, the volume specifies publications, information sources, seminars, and media providing grant information as well as addresses, telephone numbers, and contact points of sponsors. Selected by major book clubs. $19.50

Plenum Publishing Corporation 227 West 17th Street, New York, N.Y. 10011
In United Kingdom: 8 Scrubs Lane, Harlesden, London, NW10 6SE, England
Prices subject to change without notice. Prices slightly higher outside the US.

AMERICAN HOSPITAL ASSOCIATION

DIRECTORY OF ARCHITECTS FOR HEALTH FACILITIES
Lists U.S. architectural firms with special interest in the health care field. Catalog no. 1325. $6.50

COORDINATED ACTIVITY PROGRAMS FOR THE AGED: A HOW-TO-DO-IT MANUAL
By Albert G. Incani, Barry L. Seward, and Jack E. Sigler.
How to organize and run an activity department.Catalog no. 1195. $13

AHA GUIDE TO THE HEALTH CARE FIELD, 1975 EDITION
Presents statistics and other information on 7,250 member hospitals and health-related organizations, agencies, and educational programs. Catalog no. 2475. $20

HOSPITAL STATISTICS, 1975 EDITION
Presents a statistical profile of U.S. member hospitals, explanatory material, and tables. Catalog no. 2447. $7.50

PREPARING HOSPITAL MANAGEMENT FOR LABOR CONTRACT NEGOTIATIONS
By Clinton L. Packer.
For management and labor relations specialists. How to organize documentation and discussion before and during negotiations. Catalog no. 2361. $6

GOVERNING HOSPITALS: TRUSTEES AND THE NEW ACCOUNTABILITIES
By Robert M. Cunningham Jr.
Describes trustees' changing responsibilities in financial management, planning, dealing with pressures from unions and consumer groups, etc. Catalog no. 1665. $7.50

For the AHA Publications Catalog of print and nonprint titles and for order and discount information, write to: AHA Order Fulfillment, Dept. L 840 N. Lake Shore Dr. Chicago, IL 60611

Oxford Univ. Pr.
Bacon, G. E. Neutron Diffraction. 3d ed. Oct.
Massey, H. S. W. & others. Electronic and Ionic Impact Phenomena. Vol. 5. Mar.

Pergamon
Aitchison, I. J. R. & J. E. Paton. Proceedings of the Peierls Symposium. Jun.
Bass, F. G. & M. Fuchs. Wave Scattering on a Statistically Rough Surface. Jun.
Bowler, M. G. Gravitation & Relativity. Apr.
Busch, G. & H. Schade. Lectures on Solid State Physics. May.
Davydov, A. S. Quantum Mechanics. 2d ed. Jun.
Maple, J. H. C. Third Topical Conference on Pulsed High Beta Plasmas. Jun.
Shah, J. S. Physics of Skeletal Materials. Jun.
Soloviev, V. G. Theory of Complex Nuclei. Jun.
Srinivasan, R. & S. Parthasarthy. Some Statistical Applications in X-Ray Crystallography. Jun.
Tanner, B. K. X-Ray Diffraction Topography. Jun.
Taylor, T. T. Mechanics. Feb.

D. Reidel
Kleitz, M. & J. Dupuy, eds. Electrode Processes in Solid State Ionics.
Mittelstaedt, P. Philosophical Problems of Modern Physics.
Quantum Mechanics, Determinism, Causality, and Particles.
Suppes, P., ed. Logic and Probability in Quantum Mechanics.
Szebehely, V. & B. D. Tapley, eds. Long-Time Predictions in Dynamics.

Springer-Verlag
Jauch, J.M. Theory of Photons and Electrons.

ZOOLOGICAL SCIENCES

Oxford Univ. Pr.
Ali, S. & S. D. Ripley. Handbook of the Birds of India and Pakistan. Vol. 10. Feb.

Pergamon
Spencer, Davies P. Perspectives in Experimental Biology. Jan.

Princeton Univ. Pr.
Moynihan, M. The New World Primates.
Ridgely, R.S. A Guide to the Birds of Panama.

Springer-Verlag
Sturkie, P.D., ed. Avian Physiology.

MEDICAL SCIENCES

McGraw
Cohen, S. The Drug Dilemma. 2d ed. Jan.
Passman, J. The EKG. Jan.
Robinson, N.M. The Mentally Retarded Child. 2d ed. Jan.
Ross, J., Jr. Understanding the Heart and Its Diseases. Jan.

(Continued on p. 692)

CAHNERS NEW FOR SPRING

Architecture & Engineering

SIMPLIFIED GUIDE TO CONSTRUCTION MANAGEMENT FOR ARCHITECTS AND ENGINEERS
James E. Gorman, P. E.
Comprehensive treatise brings project and management services into perspective with design.
ISBN 0-8436-0160-4 LC65-34480 6" x 9"
269 pp. $14.95

PERMANENT MAGNET DESIGN AND APPLICATION HANDBOOK
Lester R. Moskowitz
Complete handbook for engineers, purchasing agents.
ISBN 0-8436-1800 8½" x 11"
408 pp. $39.50

BASIC MATHEMATICS
Joseph P. Lerro, Jr.
The popular Design News Magazine math shortcuts in hardcover for engineers, draftsmen, students, others.
ISBN 0-8436-0336-4 (student: 0-8436-0337-2)
8½" x 11" 202 pp. cloth $12.95

Foodservice & Lodging

PLANNING PROFITS IN THE FOOD AND LODGING INDUSTRY
Peter Dukas
Practical approaches to higher profits from one of the field's most creative minds.
ISBN 0-8436-2080-3 (student: 0-8436-2101-X)
6" x 9" 181 pp. cloth $10.95

PRINCIPLES OF FOOD, BEVERAGE, AND LABOR COST CONTROLS FOR HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS
Paul R. Dittmer and Gerald G. Griffin
Theory grounded in practical terms prepares students for the realities of the field.
ISBN 0-8436-2087-0 LC75-37941
257 pp. $12.50

Business

DRUCKER: THE MAN WHO INVENTED THE CORPORATE SOCIETY
John J. Tarrant
First full-scale critical analysis of "Mr. Management's" total impact on society.
ISBN 0-8436-0744-0 LC75-44263 6" x 9"
300 pp. $13.50

HANDBOOK OF MANAGERIAL TACTICS
Richard H. Buskirk
Describes the many operating, negotiating, and timing tactics used by managers daily.
ISBN 0-8436-0745-9 256 pp. $12.95

HANDBOOK OF INTERNATIONAL PURCHASING, Second Edition
Paul H. Combs
Enlarged, updated survey of all of the elements that comprise international purchasing.
ISBN 0-8436-1309-2 LC75-31560 5½" x 8½"
274 pp. $14.95

YOUR CAREER: How to Plan It, Manage It, Change It
Richard H. Buskirk
In-depth discussion of the many career decisions that face both the seasoned pro and the beginner.
ISBN 0-8436-0740-8 LC75-40273 6" x 9"
234 pp. $14.50

For a complete catalog of Cahners professional and technical books, write to:

CAHNERS BOOKS INTERNATIONAL
221 Columbus Ave.
Boston, Ma. 02116
617-536-7780

New Books

Astrophysics and Space Science Library

53. The Solar Chromosphere and Corona
Quiet Sun
by R. Grant Athay
1976, xii + 504 pp. Cloth Dfl. 150.– /US $59.00

55. Solid State Astrophysics
Proceedings of a Symposium on Solid State Astrophysics held at the University College, Cardiff, July 1974 edited by Nalin Chandra Wickramasinghe and D. J. Morgan
1976, xii + 302 pp. Cloth Dfl. 95.– / US $37.00

57. The Scientific Satellite Programme during the International Magnetospheric Study
Proceedings of the 10th ESLAB Symposium held at Vienna, Austria, 10-13 June 1975
edited by K. Knott and B. Battrick
1976, xv + 464 pp. Cloth Dfl. 110.– / US $39.50

Boston Studies in the Philosophy of Science

18. Philosophical Problems of Modern Physics
by Peter Mittelstaedt
1976, ix + 207 pp. Cloth Dfl. 50.– / US $18.50
Paper Dfl. 33.– / US $11.00

27. Topics in the Philosophy of Biology
edited by Marjorie Grene and Everett Mendelsohn
1976, xiii + 454 pp. Cloth Dfl. 110.– / US $39.50
Paper Dfl. 55.– / US $19.50

33. Science and its Public: The Changing Relationship
edited by Gerald Holton and William Blanpied
1976, xxv + 288 pp. Cloth Dfl. 70.– / US $26.00
Paper Dfl. 33.– / US $11.00

43. Language in Focus: Foundations, Methods and Systems
edited by Asa Kasher
1976, 679 pp. Cloth Dfl. 165.– / US $64.00
Paper Dfl. 85.– / US $29.00

Geophysics and Astrophysics Monographs

8. Solar Flares
by Zdeněk Švestka
1976, xv + 273 pp. Cloth Dfl. 115.– / US $39.50
Paper Dfl. 60.– / US $23.00

Homogeneous Catalysis in Organic and Inorganic Chemistry

1. Homogeneous Hydrogenation in Organic Chemistry
by F. J. McQuillin
1976, viii + 133 pp Cloth Dfl. 50.– / US $19.50

International Studies Series in Economics and Econometrics

8. Economic Planning Studies; Ragnar Frisch's Memorial Essays
A Nobel Prize in Economics Contribution edited by Frank Long
1976, xv + 200 pp. Cloth Dfl. 58.– / US $19.50

The Jerusalem Symposia on Quantum Chemistry and Biochemistry

8. Environmental Effects on Molecular Structure and Properties
edited by Bernard Pullman
1976, xi + 588 pp Cloth Dfl. 195.– / US $75.00

Mathematical Physics and Applied Mathematics

1. Quantum Mechanics, Determinism, Causality, and Particles
An International Collection of Contributions in Honour of Louis de Broglie on the Occasion of the Jubilee of his Celebrated Thesis edited by M. Flato, Z. Maric, A. Milojevic, D. Sternheimer and J. P. Vigier
1976, x + 250 pp. Cloth Dfl. 80.– / US $29.00

NATO Advanced Study Institutes Series C. Mathematical and Physical Sciences

23. Renormalization Theory
edited by G. Velo and A. S. Wightman
1976, vii + 482 pp. Cloth Dfl. 110.– / US $39.50

25. Electrode Processes in Solid State Ionics
edited by M. Kleitz and J. Dupuy
1976, xiv + 466 pp. Cloth Dfl. 100.– / US $39.50

26. Long-Time Predictions in Dynamics
edited by V. Szebehely and B. D. Tapley
1976, xv + 358 pp. Cloth Dfl. 85.– / US $33.00

Sovietica

36. Marxism and Religion in Eastern Europe
Papers presented at the Banff International Slavic Conference, September 4-7, 1974 edited by Richard T. De George and James P. Scanlan
1976, xvi + 181 pp. Cloth Dfl. 70.– / US $27.00

Synthese Library

72. Essays on Explanation and Understanding
Studies in the Foundations of Humanities and Social Sciences edited by Juha Manninen and Raimo Tuomela
1976, vii + 440 pp. Cloth Dfl. 145.– / US $56.00

78. Logic and Probability in Quantum Mechanics
edited by Patrick Suppes
1976, xii + 521 pp. Cloth Dfl. 110.– / US $39.50

81. Can Theories be Refuted?
Essays on the Duhem-Quine Thesis
edited by Sandra G. Harding
1976, xxi + 318 pp. Cloth Dfl. 110.– / US $39.50
Paper Dfl. 48.– / US $18.00

93. Local Induction
edited by Radu J. Bogdan
1976, xiv + 340 pp. Cloth Dfl. 110.– / US $39.50

94. Understanding and Prediction
Essays in the Methodology of Social and Behavioral Sciences
by Stefan Nowak
1976, xix + 524 pp. Cloth Dfl. 150.– / US $60

Vienna Circle Collection

3. Ernst Mach: Knowledge and Error
Sketches on the Psychology of Enquiry
Erkenntnis und Irrtum, Leipzig, 1905
1976, xxxviii + 393 pp. Cloth Dfl. 135.– / US $52.00
Paper Dfl. 75.– / US $29.00

Western Ontario Series

6. Foundations of Probability Theory, Statistical Inference and Statistical Theories of Science
Proceedings of an International Colloquium, The University of Western Ontario, May 1973
edited by W. L. Harper and C. A. Hooker

1976, xxxvi + 1004 pp set of 3 volumes Cloth Dfl. 280.–/US $105.00
Paper Dfl. 150.–/US $ 60.00

All Reidel series are available on continuation order

D. Reidel Publishing Company

P.O. Box 17, Dordrecht-Holland
Lincoln Building 160 Old Derby Street, Hingham, MA 02043 - U.S.A.

Springer-Verlag
New Series New York Heidelberg Berlin

Biology

Encyclopedia of Plant Physiology/New Series
Vol. 1: Transport in Plants 1: Phloem Transport
Edited by M. H. Zimmermann, Harvard University; and J. A. Milburn, University of Glasgow, Scotland
1975. xix, 535p. 93 illus. cloth $64.80 Sub. price $51.90 ISBN 0-387-07314-0

Springer Series in Life Sciences
Avian Physiology (3rd edition)
Edited by P. D. Sturkie, Rutgers University, New Brunswick
1976. approx. 448p. 106 illus. cloth $24.00 (tent.) ISBN 0-387-07305-1

Monographs on Theoretical and Applied Genetics
Vol. 1: Meiotic Configurations
By J. Sybenga, Department of Genetics of the Agricultural University, Wageningen, The Netherlands
1975. x, 251p. 65 illus. cloth $27.90 ISBN 0-387-07347-7

Chemistry

Reactivity and Structure/Concepts in Organic Chemistry
Vol. 1: Organic Synthesis by Means of Transition Metal Complexes: A Systematic Approach
By J. Tsuji, Tokyo Institute of Technology, Japan
1975. ix, 199p. cloth $27.90 ISBN 0-387-07227-6

Mathematics

Applications of Mathematics
Vol. 1: Deterministic and Stochastic Optimal Control
By W. H. Fleming, Brown University; and R. W. Rishel, University of Kentucky
1975. ix, 222p. 4 illus. cloth $24.80 ISBN 0-387-90155-8

Perspectives in Mathematical Logic
Admissible Sets and Structures
By J. Barwise, Department of Mathematics, University of Wisconsin
1975. xiv, 394p. 22 illus. cloth $29.60 ISBN 0-387-07451-1

Studies in the History of Mathematics and Physical Sciences
Vol. 1: A History of Ancient Mathematical Astronomy
(In three parts, not sold separately)
By O. Neugebauer, Brown University
1975. xxxii, 1456p. 619 illus. 9 plates. 1 foldout. cloth $124.70
Sub. price $99.80 ISBN 0-387-06995-X

Medicine

Comprehensive Manuals of Surgical Specialties
Manual of Endocrine Surgery
By A. J. Edis, Mayo Clinic; L. Ayala, Caracas, Venezuela; and R. H. Egdahl, Boston University Medical Center
1975. xiii, 274p. 266 figs. 242 color plates. cloth $38.50
Sub. price $31.00 ISBN 0-387-07064-8

Engineering in Medicine
Vol. 1: Advances in Pacemaker Technology
Edited by M. Schaldach, Central Institute for Biomedical Technology of the Friedrich Alexander University of Erlangen, Nürnberg, West Germany; and S. Furman, Montefiore Hospital and Medical Center, New York
1975. xvi, 554p. 307 illus. 65 tables. cloth $25.00 ISBN 0-387-07360-4

Physics

Texts and Monographs in Physics
Theory of Photons and Electrons (2nd expanded edition)
By J. M. Jauch, deceased, formerly University of Geneva, Switzerland; and F. Rohrlich, Syracuse University
1976. 544p. 55 illus. cloth $16.80 ISBN 0-387-07295-0

Inquire about the Springer-Verlag Approval Plan for New Series. The bimonthly Springer-Verlag publication News/Previews can be obtained by contacting Springer-Verlag New York. Prices subject to change without notice.

Springer-Verlag New York Inc.
175 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10010 (212) 673-2660

New and Forthcoming Technical Books from TAB BOOKS

Blue Ridge Summit, Pa. 17214 • Telephone (717) 794-2191

Send for our Catalog describing over 400 current technical books. Ask about our ON-APPROVAL Library Standing Order Plan.

Broadcasting & Advertising

MUSIC SCORING FOR TV & MOTION PICTURES, by Marlin Skiles. Shows how to develop music scores, and integrate music into the production. Also covers the duties/functions of the music director, and explains copyrights, performing rights contracts, licenses, cue sheets, union relations, and the composer-publisher relationship. 266 pps., 166 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6779-2 Hardbound $12.95

DESIGNING & MAINTAINING THE CATV & SMALL TV STUDIO—2nd Ed. by Kenneth Knecht. Completely updated and detailed second edition on the installation and maintenance of production facilities for CATV, CCTV, ITV, and small broadcast TV studios. 288 pps.
ISBN 0-8306-6815-2 Hardbound $12.95

JOURNALIST'S NOTEBOOK OF LIVE RADIO-TV NEWS, by Philip O. Keirstead. Fully discusses all phases of this exciting, up-to-the-minute journalistic form, from the techniques of gathering, writing, and broadcasting live news, to the laws relating to journalism, documentaries, and editorials. 252 pps. 29 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6819-5 Hardbound $12.95

MY FIRST 65 YEARS IN ADVERTISING, by Maxwell Sackheim, Copywriter's Hall of Fame. The dean of direct-mail advertising tells how to attract attention, create conviction, get action, write a good ad and a selling headline—how to be successful in advertising. 210 pps.
ISBN 8306-5816-5 Paperback $5.95 Hardbound $9.95

HANDBOOK OF MULTICHANNEL RECORDING, by F. Alton Everest. An up-to-the minute how-to guide with all the answers for laymen and professionals who want to make quality recordings of musical groups. 322 pps. 196 ill.
ISBN 8306-5781-9 Paperback $7.95 Hardbound $10.95

THE MINI-DOCUMENTARY—Serializing TV News, by Stanley Field. A thorough course on the subject. Draws on the combined talent and experience of a host of mini-doc producers. Contains many actual scripts, most of which were award winners. 252 pps. 28 ill.
ISBN 8306-5797-5 Hardbound $12.95

HOW TO PREPARE A PRODUCTION BUDGET FOR FILM & VIDEO TAPE—2nd Ed., by Sylvia Costa. Completely updated 2nd Edition covers every aspect of film and videotape production budget planning, estimating, etc., from a TV commercial to a feature length film. 196 pps.
ISBN 8306-5845-9 Hardbound $12.95

Electronics & Computer Technology

MODERN GUIDE TO DIGITAL LOGIC: Processors, Memories and Interfaces, by United Technical Publications. A truly modern guide with up to date information on the most advanced digital logic circuits, including Schottky TTL—high-speed ECL—high noise-immunity logic—CMOS logic—MICROPROCESSORS—bipolar and MOS memory systems! Unique in that it illustrates how to design and interface logic and memory systems, using the latest techniques and digital ICs. 294 pps. 222 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6709-1 Paperback $6.95 Hardbound $9.95

MODERN ELECTRONICS MATH, by Martin Clifford. A "living math" course for anyone who knows how to read and who understands the simple numbers 0 through 9! It's an excellent self-teaching course or classroom text with many example problems, problem review series of questions at the end of each Chapter, and answers in the back. 602 pps. 424 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6655-9 Paperback $9.95 Hardbound $12.95

OP AMP CIRCUIT DESIGN & APPLICATIONS, by Joe Carr. A practical handbook on operational amplifiers, offering scores of circuit applications and projects. Explains how op amps work, how circuits associated with op amps work, and provides the insight needed to design op amps for everyone from hobbyist to engineer. 280 pps. 239 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6787-3 Paperback $6.95 Hardbound $9.95

BUILD-IT BOOK OF MINIATURE TEST & MEASUREMENT INSTRUMENTS, by Robert Haviland. Everyone involved with electronics will want this book, which shows how to design, build and calibrate a wide variety of miniaturized measuring equipment. It gradually goes from simple to complex instruments to develop skill and measurement expertise. 238 pps. 151 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6792-X Paperback $4.95 Hardbound $7.95

SWITCHING REGULATORS & POWER SUPPLIES WITH PRACTICAL INVERTERS & CONVERTERS, by Irving Gottlieb. Tells how to design and build modern regulators and converters for any size, any application—to save energy, space and money. 252 pps. 128 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6828-4 Paperback $6.95 Hardbound $9.95

MICROELECTRONICS, by Clayton Hallmark. A thorough introduction to the extremely compact world of microelectronics for hobbyists, technicians, and students. Explains and illustrates how various microelectronics components are made, how they work, and how they are combined to form practical devices. Includes many projects and demos. 266 pps. 248 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6794-6 Paperback $5.95 Hardbound $8.95

TV SCHEMATICS: How to Read Between the Lines, by Art Margolis. Here are valuable, time and money saving tips that unlock the secrets hidden in TV schematics. Shows technicians and do-it-yourselfers how to really put available servicing data to work, and unravels the meaning of component symbols, diagrams, charts, lists, numbers, and tests. 252 pps.
ISBN 0-8306-6738-5 Paperback $5.95 Hardbound $8.95

TROUBLESHOOTING WITH THE DUAL-TRACE SCOPE, by Robert Goodman. A dual-trace triggered-sweep oscilloscope enables a technician to actually see what is happening at two critical points in a circuit within precise time intervals. This text thoroughly explains how to put this versatile, modern instrument to work. 224 pps.
ISBN 0-8306-6772-5 Paperback $5.95 Hardbound $8.95

IMPEDANCE, by Rufus Turner. Perhaps the clearest explanation ever published of the complex subject of impedance—a property of all AC circuits and many electrical devices. Explains it in a way that anyone with a basic knowledge of electricity can understand. 196 pps. 90 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6829-2 Paperback $5.95 Hardbound $8.95

AVIATION ELECTRONICS HANDBOOK, by Edward Safford. A complete guide to avionics equipment, for those using it (pilots) or servicing it (technicians). Covers all types of planes—private, commercial, and military (including electronic countermeasures). 406 pps. 227 ill.
ISN 8306-5631-6 Paperback $8.95 Hardbound $11.95

DIGITAL/LOGIC ELECTRONICS HANDBOOK, by Bill Hunter. Teaches the newest of the new—digital electronics, plus number systems, logic, and Boolean algebra. Includes circuits for modern projects like calculators, digital clocks and thermometers, etc. 308 pps. 226 ill.
ISBN 8306-5774-6 Paperback $6.95 Hardbound $9.95

MASTER HANDBOOK OF 1001 PRACTICAL ELECTRONIC CIRCUITS, by Ken W. Sessions. A comprehensive collection of 1001 integrated circuit and transistor circuits with all the data needed to put the circuits to work. 602 pps.
ISBN 8306-5800-9 Paperback $9.95 Hardbound $12.95

ELECTRONIC CONVERSIONS, SYMBOLS & FORMULAS, by Rufus Turner. 3 books in 1—a handbook containing hundreds of the most used electronics formulas—a complete dictionary of electronics symbols—and a collection of conversion factors that shows how to convert anything to anything. 224 pps., 46 ill.
ISBN 8306-5750-9 Paperback $4.95 Hardbound $8.95

MICROPROCESSOR/MICROPROGRAMING HANDBOOK, by Brice Ward. All about understanding and using the newest ultraminiature electronic brains, including programing them plus computer arithmetic and Boolean algebra. 294 pps., 226 ill.
ISBN 8306-5785-4 Paperback $6.95 Hardbound $9.95

INTRODUCTION TO MEDICAL ELECTRONICS—For Electronics & Medical Personnel—2nd Ed., by Burton Klein. Updated edition of what has become the standard text for those in the bioelectronics field. 320 pps. 126 ill.
ISBN 8306-5830-0 Paperback $7.95 Hardbound $9.95

Audio, Hi-Fi & Communications

CB RADIO SCHEMATIC/SERVICING MANUAL—Vol. 1, by TAB Editorial Staff. Complete service and troubleshooting data for Kris, Browning, Hy Gain, and Penney's citizen's band transceivers produced from 1970—1975. 200 pps.
ISBN 0-8306-6826-8 Paperback $5.95 Hardbound $8.95

CB RADIO SCHEMATIC/SERVICING MANUAL—Vol. 2, by TAB Editorial Staff. Complete service and troubleshooting data for Pearce-Simpson, Unimetrics, Teaberry, and Siltronix citizen's band transceivers produced from 1970—1975. 200 pps.
ISBN 0-8306-6854-3 Paperback $5.95 Hardbound $8.95

CB RADIO SCHEMATIC/SERVICING MANUAL—Vol. 3, by TAB Editorial Staff. Complete service and troubleshooting data for Johnson, Sonar, SBE Linear, Royce citizen's band transceivers produced from 1970—1975. 200 pps.
ISBN 0-8306-6858-6 Paperback $5.95 Hardbound $8.95

CB RADIO OPERATOR'S GUIDE—2nd Ed., by Robert Brown & Paul Dorweiler. New 2nd Edition tells the reader everything he needs to know about this fast growing hobby. Includes complete FCC rules & regulations. 256 pps. 139 ill.
ISBN 8306-5799-1 Paperback $5.95 Hardbound $8.95

THE COMPLETE FM 2-WAY RADIO HANDBOOK, by Clayton L. Hallmark. Complete "from the bottom up" coverage on all commercial and amateur FM transceivers. 294 pps., 111 illus.
ISBN 8306-4735-X Paperback $6.95 Hardbound $9.95

Automotive

VEGA, by Paul Dempsey. This GIANT book includes literally everything a Vega owner (or any working mechanic) needs to know to keep his car in "mint condition"! Tells how to repair problems in every system, and corrects errors in the factory manuals. 350 pps. 265 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6849-7 Paperback $5.95 Hardbound $8.95

HOW TO REPAIR DIESEL ENGINES, by Paul Dempsey. A complete training course in diesel engine repair. Covers automotive, marine, stationary, tractors, farm equipment and standby power units up to 300 hp. 308 pps. 236 ill.
ISBN 8306-5817-9 Paperback $5.95 Hardbound $9.95

CUSTOMIZING YOUR VAN, by Alan Girdler. Shows how to convert a van into a camper, cruiser or surfer. Step-by-step photos cover insulation, paneling, carpeting, dividers, portholes, roof vents, beds, kitchens, showers, painting, working metal, etc. 192 pps., 150 ill.
ISBN 8306-5782-7 Paperback $3.95 Hardbound $6.95

STEP-BY-STEP GUIDE TO ENGINE MAINTENANCE/REPAIR: THE CHRYSLER FAMILY, by Herschel and Ray Whittington. Covers Plymouth, Chrysler, Valiant, Dodge, Imperial—every Chrysler-built engine from 1960 to 1976! Includes all three versions of the slant-six, A-and B-block V-8's, and the hemi. 256 pps. 195 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6848-9 Paperback $5.95 Hardbound $8.95

STEP-BY-STEP GUIDE TO BRAKE SERVICING, by Herschel & Ray Whittington. Rebuild/repair instructions show how to repair brake systems—both drum and disc types—on all American-made cars. 238 pps., 248 ill.
ISBN 8306-5818-1 Paperback $4.95 Hardbound $7.95

Hobby, Experimenter & Do-It-Yourself

PRACTICAL HOME CONSTRUCTION/CARPENTRY HANDBOOK. A three-in-one handbook that shows how to pick the wood, construct the house from the foundation up, and put on all the professional finishing touches. Includes designs and building plans for 11 proven house ideas. 448 pps. 180 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6900-0 Paperback $5.95 Hardbound $11.95

CONCRETE & MASONRY. Answers almost any question one could possibly ask about concrete and masonry, including brick and block construction, tile masonry, reinforced-concrete construction, etc. 392 pps. 213 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6902-7 Paperback $5.95 Hardbound $10.95

BUILD YOUR OWN WORKING ROBOT, by David Heiserman. Buster is the working robot anyone can build. He has many human characteristics, can take care of his own routine needs for survival (even "feed" himself by plugging himself in for a battery charge), can respond in both loving and menacing ways to certain external stimuli, and can even learn to run a maze and play a simple game of chinese checkers! Following the author's step-by-step instructions, Buster can be built in stages, each adding more "life". All parts are readily available at any electronics store. 238 pps. 83 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6841-1 Paperback $5.95 Hardbound $8.95

RC MODELER'S HANDBOOK OF GLIDERS & SAILPLANES, by George Siposs. A thorough, complete, and up to date introduction to the thrilling art of radio control—no knowledge of electronics necessary to put this book to use. Describes elementary aerodynamics, examines construction techniques, and covers flying techniques. 196 pps. 143 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6747-4 Paperback $4.95 Hardbound $7.95

NUMBERS: Shortcuts & Pastimes, by Jack Gilbert. A practical, useful book for people who have trouble with math! Tells how to calculate with confidence—how to be first with the right answer. Includes shortcuts for mental and pencil and paper calculations, checking shortcuts, easy application of logarithms and trig functions, and parlor tricks and puzzles with numbers. 294 pps. 80 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6675-3 Paperback $6.95 Hardbound $9.95

HOW TO SUBCONTRACT YOUR HOUSE: Building/Remodeling, by Lewis Blustin. Shows how to save up to 50% of the cost of building or remodeling. Thoroughly discusses all aspects including licenses, permits, inspections, getting a loan, how to get discounts on materials, insurance, taxes, coordinating construction, and professional tips. 196 pps. 63 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6744-X Paperback $4.95 Hardbound $7.95

CREATIVE CROCHETING, by Diane Zuckerman. A self-teaching guide for would-be crocheters who have had difficulty in learning the craft from instruction books or teachers, and for the skilled who want to create and express their own ideas. The author has 50 years of practice, and has taught the craft to thousands—even to handicapped people. Literally includes everything—from basic stitches to making sweaters, coats and dresses. 192 pps. 170 ill.
ISBN 0-8306-6866-7 Paperback $4.95 Hardbound $8.95

CENTRAL HEATING & AIR CONDITIONING REPAIR GUIDE, by Bill & Jim Price. All the data needed to install, maintain, troubleshoot and repair any central heating/cooling system—oil, gas, or electric—for business or home. 320 pps. 285 ill.
ISBN 8306-5820-3 Paperback $6.95 Hardbound $9.95

THE COMPLETE HANDBOOK OF MODEL RAILROADING, by James Buehner. Literally includes everything on the subject—planning, construction, operation, maintenance, repair, landscaping, electrical/electronic wiring, building from kits or scratch, plus a dictionary of railroad terms. 350 pps. 238 ill.
ISBN 8306-5786-X Paperback $6.95 Hardbound $9.95

MOSFET CIRCUITS GUIDEBOOK—With 100 Tested Projects, by Rufus Turner. An excellent learn-by-building text. Contains projects to suit every need, all projects use a single workhorse MOSFET. 196 pps. 104 ill.
ISBN 8306-5796-7 Paperback $4.95 Hardbound $7.95

ELECTRONIC MUSIC CIRCUIT GUIDEBOOK, by Brice Ward. The most complete book on music synthesis and how to build electronic pianos, organs, rhythm repeaters, etc. 224 pps. 180 ill.
ISBN 8306-5743-6 Paperback $6.95 Hardbound $9.95

21 SIMPLE TRANSISTOR RADIOS YOU CAN BUILD—From Crystal Sets To Superhets, by R. H. Warring. Painless introduction to electronics. Tells how radios work and shows how to build 21 different kinds. For beginners. 140 pps. 122 ill.
ISBN 8306-5790-8 Paperback $3.95 Hardbound $6.95

6 from McGraw-Hill named among LJ's "Best Business and Sci-Tech Books of '75!"

(1) YOU AND YOUR WILL
The Planning and Management of Your Estate
by Paul P. Ashley 252 pp.
Here's what every property owner should know about changes of ownership due to death. In language the layperson can readily understand, the author analyzes the primary factors involved in ensuring an equitable and problem-free resolution of property rights. Not intended as a do-it-yourself manual. Rather, a practical guide to finding and making the most of good professional counsel.
1975 ISBN: 0-07-002407-3 LC 74-28262
$10.50

(2) THE BRAIN BANK OF AMERICA
An Inquiry into the Politics of Science
By Philip Boffey
Introduction by Ralph Nader
An exposé documenting the influences of corporate, political, and other vested interests on the National Academy of Science. Tells why the Academy has been criticized for operating as a virtual puppet of these interests and why many prominent scientists and intellectuals charge it with secrecy, deception, and political collusion. Timely and important.
1975 ISBN: 0-07-006368-0 LC 74-23842
$10.00

(3) McGRAW-HILL ENCYCLOPEDIA OF ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE
By the Staff of the McGraw-Hill Encyclopedia of Science and Technology, Editor-in-Chief, Daniel N. Lapedes 754 pp., over 500 illus.
For the concerned general public as well as for scientists and technologists. Some 300 articles provide information on the environment from such areas as ecology, conservation, oceanography, soil, mining, civil engineering, meteorology and climatology. A comprehensive and invaluable reference. Cross-referenced and indexed.
1974 ISBN: 0-07-045260-1 LC 74-13065
$24.50

(4) PERSONNEL INTERVIEWING: Theory and Practice, 2nd Ed.
By Felix M. Lopez 372 pp.
A step-by-step guide to personnel interviewing, evaluation, selection, and management techniques. The author's methods were developed through years of experimentation and research and have saved numerous companies thousands of dollars by explaining how to find, develop, and get the most out of competent personnel.
1975 ISBN: 0-07-038726-5 LC 75-1047
$12.95

(5) BEYOND THE ENERGY CRISIS
A Global Perspective
By John Maddox 208 pp.
Is there a real energy shortage or have Western attempts at insulation from geological and economic realities caused the crisis? How has the envrionmental movement forced Western dependence on imported oil? Is energy conservation really the answer? Should we anticipate a world in which Iran or Algeria supplant the role of the U.S. as economic and political world leader? These are the kinds of questions the author asks and answers in this thought provoking work.
1975 ISBN: 0-07-039430-X LC 75-8922
$8.95

(6) HOW IT ALL BEGAN
Origins of the Modern Economy
By W. W. Rostow 300 pp.
An historical overview of the evolution of nations from economic adolescence to industrial and technological maturity. Brings science, invention, and innovation into the heart of the economic process and seeks to demonstrate the inadequacy of formulations used by Adam Smith, Karl Marx and other economists and economic historians. Provides many insights into the economic background and climate of the 70s. (Rostow was Deputy Special Assistant to President Kennedy for National Security Affairs.)
1975 ISBN: 0-07-053897-2 LC 74-18062
$10.00

McGraw-Hill Book Company
1221 Avenue of the Americas
New York, N.Y. 10020

Oxford Univ. Pr.
Levi, L. Society, Stress and Disease. Vol. 2. Feb.

Pergamon
Ahtee, L., ed. Neurotransmission. Feb.
Ainsworth, W. A. Mechanisms of Speech Recognition. May.
Airaksinen, M., ed. Central Nervous System & Behavioral Pharmacology. Feb.
Bonting, S. L., ed. Transmitters in the Visual Process. Apr.
Collins, W. P. & J. F. Hennam. Radioimmunoassay & Reproductive Endocrinology. Jan.
Everard, Margaret P. An Approach to Teaching Autistic Children. Mar.
Gjessing, R. R. Contribution to the Somatology of Periodic Catatonia. Apr.
Goldstein, A., ed. Opiate Narcotics. Feb.
Hersen, M. & D. H. Barlow. Single-Case Experimental Designs. Jun.
James, V. H. T. & J. R. Pasqualini. Proceedings of the 4th International Congress on Hormonal Steroids. Feb.
Karki, N., ed. Mechanisms of Toxicity & Metabolism. Apr.
Klastersky. Infections in Cancer Chemotherapy. Feb.
Klinge, E. ed. Receptoro & Cellular Pharmacology. Feb.
McDaniel, J. W. Physical Disability and Human Behavior. 2d ed. May.
Magaro, P. A. The Construction of Madness. Jun.
Matilla, M., ed. Clinical Pharmacology. Feb.
Morrice, J. K. Crisis Intervention. Mar.
Peeters, H., ed. Protides of the Biological Fluids 23rd Colloquium. Feb.
Richter, D., ed. Schizophrenia Today. May.
Sedvall, G. & others. Antipsychotic Drugs Pharmacodynamics & Pharmacokinetics. Feb.
Underwood, G. Attention and Memory. Mar.
Usdin, E. & others, eds. Catecholamines and Stress. Apr.
Vapaatalo, H., ed. Drug Therapy. Feb.
Weber, G. Advances in Enzyme Regulation. Vol. 14. May.
Wybran, J. & M. J. Staquet, eds. Clinical Tumour Immunology. Mar.

Springer-Verlag
Advances in Pacemaker Technology.
Edis, A.J. Manual of Endocrine Surgery.

BUSINESS BOOKS

GENERAL

McGraw
Hoppock, R. Occupational Information. 4th ed. Jan.

Pergamon
Lethbridge, D. G. Government & Industry Relationships. May.
Singer G. & M. Wallace. The Administrative Waltz. Mar.

(Continued on p. 698)

NEW from World's Largest Publisher of AVIATION BOOKS

U. S. Fighters by Lloyd S. Jones
0-8168-9200-8
$14.95 Nov. 1975

Grumman F-14 "Tomcat" by James Stevenson 0-8168-0592X
$6.95 Dec. 1975

Federal Aviation Regulations for Pilots 0-8168-5732-6
$1.95 Dec. 1975

Airman's Information Manual by Aero Staff 0-8168-1355-8
$2.50 Jan. 1976

General Dynamics F-16 by William Holder & William Siuru
0-8168-0596-2
$6.95 Mar. 1976

Racing Planes & Air Races, Vol. 12 by Reed Kinert 0-8168-7868-4
$4.95 Apr. 1976

Convair F-106 "Delta Dart" by William Holder 0-8168-0600-4
$6.95 May 1976

REUBEN The Story of Consolidated Aircraft's FLEET by William Wagner 0-8168-7950-8
$14.95 June 1976

Cleared to Land by Frank Burnham
0-8168-4500-X
$11.95 July 1976

AERO PUBLISHERS, INC.
329 West Aviation Road, Fallbrook, CA 92028

"A lively pastiche of real experiences, hard facts, and problem solving techniques..."*
— Letty Cottin Pogrebin, MS. Magazine

*"... Its prescriptions are pragmatic ... you'll learn how to select a suitable field, get further training, survive job interviews, break into an all-male group, hire others, fire them gracefully, and beat sex bias out of the bushes."

by Margaret V. Higginson and Thomas L. Quick $9.95

amacom
a division of American Management Associations

PUBLICATIONS FROM UNITED NATIONS

DEMOGRAPHIC YEARBOOK 1973

The twenty-fifth issue of the Demographic Yearbook contains 1973 statistics of area, population, natality, mortality, nuptiality and divorce for every country of the world, latest available data on expectation of life and a 7-year trend of international arrivals and departures. Data on the economic characteristics of the population are shown, including labour force participation rates by age and sex as well as various cross-classifications of population by industry, occupation, status, age and sex.

Order No.E/F.74.XIII.1 Clothbound $38.00

YEARBOOK ON HUMAN RIGHTS 1971

Annual Survey on Human Rights records significant constitutional, legislative and judicial developments on personal, civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights throughout the world. Includes relevant extracts from decisions of national and international courts; texts and summaries of basic laws relating to human rights in Trust and Non-Self-Governing Territories; and international agreements.

Order No.E.74.XIV.1 Clothbound $18.00

YEARBOOK OF NATIONAL ACCOUNTS STATISTICS 1974

Detailed estimates of national income and related economic measures for some 122 countries and areas. Among the many subjects covered are: gross domestic product and expenditure; distribution of the gross domestic product; composition of private consumption expenditure; government and revenue expenditure; and external transactions.
3 volume set (not sold separately)

Order No.E.75.XVII.5 Clothbound $48.00

YEARBOOK OF CONSTRUCTION STATISTICS 1964-1973

This is the second in a new series of annual compilations of statistics on world construction activity and has been prepared to make available the information derived from annual surveys in this field undertaken all over the world.

The data presented in this publication are primarily based on replies to the Construction Statistics Questionnaire of the United Nations, distributed in 1972 for the first time. The information received has been supplemented in a few instances with data obtained from published sources, as well as with the work undertaken by the Statistical Office on the compilation of construction statistics in the United Nations Statistical Yearbook.

Order No.E.75.XVII.10 Clothbound $18.00

YEARBOOK OF THE UNITED NATIONS 1972 26th EDITION

The principal reference work of the Organization, the Yearbook is the only annual series containing, within a single volume, a fully indexed, comprehensive yet succinct account—organized by subject—of the discussions, decisions and activities of the United Nations and the inter-governmental organizations related to it.

Order No.E.74.I.1 Clothbound $35.00

STATISTICAL YEARBOOK 1974

Important compilation of statistics from countries throughout the world covering a wide range of economic and social subjects, including: population, agriculture, manufacturing, construction, transport, trade, balance of payments, national income, education and culture. Improved statistical coverage has enabled the Yearbook to widen the territorial scope of many of its tables and to provide more comprehensive and accurate world and continental aggregates.

Order No.E.75.XVII.1 Clothbound $38.00

THE GROWTH OF WORLD INDUSTRY 1973

Volume I General Industrial Statistics
Order No.E.75.XVII.3 Clothbound $38.00

Volume II Commodity Production Data 1964-1973
Order No.E.75.XVII.4 Clothbound $30.00

UNITAR PUBLICATIONS

TOWARD WIDER ACCEPTANCE OF UN TREATIES

Order No.E.75.XV.ST/2 $10.00

ATOMIC SAFEGUARDS: A STUDY IN INTERNATIONAL VERIFICATION

Order No.E.75.XV.ST/5 Clothbound $12.50
Paperbound $ 6.50

INTERNATIONAL NAVIGABLE WATERWAYS

Order No.E.75.XV.ST/6 $30.00

MANUAL ON INTERNATIONAL PROCUREMENT

Order No.E.75.XV.Man.3 $10.00

United Nations Publications
Room LX-2300, New York, N.Y. 10017
or
Palais des Nations
1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland

WHAT DOES BOWKER HAVE TO DO WITH SCIENCE?

AAAS Science Film Catalog

Lists and describes over 6,000 science films in hundreds of subject areas, available from 150 producers/distributors. "Long overdue and badly needed" said F. James Rutherford, President, NSTA. Published in association with the American Association for the Advancement of Science and with the assistance of the National Science Foundation. 1975. LC 75-11536. ISBN 0-8352-0860-5. $16.95. CIP.

Scientific and Technical Books in Print 1974

Lists some 57,000 titles by author, title, and 12,000 subject areas. Full finding and ordering data on each book in each index. 3rd edition. 1974. LC 71-37614. ISSN 0000-0248. ISBN 0-8352-0747-1. $38.50.

Bowker's Medical Books in Print 1976

Lists more than 26,500 medical books available in the U.S. today by author, title and 5,000 subject areas. Full bibliographic data on each book in each index. 5th edition. June, 1976. LC 78-37613. ISSN 0076-5929. ISBN 0-8352-0882-6. $30.00t.

Industrial Research Laboratories of the United States

Precise, current personnel, contact and project information on 3,241 non-governmental organizations and their 6,660 R&D laboratories. Separate geographical, personnel and subject (areas of research) indexes. 14th edition. 1975. LC 21-26022. ISBN 0-8352-0787-0. $49.75.

Library Problems in Science and Technology

35 problematical case studies designed by Professor James M. Matarazzo of Simmons College School of Library Science help you master the sources and uses of a massive body of scientific literature—patents, preprints, technical reports, conference proceedings, etc. "Very helpful" said Wilson Library Bulletin. 1971. LC 70-164033. ISBN 0-8352-0486-3. $12.95. 20% off on 5 or more.

Scientific, Technical, and Engineering Societies Publications in Print 1974-1975

Here is basic finding and ordering information on thousands of books, pamphlets, periodicals, newsletters, AV materials issued by 151 of the nation's leading scientific, technical and engineering societies. Author and Key-Word Title indexes are provided. "Useful" said LJ. 1974. LC 74-5094. ISBN 0-8352-0727-7. $17.50.

American Men and Women of Science, Agricultural, Animal and Veterinary Sciences 1974

Provides key personal and professional data on 14,250 U.S. and Canadian scientists working in over 200 disciplines pertaining to Dairy and Food Sciences, Wildlife Conservation and Management, etc. Geographical and discipline indexes. 1974. LC 6-7326. ISBN 0-8352-0715-3. $25.00.

American Men and Women of Science, Medical Sciences 1975

Provides concise, authoritative biographies of 20,000 men and women active in the U.S. and Canada today in 250 areas of medical practice, exploration, administration, and education. Separate geographical and discipline indexes. 1975. LC 6-7326. ISBN 0-8352-0805-2. $42.50.

World Directory of Environmental Research Centers

Identifies and describes more than 5,000 organizations engaged in all forms of research on the environment in 114 countries. A geographical index is included. "Useful tool for any science collection" said LJ. Published in association with The Oryx Press. 2nd edition. 1974. LC 72-87536. ISBN 0-8352-0701-3. $19.50.

American Men and Women of Science, Social and Behavioral Sciences

Includes 34,000 biographies of U.S. and Canadian social and behavioral scientists currently active in 250 areas. 12th edition. 1973. LC 6-7326. ISSN 0065-9363. Two volumes: A-K, ISBN 0-8532-0600-9; L-Z, ISBN 0-8352-0601-7. $42.50 each.

American Men and Women of Science, Social and Behavioral Sciences Discipline Index

Lists all the scientists under their specialties in the social and behavioral sciences. 1974. LC 6-7326. ISSN 0065-9363. ISBN 0-8352-0707-2. $25.00.

American Men and Women of Science, Physical and Biological Sciences

In-depth biographies of 138,000 U.S. and Canadian scientists currently working in almost 1,000 major areas of the physical and biological sciences. 12th edition. 1971-1973. LC 6-7326. ISSN 0065-9347. Six vols: A-C, ISBN 0-8352-0500-2 D-G, ISBN 0-8352-0501-0 H-K, ISBN 0-8352-0502-9 L-O, ISBN 0-8352-0503-7 P-Sr, ISBN 0-8352-0504-5 St-Z, ISBN 0-8352-0505-3 $37.50 each.

American Men and Women of Science, Physical and Biological Sciences Discipline Index

Lists the scientists by name under their relevant disciplines. Almost 30 percent of the names are listed within more than one area of study. 1973. LC 6-7326. ISSN 0065-9347. ISBN 0-8352-0637-8. $27.50.

Biographical Directory of The American Psychiatric Association

Here is the entire 20,000 membership of the APA in the U.S. and Canada. Home and/or office phone numbers are included. Geographical index. Published by Bowker in cooperation with the APA. 6th edition. 1973. LC 63-12595. ISSN 0065-9827. ISBN 0-8352-0616-5. $38.50.

Order on 30-day approval from

R.R. BOWKER ORDER DEPT.
P.O. Box 1807
Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106

Outside Western Hemisphere:
Bowker, Erasmus House,
Epping, Essex, England

All orders plus shipping and handling. Salex tax added where applicable. (Prices subject to change without notice.)

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

Recent Technical, Scientific and Business Books

5 new "how-to" books...

Electric Motor Control

Walter N. Alerich. Explains common types of electric motor starters and controllers. Realistic coverage of theory, operation, installation and maintenance—backed up with schematic diagrams and other valuable working aids. $6.95.
ISBN 0-442-20312-8
LC 75-26884

Exterior and Interior Trim

John E. Ball. A detailed handbook of finishing techniques with clear guidance on all home-building tasks except major structural work. Includes tools and recent trends. $7.95 (April).
ISBN 0-442-20543-0
LC 75-6060

Automotive Service and Repair Tools

Harry G. Hill. Describing a wide variety of tools that are manually, electrically or pneumatically driven, this book explains their proper use, selection and application for automotive servicing. Approx. $9.50.
ISBN 0-442-23415-5
LC 75-35695

Masonry Skills

Richard T. Kreh. Everything the professional or homeowner needs to know about laying of bricks and concrete block, along with related skills and tools. Latest techniques covered. Approx. $9.95 (April).
ISBN 0-442-24548-3
LC # forthcoming

Electrical Wiring Residential, 5th Ed.

Ray C. Mullin. Updated version of the popular Electrical Trades Blueprint Reading and Sketching—Residential. Reflects numerous innovations in electrical regulations, equipment and wiring practices. $8.95 (March).
ISBN 0-442-25594-2
LC # forthcoming

4 titles of special interest...

Data Processing Contracts

Dick H. Brandon and Sidney Segelstein. Provides a detailed framework for structuring and negotiating airtight contracts, clause by clause. $28.50 until 4/30/76, then $34.50.
iSBN 0-442-21031-0
LC 75-34372

The Therapist's Handbook

Benjamin B. Wolman. Clear, authoritative descriptions of treatment methods for mental disorders. Covers specialized as well as general techniques. $22.50.
ISBN 0-442-29570-7
LC 75-28356

Electrical Safety in the Hospital

Walter H. Buchsbaum and Bonnie Goldsmith. Shows how, why and where electrical accidents can endanger patients and hospital workers. $9.95.
ISBN 0-442-84047-0
LC # forthcoming

Building Construction Illustrated

Francis D. K. Ching. Graphic, step-by-step techniques in residential and light construction. Includes U.S. and metric standards, over 1,000 illustrations. $17.95 cloth, $9.95 paper.
ISBN 0-442-21533-9 cloth
ISBN 0-442-21532-0 paper
LC 75-28293

...and 35 additional sci/tech/business books worth noting:

Architectural Presentation Techniques. Wm. W. Atkin. Approx. $12.50 (April) ISBN 0-442-20361-6 LC 73-16697

Handbook of Water Resources and Pollution Control. Jacob I. Bregman and Harry W. Gehm. $39.50 (March) ISBN 0-442-21041-8 LC 75-29050

Man and Work in Society. Eugene L. Cass and Frederick G. Zimmer. $12.95. ISBN 0-442-29359-3 LC 75-26866

The Giraffe. Anne Innis Dagg and J. Bristol Foster. Approx. $13.95 (March) ISBN 0-442-22431-1 LC 75-33181

Corporate Lives. George de Mare. $10.95 (April) ISBN 0-442-22079-0 LC # forthcoming

Sound Recording. John M. Eargle. Approx. $16.95 (June) ISBN 0-442-22221-1 LC # forthcoming

Plastics Engineering Handbook of the Society of the Plastics Industry, Inc. 4th Ed. Joel Frados. Approx. $49.50 (April) ISBN 0-442-22469-9 LC 75-26508

Grzimek's Ecology Encyclopedia. Bernhard Grzimek, Joachim Illes and Wolfgang Klausewitz. Approx. $39.95 (May) ISBN 0-442-22948-8 LC # forthcoming

Grzimek's Ethology Encyclopedia. Bernhard Grzimek and Klaus Immelman. Approx. $39.95 (July) ISBN 0-442-22946-1 LC # forthcoming

Grzimek's Evolution Encyclopedia. Bernhard Grzimek, Herbert Wendt and Gerhard Heberer. Approx. $39.95 (June) ISBN 0-442-22963-1 LC # forthcoming

Body Hot Spots. R. Dale Guthrie. Approx. $8.95 (April) ISBN 0-442-22982-8 LC # forthcoming

Immigrants. Robert Harney and Harold Troper. $14.95. ISBN 0-442-29948-6 LC 75-27151

Principles and Techniques of Scanning Electron Microscopy, Vol. 5. M. A. Hayat. Approx. $27.50 (May) ISBN 0-442-25692-2 LC # forthcoming

Mathematics Dictionary, 4th Ed. Glenn James and Robert G. James. Approx. $17.95 (June) ISBN 0-442-24091-0 LC # forthcoming

Systems Design and Documentation. Harry Katzan, Jr. Approx. $11.95 (May) ISBN 0-442-24270-0 LC # forthcoming

Handbook of Vitamins and Hormones. Roman J. Kutsky. $5.95 paper. ISBN 0-442-24550-5 LC 70-190499

A Practicing Scientist's Handbook. Alfred James Moses. Approx. $29.95 (June) ISBN 0-442-25584-5 LC # forthcoming

Structural Design Guide to AISC Specifications for Buildings. Paul F. Rice and Edward S. Hoffman. Approx. $19.95 (March) ISBN 0-442-26904-8 LC # forthcoming

Data Communications Dictionary. Charles J. Sippl. Approx. $17.95 (March) ISBN 0-442-27622-2 LC # forthcoming

Drawing File for Architects, Illustrators and Designers. Marc Szabo. Approx. $12.50 (March) ISBN 0-442-27878-0 LC 75-29209

How to Negotiate a Raise. John J. Tarrant. $9.95 (May) ISBN 0-442-28407-1 LC 75-26732

The Executive Deskbook, 2nd Ed. Auren Uris. Approx. $10.95 (April) ISBN 0-442-28812-3 LC # forthcoming

Handbook of Medical Acupuncture. Frank Z. Warren, M.D. Approx. $20.00 (March) ISBN 0-442-29198-1 LC # forthcoming

Content Addressable Parallel Processors. Caxton C. Foster. Approx. $11.95 (March) ISBN 0-442-22433-8 LC 75-31922

Handbook of Highway Engineering. Robert F. Baker. $42.50. ISBN 0-442-20520-1 LC 74-23226

Handbook of Environmental Civil Engineering. Robert G. Zilly. $37.50. ISBN 0-442-29578-2 LC 74-26993

How to Negotiate a Business Loan. Richard C. Belew. $6.95 paper. ISBN 0-442-20666-6 LC 75-14483

Housing for the Elderly. Isaac Green. $13.95. ISBN 0-442-22833-3 LC 75-11630

Aging. Diana Woodruff and James Birren. $9 95. ISBN 0-442-20800-6 LC 75-14743

Systems. John W. Sutherland. $13.95. ISBN 0-442-28074-2 LC 75-12792

Lyons' Encyclopedia of Valves. Jerry L. Lyons and Carl L. Askland, Jr., $17.95. ISBN 0-442-24961-6 LC 75-29293

Gemstones of North America, Vol. 2. John Sinkankas. Approx. $30.00 (April) ISBN 0-442-27627-3 LC 59-13853

Gemstones for Everyone. B. W. Anderson. $25 00 ISBN 0-442-20360-8 LC 75-29369

Principles and Techniques of Electron Microscopy, Vol. 6. M. A. Hayat. Approx. $27.50. ISBN 0-442-25688-4 LC 70-129544

Are You Driving Your Children to Drink. Donald A Moses and Robert E. Burger. $8.95. ISBN 0-442-25583-7 LC 75-23097

VAN NOSTRAND REINHOLD
A Division of Litton Educational Publishing, Inc.
450 West 33rd Street
New York, N.Y. 10001

SPRINGER
Publishing Company
NEW

Who Will Marry Whom?

by Bernard I. Murstein, Ph.D. Comprehensive presentation of theories of marital choice. Includes the author's own stimulus-value-role theory and its application. 400 pp., $14.95, 1976. ISBN 0-8261-2030-X

Falling in Love

by Vernon W. Grant, Ph.D. What is love and how does it differ from sexual desire? A psychologist explores this topic and others: love as need, esthetic attraction, amorous emotion, psychology of sex, and more. 220 pp., $11.00, 1976. ISBN 0-8261-1890-9

Multimodal Behavior Therapy

by Arnold A. Lazarus, Ph.D. Latest book by this psychotherapist whose multifaceted approach has attracted wide attention. Chapters contributed by specialists apply the multimodal method to problems of depression, sexual inadequacy, obesity, and mental retardation. 272 pp., tent. $12.50, 1976. ISBN 0-8261-2160-8

Life or Death—Who Controls?

ed. by Nancy C. Ostheimer and John M. Ostheimer, Ph.D. Pro and con views on eugenics, abortion, compulsory sterilization, and euthanasia, focusing on the life-and-death decisions society faces. 256 pp., $12.50, 1976. ISBN 0-8261-2020-2

Vision and Artifact

ed. by Mary Henle, Ph.D. Foreword by Rudolf Arnheim. Scholarly essays that bridge the disciplines of perception and art. Profusely illustrated. 208 pp., tent. $9.50. 1976. ISBN 0-8261-1960-3

The Health Gap
Medical Services and the Poor

ed. by Robert L. Kane, M.D., et al. The social and psychological factors that contribute to the failure of our health services to reach the poor—with solutions—are discussed. 320 pp., $14.95, 1976. ISBN 0-8261-1860-7

Varieties of Psychohistory

ed. by George M. Kren, Ph.D. and Leon H. Rappoport, Ph.D. Authorities discuss what psychologists can contribute to our understanding of history and history makers. Approx. 384 pp., tent. $13.50. ISBN 0-8261-1940-9

SPRINGER Publishing Company
200 Park Ave. South, New York 10003

BANKING, FINANCE & INVESTMENT

Dow Jones-Irwin
Seldin, M. Land Investment. Aug.

COMMUNICATION & EDUCATION

McGraw
Estes, J.C. Real Estate License Preparation Course for the Uniform Examinations. Jan.

COMPUTERS FOR BUSINESS

Pergamon
Bernstein, S. J. Computers in Public Administration. Feb.

ECONOMICS FOR BUSINESS

McGraw
Ginzberg, E. The Human Economy. Apr.
Reid, S. The New Industrial Order. Feb.
Rostow, W.W. How It All Began. Apr.
Samuelson, P. Economics. 10th ed. Mar.

Pergamon
Ibrahim, I. B. & others. Readings in Managerial Economics. Jun.
Pitt, D. C. The Social Dynamics of Development. Apr.

D. Reidel
Long, F., ed. Economic Planning Studies.

LAW FOR BUSINESS

McGraw
Weiss, L.W. Regulation. Jan.
Wincor, R. Contracts in Plain English. Jan.

MANAGEMENT

American Hospital Assn.
Packer, C.L. Preparing Hospital Management for Labor Contract Negotiations.

McGraw
Glueck, W.F. Business Policy. 2d ed. Mar.
Gruber, W.H. The New Management. Feb.
Hegarty, E. How To Succeed in Company Politics. 2d ed. Jun.
Koontz, H. Management. 6th ed. Jan.
Likert, R. New Ways of Managing Conflict. Apr.
Lopez, F.M. Personnel Interviewing. 2d ed. Apr.
Neuschel, R. Management Systems for Profit and Growth. 3d ed. Apr.
Redinbaugh, L.D. Retailing Management. Jan.
Sutermeister, R. People and Productivity. 3d ed. Jan.

Pergamon
Eilon, Samuel & others. Applied Productivity Analysis for Industry. Feb.

mm 1 2 3 4 5

AMERICAN METRIC CONSTRUCTION HANDBOOK

by R. J. Lytle

Essential for architects, engineers, builders, contractors, and material suppliers — the latest available information on what the change to Metric or "System International" will mean to the construction business. Metrication plans of industry sectors and products are included and parallel experiences abroad described.

302 pp. Appendices. Index.
8½" x 11" ISBN: 0-912236-39-0
$14.95 paper

STRUCTURES Publishing Company
Box 423
Farmington MI. 48024

Covers the water resources of 138 countries and territories. The most complete and convenient source of world-wide water resources data ever published.

WATER RESOURCES OF THE WORLD

by
Frits van der Leeden

1975, 568 pages, 578 tables, 47 figures, bibliography, index ISBN 0-912394-14-5
LC 75-20952

Price: $32.50 cloth

Presented on a country-by-country basis are tabular data on water use, streamflow, ground water, industrial and public water requirements, irrigation and water use projections. Additionally, the book supplies statistics on the world's major rivers, lakes and reservoirs, climates and oceans. Also covers desalting, the situation in developing countries, financing and much more.

Order from:
WATER INFORMATION CENTER, Inc.
14 Vanderventer Ave., Rm 200
Port Washington, N.Y. 11050

"You can never plan the future by the past."

—Edmund Burke

It's important to know what's going on in today's world. Newspapers and magazines cover the basics, but intensive study and analysis demand solid, in-depth resources. Like these 3 from Wiley.

SOCIAL ACCOUNTING
Theory, Issues, and Cases
Lee J. Seidler, New York University, &
Lynn L. Seidler

Can government expenditures be allocated more efficiently? Could social programs be more effectively operated? Can pollution be controlled at reasonable cost? The concern of American society with such issues has generated a surge of interest in social accounting—the application of conventional accounting techniques to the solution of social problems. This book provides a how-to-do-it approach to this newest area of accounting. It reviews existing literature, provides materials from various fields, and offers cases and examples of the applications of social accounting—from crime and health to transportation, from "The Economic Value of Legal Abortions" to "The Value of a Methadone Center."

ISBN 0 471 77488-X LC#: 74-12116 CIP
1975 547 pp. $15.95

OPEC AND THE PETROLEUM INDUSTRY
Mana Saeed Al-Otaiba, Minister of Petroleum and Mineral Resources, United Arab Emirates

A timely study of the beginnings and evolution of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) by one of the shapers of Middle East oil policy. It provides a rare insight into the thinking of those controlling an industry vital to the prosperity of today's world, and a fascinating glimpse into the mind of a young, capable, and ambitious patriot. Included is a wealth of information on the oil industry in each of the OPEC member states and important facts about the structure and policies of OPEC.

ISBN 0 470 02252-3 LC#: 75-15447 CIP
1975 187 pp. $14.50

REDESIGNING THE FUTURE
A Systems Approach to Societal Problems
Russell L. Ackoff, The Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania

Written for anyone perplexed by today's rapid social changes and anxious to redefine his role in life. In this major work, Russell Ackoff states with great force and urgency that because we're undergoing profound cultural and technological changes, it's imperative that we learn to restructure our current modes of thinking. He isolates the flaws in our thinking, reinterprets society as a web of interlocking rather than separate systems, and develops strategies for redesigning the systems we live in.

ISBN 0 471 00296-8 LC#: 74-10627 CIP
1974 260 pp. $10.95

For further information contact Library Services-LJ.

Serving your information needs

JOHN WILEY & SONS, Inc.
605 Third Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10016
In Canada: 22 Worcester Road, Rexdale, Ontario
Prices subject to change without notice. A 5489-LS

WHO'S WHO IN THE THEATRE

15th Edition Now Distributed by Gale

Who's Who in the Theatre: A Biographical Record of the Contemporary Stage. 15th Edition. viii + 1,752pp. Published by Pitman and Sons, Ltd., 1972. Distributed in America by Gale. $32.50.

The biography section covers about 2,500 actors, actresses, directors, playwrights, producers, designers, and other leading figures of the English-speaking stage. This represents an increase since the previous edition of over 600 new biographies, most of them for Americans. Other features include playbills, long runs, principal theatres, centers for theatrical research, and obituaries.

"My work on theatre books and articles would be impossible without Who's Who in the Theatre. It is always beside my desk, compact, accurate, and essential."

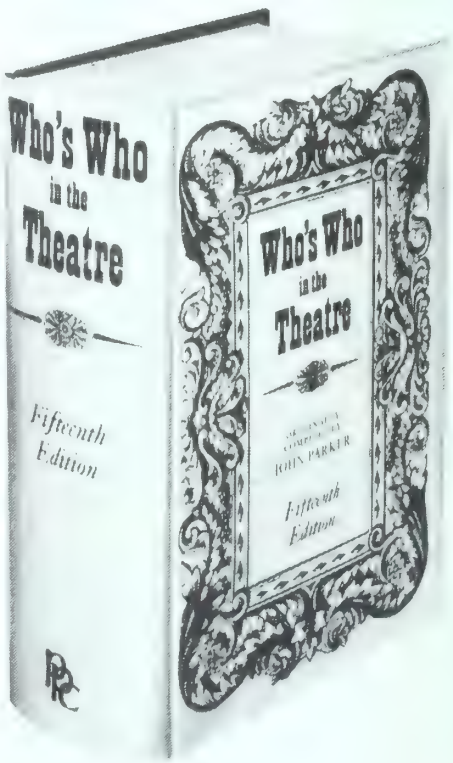
—Ivor Brown

"An indispensable link between yesterday's theatre and today's."

—Lawrence Olivier

"The portable memory of the British theatre of the twentieth century."

—Kenneth Tynan



ALSO OF INTEREST

Dramatic Criticism Index: A Bibliography of Commentaries on Playwrights from Ibsen to the Avant-Garde. x + 1,022pp. Play Title Index; Critic Index. Published by Gale, 1972. ISBN 0-8103-1090-2. $20.00.

A wide-ranging compilation of 12,000 citations of commentaries made on over 300 American and foreign playwrights by drama critics, literary and theatre historians, etc. Entries cite general criticism as well as comments about individual plays.

The Gale Information Guide Library. Comprised of 22 series of authoritative subject bibliographies in major areas of current interest. Some volumes now in print; others in preparation. $18.00/volume.

Write for information on the Performing Arts Information Guide Series and the American Literature, English Literature, and World Literatures in English Information Guide Series.

GALE RESEARCH CO.

BOOK TOWER • DETROIT, MICH. 48226

LJ
BOOK REVIEW

The Contemporary Scene

Laing, R. D. The Facts of Life: an essay in existential biology.

Pantheon. Apr. 1976. 119p. ISBN 0-394-49666-3. $8.95. PSYCH

The "so-called" best scientific minds lack the feeling, conviction, and common sense to make the right moral choices; how do we change this situation? First, "what are we?" Thus, an "essay in existential biology." Laing finds much to doubt and little certain knowledge. The illusion of certainty in the behaviorist-materialist mode excludes vital "bits"; feeling gets "cultured-out." Are we on the way to extinction unable to recognize the fact? Laing may be difficult for the general reader, yet he reveals the "facts of life" found in biology, biography, case history, travel sketch, and contemporary scene. His metaphoric, cryptic and elliptic style leaves much to the reader but is appropriate for the complex discussion of psyche-soma interrelations. Most interesting is Laing's perception of the prenatal adventures that make "all the difference." Whether we are wanted by this world-womb determines secure "implantation" in it. Do we have the love to welcome human beings into this world?—Bruce Balter, C. G. Jung Training Center, New York

MacCannell, Dean. The Tourist: a new theory of the leisure class.

Schocken. Mar. 1976. 256p. $12.95; pap. $5.95. SOC SCI

MacCannell is concerned primarily with the tourist as model for modern man in general. He presents his provocative theory with many references to such diverse sources as Marx, Durkheim, Goffman, Boorstin, and the New York Times travel section. The author feels tourism is mostly a middle-class (though expanding) phenomenon produced by post-industrial society. As tourists, we are forever searching for authentic experiences that will elicit creative responses; we are "trying to turn ourselves into an enormous work of art." MacCannell also discusses the effect of tourism on the "third world": he feels that through using tourism to their advantage while minimizing its artificialities, these nations may be able to skip the grim industrial society stage.—Carol Eckberg Wadsworth, Brooklyn P.L.

Mead, Margaret (text) & Ken Heyman (photogs.). World Enough: rethinking the future.

Little. Mar. 1976. ISBN 0-316-56470-2. $17.50. SOC SCI

In a felicitous blending of words and photographs, Mead and Heyman seek to make comprehensible to today's reader the social and technological interdependence of the world's people. Citing the end of World War II as the time when all the wrong directions were explored, Mead traces the thrust of technology and its imposition on areas and people not prepared for or even needing it. Mead stresses the importance of seeing the world as "a whole, in all of its diversity, part of nature, not set against nature." The scope of the book is breathtaking, but the clarity and sanity of Mead's prose carries the reader along. The photographs (seen in galley) are truly stunning, and this work should stimulate much thought and conversation. Despite the stiff price tag, this is highly recommended to most collections and should be on YA shelves also.—Robert H. Donahugh, Youngstown P.L., Ohio

Rothchild, John & Susan Berns Wolf. The Children of the Counterculture.

Doubleday. Mar. 1976. 216p. ISBN 0-385-08220-7. $7.95. SOC SCI

How are the radicals of the 1960's, who protested against their parents' values and life styles, now faring as parents themselves? With their two young children, Rothchild and Wolf sought out a sample of these members of the counterculture to look at their offspring. They visited "free" people in the city, political radicals, various communes, Synanon, and a Hare Krishna community. Along the way, preconceptions were dispelled: the free people were found to be indifferent parents in order to keep their own freedom; the political revolutionaries had raised a child who might have come from suburbia; and the "hippie" children in rural communes, with many adults sharing responsibility for them, were the best behaved of all. The authors tread delicately, questioning more than judging (and occasionally describing their own kids as whiny and bitchy). This book may not cause a rush to the communes, but it should generate some thought about how our life styles shape our children. Recommended.—Michele M. Leber, Virginia Beach P.L.

CONTENTS

The Contemporary Scene . . . 701
Reference . . . 702
Art . . . 705
Biography . . . 708
Business & Economics . . . 710
Communications . . . 711
Education . . . 711
History . . . 712
Home Economics . . . 714
Language Arts . . . 717
Literature . . . 717
Music . . . 720
Philosophy . . . 720
Poetry . . . 720
Political Science & International Affairs . . . 722
Psychology & Psychiatry . . . 723
Religion . . . 725
Science & Technology . . . 726
Social Science . . . 730
Sports & Recreation . . . 733
Theater . . . 736
Fiction . . . 737
Mystery, Detective & Suspense 741
Book Review & Professional Reading Author Index . . . 744

Library Journal reviews are indexed in Book Review Index and in Book Review Digest.

A Hausa man watches bridge construction in Lagos; from "World Enough" (see review, p. 701)

Rubin, Jerry. Growing Up at Thirty-Seven.

Evans, dist. by Lippincott. 1976. 216p. $7.95. AUTOBIOG

In 1970, Rubin experienced psychic collapse. He hated his fame, yet gloried in it. His "movement sweetheart" Ruthie had left him abruptly. The political movements which commanded all of his energies were dispersed, driven underground, or co-opted. He was past 30, one of the untrusted. Convinced that he needed to change significantly, he chose the New Consciousness Movement as his avenue to self-discovery. Between 1971 and 1975 he sampled 18 different kinds of innovative therapies. The book is an account of his progress, along with much intimate detail, "verbal vomit," self-righteous pronunciamentos, and a heavy sprinkling of politics. It is truly a book of the moment; in a few years it will be a fossil, a codebook to the decade 1965-1975. However, libraries will have demand now because of Rubin's stature during that decade.—Barbara Conaty, Madison P.L., Wis.

Ungar, Sanford J. FBI.

Atlantic: Little. Mar. 1976. photogs. index. LC 75-38638. ISBN 0-316-88744-7. $15. LAW ENFORCEMENT GOVT

Since the death of J. Edgar Hoover, the FBI has found itself in a period of unprecendented crisis and change. Ungar (Washington editor of The Atlantic) explores this phenomenon at various points in a narrative which describes the Bureau's history, its administrative structure and operating procedures, the areas of its jurisdiction, and scenes of everyday agent life. He graphically depicts the ways in which the revered and feared former director exercised iron-fisted control over his subordinates, cultivated powerful friends, and intimidated potential enemies. Since so much of what has been written about the FBI has been stridently partisan (either pro or con), this volume is noteworthy in its attempt to provide an objective assessment of the Bureau's performance for a general audience. A useful annotated bibliography is appended.—Wes Daniels, Lowell State Coll. Lib., Mass.

Wood, Jim. The Rape of Inez Garcia.

Putnam. 1976. 225p. ISBN 0-399-11684-2. $7.95. CRIMINOLOGY

Wood offers a superficial account of the events surrounding the trial of Inez Garcia, a California woman who killed the accessory to her rape. His narrative concentrates as heavily on the Defense Committee, a group of radical women, as on the trial itself. As the author shows, the committee members contrasted sharply in style with the affluent residents of Monterey, site of the trial. Wood portrays both the prosecution and defense lawyers as capable, and the judge as prejudiced (an opinion upheld by the California Court of Appeal in ordering a new trial). Overall, however, The Rape of Inez Garcia resembles a feature newspaper article; it fails to reflect an in-depth study of an important trial and its background.—Beth Larsen, Los Angeles County Lib. System

REFERENCE

Chicorel, Marietta, ed. Chicorel Index to Film Literature. Vols. 22 & 22A.

Chicorel. (Index Series). 1975. 914p. LC 75-22340. Vol. 22, ISBN 0-87729-381-8; Vol. 22A, ISBN 0-87729-475-6. ea. vol: $60. CINEMA/BIBLIOG

This index, or rather bibliography of books, exhibits the fuzzy editorial work characteristic of other Chicorel indexes. For example, Jerry Lewis has an entry under "Directors" and another under "Stars" but not under "Celebrities and Personalities"; "Stars, American"; "Biography"; or "Directors, American." And the title under "Comedy" is a series of lectures by Lewis about making movies. There are no enlightening scope notes telling what differentiates one section from another. The format is simply to put titles with bibliographic identification but no other comment in one or several of the 163 subject sections. Often one is puzzled as to why a title has been selected for a section. A complete list of the 2100 titles is at the end of the second volume. This work invites comparison with George Rehrauer's two-volume Cinema Booklist (LJ 9/15/72), which annotates 2909 titles and includes a subject index. Most libraries should have Rehrauer. There is little reason to purchase Chicorel.—Richard Heinzkill, Univ. of Oregon Lib., Eugene Encyclopedia of World Literature in the 20th Century. Vol. 4: Supplement and Index.

Ungar. 1975. 462p. ed. by Frederick Ungar & Lina Mainiero. photogs. LC 67-13615. ISBN 0-8044-3091-8. $48. LIT/REF

Completing the encyclopedia this work adds 204 biocritical articles about individual authors, several essays dealing with literary genre and movements, and an index to all four volumes. Coverage is international, with emphasis on European writers. In addition to longer articles on Freud, Jung, et al., of special value are the many articles on lesser known dramatists, novelists, or poets, three-quarters of whom were born in the 20th Century. Entries cite major works and selected studies. A few include excerpts of additional critical works. The writing is authoritative, concise, though at times obscure (e.g., "metaphysics of multiplicity"). The index covers names and topics, not the works. Recommended.—Peter P. Olevnik, SUNY at Brockport Lib.

Fordyce, Rachel. Children's Theatre and Creative Dramatics: an annotated bibliography of critical works.

G. K. Hall. 1975. 275p. index. LC 75-11868. ISBN 0-8161-1161-8. $21. THEATER/BIBLIOG

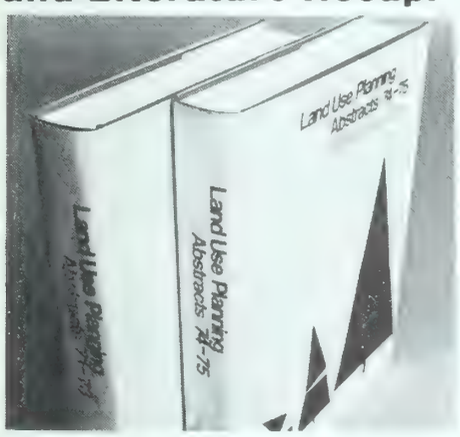
Although this book only includes works of a critical, instructional, or evaluative nature, it is an essential research tool. There are three main divisions: "Children's Theatre and Creative Dramatics" contains entries which cover both these fields; "Children's Theatre" has books and articles related to the history and development

"AN ENVIRONMENTAL REFERENCE FAMILY...

Environmental Documents & Journal Articles:

Environment Abstracts® covers 21 pollution and resource areas, monitoring the documents of the world's leading environmental organizations and 3,400 journals; published monthly; app. 1,200 pages, $200.00 per year. Annual cumulative index is The Environment Index®

Land Use Yearbook and Literature Recap:



Land Use Planning Abstracts covers trends, legislation, court cases, statistics, new books and films and 2,000 abstracts of the year's key reports, articles and documents, indexed in multiple entry format; published annually since 1974, 535 pp. $50.00 (LC# 74-28044).

Environmental Films

The Environment Film Review® provides critical reviews of more than 600 films on 21 subject areas from air pollution to wildlife; published in 1972, indexed; 152 pp. $20.00 (LC# 72-89549).

Environmental Yearbook and Literature Recap:

The Environment Index® provides single-source access to the year's key reports, articles and documents, covering 75,000 entries indexed by subject, SIC code, and geography keywords, plus author index; also recap of the year's events, legislation, conferences, new books and films issued, and directory of environmental officials; published annually since 1971, 800pp. $75.00 (LC# 73-189498).

Automated Environmental Library System:

Envirofiche® provides full text of documents abstracted in Environment Abstracts® in convenient microfiche format; more than 20,000 documents are available in the backfile published since 1971; app. 5,000 documents issued per year, lowers the total cost of new acquisitions to about 75¢ per document, $3,300 per year.

Environmental Laws & Regulations:

The Environment Regulation Handbook provides a three-binder, 2000-page reference collection of major U.S. environmental laws and regulations covering 10 environmental areas; updated monthly with significant new materials, indexed; 2098 pages. $150.00.

...WITHOUT PEER."

—Reference Services Review

Order now on 10-day approval, or request more information from:

EIC

Environment Information Center, Inc.
Reference Books Division
124 East 39th St.
New York, N.Y. 10016

BIBLIOGRAPHIES

FROM WESTERN BEHAVIORAL SCIENCES INSTITUTE
AN INDEPENDENT, NON-PROFIT RESEARCH INSTITUTE

Each with a summary review of
WHAT THE LITERATURE REVEALS
as well as an annotated bibliography.

Written and compiled by Mona McCormick, a librarian experienced in research and the author of a guide to reference materials.

• STEPFATHERS:
What the Literature Reveals (1973)

• PROBATION:
What the Literature Reveals (1973)

• ROBBERY PREVENTION:
What the Literature Reveals (1974)

• PRIMARY EDUCATION FOR THE DISADVANTAGED:
What the Literature Reveals (1975)

Each at $7.95

WBSI
Dept. 501-A
1150 SILVERADO
LA JOLLA, CA. 92037

Larousse. The one source for all your French & Spanish book needs.

Over 1 million
imported foreign language books in stock; all French and Spanish publishers represented

Immediate answers to inquiries; telex connections between New York, France, Spain, South and Central America

Special
weekly air-freight service with France and Spain

All orders for books in stock processed in 48 hours

Exclusive distributors in the United States for all Librairie Larousse publications, and official distributing agents for Gallimard, Ltd. and Alianza Editorial

French & Spanish
bookstore/showroom in New York

Larousse & Co. Inc. DISTRIBUTOR OF FRENCH AND SPANISH BOOK IMPORTS

572 Fifth Avenue/New York, N.Y. 10036
212-575-9515/Telex 12335

of children's theatre; and "Creative Dramatics" encompasses works on the general history of the discipline and its uses in education. There is nothing comparable to this bibliography available. Hitherto bibliographies had to be culled from specialized texts, unpublished dissertations, and general works. There are 2269 source materials listed, and 90 percent are annotated briefly. There is an author index. Highly recommended for all children's and college libraries.—Gilbert B. Cross, Dept. of English, Eastern Michigan Univ., Ypsilanti

Garbicz, Adam & Jacek Klinowski. Cinema, the Magic Vehicle: a guide to its achievement. Journey One: The Cinema Through 1949.

Scarecrow. 1975. 551p. index. LC 75-2183. ISBN 0-8108-0801-3. $18.50. CINEMA/REF

Instead of doing a combination history, criticism, and fact book of feature films, the authors should have concentrated on just one task. For each year from 1913 through 1949 "all films [more than 400] which anyone seriously interested in the cinema would consider worth seeing" are each given about a page length entry. Credits are followed by commentary showing the film's importance in the development of a school, director, or genre. The length of the plot synopses varies. An index of directors also acts as a brief filmography for each director. All films are listed in another index. For those who find the strictly chronological approach to film history interesting, this will be a useful volume. Those seeking criticism will find the work of literate observers rather than stimulating critics. And for those needing a first-class reference work, this volume is only the partial answer. Recommended for all larger libraries, but not a must purchase for limited budgets. Another volume starting with 1950 will complete the set.—Richard Heinzkill, Univ. of Oregon Lib., Eugene

Kirby, David K. American Fiction to 1900: a guide to information sources.

Gale. (American Literature, English Literature, and World Literatures in English Information Guides). 1975. 296p. index. LC 73-16982. ISBN 0-8103-1210-7. $18. LIT/REF

A companion volume to American Fiction, 1900-1950 (LJ 5/1/75). The first of two parts is a list of general aids such as handbooks, bibliographies, and general critical studies; the bibliographic information here is often incorrect or out-of-date. Spiller's Literary History is listed as 1963 although a 1974 edition is available. Eight American Authors is listed, but referred to only for Poe in the section on individual authors. There are many serious omissions in this section making it inadequate for serious research. Most of the 41 authors treated in individual chapters in the second part are standard ones, but there is also a notable attempt to cover many minor writers in fuller detail than in previous guides. While there is much useful information here, the high price and the uneven quality make this a questionable purchase.—Betsey J. Brenneman, Fitchburg State Coll. Lib., Mass.

Oliver, A.P.H. Guide to Shells.

320p. LC 75-4307. ISBN 0-8129-0565-2.

Paysan, Klaus. Guide to Aquarium Fishes.

239p. LC 75-4306. ISBN 0-8129-0564-4.
ea. vol: Deneter Pr: Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. (Nature Series). 1975. color illus. bibliog. index. $9.95. NAT HIST/REF

Both of these books are meant to be field guides, and should be evaluated by comparison with other field guides, such as Peterson's.

The Guide to Shells lacks sufficient depth of coverage. While Peterson has one guide for each coast of the United States, Oliver's book attempts to cover shells from around the world, and yet the majority shown are Gastropoda only. The color illustrations (over 1000), however, are excellent, surpassing in number and quality those in Peterson's guides. This book is not recommended, unless one wishes good illustrations of the more common Gastropoda of the world.

The Guide to Aquarium Fishes is arranged by black-and-white sketches of basic body shapes of fishes. Once a shape has been selected, the reader is directed to the illustration section and from there to a description of the unknown fish. The book is intended for "aquarists who want to know the names of their fishes." As an aquarist, I find this event unlikely: every aquarium and pet-store owner knows the names of the fishes he is buying or selling. I see little use for this book, and recommend instead the Tropical Fish Identifier (LJ 11/1/71), by Braz Walker, or the more comprehensive Naturalists' Guide to Fresh-Water Aquarium Fish (Sterling, 1974), by J. J. Hoedeman.—Berkley Laite, Shippensburg State Coll. Lib., Pa.

Prucha, Francis Paul, ed. Documents of United States Indian Policy.

Univ. of Nebraska Pr. 1975. 278p. bibliog. index. LC 74-14081. ISBN 0-8032-0852-9. $14.95; pap. ISBN 0-8032-5814-3. $4.95. HIST/REF

Written by one of the leading scholars on federal Indian policy, this collection, covering 1783 to 1973, provides the best single-volume compilation of documents available. In addition to executive actions, congressional laws, and court decisions, the volume contains excerpts from treaties, reports of BIA officials and investigative bodies, and recommendations of those who have tried to influence the nation's Indian policies. There is an introduction to each document, as well as an index which facilitates use. Although this work is not as extensive as W. E. Washburn's four-volume American Indian and the United States (LJ 4/15/74), it does contain a wider variety of materials. Anyone seeking a better understanding of the treatment of Indians should consult this work, for it enables one to trace history through primary sources.—Leo E. Oliva, Dept. of History, Fort Hays Kansas State Coll., Hays

Rath, Frederick L., Jr. & Merrilyn Rogers O'Connell, eds. Historic Preservation: a bibliography on historical organization practices.

American Association for State and Local History, 1315 Eight Ave., S., Nashville, Tennessee

REF

37203. 153p. index. LC 75-26770. ISBN 0-910050-17-1. $10. HIST/BIBLIOG

Because the body of literature has greatly expanded since the second revised Guide to Historical Agencies and Museum Practices: A Selective Bibliography (1970) was published, the editors of the third revision were forced to separate the topics in order to make the project manageable. The present volume is the first step in that effort. The entries, which represent the most significant books, pamphlets, and articles published since 1945, include the same bibliographic information found on LC catalog cards. Descriptive notes are appended where titles are unclear, and the admirably comprehensive index (22 pages) augments the book's utility. The editors also include a "Basic Reference Shelf" and a narrative section describing national and international organizations concerned with historic preservation. Highly recommended.—Wayne A. Wiegand, Urbana Coll. Lib., Ohio

Regazzi, John J. & Theodore C. Hines. A Guide to Indexed Periodicals in Religion.

Scarecrow. 1975. 314p. index. LC 75-22277. ISBN 0-8108-0868-4 $10. REL/BIBLIOG

Seventeen indexing or abstracting services covering more than 2700 periodicals are listed in this volume. First the periodicals are listed in alphabetical order with symbol(s) indicating the service(s) in which they are indexed or abstracted; secondly by inverted title (keyword in context); and thirdly by service. There are some incomplete or misspelled entries. Regrettably, the compilers have confused the indexing service Elenchus Bibliographicus Biblicus with the periodical Biblica. It is the former that carries the service and not Biblica which is listed. On balance, however, this bibliographic checklist is a significant addition to the bibliographic control in the fields of religion and theology.—Peter DeKlerk, Calvin Theological Seminary Lib., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Stewart, Christina Duff. The Taylors of Ongar: an analytical bio-bibliography. 2 vols.

Garland. 1975. 1140p. illus. index. LC 74-23641. ISBN 0-8240-1063-9. $70. LIT/BIBLIOG

Between 1804 and 1853 the Taylors wrote prolifically for children. They were transitional figures in the movement from moral to imaginative writing for juveniles. They remain very much minor figures, but in their day and until the end of the 19th Century they were immensely popular. More than 70 books were produced by the family in dozens of editions, most of which are very rare. This labor of love provides detailed information about the location of these widely scattered works. There is a wealth of biographic, bibliographic, and illustrative material here, including descriptions of title pages, collations, etc. There are almost 20 plates, generally of title pages or bindings. The question is, of course, whether libraries should purchase so expensive a volume on minor figures like the Taylors. Whatever the decision, this work will remain definitive for the foreseeable future.—Gilbert B. Cross, Dept. of English, Eastern Michigan Univ., Ypsilanti

Recently Revised Reference Works

Morris, Richard B., ed. Encyclopedia of American History: bicentennial edition.

Harper. 1976. 1245p. index. LC 74-15839. ISBN 0-06-013088-4. $25 HIST/REF

This fifth edition of a work first published in 1953 has been revised, enlarged, and updated to January 1, 1974. More space has been devoted to minorities, ethnic groups, and women; changes have been made in the chronologies; the biographical section covers 500 notable Americans, 100 more than previously; the updated supplement and its index in the previous edition have been incorporated in their appropriate locations; etc.

The New Oxford Atlas.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1975. 202p. prep. by Cartographic Department of Oxford Univ. Pr. ISBN 0-19-891108-4. $19.95. REF

Originally published in 1951, this work "retains the scales, projections, sheet lines, and general colouring of its topographic maps, whilst incorporating complete revision of all information liable to change and a re-styling of certain elements of map design in the interests of greater clarity." Thematic or special subject maps have been updated and revised, as has the gazetteer.

Thomas, Daniel H. & Lynn M. Case, eds. The New Guide to the Diplomatic Archives of Western Europe.

Univ. of Pennsylvania Pr. 1975. 441p. index. LC 75-10127. ISBN 0-8122-7697-3. $10. INT. AFFAIRS/REF

Among the new features in this edition of a work first published in 1959 are new chapters on Finland, Greece, and Luxemburg; subsections on the International Labour Organisation and the International Telecommunication Union; expanded coverage of periodical collections; etc.

Women's Work and Women's Studies, 1973-1974: a bibliography.

Barnard College Women's Center, dist. by Feminist Pr. 1975. 370p. ed. by Barbara Friedman & others. index. pap. $12.50. BIBLIOG

The third annual "bibliography of books, articles, papers, pamphlets, and research about women and feminism."

—This highly selective listing was compiled by Robert R. Harris.

ART

Haskell, Francis. Rediscoveries in Art: some aspects of taste, fashion and collecting in England and France.

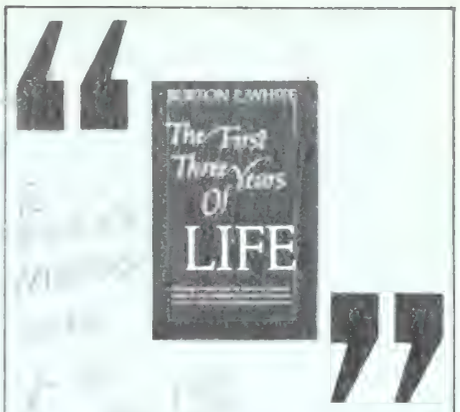
Wrightsman Lectures delivered under the auspices of the New York Univ. Inst. of Fine Arts. pub. by Cornell Univ. Pr. 1976. 246p. illus. index. LC 75-21656. ISBN 0-8014-0995-0. $19.50. ART

According to Haskell, the five lectures covered here "have been stretched to their absolute limits . . . corners were inevitably cut . . . there were numer-



Well-written*

THE FIRST THREE YEARS OF LIFE
by Burton L. White

"A phase-by-phase study of the development of the child from birth to three years, discussing physical and emotional development as well as recommended and undesirable child-rearing practices . . . well-written and well-researched."
—*Library Journal
(November 1, 1975)
0-13-319178-8 $10.00

PRENTICE-HALL CIP
General Book Marketing Division
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632

"A valuable index"

index to handicrafts, fifth supplement

The INDEX TO HANDICRAFTS series covers miscellaneous and previously uncollected material on handicrafts and amateur workshop projects. The original Index and four successive Supplements cover from roughly 1900 to 1967. The new Fifth Supplement, by Pearl Turner, covers 1968-1973 and includes not only American, but also British titles commonly found in public libraries. Over 1,000 book titles and 15 periodicals not indexed by the Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature are included, as well as a separate bibliography listing all books now still-in-print from the titles indexed in the previous Index and Supplements. For a complete description of the Handicrafts series, request a copy of Faxon's Publications Catalog. All previous volumes are still available.
In the Useful Reference Series of Library Books.
ISBN 0-87305-102-5. 650 pp., Cloth. $18.00

F.W. FAXON COMPANY, INC.
Publishing Division
15 Southwest Park, Westwood, MA 02090

ous omissions of real importance." Clearly time considerations have marred the quality here. Illustrations that would have helped the text, which is highly scholarly but rambling, are bunched together at the end; a list of plates with the most scant information, usually not including dates, is at the beginning. Footnotes, often filling half the page of text, vie for the reader's attention. However, the subject is timely, since the criteria of taste in 19th-Century Europe has been the basis of a number of recent exhibitions. And scholars will be interested in the extensive bibliography of primary and unusual sources.—Raissa Fomerand, Librarian, Sleepy Hollow Restorations, Tarrytown, N.Y.

Ormond, Leonée & Richard Ormond. Lord Leighton.

pub. for the Paul Mellon Centre for Studies in British Art by Yale Univ. Pr. 1976. illus., some color. LC 75-2773. ISBN 0-300-01896-7. $45.
BIOG/ART

An admirable, scholarly monograph on Leighton, Victorian painter and president of the Royal Academy for nearly 20 of the years when it greatly influenced British taste. Eschewing what the authors refer to as the "hagiography" of Russell Barrington, Leighton's first biographer, as well as the informality of William Gaunt's Victorian Olympus (1952), the Ormonds explore and document the artist's career, his work, and his relationships with the artists and the high society of his time. The portrait which emerges is almost relentlessly high minded and somewhat inaccessible, but the problem may well lie with Leighton rather than with the treatment afforded him here. An extensive catalog of oil paintings, frescoes, and life-size statues is appended. No bibliography, but the notes are copious and explicit.—Margot Karp, Pratt Inst. Lib., Brooklyn

Architecture

Elling, Christian. Rome: the biography of her architecture from Bernini to Thorvaldsen.

Westview Pr., 1898 Flatiron Ct., Boulder, Colo. 80301. 1976. 586p. photogs. maps. index. LC 75-23263. ISBN 0-89158-514-1. $65. ARCHITECTURE

This important translation (the book was published originally in Danish in 1950) makes available an unusually comprehensive survey of the architectural achievement of 18th-Century Rome. The author considers every significant structural category of the late Baroque tradition in the papal city, including churches, religious houses, public buildings, palaces and residences, squares, streets, gardens, and suburban villas. Intimately conversant with the physical layout of Rome, with the literature of the period, and with the monuments themselves, Elling creates a vivid sense of the individual works within their urban and social context. There are some points of criticism, however. The volume is somewhat too long because of the author's literary pretensions and anecdotal discursiveness; also there is an absence of ground plans as well as insufficient discussion of interiors; and 212 reproductions are no more than adequate. But larger architectural history collections will want to add this.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Giurgola, Romaldo & Jaimini Mehta. Louis I. Kahn.

Westview Pr., 1898 Flatiron Ct., Boulder, Colo. 80301. 1975. 252p. illus. bibliog. LC 75-19210. ISBN 0-89158-502-8. $39.50. ARCHITECTURE

The authors are single-minded in their immense admiration for Kahn, and their text is almost reverential in tone. They devote most of their discussion to an intense presentation of Kahn's philosophy of architecture. They do not discuss Kahn's work as it relates to that of other architects, nor do they analyze the development of his style. Still, the lack of objectivity does not detract too greatly from the book when one considers that it offers an excellent compilation of views, drawings, sketches, photographs, and plans of existing and proposed buildings and cityscapes. It is the lavish amount of illustrative material that gives the book its special value.—Katharine Ratzenberger, Smithsonian Inst. Libs.

Johnson, Eugene J. S. Andrea in Mantua: the building history.

Pennsylvania State Univ. Pr. 1975. 127p. +99 photogs. index. LC 74-30085. ISBN 0-271-01186-6. $30. ARCHITECTURE

Planned by Alberti in 1470 and begun almost immediately after his death in 1472, the Church of S. Andrea in Mantua is one of the most impressive and influential of all Renaissance buildings, and its history is both complex and controversial. Through a meticulous analysis of the archaeological and documentary evidence, Johnson has been able to recreate the story of S. Andrea's construction. The author describes each of the five building phases, culminating in the dome designed by Juvarra (1733) and the 18th-Century restoration. In addition to reconfirming Alberti's dominant responsibility for the design, he sets the structure into its historical, urban, functional, and stylistic context. The several appendixes present the available documentary testimony, and the many plates and plans handsomely fulfill the volume's requirements. Highly recommended for specialized collections.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Lowe, David. Lost Chicago.

Houghton. 1975. 241p. photogs. index. LC 75-19181. ISBN 0-395-20726-6. $20.
PHOTOG/ARCHITECTURE

Lost Chicago is an outstanding work, which is beautifully produced and elegantly written. In picture and word the author has captured the exuberance and spirit of Chicago past, from its beginnings in the early 19th Century through the devastating fire of 1871 and its remarkable recovery immediately thereafter. The sumptuous mansions of industrial magnates, the cavernous railroad stations, the grand hotels, and the daring skyscrapers illustrated here have all disappeared, but they come to life again in the 200 rare photographs and prints culled from museum and historical society archives. A fascinating glimpse into the growth of this most American of cities and a sobering chronicle of the waste of a unique architectural heritage.—H. Ward Jandl, National Register of Historic Places, Washington, D.C.

Platner, Warren. Ten.

McGraw. 1975. 193p. illus., mostly color. fwd. by Ezra Stoller. LC 75-19214. ISBN 0-07-050285-4. $24.50. ARCHITECTURE

Double-page color photographs (most by Stoller, former Life staffer) show off Platner's architecture and design to best advantage (and also account for the hefty price). The book explores ten widely different design situations and solutions from 1968-1974, primarily on the East Coast. They include a small lovely public library (Platner is especially successful when he has had complete control of the design and execution), a restaurant in Saarinen's TWA building, corporate office interiors, and Platner's own home in Connecticut. Three renovations are also successful—the 19th-Century factory and the offices are my favorite. As this book demonstrates, Platner's work represents quality mainstream modern architecture and design in America.—Julia VanHaaften Schick, N.Y.P.L.

Trachtenberg, Marvin. The Statue of Liberty.

Viking. 1976. 224p. photogs. index. LC 74-19306. ISBN 0-670-66854-0. $15.
HIST/ARCHITECTURE

In 1865 an idea was born in France to give the American people a monument commemorating the alliance of the two countries during the War for American Independence. The end result of this dream was the Statue of Liberty, unveiled in New York Harbor in 1886. Ironically, the least interesting aspect of the statue is its pure sculptural form, and Trachtenberg, an art historian by profession, wisely concentrates on Liberty's political origins and early patronage, the skeletal construction and pedestal design, the colossal scale, and the spectacular site. The text is informative and fascinating reading, complemented by period photographs and drawings. A minor criticism is that the author dwells on Liberty's iconography longer than necessary, giving cursory treatment to its construction in Paris and its subsequent dismantling and shipping to New York. An appropriate, scholarly contribution to the Bicentennial.—H. Ward Jandl, National Register of Historic Places, Washington, D.C.

Decorative Arts & Crafts

Fisch, Arline M. Textile Techniques in Metal for Jewelers, Sculptors, and Textile Artists.

Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1975. 168p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 74-15249. ISBN 0-442-22400-1. $15. CRAFTS

This book combines in an innovative and unusual manner the materials of metalwork with the techniques of the textile arts. A detailed chart shows which materials are best suited for each technique. Included are chapters on loom weaving, knitting, crocheting, braiding, interlinking, sprang, bobbin lace, and basketry. The techniques described are, for the most part, ones the average craftsperson knows; instruction in them is outside the scope of this book, but directions are clear and precise regarding using the textile techniques with metal. The materials may be a little difficult to find, e.g., gold and silver wire, but a list of suppliers is appended.—Judith Ellyn Wegener, Monroe County P. L., Bloomington Ind.

Gentle, Rupert & Rachel Field. English Domestic Brass: 1680-1810 and the history of its origins.

Dutton. 1975. 365p. fwd. by Graham Hood. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-10076. ISBN 0-525-09835-6. $32.50. DEC ARTS

If there were no captions for the graceful candlesticks, teapots, ladles, shakers, and snuffers in this survey, one could think the pictures were of silver pieces rather than "common" brass. Their styles reflect the elegance of other eras. Photographs of the tools of hearth and kitchen, even coffin plates, reveal how pervasively brass figured in English life. Half the book is pictures. In the foreword, praise by the Director of Collections at Colonial Williamsburg thanks the two authors for filling a void in the scant literature of British brass. This is an admirable work.—Sarah Chokla Gross, formerly Editor, "Broadside," Theatre Lib. Assn., East Rockaway, N.Y.

Greif, Martin. Depression Modern: the thirties style in America.

Universe Bks. 1975. 192p. illus. index. LC 75-11140. ISBN 0-87663-257-6. $15. DEC ARTS

In 34 pages of breezy, informative, well-written text, Greif outlines two aims: to present "Depression Modern as the primary style" of the 1930's, and "to correct a misconception, that Art Deco was the predominant style" then; he also gives background for the pictures which follow. Beautifully and sturdily bound in period style, mostly pictures as it promises (unusual feature in many such books), tastefully arranged, extensive and knowing in its examples—this is another collector's delight. An ingenious and instructive device: the dozen or so Evolution Charts drawn by Raymond Loewy in 1934, showing by simple line drawings how design trends shifted from ornate to undecorated; examples include glassware, clothing, telephones, cars, aircraft, and clocks.—Julia Morrison, Member, ASCAP, New York

Halliday, Anne. Decorating with Crochet.

Houghton. 1975. 154p. illus., some color. LC 75-15893. ISBN 0-395-20992-7. $14.95. CRAFTS

This book contains more than 40 projects for tapestries, rugs, plant hangers, lace curtains, etc. The instructions and diagrams are complete with information on basic stitches, assembly procedures, cleaning and blocking, jacquard and filet crochet, materials, and suppliers. Some of the patterns are less tasteful, but most designs are of timespanning attractiveness. A book with many years of use in public libraries.—Ann Hresko, East West Inst. Foundation Lib., Brookline, Mass.

Mebane, John. The Poor Man's Guide to Trivia Collecting.

Doubleday. 1975. 193p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 73-22805. ISBN 0-385-01947-5. $8.95. DEC ARTS

Mebane is at it again, encouraging the small spender to go after "collectibles" not yet as popular as they will become. No guarantees are made, but sketchily, sometimes helpfully, sometimes poorly (the pages about miniature books omit today's best items) the author suggests advertising mementoes, mesh bags, nut crackers, cancelled checks, prettily printed stock certificates, and mustache combs, etc. as likely to increase in value. By trade catalog illustrations identifications are easy. The book is a good jog to the would-be collector.—Sarah Chokla Gross, formerly Editor, "Broadside," Theatre Lib. Assn., East Rockaway, N.Y.

Snyder, John J., Jr., ed. Philadelphia Furniture & Its Makers.

Universe Bks. (Antiques Mag. Lib.). 1975. 158p. illus. index. LC 75-10932. ISBN 0-87663-250-9. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-87663-921-X. $5.95. DEC ARTS

Like Country Things: from the Pages of the Magazine Antiques, edited by Eric de Jonge (LJ 7/73) and American Glass, edited by Marvin D. Schwartz (LJ 10/15/73), this volume makes use of the genuine research that appeared in its pages during the 51 years of publication of Antiques magazine. The mid-18th Century was the high point of Philadelphia furniture design, and a number of articles relating to that period are reproduced. However, later furniture is given equal consideration, even including Hendels, who was in business between 1843 and 1877. This volume will be useful to libraries whose files of the magazine are incomplete.—Paul von Khrum, formerly with New York Univ. Libs.

Teleki, Gloria Roth. The Baskets of Rural America.

Dutton. 1975. 202p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 75-10075. ISBN 0-525-06140-1. $12.50; pap. ISBN 0-525-47409-9. $5.95. DEC ARTS

If it's a "Granny's fanny" basket you want to identify or one made by the Shakers, whether it's an almost closed woolgathering basket or any type of handwoven basket for storage, carrying, or home decor, you will pretty surely find its picture and history in this fine reference. The author, a collector and researcher, did a wonderful thing in preparing her survey of country work (and still living makers); she commissioned the copying of a number of regional baskets hitherto to be seen only in museums. Her book has importance as an American document.—Sarah Chokla Gross, formerly Editor, "Broadside," Theatre Lib. Assn., East Rockaway, N.Y.

Willsberger, Johann. Clocks & Watches: six hundred years of the world's most beautiful timepieces.

Dial. 1975. unpaged. tr. by Renee Vera Cafiero. intro. by Arnold Toynbee. color photogs. LC 74-28148. ISBN 0-8037-4475-7. $30. DEC ARTS

Made up of stunning color photographs of exquisite clocks and watches, this large book pictures the timepieces made for kings and queens and lords and ladies, and they are unique and supreme examples of art and craft united. The photographs dominate the book—the text is very sparse and limited to brief descriptions. Toynbee's philosophical introduction sets the tone for the quotes about "time" which are interspersed throughout the book. Larger public libraries and most art libraries will want to acquire this beautiful coffee table volume.—Donald Empson, Minnesota Historical Soc.

Photography

Hickey, Kieran, ed., text, & intro. The Light of Other Days: Irish life at the turn of the century in the photographs of Robert French.

Godine. 1975. 172p. photogs. LC 74-24950 ISBN 0-87923-131-9. $22.50. PHOTOG

Between about 1880 and 1914, French systematically photographed Ireland's scenic areas, watering places, public buildings, homes, churches, towns, and Dublin street life for William Lawrence, a Dublin supplier of photographic views. This selection of 120 plates from the comprehensive survey of Irish life contained in French's negatives demonstrates the breadth of his work and solid craft, and the introduction and captions restore to the pictures some of their lost topicality. Primarily a handsome picture book, often recalling James Joyce's Dublin, it would fill in an already extensive photography collection or make enjoyable browsing.—Patricia G. Fuller, formerly with International Museum of Photography, George Eastman House, Rochester, N.Y.

Sears, Stephen W. & others. Hometown U.S.A.

American Heritage, dist. by S. & S. 1975. 224p. photogs. LC 75-8539. ISBN 0-671-22079-9. $24.95. HIST/PHOTOG

This charming collection of photographs commemorates the bulwark of American civilization at the turn of the century, the small town. Although it presents an excellent geographical cross section of towns, it lacks adequate representation of the types of people inhabiting them, aside from the white American stereotype. There is also a tendency to highlight the more blissful side of life, giving little recognition to the hardships, poverty, and pestilence inherent in the lives of many small town dwellers. Notwithstanding the superb quality of the illustrations and the crisp editing, this biased visual link with the past is not imbued with enough realism to make the reader feel it didn't all come from a Hollywood movie set.— Gail Jacobson, formerly with Columbia-Greene Comm. Coll. Lib., Hudson, N.Y.

Uris, Leon & Jill Uris. Ireland, a Terrible Beauty: the story of Ireland today.

Doubleday. 1975. 288p. photogs., some color LC 73-9182. ISBN 0-385-07563-4. $24.95. SOC SCI PHOTOG

Perhaps Irish girls are not the prettiest in the world . . . and perhaps Ireland is not the loveliest land God ever created. Perhaps. Readers of the Uris volume are sure to dispute both points. Certainly this volume is one of the most beautiful of coffee-table books, but it is also much more, for it captures not only the beauty and entrancement that is Ireland but also the tragedy of conflict and war that has come to that blessed and cursed land. Leon Uris supplies a lengthy text which is usually reliable and often helpful. If he tends to be too friendly to the IRA, Provo and Official, and too cool to Irish Catholicism, still he reveals much that is necessary to know and to understand. But it is the photographs by Jill Uris that make it all come alive.—Walter Darnell Jacobs, Dept. of Government & Politics, Univ. of Maryland, College Park

BIOGRAPHY

Aldridge, A. Owen. Voltaire and the Century of Light.

Princeton Univ. Pr. 1975. 443p. bibliog. index. LC 75-2978. ISBN 0-691-06287-0. $20.

LIT/BIOG

Although Theodore Besterman's important Voltaire (LJ 12/15/69) appeared only seven years ago, its subject lived so long and so much that another one-volume biography need not be unduly repetitive. By comparison with Besterman's book, Aldridge's is less individualistic, a measured, clear, economical survey of the life and writings, particularly attentive to what Voltaire's contemporaries thought of him. Thus a good introductory volume for students, it also contains new information and informed speculation—for example, on the likelihood of meetings with Montesquieu and Diderot. And Aldridge continually and interestingly pursues Voltaire's lifelong concern with English culture: Shakespeare and Newton, of course, but also Dryden and others, even figures as small as Parnell and Lowth.—Frederick M. Keener, Dept. of English, Hofstra Univ., Hempstead, N.Y.

Balderston, Marion & David Syrett, ed. & annotated. The Lost War: letters from British officers during the American Revolution.

Horizon. 1975. 237p. intro. by Henry Steele Commager. index. LC 75-18570. ISBN 0-8180-0813-X. $11.95. HIST/MEMOIR

Recently discovered in the County Record Office at Warwickshire, these selections from the letter book of Basil Fielding, 6th Earl of Denbigh and prominent Tory politician, make interesting reading. Much of the correspondence is devoted to the exercise of "interest" by Denbigh to secure commissions or promotions for his protégés in the British forces. The eyewitness accounts of battles sent to Denbigh by those serving in America display attitudes about the war strikingly similar to America's own Vietnam experience. This private intelligence network kept Denbigh well informed, thus giving him an important political advantage over many of his contemporaries. The introduction by Commager and the historical essay by David Syrett define the context of the letters, which are well annotated. Enjoyable Bicentennial fare.—Robert L. Burr, Coll. of William and Mary in Virginia Lib., Williamsburg

Demaris, Ovid. The Director: an oral biography of J. Edgar Hoover.

Harper's Magazine Pr. 1975. 405p. index. LC 75-9361. ISBN 0-06-121951-7. $10.95.

GOVT BIOG

Demaris uses the form made famous by Merle Miller in his Truman biography, Plain Speaking. The main difference is that Demaris' book offers interviews with a host of figures who had contact with Hoover, rather than interviews with the former FBI Director himself. Questions concerning Hoover's public and private life are discussed and alluded to by many interviewees, but the information revealed is inconclusive and at times contradictory. However, Demaris' selection of people to interview is wisely made—supporters and detractors of Hoover are equally represented—and the organization and editing of the interview excerpts is very competently done. There are some especially colorful and honest impressions of Hoover revealed in Demaris' interview with William Sullivan (the FBI's former number three man). Readers will also be interested in Hoover's relationships with the six Presidents in whose administrations he served. Very interesting reading, but no one should confuse this oral biography with historical narrative.—Jack Forman, Eastern Mass. Regional Lib. System, Boston

Duncan, Bingham. Whitelaw Reid: journalist, politician, diplomat.

Univ. of Georgia Pr. 1976. 305p. bibliog. index. LC 73-90844. ISBN 0-8203-0353-4. $11. BIOG

Reid began his varied and distinguished career as a reporter for the Cincinnati Gazette. With intelligence and determination, he quickly moved into positions of greater importance, ending his journalistic career as editor and publisher of the powerful New York Tribune. While at the Tribune he revolutionized the publishing world with the use of the linotype machine. That achievement, however, was not to be the pinnacle of his career. He moved from journalism to politics and later into diplomacy. It is in the latter field that he served with great competence. Duncan has written a scholarly yet readable biography of a quite interesting personage. He has skillfully blended biographical detail with historical perspective. A worthwhile addition for academic and larger public libraries.—Bernard F. Pasqualini, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Furlong, Monica. Puritan's Progress.

Coward. 1975. 223p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-28324. ISBN 0-698-10688-1. $8.95. LIT/BIOG

A sympathetic but candid picture of 17th-Century English Puritanism and of one of its literary geniuses. Furlong is not blind to those aspects of Puritanism which make it so unattractive to us today: its neurotic scrupulosity, exaggerated self-searching, rejection of innocent pleasure, morbid preoccupation with hell. Yet, she admires the courage and consistency of its followers, who took what they believed seriously enough to suffer for it. She admits Bunyan's neurotic problems, but argues that writing, preaching, and learning to trust in the sufficiency of Christ's grace brought about genuine, healing inner changes. Bunyan's four major works are discussed in a manner helpful to the nonscholar, and the chapter on Bunyan's influence (mostly on Hawthorne, Shaw, Louisa May Alcott, and e.e. cummings) is insightful. Good bibliography.—Douglas Marsh, Memphis & Shelby County P.L., Tenn.

Harris, Harold, ed. Astride the Two Cultures: Arthur Koestler at 70.

Random. 1976. 219p. bibliog. LC 75-29459. ISBN 0-394-40063-1. $10. BIOG

Biographical writings about Koestler are not numerous nor are articles examining his works. This book should be a welcome addition to help fill this void. To cover all the subjects of which Koestler writes would be difficult in a book of this size; 13 articles are included. The contributors (Iain Hamilton, Roy Webberley, Cynthia Koestler, Paul D. MacLean, et al.) are extremely knowledgeable in their areas. Some duplication of ideas is made interesting by the diversity of the presentation. There is no index, but the table of contents, chronology, bibliography, and references are well done.—Charles M. Lonnberg, Indiana State Univ. Lib., Evansville

Head, Constance. The Emperor Julian.

Twayne. (World Leaders). 1976. 232p. bibliog. index. LC 75-15724. $8.50. BIOG

Head's biography is a conventional study of a Roman emperor based on a thorough reading of the sources. All too often, detail and numerous quotations obscure the central arguments and seem to be included merely for their anecdotal value. Statements about attitudes, feelings, and motivations appear to go further than the historical evidence warrants. Aimed at an undergraduate audience, the book could serve as the first step in an investigation of this dedicated pagan who attempted to turn the tide of history.—Martin Chasin, Princeton, N.J.

Kaufman, Barry Neil. Son Rise.

Harper. Mar. 1976. 160p. illus. ISBN 0-06-012276-5. $6.95. PSYCH PER NAR

Autistic children have long been considered hopeless, barely trainable psychotics. In the light of this tradition Kaufman's book comes as a pleasant surprise, for it is a useful breakthrough in the understanding and treatment of autism. The Kaufmans' work began when they discovered that their son Raun was autistic. Because no treatment was available for such a young child, they developed one, first by observing and participating in autistic behavior with their son, then by using music, food, and other things to which Raun could respond in establishing interpersonal relations. Slowly, Raun developed into a responsive, verbal, and even remarkably intelligent child. The Kaufmans' success was in part due to a loving acceptance of Raun's specialness, extensive reading of philosophy and methods, and an enormous time commitment. Their treatment may be difficult to duplicate by others with less energy and time, but the book is both fascinating and compelling.—Margery C. Coombs, Dept. of Zoology, Univ. of Massachusetts, Amherst

Kitchen, Paddy. A Most Unsettling Person: an introduction to the ideas and life of Patrick Geddes.

Saturday Review Pr: Dutton. 1976. 351p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-8415-0409-1. $10.95. URBAN AFFAIRS/BIOG

Geddes was born in 1854 and raised in Scotland. His great love was urban planning and renewal, for which he developed a theory based on a synthesis of history, biology, culture, geography, and projected needs. However, he was less successful in bringing his theories to reality than he was in influencing a later generation of urban planners who could appreciate the value of his methods. Kitchen's biography only touches upon Geddes' philosophy in the course of recounting the details of his life. But it's a fascinating account of a most extraordinary personality.—Walter P. Coombs Jr., Dept. of Vertebrate Paleontology, Pratt Museum, Amherst Coll., Mass.

Kramer, Rita. Maria Montessori.

Putnam. Feb. 1976. 416p. photogs. $10. ED/BIOG

This is the first biography of substance to give an unbiased account of the personal and professional life of a remarkable person, Italy's first woman physician, earnest advocate of social reform, educator of world renown, and active feminist. It is evident that Kramer has made great use of primary sources such as letters, memoirs of associates, newspaper reports, files of Montessori societies, and personal interviews with members of the Montessori family. This well-documented, very readable book gives a wealth of information not only on the subject's personal life, much of which is here made public for the first time, but also on the intellectual and social climate of the Italy of her formative years, on the Italian educational system, and on the development of the world-wide Montessori movement.—Shirley L. Hopkinson, California State Univ., San Jose

Labarge, Margaret Wade. Henry V: the cautious conqueror.

Stein & Day. 1976. 218p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-15238. ISBN 0-8128-1869-5. $10. BIOG

English history buffs may enjoy this somewhat old-fashioned biography of one of England's most successful medieval kings. Henry V was popular because his life fitted the contemporary ideal of what a king ought to be: he was a devout and pious Christian, he worked to bring justice to all his people, and he was victorious in war. His reign, in the Indian summer of medieval England, demonstrated that stable government still depended more on the personality of the monarch than on a state bureaucracy; and that religious dissent, such as Lollardy, was more a matter of political treason than religious heresy. Although the author does not begin to deal with the complex historical problems surrounding her subject, or with the immense secondary literature, her book contains few factual errors, and it is generally well written. It should well satisfy the interests of a popular audience and the needs of the beginning student.—Bennett D. Hill, Univ. of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign

Lacouture, Jean. André Malraux.

Pantheon. 1976. 510p. tr. from French by Alan Sheridan. photogs. index. LC 75-10361. ISBN 0-394-48367-7. $12.95. LIT/BIOG

Although not analytical, this fascinating biography captures Malraux's energy and enthusiasm. The sections devoted to Paris are delineated with finesse, and the influences that triggered Malraux's passion for art are explicated with point. Equally laudable is the fact that the events surrounding Malraux's personal life are narrated with compassion. This biography is recommended to general readers; it will compel them to question the activities of a great man and writer and to assess his qualities and shortcomings.—Bettina L. Knapp, Hunter Coll. & Grad. Center of CUNY

LeShan, Edā J. In Search of Myself—and Other Children.

Evans, dist. by Lippincott. Mar. 1976. 204p. $6.95. PSYCH/PER NAR

In this book, LeShan, author of many books on parenting, sifts through memories of her own childhood in an attempt to identify those experiences which had the greatest influence on her adult perceptions. Much of her insight is the result of extensive psychotherapy and the book is, in fact, a record of her struggle to overcome lifelong feelings of inadequacy and inferiority. LeShan's deep understanding of the emotional needs of children is obviously the result of her ability to identify with the child in herself. Out of her childhood experiences and subsequent study, LeShan has formulated a humanistic philosophy of child rearing. Her observations, particularly those on adolescence and the need for rebellion, will be of interest to parents, teachers, and readers of her previous books.—Victoria K. Musmann, Glendale P.L., Calif.

Plomer, William. The Autobiography of William Plomer.

Taplinger. 1976. 455p. illus. index. LC 75-10548. ISBN 0-8008-0543-7. $20. AUTOBIOG

This is a third autobiographical volume by Plomer, the late and distinguished English poet and fiction writer. The substance is drawn from his experiences in South Africa, his friendships, and his travels. His manner and style are "English" and traditional in the best sense; the attitudes are liberal but tolerant, like those of J. S. Mill. His pacifism is nicely balanced by realism and his Anglicanism is broad and universalized. The hope that he offers for men is made up of the English virtues: sanity, patience, realism. As an apologist for the Church of England, he states: ". . . it is a cult with a peculiar appropriateness to a civilized disposition." No doubt this is true, no matter how snobbish it may appear to be. One merely hopes that the humanity embodied in Plomer and in the English tradition may survive the brutal gyres of history. This is a book, then, for the contemplative and literate reader, as well as for the Anglophile. Heartily recommended.—John R. Marvin, Dept. of English, Univ. of Massachusetts, Boston

Sharples, Antony. The Scorpion's Tail.

Taplinger. 1976. 194p. LC 75-26100. ISBN 0-8008-7004-2. $8.95. PER NAR

A young Englishman describes his experiences with drugs in the 1960's. After drifting around Europe dealing and experimenting with drugs, Sharples returned to London and conned his way onto the registered addict list—which enabled him to obtain a cheap supply of heroin legally. After seven years of drug use and a number of unsuccessful attempts at quitting, the author was finally able to free himself from drugs through a complex combination of self-examination and mysticism. Sharples is a capable writer who offers many worthwhile insights into the drug problem. However, the book is so short that he only touches briefly on the many complex aspects of the subject. The chief value of the work is its presentation in considerable detail of the inadequacy of the British approach to treatment of drug addiction.—Rosalie H. Lipsett, New York

CORRECTION: Antonin Artaud's The Peyote Dance (LJ 2/15/76) contains 105 pages, not 64.

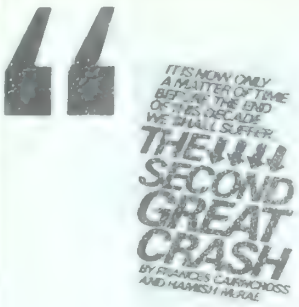
You say Mary, Queen of Scots, doesn't speak to your students?

ergo, ARGO

Material based on Lady Antonia Fraser's biography and read by Vivien Merchant brings Mary alive and follows her to her death. ARGO spoken-word recordings are distributed to schools, colleges, and libraries by Houghton Mifflin, Dept. M, One Beacon St., Boston, MA 02107. Write for a catalogue.



IT IS NOW ONLY A MATTER OF TIME BEFORE THE END OF THIS DECADE WE SHALL SUFFER
THE SECOND GREAT CRASH
BY FRANCES CAIRNCROSS AND HAMISH McRAE

Chosen by Library Journal as One of The 50 Best Business Books of 1975

THE SECOND GREAT CRASH
by Frances Cairncross and Hamish McRae

"The authors . . . summarize . . . complex variables and extract the basic arguments of those who feel that we are headed for a major economic crisis . . . without histrionics, frills or tables . . . A nicely done book."
—Library Journal
(September 15, 1975)
0-13-797530-9 $5.95 paper

PRENTICE-HALL CIP
General Book Marketing Division
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632

Selected by Library Journal as 2 of the 50 Best Business Books of the Year

HOW THE EXPERTS BUY AND SELL GOLD BULLION, GOLD STOCKS & GOLD COINS
James E. Sinclair & Harry D. Schultz
$8.95
ISBN 0-87000-309-7

TRADING SILVER —PROFITABLY
Dennis Turner & Stephen H. Blinn
$11.95
ISBN 0-87000-290-2

ARLINGTON HOUSE PUBLISHERS
165 Huguenot Street
New Rochelle, N.Y. 10801
914-636-3850 212-597-5050

BUSINESS & ECONOMICS

Bettelheim, Charles. Economic Calculation and Forms of Property: an essay on the transition between capitalism and socialism.

Monthly Review. 1976. 192p. bibliog. $11.50. ECON

Bettelheim explores the question of why capitalist forms survive in the transition period from capitalism to socialism. The author maintains that economic calculation and forms of property will only be socialist when socialist relations of production are developed. Until this time, there will be an intermingling of forms and especially the coexistence of commodity categories and economic planning. Such transitional forms are unstable and must be recognized as such, for dangers always exist of moving backward to capitalism. Bettelheim thus stresses evolution in the revolution. Indeed, his book is presented as an exposition of a work in progress and as such is intended to open up discussion. It should succeed admirably. Highly recommended for large collections.—Ken Nash, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Buxton, Edward. Creative People at Work.

Executive Communications, Inc., 400 E. 54th St., N.Y.C. 10022. 1976. 292p. photogs. index. LC 75-37245. $12.50. BUS

An examination of the problems, confrontations, successes, and failures of creative people in and out of New York City advertising agencies. This is a firsthand account in that it is based primarily on quotations from the people themselves. Appendixes include listings of top creative people, methods of breaking into the field, and the results of a survey of creative people discussing the how's and why's of creativity. I personally found the work fascinating and for people interested in advertising and creativity this work is a must. Recommended for libraries with business and advertising collections.—MaryKay W. Schnare, Dutchess Community Coll. Lib., Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

Fried, Edward R. & Charles L. Schultze, eds. Higher Oil Prices and the World Economy: the adjustment problem.

Brookings. 1975. 284p. index. LC 75-34234. ISBN 0-8157-2932-4. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-8157-2931-6. $3.95. INT AFFAIRS/ECON

This well-coordinated collection of essays on the economic impact of the suddenly quadrupled price of crude oil on the developed and the developing world represents a valuable study of energy-related problems and OPEC-inspired increases in petroleum prices. Focusing on the intermediate (1974–1977) consequences of the latter, the book offers a superb, often prescriptive, overview of the matter as well as a series of comprehensive and quite accessible analyses of the adjustment problems caused by increased petroleum prices. A useful supplement to Mason Willrich's more politically oriented Energy And World Politics (LJ 1/15, p. 325). With its extensive footnotes and tables, this book belongs in most academic libraries.—Joseph R. Rudolph Jr., Dept. of Political Science, Univ. of Tulsa, Okla.

Hardy, C. Colburn. Funk & Wagnall's Guide to Personal Money Management.

F. & W., dist. by Crowell. Mar. 1976. 550p. bibliog. LC 75-17830. ISBN 0-308-10213-4. $12.95. BUS

This is a creditable book on the subject of personal money management. Hardy offers clear, basic explanations of such topics as estate planning, bank services, real estate, insurance, pension plans, savings, investments, and taxes. The problem with the book is that it deals with material already covered well in several other recent books, most notably in Sylvia Porter's Money Book. Suitable for public libraries.—Holly Millard, Los Angeles County P.L. System

Stern, Walter. The New Investor's Guide to Making Money in Real Estate.

Grosset. 1976. 160p. pap. $4.95. BUS

Stern, a former New York Times real estate editor, demonstrates the mathematics of investing in real estate (from the two-family house through multiple-family dwellings to the industrial or commercial complex), as well as the instruments of real estate financing. The author explains most of the situations with the use of detailed examples, and he thoroughly discusses procedures and forms in a practical, journalistic manner with less reliance on academics than Maury Seldin (Land Investment, LJ 12/15/75). There are some problems: for example, Stern uses an inflationary rate of ten percent, which keeps the examples simple, but is not historically accurate; and I found the definitions before the text distracting particularly since most of the terms were defined when they occurred in the text. But overall, a very practical book on a popular subject.—Susan A. Singer, Tucson P.L., Ariz.

Labor

Baer, Walter E. Strikes.

AMACOM: American Management Assn. 1976. 260p. bibliog. index. LC 75-26713. ISBN 0-8144-5388-0. $12.95. LABOR

Baer offers little that is original or interesting. His thesis is simply that strikes are still quite prevalent and that with sincere effort and intelligent strategy the economic waste they cause can be prevented. In disjointed, pedestrian prose, he discusses such topics as the failures of collective bargaining and the resultant proliferation of strikes; the agencies of arbitration and mediation and their role in settling labor disputes; and current examples of alternatives to strikes. However, he devotes most attention to advising corporations on methods of preventing and settling both legal and wildcat strikes. Basing his book on personal experience and limited sources, he offers extensive quotations from labor-management contracts but few insights. And he says very little about the special problems of preventing and resolving public employee strikes. Only for libraries with extensive holdings in industrial relations.—Kevin M. Rosswurm, Akron P.L., Ohio

Eaton, William Edward. The American Federation of Teachers, 1916–1961.

Southern Illinois Univ. Pr. 1975. 240p. bibliog. index. LC 75-14248. ISBN 0-8093-0708-1. $10. ED/LABOR

In this narrative history, Eaton details the A.F.T.'s early struggles under the leadership of Chicago local leader Margaret Haley and shows the union's efforts to develop a coherent economic, political, and social philosophy, as well as to define its position in relation to the N.E.A. and the labor movement. Eaton emphasizes the perspective of the national union, but he also does justice to the problems of locals, covering, for example, the New York struggle over the issue of Communism. Eaton's book will be a valuable research tool on the early history of the Teachers Union, as well as an excellent supplement to the histories that stress more recent developments.—Albert Auster, Dept. of History, Staten Island Community Coll., N.Y.

communications

Gelfman, Judith S. Women in Television News.

Columbia Univ. Pr. Mar. 1976. 160p. LC 75-33167. ISBN 0-231-03994-8. $7.95. COMM

Separate interviews with 30 television newswomen in 1973 were the basis for Gelfman's doctoral dissertation and this book. She discusses the women's backgrounds and careers frankly and offers career advice to aspiring women broadcasters. Male news directors, correspondents, and news executives were also questioned about women in TV newsrooms. The author's feminist bias is clearly stated and supported by her research. Her information is updated briefly, but it is mainly three years old and this lessens the book's impact.—Lucy Caswell, formerly with Ohio State Univ. Journalism Lib., Columbus

Wakefield, Dan. All Her Children.

Doubleday. Mar. 1976. illus. LC 75-14845. ISBN 0-385-11086-3. $6.95. COMM

A fan's-eye view of the daytime serial All My Children and its family of writers, actors, and production people headed by the creator Agnes Nixon. It is a warm, enthusiastic, and amusing examination of what goes into an increasingly popular and continually maligned art form. The strength of soap opera lies in its roots in radio and popular culture, but its importance is shown in continuing the traditions of closely knit family groups, familiarizing the audience with important real concerns such as VD or child abuse, and creating a family for many lonely daytime viewers, young and old, male and female. After reading this, you may want to suffer more frequent stomachaches so you too can stay home and feed a soap addiction.—Gloria Gehrman, Moscow-Latah County Lib., Idaho

Recommended
LAND INVESTMENT
by Maury Seldin
". . . a practical, conservative, and thoroughly up-to-date treatise on a somewhat complex practice. . . . examples are presented clearly and applied judiciously. . . . well organized effort. Recommended."—Library Journal
$14.95
Dow Jones-Irwin
1818 Ridge Road, Homewood, Ill. 60430

EDUCATION

Ginzberg, Eli. The Manpower Connection: education and work.

Harvard Univ. Pr. 1975. 258p. index. LC 75-11862. ISBN 0-674-54810-8. $15. LABOR/ED

Are education and work interrelated? Ask those students who are leaving our educational systems without the vocational skills, the self-knowledge, the career decision-making skills, or the positive work attitudes required for adapting to a changed world. This readable volume examines the symbiotic relationship between education and work. Analyzing the current state of education as well as the Great Society programs of the 1960's, Ginzberg finds both strengths and weaknesses while arguing forcefully for establishing realistic, accomplishable goals rather than grandiose designs. Because Ginzberg's treatment is so comprehensive, the book is at times uneven. For instance, a critique of career education is much too narrow and a criticism of the National Institute of Education's four national models is simply misinformed. But overall, the book represents a thoughtful, serious attempt to come to terms with what continues to be a very sticky social reality.—Michael Fenenbock, Career Education Programs, Northern Plains Consortium Colls., Jamestown, N.D.

Ohmann, Richard. English in America: a radical view of the profession.

Oxford. Univ. Pr. 1976. 360p. $15; pap. $4.50. LIT/ED

This book should be read by all thoughtful Americans. At the very least, English professors will want to assess Ohmann's judgment as to why literature professors can't transmit the values they find in literary culture to a society so desperately in need of humane values. Ohmann says the reason is because English departments are part of the social order and survive by helping to maintain it when they should be changing it. The educational system, Ohmann says, is responsive to the personnel needs of the economic system. So, though English professors like to think of themselves as teachers of literature, society dictates that they shall be

CAVEAT VENDITOR
(let the seller beware) with

Last year the best bargain for budget conscious consumers was CONSUMER SURVIVAL KIT, chosen by Library Journal as "One of the Fifty Best Business Books of 1975."

This year's best bargain will be A CONSUMER'S ARSENAL, a bonanza of detailed, factual, and up-to-the-minute information designed to help consumers fight back against fraud, shoddy merchandise, and unresponsive service. It's all here: how to seek redress; whom to contact for advice (toll-free numbers included); and how to avoid problems with future purchases.

both by John Dorfman

Coming in June
A CONSUMER'S ARSENAL
256 pp., bibliog.
LC 75-339956
ISBN 0-275-56390-1
cloth $10.00
ISBN 0-275-89610-2
paper $3.95

CONSUMER SURVIVAL KIT
From the television series by the Maryland Center for Public Broadcasting 320 pp. with illus.
LC 74-29312
ISBN 0-275-22010-9
cloth $10.00
ISBN 0-275-63830-8
paper $3.95

PRAEGER PUBLISHERS

teachers of writing—and composition is what created the profession. Teachers of freshman composition, by their insistence on objectivity at all costs, and the profession, by its ideal that literature is above politics, teach the rhetoric of bureaucrats. It does seem ironic that the very people who teach the works of rebellious souls like Voltaire, Rousseau, and Swift should make culture serve and preserve the status quo, if indeed that is what they do.—Carol Gelderman, Dept. of English, Univ. of New Orleans

HISTORY

Arzáns de Orsúa y Vela, Bartolomé. Tales of Potosi.

Brown Univ. Pr. 1975. 209p. ed. & intro. by R. C. Padden. tr. by Frances M. López-Morillas. LC 74-6574. ISBN 0-87057-144-3. $12.50. HIST

The fabled silver city of Potosi in the 17th-Century, known throughout Spanish America for its riches, is the setting for this delightful collection of "tales." The thirty-two selections are actually part of a chronicle written by Arzáns, a contemporary witness to the splendors and vices of the colonial capital. Through his clever observations, we are introduced to the entire panoply of Latin American colonial society from viceroys to Indians and black slaves, from peninsular-born Spaniards to native-born Americans. Themes of greed, lust, preserved chastity and pageantry dominate these historical vignettes. Often picaresque, sometimes eye-opening, the tales make for very entertaining reading.—Roberta Marx Delson, Dept. of History, Rutgers Univ., Newark

Brown, Douglas. Doomsday 1917: the destruction of Russia's ruling class.

Putnam. 1976. 204p. illus. index. $7.95. HIST

Brown, an assistant editor of the London Sunday Telegraph, assesses the effect of the Russian Revolution upon the approximately 3,000,000 members of Russia's prerevolutionary ruling class. His book is somewhat unusual, in that it is "by no means another history of the Russian Revolution"; nor is it another popular account of the traumas endured by the Romanov family. Instead, Brown's study emphasizes the Provisional government era (February through October 1917), i.e., depicting the country's general atmosphere, the personal feats, hopes, etc., of "the last generation of leaders of the Tsarist Empire." The author writes clearly and vividly for a popular audience. One wishes, however, that he had included a formal bibliography. Recommended for academic as well as public libraries.—Pamela Joan Hersh, Librarian, New Jersey State Dept. of Education

Chadwick, John. The Mycenaean World.

Cambridge Univ. Pr. Mar. 1976. 225p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-521-21077-1. $15.95. HIST

Utilizing information tediously gleaned from hundreds of whole and fragmentary tablets inscribed in archaic Greek with Linear B script, Chadwick meticulously and with no little imagination summarizes the salient aspects of the geography, socio-political organization, material culture, religion, demography, and economy of Mycenaean Greece and selected contiguous areas of the eastern Mediterranean. As with all of Chadwick's work, the Mycenaean World is a scholarly tour de force, yet thoroughly readable. The book is well organized and well illustrated and represents the best of its genre currently in print. Specifically, it demonstrates the very great utility of even fragmentary written documents in unraveling the culture history of long dead societies and indicates the enormous potential of historical linguistics in the elucidation of problems usually consigned to the realm of the archaeologist.—James M. Adovasio, Dept. of Anthropology, Univ. of Pittsburgh

Crosby, Alfred W., Jr. Epidemic and Peace, 1918.

Greenwood. 1976. 384p. illus. index. LC 75-23861. ISBN 0-8371-8376-6. $17.50. MED/HIST

Crosby has written a lively and informative account of three waves of devastation wrought in 1918 by the Spanish influenza. He draws on individual and institutional records to paint a picture that conveys the magnitude, terror, and speed of the flu and its companion pneumonia. Some of the most graphic portions of the book are his descriptions of voyages of the Leviathan and other flu-ridden troop ships and his discussions of the flu's effects on Wilson, the House, and the others involved in the Paris Peace Conference. Crosby takes Philadelphia and San Francisco as his major examples, but also looks at other areas in the U.S., as well as Europe, Africa, and Asia. He relates how our knowledge has grown about the causes and transmission of the disease and suggests reasons for the contemporary tendency to overlook the pandemic and to submerge it in the past. A first-rate, accurate, and dramatic book that should be in public, high school, college, and medical libraries.—William K. Beatty, Northwestern Univ., Med. Sch., Chicago

Galvin, John R. Three Men of Boston.

Crowell. Mar. 1976. 348p. index. LC 75-20331. ISBN 0-690-01018-4. $10. BIOG/HIST

Galvin shows how three Boston men—Governor Thomas Hutchinson, representing the elite crown policy, and his two radical opponents, James Otis and Samuel Adams—shaped and even created the well-known events which took place in Boston between 1760 and 1775. Otis, the intellectual who always wanted reform only, created the philosophy of the revolution—a philosophy which his pragmatic partner Adams used to instigate mob uprisings. Although unofficially agreeing politically with Otis, Hutchinson, nevertheless, was made the perfect scapegoat, since the dignity of his position made it impossible for him to deal with the two popular leaders. This excellent interpretive account deserves a place in most Bicentennial collections.—David Bower, Morse Inst. P.L., Natick, Mass.

Gesta Henrici Quinti: the deeds of Henry the Fifth.

Oxford Univ. Pr. (Medieval Texts). 1975. 206p. tr., intro. & notes by Frank Taylor & John S. Roskell. map. index. $26. HIST

This volume contains the complete Latin text (based on the collation of all extant manuscripts), and a smooth and lucid English translation of the most important narrative source for the first three years of the reign of Henry V (1413–1422). As an eyewitness account of the Lollard assembly of 1414, of the entire Agincourt campaign resulting in what was probably the greatest English victory of the Middle Ages, of the king's triumphant return to England and his subsequent diplomatic maneuvering against the French, this text provides information which is reliable, accurate, and fuller than other sources. The notes are thorough and include the latest research, the map is clear and useful, and the appendixes resolve ancient and difficult problems. This book will be essential for students of many aspects of 15th-Century English culture, and university and research libraries should acquire it.—Bennett D. Hill, Univ. of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign

Gratus, Jack. The False Messiahs: prophets of the millennium.

Taplinger. Mar. 1976. 285p. bibliog. index. LC 75-29890. ISBN 0-8008-2588-8. $10.95. HIST

Considering the paucity of popular material on messianism, this is a welcome, although flawed, title. Gratus, a South African-trained lawyer and now full-time writer living in London, is not a scholar; and his uncritical use of source material argues caution on the reader's part. This flaw is especially evident in his treatment of Jesus of Nazareth. The author's treatment of Sabbatai Zevi is good, keeping the above caveat in mind. He also does a good job in bringing a host of minor messiah-claimants to light and does adequate profiles on modern ones such as Charles Manson and Sun Myung Moon. The title tells the reader what Gratus thinks of messiah-claimants; but his approach, a psychosocial one, is not an unsympathetic one.—Joseph McDonald, Learning Resources Center, Triton Coll., River Grove, Ill.

Gray, Richard, ed. The Cambridge History of Africa. Vol. 4: From c. 1600 to c. 1790.

Cambridge Univ. Pr. 1975. 738p. bibliog. index. LC 75-13638. ISBN 0-521-20413-5. $42.50. HIST

This volume inaugurates the most ambitious publishing project yet undertaken in the youthful field of African history. The eight-volume series will cover all of Africa "from the earliest times" to the 1960's. Volumes will be issued nonsequentially, but they are promised "at regular intervals."

The present volume is easily the most comprehensive survey yet assembled on two crucial, transitional centuries. Each contribution presents, as one would expect, an up-to-date and authoritative regional essay. However, the whole falls far short of the kind of definitive statement one might expect in a Cambridge history, and the editors and contributors admit this. A lengthy bibliographical essay emphasizes existing gaps in historical knowledge and comments on research in progress. Why, then, has Cambridge undertaken this project now when the field remains so clearly inchoate? How many libraries can invest in a series certain to be outdated before it is completed? Sadly, though, if this project is not supported now, we may never see its revision. A further caution: the last three volumes of this series will cover the post-1870 period. The same years are covered in Cambridge's recently completed five-volume history, Colonialism in Africa (see LJ 1/1/71 and 12/15/69). Watch out for expensive duplication.—R. Kent Rasmussen, Dept. of History, U.C.L.A.

HIST

Hirschfeld, Fritz. The Colonial Jews and American Independence.

Dodd. 1976. 177p. illus. $10. HIST

Hirschfeld's assertion that the absence of "a serious and sustained outbreak of anti-Semitism in this country" is due in part to the example set by George Washington would seem to be stretching things a bit, even for the Bicentennial. The author does, however, provide a useful compilation that will be of interest to Jews who value their heritage and to students of racial and religious history. Hirschfeld tells us that at the beginning of the Revolution there were only 1500 Jews in the American colonies, and that most were sympathetic to the rebel cause. Forty or more Jews fought under Washington and there were 27 known Jewish officers in the Continental army. Such paucity of numbers guaranteed a marginal impact on events. Hirschfeld documents this tenuous "Jewish presence" with quotes from contemporary sources, including lengthy memorials and correspondence between Washington and various Jewish communities. He also gives background history on the Jewish communities of New York, Newport, Philadelphia, Charleston, Savannah, and Richmond, and embellishes this history with some interesting character asides.—Mark Norton Schatz, Ann Arundell County Historical Soc., Glen Burnie, Md.

Humble, Richard. The Fall of Saxon England.

St. Martin's. Mar. 1976. 242p. illus. maps. bibliog. index. $10. HIST

This book could almost be titled "Leadership in Anglo-Saxon England (and Today)," for it deals with history in terms of the flaws and strengths of aristocrats, and draws occasional parallels with current events. Humble conveys a cynical awareness of the dangers of public relations and a wry view of power politics. He praises the traditional heros (Alfred, Cnut) and damns the usual villains, especially Ethelred the Unready, while showing an up-to-date sympathy for Edward the Confessor. His interpretation of Maldon is silly, his maps are inadequate, and his lack of documentation is maddening. But his coldblooded judgments of men make good reading, aided by colorful, amusingly biased prose. For general history collections.—Donald K. Fry, Dept. of English, SUNY, Stony Brook

Jones, Michael Wynn. The Cartoon History of the American Revolution.

Putnam. 1975. 191p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-6876. ISBN 0-399-11598-6. $20. HIST

This informative and solidly researched history presents the era of the American Revolution as portrayed by British, French, Dutch and American cartoonists of that period. The author has selected major events from the years 1763 to 1783, and he has provided excellent historical background, appropriate political cartoons, and commentary. His volume is a fine contribution to Bicentennial and historical literature, for it helps to personalize the issues and it depicts vividly the bitter struggle between Britain and America. Highly recommended.—Dorothy D. Siles, Holden, Mass.

July, Robert W. Precolonial Africa: an economic and social history.

Scribners. 1975. 304p. maps. bibliog. index. LC 75-6920. ISBN 0-684-14318-6. $12.50: pap. ISBN 0-684-14319-4. $6.95. HIST July's previous book, A History of the African People (LJ 4/1/70), was successful, giving us reason to expect a great deal of his latest work. He does not disappoint us. His new book has shortcomings, but these lie largely in the limitations of its subject matter. Except for a few subjects, such as coastal trade, there simply is not much data available on nonpolitical questions, and consequently July fails in convincing us that economic history can be written about precolonial Africa. For the same reason, much of what he writes is impressionistic and ahistorical. Nevertheless, his approach is sympathetic, his prose is beautiful, and his book offers us a thoughtful and useful contribution to the field.—R. Kent Rasmussen, Dept. of History, U.C.L.A.

Lewis, Taylor, Jr. (photogs.) & Joanne Young (text). Spirit Up the People: North Carolina, the first two hundred years.

Oxmoor House. 1975. 152p. color photogs. index. $12.95. HIST

Spirit Up the People is an attractive history of North Carolina's role in the founding of the U.S. The authors were commissioned to write the book by the North Carolina Bicentennial Foundation, and the book is a commendable project. There are numerous photographs, all in color, several full-page. It is a handsome, informative book which I recommend heartily for public libraries.—Katharine Ratzenberger, Smithsonian Inst. Libs.

Mayer, Lynne Rhodes & Kenneth E. Vose. Makin' Tracks: the story of the transcontinental railroad in the pictures and words of the men who were there.

Praeger. 1975. 216p. photogs. maps. bibliog. index. LC 74-25464. ISBN 0-275-22020-6. $25. PHOTOG/HIST

Through contemporary photographs and descriptions, we see "the harshness and beauty" of this "hectic, thrilling and unscrupulous time." The photographs come from a variety of sources, but the works of Russell, Hart, and Jackson dominate. The text consists of

A vivid, richly documented account of Doomsday 1917

THE DESTRUCTION OF RUSSIA'S RULING CLASS

By DOUGLAS BROWN

"In February of 1917, when the last Tsar of Russia abdicated, the three million members of the Russian aristocracy were still in place. . . . By the end of 1917, they were gone. Brown supplies a short, well-written account of the Revolution with a special focus on this ruling caste."—Publishers Weekly. "Rarely has a ruling class died so ignominiously 'without political or social posterity.' The acting out of their death wish still has a kind of ghoulish fascination and, fortunately, Brown avoids sentimental effusions of pity."—Kirkus Reviews. Illustrations, notes, bibliography, index. $7.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

Selected as one of the Best Scientific and Technical Books of 1975

Stretching Man's Mind

A History of Data Processing

By MARGARET HARMON

"Dispelling any notion that the age of computers sprang full-blown into existence overnight, this book highlights the centuries-long history of man's preoccupation with computing machines, sketches some of the needs that mothered their invention, and offers insights into the lives of inventors."—Library Journal. "Highly readable . . . for the layman and, perhaps, the undergraduate."—Choice.

Illus./Bibl./Tables $8.95

MASON/CHARTER
641 Lexington Avenue
New York City 10022

chronologically arranged excerpts from "diaries, newspaper articles, speeches, reminiscences, testimony and gossip. . . ." Appropriate, authentic, readable, and interesting excerpts explain and illuminate the photographs. Although the chronological arrangement is fine for browsing, a conventional chapter structure would have made the material more accessible. The few contemporary maps are of interest, but they do not adequately support the text. However, the black-and-white photographs are important, authentic, and well reproduced. The result is a highly attractive, large-format album which nicely complements such standard histories as James McCague's Moguls and Iron Men (LJ 10/1/64). Makin' Tracks is a spin-off from Harold Mayer's fine documentary film, "Movin' On," and it should have wide appeal to history buffs and railroad enthusiasts.—William C. Robinson, Graduate Sch. of Library Science, Univ. of Tennessee, Knoxville

O'Farrell, Patrick. England and Ireland Since 1800.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1975. 193p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-19-215814-7. $7.75; pap. ISBN 0-19-289045-X. $3.95. HIST

O'Farrell gives us a brief but imaginative analysis of Anglo-Irish relations from the time of the Union to the present day. As in his Ireland's English Problem (1971), he insists that both nations have seen and continue to see the same reality in two very different ways. These culture-conditioned viewpoints remain a constant whether the relationship is viewed in economic, political, or religious terms. For instance, O'Farrell insists that the legislative (land reform) response to Irish agrarian unrest in the 19th Century failed because the Irish peasantry wanted not reform, but a return to, or recognition of, the values of "archaic" Irish rural "life styles." This and other imaginative arguments make O'Farrell's book a worthwhile counterbalance to more orthodox studies in Irish history.—John Moran, SUNY at Fredonia Lib.

Rose, William Lee, ed. A Documentary History of Slavery in North America.

Oxford Univ. Pr. Mar. 1976. 540p. bibliog. LC 75-16906. $19.95; pap. $5.95. REF/HIST

These 106 documents, ranging in length from a few lines to several pages, constitute an exceptional primary source anthology. Focusing on the personal and psychological consequences of living under slavery, Rose offers an unusually broad array of sources—including slave letters, songs and riddles, fugitive narratives, and ex-slave interviews—that succeed in illuminating private experience and social relationships. Each document is accompanied by a generous informative headnote, and the introduction provides an astute analysis of the difficulties in interpreting historical evidence. Many of the selections were heretofore unavailable; together they provide an uncommonly penetrating glimpse into the "interior" of slave life.—Robert C. Twombly, Dept. of History, C.C.N.Y.

Rothwell, Harry, ed. English Historical Documents. Vol. 3: 1189-1327.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1975. 1032p. maps. bibliog. index. $63. HIST

This latest addition to a distinguished series covers one of the most complex periods in English history, taking in Richard the Lionhearted, the Magna Carta, the expulsion of the Jews, etc. The volume offers translations of 239 key documents (even those in Middle English), plus brief introductions and bibliographies, and helpful annotation. Sections include narrative sources, government, church, social history, and thought. Seven clear maps and four appendixes (rulers, bishops, geneaology, and Easter tables) add to the volume's usefulness. The selection is judicious, the translations (occasionally updated) are sound, and the apparatus is vital. Larger public libraries should have this series, as should all college collections.—Donald K. Fry, English Dept., SUNY, Stony Brook

Archaeology

Burland, C. A. & Werner Forman. Feathered Serpent and Smoking Mirror: the gods and cultures of ancient Mexico.

Putnam. 1976. 128p. color illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-15075. ISBN 0-339-11609-5. $12.95. MYTHOLOGY/ARCHAEOLOGY

The Aztec gods Quetzalcoatl (Feathered Serpent) and Texcatlipoca (Smoking Mirror) are described in depth to emphasize a dualism in Aztec religion that is important in understanding the conquest of Mexico by Cortez in 1520. Militarism and human sacrifice were conducted in the name of Tezcatlipoca who, according to legend, had driven the peace-loving Quetzalcoatl from Mexico in the 10th Century A.D. Cortez' arrival coincided with prophecies of Quetzalcoatl's return and contributed greatly to Cortez' success in conquering a civilization whose cities and empires rivaled those of contemporary Europe and Asia. Burland's scholarly and readable text is supplemented by Foreman's superb photographs of artifacts, ruins, and landscapes. An excellent introduction to Aztec mythology and an insightful commentary of general interest on one of the world's vanished civilizations.—William S. Dancey, Dept. of Anthropology, Ohio State Univ., Columbus

White, Peter. The Past Is Human.

Taplinger. 1976. 165p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-21680. ISBN 0-8008-6265-1. $8.50. ARCHAEOLOGY

White is a British archaeologist who, along with most professionals, is dismayed by the popular hypothesis that men from outer space have not only visited earth but left traces of these visits. He is also disturbed by the inherent racism lurking within these views. His refutation of these beliefs is an uncomplicated survey aimed at the general audience. White's simple and logical thesis: these so-called anomalies were consistent with their respective societies and totally within their technological abilities. Since he only attacks the most sensational arguments, true believers will remain unconvinced. Because of the persistent popularity of the topic, the book is recommended for most popular collections.— Frederick M. Lauritsen, Eastern Washington State Coll., Cheney

Travel, Exploration & Adventure

Voges, Nettie Allen. Old Alexandria: where America's past is present.

EPM, dist. by Hawthorn. 1975. 208p. photogs. by Patricia Dalzell. fwd. by James W. Coldsmith. bibliog. LC 75-23343. ISBN 0-914440-10-1. pap. $5.95. TRAV

Old Alexandria is intended to be used as a guide to walking tours of Old Town, that part of Alexandria that existed in the 18th Century. The book begins with a discussion of the history of Alexandria up to 1779. It then presents five walking tours of the city and an interesting discussion of archaeological excavations in progress. No information is provided about restaurants and accommodations. The tours are arranged by type of building (public, houses, churches, and the waterfront) rather than by geographical area, so tourists will cross their own paths several times if they follow all the tours. There is only one map of Old Town, with no landmarks indicated. I would have preferred several small maps for each walking tour, with the landmarks indicated on the maps and the text keyed to the maps. Voges' text is at times difficult to absorb. She has researched her subject well, but her walking tours are better read by the armchair traveller. Libraries with one history of Alexandria may not need Voges' book.—Katharine Ratzenberger, Smithsonian Inst. Libs.

Home Economics

Norwak, Mary. Kitchen Antiques.

Praeger. 1975. 135p. illus. index. LC 74-6729. ISBN 0-275-22040-0. $14.95. DEC ARTS/HOME ECON

Scotch hands and gribett pans, jibcrooks and cookery books are just a few of the household items examined in this book by a cooking expert. Tools and devices commonplace in English and American kitchens and homes prior to 1914 are described by appearance and function, sometimes with an accompanying photograph. It is unfortunate that not all items mentioned are illustrated, since some descriptions are a bit vague. Also, Norwak frequently mentions items and inventions without describing them. The book is, nevertheless, interesting and informative, and very attractive. For public libraries that can afford it.—Callie B. McGinnis, Columbus Coll. Lib., Ga.

Cookery

Artusi, Pellegrino. Italianissimo: Italian cooking at its best.

Liveright, dist. by Norton. 1975. 552p. illus. index. tr. by Elisabeth Abbott. LC 72-359307. ISBN 0-87140-596-2. $12.50. COOKERY

Here for the first time in English is La Scienza in Cucina e L'arte di Mangiar

Bene, first published in Italy before the turn of the century. Twenty chapters cover everything from scallopine to meat jellies, vegetables, liqueurs, and ice cream. The text is a direct translation and no effort has been made to expand the vague directions in many recipes; for instance, what size pan to use, how long to cook in minutes. Also, no substitutes are suggested for such hard-to-find ingredients as ox marrow, salted tongue, or lamb sweetbreads. Characteristically for early cookbooks, there are recipes for home remedies (Artusi recommends frogs' legs broth for "illnesses of the chest and inflamation of the intestines"). The recipes are introduced or interspersed with delightful anecdotes and witty comments. This book is fun to read at times, but the recipes can, for the most part, be found elsewhere. Useful only to skilled Italian cooks looking for a few unusual and very authentic dishes. For historically inclusive or complete collections of Italian cookery.—Nancy P. Schneider, Kern County Lib. System, Bakersfield, Calif.

Ellis, Merle. Cutting-Up in the Kitchen: the butcher's guide to saving money on meat & poultry.

Chronicle. 1975. 216p. illus. index. LC 75-26502. pap. ISBN 0-87701-071-4. $5.95. COOKERY

In clear language, made clearer by admirable black-and-white drawings, Ellis, a California butcher, reduces the confusion retail merchandising terms cause by explaining exactly where everything the consumer sees in the meat case is located on the animal it came from and how best to cook it. Better yet, he tells meat buyers how they can eat better and more economically by selecting intelligently and doing a little work on the cuts they bring home. His instructions for accomplishing boning and cutting are simple enough so that even novices should have no trouble. Ellis' book covers much of the same material as Leon and Stanley Lobel's All About Meat (LJ 10/15/75), but it is better written, better organized, more useful, and costs less than half as much. An excellent buy.—Ruth Diebold, Finkelstein Memorial Lib., Spring Valley, N.Y.

Sichel, Peter. Which Wine: the wine drinkers buying guide.

Harper. 1975. 300p. illus. LC 75-6361. ISBN 0-06-013867-X. $10. BEVERAGES

In this excellent compendium, Sichel, a European wine exporter, recommends wine by type and price, and for appropriate food. For the chapters on type, a general introduction is followed by vintage and tasting information, concluding with a summary entitled notes to remember. The types are listed by taste and style, concentrating on the wines of the U.S., France, Germany, Italy, Spain, Portugal, and Canada. The tasting results appear in chart form with the country of origin, producer, price, and availability also included. The U.S. is divided into 29 market areas with the availability classed as general, limited, or none. The appendix lists wine tasters.—Christine Bulson, SUNY at Oneonta Lib.

LANGUAGE ARTS

Pei, Mario. The Story of Latin and the Romance Languages.

Harper. Mar. 1976. 285p. maps. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-06-013312-0. $13.95. LANG

Highly readable, as well as accessible to the educated general reader, this book provides an ambitious overview of language development from the beginnings of Latin to projections for the future of modern Romance languages. We see language bent through the prisms of history, geography, and psychology, as well as in the resulting flat spectrum of descriptive linguistics. Pei is a recognized authority, yet this book by its very breadth must gloss over complicated issues and make unsupported general statements. The final chapter gives a brief history of Romance philology and linguistics.—Ruth Dougherty, formerly with Sarasota P.L., Fla.

Robinson, Ian. The New Grammarians' Funeral: a critique of Noam Chomsky's linguistics.

Cambridge Univ. Pr. 1975. 189p. LC 75-6009. ISBN 0-521-20856-4. $13.95. LINGUISTICS

This book is extremely critical of the scientific study of language, particularly of transformational grammar as personified by Chomsky. Robinson's basic criticism is not that linguistics does what it does badly, but that it does the wrong thing. He believes it wrong to segregate meaning in a semantic component and to emphasize syntax and phonology. According to Robinson, meaning is language, and linguistics should tackle such questions as why King Lear is a great play. Most linguists are preoccupied with much more down-to-earth problems than literary style and would, I think, consider this criticism as beside the point—or at the very least, as extremely premature. It is as if the workers laying cement block for a basement were to be criticized for not having hung the wallpaper yet. Only for large collections that want to have every point of view represented. —Catherine von Schon, SUNY at Stony Brook Lib.

Literature

Carey, Gillian. Shelley.

Rowman & Littlefield. (Literature in Perspective). 1975. 160p. illus. ISBN 0-87471-754-X. $7.50. LIT

Fresh from reading Richard Holmes's impressive full-length biography, Shelley (LJ 5/15/75), this reviewer enjoyed Carey's work as a briefer and very different treatment. Its conversational style makes it most engaging, especially with the earlier poems, but from Prometheus Unbound on it waxes grave. Carey draws on recent studies, refutes T. S. Eliot's and F. R. Leavis' disparagements of the poet, and keeps Shelley's faults in perspective. Carey's estimate of him recalls that of one of the poet's Quaker contemporaries, Dr. Pope, who said "I like to hear thee

"Smart and sensible"*

HOW I FEED MY FAMILY ON $16 A WEEK

Jo Ann York

with Jerome Agel and Eugene Boe

"Everyone can benefit from studying her rules for planning, shopping, and preparing meals. To feed her family of 4, this suburban Washington housewife does most of her cooking from scratch, pares waste to a minimum, and uses only foods high in nutritional value and economical to buy.... Four weeks' sample menus are given, along with about 100 quick and easy recipes." – Library Journal. "A great deal of her advice is both smart and sensible for people who have to get maximum nutritional value from minimal budgets."—Kirkus Reviews*

160 pp. $5.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC. CM&G

200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

HOW TO BECOME A SUCCESSFUL MODEL

By Viju Krem

A professional model gives experienced advice on the requirements of photographic, live, and television modeling careers. The importance of the job interview, the composite and headsheet are carefully explained along with the role of the model agency, and earnings, budgeting, and living expenses in large metropolitan centers are concretely outlined. While physical measurements, facial features, hair care, and dress are given appropriate emphasis, stress is also placed upon necessary personality attributes such as poise, tact, taste, judgment. Tips are given on handling rejection and maintaining good relationships with fellow models, photographers, agency personnel. There are many charts, diagrams, and lists which provide practical information on exercise and make-up techniques, women's residences in New York City, established modeling schools, agencies in the U.S., Canada, and Europe, and numerous photographs of the author and other models add to the book's interest and attractiveness.

Addie Lee Bracy
School Library Journal

Photographs, 160 pages. Arco.

Cloth $8.95 Paper $5.00.

arco PUBLISHING COMPANY, INC.

219 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y. 10003

talk, friend Shelley, I see thee art very deep." Briefer in its scholarly apparatus than Donald H. Reiman's Percy Bysshe Shelley (Twayne), Carey's account provides a perceptive introduction to Shelley's life, thought, and works; and it's unencumbered by notes. Recommended.—Douglas W. Cooper, Randolph-Macon Coll. Lib., Ashland, Va.

Colmer, John. E. M. Forster: the personal voice.

Routledge & Kegan Paul. 1975. 243p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-7100-8209-6. $18.50. LIT

A sensible and intelligent survey of Forster's career, including his essays, biographies, and criticism, as well as his novels and short stories. Colmer interestingly supplements his argument by drawing on the unpublished Forster papers at King's College, Cambridge. Though the Forster that emerges seems altogether familiar, readers will find this book a helpful and reliable guide to his achievement. One only wonders how many have $18.50 to spare on a modest study of E. M. Forster.—Keith Cushman, Dept. of English, Univ. of Chicago de Rougemont, Denis. The Growl of Deeper Waters.

Univ. of Pittsburgh Pr. May 1976. 85p. tr. from French by Samuel Hazo. $5.95.

LIT/MYTHOLOGY

These essays aim to show by example why myths and fables reverberate with universal meaning. Through dialogues, interpretations, and personal ruminations the author suggests rather than explains why a holistic and teleological approach best captures the ambiguous but deeply resonant meaning of "the fabulous." In the tradition of Christian existentialism, de Rougemont believes clarity appears in the end rather than the beginning. Where criticism and fable converge in an appropriate image, such as the Gordian knot or Peter Schlemihl's lost shadow, the effect is illuminating. But his insistence on explicating fables by means of fables occasionally results in the merely portentous. Samuel Hazo, himself an accomplished poet, has lovingly replicated the author's subtle reasoning and delicate rhythmic prose.—Daniel Levinson, "Newton Times," Mass.

Field, Frank. Three French Writers and the Great War.

Cambridge Univ. Pr. 1975. 212p. bibliog. index. LC 75-22982. ISBN 0-521-20916-1. $13.95.

HIST/LIT

These three writers represent differing reactions against European liberalism after 1914—Henri Barbusse turning to Communism, Drieu la Rochelle and Georges Bernanos to Fascism. The author, a British historian, sets their writings against the backdrop of three wars and the complex political and social scene in Europe which molded their ideologies, revealing three engagé intellectuals tormented by fears for the future of France. Useful for interdisciplinary studies in academic libraries.—Philip K. Harber, Lindsay Place H.S. Lib., Pointe Claire, Quebec, Canada

Glassman, Peter J. Language and Being: Joseph Conrad and the literature of personality.

Columbia Univ. Pr. Mar. 1976. 256p. bibliog. LC 75-29092. ISBN 0-231-03999-9. $12.50. LIT

This unusual study combines literary analysis, psychology, and biography. Glassman reads Conrad's first decade as a writer as a difficult and sustained effort to cope with the "routine sensation of humiliation, loneliness, and self-loathing." Glassman begins by psychologizing Conrad's Polish years and career as a seaman, establishing what he modishly describes as the "harsh shocks and estranging patterns of his . . . experience." The rest of the book studies Conrad's first five novels from the perspective of his "private struggle for coherence and peace." Only with Lord Jim does Conrad, like Marlow, achieve the "courage and skill to attempt an accommodation with the universe and with himself." Language and Being isn't as reductive as I'm making it sound. Glassman bolsters his interesting argument with close reading. Nevertheless, his approach is certain to raise hackles. It's also easy to feel that his developmental thesis rides herd over his interpretation of the fiction and makes Conrad's progress too tidy. Language and Being is brash, challenging, controversial, and not entirely persuasive.—Keith Cushman, Dept. of English, Univ. of Chicago

Heike Monogatari. The Tale of the Heike.

Internat. Scholarly Bk. Servs. 1975. tr. by Hiroshi Kitagawa & Bruce T. Tsuchida. fwd. by Edward Seidensticker. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-86008-128-1. slipcased. $47. LIT

The most famous of the war tales written in the 13th Century, Heike Monogatari has been an inspiration to many Japanese writers and one of the most influential works in Japanese literature. It describes the rise and fall of the Taira and Minamoto families and the wars which preceded the establishment of the first Shogunate. The spirit of the new warrior class, which was to be so much a part of feudal Japan, is represented here more fully than in any other similar work. This new, and excellent, translation includes many notes and an informative introduction and will be of particular value to scholars of Japan and Japanese literature.—Curtis W. Stucki, Univ. of Washington Lib., Seattle

Kaplan, Fred. Dickens and Mesmerism: the hidden springs of fiction.

Princeton Univ. Pr. 1975. 250p. illus. index. LC 75-2994. ISBN 0-691-06291-9. $10. LIT

The hallucinatory, dream-like aspects of Dickens' fiction have always attracted comment. They have been related to fairy tales, dreams, and melodrama. Now Kaplan has found another significant source in mesmerism. Dickens' interest in what we now call hypnotism has long been known; he was a close friend of Dr. John Elliotson, the pioneering medical hypnotist, and he antagonized his wife by engaging in a long hypnotic "cure" of Madame de la Rue. Kaplan documents the friendship and the cure in some detail in order to establish Dickens' belief in mesmerism and then turns to a discussion of the fiction. The best thing about Kaplan's study is that he avoids the trite, the obvious, and the sensational, and treats his topic with the sophistication and critical understanding that it deserves. He does not pretend that the novels are tracts on mesmerism; he relates Dickens' interest in mesmerism to the deepest concerns in his fiction: questions about the nature of self, identity, imagination, sexuality, power, and will. The result is an excellent and illuminating work.—Charles Bishop, Dept. of English, Univ. of New Orleans

Larson, Charles R. The Novel in the Third World.

Inscape Corp., 1629 K St., N.W., Suite 5107, Washington, D.C. 20006. 1976. 135p. bibliog. ISBN 0-87953-402-8. $16.50. LIT

In his highly-readable studies of ten novels from Africa, India, the South Pacific, Afro-America, native America, and the Caribbean, from the 1920's to 1973, Larson argues persuasively that the West no longer owns the genre the way it owned the homelands of these new writers. The Third World novelist combines exposure to foreign literary forms and languages with an acute concern for Western-inflicted cultural damage. In this vigorous new version of the novel, Larson sees stress on the oral tradition, a cyclical approach to time, and primacy of situation over character, plus a long-term trend from a collective consciousness to an individual consciousness. One may quibble about Larson's definition of the Third World, but not about the great value of this book for readers still blinded by Western ethnocentrism.—Thomas A. Hale, Dept. of French & Comparative Literature Program, Pennsylvania State Univ., University Park

Liu, James J. Y. Chinese Theories of Literature.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. 1975. 197p. bibliog. index. LC 74-11631. ISBN 0-226-48692-3. $15. LIT

This first study in a Western language of Chinese theories of literature has three purposes—to contribute to an eventual universal theory of literature, to elucidate Chinese theories for students of Chinese literature and criticism, and to make available material which can be used for a more adequate synthesis of Chinese and Western views of literature. Liu's material, his analytical (rather than merely descriptive) and historical approach, and his extensive notes and bibliography make this a valuable tool for all students of Chinese literature and thought.—Warren Collins, Time-Life Educational Systems, Ltd., Tokyo

Miles, Keith. Günter Grass.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1975. 240p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-06-494823-4. $15. LIT

This literary analysis concisely examines Grass and his poetry, prose, and drama. His puns and parodies, pungent symbols, and keen political, religious, and literary satire are seen as part of the German literary tradition (rather than as a post World War II phenomenon). Comparisons with Thomas Mann, Gottfried Benn, and others reinforce this premise. An interesting addition to a contemporary German literature course.—Patricia M. Hogan, North Suburban Lib. System, Wheeling, Ill.

Moers, Ellen. Literary Women.
Doubleday. Mar. 1976. illus. index. ISBN 0-385-07427-1. $10. LIT
This is an account of 19th- and 20th-Century English, American, and French women who wrote literature. In one sense it is a subjective survey and in this respect it largely succeeds. Moers manages to convey very well the literary climate in which 19th-Century women wrote. But on another level, Moers is interested in analysing the imaginative concerns of her literary women, and in this respect her success is mixed. Her broadest assertions are her weakest. For example, she argues that women writers, as opposed to men, wrote for money. This is obvious nonsense. It is easy to come up with a list of men, from Balzac and Dickens to Fitzgerald and Hemingway, who wrote for bread. She argues that women writers are particularly concerned with the mythos of work. How does she account for the way Voltaire ends Candide? The book is full of these defenseless generalizations. On the other hand, Moers makes connections and throws out ideas which are fascinating in their implications. For example, much of the covert sexuality in female Gothic novels might derive from Victorian nursery games. Unfortunately, very few of these ideas are followed through or explored for their full implications. A great deal is left hanging, and this can become irritating. An interesting, if annoying, book.—Shernaz Mehta Mollinger, Dept. of English, Briarcliff Coll., Briarcliff Manor, N.Y.

O'Brien, Flann. Stories and Plays.
Richard Seaver: Viking. Mar. 1976. 240p. $8.95. LIT
Admirers of At Swim—Two Birds and The Third Policeman now have further confirmation of O'Brien's eccentric genius with this collection of hitherto unpublished writings. It includes the play Faustus Kelly, a transcription of the Faust legend into local Irish politics, and the unfinished novel Slattery's Sago Saga, a typically bizarre fantasy about stopping Irish emigration to America by replacing the blight-prone potato crop with sago trees. Two short stories (in one of which a man briefly supposes himself to be a train), a one-act play, and an appraisal of Joyce complete the selection. Though not as richly textured as his two best known novels, these works are replete with absurd events, endless conversations, wit, eloquence, and arcane learning. Altogether a delightful, funny, and preposterous book.—Michael Page, Dept. of English, Kalamazoo Valley Community Coll., Mich.

Owen, Stephen. The Poetry of Meng Chiao and Han Yü.
Yale Univ. Pr. 1975. 294p. index. LC 74-29732. ISBN 0-300-01822-3. $15. LIT
T'ang China was a period of intense poetic activity. One principal body of poetic theory and practice was called Fu-Ku, or "return to antiquity," a name which embodied the idea of a return both to ancient poetic forms and traditions and also to traditional Chinese social and moral values. Owen's study of the two principal Fu-Ku poets is concerned with the way in which Chinese poetry changed and how this change was justified. Owen sets out the biographical story of each poet and also employs extensive interpretative analysis of selected poetry in order to trace the development of the two poets and the Fu-Ku movement. This study will interest students of Chinese literature and be a useful addition to subject collections.—Warren Collins, Time-Life Educational Systems, Ltd., Tokyo

Proffer, Carl & Ellendea Proffer, eds. The Ardis Anthology of Recent Russian Literature.
420p.
Proffer, Carl & Ellendea Proffer, eds. The Silver Age of Russian Culture: an anthology.
454p. ISBN 0-88233-171-X.
ea. vol: Ardis. 1975. illus. $15. LIT
Both these anthologies rely on material already available in the Proffers' excellent journal, Russian Literature Triquarterly. The volumes share a similar format, presenting in translations by various hands (ranging from neophytes to such well-known practitioners as Stanley Kunitz and Richard Wilbur) a wide variety of verse and prose from the periods they survey. The Silver Age also includes some well-chosen pieces of Symbolist and Acmeist criticism, essays on the journals Apollon and Mir Iskusstva, and a peculiar brief appendix of Russian texts. Blok's famous poem, The Twelve, which has already stumped so many translators, is given in two different versions; neither, alas, is really satisfying. The material in The Silver Age will be more familiar than that in Recent Russian Literature; Blok, Akhmatova and Mandelstam, to name a few, are fairly widely anthologized by now in English translations. The virtue of this anthology lies in its conveniently putting so large a sample of Silver Age writing into one nicely illustrated volume.

Recent Russian Literature, in contrast, is an anthology of the unknown; much of the material is hard to come by in Russian, let alone in translation. Two selections, by Inna Varlamova and Sasha Sokolov, appear in print for the first time here. The result is a lively and diversified array of recent Russian verse and prose fiction written both within the Soviet Union (including published and samizdat' literature) and by Russians abroad. It is a rewarding grab bag to which readers interested in the reawakening of Russian literary life are likely to return again and again.—Madeline G. Levine, Dept. of Slavic Languages, Univ. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Thompson, Denys. What To Read in English Literature.
Rowman & Littlefield. 1975. 154p. index. LC 75-9873. ISBN 0-87471-714-0. $11.50. LIT
This concise reader's adviser is not only a reliable vade mecum to the high points of English literature, but is also a happy mix of cultural and literary history that can be read for its own sake. Each chapter contains a discussion of a period in English history and literature and is followed by a short reading list of historical, literary, and critical works. Although many books of this type tend to overwhelm the reader with masses of material to be read, Thompson always keeps his audience—the layman—in mind and therefore chooses only works that are, in his judgment, worthwhile reading and avoids those mainly of interest to the literary historian. His learned yet commonsensical approach to the massive corpus of English literature is especially suited to the public library clientele. Only one thing may detract from the book's appeal: its implied audience is British and therefore it assumes a cozy familiarity with English history on the part of the reader; and also all of the books and series mentioned are from British publishers. On the other hand, the oblique references to English history may be just the thing to stimulate an enthusiastic reader's curiosity.—Timothy Schobert, Univ. of Ottawa Lib., Ontario, Canada

Turco, Alfred, Jr. Shaw's Moral Vision: the self and salvation.
Cornell Univ. Pr. May. 1976. 304p. ISBN 0-8014-0965-9. $13.50. LIT
Turco proceeds from Shaw's pragmatic premises as stated in The Quintessence of Ibsenism, restated in The Perfect Wagnerite, and developed and modified in the major plays. Turco maintains that Shaw's vision has enduring validity, although some of his Fabian solutions were simplistic and passé. Since Turco concentrates on Shaw as a social critic and pays no attention whatsoever to the social conditions which elicited such criticism, Shaw sounds like a contemporary playwright. (A play with a faultier sense of history than John Bull's Other Island can hardly be imagined, but Turco does not even notice Shaw's lack of clairvoyance.) Necessarily Turco must give secondary emphasis to the plays qua plays, although he implies that Shaw's theatrical acumen is what makes the moral expositions effective. Shavians may find Turco's discussions obvious, but for nonspecialists they will be useful.—Marilyn Gaddis Rose, Dept. of Comparative Literature, SUNY at Binghamton

Weintraub, Stanley & Rodelle Weintraub. Lawrence of Arabia: the literary impulse.
Louisiana State Univ. Pr. 1975. 175p. bibliog. index. LC 74-27195. ISBN 0-8071-0152-4. $8.50. BIOG/LIT
The Weintraubs contend that Lawrence's source of literary achievement can be attributed to his wide variety of work and sheer desire to be a great writer. Although the Weintraubs have written other books on Lawrence, in this volume they fail to examine in depth the nature of his works. The fact that Lawrence is often guilty of exaggerating facts and giving the illusion of history is not given serious consideration. Too much attention is paid to old biographical information, leaving little room for critical evaluation. Lawrence is depicted as a man of action and as a self-deprecating, frustrated writer agonizing over his prose. When Lawrence completed the final version of Seven Pillars of Wisdom "he despaired that he had failed."—Pamela G. Bonnell, Ft. Rucker, Ala.

Young, Dudley. Out of Ireland: a reading of Yeats's poetry.

Dufour. 1975. 169p. bibliog. $10. LIT

Young's book is an interesting but flawed study, which "assumes a considerable familiarity with Yeats." Yet Young seems unfamiliar with even basic fact, e.g., Sean O'Casey was a Protestant not a Catholic. Possibly his own assumptions lead Young to the misreadings of the poetry which mar the book's scholarship. His tone, likewise, at times disturbs what should be literate and serious prose. However, the book should be read by students of Yeats because Young poses some provocative questions and makes some controversial statements that might lead others to fruitful considerations and responses to Yeats's poetry.—Ann Fallon, Dept. of English, Brandeis Univ., Waltham, Mass.

MUSIC

Berry, Wallace. Structural Functions in Music.

Prentice-Hall. 1975. 447p. illus. index. LC 74-16448. ISBN 0-13-853903-0. $12.95. MUSIC

The title suggests Schoenberg's Structural Functions of Harmony, and indeed Berry acknowledges Schoenberg's theoretical works as one of his points of departure. His book consists of close analyses of many types of tonal, textural, and rhythmic structures. Berry has developed some new terms to define his textural concepts. A typical passage of Stravinsky's Variations for Orchestra is described as "heterorhythmic-contradirectional-contraintervallic." Berry's new terms are adequately defined but difficult to trace in the index. This work will be extremely useful in graduate theory seminars. For specialized music libraries.—Dika Newlin, Sch. of Fine & Performing Arts, Montclair State Coll., Upper Montclair, N.J.

Paredes, Américo. A Texas-Mexican Cancionero.

Univ. of Illinois Pr. (Music in American Life). 1975. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-252-00522-8. $8.95. MUSIC

Another excellent volume in the "Music in American Life" series, this is an outstanding "songbook" of Lower Rio Grande Border life. A former editor of the Journal of American Folklore and author and editor of other books about Texan-Mexican lore, Paredes has culled this collection of 66 songs from his own repertoire. The material is divided into "Old Songs from Colonial Days," "Songs of Border Conflict," "Songs for Special Occasions," "Romantic and Comic Songs," and "The Pocho Appears." Paredes discusses the songs in the context of their cultural history. There are notes to the songs, melody lines, English versions, a glossary, discography, and bibliography. This is a major folksong collection that is highly recommended.—Guy Logsdon, Univ. of Tulsa Lib.

Porter, Cole. The Unpublished Cole Porter.

S. & S. 1975. 142p. ed. by Robert Kimball. arrangements by George Terry. index. LC 75-12730. ISBN 0-671-22093-4. $9.95. MUSIC

For this rich sampling of Porter songs the editor has chosen 23 works originally written for shows but never used—Porter's "trunk music." These songs span the years from 1910, when Porter was a freshman at Yale, to 1957, when he wrote a song for Gene Kelly to dance and sing in the film Les Girls. Although there is no "Night and Day" or "Begin the Beguine" in this collection, it does include some interesting and entertaining songs. Who but Porter (in his "Tale of an Oyster," probably the cleverest song in the collection) could describe the "oyster" as "moister" in his "cloister"?—Stephen M. Fry, UCLA Music Lib.

Yeston, Maury. The Stratification of Musical Rhythm.

Yale Univ. Pr. 1976. 155p. bibliog. LC 75-18189. ISBN 0-300-01884-3. $10. MUSIC

The acknowledgements, and the general tone of this book indicate that it is a doctoral dissertation. After a historical introduction, the main text is devoted to the problems of analyzing rhythmic structures in tonal music. The techniques used are based strongly on the theories and methods of Heinrich Schenker. In the last chapter, the opening measures of a nontonal Schoenberg piece are analyzed. For music libraries in schools having extensive graduate theory programs.—Dika Newlin, Sch. of Fine & Performing Arts, Montclair State Coll., Upper Montclair, N.J.

Philosophy

Ellenburg, Stephen. Rousseau's Political Philosophy: an interpretation from within.

Cornell Univ. Pr. Mar. 1976. 344p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-8014-0960-8. $15. PHIL

Critics since 1914 have found Rousseau inconsistent and insincere; Ellenburg finds him logically coherent, and argues that the problem lies in Rousseau's idiosyncratic use of terms which causes him to be misunderstood. In a marvellous critique of atomistic 18th-Century liberalism, Ellenburg shows Rousseau to be truly original, neither individualist nor collectivist. An "individual" is a socially dependent product of a nonaggregative society. In order to have liberty—the very purpose of politics—we need citizens who choose to obey rules but not rulers. Ellenburg's book is the most important and imaginative work on Rousseau in 50 years; certain to be commented on, and a necessity for all philosophy collections.—Angelo Juffras, Dept. of Philosophy, William Paterson Coll., Wayne, N.J.

Hardy, Alister. The Biology of God: a scientist's study of man the religious animal.

Taplinger. Apr. 1976. 235p. index. LC 75-35473. ISBN 0-8008-0740-5. $9.95. REL/PHIL

"The Biology of Religious Experience" would perhaps have been a better title for this book which sets out to "provide the ground for a rational biological approach to God." The work presents a novel idea in a consistent explication. However, one wishes Sir Alister were as familiar with contemporary natural theology and philosophy of religion as he is with biology (he is Emeritus Professor of Zoology at Oxford). Theses that rest on Paley and James need further development and more recent analysis to bear the weight that he places on them, and the book is not as rigorously argued as philosophers and theologians would wish. A very English import based on Hardy's Gifford Lectures and work at the Religious Experience Research Unit he founded.—Alfred N. Garwood, Randolph Township P.L., N.J.

Jabès, Edmond. The Book of Questions.

Wesleyan Univ. Pr. Mar. 1976. 175p. tr. from French by Rosmarie Waldrop. ISBN 0-8195-4091-9. $12; pap. ISBN 0-8195-6043-X. $4.95. LIT/PHIL

This is the first English translation of the first volume of a remarkable work. Its concerns are so basic that they extend beyond genre, philosophy, and literature. For Jabès, every word is a question in the "book" which is being. Using paradoxes, he constantly forces the reader into new considerations of reality: naming is creation but also death, because it limits the thing named; words are our most useful tools in a search for wholeness that will render words useless. From the perspective of Judaism, Jabès unites Eastern with Western mysticism, attention to the moment with a hunger for God. Finally, every act—for Jabès, especially writing and understanding one's Jewishness—is a question. The pain and solitude as well as the necessity to continue questioning are rendered with profound and moving simplicity.—Elaine F. Palencia, formerly with Harvard Coll. Lib.

POETRY

Benedikt, Michael. Night Cries.

Wesleyan Univ. Pr. Mar. 1976. LC 75-32526. ISBN 0-8195-2080-2. $7.50; pap. ISBN 0-8195-1080-7. $3.45. POETRY

New prose poems by the well-known poet, editor, and translator. In his previous books, I've always felt that Benedikt was a singular man trying to touch the world around him, but never really feeling or seeing it. In Night Cries he accepts that this is an obstacle and attacks it with such force that it is almost transformed into a virtue. Consider that he's chosen to title the third section "Insensitive Poems." In "Errors of the Magi" he says that they tried to "increase their popularity by going around wearing duncecaps as a sign of their humanity and humility." The book begins with a macabre fascination for sickness, continues with juvenile masturbation fantasy. The fourth section contains a long healing sequence which follows the course of one day, from evening to evening. The poems in this section are pleasantly readable, but finally too superficial to be worth the effort. "My pornography is the next century," Benedikt says near the end. He doesn't convince me.—Rochelle Ratner, Poetry Columnist, "Soho Weekly News," New York

Booth, Philip. Available Light.
Viking. Mar. 1976. 96p. ISBN 0-670-14310-3. $4.95. POETRY
Booth's poems are about ". . . lives/ we barely know, lives/ we keep wanting to know." Most have their roots in nature where Booth has ". . . only begun to see how/ I feel,/ to believe who I am,/ to trust what I know." One should read the poems carefully because they are rich and deep. They continue to reverberate in the mind. The voice we heard in Booth's earlier collections holds steady, consistently telling us how to see. It continually asks us to be aware of the light and the moment that comes with it. In "How to See Deer" Booth directs us to hold still ". . . as if it were dusk/ look into light falling:/ in deep relief/ things even out. Be/ careless of nothing. See/ what you see."—Louis Sasso, Boston P.L.

Corman, Cid. The Gist of Origin, 1951–1971: an anthology.
Grossman, dist. by Viking. 1975. 525p. LC 73-7089. ISBN 0-670-34176-2. $17.50. POETRY
This book closes an important gap in American literary history. Throughout the 1950's and 1960's Corman's little magazine Origin was publishing some of the major works of the Black Mountain poets, and publishing other important work as well; yet the familiar vicissitudes of little magazines and Corman's cranky innocence—"Origin is not for sale; it can be had for love . . . not money"—insure that very few libraries have this important magazine. Now they can, almost. Corman collects here, in chronological sequence, many of the best pieces of Origin's two decades, choosing mostly work not yet readily available elsewhere. Early poetry of Charles Olson, Robert Creeley, and Denise Levertov, side by side with late works of Wallace Stevens and William Carlos Williams reminds us what a dynamo this magazine was for third-generation American poetry. Here too are sections of Gary Snyder's Mountains and Rivers Without End, Louis Zukofsky's "A," Robert Duncan's book on H.D., Paul Blackburn's Pound-rivalling translations of troubadours, and letters of Charles Olson. This list alone, by no means complete, commends the book to readers of contemporary poetry and literary historians alike.—James McKenzie, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Dakota, Grand Forks

Liu, Wu-chi & Irving Yucheng Lo, eds. Sunflower Splendor: three thousand years of Chinese poetry.
Anchor: Doubleday. 1975. 630p. bibliog. index. LC 74-25136. $17.50; pap. $6.95. POETRY
This remarkably fine anthology should remain standard for a long time. It contains about 1000 poems in classical styles, ranging from the Shih Ching poems of the 12th Century B.C. to eight examples of Mao Tse-tung's work, newly translated by scholars fluent in both Chinese and English. The formerly frequent use of informants has been avoided. The results are extremely successful. Since they are done by someone familiar with the original, translations reproduce style and idiom as closely as possible. They read very well and convey a feeling for the nuances of the original without falling into the use of archaic or "poetic" English. Copious notes on the poems and on the poets, a very complete bibliography.—Donald J. Pearce, Univ. of Minnesota Lib. Duluth

Merrill, James. Divine Comedies.
Atheneum. 1976. 136p. ISBN 0-689-10703-X. $8.95. POETRY
As his Dantean title suggests, Merrill descends here to an underworld of memory and personal association. He retrieves large fragments of personal history through precisely recalled images: toy animals from the attic, a puzzle pieced together in 1939, the golden cross on a godchild's throat. The missing puzzle pieces of his life begin to fall into place in these resonant poems where nothing is "lost in translation." Merrill writes in a style that is sumptuous, allusive, and exquisitely wrought, in the manner of Auden, Yeats, or Marianne Moore. Turkish, Greek, and Oriental motifs run through the book like a bright filigree. The final section amounts to a 90-page acrostic of 26 poems, one for each letter of the alphabet. This seventh book by a major American poet belongs in any collection of contemporary poetry.—Daniel L. Guillory, Dept. of English, Millikin Univ., Decatur, Ill.

Mott, Michael. Absence of Unicorns, Presence of Lions.
Little. 1976. 99p. $7.50; pap. $4.50. POETRY
Mott skillfully interweaves description and allusion, thereby delineating nature and myth, two worlds continually juxtaposed and fused in this third book. The first section of the book entitled "The Letters" is a closely integrated scheme based on the combining of several separate groups of poems. The effect is a fugue-like arrangement of themes and styles. "And both ascend/ two themes together/ separate/ and intertwined." The second section, unhappily titled "The Unpeaceable Kingdom," is a much looser aggregate of poems which continues the themes of the earlier section, this time in the context of an American setting. As ambitious as the first part of the book is, the second part includes the more fully realized and successful poems. An uneven book, with some extraordinarily beautiful and intelligent poems.—Lynn Emanuel, Dept. of English, Univ. of Pittsburgh

Oppen, George. The Collected Poems of George Oppen.
New Directions, dist. by Lippincott. 1975.263p. LC 75-6965. ISBN 0-8112-0583-5. $15.95. POETRY
Oppen's five previous volumes of poems together with new poems, "Myth of the Blaze," are conveniently collected here. Strongly in the H.D.-Pound-Williams tradition, Oppen achieves fresh connections such as: "of poems/ precise as the low sky"; "veins in the stones and the rock/ of the mountains wandering"; and "people therefore run away/ into everything the gift"—these excerpts which break continuity but express thought separately are all from the new poems. Oppen stated ironically in his 1968 Pulitzer volume Of Being Numerous that his motive in writing was to "achieve clarity." His distinctive voice is slender, contains great leaps and stretches of mind, and is shown in this collection to be entirely worthwhile as poem.—Kathryn Gibbs Harris, Dept. of English, Michigan State Univ., East Lansing

Piontek, Heinz. Alive or Dead.
Unicorn, Greensboro. (German Series). 1976. 61p. tr. by Richard Exner. LC 72-77917. ISBN 0-87775-041-6. $10; pap. ISBN 0-87775-089-0. $3.50. POETRY
Silesian-born Piontek, one of the deserving contemporary German poets, has published more than half a dozen collections of verse, essays, short stories, radio plays, and a novel. English-speaking poetry readers are fortunate to make his acquaintance through this fine bilingual edition, an assortment of his latest work, arranged by Exner in celebration of Piontek's 50th birthday and in collaboration with the author. Piontek's lean lines, his clear precise diction, his sharply etched imagery seem to favor translation. Exner's recreation is almost perfect and gives the full taste of masterful lyrical reflections on places, on writing, walking, remembering. Piontek's imagery is inspired by nature and marked by water and wind. His well-weighed lines and balanced stanzas never lose their course. "I see them/ pierce the charged air./ Blazing."—Inge Judd, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Rane, Bill. Talfulano.
The Smith, dist. by Horizon. 1976. 120p. LC 75-27249. ISBN 0-912292-39-3. pap. $4. F/POETRY
Rane's first book resists genre description. The poetry sections tend to flabbiness in spite of many lyrical and strong passages; the prose lacks narrative control and leans too heavily on a gush of rapture. Purists will find the book flawed and uneven. Still, it is a charming and tough-minded Bildungsroman in which the boy Talfulano moves through a Montana landscape toward an initiation experience that achieves the dimension of true myth. Christian allegory, sexual and psychological exploration, satire and celebration of Montana Americus, investigation of hatred and prejudice all inform this unique tale. Comparable to George Keithley's poetry of the American West, there is not a little of the flavor of Hemingway's machismo and nada in Rane's book.—Dave Smith, Dept. of English, Cottey Coll., Nevada, Mo.

Schmitz, Dennis. Goodwill, Inc.
Ecco Pr. dist. by Viking. Mar. 1976. 47p. $6.95. POETRY
"I wake in another/ skin" says Dennis Schmitz in one of his new poems, and one of the many pleasures of his new book is the number of skins the reader is allowed to wake in. This is a book of people and of place. We move from Chicago to California in a geography lesson that is both actual and metaphoric. Schmitz is a careful poet, and his technique, his tone of voice are simple, even quiet—deceptively so. For against this simplicity the newness of his metaphors glows as if "dipped/ in the sun's fresh golden/ spoor." Schmitz takes the ordinary, the tawdry and transforms them through language and feeling into something strange, yet suddenly familiar. "If only my tongue/ were a latch in the mouth of love" he says—as if it were anything less.—Linda Pastan, Potomac, Md.

Traxler, Patricia. Blood Calendar.
Morrow. 1975. 96p. LC 75-22165. ISBN 0-688-02970-1. $5.95. POETRY
To the formal simplicity and intimacy characteristic of much recent feminist poetry Traxler adds a sense of humor and fantasy that expands her reflections upon daily events. "Suicide Note #3" begins, "You question my sincerity," because her notes have "ended/ R.S.V.P." The conclusion mocks self and world: "as a purist you'll be pleased to note/ that lately as I write/ my fingers stiffen . . . Death will make an honest woman out of me." "Collection" is a fantasy of religious guilt and social criticism. "Listen God/ I know you've put a tail on me." Because of her promise at ten to be a nun, in reparation for masturbation, "you've hunted me down like a collection agency/ ever since." But Traxler's poems can also be limp and dependent upon a self-conscious imagery, as in lines like "I am planted in/ this chair/ It pushes/ slivered hours into/ my spine." In the weak poems she takes herself too seriously, without the saving bite of wit and true imagination.—Suzanne Juhasz, Dept. of English, Univ. of Colorado, Boulder

Young, Al. Geography of the Near Past.
Holt. Mar. 1976. 75p. $6.95; pap. $3.95. POETRY
Young is trying to bring more of the truth of black experience into his poetry. Unfortunately, he has given in to the temptation to confuse imaginative form with sterile rhymes and meters. Too often—both in the narratives and in the sketches, lyrics, and monologues—the social relevance of the topic or the regularity of the line length was made the measure of the poem's form. The collection opens with a half-hearted attempt at a sonnet, concludes with a half-humorous black rage sequence, and contains poems that mirror the egoism and pathos of urban life. The few good things—"Visiting Day," "Making Love After Hours," "Dude in Denver," and "Aunt"—are not strong enough to save the book from being more a document than a work of art.—Michael Madigan, Dept. of English, San Francisco State Univ.

Selected as one of the Best Scientific and Technical Books of 1975

The Tides of Change

Peace, Pollution, and Potential of the Oceans

Edited by ELIZABETH MANN BORGESE and DAVID KRIEGER

"A collection of papers sponsored by Pacem in Maribus in conjunction with the U.N. Conference on the Law of the Sea. The authors represent a broad spectrum in terms of the varied research institutions. Recommended."—Choice. "An excellent source book on some newer issues as well as more traditional ocean topics."—Library Journal. "A must for serious students of ecology."—Kirkus Reviews.

Bibl./Index/Notes $15.00

MASON/CHARTER
641 Lexington Avenue
New York City 10022

Political Science & International Affairs

Binder, David. The Other German: Willy Brandt's life and times.
New Republic. 1976. 373p. illus. index. LC 75-29024. ISBN 0-915220-09-1. $12.50.

Drath, Viola Herms. Willy Brandt: prisoner of his past.
Chilton. 1975. 364p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 75-24964. ISBN 0-8019-6196-3. $8.95. BIOG/POL SCI
Two correspondents, one American (Binder) and the other German (Drath), attempt, to greater and lesser degrees, to recount and analyze Brandt's rise and fall as leader of the West German Socialist party, Mayor of West Berlin, and Chancellor of the West German state. Binder covers in a general fashion Brandt's life from his childhood to his resignation in 1974. Drath concentrates on analyzing his years as mayor and as chancellor; she emphasizes the latter, and pays particular attention to his role as the public figurehead of Ostpolitik rather than the actual theoretician behind the policy. This dichotomy will probably be missed in the Binder piece by all but the more experienced readers of current European political events.

Overall, Binder presents a pedestrian narrative with very little analysis of character, parties, or events. His portrait of Brandt reveals no major faults or positive aspects; nor does Binder explore adequately the effect of Brandt's character on his political and personal judgments. His text reads at best like run-of-the-mill daily newspaper journalism.

Drath draws heavily on interviews with Brandt, as well as other European heads of state, German political party functionaries, and long-time friends. These topical interviews offer perspectives on Brandt's resignation, his political role, his climb to the top, his private life (and the women who have shared it), his years in exile, etc. Drath follows these interviews with her own well-organized, reasonably documented analyses. It is possible that she has overemphasized Brandt's private life and its effect on his public actions, but we will have to allow time to be the final judge of this sector. Drath's work will more than adequately serve as a general analysis and overview of Brandt's political career.—Robin J. Masters, Placentia Lib. District, Calif.

Cole, Leonard A. Blacks in Power: a comparative study of black and white elected officials.
Princeton Univ. Pr. 1976. 250p. illus. index. $13.50. POL SCI
The increased number of black elected officials now permits sophisticated studies of their influence in government. The author has taken as a sample 16 New Jersey cities which have at least 15 percent black population. He interviewed the cities' elected officials—96 whites, 31 blacks—to determine if there was a difference between the black and white officials, and what the reaction of the white officials was to the blacks in office. In addition to reporting the results, (survey questions are included in an appendix), Cole gives two case studies of issues (busing and zoning) to demonstrate that the presence of black elected officials did indeed influence policy making. He shows, for example, that blacks help in formulating policies; they influence appointments of blacks to government positions; and they help sensitize the white officials to black needs. A well written and thoroughly researched study.—William Schenck, Yale Univ. Lib.

Duiker, William J. The Rise of Nationalism in Vietnam, 1900-1941.
Cornell Univ. Pr. 1976. 320p. bibliog. index. LC 75-18723. ISBN 0-8014-0951-9. $15. HIST/POL SCI
This outstanding history deserves to be widely read and adopted in university courses on modern Asia. Focusing on three generations of activists—the scholar-patriots, the urban nationalists, and the social revolutionaries—Duiker provides a sophisticated analysis of the interaction of nationalism, reform, and revolution. His discussion of the rise of literary nationalism and the role of public opinion is particularly welcome. By probing the roots of the organizational and ideological problems which Vietnamese nationalists faced, he helps to explain the historic fusion between Communism and nationalism in Vietnam. Duiker's work, based on Vietnamese as well as Western language sources, joins a growing body of first-rate literature, including David Marr's Vietnamese Anticolonialism, 1885-1925 (LJ 6/15/71) and John McAlister's Vietnam (LJ 4/1/69).—Stephen I. Levine, East Asian Inst., Columbia Univ.

Graham, Otis L., Jr. Toward a Planned Society: from Franklin D. Roosevelt to Richard Nixon.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1976. 300p. LC 75-10189. ISBN 0-19-501985-7. $10.95. PUBLIC ADMIN

In this study of planning in the U.S., the author argues that there is today an emerging consensus over the desirability of long-term social planning. Unfortunately, this thesis is more stated than demonstrated, particularly since the analysis is conceptually loose, theoretically elusive, and exceedingly anecdotal. Yet the problem raised here and the materials used are both inherently interesting; moreover, Graham's work tells us a great deal about the continuing political controversy over planning, and it sheds some light, indirectly, on the nature of political conflict in this country. Toward a Planned Society is a highly readable book which, notwithstanding its methodological defects, should be made available to a large audience.—Carol Greenwald, Dept. of Political Science, Richmond Coll., CUNY

Lambright, W. Henry. Governing Science and Technology.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1976. 218p. index. LC 75-16905. $9. SCI/PUBLIC ADMIN

Lambright has given us an extremely well organized, clearly written analysis of the administrative politics of the federal government's science and technology programs. To anyone who has struggled to understand even the organizational structure of a single agency, this book will be impressive. Its clarity in describing the scientific, political, administrative, and other structures and their interrelationships is commendable. For anyone wishing to pursue such study further, the in-depth footnotes provide a wealth of source material. The book is particularly relevant in its analysis of technology implementation and transfer in light of the growing anti-technology sentiment of a large part of our population. And Lambright provides valuable insight on methods to redirect seemingly irreversible processes.—Hilary D. Burton, Data Systems Applications Div., U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, Beltsville, Md.

Lundberg, Ferdinand. The Rockefeller Syndrome.

Lyle Stuart. 1975. 394p. bibliog. index. LC 75-23031. ISBN 0-8184-0215-6. $12.50. POL SCI

There is a thin dividing line between social criticism and pure crankiness, and Lundberg, like his hero Mencken, crosses it too often for comfort. Since non-self-sponsored or noncoerced information about the Rockefellers is generally unavailable, choler often replaces analysis. Lundberg's literarily diffuse polemics range from an unimaginative sally at Nixon and LBJ as "two outstanding clinkers" to a more pungent description of Nelson Rockefeller as a "political santa claus . . . on the rampage." The "solid" information is a rehash of what the author and others have previously said; the psychoanalytic speculation—that the "syndrome" is a tri-generational manifestation of "obsessiveness-compulsiveness"—is irrelevant; the conclusion—that the Rockefellers are "modern Medici"—is strangely lame, given the preceding fireworks.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

Psychology&Psychiatry

Austin, Richard B., Jr. How to Make It with Another Person: getting close, staying close.

Macmillan. 1976. 252p. index. ISBN 0-02-504481-8. $8.95. PSYCH

Austin, a practising psychologist, hopes to provide a guide for persons seeking to establish or improve an intimate relationship. He discusses criteria for mate selection, communication in marriage, coping with change, sex, divorce, and a variety of other subjects revolving around dating, mating, and relating. Austin's intentions are good and his prose is clear; unfortunately, his approach is superficial and simplistic. The result is a tepid brew of acceptable statements which few readers will dispute and even fewer will want to read.—Victoria K. Musmann, Glendale P.L., Calif.

Awareness Games: personal growth through group interaction by Claus-Jürgen Höper & others.

St. Martin's. Mar. 1976. 113p. tr. by Hilary Davies. $6.95; pap. $2.95. PSYCH

This small handbook of group dynamic games is a gem. Intended primarily for experienced group leaders, it offers 117 different games for getting acquainted; communication; observation and perception; identification and empathy; and aggression and self-assertion. The directions are simple and clear. For each exercise they specify duration, age group and size, materials, game sequence and learning goals. In addition an important section on "what to watch out for" and "warnings" about possible misuses is provided for each game. A valuable resource for all who wish to assist people in becoming conscious of their feelings, impressions, wishes, and expectations in relation to others.—Brewster Y. Beach, Member, New York Assn. for Analytical Psychology

Dean, Stanley, R., M.D., ed. Psychiatry and Mysticism.

Nelson-Hall. 1975. 424p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-8771. ISBN 0-88229-189-0. $15.

PARAPSYCH/PSYCH

This collection presents a comprehensive introduction to the exciting work now in process in the new field of metapsychiatry. This newest branch of psychiatry deals with psychic phenomena and weds such disparate disciplines as parapsychology, philosophy, reli-

"In this serious and thought-provoking book the addresses given by the five invited speakers (at Boston's Bicentennial "forum") are reprinted along with illuminating summations of the ensuing question-and-answer exchanges...Here is neither pap nor porridge, but rather staunch patriotism that values honest criticism of the 200-year-old American experiment in democracy by Boston political figure Sam Bass Warner, Boston Judge Wyzanski, Hannah Arendt, Peter Rodino Jr., and John V. Lindsay."
— Publishers Weekly

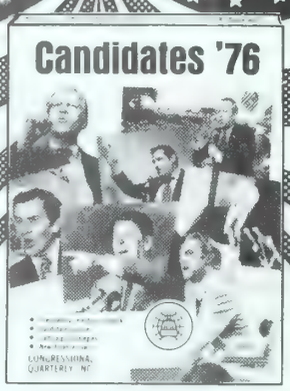
$6.95 cloth (ISBN 0-395-24008-5)
$3.95 paper (ISBN 0-395-24007-7)

The American Experiment:
Perspectives on 200 Years
Edited by
SAM BASS WARNER, JR.

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN COMPANY
2 Park St.
Boston, Mass. 02107

Election Year 1976



Just Published!

Congressional Quarterly reviews the 1976 presidential candidates: voting records of the candidates, campaign platforms, strategies and financing. Explanation of new campaign finance law and how it will affect 1976 elections.

Paper. 8½ x 11". 116 pages. $5.25.

CQ Congressional Quarterly Inc.
Box 56, 1414 22nd St. N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20037

gion, medicine, and the other empirical sciences in an endeavor to construct an integrated approach to the science of the whole man. These essays propose an expanded and a more precise definition of man's universe, internal and external, objective and subjective, material and spiritual, through the confluence of intuitive understanding and scientific technology and methodology. They expose the reader to the latest sophisticated scientific psychic research around the world in the important areas of biofeedback, Kirlian photography, energy field phenomena, biorhythm and biocycles, the study of altered states of consciousness, the biological effects of meditation, and energy phenomena in psychic healing.—Julie Bresciani, Dept. of Psychology, Marymount Manhattan Coll., New York

Gary, A. L. & John Glover. Eye Color, Sex, and Children's Behavior.

Nelson-Hall. Mar. 1976. 208p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-88229-213-7. $10. PSYCH

The relationship between light versus dark eye color and self-paced versus reactive behavior patterns is the main topic of this book. Extrapolating from some ideas and findings of Worthy, Gary and Glover emphasize the necessity for evaluating children only after assessing their eye color, a genetically controlled characteristic which, they find, relates to the aforementioned response styles thus determining an individual's potential. In general, the authors fail to make a good case for their conclusions because of weaknesses in their evidence and procedures. There are a number of errors in experimental design and analysis as well as problems in interpretation. The authors show little understanding of their research findings, current genetic theory, or even of the objectives of scientific inquiry.—Dennis Cogan, Dept. of Psychology & Statistics, Texas Tech Univ., Lubbock

Holt, Herbert, M.D. Free To Be Good or Bad.

Evans, dist. by Lippincott. Mar. 1976. 216p. $6.95. PSYCH

Holt deplores the growing tendency among patients to approach psychotherapy as they do beauty salons or health spas. While thousands flock to each modish new therapy—from sensitivity marathons and scream sessions to the newer biofeedback and meditation techniques—doctors like Holt see the discontent that often follows. Like a kindly father, Holt patiently explains that maturity involves finding your way out of "the cluttered room of childhood fantasies, of false expectations, of cultural imprisonment, of the shared neuroses of our time." There is no magical, easy way to do that; there is no substitute for the reality testing of responsible therapy. The book's title comes from the last chapter where the author examines the conventional definitions of "good" and "bad" behavior. Though verging on the platitudinous throughout, Holt's book will be appreciated by the audience of How To Be Your Own Best Friend.—Janet Husband, Thomas Crane P.L., Quincy, Mass.

Olsen, Paul, ed. New Directions in Psychotherapy. Vol. 1: Emotional Flooding.

Human Sciences: Behavioral. (Pub. of the National Inst. for the Psychotherapies). 1975. bibliog. index. LC 74-12620. ISBN 0-87705-223-9. $10.95. PSYCH

Edited from talks given at a professional conference of the National Institute for the Psychotherapies, this book concerns "emotional flooding"—the various therapeutic techniques aimed at opening up powerful emotions and attempting to integrate the released material into the conscious personality. The papers are presented in three sections: techniques that primarily make use of the imagination (Gestalt, psychodrama, implosive therapy, intensive feeling therapy, and sensory hypnoanalysis); those that work directly with the body (structural integration, bioenergetic, and art therapy); and those verbal techniques which are oriented toward releasing emotion (re-grief therapy, self-confrontation methods, and Jungian analysis). Written by outstanding leaders of these new therapies in remarkably understandable language, with interesting case materials throughout, this book will appeal to professionals and serious laypersons who wish to know the theory underlying these newer therapies and how it is applied.—Brewster Y. Beach, Member, New York Assn. for Analytical Psychology

Reinehr, Robert C. The Machine That Oils Itself: a critical look at the mental health establishment.

Nelson-Hall. 1975. 258p. index. bibliog. LC 75-23326. ISBN 0-88229-248-X. $8.95. SOC SCI/PSYCH

Here is still another book on the "mental health establishment," by a psychologist who wants to inform the public of what is wrong with the "machine" which he himself works for. Reinehr encourages his readers to "care" and let the establishment know it: "They will work something out." With this comforting remark, he concludes a book which is subtitled "a critical look," but is bereft of footnotes. Although he warns readers: "Do not blindly believe what professionals tell you," he apparently expects his own readers to accept his discourse (which ranges in style from cavalier to chummy to serious) without documentation. For example, he informs them: "I'm not sure if the church still maintains exorcists. I'm not even sure if they officially believe in witches." One wonders why he did not bother to check. His criticism of how diagnoses are arrived at, and his examination of the problems involved in psychological testing and interpretation are well taken, but it is doubtful whether the novice lay reader to whom this book is obviously addressed could absorb and evaluate its content without a great deal of background reading. The annotated bibliography will be helpful. But then, one does not usually read the books in a bibliography first.—Joan W. Gartland, Univ. of Detroit Lib.

Schur, Edwin M. The Awareness Trap: self-absorption instead of social change.

Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. Apr. 1976. 196p. index. $7.95. SOC SCI/PSYCH

The last few years have seen the development of many movements and a spate of books and articles arguing that we can realize our full potential only by turning inward and letting our brains and bodies take over. The results, in the opinion of many enthusiasts, have been excellent. But Schur disagrees. He examines the movements in psychology (Primal Scream, Gestalt therapy, etc.), the self-help literature, and some of the biofeedback-training and meditation groups (notably TM), and argues that the problems of our society are being ignored while we proceed to get more wrapped up in our own private worlds. A fascinating tour and new perspective on the world of "awareness."—George Adelman, Neurosciences Research Program, M.I.T., Boston

Whitman, Ardis. Meditation: journey of the self.

S. & S. Apr. 1976. 134p. index. $6.95. REL/PSYCH

Here is a mature yet enthusiastic exploration of many of the guises of today's "inner revolution"—biofeedback, sensory awareness, cosmic consciousness, healing, etc. There are provocative fragments of conversations with scientists, theologians, yogis, and youthful seekers. Threading together these rather haphazard inquiries is the skein of the author's own inner experiences, richly described yet free of gush. In addition to general suggestions for meditation techniques (she advises tailoring the technique to the individual's background and needs), Whitman offers inspirational cues for achieving and utilizing peak experiences for compassionate action in the world as well as for personal enlightenment. Should appeal to conservative readers rather than far-out psychic enthusiasts—Jeanne S. Bagby, Tucson P.L., Ariz.

Parapsychology & Occultism

Brian, Denis. Jeane Dixon: the witnesses.

Doubleday. Mar. 1976. LC 75-21212. ISBN 0-385-11243-2. $6.95. PARAPSYCH

Since the foreword to this book was written by the subject one suspects from the start that this is another favorable account of her psychic abilities. The author states that he set out to question the validity of the printed Dixon prophecies by seeking proof or denial from persons she claimed witnessed her original oral statements. Most of the "witnesses" turned out to be friends who believe in her powers. Some members of her family seemed to be on the fence, and a reporter for the National Observer, who had done some research on Dixon, was frankly skeptical. One does have to admit that she is consistent, and constant. In 1969, Dixon asserted that "Nixon is our last hope." Now, in the past year she is reported as stating: "Historians yet unborn are going to take the facts and he's going to go down as a great President. They're going to find that the price the world is paying for trying to discredit Nixon is going to be that we'll practically lose our freedom."—Eleanor Touhey Smith, New York

Randall, John L. Parapsychology and the Nature of Life.

Harper. Jun. 1976. 256p. illus. index. ISBN 0-06-013509-3. $8.95. SCI/PARAPSYCH

This is an extraordinarily well researched, highly readable book about the development of parapsychology out of its dark, occult background into its present status as a bona-fide science. Proceeding step by step, Randall establishes each opposing argument clearly so that the reader can feel its force and then devastates it with the parapsychologists' experimental evidence. As a second theme, Randall traces the development of conventional scientific theory, emphasizing domains still dominated by mechanistic ideas. Again, he presents the most convincing arguments the mechanists have been able to devise accurately and fairly, then exposes their lacunae. The effect on the reader is a clear impression of the limitations of conventional science and of the solidity, respectability, and importance of modern parapsychology. One easily comes into sympathy with Randall's view that the nature of life is not solely mechanistic—consciousness and will are not merely epiphenomena—and that it is parapsychology which provides the substantiating facts.—Edward Russell, New York

Samuels, Mike, M.D. & Nancy Samuels. Seeing with the Mind's Eye: the history, techniques and uses of visualization.

Bookworks/Random. 1975. 331p. illus., some color. index. 75-10316. ISBN 0-394-73113-1. pap. $9.95. PSYCH/PARAPSYCH

A radical M.D., who entered the forbidden worlds of psychic healing and spiritual happenings in his previous books Be Well and Spiritual Guides, here examines our daily life, psychology, medicine, creativity, parapsychology, and spirituality in relation to the application of the visualization. Unfortunately, the book is over-illustrated, and too much ground is covered in too little space. At best, it is only a survey of phenomena (ESP, archetypes, creativity, religious experience, healing, etc.) explored in depth elsewhere. Appropriate in high school and public libraries where interest is high in this area.—Peter Basofin, Maharishi International Univ. Lib., Fairfield, Iowa

Tanous, Alex with Harvey Ardman. Beyond Coincidence: one man's experience with psychic phenomena.

Doubleday. 1976. ISBN 0-385-11242-4. $7.95. PARAPSYCH

". . . some have called me, 'The man who found the soul.' I didn't find it, of course. It was always there. But my work has provided humanity with the first scientific evidence that the soul exists." There is no timid cough of modesty behind Tanous' statement concerning the experiments recently conducted by the American Society for Psychical Research using him as a subject. His extra-sensory powers range from precognition, diagnosis of illnesses, psychic healing, psychometry, astral projection to prophecy about the future of our world in this decade and after. He has also communicated with deceased entities for purposes of explaining poltergeist and similar phenomena, but as a devout Catholic he does not tarry over instances of this aspect of the psychic. Instead, the entire narration of his experiences builds up to a theory which tries to explain his paranormal abilities and those of other genuine psychics. He believes that there is a force consisting of strata of energy in the universe, so far undetected by scientific instruments. He calls it Creative/Perceptive Energy, or CPE, and he believes that anyone can tap this, if he is predisposed to or learns how. Tanous' story is fascinating and has many more dimensions than those of most practicing psychics whose books are currently available.—Eleanor Touhey Smith, New York

Religion

Bruns, J. Edgar. The Forbidden Gospel.

Harper. 1976. 64p. ISBN 0-06-061149-9. $5.95. REL

This small book by a scholar of Gnosticism attempts to bring to life the scattered picture of Jesus which is found in Gnostic literature, many documents of which have been discovered only in the past 30 years. The author contends that many of the "sayings" of Jesus in the Gospels "contain teaching which make little sense unless it is read in a Gnostic light," and he provides specific illustrations from Gnostic texts. A brief introduction of the general viewpoint of Gnosticism—that the world as we know it is a cosmic mistake—is followed by an examination of Gnostic ideas in the Gospels which includes considerable historical data about the discovery of the Gnostic documents. The latter half of the book contains the author's compilation of a "gnostic gospel" (the "forbidden gospel" of the book's title), complete with references and followed by detailed notes. A fascinating, accessible study for those who are curious to know just what the recently discovered manuscripts are about and how they relate to the New Testament Gospels.—Brewster Y. Beach, Member, New York Assn. for Analytical Psychology

Coburn, John B. The Hope of Glory: exploring the mystery of Christ in you.

Crossroad: Seabury. Mar. 1976. 117p. $7.95; pap. $3.95. REL

Coburn deals with the anxieties of society, our acceptance of modern pressures, and gives suggestions about achieving our human potential. He confronts questions and wrestles out meanings within the Christian context, centering on the themes of life, death, and resurrection. Tying the whole together is the mystery and glory of Christ's presence within the world and each of us. Often books on religion are ho-hum affairs. Hope of Glory is a satisfying exception.—Helen L. Wright, Santa Fe Springs Lib., Calif.

"Recommended"
LIBRARY JOURNAL

GOING CRAZY:
An Inquiry Into Madness in Our Time
by OTTO FRIEDRICH

"Most of the book consists of anecdotal descriptions of the bizarre behavior of dozens of people (some famous, some infamous) who have 'gone crazy'. Friedrich, who is a prolific journalist/writer spent two years researching the book. He writes well and the case histories he describes are fascinating."
—Library Journal

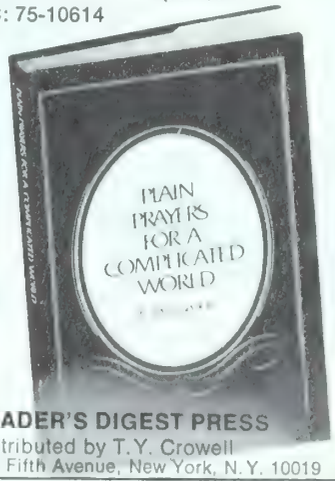
LC 75-25844
$8.95
SIMON AND SCHUSTER
630 Fifth Ave.
New York 10020

READER'S DIGEST PRESS

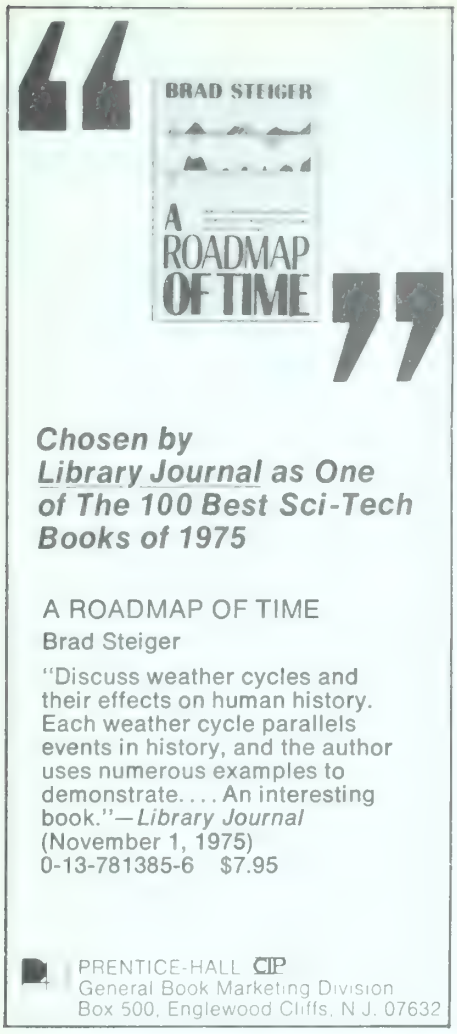
PLAIN PRAYERS FOR A COMPLICATED WORLD by Avery Brooke

"Brooke's book of prayers is small, but the variety of topics and the concise brevity of the style make this a meaningful collection....One would like to meet and become friends with [Brooke]."—Library Journal

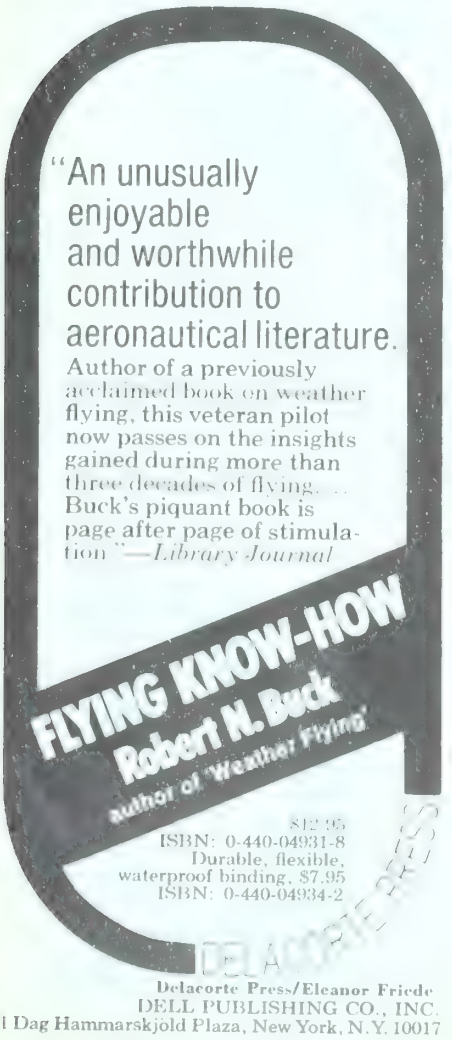
ISBN: 0-88349-060-9 $4.95
0-88349-061-7 Paper $2.95
LC: 75-10614



READER'S DIGEST PRESS
Distributed by T.Y. Crowell
666 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019



BRAD STEIGER
A ROADMAP OF TIME
Chosen by Library Journal as One of The 100 Best Sci-Tech Books of 1975
A ROADMAP OF TIME
Brad Steiger
"Discuss weather cycles and their effects on human history. Each weather cycle parallels events in history, and the author uses numerous examples to demonstrate.... An interesting book."—Library Journal (November 1, 1975)
0-13-781385-6 $7.95
PRENTICE-HALL CIP
General Book Marketing Division
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632



"An unusually enjoyable and worthwhile contribution to aeronautical literature.
Author of a previously acclaimed book on weather flying, this veteran pilot now passes on the insights gained during more than three decades of flying.... Buck's piquant book is page after page of stimulation."—Library Journal
FLYING KNOW-HOW
Robert N. Buck author of "Weather Flying"
$12.95
ISBN: 0-440-04931-8
Durable, flexible, waterproof binding, $7.95
ISBN: 0-440-04934-2
DELACORTE

Delacorte Press/Eleanor Friede
DELL PUBLISHING CO., INC.
1 Dag Hammarskjold Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10017

"passionate and unmistakably human"

Kelly, J. N. D. Jerome: his life, writings, and controversies.

Harper. Mar. 1976. 353p. map. index. ISBN 0-06-064333-1. $15. BIOG/REL

Jerome (331-420), the most cantankerous and erudite writer of the Patristic era (his contemporaries were Augustine, Ambrose, Cassian, and Rufinus) emerges from Kelly's scholarly investigation as a passionate and unmistakably human personality. The Vulgate, his Latin translation of the Hebrew canon, became the standard version for the Roman church until our own time. His eloquent defense of chastity and spirited encouragement of the incipient monastic movement influenced Western spirituality and "popular Catholicism" weightily. Jerome's own skill as a stylist is matched by his biographer's highly readable prose. Kelly's exacting scholarship and his obvious respect and affection for his contentious subject highly recommend his book for every serious religion collection. Such a deft treatment of Jerome in English has long been overdue.—Richard Oliver, O.S.B., St. John's Univ. Lib., Collegeville, Minn.

Elon, Menachem, ed. & intro. The Principles of Jewish Law.

Keter Pub. Co., 440 Park Ave. So., N.Y.C. 10016. 1975. 866p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-7065-1415-7. $32. REL

Entries collated from the Jewish Encyclopedia cover every aspect of Jewish law throughout the centuries: sources, procedure, terminology (Hebrew and Latin), and problems of religion and state, as well as the legal literature—biblical, rabbinic, and responsive. Special attention is given to the appropriateness of the growing legal system to the Jewish State in Israel. There is a most comprehensive subject index that enhances the utilitarian value of this book.—Sidney B. Hoeing, Yeshiva Univ., New York

Schuller, Robert H. Positive Prayers for Power-Filled Living.

Hawthorn. 1976. 128p. LC 75-20909. $4.95. REL

This slim collection of contemporary Christian prayers was selected by the author from his earlier books. The prayers are directly related to contemporary problems, and are designed to help the supplicant to pray about a particular situation. These brief, rather folksy prayers may well appeal even to those who are not especially tuned in to Schuller's brand of religion, "possibility thinking." (Schuller is founder and pastor of a very large walk-in, drive-in church in Southern California.) His book concludes with a section of prayers from other sources, including the Bible.—Joan S. Martinez, Angelo M. Iacoboni Lib., Los Angeles County P.L. System

Skoglund, Elizabeth R. The Whole Christian.

Harper. 1976. 160p. ISBN 0-06-06789-3. $6.95. PSYCH/REL

Seven sermon-like essays on a Christian approach to the treatment of psychological problems, all with the common theme of interaction of mind, body, and spirit. The author touches on problems such as depression and hyperinsulinism, and discusses solutions such as megavitamin therapy and reality therapy. She is particularly interested in the physical and psychological interrelationships between dietary deficiencies and emotional stress. Essential for all therapeutic approaches, she feels, is a positive attitude towards the self. Rather than viewing drug addiction and homosexuality as sins, she sees them as providing a challenge which can lead to greater spiritual growth. None of these ideas are new, but Skoglund presents them in a simple manner which should prove especially appealing to readers who share her Christian orientation.—Rosemarie E. Falanga, Queens Borough P.L., New York

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

Barrons, Keith C. The Food in Your Future: steps to abundance.

Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1975. 180p. illus. index. LC 75-22438. ISBN 0-442-20587-2. $7.95. AGRICULTURE

This is an introduction to the principles and practices of modern American farming, and how it affects the average citizen. The style is simple and direct, providing the information needed by the voting public to understand and direct the production of food. Topics covered include the economics of farming, recent technological and biological advances, and the "green revolution." Though the book discusses some important issues in an interesting manner, this reviewer feels that it is short-sighted and simplistic. It places great faith in technology, and in the discussion of the green revolution, it ignores the sociological problems of instituting Western farming technology in established Third World cultures. The style and approach of this book best suit it for high school and public libraries.—Bruce H. Tiffney, Paleobotanical Laboratories, Dept. of Biology, Harvard Univ.

Paul, Günter. The Satellite Spin-Off: the achievements of space flight.

Luce, dist. by McKay. 1975. 272p. tr. by Alan Lacy & Barbara Lacy. illus. maps. index. LC 75-11369. $10. ASTRONAUTICS

The space program has already more than repaid its initial vast expenditures, according to physicist Paul. Written for a popular audience, his book gives an impressive factual account of the achievements of space research—ranging from world-wide communications satellites to weather and military surveillance satellites—and it offers innumerable examples to substantiate the author's claim. For example, we learn that satellites have permitted the economical expansion of international communications systems, and that they have vastly aided our weather forecasting abilities. The book emphasizes American achievement, but there is criticism of U.S. domination in some international areas. It gives a much-needed perspective on the space program, and allays possibly unwarranted fears about the future. For the general reader. Public and academic libraries will want this one.—Virginia E. Yagello, Chemistry & Physics Libs., Ohio State Univ., Columbus

Schlossberg, Edwin & John Brockman. The Pocket Calculator Game Book.
Morrow. 1975. 158p. illus. index. LC 75-26562. ISBN 0-688-02983-3. $6.95; pap. ISBN 0-688-07983-0. $3.95. GAMES/MATH
A collection of 50 games created especially for the current fad item in electronics, the pocket calculator. Included are games of solitaire and games for two or more players, and some that require more than one calculator. The games can be played on calculators of the simple four-function type (now available for less than $10). Most of the games have both simple and complex versions. Upper elementary school students should be able to master most of the games, while the complex versions should challenge high school and college students. This book will be a popular addition to math collections in school, public, and academic libraries.—Robert J. Greene, Kennesaw Junior Coll. Lib., Marietta, Ga.

Botany & Horticulture

House & Garden's 26 Easy Little Gardens.
Studio: Viking. 1975. 143p. illus., mainly color. index. LC 75-15700. ISBN 0-670-37979-4. $14.95. HORT
The gardens described in this book may be small, but not many of these gems would be easy to establish and maintain. In fact, most bespeak considerable time, attention, and money. A carpet-covered vegetable garden points up easy maintenance, and the potted plants used in many of the gardens are good for a fast, easy effect. Easy or difficult, the gardens shown suffice to make this a gardener's dream book. It is full of ingenious designs for unusual sites, imaginative use of plant material, and clever effects with color and texture. Handsome color photographs and clearly executed plans are combined with text explaining the aims and tastes of the garden owners. All 26 have previously appeared in House and Garden magazine.—Louise B. Hodges, Amherst County P.L., Va.

Riker, Tom & Harvey Rottenberg. Food Gardens, Indoors, Outdoors & Under Glass: a gardener's catalogue book.
Morrow. 1975. 320p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-27155. ISBN 0-688-07963-6. pap. $6.95. REF/HORT
This book is an encyclopedic treatment of vegetable gardening. An offshoot of The Gardener's Catalogue (LJ 3/1/75) by the same authors, it takes that work's relatively small section on the subject and expands it to 320 oversize pages. The quality of the information is excellent and the coverage is most extensive. Black-and-white illustrations are taken from old-time garden publications and add a quaint touch to the otherwise current information. Even though some articles date back 75 years or more, there is much to be learned here. The large, paperback format will be troublesome for libraries, but the variety and authenticity of the material make up for this deficiency. Recommended.—Gordon S. Wade, Carroll P.L., Iowa

Health & Medicine

Fredericks, Carlton. Psycho-Nutrition.
Grosset. 1976. 224p. index. LC 75-16863. ISBN 0-448-12000-3. $7.95. HEALTH
This is neither a diet book nor a self-dosage manual but an explanation of "orthomolecular" medicine, the practice of using blood chemistry analysis, allergy screening, megavitamins, mineral supplements, and individually designed diets to aid in the cure or control of anxiety, schizophrenia, hyperactivity, and other mental disorders. A list of societies to contact for more information or names of orthomolecular practitioners is appended. The book is too anecdotal and somewhat biased, but it does present a reasonably cogent introduction to this new, controversial field. As such, it is recommended for most collections.—Frances S. Worthington, formerly with P.L. of Nashville & Davidson County, Tenn.

Hilgard, Ernest R. & Josephine R. Hilgard. Hypnosis in the Relief of Pain.
William Kaufman. 1975. 262p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-19490. ISBN 0-913232-16-5. $12.50. MED
These well-known authors have written an informative book which outlines much of their work in hypnosis, especially as it relates to the control of pain. The first part of the book contains a brief history of hypnosis and pain, after which the successful combination of the two phenomena is discussed. The second part describes some of the research performed with hypnosis and cancer, obstetrics, surgery, and dentistry. Finally, the Hilgards develop a theory of hypnosis and pain which centers around their concept of a "hidden observer." Their well-written book should be of interest to both the layman and the professional.—Eugene Smith, Dept. of Psychology, Ricker Coll., Houlton, Me.

Lazarre, Jane. The Mother Knot.
McGraw. Mar. 1976. 256p. LC 75-31636. ISBN 0-07-036790-6. $8.95.
Panter, Gideon G., M.D. & Shirley Motter Linde. Now That You've Had Your Baby: how to feel better and happier than ever after childbirth.
McKay. 222p. 1976. ISBN 0-679-50497-4. $8.95. HEALTH
Now That You've Had Your Baby attempts to help women who have just given birth to "get themselves back together again physically and mentally." It covers the practical aspects of self care and child care in the hospital and during the first months at home, and it

Highly Recommended Columbia Titles

COMPUTERS IN THE 1980's

Rein Turn. "This exploratory forecast presented for the time interval from 1973 to 1990 projects processing, storage, and non-machine interface capabilities based on rapidly growing component and subsystem technologies. . . .The resulting 'surprise-free' approach subsequently permits the projection of developments along the growth curve. . . . Recommended for academic and special collections."
—Library Journal
LC 74-1488
$12.00; $3.95 paper

COMPUTERS AND THE SOCIAL SCIENCES

Alan Brier and Ian Robinson. "This is a comprehensive, elementary textbook written for social scientists who do not have a substantial background in mathematics but who are familiar with standard statistical techniques. . . . Of the many books in this and closely related fields, the present one is more successful than most in avoiding both excessive theory and the simple cookbook approach. The excellent annotated bibliographies at the end of each chapter will lead to more specialized sources."
—Library Journal
LC 74-12052
$12.50; $6.00 paper

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY PRESS

Address for orders:
136 South Broadway
Irvington, New York 10533

READER'S DIGEST PRESS

WE ALMOST LOST DETROIT
John G. Fuller
"A dramatic and convincing condemnation of atomic power, especially the liquid metal fast breeder reactor.... Highly recommended."—Library Journal
ISBN: 0-88349-070-6 $8.95
LC: 75-17870

READER'S DIGEST PRESS
Distributed by T.Y. Crowell
666 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019

gives some attention to relationships with other members of the family, in the context of a rather traditional environment. Advice on naps, exercise, breast-feeding, and sex is scarcely unique in books for new mothers. The conventional nature of the information presented and attitudes expressed by Panter and Linde are in sharp contrast to the less instructional, more intimate account found in Lazarre's work.

The Mother Knot is a moving exploration of a talented and capable woman's experiences and feelings in the period of her life surrounding childbirth. This absorbing account of her interactions with her baby, husband, father, and friends has elements which other women who question the validity of society's expectations of them, especially regarding their mothering role, will identify with and appreciate.—Jane Port, Levy Lib., Mt. Sinai Sch. of Medicine, New York

Mahoney, Michael J. & Kathryn Mahoney. Permanent Weight Control.
Norton. Mar. 1976. 192p. index. ISBN 0-393-08736-0. $7.95. HEALTH
This attack upon the age-old obesity problem emphasizes patterns of eating. Fallacies of some other theories are stated, and popular diets are criticized for lack of long-lasting success. Permanence in changing the dieter's eating patterns is achieved by motivating him to develop self-control through a careful program consisting of specifying the problem, collecting data, examining and narrowing options, and extending, revising, or replacing the solution. The dominant tone of the book is optimistic and encouraging; readers who try the program are urged to set moderate goals and to persevere. Though this system will be useful to some, it omits some important information. For example, the need to find a sympathetic doctor is not mentioned, nor is the need to differentiate between the obesity of younger people and the more stable obesity of adults and the elderly, as discussed in Hilde Bruch's Eating Disorders (LJ 10/15/73). Similarly, no mention is made of the dieter's intake of drugs and their corresponding influence on his weight, as discussed in David A. Schoenstadt's The San Francisco Weight-Loss Method (LJ 4/15/75).—Ute W. Bestehorn, P.L. of Cincinnati & Hamilton County

Palm, J. Daniel. Diet Away Your Stress, Tension and Anxiety.
Doubleday. 1976. 240p. ISBN 0-385-11557-1. $6.95. HEALTH
In a convincing and informative manner Palm explores the relationship of stress to pathological conditions. He states that an insufficiency of blood sugar supplied to the brain is enough of a detrimental condition (i.e., a stress) to initiate physiological responses and behavioral changes which can develop into a variety of maladies. Disorders related to low blood sugar—including obesity, diabetes, alcoholism, and migraine—can be ameliorated by the dietary use of the simple sugar fructose (rather than glucose). The advantageous use of fructose by healthy people is discussed, and appendixes cover the physiology of the stress response and basic studies on stress-response control. Tested fructose recipes and a table of caloric values of common foods are included. Though occasionally repetitious, this book has more substance than most other books that advocate a "new" method of weight loss.—James E. Bobick, Temple Univ. Libs., Philadelphia

Rapoport, Roger. The Super-Doctors.
Playboy, dist. by S. & S. 1975. 267p. illus. LC 75-17263. ISBN 0-87223-436-3. $8.95. MED
Among the "super-doctors" are Spock, Salk, and Sabin; diet doctor Atkins; hypnotherapist Bryan. They are famous heart surgeons, heads of medical institutes, physicians to the rich and famous. Rapoport, who has written opinionated books about U.S. defense policies and student rebellion, has interviewed 25 supersuccessful doctors, and in a breezy and revealing manner, he tells of their accomplishments while also showing their weaknesses. We meet men who drive themselves to work long hours at the expense of their families and co-workers. Most own expensive cars and vacation at glamorous resorts. A few have been accused of medical misconduct. Rapoport's writing is slapdash, showing a special fondness for the split infinitive. He sometimes stretches facts to make them fit his super-doctor formula; for example, Noguchi is an eminent forensic pathologist but not "the world's foremost." This is far from being a balanced or in-depth study, but it is an engrossing and entertaining book.—Peggy Champlin, California State Univ. Lib., Los Angeles

Smith, Ann. Celebrity Exercise.
Walker. 1976. 208p. photogs. LC 75-12188. ISBN 0-8027-5333-7. $10. HEALTH
This book has an interesting approach and makes enjoyable reading. A group of 45 celebrities as diverse as Betty Ford and Art Buchwald explain their approach to exercise. Informative background material is given about each of the celebrities, and their life styles and body composition are effectively related to the type of exercise program each one utilizes. The emphasis on the naturalness of exercise and explanations of how exercise can and should be incorporated into regular patterns of living are strong points of this book. Its major weakness is the oversimplification of the value of specific exercises for controlling weight gain and waistline expansion. For example, because dancers use stretching exercises and have streamlined bodies, the author draws the erroneous conclusion that stretching exercises result in streamlined bodies. Recommended for leisure reading rather than for developing a meaningful exercise program.—Kenneth Tillman, Dept. of Health & Physical Education, Trenton State Coll., N.J.

Stern, Edward L. Prescription Drugs and Their Side Effects.
Grosset. 1975. 92p. index. LC 75-24597. ISBN 0-448-12200-6. $3.95. REF/MED
Stern has taken information from pack-

"Recommended"
LIBRARY JOURNAL

IT'S GOING TO STING ME!
by RONALD ROOD
"A conversational and witty introduction to wasps, ticks, bats, jellyfish, bears, poison ivy, and other things of which man tends to be afraid. Rood's book succeeds admirably in replacing this fear with understanding and respect. He conveys his close knowledge of the subject in a titillating style."
—Library Journal
LC 75-26533
$7.95
SIMON AND SCHUSTER
630 Fifth Ave.
New York 10020

SCI

age inserts and the Physician's Desk Reference (PDR) and compiled in a simplified format the warnings about and possible side effects of the 150 most frequently prescribed drugs as tabulated by the New York State Board of Pharmacy. His book is easy to use, with drugs listed in alphabetical order, two to a page. For each drug the manufacturer, generic name, and common dosage forms are given, followed by conditions for which it is prescribed, precautions and warnings, and adverse reactions to be watched for. With an estimated one billion prescriptions written by doctors each year, consumers need to be informed of possible dangerous side effects of the drugs they take. However, libraries having the PDR may find this book of limited usefulness.—Peggy Champlin, California State Univ. Lib., Los Angeles

Natural History & Zoology

Flugum, Charles T. Birding from a Tractor Seat.

Crowell. 1975. 442p. illus. index. LC 75-11534. ISBN 0-690-00971-2. $8.95. NAT HIST

A collection of folksy essays written from 1952 to 1964 for the Community magazine of Albert Lea, Minnesota. A farm is an ideal spot for bird watching, but few farmers are as knowledgeable or articulate as Flugum. He's a careful observer of bird and animal behavior, and it's apparent that while working in the fields, he sees as much as—or more than—the usual weekend birder. His selections, to be read a few at a time, have value as a general source of information about dozens of species common to the Midwest. Flugum's book could serve as a nontechnical introduction to the study of birds, providing one also has field guides on hand for identification. Pleasant reading, of more than local interest.—Helen J. Stiles, NOAA-ERL Lib., Dept. of Commerce, Boulder, Colo.

Sheldon, William G. The Wilderness Home of the Giant Panda.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr. 1975. 196p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 74-21245. ISBN 0-87023-179-0. $10. EXPLORATION/NAT HIST

Sheldon's book on the giant panda proves to be a somewhat disappointing, repetitious narration of an expedition undertaken in 1934-1935 to the Szechwan province in China. His book was intended to provide a study of the giant panda in its natural habitat. In essence, however, the expedition that is described served to collect—through killing—specimens of the local fauna (including the giant panda). For example, "351 Asiatic wood mice were collected." Sheldon provides many vivid and often beautiful descriptions of little-known people and places of the area; in this light, the book is valuable and interesting. However, I found it hard to look at the killing of specimens dispassionately.—Ruth E. Olson, Plymouth P.L., Mass.

Shortt, Terry. Not As the Crow Flies.

Books Canada, Inc., 33 E. Tupper St., Buffalo, N.Y. 14203. 1975. 255p. illus. ISBN 0-7710-8167-7. $14.50. PER NAR/NAT HIST

Shortt is one of Canada's best known nature artists and naturalists. This informal narrative describes his experiences on expeditions to the Canadian and Alaskan Arctic, Mexico, Trinidad, Ecuador, the Galapagos, India, and Africa. Most of these were in conjunction with work for the Royal Ontario Museum, where Shortt has worked for 45 years. His text is a fascinating one, touching not only on the natural history of these areas, as one would expect, but including a fair amount of human history as well. The 15 illustrations by the author are a fine, attractive embellishment to his lively text, even though at $14.50 one might wish for quite a few more. However, it is gratifying to have in hand this entertaining autobiographical account. The majority of naturalists neglect to set down the details of their usually very interesting lives, save in dry, technical journals. Recommended.—Henry T. Armistead, Thomas Jefferson Univ. Lib., Philadelphia

Struhsaker, Thomas T. The Red Colobus Monkey.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. 1975. (Wildlife Behavior & Ecology). 311p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 74-21339. ISBN 0-226-77769-3. $25. ZOOLOGY

Many species of primate have been subjected to field study in recent years, but seldom are detailed reports available in one volume. Struhsaker spent over a year studying one group of red colobus monkeys in western Uganda. His book shows the value of this unified approach. He discusses methods, group structure, and vocalization, goes more deeply into social behavior and ecological parameters, makes comparisons with other species, and attempts some interpretations of the adaptations of the red colobus. Data are presented in quantity, but a more concise summary of major findings would have been a useful addition. This is a purely scientific monograph, lacking the local color of some recent primate studies. It will be a standard reference on forest monkey ethology and essential for zoological libraries. It is written clearly enough for the general reader who wishes to dig into the life style of one of man's more distant relations.—Eric Delson, Dept. of Anthropology, Lehman Coll., CUNY

Zappalorti, Robert T. The Amateur Zoologist's Guide to Turtles and Crocodilians.

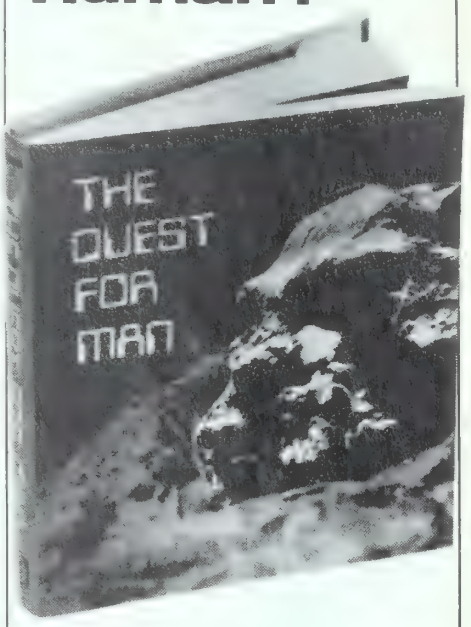
Stackpole. May 1976. 192p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-8117-0097-6. $12.95. REF/NAT HIST

This book, written by a curator of reptiles at the Staten Island Zoo, does not contain detailed accounts of the 80-odd U.S. species—and this is an advantage because an encyclopedic work on turtles has been written recently by Carl H. Ernst and Roger W. Barbour (Turtles of the United States, LJ 7/73). The present work is nontechnical, garnished with accounts of personal experiences, and quite readable. Representative species are given sufficient treatment to satisfy the curiosity of the amateur without overwhelming him. To my knowledge, it is a much better beginning text than any of the others in print. The last chapter is a brief guide

What Does It Mean To Be Human?



Chosen as "One of the Hundred Best Sci-Tech Books of 1975" by Library Journal, THE QUEST FOR MAN illuminates the nature and origins of man—his physical structure and behavior, his hopes for an extension of life after death, and the mystery of his beginnings.

Six authorities, including Theodosius Dobzhansky, John Napier, and Jane Van Lawick-Goodall, "each a leading expert in a particular field of inquiry, have contributed articles on the evolution and nature of man in a generously illustrated, integrated study suggested for advanced high school students."— Booklist.

Edited by Vanne Goodall

256 pp., 175 illus. (16 in color), bibliog., index
LC 72-79550
ISBN 0-275-49770-4 $17.50

PRAEGER PUBLISHERS

to the care of captives, and is particularly commendable because it contains a section that stresses the importance of ultraviolet light in the rearing of turtles. A good choice for children's, YA, and adult natural history collections.—Kenneth Groeppe, Watertown P.L., Mass.

Technology

Carmichel, Jim. The Modern Rifle.

Winchester, dist. by Scribners. 1975. 342p. illus. index. LC 75-9264. ISBN 0-87691-206-4. $12.95. SPORTS/TECH

This book is most basically about rifle design and the various factors that have contributed to its continuing evolution. Approximately one-third of the text deals with components of the modern rifle, and the remainder is devoted to an assessment of the comparative merits of hunting, target, and varmint models. Charmichel, who is regularly published in Outdoor Life and frequently elsewhere, is in a position to know whereof he speaks; collectors and sportspersons will value his judgments. Libraries either holding material in this specific field or collecting consumer/buying guides will find this a worthwhile item. The novice, shopper, or expert can use this book with almost equal ease, although the addition of a glossary of rifle terms would have aided the less experienced.—David J. Panciera, Adams Lib., Chelmsford, Mass.

2 OF L.J.'S BEST SCI-TECH BOOKS OF 1975

AVIATION AND SPACE MUSEUMS OF AMERICA
By Jon Allen

A complete guide and reference source to classic museums with unique collections of aerospace artifacts and antique aircraft.
Photographs, 192 pages.
LC 73-91258
LR Cloth $12.00
Paper $6.95

MOTORCYCLE PANORAMA
A Pictorial Review of Motorcycle Development
By Bob Holliday

A brilliantly illustrated look at 80 years of development of the powered two-wheeler.
Over 100 photographs, 224 pages.
LC 74-14052
Cloth $7.95

arco PUBLISHING COMPANY, INC.
219 Park Avenue South, New York, N.Y. 10003

Eccli, Eugene, ed. Low-Cost, Energy-Efficient Shelter for the Owner and Builder.

Rodale. 1976. 432p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-87857-116-7. $10.95; pap. ISBN 0-87857-114-0. $5.95. TECH

This book presents a well-organized collection of timely and highly informative articles and papers that allow a prospective builder or buyer to more intelligently create or analyze a home. The text encourages readers to look beyond conventional methods in order to extract more home for the money and at the same time to create natural home aesthetics. It discusses such topics as home financing, the pros and cons of do-it-yourself building, lowering material costs and operating expenses, and utilizing solar energy. The book is somewhat unique in its unbiased presentation of techniques and materials. Heavy use of detailed illustrations plus a first-rate editing job make the book fascinating reading. Although the emphasis is on cold-weather climates, readers across the country will find a wealth of ideas, techniques, and facts. Footnotes and a comprehensive bibliography add to its utility. Reccommended for the reading shelf frequented by amateur and professional home builders or remodelers.—Gerard Cullen, Datapoint Business Computers, San Antonio, Tex.

Social Science

Abel, Ernest Lawrence, ed. The Scientific Study of Marihuana.

Nelson-Hall. May 1976. 288p. ISBN 0-88229-144-0. $12.50. MED/SOC SCI

Abel's research on marijuana makes him well qualified to select and edit this important collection of research papers (some of them Abel's own) on the psychological, physiological, and social effects of marijuana. Originally published in major scientific journals (Nature, Science, and others), the papers describe studies that found, for example, that marijuana affects short-term memory; does not affect simulated driving performance; does not improve auditory and visual perception as users claim. It can precipitate psychotic behavior in disturbed individuals, but does not cause psychosis. It causes apathy rather than aggression or crime. Abel points out the difficulties of performing experiments with subjects who, in practice, use marijuana of varying purity, in situations far different from laboratory conditions. A charming essay by Baudelaire introduces the collection. As a whole, this makes rather heavy, but fascinating, reading.—Peggy Champlin, California State Univ. Lib., Los Angeles

Athearn, Forden. How To Divorce Your Wife.

Doubleday. 1976. ISBN 0-385-08035-2. $6.95. LAW/SOC SCI

At the beginning of this book Athearn states that he had wanted to dedicate the work to his wife, but that she wouldn't let him. It doesn't take long to understand why. Writing for the man either involved in a divorce or contemplating one, Athearn often takes a dim view of women involved in the divorce proceeding. For example, he councils a divorced man not to say bad things about his "ex" because that might reduce her chances of remarrying, therefore taking him off the alimony hook. About trends toward lower alimony Athearn states, "Today's man can take his saddle bags with him when he changes horses." His attitude is that women will often try to take advantage of a man, and he'll show you how to keep that from happening. He explains grounds for divorce, divorce proceedings, alimony, custody, child support and visitation, and property division. His advice is sound enough, but when it comes to dealing with the emotional component of divorce, Athearn is too often cynical and superficial.—Sheldon Kaye, Marshfield Free Lib., Wis.

Feinbloom, Deborah H. Transvestites and Transsexuals: mixed views.

Seymour Lawrence: Delacorte. 1976. 189p. bibliog. ISBN 0-440-08513-6. $10. SOC SCI

This uneven work contains a descriptive account of the author's experiences as a participant-observer in a transvestite organization; a discussion of the transsexual experience from Feinbloom's viewpoint as founder and director of a gender identity counseling service; a collection of letters from a male-to-female transsexual describing experiences and feelings during the process of changing sexual identity; and a reprint of an essay on "the ethical implications of field work." Feinbloom raises interesting and challenging questions about the functions of such concepts as male/female and normal/deviant, and she provides insight into the complexity of the transsexual experience. The unique contribution that Feinbloom makes is her use of sociological perspective and methodology (although cited statistics are often misleading). Weaknesses in the book include psychological judgments, as when conclusions are drawn about the "subconscious needs" of the transvestite's wife. Stylistically the book does not cohere; the author assumes too many roles. However, this is a recommended addition to the body of knowledge concerning a still un-understood phenomenon.—Joan Brewer, Inst. for Sex Research Lib., Indiana Univ., Bloomington

Gastil, Raymond D. Cultural Regions of the United States.

Univ. of Washington Pr. 1976. 366p. fwd. by Nathan Glazer. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-8933. ISBN 0-295-95426-4. $12.95. SOC SCI

Gastil's governing thesis is that within the United States there are a number of distinct but overlapping cultures which define regions and are marked by continuity with their earliest settlers. He consequently stresses religion, language, and politics over economics and geography in distinguishing regions. His study is heavily footnoted and replete with charts, diagrams, statistics, and maps, but it is also polemical and impressionistic. The weakness lies in a somewhat fuzzy definition of culture along with awkward prose studded with jargon. In his passionate desire to prove that real regional cultures do exist, and that they are the most important conceptual divisions, Gastil often slights other patterns of social division and cohesion, and elevates minor differences to cultural traits. Yet this is an important reaction to the notion that we have been homogenized, and will certainly encourage more debate.—Judith McPheron, Oklahoma County Libs., Edmond

Gubrium, Jaber F., ed. Time, Roles, and Self in Old Age.
Human Sciences Pr. Mar. 1976. LC 74-12131. $14.95. SOC SCI
These papers deal with basic issues in gerontologic research: the relationship to society and to the family, and the perception of self among the aged. Individual papers discuss a variety of sociological and psychological issues including post-retirement roles, status, the assessment of comparative life situations and levels of life satisfaction, the unmarried, and the role of the aged in other societies. Topics like conceptions of time and role disengagement are viewed from new perspectives; issues of special current interest (the "generation gap," the role of the older woman) are here as well. This scholarly collection is highly recommended for academic and specialized collections.—Carol Holbrook, Univ. of Michigan Lib., Ann Arbor

Levitan, Sar A. & Karen Cleary Alderman. Child Care & ABC's Too.
Johns Hopkins. 1976. 125p. illus. index. LC 75-11355. ISBN 0-8018-1733-1. $8.50. ECON/SOC SCI
The authors have produced a current, well-documented assessment of the American child-care system. With the steady increase in the number of working mothers and the erosion of the extended family, the authors maintain that "the demand for suitable child care remains frequently unfilled." Contributing causes include the inconsistent administration of federal, state, and municipal monies, and the scarcity of centers for children from both low- and middle-income families. Statistical charts and graphs from HEW and Department of Labor data help to document chapters on areas such as the federal government's role in expanding services; working mothers; the relation between child care and the labor force; and the future of child care in the U.S.—Ilene F. Rockman, California Polytechnic State Univ. Lib., San Luis Obispo

Moffett, Robert K. & Jack F. Scherer. Dealing with Divorce.
Little. Mar. 1976. 226p. pap. $4.95. LAW/SOC SCI
Coauthored by a New York attorney, this book aims at "giving you a clearer picture of what is involved in a divorce action," mainly from a legal viewpoint. Bland, bloodless, the book is, however, clear in its explanation of court procedures and legal terminology. About a third of its contents is glossary information and listings of statutes and sources of legal help; such material is readily available elsewhere. Psychological issues, the aftermath of divorce, and realities of a new lifestyle are skipped over lightly. An adequate but undistinguished book. In comparison, Women in Transition (LJ 9/1/75) is fairly comprehensive and worth the attention it has been receiving.—Mary Pradt Ziegler, Brooklyn P.L.

Null, Gary. Man and His Whole Earth.
Stackpole. Mar. 1976. 224p. $8.95. ENVIRONMENT
If you've been sleeping these last few years and haven't heard that we are destroying the earth, this book will educate you. Drawing from other sources, Null succinctly and in plain language tells what the ramifications of our abuse of the land, air, and water have been and will be if we don't change, and he lists suggested readings at each chapter's end. What he says will make you want to stop drinking, eating, and breathing. But don't look here for solutions. Null is very good at compiling information, but not at offering constructive alternatives. His solution is dated, citing the cultural revolution of the late 1960's as the beginning of the end of all this wanton madness. He charges the education system with the responsibility of creating well-informed individuals, who will know better than to mutilate the environment—and aside from being old and not very specific, this idea loses the audience looking for answers.—Karen Goldman, San Francisco P.L.

Sauvy, Alfred. Zero Growth?
Praeger. Mar. 1976. 266p. illus. index. LC 74-1740. ISBN 0-275-33780-4. $10. SOC SCI
This book is meant to help the reader determine if continued economic and population growth is beneficial to the inhabitants of the earth. Demographer Sauvy tries to present a balanced argument for and against growth, bringing in the historical, economic, political, and social aspects of the population "crisis." Unfortunately, his treatment of the topic is uneven, and the 25 chapters (and hundreds of subchapters) do not add to the book's cohesiveness. Sauvy includes topics that are not in his specialty and omits others that should be included. For example, he describes the benefits of solar and hydroelectric power, but not the drawbacks; and he omits considering the possibility of using bicycles instead of cars for personal transit. Nonetheless, his book contains enough valuable material to make it a worthwhile purchase, especially for those collections interested in having an alternate perspective to Paul R. Ehrlich's The Population Bomb (LJ 10/1/68) and similar books.—Richard J. Peppin, Science Applications, Inc., McLean, Va.

Schwartz, Barry. Queuing and Waiting: studies in the social organization of access and delay.
Univ. of Chicago Pr. 1975. 217p. bibliog. index. LC 75-11607. ISBN 0-226-74210-5. $12. SOC SCI
Written by a sociologist from the University of Chicago, this represents the

BICENTENNIAL GAMES 'n FUN HANDBOOK by Adah Parker Strobell

new * indispensable * Bicentennial * new * indispensable * Bicentennial * new * indispensable * Bicentennial * first book-length work on queuing theory which has a sociological perspective. Until now, operations researchers and economists have generated most of the literature on the subject. That "waiting generates distinct social and personal costs" is the book's central assumption. Most of the text is used to consider sources of variation in waiting times, in the internal organization of queues, and in the ways in which waiting is interpreted by clients and servers. These problems are considered in very carefully constructed analyses. Everything about this work—with the exception of the tabular data, which is difficult to decipher—evidences sound scholarship and meticulous preparation. Recommended for academic sociology collections.—Thomas M. Gaughan, Hamline Univ. Lib., St. Paul., Minn.

Struening, Elmer L. & Marcia Guttentag, eds. Handbook of Evaluation Research. 2 vols.

Sage: Swallow. (Society for the Psychological Study of Social Issues). 1975. Vol. 1, 696p. Vol. 2, 736p. index. LC 74-15764. Vol. 1, ISBN 0-8039-0428-2. Vol. 2, ISBN 0-8039-0429-0. ea. vol: $25. PSYCH/SOC SCI

Evaluation research assesses the effectiveness of social programs and policies on the populations to which they are directed. These two volumes treat all aspects of research design, ranging from techniques of design and evaluation to their applications in specific content areas, particularly mental health. Although some of the chapters have appeared in print before, all are well chosen and most are written by outstanding social scientists. Included is a select bibliography of relevant readings and a cumulative bibliography of all references appearing in the chapters. An indispensable source for any collection oriented toward social policy analysis.—Wm. G. Jones, Northwestern University Lib., Evanston, Ill.

Talbot, Nathan B., ed. Raising Children in Modern America: problems and prospective solutions.

Little. 1976. 562p. bibliog. LC 75-19236. ISBN 0-316-83135-2. $17.50.

Talbot, Nathan B. Raising Children in Modern America: what parents and society should be doing for their children.

Little. 1976. 180p. LC 75-31571. ISBN 0-316-83136-0. $8.95. SOC SCI

Based on an interdisciplinary seminar held at Harvard University, these volumes attempt "to give child rearing the priority it must have in our national affairs." Volume 1 contains the results of research by a group of more than 20 experts from the medical, legal, social sciences, and business fields. They treat the environmental factors affecting the decision to have children; the physical and psychological needs and development of children; social institutions that support children and families; and the problems and need for national programs and policies to benefit children. There is a summary by the editor; credentials and bibliography are included. Recommendations and specifics are contained in a brief and more digestible form in Volume 2, which gives guidelines for public and individual action. A sampling of these recommendations include sex education in the school; subsidy of contraceptive information and devices for teenage youth; subsidy of child-oriented public service broadcasting programs; marriage and child rearing courses in the high school curriculum; federal programs to identify and ameliorate child rearing problems in American society. The research contained in this study is impressive and far-reaching. It will appeal primarily to educators, serious students of child study including professionals in related fields, and highly motivated parents with a strong academic or reading interest in the subject.—Ruth E. Almeida, North County Lib., Glen Burnie, Md.

Watson, Andrew. Living in China.

Rowman & Littlefield. 1975. 192p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-87471-742-6. $10. SOC SCI

Watson's book is one of the best introductions to contemporary China that I have ever read. As such, it provides a welcome relief from the plethora of superficial eyewitness accounts of life in China which have been published in recent years. It is written with sympathy and understanding but not without objectivity. The book explains China's political and economic structures, describes the cultural and social life of the people, and analyzes the ideology, goals, strengths, and weaknesses of the Mao regime in a well-balanced manner. The author worked in China during the Cultural Revolution and revisited it later. His personal experiences are judiciously woven into the text and lend an air of charming authenticity to the story. Recommended, especially for public and high school libraries.—Ranbir Vohra, Dept. of Political Science, Trinity Coll., Hartford, Conn.

Law & Criminology

Allen, William. Starkweather: a chronicle of mass murder in the fifties.

Houghton. Mar. 1976. 195p. illus. ISBN 0-395-24077-8. $7.95. BIOG CRIME

Nineteen-year-old Charles Starkweather murdered 11 people, was judged sane, and was electrocuted in Nebraska in 1959. The author has pieced together Charlie's many confessions with facts gathered from interviews with those involved at the time, and he gives a very readable if gruesome account of how and why he thinks it all happened. Allen believes Charlie was a victim of his environment and the violent 1950's, which makes for an intriguing theory. Since the author relies heavily on two other books on Starkweather that give different slants of the case, it would be necessary to have all three for a comparison of relevant facts and theories. [See Ninette Beaver's Caril (LJ 9/15/74) and James Reinhardt's The Murderous Trail of Charles Starkweather (Thomas, 1960).] For public libraries as well as criminology and psychology collections.—Marilyn Sharrow, Univ. of Washington Libs., Seattle

Armbrister, Trevor. Act of Vengeance: the Yablonski murders and their solution.

Saturday Review Pr: Dutton. 1975. 341p. index. LC 75-14113. ISBN 0-8415-0375-3. $10.95.

Brown, Stuart. A Man Named Tony: the true story of the Yablonski murders.

Norton. 1976. 240p. photogs. ISBN 0-393-08707-7. $8.95. LABOR/CRIME

These books give accounts of the 1969 murders of United Mine Workers insurgent Joseph "Jock" Yablonski, his wife, and daughter, and of the ensuing investigations and trials. Both rely heavily on trial transcripts as well as newspaper and periodical accounts of the affair. Brown presents a straightforward, concise, and factual account of the crimes and of the internal union struggle. The narrative is crisp and although background information on the principals is sparse, the essentials are here. The book will serve well for those seeking a quick familiarization with the case.

Act of Vengeance is a different matter. It is an extremely interesting book, greatly enriched by material from interviews with the convicted, with family members, and with the forces of the law. The author skillfully employs novelistic devices to enhance a narrative that is nearly as suspenseful as fiction.

America's moment of truth

Kluger, Richard. Simple Justice: the history of Brown v. Board of Education and black America's struggle for equality.

Knopf. 1976. 823p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 75-8221. ISBN 0-394-47289-6. $15.95.

SOC SCI/LAW

The ability to combine moral passion, intellectual rectitude, and factual precision is rare. Simple Justice is a powerful, comprehensive, and, for this generation at least, definitive treatment of the painful path trodden by black Americans to the historic 1954 Brown vs. Board of Education decision. Kluger has assimilated everything there is to know about the origins of the five cases that collectively destroyed the "separate but equal" doctrine, and he has exhaustively researched the inner workings of the Supreme Court as it sparred with, postponed, and then faced its (and America's) moment of truth. Any simplistic belief that what happened was "inevitable" is shattered by the revelation that the judicial unanimity necessary for any moral impact was unachievable until Earl Warren's fortuitous accession to the Chief Justiceship. Warren, Felix Frankfurter (whose role in Brown, often derided by scholars, was critical), and their brethren demonstrated a courage rivalling—though not equalling—that shown by the beleaguered litigants and their attorneys, a courage which we should remember in this Bicentennial year.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

Though the book resembles a morality play, the reader should remember that there have been few murders of prominent people in American history which have been ordered, planned, and carried out in such a vicious manner. If these two books have a major fault, it lies in their failure to give more than superficial treatment to the bitter history of the Appalachian coal fields.—Ronald L. Filippelli, Pennsylvania State Univ. Libs., University Park

Sanders, William. Juvenile Delinquency.

Praeger. 1976. 256p. bibliog., index. LC 74-15685. ISBN 0-275-22360-4. $10; pap. ISBN 0-275-85440-X. $4.95. CRIMINOLOGY

Sanders, who is with the criminal justice department of the University of Florida, has written an introductory survey of juvenile delinquency, focusing on social interaction theory. The author hopes not only to foster understanding of the basic issues of juvenile delinquency, but also to underscore certain relationships, for example, the "intimate relationship between delinquency and the juvenile justice system." He covers such topics as theories of juvenile crime, juvenile status offenders ("predelinquents, runaways, truants, promiscuous girls, and others who have committed no crime for which an adult would be arrested"), property crimes, drugs, gangs, and the juvenile justice system itself. His book is well written and organized and deserves to be represented in academic and public library collections.—Susan J. Vaughn, Brooklyn Coll. Lib.

Regional Studies & Anthropology

Babb, Lawrence A. The Divine Hierarchy: popular Hinduism in Central India.

Columbia Univ. Pr. 1976. 272p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-16193. ISBN 0-231-03882-8. $10. REL/REGIONAL STUDY

Religious rituals of the people of Madhya Pradesh (a state in Central India) have never been carefully studied with regard to their relation to the unifying beliefs of Hinduism. Babb presents detailed reports of his research of the ritual practices of the people in the region of Chhattisgarh (a rice-growing area in Madhya Pradesh) during 1966–1967. From these observations, he proposes that the rituals express certain key polarities—purity/pollution, male/female, heat/cold, benevolence/malevolence, restraint/license—which are fundamental to Hinduism in this region. For the most part, his analysis is based on sound scholarship; but in an attempt to be very clear, he's repetitious. Nevertheless, the work is recommended especially for the fine description of the rituals not previously studied.—Dennis Ryan, Religious Studies Dept., Coll of New Rochelle, N.Y.

Readers with an interest in cultural anthropology, especially of Europe, Asia, or Africa, please contact Ellen Levy, The Book Review.

Butzer, Karl & Glynn Isaac, eds. After the Australopithecines: stratigraphy, ecology, and culture change in the Middle Pleistocene.

911p. ISBN 0-202-33074-5. $49.

Swanson, Earl, ed. Lithic Technology: making and using stone tools.

251p. ISBN 0-202-33076-1. $27.50.

Tuttle, Russell H., ed. Socioecology and Psychology of Primates.

474p. ISBN 0-202-02018-5. $29.50.

Watts, Elizabeth S. & others, eds. Biosocial Interrelations in Population Adaptation.

412p. ISBN 0-202-02019-3. $24.50.

ea. vol: Aldine. (World Anthropology). 1975. illus. index. ANTHROPOLOGY

The "World Anthropology" series represents the proceedings of the Ninth International Congress of Anthropological and Ethnological Sciences, held in Chicago in 1973. About 20 volumes were published in 1975, and some 70 more are scheduled for release during 1976 and 1977. These books report the state of the art in such diverse areas as paleontology, prehistory, linguistics, social anthropology, and psychology.

In Socioecology, Tuttle presents 18 papers on primate tool use, language and intelligence, hunting, and ecology and social behavior. The Lithic Technology volume includes 13 papers dealing with stone toolmaking from technological and theoretico-psychological points of view, as well as analyses of wear on prehistoric implements. Biosocial Interrelations contains 25 papers in the areas of medical anthropology, ontogeny, population dynamics, and adaptive strategies in human morphology, but it lacks the discussion comments present in other volumes. After the Australopithecines is one of the most important volumes in the current group and is part of this series even though it is the result of a separate symposium. It presents 19 contributions on problems of the Middle Pleistocene, the period when modern man evolved from Pithecanthropus. All phases of the period are covered, and appendixes provide important correlation charts. It is hoped that future volumes of this series will keep up the high standard seen in the first group, which will be required reading for anthropologists in the 1970's.—Eric Delson, Dept. of Anthropology, Lehman Coll., CUNY

Lévi-Strauss, Claude. Structural Anthropology. Vol. 2.

Basic Bks. 1976. 383p. tr. from French by Monique Layton. illus. bibliog. index. LC 63-17344. ISBN 0-465-08230-0. $17.50. ANTHROPOLOGY

A sequel to Structural Anthropology (LJ 1/1/64), this is a collection of lectures and articles by one of the foremost contemporary anthropologists. The selections are revised versions of texts which have previously appeared in print between 1952 and 1973. The book is divided into four major sections: "Perspective Views," in which the author outlines the contributions of Rousseau, Durkheim, and Mauss to the study of culture; "Social Organization," where Lévi-Strauss defends the methods by which he approaches the study of kinship; "Mythology and Ritual," which comprises some of Lévi-Strauss' major articles and illustrates the structural method; and "Humanism and the Humanities," which contains reflections on the problem of progress in modern societies as seen in the areas of social science, art, and literature. This is a rich overview of the thoughts of one of anthropology's most prolific figures.—Winifred Lambrecht, Dept. of Anthropology, Lehman Coll., CUNY

SPORTS & RECREATION

Angus, Ian. Medals and Decorations.

St. Martin's. 1975. 128p. illus., some color. index. LC 74-33904. $6.95. HOBBIES

This work provides an overview of various types of medals, including campaign medals, gallantry awards, military medals, orders of chivalry, commemorative medals, and pins and badges. A very brief discussion is devoted to the collection of medals and decorations. The book would have been enhanced by better quality illustrations. All illustrations (with the exception of two pages) are only fair black-and-white reproductions.—David B. Walch, Director of Academic Services, SUNY at Buffalo

Angus, Ian. Paper Money.

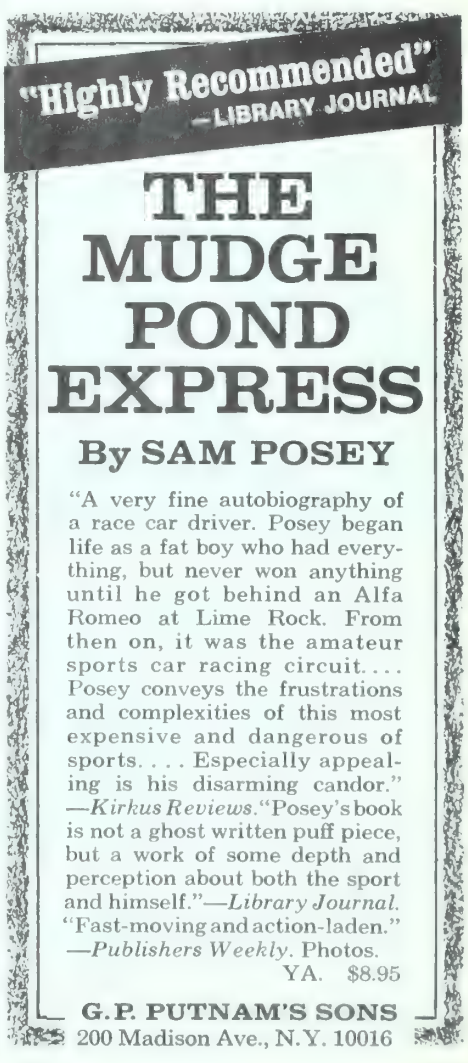
St. Martin's. 1975. 128p. illus., some color. index. LC 74-33903. $6.95. HOBBIES

Angus, who has authored books on coins and medals, has now written a



"Highly Recommended"
—LIBRARY JOURNAL
THE MUDGE POND EXPRESS
By SAM POSEY
"A very fine autobiography of a race car driver. Posey began life as a fat boy who had everything, but never won anything until he got behind an Alfa Romeo at Lime Rock. From then on, it was the amateur sports car racing circuit.... Posey conveys the frustrations and complexities of this most expensive and dangerous of sports.... Especially appealing is his disarming candor." —Kirkus Reviews. "Posey's book is not a ghost written puff piece, but a work of some depth and perception about both the sport and himself."—Library Journal. "Fast-moving and action-laden." —Publishers Weekly. Photos.
YA. $8.95
G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

Thorough*

ARCHERY WORLD'S COMPLETE GUIDE TO BOWHUNTING

Edited by Glenn Helgeland, editor of Archery World Magazine

"A thorough introduction to bow hunting, as well as some first-person accounts of bow hunting adventures... Sensitivity... is shown toward both humane and ecological issues.... A sound, basic book."—*Library Journal (November 15, 1975)
Illus. 0-13-044024-8 $8.95

PRENTICE-HALL CIP
General Book Marketing Division
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632

A new delight for fans of the "quintessential British Walter Mitty"*

Billy Liar On the Moon

By KEITH WATERHOUSE
Author of Billy Liar

"'Billy Liar' is 33 now.... With his office situation under challenge, his marriage shaky, loving neither his wife nor his mistress, trying to become what he considers grown up, Billy has his problems.... An entertaining and convoluted divertissement which offers just a little pain with its undoubted pleasures." — Publishers Weekly*. "Despite his faults, Billy is a likable chap.... Hopefully, Waterhouse will bring him back in fewer than 15 years in another novel as well-written and amusing as this."—Library Journal.
$7.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

work on paper money, a subject about which there has been a paucity of information. Regrettably the book's scope is too broad and the research is too shallow for this to be considered anything other than just a brief introduction to the subject. In 128 pages Angus attempts to cover not only the origin of paper money in general, but also the development and use of it in England, America, Europe, Asia, Africa, and Australasia. He also includes an interesting chapter on emergency paper money and one on the art of collecting paper money. In summation, a good introduction to the subject but nothing more.—David B. Walch, Director of Academic Services, SUNY at Buffalo

Bass, Howard. Let's Go Skating.
St. Martin's. 1976. 176p. illus. index. $6.95.
SPORTS

An overview of the sports played on ice and of the professional ice shows. Some basic information on skating techniques is given, but the author advocates some instruction by a more experienced or professional skater. Lists of world championship and Olympic medal holders, as well as chapters on choosing equipment and appropriate clothing, add to the brief, but complete, coverage of the ice skating world. Suggestions for planning programs, selecting music, and arranging other technical aspects of a performance make this a helpful book for the ice skater who hopes to perform or compete. A good introduction to the attractions of ice sports, but not a manual of skating technique.—Barbara Schultz, VA Hospital Lib., Sepulveda, Calif.

Bridge, Raymond. Climbing: a guide to mountaineering.
Scribners. Mar. 1976. 416p. illus. $12.50.
RECREATION

This is a basic manual on modern American climbing technique and equipment for beginners and more experienced climbers. Without overdoing step-by-step description, Bridge covers the use of all kinds of equipment on a variety of surfaces and in various weather conditions, emphasizing what is best for a given situation and constantly reminding us that one learns to climb by climbing. Although he calls his book "a catalogue of ways to stay out of trouble while climbing," it is more than that: it is also a celebration of the adventure and challenge of mountaineering written by a veteran. Recommended even for armchair climbers, but especially for those already involved in this fast-growing sport. (The illustrations were not seen by this reviewer.)—Roland Person, Southern Illinois Univ. Lib., Carbondale

Carpenter, Harry. Boxing: a pictorial history.
1976. Regnery. 192p. fwd. by Muhammad Ali. photogs., some color. index. LC 75-9831. ISBN 0-8092-8349-2. $15. SPORTS

First published in Great Britain, this lavishly illustrated volume is authored by the boxing commentator of BBC television. It is literally an illustrated history of the sport, decade by decade, after a background account of pre-1890 events has been developed. There are hundreds of photographs (a few in color). Appended to the book are complete fight results for all world championship and Olympic contests. An excellent value and highly recommended.—Howard R. Downey, Bellingham P.L., Wash.

Chisholm, Craig. Hawaiian Hiking Trails.
Touchstone. 1975. 127p. photogs. maps. LC 75-13696. pap. ISBN 0-911518-35-5. $5.95.
TRAV/RECREATION

This excellent guide includes descriptions of 49 trails on six of the Hawaiian Islands. Each description includes trail-marked reproductions of the needed portions of the U. S. Geological Survey topographic map; illustrations; information concerning the locations of trail heads, length of trail, hiking time, elevation and trail elevation gain, difficulty, and the estimated number of calories that will be expended on each hike. An introduction provides general tips on island hiking and camping. Additional introductory information about each island and an island outline map is provided within the text. Recommended.—J. Carlyle Parker, California State Coll. Lib., Turlock, Calif.

Jackson, Phil with Charles Rosen. Maverick: more than a game.
Playboy, dist. by S. & S. 1976. 228p. LC 75-17267. ISBN 0-87223-439-8. $8.95.
PER NAR/SPORTS

A very inspiring, yet revealing story of professional basketball as seen through the eyes of a player. The major portion of the book deals with the New York Knicks and their style of play. Jackson offers candid insights into such Knicks as Bill Bradley, Earl Monroe, Dave DeBusschere, and Walt Frazier. Things unknown to most fans such as how the media corrupts and distorts professional basketball, high finance in the NBA, the not always perfect officials, and the punishing and resentful public appearances are discussed. Jackson on his own childhood: "Meals were at 8, 12, and 6, and if you were late you just went without eating." On his spiritual rebirth: "When I discovered that God was still dwelling in the center of my soul, I saw that I had to recommit my entire lifestyle to accommodate my new spirituality." Jackson has here a provocative book on "how his personal journey moved him from the American Legion to smoking dope to plans for establishing a spiritual community in Montana." Recommended for any library with a strong following in this subject.—Ronald F. Ritter, Davidson County P.L., Lexington, N.C.

Mandell, Richard D. The First Modern Olympics.
Univ. of California Pr. Mar. 1976. 194p. index. illus. LC 75-3773. ISBN 0-520-02983-6. $10.
SPORTS

To look at the origins of the modern Olympic Games in Athens in 1896 and the show-biz extravaganza about to take place in Montreal is somewhat akin to examining the Wright Brothers' machine and a 747. They hardly seem of the same family. Mandell does a fine job in tracing the idea of the Olympics. He also has a hero, Baron Pierre de Coubertin, an energetic Frenchman who pushed through his idea against various obstacles. It was Coubertin's vision that international sporting competition both intensifies patriotism and prevents political friction—that the mixing of patriotism and competition would somehow further universal peace. Mandell's final chapter is the most interesting; here he argues the importance of the first modern Olympics for the future of the games. The author also lists the winning statistics for the 1896 Olympics and comments that "most of these performances could now be surpassed by good high school athletes."—Larry Friedman, New York

Metropolitan New York AYH Council. American Youth Hostels Bike/Hike Book.

Stackpole. Mar. 1976. 128p. pap. $1.95. RECREATION

A brief introduction to traveling by foot or on bicycle. More emphasis is put on equipment than on the actual experience of hiking or biking. Some of the more helpful sections are on publications to read before starting out on a trip, what to budget for a trip, preventative "medicine" both for the biker/hiker and the equipment, and economical use of grocery store foods. Being in shape before starting out and leaving the environment without any trace of having been there are two concerns of the authors. A publication that reflects the interests and services of the organization which produced it, this book is useful for presenting the many things to be considered before starting a trip, but it's not complete enough to give a good feel for what really to expect out there biking/hiking.—Barbara Schultz, VA Hospital Lib., Sepulveda, Calif.

Neville, Bill. Real Steel: an investors & philosophers guide to the American automobile, 1940–1960.

Running Pr. 1975. 128p. illus. index. LC 75-17045. ISBN 0-914294-27-X. $9.80; pap. ISBN 0-914294-26-1. $4.95. HOBBIES

A rather different slant towards car collecting. Instead of the usual uninspired text and pictures, this book makes car collecting an art. There aren't any real "antiques" included, but rather cars of recent vintage that have become collectors items because of their unique styling and/or features. Devoted strictly to the American car, the showcase includes a 1938 Packard, 1948 Ford "Woody," 1956 T Bird, and 1969 AMX, plus 84 others. The aim is not just to list and describe collectible cars, but rather to provide a guide for the investor. Each entry includes a description, information on why the car is a collectors item, specifications, and a graph depicting the actual purchase price and the prices of the car in fair and good condition from 1973 to 1978. Very useful is the annotated list of car and old-car magazines and manuals. Essential for car collections.—Joy Hastings, Santiago Lib. System, Orange County, Calif.

Ogilvy, C. Stanley. Win More Sailboat Races.

Norton. Mar. 1976. 144p. illus. ISBN 0-393-03191-8. $8.95.

Walker, Stuart H. Advanced Racing Tactics.

Norton. Mar. 1976. 400p. illus. index. ISBN 0-393-03184-5. $15. SPORTS

Sailboat racing on a world championship level can be a subtle, complicated, not to say arcane sport. These works are attempts to make these mysteries clear to mere mortals. Neither is directed at the neophyte sailor. Ogilvy's book deals with the techniques, strategies, and tactics of racing. Chapters are devoted to maneuvering for the best position for the start as well as windward and downwind techniques. Problem areas such as spinaker technique and rounding the leeward mark are covered in separate chapters. There is an interesting chapter on the use and selection of sails. While this work will provide instructive reading to the moderately experienced racer, it will leave many newcomers scratching their heads.

The title of Walker's book makes the intended audience clear at once. It covers much the same material as Ogilvy, but goes into far more detail. For example, 11 sections are devoted to the start alone. Comparable attention is devoted to windward and downwind work as well as to the finish. A particularly fascinating aspect is the attention given to the human elements in racing. The first ten chapters cover such people problems as greed on the part of the skipper to win races, flexibility in tactics and strategy, and skipper-crew relationships. Examples are given showing how races are lost because of negative or defeatist thinking, and "psyching out" the opposition is shown to be an important factor.

Both of these works are useful and instructive. The Walker book, however, is clearly the better of the two. It is more lucidly written and better organized, having both a glossary and an index. And the human touch often makes for fascinating reading.—Jay Schwartz, Suffolk County Community Coll. Lib., Selden, N.Y.

Rappoport, Ken. Wake Up the Echoes: Notre Dame football.

Strode. 1975. 464p. illus. LC 75-26072. ISBN 0-87397-053-5. $8.95. SPORTS

As one of our few truly national schools playing major college football, Notre Dame has fans in every part of the country, and this history of the game there should match any of their expectations. No time periods are slighted, although there is an understandable emphasis on the coaching tenures of Rockne, Leahy, and Parsegian. In addition to a richly anecdotal text, there are many well-chosen illustrations. The appendixes give the most detailed football records I have seen, even indicating whether a particular game was played in rain or snow, or time remaining when the winning points were scored in a close game. Excellent.—Don Marion, Univ. of Minnesota Libs., Minneapolis

How to win in anything you race.

Read RACE CAR ENGINEERING AND MECHANICS. It covers all areas of race car engineering, theory, development and mechanics so thoroughly that it should be the definitive work for years to come.

"Must reading for any aspiring race car mechanic, designer, engineer, or driver." —John Dinkel, Engineering Editor, Road & Track

RACE CAR ENGINEERING & MECHANICS

PAUL VAN VALKENBURGH

Illustrated with photographs and drawings $15.00

79 Madison Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10016

DODD MEAD

LIPPINCOTT

ALL THE MOVES

A History of College Basketball

Neil D. Isaacs

Sophisticated, knowledgeable . . . [Isaacs'] feeling for the game is exceptional. His history follows the spread of the game from colleges [illegible] development of the 'zone defense' and other key innovations, the great old-time coaches and players who contributed to the game's components, its lore and excitement. Studded with personality [illegible]

YA LC 75-6574

[illegible]

J. B. Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105

BUYING YOUR HOUSE

A Complete Guide to Inspection and Evaluation

by Joseph C. Davis & Claxton Walker

"Practical experience and professional expertise in the building industry are combined in this comprehensive guide to home buying. The primary focus is on the physical inspection and evaluation of the house. . . . Line drawings of architectural styles and diagrams of major equipment (furnaces, air conditioners), gutter systems, and locks enhance the text. Especially useful are the discussions on the pros and cons of various heating systems, electronic air filters, solar energy, etc. Includes additional reading, extensive glossary, and index. Recommended."—Library Journal

SBN 87523-184-5 Illustrated $8.95

WINE AND BEERMAKING AT HOME

By Kenneth Hill

WINE AND BEERMAKING AT HOME assumes little or no previous knowledge of the subject. It includes a step-by-step guide as well as sections on popular myths and common faults and how to cure them. Recipes are given for red and white dry table wines, red, white and golden sweet wines, dessert wines and making bitter beer, barley wine, Irish stout, lager and low alcohol and beerstyle drinks. Basic equipment, surprisingly inexpensive, is discussed and terms are carefully defined.
SBN 87523-185-3 Illustrated $6.95

EMERSON BOOKS, INC.

Buchanan, New York 10511

Rosenkranz, George. Win with Romex: the key to accurate bidding.

Crown. 1975. 401p. fwd. by Charles H. Goren. pref. by Omar Sharif. LC 75-21911. ISBN 0-517-52445-7. $9.95. GAMES

Rosenkranz, for many years, has been Mexico's greatest bridge player. In this, his first book, he introduces the Romex system of bidding. It's a complicated and artificial system unfortunately devised for the expert not the social bridge player. Americans have a strong attachment to standard American bidding, and it will take a super new system to make them change. This is not the one. Few, if any, of the millions of casual, social bridge players will be interested in this book.—Bernard F. Pasqualini, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Stebbins, Ray. Cold-Weather Camping.

Regnery. 1975. 227p. illus. index. LC 75-12864. ISBN 0-8092-8223-2. $10; pap. ISBN 0-8092-8222-4. $4.95. RECREATION

Winter camping and related activities are becoming increasingly popular in the U.S. The surge in popularity of cross-country (Nordic) skiing, snowshoeing, and snowmobiling and the increasing availability of light-weight, down-filled clothing and sleeping equipment have all contributed to the ease of winter camping. Cold-Weather Camping is one of the best popular guides on the subject and is a good companion to Raymond Bridge's The Complete Snow Camper's Guide (LJ 5/1/73). The narrative is well balanced with half-tones and line drawings and is enjoyable reading as well as instructive. Stebbins is knowledgeable on equipment, clothing, food, travel, and navigation, and he relates both the joys and hazards of winter camping. The book is well indexed, and there's an appendix listing suppliers of equipment and food. Recommended.—Ryan Hoover, Univ. of Utah Libs., Salt Lake City

Wolman, Baron & Fred Kaplan (photogs.) & Steve Cassady (text). Oakland Raiders: the good guys.

Squarebks., P.O. Box 144, Mill Valley, Calif. 94941. 1975. 127p. index. LC 75-28711. pap. ISBN 0-916290-03-4. $4.95. PHOTOG/SPORTS

This up-to-date look at the Oakland Raiders attempts to present the qualities that make the Raiders perennial winners in the National Football League. In his introduction Cassady mentions the Raiders' strengths as his point of departure for profiling the team. The Raiders' main strength is, he says, flexibility. The first third of the book describes key management and team personnel. The last two thirds is a somewhat disappointing melange of slick black-and-white photos of the team on and off the field. One of the main ingredients of compelling photojournalism is drama, and these pictures do not produce dramatic effect. Unfortunately also, the too frequent hyperbole of Cassady is a distraction which lessens the value of his otherwise good sports writing. A necessary photo index is included, but, disappointingly, team statistics are not.—Milton E. Mitchell, Oshkosh P.L., Wisc.

THEATER

Smith, Bill. The Vaudevillians.

Macmillan. May 1976. 288p. illus. index. ISBN 0-02-611890-4. $12.95. THEATER

Smith has interviewed 30 stars of the vaudeville stage—some well-known, some obscure. They have talked about what vaudeville was—the booking, the touring, the theaters, the audiences. More importantly, they have imparted the flavor of the vaudevillian's life. Among those interviewed are George Burns, George Jessel, Rudy Vallee, Milton Berle, John Bubbles (of the great team of Buck and Bubbles), and Edgar Bergen. Vaudeville was phased out by sound movies, radio, and television. The real clue as to the difference between vaudeville and the more recent media is expressed by Edgar Bergen when he remarks that in vaudeville "one tried out to people not to equipment."—Paul Myers, N.Y.P.L.

Suib, Leonard & Muriel Broadman. Marionettes on Stage.

Harper. 1975. 256p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-6363. ISBN 0-06-014166-2. $16.95. THEATER

Here is a coaxing three-part manual for constructing and manipulating puppets. Fool-proof plans for making the figures from materials readily available lead the reader from creating the puppets to preparing the show (directions include lighting and music) and putting it on. Part 2 deals with becoming a puppeteer, and Part 3 considers management of a puppet theater. Module patterns and sample scripts give one a start. The enthusiastic experienced authors seem to have covered every possible question.—Sarah Chokla Gross, formerly Editor, "Broadside," Theatre Lib. Assn., East Rockaway, N.Y.

Cinema

Behlmer, Rudy & Tony Thomas. Hollywood's Hollywood: the movies about the movies.

Citadel. 1975. 345p. photogs. index. LC 75-20357. ISBN 0-8065-0491-9. $19.95. CINEMA

This book gives the usual panorama of films combed from thousands of pictures held by studio libraries and private collectors. There is a great deal of background material about a vast number of film personnel. There is also some perceptive film criticism. There is so much material about Hollywood that the editors are faced with the usual problem of too much to draw from. They used 200 films about Hollywood. This principle of selection makes even less sense than usual since the editors are the first to admit that films about Hollywood are scarcely factual. Nevertheless, buyers of movie books will value a book with 500 excellent photographs. Recommended for libraries serving students of film.—Gilbert B. Cross, Dept. of English, Eastern Michigan Univ., Ypsilanti

Calder, Jenni. There Must Be a Lone Ranger: the American West in film and in reality.

Taplinger. 1975. 241p. illus. index. LC 74-20216. ISBN 0-8008-7636-9. $8.95. CINEMA

This ambitious study attempts to look at every aspect of the American West and see how it is reflected in films, fiction, contemporary memoir, and documented history in order to determine how our popular Western myth agrees with and ignores historical reality. However, the writing is meandering and repetitive, with some sections awkwardly written and full of annoying technical errors. Calder seems to lack the necessary clarifying passion in writing about her subject. The book is redeemed by a good discussion on violence and a long-needed one on women, but even the latter is marred by incompleteness. The book's subtitle uses the word film, but Calder seems more interested and better grounded in fictional literature—pulps to classics. The list of significant films she doesn't talk about is nearly longer than the one she does. The manuscript also appears to have been completed during 1972-1973, which gives the book, especially as far as films are concerned, a seriously dated limitation.—David Bartholomew, N.Y.P.L.

Dwoskin, Stephen. Film Is: the international free cinema.

Overlook, dist. by Viking. 1975. 268p. bibliog. index. LC 75-7685. ISBN 0-87951-036-6. $15. CINEMA

This book is much like a travel book—one is constantly enticed by the discussion but frustrated by knowing that what is discussed will probably never be seen. Although there are a few familiar films included here, most films mentioned received such limited circulation (or none at all) that one of the author's major achievements is recording their existence. The term "underground film" adequately describes the subject of the book for most readers, but the author prefers the term "free cinema." A filmmaker himself, Dwoskin outlines free cinema activity by country or geographic region in the first part of the book, and then gives his impressions of films and their creators in the second part. This is an important book and should be in large public and all college libraries.—Kenneth Tracy, Oklahoma State Univ. Lib., Stillwater

Jowett, Garth, for the American Film Institute. Film: the democratic art.

Little. Mar. 1976. 482p. bibliog. index. $19.50. CINEMA

This work purports to be the first contemporary sociological study of film, and was written because Jowett feels that American social and cultural history has suffered because the medium has never before received the serious attention it deserves. Jowett describes the types of people who constitute the audience, and says that the early development of the art answered a deep social and cultural need. He goes on to discuss film's role in relation to the general influence of the mass media on social change. Throughout, some of the history of the motion picture and its industry inevitably appears; Jowett discusses at length film censorship and the controls that have evolved. The book is well documented and presents some interesting ideas and original points of view, making it suitable for academic libraries in support of film, sociology, psychology, and communications programs.—Deborah Elliott, formerly with Grad. Sch. of Library Science, Univ. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Liehm, Antonín. The Miloš Forman Stories.

Internat. Arts & Sciences. 1976. 191p. illus. index. LC 73-92806. ISBN 0-87332-051-4. $15. CINEMA

Forman is a contemporary Czechoslovakian film director who emerged as a success during the Czech New Wave of the 1960's. This book consists for the most part of stories and reviews of him and his work. The stories (collected by Liehm and narrated by Forman) are a sampling of episodes in the life of the director that describe Forman himself, his friends, his films, etc. Interspersed among the stories are some of Liehm's reviews, which were previously published as magazine articles in the 1960's and 1970's. Several chapters discuss in some detail the people and events that helped shape the Czechoslovak film industry from the 1930's to the 1960's. Throughout the book, Liehm does not hesitate to display his great admiration for Forman's work.—Jerry Holtz, Kansas State Univ. Lib., Manhattan

Marx, Arthur. Goldwyn: a biography of the man behind the myth.

Norton. Mar. 1976. 400p. photogs. bibliog. ISBN 0-393-07497-8. $9.95. BIOG/CINEMA

Sam Goldwyn, as one of Hollywood's founding fathers, lived a life most people would envy. Marx has chronicled this great man's rise from the Warsaw ghetto in a manner that is highly readable and entertaining. He includes new material and anecdotes; and a sequential film-by-film approach makes it possible for the reader to pick those which interest him. Essential for public libraries; college collections could also benefit.—Andrew Aros, Montebello P.L., Calif.

Naha, Ed. Horrors: from screen to scream; an encyclopedic guide to the greatest horror and fantasy films of all time.

Flare: Avon. 1975. 306p. photogs. LC 75-27438. pap. ISBN 0-380-00499-2. $4.95. REF/CINEMA

This text consists of alphabetically listed film titles with some entries for actors, directors, and special effects men. Emphasis is on plot synopsis and partial screen credits. Naha's personal, often flippant, evaluations are monosyllabic and far removed from the serious critiques found in Carlos Clarens' An Illustrated History of the Horror Film (LJ 4/15/67). Important fantasy titles are missing (Things to Come, L'Atlantide), and there is no director entry for Méliès or Polanski. Finally, the literate fantasy and horror films that are cited (Green Pastures, The Hairy Ape, Lost Horizon, et al.) generally have much shorter entries than the low-grade horror films.—Mark Piel, Upsala Coll. Lib., East Orange, N.J.

fiction

Alther, Lisa. Kinflicks.

Knopf. Mar. 1976. 489p. $8.95. F

Virginia Babcock Bliss, having been discovered in a compromising position with a hippie draft deserter, is thrown out of the house by her husband. She returns to her home town in Tennessee to find her mother dying in a hospital bed. Ginny's psychosexual development over her 27 years is the saga of her generation: an impressionable young woman moves from cheerleader through girl of a motorcycle hood, prim collegian, antiwar lesbian, organic farmer, and model housewife to emerge in her present predicament. Alther's sense of humor and objectivity distinguish this book from the myriad others now proliferating on the subject of women's sexual development, and both these qualities dwindle somewhat as the book progresses. Ginny's indecision, initially funny, eventually becomes wearing, and at the conclusion Ginny's mother appears as the true heroine, although it is not clear that that was Alther's intention. Despite its flaws, however, this is an admirable first attempt, carefully constructed, well written, and extremely perceptive—a welcome addition to contemporary collections.—Diane Haas, Howe Lib., Hanover, N.H.

The most chilling tale since Harvest Home

SUMMER SOLSTICE

By Michael T. Hinkemeyer

Author of The Dark Below

"Katie Ellenwood goes home to northern Minnesota when...her mother has a paralytic stroke and Katie is needed to care for her. What she finds is startling and strange.... Obscure warnings, strange sounds, locked doors climax in the brutal and inexplicable death of a neighbor who evidently knows too much. And somehow it all has to do with... that longest of days, the summer solstice, [when] Katie's nameless flitting fears are transformed into terrifying reality. ... An imagination-stretching, spooky scare."—Publishers Weekly. A BERKLEY/PUTNAM BOOK. $7.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS

200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

"An exciting tale"*

TIGER TEN

By William D. Blankenship

Meet Riley Stone, a Flying Tiger pilot who will gladly risk his life . . . for money. He's the improbable hero of this rousing adventure set in Southeast Asia during World War II. When British Intelligence offers a million pounds for a Zero in mint condition, Riley and a buddy battle jungle and Japanese to bring the plane out of Asia in a "deftly orchestrated action novel. . . . There is never a moment without a hair-raiser." —N.Y. Times Book Review. "Moves like a tracer bullet." —Kirkus Reviews. "What it may lack in subtlety, it makes up for in lean, hard action."—Publishers Weekly.* YA. $7.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N. Y. 10016

"Keenly etched characters"*

THE CHAMELEON COURSE

DONALD SEAMAN

"This espionage yarn overlays gilt-edged plotting with keenly etched characters to convince us that Cold War skullduggery can erupt anytime, anyplace – if the stakes are high enough. Physicist Alexandrai Geria and his dissident wife defect from the U.S.S.R., hopeful that Britain will provide a supportive atmosphere for his research. Instead the couple never feels secure from assassination even after facial surgery and elocution lessons. . . . The ambivalence of the Gerias, two expatriates at bay in a psychological no man's land, lends credence to the suspense throughout this thriller."
—Publishers Weekly*

280 pp. $8.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

Arnold, Elliott. The Camp Grant Massacre.
S. & S. 1976. LC 75-25995. ISBN 0-671-22193-0. $9.95. F

Arnold's powerful novel is based on one of the darker moments in the history of the American West: the 1871 massacre of 120 Apache women and children by a mixed band of Mexicans, Americans, and Papago Indians. The tragic irony of the event, and the motivating factor behind the novel, is that the Apache were in the protective custody of the U.S. Army at Camp Grant Arizona. The central character is Lieutenant Royal Whitman, native of Maine and veteran of the Civil War, and new to the malaria-ridden life at Camp Grant. Whitman innocently touches off a series of chain reactions which build inevitably toward the massacre. Arnold paints convincing portraits of the supporting characters, among them John Wasson, the Tucson newspaper editor who leads the movement to annihilate the Apaches, and Eskiminzin, the Apache chief whose way of life Whitman begins to understand just before the massacre cuts off any final reconciliation. It is, however, the portrait of Lieutenant Whitman that makes the novel so believable and so moving. In the final horror Whitman faces the possibility that his naïve attempt to bring peace to the Apaches may well have caused their destruction.—F. Whitney Jones, Dept. of English, St. Andrews Coll., Laurinburg, N.C.

Bosco, Monique. Lot's Wife.
Books Canada, 33 East Tupper St., Buffalo, N.Y. 14203. 1975. 149p. tr. from French by John Glassco. $8.95. F

Each entry in this confessional diary conveys the varied emotions and moods of a woman tormented by the meaninglessness of her existence devoid of love. Hélène looks back upon her past, realizing now at middle age that the suicide she is planning is inescapable. Her lucid self-analysis and her ability to describe herself in relation to others result in a powerful psychological narration that is often lyrical and always interesting. Bosco's work is richly personal, moving, and thought-provoking. Glassco's translation is sensitive and precise.—Anthony S. Caprio, Dept. of Romance Languages, Lehman Coll., CUNY

Brown, Leigh. The Show Gypsies.
Mason/Charter. 1976. 356p. ISBN 0-88405-122-6. $8.95. F

This fast-paced, well-written, moving, funny first novel about the world of competitive show jumping follows the lives and fortunes of a young woman hoping to make the U.S. Olympic team and the older man who becomes her coach, employer, and lover. When he is seriously injured in a fall, Diane must make an agonizing decision affecting their future. An excellent first novel.—Suzan H. Stephenson, Prince George's County Memorial Lib. System, Md.

DeMaria, Robert. To Be a King.
Bobbs. Mar. 1976. 384p. LC 75-30771. ISBN 0-672-52201-2. $10. F

In this fictionalized account of the life of Christopher Marlowe we follow Marlowe from his youth in Canterbury through his undergraduate days at Cambridge, where he is enlisted as a courier in the elaborate anti-Catholic spy network of Sir Francis Walsingham, to his death at 29 in the Deptford tavern while waiting to testify further before the Privy Council. Along the way Kit trades gibes with his rival William Shakespeare, and lusts after handsome young men. Marlowe's shady political role is complicated by his homosexual relationship with Walsingham's nephew Thomas who, in this account, endorses Marlowe's death at the hands of his servant Ingram Frizer and the double-agent Robert Poley in order to protect himself and his new wife. Although DeMaria's characters lack depth, his dialogue is crisp and direct, and his view of the complex personal and political web which finally trapped Marlowe is convincing. He is also effective in exposing the petty motivations behind much of the heroics of the Elizabethan era.—F. Whitney Jones, Dept. of English, St. Andrews Coll., Laurinburg, N.C.

Green, Gerald. The Hostage Heart.
Playboy, dist. by S. & S. Mar. 1976. 304p. LC 74-33555. ISBN 0-87223-430-4. $8.95. F

In this novel there is open heart surgery, terrorism, hostages, the takeover of an operating room, and the traditional rivalries between surgeons and other doctors while the FBI and the local cops fight out jurisdictional problems; the characters are of the cookie cutter variety. Still, this potpourri might sustain a hungry reader searching for one night's entertainment.—Marion Hanscom, SUNY at Binghamton Lib.

Hahn, Harriet. The Plantain Season.
Norton. 1976. 207p. $6.95. F

This is a modest, endearing novel about the season (prime) and seasoning (maturing) of Susannah during the summer before and in her first months at college. For the most part Hahn has eschewed the current trend toward grotesque characterizations and slick humor and presents ordinary, very human people. All the old standards are served up—Susannah's conflicts with her parents, her first encounters with sex, leaving home ("Queens is a hard place to breathe"), and making her own fumbling way to adulthood. No pyrotechnics here, but a solid, enjoyable story. —Barbara Nelson, Patient's Lib., Lenox Hill Hosp., New York

Hesse, Hermann. Tales of Student Life.
Farrar. 1976. 187p. ed. & intro. by Theodore Ziolkowski. tr. by Ralph Manheim. $8.95. F

Hesse's interest in educational issues, his obsession with adolescent states of mind seem to be rooted in his own tormented school days. The three stories of this collection, selected by Ziolkowski, competently translated by Ralph Manheim, re-create student life at various moments of German history and in famous German univeristy cities such as Tübingen and Heidelberg. Recurring themes are emotional and erotic aspects of friendship, struggle for freedom and consciousness, appraisals

FARLEY MOWAT

"is a fine storyteller, the sort you would be glad to hear around some campfire of a winter's night."
—Kirkus Reviews

His new book
The Snow Walker is "vintage Mowat." —Mclean's
"Tales from the Arctic, as it was and as it is, told from the inside. At their best they possess truly epic vitality and nobility . . . This is strong magnificent stuff which should survive the years very nicely."—Quill and Quire. $8.95

ATLANTIC-LITTLE, BROWN

of philosophies and religions. All of these topics will appeal to the contemporary young adult. The critical reader will have to put up with a great deal of platitudes and melodramatic improbabilities and will make his way through these pieces only in view of their meaning within the context of Hesse's complete work.—Inge Judd, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Nabokov, Vladimir. Details of a Sunset and Other Stories.
McGraw. Mar. 1976. 179p. $8.95. F
One learns again that the longer a Nabokov fiction, the richer. The most satisfying of this "last batch of my Russian stories (1924-35) meriting to be Englished" are those given space (exception: "A Guide to Berlin") in which to discover themselves and begin to resonate internally: "The Return of Chorb," "A Busy Man." The others reveal variously that if Nabokov's statement "Genius has only itself to imitate" is true, genius finds itself by rejecting its imitations of others: here Chekhov, Gogol, London, Displacement, loss, coincidence, ardor are the dominant themes; the characters mostly emigré Russians in alien lands. One is touched (except for a few exercises, or enactments of an idea) by the poignant tenderness with which people and things are caressed, a trait central to Nabokov's work, given an undeserved back seat by his critics. The snuffed match is neglected; the candle wax redeems.—Dabney Stuart, Poetry Editor, "Shenandoah"

Onetti, Juan Carlos. A Brief Life.
Grossman, dist. by Viking. 1976. 292p. tr. by Hortense Carpentier. LC 75-28197. ISBN 0-670-19069-1. $10. F
The Uruguayan Onetti's major novel, originally published in 1951, is now translated into English. It is a complex, deeply psychological work. Juan Maria Brausen, a man who bears many burdens and begins retreating from reality, is stripping himself of the last vestiges of a "normal" existence, until he is living simultaneously in two fantasy worlds: that of the doctor Díaz Grey and his lover, characters in a play Brausen is writing; and that of Arce, the false identity he assumes when he visits his own mindless and indifferent lover. The excellent translation retains the flavor of the author's writing. An intense, tightly structured novel which demands to be studied rather than read superficially.—Marcia R. Hoffman, Woodbridge P.L., Iselin, N.J.

Powell, Anthony. Hearing Secret Harmonies.
272p. $7.95. also avail. as A Dance to the Music of Time: (bound with Books Do Furnish a Room and Temporary Kings) $12.50. Little. Apr. 1976. F
Hearing Secret Harmonies brings to an end the Music of Time series, which for a quarter century or so has kept Powell's readers amazed at the author's ingenuity, craftsmanship, and powers of describing the outrageous variety of human creatures. A burden of the occult, always present in some form in the novels, here develops into a full theme. Of particular interest is Scorpio Murtlock,

A searing novel of a teenage alcoholic and her world

The Late Great Me
By Sandra Scoppettone
Author of Trying Hard to Hear You

"Geri, a junior in high school, is a loner until a new boy in town becomes her friend and introduces her to alcohol. She takes to it right away, loving the high that gives her an escape and experiencing drunk blackouts from the start. It's all downhill from there. . . . Geri begins asking for help . . . and AA becomes her salvation. . . . Young teenagers who love Sarah T. will find another reason not to drink in Geri."—School Library Journal. "The author has a swift, engaging style." — Publishers Weekly. YA. $7.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

Crackling suspense in exotic places!

The Aelian Fragment
By George Bartram
Author of Fair Game

On a trip to Turkey, medieval history professor Samuel Teck accidentally becomes the owner of a Soviet author's underground manuscript. Russia wants it suppressed, Israel wants it publicized, American collectors will stop at nothing to get it—and Teck finds himself fighting for his life in a very strange land. "Compelling and engrossing; the characters are lively, the unpleasantness is realistic, and the action is brutally frank."—Library Journal. $7.95

The D'Artagnan Signature
By Robert Rostand
Author of The Killer Elite

"Rostand's tale of terror and torture centers on Alexandre Morin, an OAS chieftain . . . after four million dollars' worth of stolen francs funneled out of Algeria in 1962 and now held in a secret Swiss bank account. . . . A fast-paced, violent, highly readable novel based on the secret army's bid to keep Algeria a part of France." — The Booklist. "Far from dull." —Library Journal. $7.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

"A genuine cliff-hanger"*

THE STRANGE CASE OF DEACON BRODIE

Forbes Bradbie

"Will Brodie, the antihero who had all of Edinburgh, Scotland, in an uproar during the 18th century, is the subject of this robust story. Stevenson's dual character, Jekyll and Hyde, is said to have been based on the life of Will.... The novel is alive with color and characters, a faithful evocation of time and place. And the conclusion, dealing wth the hanging of the two felons, is a genuine cliff-hanger. The author has appended a glossary of arcane terms."
—Publishers Weekly

313 pp. $8.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC. C&M G
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

"A highly readable thriller"*

The Left-Handed Sleeper

By TED WILLIS
Author of Westminster One

Is MP Mark Ritchie in reality a "sleeper"—a Russian agent waiting to be activated? His sudden disappearance leads British Intelligence agent Pat Cadwell to Ritchie's lovely wife, Christine. And then she, too, disappears, leaving Cadwell with the realization that the woman he loves may be an accomplice to treason. "Solid characterizations, subtle handling of the romantic angle, and a fine sense of timing."—The Booklist.* "The twists and turns of plot are clever, the outcome surprising, the process through the maze entertaining and refreshingly nonviolent."—Publishers Weekly. YA. $7.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

cultist, spiritual heir, and, it is darkly rumored, a mid-1960's reincarnation of Powell's fabulous Dr. Trelawney. Murtlock's pronouncement that "Harmony is Power, Power Harmony" attracts Kenneth Widmerpool into strange ceremonies. Dropping out and tuning in (sort of), Widmerpool indulges in rites of sexual degradation, one of which results in horrible death. Nicholas Jenkins, the narrator of the Music of Time series, makes a general comment on "the keener perception for authenticities of mythology" that advancing age has brought him, but otherwise pretty much keeps his own counsel as to what conclusion regarding the uses and misuses of moral power these odd developments may have led him.—Rowe Portis, New York

Priestley, J. B. The Carfitt Crisis and Two Other Stories.
Stein & Day. 1976. 194p. $7.95. F
Priestley offers two didactic novellas, "originally in dramatic form," and a short horror story which serves as entr'acte. The novellas are strikingly similar: in each a sort of ethical magician—Engram, the enigmatic butler pro tem in "The Carfitt Crisis," and Dr. Novelda in "The Pavilion of Masks"—rearranges the lives of people who range from morally bankrupt to mildly confused. One wonders how effective these pieces might have been on the stage: as fiction they are improbable, preachy, and dull. The horror story, featuring old-fashioned moral retribution in the manner of Rod Serling, fares little better. For comprehensive collections only.—George J. Soete, Arizona State Univ. Lib., Tempe

Prou, Suzanne. The Bernardini Terrace.
Harper. Apr. 1976. 144p. tr. by Adrienne Foulke. ISBN 0-06-013445-3. $6.95. F
The terrace is the meeting place for a group of old women, chatting idly each day while "at the far frontier of their existence." Their banal rituals are interrupted only by the subtlest of looks, mannerisms, or tones which Prou expertly telescopes and interweaves with a sinuously speculative re-creation of the past. The ascendancy of Laure, the butcher's daughter, to the head of the rich Bernardini household; the strange relationship between her, her husband, and Mme. Thérèse, the milliner, are coolly examined and examined again in a different fashion, creating an imaginative yet tightly-knit blend of mystery, intrigue, and deadly passionate emotions. The novel, a best seller in France, provides a chilling look at the power of Time, when Time is armed with such weapons as romantic ignorance, ambition, and lust.—Thomas D. Bedell, Asst. Editor, "Valley Stream MAILeader," N.Y.

Stuart, Jane. Gideon's Children.
McGraw. Apr. 1976. 283p. LC 75-33628. ISBN 0-07-062211-6. $8.95. F
Most of these 21 stories (four of which have been published before) have Southern settings. In general, the characters long to have lived in an earlier, happier, more moral time. Instead, they face "the tarpit of turmoil at home, defeat at the supermarket, and persistent exhaustion," as one story words it. The dilemmas of modern life are recognizable, but the irony in many stories seems heavy-handed, a problem equally in evidence in the author's introduction which explains why she called her book "Gideon's Children." Two of the stories appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, an indication of the kind of audience which will appreciate this collection.—Jeanne M. Butcher, Emporia P.L., Kansas

Ueda, Akinari. Tales of the Spring Rain.
Internat. Scholarly Bk. Servs. 1975. tr. & intro. by Barry Jackman. 249p. bibliog. ISBN 0-86008-113-8. $10.50. F
This collection by one of Japan's most important 18th-Century writers differs from his Tales of Moonlight and Rain (LJ 6/15/72), which were mostly stories of ghosts and the supernatural. It is primarily a collection of short stories based on actual events and includes several works that are historical or critical essays disguised as fiction. Because of this, the present work will have less appeal to popular readers than the previous one. However, the translations are very well done and the introductory essays are informative, so it will be a valuable addition to any collection with a substantial interest in Japanese literature.—Curtis W. Stucki, Univ. of Washington Lib., Seattle

Vidal, Gore. 1876.
Random. Mar. 1976. 364p. $10; ltd. ed. $25. F
Charles Schuyler, Burr's young law clerk and illegitimate son, has spent his adult years in diplomatic posts and newspaper writing in Europe. He married there and now (38 years after the death of Burr) returns to the U.S. for the first time with his 35-year-old daughter. Both are widowed; both are desperate to recoup their fortunes—for Schuyler a new diplomatic post if Tilden can be elected President in 1876, and for Emma a secure marriage. It is a clever device; the reader sees New York and Washington through the sardonic eyes of both a seasoned and a fresh observer. The picture is as vivid and enthralling as in Burr. Political chicanery is rampant, and it is in this area that the novel is less compelling than its predecessor, for Ulysses Grant and General Garfield lack the magnetism of Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr. This will certainly have a wide library audience, and deservedly so.—Barbara Nelson, Lenox Hill Hospital Patient's Lib., New York

Science Fiction

Laumer, Keith. The Best of Keith Laumer.
Pocket Bks: S. & S., dist. by Pocket Bks-Ace. Mar. 1976. ISBN 0-671-80310-7. pap. $1.95. F
Laumer was a popular second-string sf magazine writer of the 1960's and early 1970's, now semiretired. His stories, though lacking in depth, were always fast-paced, exciting, or humorous. Best liked were his tales of Retief, a galactic diplomat. This collection gathers nine

RED MASK MYSTERY

A new Putnam
RED MASK MYSTERY
introducing an intriguing new amateur sleuth!

OGILVIE, TALLANT & MOON

By Chelsea Quinn Yarbro

Charles Spotted Moon, a sophisticated 20th-century attorney, draws on his ancient Indian heritage to solve his first case—the puzzle of a beautiful doctor accused of malpractice in the death of one of her patients. "Charlie is an Ojibwa Indian from the Saskatchewan border, and his method of solving a murder is even farther out.... Harking to the teachings of his medicine-men forebears he can go into a somnambulant trance, putting himself into a dead man's shoes. Not the usual private eye, but Charlie is likable." —The Booklist. YA. $6.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

"The story is swift and graphic"*

A KILLING FOR CHARITY

Arthur Kaplan

"Introducing Charity Bay, a private detective with her head and heart in the right place...humor, susceptibility and a whammy finish."—Kirkus Reviews. "Charity is hired to solve robbery-murders which are creating chaos in Manhattan's diamond district. All she gets for her painful investigations at first are horrible attacks and frustrations. Then she notices a Hasidic gem dealer, Koenig, behaving erratically....Confronting Koenig and his wife she finds that their little girl has been seized and held for ransom...a shocking climax."—Publishers Weekly*
254 pp. $7.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

of his best non-Retief stories, to display the full scope of his versatility. It runs from the idealized military heroics of a galactic war to the comedy of a traveling salesman trying to stop aliens from destroying Earth for a cosmic disaster entertainment epic. There are also tales that simplistically exaggerate current social concerns such as the birth control–overpopulation debate into futuristic horror stories. The variety and generally high quality of these stories make this collection a good buy for libraries.—Frederick Patten, Los Angeles Science Fantasy Soc.

Stableford, Brian M. Man in a Cage.
Crowell. 1976. 294p. LC 74-22024. ISBN 0-381-98280-7. $6.95. F

A spaceship has been built that can go faster than light and therefore can reach the nearby stars in days. Unfortunately, the pilots come back dead or insane, so the solution is to send a pilot who is already insane. Much of the book is given over to merely the insane philosophy and world view of the mad pilot—he's the narrator—with little attention to plot (there are actually three stories, randomly interspersed) or the other characters. Perhaps this reviewer is too enamored of classical science fiction, with its more balanced development, but I found the book difficult to follow and not at all entertaining.—Raymond L. Hough, Dept. of Chemistry, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor mystery ... detective ...suspense...

Saratoga Longshot (Atheneum. 1976. ISBN 0-689-10707-2. $8.95) by Stephen DOBYNS is an outstanding success, literate, enjoyable and without pretension, yet not in the least modest. A Saratoga policeman, innocent, dim, and comfortable, goes to New York to look for a young man, the son of a childhood girl friend, who has vanished and who may have gone to the West Coast. The New York police are not a bit helpful, so he investigates and slowly draws out a story of drugs and murder, in spite of beatings and lying seduction. He is a marvelous person, developing stubbornness and resourcefulness in the face of opposition from the law and the lawless. He finally triumphs as well as can be expected, by not winning anything except the truth. Curiously fresh, concerned, and acute.

In spite of Patrick ANDERSON's track record, The President's Mistress (S. & S. 1976. ISBN 0-671-22194-9. $8.95) is a pure thriller whose main, and great, interest lies in Anderson's intimate knowledge of Washington politics from close up. The President of the United States, new, inexperienced, and nervous, is deeply involved with a young woman, so much so that his wife threatens to leave him unless he ends the affair. The affair is indeed cut short when the young woman is found murdered. A young Washington lawyer, employed by a gelid Washington firm of great influence and a friend of the

HARPER NOVELS OF SUSPENSE

THE CHINESE FIRE DRILL
Michael Wolfe. Cameraman/agent Mike Keefe returns to Vietnam to find a VIP's son-in-law in this spellbinder that "moves into top speed for a bang-up climax."—Publishers Weekly. By the author of The Two-Star Pigeon and Man on a String.
LC 75-6380
ISBN 0-06-014716-4

THE BUGLES BLOWING
Nicolas Freeling. In this new Henri Castang thriller, a murder investigation leads to high places in the French government—all the way to the office of the President. "Intelligent, interesting, fascinating."
—Publishers Weekly
LC 75-6366
ISBN 0-06-011354-5

FINAL PROOF
Marie R. Reno. The former Executive Editor of The Literary Guild fills this story of a murdered book club executive with a wealth of authentic details. "A lot of fun."
—Publishers Weekly
LC 75-30355
ISBN 0-06-013564-6

A BIG WIND FOR SUMMER
Gavin Black. On a remote Scottish island, an aging eccentric and a dubious Renoir prove dangerous to the hero of The Golden Cockatrice and other novels.
LC 75-25076
ISBN 0-06-010366-3

$7.95 each

Harper & Row
1817

HARPER NOVELS OF SUSPENSE

MYSTERY

Futures & Fantasies from Harper & Row

THE WIND'S TWELVE QUARTERS
By Ursula K. Le Guin. The Nebula Award-winning novelist (for The Dispossessed) selects and introduces her own best short fiction. "First-rate Le Guin."—Publishers Weekly. "Highly recommended." —Library Journal.
LC 75-6372
ISBN 0-06-012562-4 $8.95

AND STRANGE AT ECBATAN THE TREES
By Michael Bishop. On a remote planet, a government spy is sent to observe the "subversive" activities of scientists and artists. But the observations have a strange effect on the spy himself.
LC 75-25075
ISBN 0-06-010352-3 $7.95

ORBIT 17
Edited by Damon Knight. This showcase for new writers presents 13 original stories "full of vitality."—Publishers Weekly. "Knight remains one of the most consistently discerning editors in the field."—Kirkus Reviews.
LC 75-6371
ISBN 0-06-012434-2 $7.95

NEW DIMENSIONS 6
Edited by Robert Silverberg. The innovative, the unconventional and the provocative are featured in this new collection of original stories, presenting both established writers and important new talents.
LC 75-25103
ISBN 0-06-013864-5 $7.95

COMET
By Jane White. In this hauntingly realistic vision of the non-distant future, the appearance of a comet brings dramatic changes in the lives of four people living among the ruins of Earth's civilization.
LC 75-30357
ISBN 0-06-014608-7 $7.95

Harper & Row
10 E. 53rd St. New York 10022
1817

young woman's, looks into the matter, having a knowledgeable and healthy distrust of all the investigative agencies from the FBI down. He wins through with the help of an investigative reporter (apparently the newest folk hero) and in the teeth of bull-dozing opposition from the President's minions in the White House. Fascinating in spite of not being particularly well written, especially since one cannot help hoping that it is really a roman à clef.

The Weirdown Experiment (Harper. Mar. 1976. ISBN 0-06-011889-X. $7.95) by Wallace HILDICK is subtle, understated, and leisurely, accelerating to pumping excitement. At an English seaside resort town a middle-aged schoolmaster is picked up by a writer, an experimenter, whose aim is to produce a novel by manipulating real people instead of characters. The schoolmaster gets trapped through a £200 payment and through the machinations of a young woman, perhaps the writer's daughter and perhaps not. The story culminates in imprisonment, brainwashing, and a murder. Full of brooding atmosphere.

The Thomas Berryman Number (Little. Mar. 1976. $7.95) by James PATTERSON is an encouraging change from the usual thriller, brilliantly written with a faultless ear for real speech and an accurate eye for real people, some of whom are rather horrible. An investigative reporter from the South is set on the trail of the murderer of a popular black mayor of a city in Tennessee. The assassin, a professional killer, is never in doubt; his trail is traced through a sidekick in a Long Island insane asylum, and leads inexorably to important political interests, the buyers of the hired gun. Every detail displays close understanding of politics of the nastier kind and an intimate acquaintance, presented with refurbished clarity, of the world.

Snake (Harper. Jun. 1976. ISBN 0-06-012884-4. $7.95) by James McCLURE is another of the splendid series of South African police procedurals featuring Kramer, the white inspector, and Zondi, the Zulu sergeant. The two separate plot lines involve a set of brutal murders of shopkeepers in a black township, perhaps the result of a protection racket run by a sinister wizard, and the strangling of an exotic dancer in a cheap white nightclub, either by her pet python or by her gentleman caller. This is double-distilled entertainment and the denouements both bring up-to-minute twists.

Yellowthread Street (Holt. Mar. 1976. $5.95) by William MARSHALL is, alas, extraordinarily short, which is a pity, for it is full of life, observed with fine flavor, and reported in an idiosyncratic though slightly mannered voice. It is a sort of police procedural, the story of a police station coping with the lower depths of Hong Kong, a task which involves a double murder through an illegal food stall, the robbery of a movie house box office, a missing tourist from New Jersey and his plastic but vociferous wife, and a small-time Mongolian extortionist. At times the action seems to have a curious affinity with a Marx Brothers comedy, but there is an undertow of menace and violence; the shoot out at the end is not a bit farcical.

Remains To Be Seen (Doubleday. Mar. 1976. LC 75-21214. ISBN 0-385-11152-5. $5.95) by Michael BUTTERWORTH takes place in Scunthorpe in the north of England, and in spite of that is great fun. A Kievan prince, a refugee from the Bolsheviks and now a successful undertaker, is the pinpoint of interest of both the Russian and the American secret services. Smuggled jewels from a miraculous icon, the separatist movement in the Ukraine, and international power politics in the CIA all play a part in this funny and not too sensible thriller.

No Place Like Home (Putnam. Feb. 1976. ISBN 0-399-11620-1. $6.95) by J. Bradford OLESKER is a not very sophisticated police procedural set in Chicago. There are a number of brutal murders in one of the new high rises on Lakeshore Drive and the investigation is the responsibility of a middle-aged tired cop. He soon determines that the carnage is the work of a madman, not a very fair device in a thriller. However the police are neither particularly skillful nor very lucky, so that some 200 pages pass before the wretch is unmasked.

The Brandenburg Hotel (St. Martin's. Mar. 1976. $7.95) by Pauline Glen WINSLOW takes place in a small but expensive country hotel in England, largely inhabited by rich German refugees, just after World War II. An inoffensive, frightened, and rather stupid young woman, a model, is found murdered and Scotland Yard is called in when the obvious solution seems too pat. This is an early Capricorn case under the tutelage of a sick and irascible superintendent. The detection, classical and sound, uncovers disreputable doings in British internment camps tinged with neo-Bismarckian politics. Winslow's first novel was a good one; her second is excellent.

Raven in Flight (Houghton. Mar. 1976. ISBN 0-395-24292-4. $6.95) by Donald MacKENZIE has a retired inspector of Scotland Yard on vacation at a fashionable resort club in Spain and bored out of his skull. He gets involved with a decadent and slightly kinky trio making a movie about a Dali-like figure. The villainy has to do with the kidnapping of a Spanish politician from a chic transvestite jollification. The plot is rather slow in starting, finally picks up satisfactorily and culminates in a rip-roaring shoot out.

Your Money and Your Wife (Houghton. Apr. 1976. ISBN 0-395-24346-7. $6.95) by Ritchie PERRY is a breezy but tough English thriller. The new wife of an English secret agent, a hatchet man, is kidnapped from their honeymoon in Norway and held by the Russian embassy in Oslo. The ransom is slightly special: a feigned defection to execute a couple of jobs, the assassination of a Russian holed up in Scotland. The elaborate plotting is dotted with bits of violence, but the form is fundamentally conventional. Toward th end, the motivation becomes as shaky as a custard.

MYSTERY
MYSTERY

Death in the North Sea (Stein & Day. 1976. $6.95) by J. R. L. ANDERSON is a staid and foursquare suspense tale by a specialist in sailing boats, and therefore of a certain interest. A small Dutch freighter bound for the northeast of England is blown up by a booby-trapped corpse in a dinghy. The floating bomb seems to have been aimed at one of the North Sea oil rigs, possibly by a group of young revolutionaries. There is rather a lot about well drilling and pipe laying; the detection seems to consist of a good deal of good old English guesswork, and there is a paucity of villains. Highly respectable.

In Survivor (S. & S. Mar. 1976. $7.95) by Marc BRANDEL a young woman is employed to trace some pictures by an obscure but talented painter, now dead, whose small output is being cornered by a rich, powerful, but slightly demented and totally unscrupulous collector. The shape emerges slowly, but when it does it is riveting. There are three missing masterpieces, and in tracing these the individual and private life of the artist is bared. At the same time the motives and misdeeds of the collector are witheringly exposed. Interesting and original.

Nobody's Sorry He Got Killed (Random. 1976. $6.95) by Arthur D. GOLDSTEIN is the latest in the series of thrillers involving the spunky senior citizens of a California center for the aged. The granddaughter of one of their number is in jail for the murder of her lover, so Mr. Guttman, the doughty old man from New York, leads the inquisitive oldsters in investigating the death. This one is not as good as its predecessors; the plot is a little meager and there is more atmosphere than substance. Goldstein should also watch the dialogue, which is beginning to verge on the stagey. A good read, nevertheless.

In Expendable (Doubleday. Mar. 1976. LC 75-21497. ISBN 0-385-11386-2. $5.95) by Willo Davis ROBERTS a young man passing through a California small town in the middle of nowhere is catapulted willy-nilly into the middle of the town's corruption. His attempt to get the custody of his children away from his parents-in-law, local leading citizens, ends up with his involvement in the disappearance of a real estate man of dubious morals, large sums of money, and cover-up murders by the police. This one is rather well done, and it is hard to resist the appeal to the paranoia in all of us.

In Why Someone Had To Die (Doubleday. 1976. LC 75-13393. ISBN 0-385-11153-3. $5.95) by Jan ROFFMAN a secretive young woman, pushed off balance by the kidnapping of her infant son, has spent the last five years or so looking for the thief, driven by lust for revenge. At last she has found the track and a bone-shaking coincidence that one is) and follows the man to a small town near London. There she takes a flat in a house owned by an unfaithful and unsuccessful man (not the one) and his rich and organized wife. The young woman vanishes, the police investigate, and the child is found, more through good luck than for any other reason. A soft, unreasonable plot and a ramshackle ending.

Voices Long Hushed (Doubleday. Mar. 1976. LC 75-21240. ISBN 0-385-11362-5. $5.95) by Barbara Anne PAULEY is a very fancy amalgam of Gothic, historic, and suspense, hypnotic with money and menace, and written to a fare-thee-well. In Boston in the 1880's, a lively but not very bright young lady is spurned in love, and to lick her wounds, she goes back to Natchez, to her very own plantation. There she discovers that her mother, who had killed her father and who was thought to be dead, is actually alive and recently released from an asylum. As so often happens in these busy Southern families, nothing is what it seems to be. There is another death, another romance, and the true guilty party is uncovered on the very last page. Should do well.

In The Seven of Swords (Putnam. 1976. ISBN 0-399-11624-9. $7.95) by R. E. HARRINGTON the President of the United States in 1978 backs a vital secret project involving the brainwashing (or behavior modification if you prefer) of a group of Air Force officers for what

The hard cover facts about John D. MacDonald, bestselling author of 'The Dreadful Lemon Sky'

John D. MacDonald's Travis McGee mystery series began its illustrious career in paperback. Then J. B. Lippincott began to publish hardcover reprints of the paperback originals. Now new Travis McGee novels appear in hardcover first — to tremendous critical acclaim and bestseller sales. Be sure your library has the whole series.

Now available in hardcover:
NIGHTMARE IN PINK . . . $6.95

Also available:
THE DEEP BLUE GOOD-BY $6.95
THE DREADFUL LEMON SKY $6.95
A DEADLY SHADE OF GOLD $7.50
THE QUICK RED FOX $5.95
THE TURQUOISE LAMENT $6.95
THE GIRL IN THE PLAIN BROWN WRAPPER $7.95
BRIGHT ORANGE FOR THE SHROUD $7.95
THE LONG LAVENDER LOOK $5.50
PALE GRAY FOR GUILT . . $5.50
DRESS HER IN INDIGO . . . $5.50
DARKER THAN AMBER . . $5.95

Lippincott
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105

seems to be an unclear reason. One of these men is a spy and a drug smuggler known as the Seven of Swords; the Russians are out to get him for the murder of one of their best agents, not to mention the theft of a large quantity of heroin. Unfortunately, the plot is too confused and uncontrolled to be suspenseful. As a reward for getting through this, however, there are some hilarious sex scenes of all kinds.

Night Chills (Atheneum, 1976. LC [illegible] ISBN 0-689-10660-2. $8.95) by Dean R. KOONTZ also takes place in the future, in 1977, and also has to do with behavior modification, in this case through subliminal perception and hypnosis. A sadistic scientist; an evil, psalm-singing tycoon; and a wicked general conspire to control the world through drugs and through hypnotic suggestion conveyed by the television screen. Their experiments start in a small company town in Maine, where they infect almost the whole population. On the side of the goodies is a veterinarian and his oh so wholesome family, who of course save the town and thus the world. For the goodies there are dustings of romance and for the baddies there are dashings of sex. It zips along, God knows, but more with wind than anything else.

In Death Has a Thousand Doors (Bobbs, Mar. 1976. LC 75-30778. ISBN 0-672-52196-2. $7.95) by Will COOPER, somewhere in the West, perhaps California, a super he-man, a prosperous private eye and ecology freak, is persuaded to look into the murder of a nightclub dancer, of which a United States Senator has been falsely accused. Political involvement gets shunted aside in favor of a drug involvement, and there develops a connection with a Chicano messiah, a sort of Mexican mafioso. Unfortunately Cooper has a tin ear; with neither humor nor life, the book is slightly offensive rather than suspenseful.—Henri C. Veit, Brooklyn P.L.

INDEX:

Abel, E. L., 730
Aldridge, A. O., 708
Allen, W., 732
Alther, L., 737
Anderson, J. R. L., 743
Anderson, P., 741
Angus, I., 733
Armbrister, T., 732
Arnold, E., 738
Artusi, P., 714
Arzáns de Orsúa y Vela, B., 712
Athearn, F., 730
Austin, R. B., Jr., 723

Babb, L. A., 733
Baer, W. E., 710
Balderston, M., 708
Barrons, K. C., 726
Bass, H. [illegible]34
Behlmer, R., 736
Benedikt, M., 720
Berry, W., 720
Bettelheim, C., 710
Binder, D., 722
Books for college libraries, 672
Booth, P., 721
Bosco, M., 738
Brandel, M., 743
Brian, D., 724
Bridge, R., 734
Brown, D., 712
Brown, L., 738
Brown, S., 732
Bruns, J. E., 725
Burland, C. A., 714
Butterworth, M., 742
Butzer, K., 733
Buxton, E., 710

Calder, J., 736
Carey, G., 717
Carmichel, J., 730
Carpenter, H., 734
Chadwick, J., 712
Chicorel, M., 702
Chisholm, C., 734
Coburn, J. B., 725
Cole, L. A., 722
Colmer, J., 718
Cooper, W., 744
Corman, C., 721
Crosby, A. W., Jr., 712

Dean, S. R., M.D., 723
DeMaria, R. [illegible]38
Demaris, O., 708
de Rougemont, D. [illegible]18
Dobyns, S., 741
Duiker, W. J., 722
Duncan, B., 708
Dwoskin, S., 737

Eaton, W. E., 711
Eccli, E., 730
Ellenburg, S., 720
Elling, C., 706
Ellis, M., 717
Elon, M., 726
Encyclopedia of world literature in the 20th century, 702

Feinbloom, D. H., 730
Field, F., 718
Fisch, A. M., 706
Flugum, C. T., 729
Fordyce, R., 702
Fredericks, C., 727
Fried, E. R., 710
Furlong, M., 708

Galvin, J. R., 712
Garbicz, A., 704
Gary, A. J., 724
Gastil, R. D., 730
Gelfman, J. S., 711
Gentle, R., 707
Gesta Henrici Quinti, 712
Ginzberg, E., 711
Giurgola, R., 706
Glassman, P. J., 718
Goldstein, A. D., 743
Graham, O. L., Jr., 723
Gratus, J., 712
Gray, R., 712
Green, G., 738
Greif, M., 707
Gubrium, J. F., 731

Hahn, H., 738
Halliday, A., 707
Hardy, A., 720
Hardy, C. C., 710
Harrington, R. E., 743
Harris, H., 708
Haskell, F., 705
Head, C., 708
Heike Monogatari, 718
Hesse, H., 738
Hickey, K., 707
Hildick, W., 742
Hilgard, E. R., 727
Hirschfeld, F., 713
Holt, H., M.D., 724
Höper, C.-J., 723
House & Garden's 26 easy little gardens, 727
Humble, R., 713

Jabes, E., 720
Jackson, P., 734
Johnson, E. J., 706
Jones, M. W., 713
Jowett, G., 737
July, R. W., 713

Kaplan, F., 718
Katz, B., 672
Kaufman, B. N., 708
Kelly, J. N. D., 726
Kirby, D. K., 704
Kitchen, P., 709
Kluger, R., 732
Koontz, D. R., 744
Kramer, R., 709

Labarge, M. W., 709
Lacouture, J., 709
Laing, R. D., 701
Lambright, W. H., 723
Larson, C. R., 718
Laumer, K., 740
Lazarre, J., 727
LeShan, E. J., 709
Lévi-Strauss, C., 733
Levitan, S. A., 731
Lewis, T., Jr., 713
Liehm, A., 737
Liu, J. J. Y., 718
Liu, W., 721
Lowe, D., 706
Lunati, R., 675
Lundberg, F., 723

MacCannell, D., 701
McClure, J., 742
MacKenzie, D., 742
Mahoney, M. J., 728
Maidment, W. R., 675
Mandell, R. D., 734
Marshall, W., 742
Marx, A., 737
Mayer, L. R., 713
Mead, M., 701
Mebane, J., 707
Merrill, J., 721
Metropolitan New York AYH Council, 735
Miles, K., 718
Moers, E., 719
Moffett, R. K., 731
Morris, R. B., 705
Mott, M., 721

Nabokov, V., 739
Naha, E., 737
Neville, B., 735
The New Oxford Atlas, 705
Norwak, M., 714
Null, G., 731

O'Brien, F., 719
O'Farrell, P., 714
Ogilvy, C. S., 735
Ohmann, R., 711
Olesker, J. B., 742
Oliver, A. P. H., 704
Olsen, P., 724
Onetti, J. C., 739
Oppen, G., 721
Ormond, L., 706
Owen, S., 719

Palm, J. D., 728
Panter, G. G., M.D., 727
Paredes, A., 720
Patterson, J., 742
Paul, G., 726
Pauley, B. A., 743
Paysan, K., 704
Pei, M., 717
Perry, R., 742
Perry, T., 672
Piontek, H., 721
Platner, W., 706
Plomer, W., 709
Porter, C., 720
Powell, A., 739
Priestley, J. B., 740
Proffer, C., 719
Prou, S., 740
Prucha, F. P., 704
Publishing in Africa in the seventies, 675

Randall, J. L., 725
Rane, B., 721
Rapoport, R., 728
Rappoport, K., 735
Rath, F. L., Jr., 704
Regazzi, J. J., 705
Reinehr, R. C., 724
Riker, T., 727
Roberts, W. D., 743
Robinson, I., 717
Roffman, J., 743
Rose, W. L., 714
Rosenkranz, G., 736
Rothchild, J., 701
Rothwell, H., 714
Rubin, J., 702

Samuels, M., M.D., 725
Sanders, W., 733
Sauvy, A., 731
Schlossberg, E., 727
Schmitz, D., 722
Schuller, R. H., 726
Schur, E. M., 724
Schwartz, B., 731
Sears, S. W., 707
Sharples, A., 709
Sheldon, W. G., 729
Shortt, T., 729
Sichel, P., 717
Skoglund, E. R., 726
Smith, A., 728
Smith, B., 736
Snyder, J. J., Jr., 707
Stableford, B. M., 741
Stebbins, R., 736
Stern, E. L., 728
Stern, W., 710
Stewart, C. D., 705
Strubsaker, T. T., 729
Struening, E. L., 732
Stuart, J., 740
Suib, L., 736
Swanson, E., 733

Talbot, N. B., 732
Tanous, A., 725
Teleki, G. R., 707
Thomas, D. H., 705
Thompson, D., 719
Trachtenberg, M., 706
Traxler, P., 722
Turco, A., Jr., 719
Tuttle, R. H., 733

Ueda, A., 740
Ungar, S. J., 702
Uris, L., 707

Vidal, G., 740
Voges, N. A., 714

Wakefield, D., 711
Walker, S. H., 735
Watson, A., 732
Watts, E. S., 733
Weintraub, S., 719
White, P., 714
Whitman, A., 724
Willsberger, J., 707
Winslow, P. G., 742
Wolman, B., 736
Women's work and women's studies, 19[illegible] 1974, 705
Wood, J., 702

Yeston, M., 720
Young, A., 722
Young, D., 720

Zappalorti, R. T., 729

LJ:CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

All advertisements for the Positions Open and the Positions Wanted classifications will be edited to exclude direct or indirect references to race, creed, color, age, and sex as conditions of employment. Positions open and positions wanted, $1.70 per line, minimum charge, $5.10, all other types of ads, $2.60 per line, minimum charge $7.80. If vouches forms are required for billing, please send them at the time advertisements are submitted for insertion. Copy for ads and requests for cancellations must be received at the LJ office 45 days preceding date of issue. Write: Classified Advertising Department, Library Journal, 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10036.

POSITIONS WANTED

CHILDREN'S LIBRARIAN seeking head or assistant position of children's department in public library. Varied experience; prefer relocation in community 25,000 population and over. G 51.

SUMMER JOB WANTED. June and/or July. M.L.S. Exp. in children's services, college library, LC and DD cataloger. Résumé and recommendations furn. G 56.

M.S.L.S. (DREXEL) seeks internship position to illiterate shut-ins/institutionalized/or neighborhood information services. Social welfare experience, will relocate. Box G 58.

LIBRARIAN seeks position this summer. M.S.L.S. Graduate of Simmons College, Boston, Mass. Reading knowledge of French & Spanish. Experience. G 57.

ELIGIBLE-TO-RETIRE high school teacher of English and history seeks librarianship with faculty status in a small church-related college. M.A.L.S. plus over 30 graduate school hours. Available in September. G 55.

RECENT M.L.S. graduate seeking beginning level position. B.A. in humanities and history. Read and write Spanish. Prefer cataloging or government documents. Am willing to relocate. Résumé from: Carol Kropp, 407 Water St. S.W., Sleepy Eye, MN 56085.

POSITIONS OPEN—MIDWEST

SERVICE ORIENTED LIBRARIAN wanted for suburban community of 26,000 new library building. Collection 43,000 volumes. Required M.L.S. from ALA accredited school with minimum of 3 years experience in public library service, and satisfactory supervisory and programming experience. The successful candidate will have demonstrated ability in business administration and effective communication both oral and written. Send résumé, credentials and references to: Mrs. E. K. Shaefer, Chairman, Personnel Committee, 1722 74th Court, Elmwood Park, Illinois 60635. An equal opportunity employer M/F.

THE KENT STATE University Libraries has or anticipates the following openings: (1) Assistant Director (for Public Services) $20,000 min. (2) Cataloging Department Head, $16,000 min. (3) Circulation Department Head, $16,000 min. (4) Personnel Officer, $11,000 min. Positions require appropriate professional degrees and suitable experience. Kent State University with a student enrollment of 27,000 is a major graduate center in Northeast Ohio. The library is a member of ARL with a 1,100,000 volume collection. KSU offers fully paid Blue Cross, major medical, and life insurance, 20 working days vacation per year, plus other fringe benefits. These appointments will carry faculty rank appropriate to each individual's background. Letter of application may be sent to: Personnel Office, University Libraries, Kent State University, Kent, Ohio 44242. An equal opportunity employer.

INTERLIBRARY COOPERATION Project Director to develop a strong program of interlibrary cooperation among academic, public, school and special libraries in a 4-county area near St. Louis. This is a new position funded with a two-year LSCA grant and will require a good deal of travel. Qualifications require a M.L.S. and five years combined experience in two of the four types of libraries. Ability to relate to employees of small town school and public libraries essential. Salary: $12,115. Contact: Edgar Chamberlin, Kaskaskia Library System, 306 N. Main St., Smithton, IL 62285.

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR. Works with director in supervision and administration of staff of ninety, including 26 professionals. Assists in development of policies and procedures; prepares grant requests; coordinates building maintenance and repair; organizes automation activities; presents budgetary needs to director; serves as acting director in director's absence; plus other related assignments. Minimum qualifications: ALA accredited M.L.S.; several years of academic library experience involving supervision and administration over units of some size; knowledge of library automation and A/V operations. Benefits: Salary of $17,500+; faculty rank and status; state retirement participation; paid-up insurance coverage; reduced tuition and other fringes. Send letter, references and résumé to: Melville Spence, Director of Libraries, Bowling Green State University Libraries, Bowling Green, Ohio 43403, by April 30, 1976. An equal opportunity employer.

COLLEGE LIBRARIAN. Skilled and experienced administrator, well-versed in the various aspects of college library work wanted to direct the Carleton College Library beginning July 1, 1976. M.L.S. expected and Subject Master's desirable. Carleton is committed to affirmative action and equal opportunity employment. Please send résumés or nominations to: Professor John C. Perry, Acting Director of the Library, Carleton College Library, Northfield, Minnesota 55057.

LIBRARY SCIENCE faculty position. Teaching responsibilities: school media center resources, services, administration; utilization of print and nonprint materials. Qualifications: M.L.S., doctorate in library science or related field; media specialist experience. Salary and rank open. Available June, 1976. Apply to: Charles Bolles, School of Library Science, EKSC, Emporia, KS 66801. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHEAST

ASSOCIATE LIBRARY Director, Tulane University. Executive officer in charge of day-to-day operation of library, personnel, physical plant. On occasion acting library director. Graduate degree in library science; experience in academic library administration; ability to deal effectively with staff, faculty, students; strong interest in research library problems and opportunities. 12-month appointment; TIAA-CREF; month's vacation. Résumés before May 1 to: Library Director, Tulane University Library, New Orleans, LA 70118. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

LEARNING RESOURCE Center Librarian for technical college. Open immediately. Master's in Library Science from an ALA accredited school. Experience with media desirable. Send résumé to: Dorothy P. Gnann, Beaufort Technical Education Center, Ribaut Road, Beaufort, SC 29902. EOE.

LIBRARIAN, M.L.S. Richard H. Thornton Library, Oxford, North Carolina 27565. Public Library and 3 branches. Salary range $12,000-$14,000. Send résumé and references to: Richard H. Thornton Library, Main Street, Oxford, N.C. 27565. Att: Mrs. Stanley H. Fox, Chairperson.

POSITIONS OPEN—AUSTRALIA

QUEENSLAND INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY

Brisbane, Australia

DEPARTMENT OF LIBRARIANSHIP

LECTURER IN LIBRARY STUDIES

QUOTE: V. 1/76

Applications for the above position are invited from professionally qualified graduates eligible for Associate membership of the L.A.A. Applicants should have good academic and professional qualifications and suitable experience in teaching, research and practice. It is hoped that the successful applicant will be able to take up duty by June 1976, in preparation for the Spring (Second) Semester commencing 26th July, 1976.

Expertise may be in any of the following areas, but persons offering other subjects will not be excluded from consideration:

Automated systems (including information storage and retrieval); Book publication and production; Government documents; Literature and libraries for children and young people; Resources and bibliography in the fields of the Humanities or the Social Sciences; Administration of College and University Libraries; Collections development and basic reference tools.

SALARY SCALES:
Lecturer I: $A12,063-$A16,193
Lecturer II: $A10,294-$A13,296

Further Information: A potential candidate should seek from the Personnel Officer information concerning this position, the work of the Department of Librarianship and conditions of appointment.

Applications, quoting reference number, date of birth, marital status, qualifications, experience, present employment, and furnishing the names of two referees, should be forwarded to the Personnel Officer, Queensland Institute of Technology, P.O. Box 246, North Quay, Queensland, Australia, 4000 not later than March 15, 1976.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHWEST

HEAD, PUBLIC SERVICES Department. Position available now. Responsible for coordination and supervision of public services functions, reference, including on-line services, circulation, interlibrary loan, photocopy and stack maintenance. Graduation from ALA accredited library school, biomedical training and experience essential, and working knowledge of two foreign languages required. Three years of extensive public service experience including demonstrated supervisory competence. Medical center library including service to schools of medicine, nursing and pharmacy as well as licensed health professionals statewide. Professional librarians, 13; sub-professionals, 12; FTE students, 25. Collection: 80,000 volumes and 3,000 current serials. Salary: $13,500 negotiable. Affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Apply to: James W. Barry, Librarian, Arizona Medical Center Library, Tucson, Arizona 85724. (602) 882-6121.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHEAST

LIBRARIAN, for audio-visual area, with some general circulation duties in four-year college, south-central Pennsylvania. Faculty rank at instructor level, starting salary $10,000 per year. 12-month contract. Must have M.L.S. from accredited library school, experience in audio-visual area and knowledge of LC classification. Position available September, 1976. Apply in writing to: Mrs. Margaret S. Atwood, Head Librarian, York College of Pennsylvania, Country Club Road, York, PA 17405. York College is an equal opportunity employer.

COMMISSIONED REPS: America's largest importer of French and Spanish books has more than 50,000 titles for a captive market. Looking for national reps to put our extensive catalogues in the hands of teachers, schools, libraries, especially ultra-lucrative bilingual market. No other line or company like ours in country. Board of Education contacts essential. G 52.

DIRECTOR of library services. Hofstra University, located in Mid-Nassau county on New York's Long Island, seeks nominations and applications for director of library services. Persons with proven qualities of academic leadership and managerial effectiveness are sought. The position carries a competitive salary commensurate with qualifications and responsibility. Appointment to be made no later than 1 September 1976. Communicate with: The Provost and Dean of Faculties, Dr. William J. Petrek, Hofstra University, Hempstead, N.Y. 11550 by 15 March 1976. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

SCIENCE LIBRARIAN for position as assistant head, engineering and physical sciences library in a large university system. Will plan and execute library service programs, maintain collection development policies, act as liaison with faculty, and assist the head in budget and policy planning. Will assume direction of the library in the absence of the head. M.L.S. essential; Second Master's in the sciences, or appropriate bibliographic experience desirable. Three years professional experience required. Send résumés to: Herbert Foerstel, Head, Engineering and Physical Sciences Library, University of Maryland, College Park, Maryland 20742. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—WEST

PUBLIC SERVICES Librarian, Occidental College. Position open July 1, 1976. Primarily responsible for reference service, development of reference collection, and interlibrary loans. Also provides supervision for documents (selective depository, one supporting staff member) and professional oversight of the circulation department. Works closely with the librarian-at-large, a grant-funded position, to help stimulate the use of the Library. Qualifications: ALA accredited M.L.S. degree; ability to provide skilled reference service to current students and faculty, and to work well with other members of the library staff. Some knowledge of foreign languages essential. Preference will be given to a person with several years of comparable reference experience. Twelve-month appointment with one month's vacation per year; forty-hour week, including some evening or weekend hours. Salary $9,000-$13,000, depending upon experience. Apply to: Tyrus G. Harmsen, Occidental College Library, 1600 Campus Road, Los Angeles, CA 90041. Mail résumé of education, subject specialization, experience, and names of three references. Application deadline: April 10, 1976. Occidental College is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

YOUNG ADULT SERVICES. Imaginative, self-starter to plan and conduct demonstration project for two overcrowded, independent small libraries serving diverse southern Nevada communities, ten miles apart. Eighteen months federally funded, becomes permanent program if successful. Two years minimum experience as graduate librarian. Open now at $11,000. Send résumé to: Boulder City Library, 539 California Street, Boulder City, Nevada 89005.

ASSISTANT UNIVERSITY Librarian Public Services. Responsibilities: Report directly to the university librarian exercising prime responsibility for the management, supervision, planning and development of the reference department (including interlibrary loan), loan department (including reserves), government documents department (including maps and microforms), and two branch libraries, the physical sciences library and the agricultural economics library. In conjunction with the other administrative members, help to develop policies for the management and advancement of the UC Davis library system. Will also be responsible for some public relations activities, editorial duties, including the publication of the library's chapbook series and representation of the Davis Library in state and regional library activities. Qualifications: A graduate degree in librarianship from an ALA accredited school and several years of successful experience at an administrative or managerial level in a large academic or research library. Experience with library educational service programs and automated data base desirable. Salary: $20,000-$24,000, though subject to increase in unusual circumstances. The salary range for this position runs to $32,500. The position will be open as of August 1, 1976. The University of California, Davis, is an equal opportunity employer, is committed to a policy of affirmative action. Send résumés to: Dr. Bernard Kreissman, University Librarian, University of California, Davis, California 95616. Telephone: (916) 752-2110.

LIBRARIAN. July 1, 1976. Integration and system design in new learning activities resource center incorporating library and media services. Responsible for completion of integration of traditional and non-print collection and services and implementation of computer bibliographic processing and services, potentially including library automation, bibliographic data bases. Requires 1) ALA accredited library degree, Second Master's degree in systems analysis or operations research or equivalent additional graduate work in library science, 2) minimum four years of relevant experience giving evidence of professional growth and responsibility. Completed doctorate preferred. Salary range: $16,464-$20,016 (Associate Librarian). Résumé by May 15 to: Dr. Phyllis I. Bush, Dean, Learning Activities Resource Center, California State University, Chico, CA 95929. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR. Department of Librarianship, San Jose State University; an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. A tenure track position with salary beginning at approximately $14,000 for academic year, to start September 1, 1976. Additional compensation for summer teaching. Doctorate in library science or related area, with recent administrative experience in public library preferred. Primary teaching areas: public library administration, technical services and research methodology. Send vita to: Leslie H. Janke, Chairperson, Department of Librarianship, San Jose State University, San Jose, CA 95192.

OUT-OF-PRINT

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS get prompt attention, wide search, reasonable prices, from International Bookfinders, Inc., Box 1-LJ, Pacific Palisades, Calif. 90272.

COLONIAL "out-of-print" Book Service, Inc. Want Lists invited, 23 E. 4th St., New York City 10003.

IRREGULAR SERIALS are one of our specialties. Foreign books and periodicals, current and out-of-print. Albert J. Phiebig Inc., Box 352, White Plains, N.Y. 10602.

WE FIND BOOKS. Free International Search. Exclusive want lists invited. Realistic prices. Eva Davis Books. 108 Prince Charles, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

OP BOOKS in literature: social science, humanities. EGLI; Lamont, etc. Book Lande, 926 National Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90034.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC Magazine: (1888-1976) Any issue from 1910. (Fine cond.) Reasonable. Price list furn. Don Smith, 3930 Rankin St., Louisville, KY 40214.

SEARCH SERVICE. Out-of-print titles. Free quotes; reasonable prices. Send wants. Smith's Book House, 112 No. Plain St., Ithaca, N.Y. 14850.

O. M. DABNEY & CO. Large stock of OP Government publications and scholarly books. Free search service. Box 31061-J. Wash., D.C. 20031.

MAGAZINES—BACK NUMBER

BACK ISSUE MAGAZINES, general scholarly, technical. Designed to serve high school and jr. college libraries. Please send want lists to Back Issues West; P.O. Box 6688, Tucson, Arizona 85716.

INTERNATIONAL University Booksellers, Inc. 101 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10003 carries one of the most comprehensive inventories of periodical backfiles. We invite inquiries for complete sets, runs, volumes, and issues required. We also buy scientific and scholarly journals in all fields for cash or credit.

OVER 2,000,000 backdate magazines on file. Send want lists for immediate attention. Magazine Center, Dept. LJ, 145 West 29th Street., New York, N.Y. 10001.

SERVICES—PERSONNEL

THERESA M. BURKE Employment Agency, 8 West 40th St., N.Y., N.Y. 10018. Specializing in the recruitment of library and information personnel for special, academic, and public libraries.

CAREER BLAZERS AGENCY non-fiction, best selling jobs for career-minded publishing professionals. 36 W. 46 St., YU 6-1285.

MICROFORMS

MICROFORMS. Good second-hand microfilm of periodicals of established micropublishers bought and sold. Write or call Microforms International Marketing Company, Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523. (914) 592-9141.

FOR SALE

BOOKMOBILE, 1970 International Harvester, Gerstenslager body, with lavatory facility, 42,000 miles, recently installed generator (220 volt), 3,500 book capacity. For information please contact: Charles Joray, Director, Bluffton-Wells County Public Library, 223 W. Washington St., Bluffton, IN 46714. Telephone (219) 824-1612.

CONSORTIA DIRECTORS, major university, urban or regional library administrators An outstanding selection of 20,000 current and backlist professional books in virtually every major academic discipline is now being offered for sale for the first time as an entire collection at 75% off list price! Strong representation in science, technology, environmental studies, medicine and behavioral sciences. Good selection in social sciences, humanities, law, education and business. Current and backlist titles obtained from review, examination and exhibit copies. We will inventory, pack, ship and pay the freight and still give you 75% off list! Call Ray O'Donnell collect anytime at 703-836-1359 for details. We will arrange transportation to Alexandria, Va. for serious library administrators or their representatives. This is an unheard of opportunity to embellish and strengthen your system's holdings in these vital but costly acquisition areas. Don't hesitate. Call us collect today! 703-836-1359.

1) DE MAUPASSANT, Guy-16 vol. set, c1903, St. Dunstan Society. 2) Hugo, Victor-14 vol. set, limited ed. #900, U. Press, Cambridge. All in excellent condition. Public Library, Cumberland, WI 54829.

slj

Do you have to... find a job or fill a job sell something special or buy something special offer your services
or call for help?
SLJ's Classified
can help you!

For under $10 you can direct your needs to our 42,000 subscribers: Public and school librarians, teachers and school administrators—all people in or related to your field.

Here are our rates: Positions Open and Positions Wanted,* $1.55 per line, minimum charge, $4.65. All other ads, $2.30 per line, minimum charge $6.90.

If voucher forms are required for billing, please send them with ad insertion. Copy for ads and requests for cancellations must be received at the SLJ office 45 days preceding date of issue.

*Advertisements for Positions Open and Wanted will be edited to exclude direct or indirect references to race, creed, color, age and sex as conditions of employment.

Send your classified advertisement to:
The Advertising Department,
School Library Journal,
1180 Avenue of the Americas,
New York, New York 10036.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS

Academic Press 683
Acropolis Books 731
Aero Publishers 694
Allerton Press 642
American Elsevier Publishing Co. 680, 681
American Hospital Association 690
American Management Association 694
Arco Publishing Co. 717, 730
Arlington House 710

Baker & Taylor Co. 3d Cover
R. R. Bowker Co. 644, 656, 673, 674, 696, 715, 716

Cahners Books 690
Columbia University Press 727
Congressional Quarterly 723
Coward, McCann & Geoghegan 717, 738, 740, 741

Davey Co. 655
Delacorte Press 726
Dodd, Mead & Co. 735
Dow Jones-Irwin 711

Emerson Books 736
Environment Information Center 703

F. W. Faxon Co. 705

Gale Research Co. 700
Gaylord Bros. 2d Cover

Harper & Row, Publishers 741, 742
Highsmith Co. 652
Houghton Mifflin Co. 709, 723

Josten's Library Services Division 652, 655

Larousse & Co. 704
J. B. Lippincott Co. 736, 743
Little, Brown & Co. 739
Longman 684

McGraw-Hill Book Co. 685, 694
McGregor Magazine Agency 650
Mason/Charter Publishers 687, 713, 722
Microfilming Corp. of America 4th Cover

Oxford University Press 682

Pergamon Press 688
Plenum Publishing Corp. 689
Praeger Publishers 711, 729
Prentice-Hall 705, 710, 726, 734
Princeton University Press 686
G. P. Putnam's Sons 713, 733, 734, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741

Readers Digest Press 725, 728
D. Reidel Publishing Co. 691
Rittenhouse Book Store 651

Simon & Schuster 725, 728
Springer Publishing Co. 698
Springer-Verlag 692
Stechert Macmillan 653
Structures Publishing Co. 698

TAB Books 693

United Nations 695

Van Nostrand Reinhold Co. 697

Water Information Center 698
Western Behavioral Sciences Institute 704
West Publishing Co. 646
John Wiley & Sons 699

Xerox University Microfilms 658

Sales-Business Offices

NEW YORK:
R. R. Bowker Comapny
1180 Avenue of the Americas
New York, New York 10036
Stephen M. Chazen 764-5245
Dominick Ciarletti 764-5246
William Philbrick 764-5247
Advertising Traffic Manager,
Maureen J. Rose 764-3363
Classified Advertising Manager,
Frieda Johnson 764-3362

MIDWEST:
James K. Levitt and Associates, Inc.
1720 Algonquin Road
Mount Prospect, Illinois 60056
Walter Freed 312 593-5255

WEST:
James K. Levitt and Associates, Inc.
13208 Saticoy Street
North Hollywood, California 91605
Bette Cochran 213 875-1517

SOUTH:
Metropolitan Publishers
Representatives, Inc.
2045 Peachtree Road, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30309
Marvin Arnsdorff 404 352-2173

PREVIEWS
Non-print software and hardware news and reviews—for librarians, teachers, media specialists

USE
ORDER FORM TO SUBSCRIBE

PREVIEWS
1180 Avenue of the Americas • N.Y., N.Y. 10036

Yes, please enter my subscription to PREVIEWS for one year at only $7.50.

(PREVIEWS is published monthly, September through May. For subscriptions in Canada and Pan American Postal Union, add $2.00. Elsewhere, add $3.00)

☐ Payment enclosed ☐ Bill me
☐ Bill school or org.

Name_____
Address_____
City_____
State_____ Zip_____
Occupation (H.S. librarian, elementary school teacher, etc.)
_____
Title or position_____

Published by R. R. BOWKER COMPANY 3/1/76

MARCH 15, 1976/ISSN 0000-0027

PUBLIC LIBRARY SUPPORT & SALARIES IN THE 70's

Directors' Median Salaries: Women: $18,750 Men: $24,000

94010burlzzzz26 olia
Burlingame Pub Lib
480 Primrose Rd.
Burlingame, CA 94010

P.L. Support & Salaries
ALA Midwinter Report
In the News: Ford's budget vetoed; Mass. state aid threat; LC plans aired at MLA; N.Y. eyes statewide systems upgrading

LJ LIBRARY JOURNAL

Why should you worry about book-stealing when your sharp-eyed student checkers are on duty?

If you're hiring student checkers because it provides extra income for some needy students, that's fine. But if you're doing it because you sincerely think it'll eliminate book thefts, you're kidding yourself.

When there's a continuous stream of people coming and going, the checkers can't possibly check everyone's briefcase. And when the traffic is slow, the checker is tempted to use the time to catch up on his studying.

The point is, even if you had the world's most conscientious checkers, unless they physically frisk everyone leaving the library, you will continue to lose books.

And that's where Tattle-Tape® comes in.

Tattle-Tape Book Detection Systems electronically "frisk" everyone who walks through the checkout area. The system is designed so that any treated book will signal the alarm, no matter where it is hidden. Or, "forgotten."

And your Tattle-Tape system will never spend its time sipping pop, reading, or goofing off. It just sits there, eternally vigilant, unafraid to ring the alarm on anyone, whether lowly Freshman or lofty Ph.D.

And that's why libraries all across the country are switching to Tattle-Tape book detection systems. They report cutting book losses by up to 90%. And that means you can spend money buying new books instead of constantly replacing stolen books.

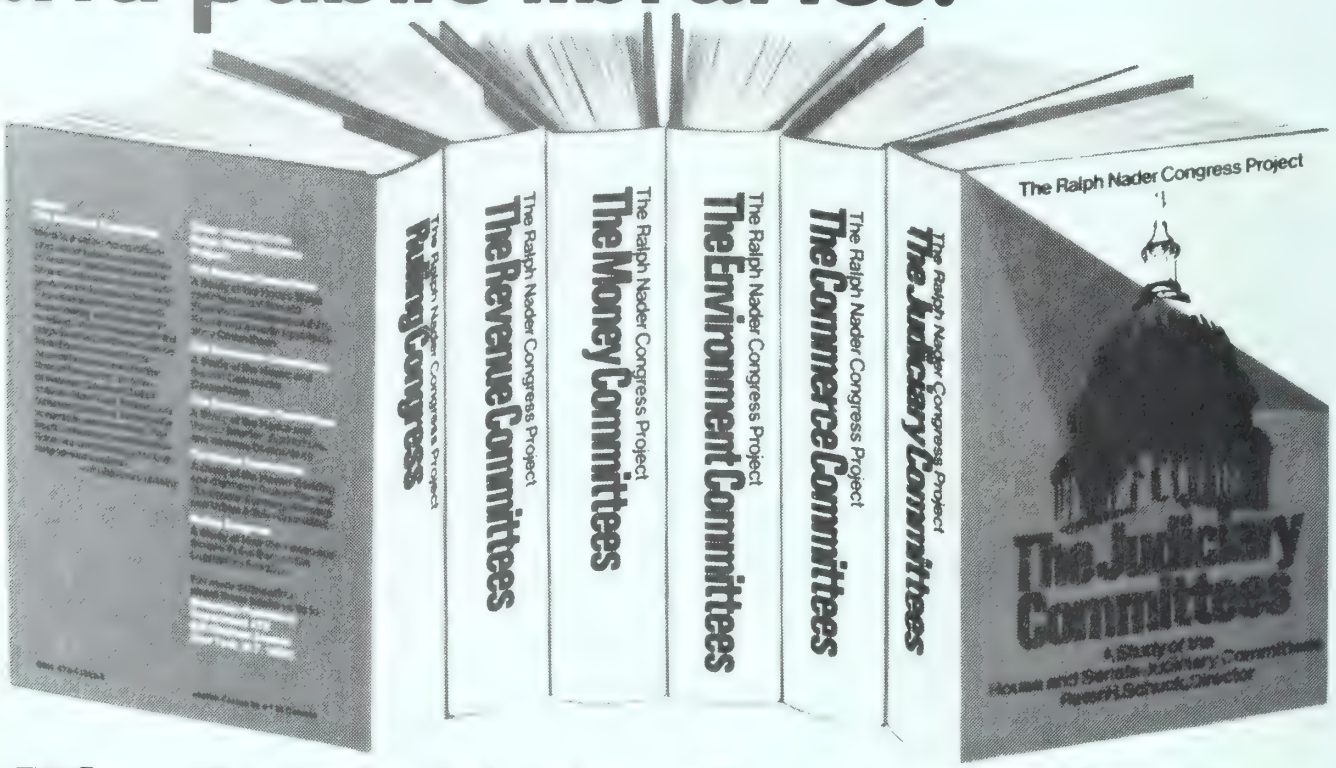
Want to learn more? We'll give you all the information you need. Just write on your letterhead to 3M Detection Systems, Building 220-9E, 3M Center, St. Paul, Mn. 55101. If possible, tell us roughly how many books you have in your facility.

If you're going to hire someone to do a job with impersonal efficiency, the way to do it is to hire a machine.

Tattle-Tape. So you can run a lending library. Instead of a stealing library.

3M COMPANY
Detection Systems

"A real contribution to the literature of political science and public affairs....Highly recommended for academic and public libraries."*



The Ralph Nader Congress Project

Presenting the most ambitious Nader undertaking to date, and certainly the most comprehensive survey of the national legislature in our time: A timely and provocative analysis of Congressional committees directly and crucially involved in domestic legislation. Three years in the making, the books feature interviews with members of the 92nd and 93rd Congresses, with hundreds of Congressional staff members, lobbyists, and top-ranking federal officials. Here's all the information your readers need to determine who runs Congress, what the relationships are between lobbyists, special-interest groups, and our Senators and Representatives, and many more of the facts.

Library Journal,* in a review of The Judiciary Committees

RULING CONGRESS
A study of how the House and Senate rules govern the legislative process
Ted Siff, Director

THE ENVIRONMENT COMMITTEES
A study of the House and Senate Interior, Agriculture, and Science Committees

THE MONEY COMMITTEES
A study of the House Banking and Currency Committee and the Senate Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs Committee
Lester M. Salamon, Director

THE COMMERCE COMMITTEES
A study of the House and Senate Commerce Committees
David E. Price, Director

THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEES
A study of the House and Senate Judiciary Committees
Peter H. Schuck, Director

THE REVENUE COMMITTEES
A study of the House Ways and Means and Senate Finance Committees and the House and Senate Appropriations Committees
Richard Spohn and Charles McCollum, Directors

$16.50 per volume • $90.00 for the full set of six volumes

GROSSMAN PUBLISHERS · A Division of THE VIKING PRESS

625 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022 • Nothing in this advertisement prevents anyone from quoting or charging any price for Viking books.

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF: John N. Berry III
SENIOR EDITORS: Shirley Havens
Karl Nyren
EDITOR, BOOK REVIEW: Janet Fletcher
ASSOCIATE EDITORS:
Book Review: Robert R. Harris
Bibliographic: Irene S. Land
News: Noël Savage
PRODUCTION EDITOR: Ellen Mangin
ART EDITOR: Carlos Delgado
REVIEW EDITORS: Marlene Charnizon
Ellen Levy
Anneliese Schwarzer
Katharine Scott
ASSISTANT EDITOR: Maureen Crowley
PRODUCTION ASSISTANTS: Nancy Brown
Ann Yazejian
EDITORIAL ASSISTANTS: Bette-Lee Fox
Ann Sankar
ADV. SALES MANAGER: Richard H. Brown
ADV. PRODUCTION: Maureen J. Rose
PUBLISHER: Paul J. Carnese

LJ/LIBRARY JOURNAL is published by R. R. Bowker Co., a Xerox company. Robert F. Asleson, President.

Direct editorial and advertising correspondence to 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York 10036. Telephone: (212) 764-5100. Subscription inquiries and changes of address should be directed to R. R. Bowker Company, Subscription Dept., P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588. Publications Offices at 117 Church Street, Whitinsville, Mass. 01488. Issued twice a month, September through June, monthly in July and August. Second class postage paid at Whitinsville, Mass. and additional mailing offices. Copyright © 1976 Xerox Corporation.

LJ/LIBRARY JOURNAL is indexed in Library Literature, Library & Information Science Abstracts, and Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature. SUBSCRIPTIONS: USA: 1 year $19.00; 2 years $36.00; 3 years $51.00. Canada and Postal Union of the Americas and Spain, add $2 per year; elsewhere, add $3 per year. Single copy $1.35. Spring, fall, and winter announcement numbers, $3.25 each. POSTMASTER: Please send Form 3579 to R. R. Bowker Company, P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588.

LJ/LIBRARY JOURNAL reserves the right to make its own independent judgment as to the acceptability of advertising copy and illustrations in advertisements. Advertiser and advertising agency assume liability for all content (including text, representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assume responsibility for any claims arising therefrom against the publisher. Offers to sell products, which appear in LJ/LIBRARY JOURNAL, are subject to all laws and regulations and are void where so prohibited.

Letters 753

Calendar 754

Editorial 761

News:
Congress vetoes Ford's '76 budget . . . LC plans aired in Mass. . . . research libraries try tougher security . . . AAAS nixes library photocopying . . . (British) Library Association plots reorganization . . . Md. library clerks seek parity with liquor clerks . . . Mass. state aid threat fought . . . New LSCA Title V draft proposed . . . W. Va. liquor tax proposal could up library aid . . . new programs on human rights, China, belly dancing . . . N.Y. eyes statewide system upgrading . . . Colo. system quits Council of Governments 763

People 775

FEATURES

Public Library Support and Salaries in the Seventies
BY KENNETH D. SHEARER & RAY L. CARPENTER 777

The Participation Problem
A Report of the American Library Association's Midwinter Meeting, January 18-24, 1976 784

Professional Reading 791

Checklist 792

Magazines 797

THE BOOK REVIEW

Book Reviews 799

Index to Reviews and Professional Reading 837

Classified 838

Index to Advertisers 840

SUMMING UP THE EXTRAORDINARY CRITICAL REACTION TO DATE:

"Essential for all reference collections."

—CHOICE MAGAZINE

Coverage seems as universal as claimed, and seems equally good in the five major areas: humanities, social sciences, life sciences. Coverage of American writers of secondary importance especially good. Generally cross-references are plentiful and helpful. The overall judgement must be that this remains an extraordinarily attractively designed, easily read yet authoritative reference work of great scope, essential for all reference collections. Articles compare well with their counterparts in the 15th (Macropedia) section of the Encyclopedia Britannica and the price is within range of even small libraries and individuals. Quality is far superior to most sets of encyclopedias purchased the individual volume manner. —CHOICE MAGAZINE

"The single most indispensable reference volume . . . [in a] superb new edition . . . with new and longer type and bolder boldface, with close to 8,000 more pages, with 4,000 new illustrations interspersed with the text, with 44 tables of alkinds, with identification of all proper names in the Bible, with 40,000 bibliographic references at the end of the major articles (there are 7,000 completely new ones) and 60,000 cross-references. Thumb-indexed format the same size as the last edition, printed on Bible paper. The perfect acquisition for individual or institution." —THE KIRKUS REVIEWS

"I am an enthusiast... It seems to me as if every effort has been made to enable the user to secure the greatest amount of information that can be contained in a one-volume encyclopedia." —EMERSON GREENAWAY, DIRECTOR EMERITUS, FREE LIBRARY OF PHILADELPHIA

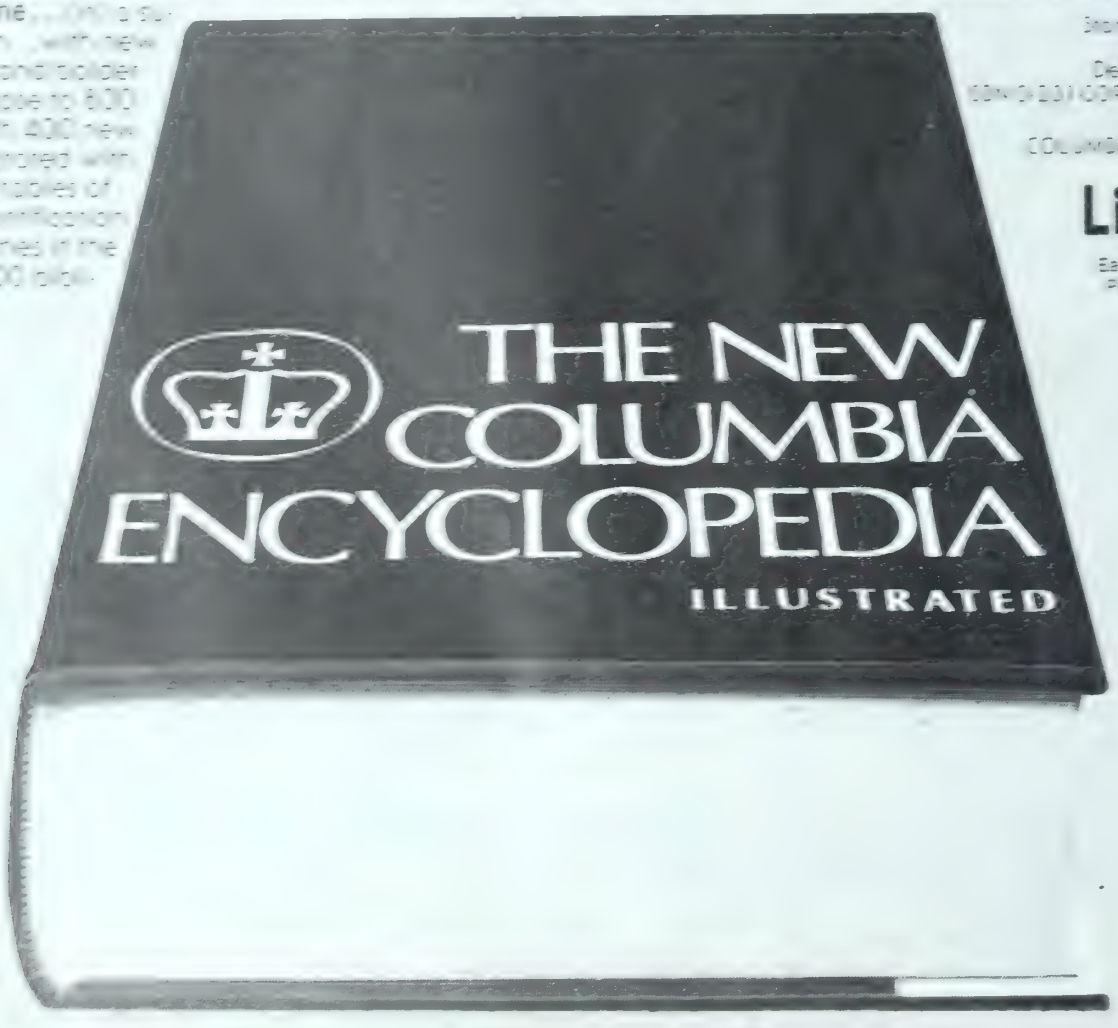
"A welcome revision and improvement of the Third Edition of the Columbia Encyclopedia. Much easier to read . . . more line drawings and maps, and they are better integrated with the articles to which they relate . . . This remains a very useful source for basic facts on a very wide range of topics." —WILSON LIBRARY BULLETIN

"The reference work of first resort for scholar and layman alike. THE NEW COLUMBIA ENCYCLOPEDIA surpasses in usefulness even its great ancestor." —LIONEL TRILLING

"The indispensable reference work." —ASHLEY MONTAGU

"The best short encyclopedia available." —LOS ANGELES TIMES

"The best one-volume encyclopedia around, bigger and better than ever." —CHICAGO TRIBUNE



Standard Edition $79.50
ISBN 0-231-02572-
Deluxe Edition $105.00
ISBN 0-231-02977-8 LC 74-26686
Published by
COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY PRESS
Distributed by
Lippincott
The Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105

LJ LETTERS

Nonsense, scents, cents . . .

Nina Kahn Fenenbock
Jamestown, North Dakota (formerly Director, City-County Library, Glasgow, Montana):

In these times of inflation and the ever shrinking library dollar, could not the staff and financial resources involved in researching, scent coding, spraying, or whatever in the world was involved in the perfumed catalog card project in the Upper Arlington Public Library (LJ, December 15, 1975, p. 2288), been put to better use? And how many librarians and library staff members have you heard say, "Why, I'm so busy, I never get time to open a book?"

Energy magazine

R. G. Schipf
Science Librarian, University of Montana, Missoula:

Neither Richards nor Katz (LJ, December 15, 1975, p. 2310) mention the best review of energy problems available today. I refer to Access to Energy which is described by the publisher as "A pro-science, pro-technology, pro-free enterprise monthly newsletter." The publisher is Dr. Peter Beckmann, an electrical engineering professor at the University of Colorado. Access to Energy costs $6 per year (send payment, no billing), and the address is Box 2298, Boulder, Colo. 80302. It is an excellent antidote to the know-nothings (and worse) who issue most of the press releases on energy, particularly nuclear energy.

Boycott publishers

Basil Mitchell
Librarian, Siena College Library, Loudonville, New York:

In response to the new copyright act with its punitive measures against libraries, it is now clear that librarians' only means of recourse is the boycott of the powerful media industry cartels that have engineered the progress of the bill through Congress.

For those libraries that must maintain currency, the purchase and importation of British editions through a British retailer would have the effect of depriving the American publisher of a substantial part of his interest. Because British books are cheaper at the present rate of exchange, the saving to the library budget should be welcome. The copyright holder could still move against the library in any instances of unauthorized copying, but the American publisher of the title would gain little advantage from the sale.

The copyright act creates opportunities for new ventures in independent publishing that have not existed for more than a century in a tightly closed industry. Librarians can expect to see the establishment of new English-language publishing firms in countries not signatory to international copyright agreements. The weight of libraries' purchasing power could lend significant encouragement for quality products from the new enterprises.

James Smith
Reference Librarian, Free Public Library, Westboro, New Jersey:

As long as librarians are willing to turn over and play possum ("Mavericks in a land of pintos," LJ, December 15, 1975, p. 2307) we can expect that the publishing world and the Information Industry Association will gladly kick this profession from here to Kingdom Come.

The absurdity of an author's right to his product from the moment it is sold till it is published is one thing. But to carry this absurdity beyond that point is to deny the buyer the right to do as he pleases with the product—and is to carry the absurd to the sublime. What the publishers are obviously trying to do is to sell librarians a bill of goods to the threshold of prostitution.

Does General Motors have any rights to the car it has sold me? Should I write to Ford for permission to borrow my neighbor's car? Should Chrysler receive a set fee out of all cab fares? Should Hertz and Avis send part of their profits to Detroit?

It is perfectly clear that as long as you let them kick you, they will oblige. But I say "damn the publishers"—as long as Freedom still reigns in this country—and I call upon my library colleagues to rally around the flag. Will ALA get off its butt and raise that flag? In the meantime, now about a nice little nationwide boycott against a couple of the bigshots in the publishing world just to remind them what the Bicentennial is all about?

OCLC in OK

Roscoe Rouse
University Librarian, Oklahoma State University, Stillwater:

Your map of the "OCLC Empire" (LJ, December 15, 1975, p. 2286) is badly out of date . . . by eight months, at least. This institution signed an agreement to join OCLC through the AMIGOS network last April, but you show no Oklahoma institutions as members.

Vincent at UNH

Charlotte K. Anderson
Assistant Librarian, University Library, University of New Hampshire, Durham:

A good man is hard to find. Please don't give away the University of New Hampshire's Librarian, Donald E. Vincent. In your report of the New England Library Association's Annual Conference (LJ, December 1, 1975, p. 2190), Dr. Vincent is assigned to Dartmouth. Right state, wrong institution!

Learning to conform

Tamar Kasten Zeltser
New York, New York:

I applaud your editorial "A Bankruptcy of Creative Talent" (LJ, December 1, 1975, p. 2185). At first I was encouraged to find that I was not alone in my battle to open up channels for creativity in an institution which praises conformity. I soon realized, however, that if this problem is so widespread among libraries, there is little hope for librarians of my persuasion finding suitable positions.

Perhaps as your editorial indicates, the condition is just a mirror of our economy. My own experience in the profession will certainly attest to this. In 1969, fresh out of library school, I entered the library field. The position allowed for creativity, learning, and growth. In 1972, I accepted a senior level position in another institution. The only thing I have learned in this position is the virtue of conforming to the wishes of the management.

As an avid reader of economic commentary, I have concluded that our economic conditions will not improve greatly in the near future. This grim forecast is leading me, and others, to seek employment in other fields. When the library profession finally awakes, creativity among its members will be a rare commodity.

P.S. Policy of the institution for which I am employed prohibits the use of its name in connection with any published material unless it first receives approval from the management.

Pieces of eight!

Stephen L. Moskal
Librarian, La Grange Public Library, Illinois:

Gerald Shield's "Avast and shiver m'timbers," (LJ, November 15, 1975, p. 2117) has unleashed my lifelong desire to change our image. At last, a chance to stomp around our reading room on peg-leg, parrot-on-shoulder, patch over eye, roaring, "Har, Har! Belay that Jim Hawkins!!"

Now when publisher's reps come calling, I'll hand 'im the Black Spot. Or if swordplay's your thing, how about a remake of Captain Blood?

The state of Hawaii

Kathleen L. Fernandez
Secretary, Oahu Library Advisory Commission, State of Hawaii

As a member of the Hawaii Library Advisory Commission and a school teacher and private citizen who is extremely concerned with bettering both public and school libraries in Hawaii, I must take issue with your report (LJ, November 1, 1975, p. 1966) concerning trouble in the Hawaii Library System. As a Commissioner, I speak with many private citizens as well as librarians and legislators concerning the libraries in Hawaii, and feel that your recent article was unjust and slanted. There has been no "major clash involving legislators and top library personnel" or any "threat by legislators to audit the school/public library system." Also, I detect little "resentment among public librarians who are displeased with May C. Chun's tenure as head of the Office of Library Services." And finally, the statement that Chun is "giving short shrift to public library concerns" due to "her long career in Hawaii's School Library and Instructional Materials Branch" is unfounded since the money for school libraries does not come from Chun and the Office of Library Services but rather directly from the DOE. Chun is doing her very best to run an extremely large and complex library system on limited funds, and her best, as most citizens, librarians, and legislators will surely agree, is indeed commendable.

Whitelock's contempt

Anne Osborn
Concerned Librarians Opposing Unprofessional Trends (CLOUT), Orange, California:

Alfred Whitelock's letter (LJ, November 15, 1975, p. 2082) makes me wonder about library education in Cheyenne. This county librarian's open contempt for a library school education fills me with regret that he and more of his staff could not have attended one of the superb library schools that give their students a deep, broad, and philosophical picture of library service. My experience in libraries tells me unequivocally that not all who work in libraries are librarians. Most are people who need a job when there happens to be an opening at a library near them. They can be trained and inspired about library functions. But even 17 years of working in a clerical position will not imbue a paraprofessional with the background, theory, and passion needed to run a library professionally. I congratulate Whitelock on the monumental training program he must maintain at Laramie County. My years as a paraprofessional filled me with frustration at my lack of library knowledge and with longing for the ability to give my library more than in-house training could equip me to do. The high horse that librarians sit atop is not intended to isolate us from our fellow library workers, but to elevate us so that we can see beyond our own libraries and the tips of our noses.

Sally Poundstone
Director, Mamaroneck Free Library, New York:

I'm sure many librarians will be unable to resist challenging Alfred Whitelock's belief that the Laramie County Library System's registration of 44 percent of its population is one of the highest in the country. And so I must register a claim for the Mamaroneck Free Library: 1970 U.S. Census population, Mamaroneck, 18,909; 1975 Westchester County Department of Planning, estimated population, Mamaroneck, 18,200; Mamaroneck Free Library registered borrowers, October 31, 1975, 13,050.

Our registration is for a three-year period, and a child must be able to sign his own name to be eligible to register and receive his own library card. A card holder must reside or work within the village. Westchester public libraries, as members of the Westchester Library System, issue a countywide library card. A few nonresidents who work in the village do register for cards here, and they are of course included in our registration total. Still, we think Mamaroneck's figures stack up well!

CALENDAR

MAR. 31-APR. 2 -UTAH LA, Salt Lake City, Salt Lake Hilton Hotel.

APR. 3 -SCHOOL OF INFORMATION STUDIES, SYRACUSE UNIV. "Information Broker/Free Lance Librarian, New Careers, New Library Services," Syracuse. Contact: Ruth Patrick, School of Information Studies, Syracuse Univ., 113 Euclid Ave., Syracuse, N.Y. 13210. (315) 423-4930, (315) 423-2911.

APR 29-30 MARYLAND LA, Baltimore, Baltimore Hilton Inn. Contact: Jean Barry Molz, Maryland LA, c/o Baltimore County Public Library, Admin. Offices, 320 York Rd., Towson, Md. 21617. (301) 758-0980.

APR. 29/MAY 1—OREGON LA, Lincoln City, Dunes Ocean Front Resort. Contact: Carol Ventgen, Coos Bay Public Library, 525 Anderson, Coos Bay, Ore. 97420.

APR. 30-MAY 1—OHIO VALLEY GROUP OF TECHNICAL SERVICES LIBRARIANS, Ball State Univ., Muncie, Indiana 47304. Contact: Frances E. Reynolds, Acquisitions Librarian, Bracken Library, Ball State Univ.

MAY 2-4 IDAHO LA, Burley, Ponderosa Inn. Contact Exhibits Chairperson Anna Green, Portneuf District Library, 5210 Stuart, Chubbuck 83201. (208) 237-2192.

MAY 6-8—MIDWEST ACADEMIC LIBRARIANS CONFERENCE, Cedar Falls, U. of Northern Iowa Library. Contact: Douglas Hieber, Head of Circulation, U. of Northern Iowa, Cedar Falls 50613.

MAY 6-8—MONTANA LA, Helena, Colonial Inn.

MAY 10-11—GRAD. SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SERVICE, UNIV. OF ALABAMA, "Symposium on the Book Arts." Contact: James D. Ramer, Grad School of Library Service, Univ. of Alabama, University, Ala. 35486.

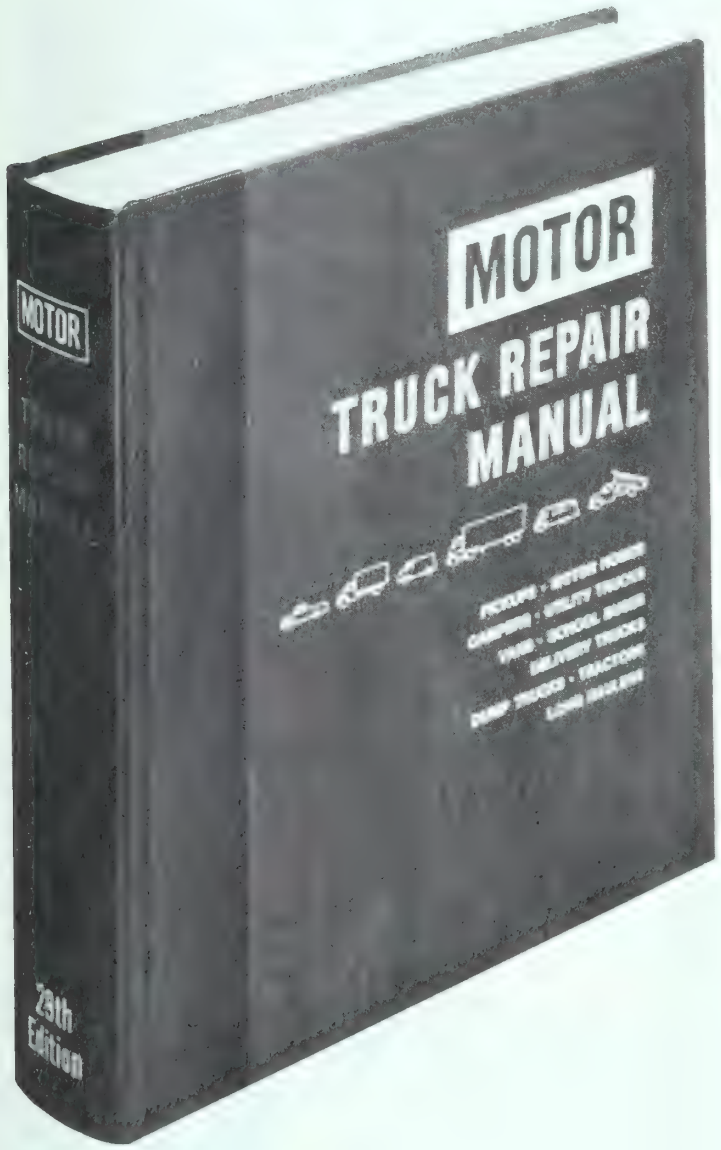
MAY 10-11—MASSACHUSETTS LA, Seacrest, North Falmouth, Mass. Contact: Patricia A. Demit, Box 7, Nahant, Mass. 01908. (617) 581-0663.

MAY 10-21—GRAD. SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SERVICE, UNIV. OF ALABAMA, "Typographic Workshop." Contact: James D. Ramer, Grad. School of Library Service, Univ. of Alabama, University, Ala. 35486.

MAY 12-14—SCHOOL OF BUSINESS, UNIV. OF SOUTH DAKOTA, Vermillion, "Library Management Seminar," $125. Contact: C. N. Kaufman, School of Business, Vermillion, S.D. 57069.

.New Titles From Hearst

Millions of Americans Now Drive All Kinds of Trucks, Including... Vans, Pickups, Campers, 4-Wheel Drives — And this is the book they're looking for.



Motor 1976 Truck Repair Manual 29th Edition

One out of every five motor vehicles in America is a truck. (By 1980 it will be one in three.) There are now over 25 million trucks on the road... and their owners are likely to want to service their vehicles themselves. Hearst Books responds to this need with the new 1976 Truck Repair Manual. The only book of its kind that covers the entire range of trucks including pick-ups... motor homes... campers... 4-wheel drives... utility trucks... vans... school buses... delivery trucks... dump trucks... tractors... and long haulers. 2,800 popular models of trucks from 1962-76 are covered in detail. 1,250 pages of step-by-step, easy-to-follow repair instructions covering almost everything that can possibly go wrong... practical help for the Saturday mechanic as well as the pro. Plus 3,058 pictures and 3,000 service and repair facts. In addition, the 1976 Truck Repair Manual includes specs for gasoline and diesel engines used in off-highway equipment. It's by far the biggest, most comprehensive truck repair manual ever!

1,424 pages. Illustrated.
8½" x 11" $21.95
ISBN 0-910992-47-9

Available through your jobber or direct from

Hearst Books

P.O. Box 2319, F.D.R. Station, New York, N.Y. 10022

25% DISCOUNT ON ORDERS OF 5 OR MORE COPIES.
(Mixed titles quality)

...New Titles From Hears

Motor Auto Repair Manual Early Model Edition 1962-1968

Because of the soaring cost of automobiles, people are holding on to their used cars longer—trying to keep them tuned and in good shape for as long as possible. They're searching for ways to handle routine maintenance and simple repairs themselves.

Hearst Books responds to this need with an Auto Repair Manual specifically designed for older cars. Step-by-step, in words and pictures, this book shows how to fix almost any part of most U.S. cars for 1962-68.

Professionals and amateurs will value its illustrated tune-up instructions and big trouble-shooting section that helps pinpoint what's wrong.

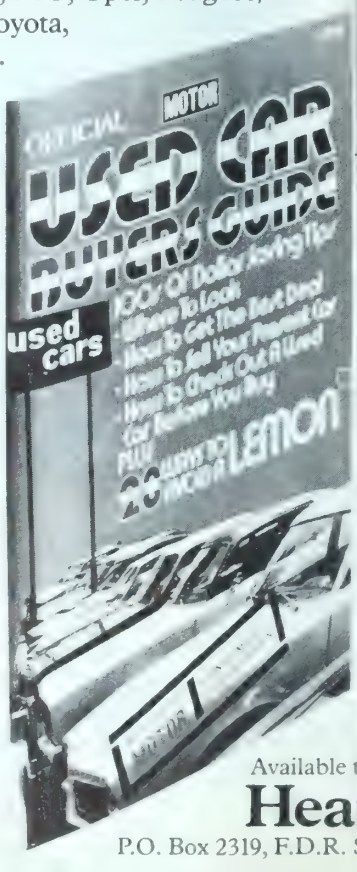
1,144 pages. Illustrated.
8½" x 11" $13.95
ISBN 0-910992-50-9

Motor Foreign Car Repair Manual 2nd Edition

The editors of the famous Motor Auto Repair Manual have put together all of the information necessary to keep foreign cars in ego-satisfying cream puff condition. This book takes the owner through step-by-step maintenance and repair procedures. Words and pictures help make adjustments and repairs easy to understand, easy to perform without special training.

Covers the 24 leading makes of imported cars including Audi, Austin, BMW, Capri, Colt, Cortina, Cricket, Datsun, Fiat, Honda, Jaguar, Mazda, Mercedes, MG, Opel, Peugeot, Porsche, Renault, Saab, Simca, Toyota, Triumph, Volkswagen, and Volvo.

860 pages. Illustrated.
8½" x 11" $18.95
ISBN 0-910992-52-5



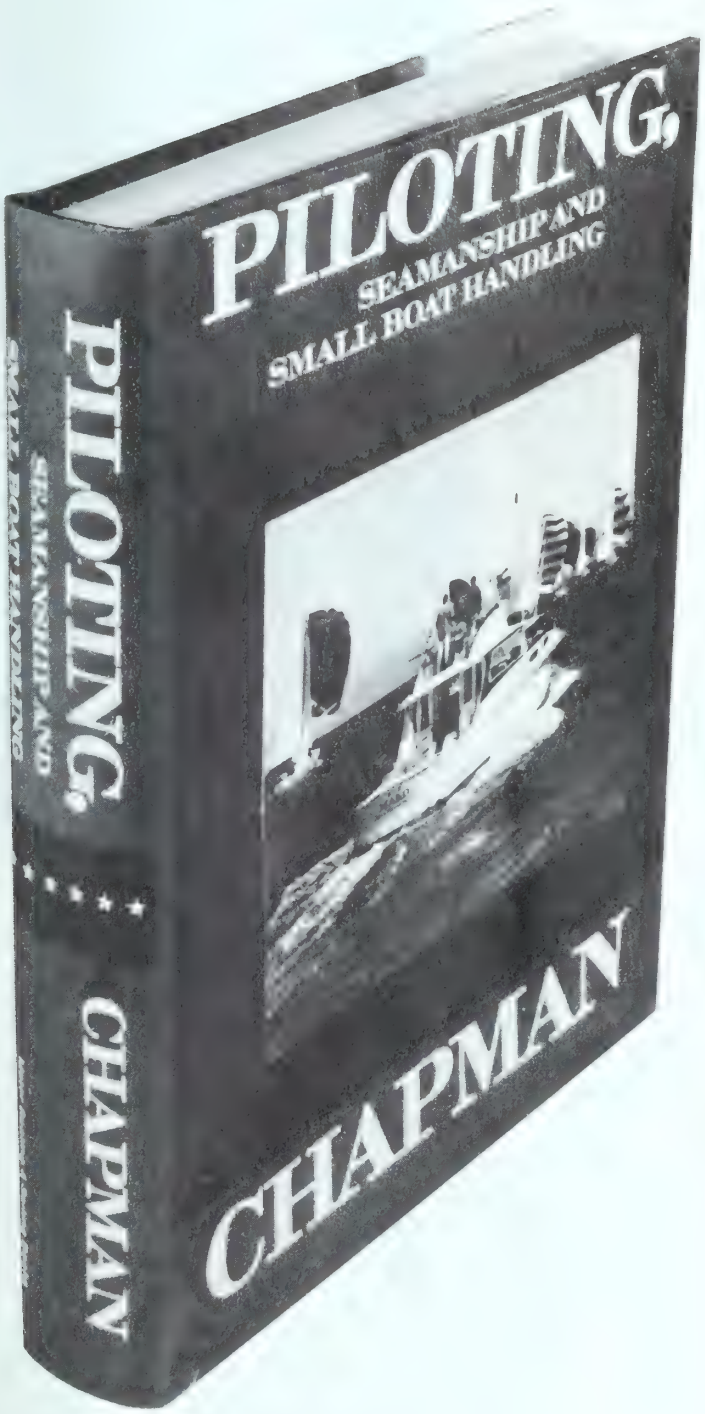
Motor Official Used Car Buyers Guide

Here's a handy volume that will prove invaluable to anyone in the market for a used car. It includes a discussion of the pros and cons of buying from a franchised dealer, an independent lot, or a private party ...a four-page Car Condition Check List...and an explanation of the tricks and pitfalls to watch out for.

Chapters include "Wheeling and Dealing"—how to get the best possible deal..."Financing"—(which can be as tricky as shopping for the car itself)..."Selling Your Present Car"...and even "Do-It-Yourself Repairs and Maintenance."

64 pages. Illustrated.
6" x 9¼" $2.95 (Soft Cover)
ISBN 0-910992-53-3

Available t
Hea
P.O. Box 2319, F.D.R. S



Piloting, Seamanship and Small Boat Handling 52nd Edition

By Charles F. Chapman

The 52nd edition of Piloting, the famous "blue book of boating," will be in immediate demand by both beginners and accomplished pilots alike because it contains all the latest government regulations and technical changes affecting the world of pleasure boating.

The new edition of the "Bible of Boating" serves as the major text for classes given by the U.S. Power Squadrons, Coast Guard Auxiliary, U.S. Navy and other advanced courses in boating.

It includes hundreds of diagrams, tables and special how-to instructions. 24 full-color pages illustrate navigation lights, buoyage systems, nautical charts, flags and insignia, and international code flags. It also includes chapters on: outboards... trailers... electronic equipment and inland boating... as well as charts...compasses... aids to navigation... rules of the road...anchoring... marlinspike seamanship... boat handling... and much more.

Piloting is the most complete and widely used of all boating books.

640 pages
Illustrated 8¼" x 11⅛"
Standard Edition $11.95
ISBN 0-910990-30-1
Presentation Edition $14.95
Slipcased with 6 Boating
Reference Cards
ISBN 0-910990-31-X
Publication date: March 1976

bber or direct from ooks
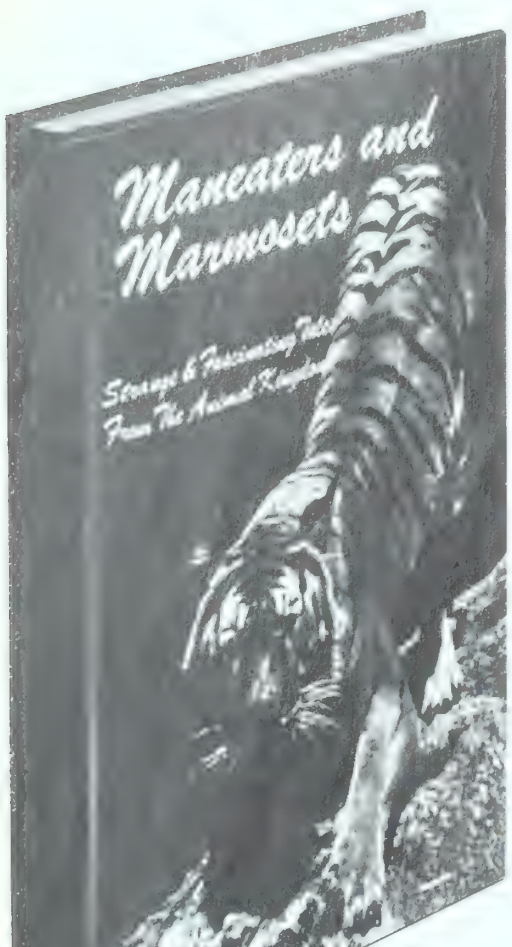
ork, N.Y. 10022

25% DISCOUNT ON ORDERS OF 5 OR MORE COPIES.
(Mixed titles quality.)

...New Titles From Hears

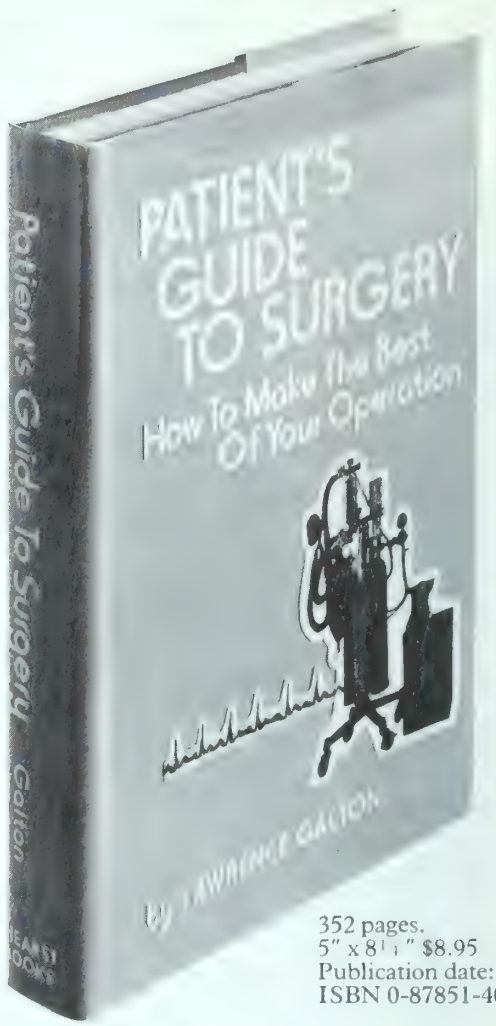


Maneaters and Marmosets — Strange and Fascinating Tales From The Animal Kingdom

Ever since the movie Jaws, there's been a renewed interest in nature's "killer" animals and in unique animals in general.

Hearst Books answers this new "call of the wild" with Maneaters and Marmosets, a collection of 30 true nature stories about dragons, man-eating sharks, gorillas, bats — the best stories from many years of Science Digest magazine. The contents include: The Strange World of Night Creatures... Shark! Overrated Demon or General Scourge... Shark vs. Porpoise... Meanest Animal in the World... plus 26 more!

320 pages. Illustrated.
6" x 9" $7.95
Publication date: May 1976
ISBN 0-910990-98-0



352 pages.
5" x 8¼" $8.95
Publication date: May 1
ISBN 0-87851-400-7

Patient's Guide To Surgery — How To Make The Best of Your Operation

By Lawrence Galton

The prospect of surgery can be more traumatic than the operation itself. Now Hearst Books offers this new Patient's Guide — designed to allay fears with a combination of information, reassurance and sympathy.

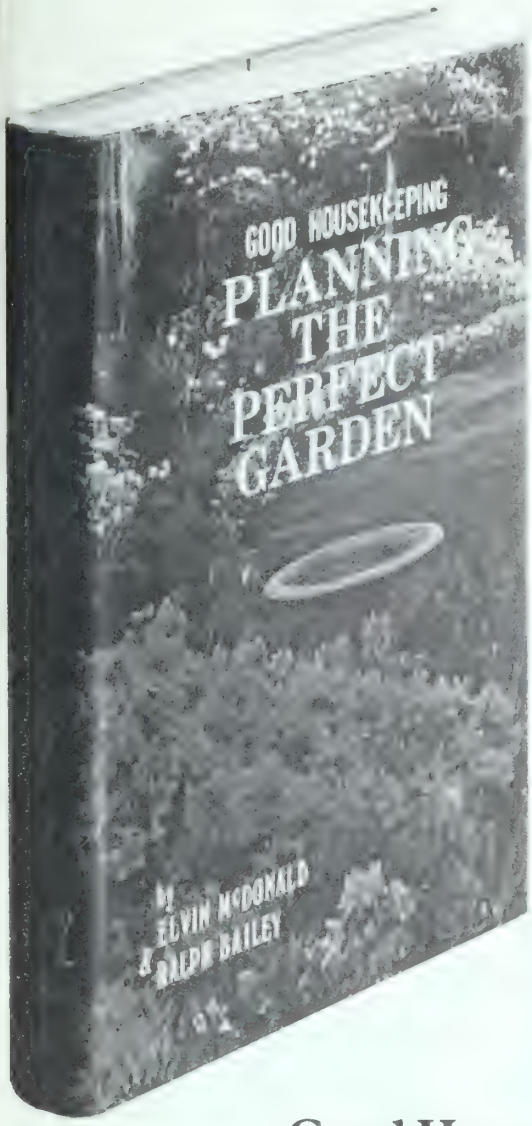
An important book for anyone who is about to enter the hospital, this volume includes information on: choosing a surgeon... the hospital... fees, costs, and insurance... anesthesia... postoperative care... radiology... lab tests... recent advances that may help. Plus chapters on all the common types of operations — including transplantation surgery. The author has written many other medical books for the layman, including Don't Give Up on an Aging Parent and The Silent Disease: Hypertension.

Available throug

Hea

P.O. Box 2319, F.D.R. S

ooks...Winter/Spring 1976



Good Housekeeping Planning The Perfect Garden

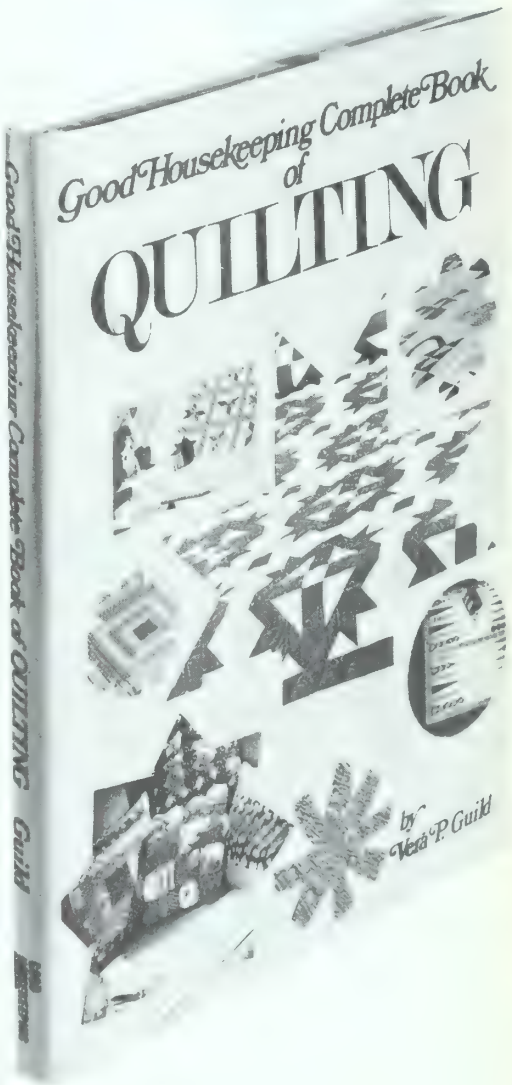
By Elvin McDonald and Ralph Bailey

Here's a unique book for gardeners—featuring 64 different gardens, each illustrated in full color, and keyed to planting plans that show exactly what, where, when and how much to plant to achieve the results pictured. Alternate plantings are listed so that there are no regional limitations.

Just a few examples are: "A Pear Tree Dooryard Garden"..."Vegetables on a High-Rise Rooftop"... "An Herb Garden for All Seasons"...and "Color in the Shade."

A special feature is the Plant Finder, a unique indexing method that arranges plants by such factors as blooming time, height, hardiness, uses, etc. Also included are instructions for the care of a variety of popular house plants.

256 pages. Illustrated.
6″ x 9″ $8.95
Publication date: April 1976
ISBN 0-87851-202-0



Good Housekeeping Complete Book of Quilting

By Vera P. Guild

The noble American folk-art tradition of quilting is enjoying a revival. Major museums have displayed antique masterpieces to enthusiastic crowds; in nearly every big city quilting shops, selling quilts, quilting material, and instructions, have opened.

Now Good Housekeeping has put together a book that tells how to make almost every kind of quilt, with step-by-step, easy-to-follow instructions. This lavishly illustrated book covers: cutting...piecing... setting the quilt together...backing...lining... basting...and pattern making. Many famous traditional patterns are included.

160 pages. Illustrated.
7″ x 10″ $9.95
Publication date: June 1976
ISBN 0-87851-017-6

r direct from oks
rk, N.Y. 10022

25% DISCOUNT ON ORDERS OF 5 OR MORE COPIES.
(Mixed titles quality.)

...New Titles From Hears

The Connoisseur Illustrated Guides Clocks and Watches

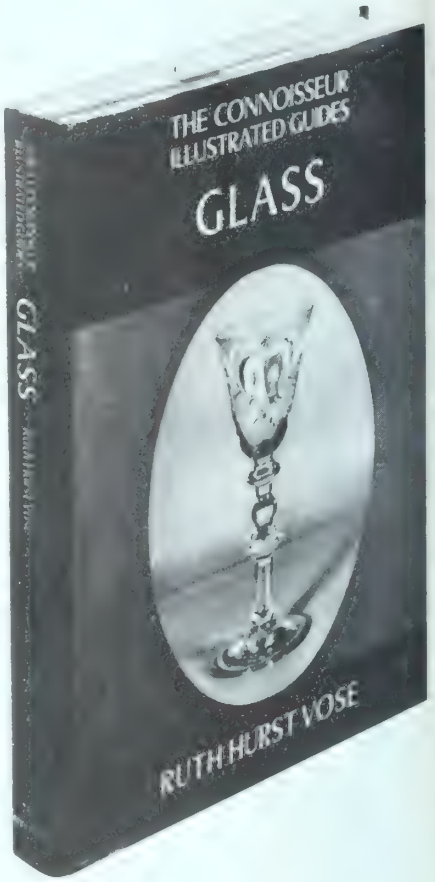
By Alan Smith

More people every year are getting involved in the lucrative hobby of collecting antique clocks and watches. And they're looking for a guide to help them better understand the history, technology, and importance of these timepieces.

Hearst Books responds to this need with the Connoisseur Guide to Clocks and Watches. This book gives details of craftsmanship that have gone into making and decorating clocks and watches from the Middle Ages to the present day. It contains a review of some of the more important European, English, American and Japanese clocks. Over 400 line drawings and 26 color plates help the reader recognize general features and appreciate the details of craftsmanship.

222 pages. Illustrated.
6″ x 8½″ $14.95
ISBN 0-90030-508-8



Popular Mechanics Complete Book of Furniture

By Len Hilts

Just right for today's economy-minded reader, this timely book tells all about buying, reupholstering, refinishing and repairing furniture. It can save the reader hundreds, perhaps thousands of dollars.

In simple, specific terms the author tells about Buying Furniture: how good furniture is made; how to identify period pieces; how to select fabrics; etc.... Repairing Furniture: tools, glues, and how to use them; how to re-glue joints, repair chair seats, patch veneers, replace broken legs, etc.... Refinishing Furniture: the best of the modern finishes; antique finishes; and much more.

320 pages. Illustrated.
6″ x 9″ $8.95
Publication date: May 1976
ISBN 0-910990-62-X

The Connoisseur Illustrated Guides Glass

By Ruth Hurst Vose

For years, the growing army of glass collectors has been troubled by the difficulty of identifying and dating glass.

Now, new for 1976, Hearst Books has just what they've been looking for—The Connoisseur Guide to Glass. This authoritative volume offers a completely new approach to help the collector quickly discover the likely date and place of origin of any given piece of glass. Over 350 line drawings and 32 color photographs illustrate a detailed, informative text.

222 pages. Illustrated.
6″ x 8½″ $14.95
ISBN 0-90030-509-6

Available through your jobber or direct from

Hearst Books

P.O. Box 2319, F.D.R. Station, New York, N.Y. 10022

25% DISCOUNT ON ORDERS OF 5 OR MORE COPIES.
(Mixed titles qualify.)

Who speaks for librarians?

"From 1973-1975 public librarians fared worse than public libraries. Moreover, beginning librarians fared worse than directors. Whatever progress in librarian's personal income was realized in the 1960s is rapidly diminishing . . ." That dismaying note is sounded by Kenneth Shearer and Ray Carpenter in their article beginning on p. 777 of this issue. They add, later in that analysis, that while libraries, in general, have kept abreast of inflation, ". . . our largest and most venerable public library systems may now be our largest and most vulnerable library systems. Systems serving 750,000 people or more realized negligible increases in income, clearly falling behind in the race with inflation . . ."

These two depressing facts raise fundamental questions about the way our profession is organized to support institutions and the individuals that work in them.

We have been urging that the American Library Association find a way to ally itself with the Urban Libraries Council and other interested parties to develop some way of getting federal aid for urban libraries (most recently see LJ, February 15, p. 567). Unlike the question of direct support of individual librarians, there has never been any doubt that ALA's purposes accommodate this goal, and there is less doubt than ever that it is a need of the highest priority. While ALA and the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science are beginning to make the right noises regarding urban library support, as the Midwinter Conference report beginning on page 784 of this issue indicates, there is still very little in the way of action coming from ALA's legislative leaders. We won't dwell on this oft-repeated theme here, except to say that if the urban libraries are losing ground to inflation, but libraries in general are not, obviously smaller institutions are getting the lion's share of all library support, and federal legislation may be the only way to bring equity to the situation.

The problem of decreasing real personal income for librarians also demands organized attention. There is considerable agreement, however, that support for better salaries for individual librarians is not necessarily a function ALA can or should undertake. In our Centennial Issue (January 1, p. 213-15) ALA Executive Director Robert Wedgeworth points out the dangers to ALA in representing or bargaining for its personal members. One compelling reason why ALA cannot or should not become a bargaining agent for its members, according to Wedgeworth, is that it would jeopardize the Association's tax-exempt status.

At the recent ALA Midwinter Meeting Gerald Shields tried to convince the ALA Council to establish a unit within ALA for professional librarians. The Council, which we expected to support the idea, showed little interest, and the motion was defeated. Maybe that was proper in view of Wedgeworth's fears for ALA's tax status. It certainly proved that the ALA Council isn't about to create a "professional" unit, and that librarians will probably have to look elsewhere for organizational support.

Shearer and Carpenter make a compelling case for the need. "Library directors," they point out, "did not receive salary increases large enough to maintain their level of living . . ." but more important, they add, "the median salary offered the new librarian on January 1, 1975 was $9,710 . . . During these past two years beginning salaries advanced much less quickly than the cost of living rate . . . The level of living according to the Labor Department definitions most nearly coincident with the salaries of beginning public librarians is the 'lower living standard'." It is also apparent from the article that this is not a local or regional phenomenon—it is a national one.

In short, two dismaying developments are recorded by Shearer and Carpenter: 1) urban libraries are losing ground to inflation, and 2) working library employees are losing real income and purchasing power. While ALA can and should come to the support of those urban libraries, it either cannot or should not come to the support of the individual librarians. But some organization must.

Unions can do the job for nonsupervisory professionals and library workers, but there is no organization to which other professionals can turn.

It is apparent that salary erosion, loss of benefits, lack of salary standards, and a general lack of attention to the working situation and living standard of the working professional librarian cry out for some kind of organized effort. It may, indeed, be time for a national association of professional librarians. John Berry

Pick up a Microfilm Reader today!

The Elite Microfilm Reader from Xerox is made to be picked up and moved around! This tough little 15-pounder takes carrying in stride ... has manual controls you'll master in minutes ... and sells for a remarkably low $275! It's ideal for small libraries, classrooms, departmental and personal use, and even as a back-up reader. And the Elite is also...

XEROX

Compact
a sleek 20½'' x 15'' x 9¾''

Easy-to-read
12'' x 12'' coated screen minimizes glare, maximizes image clarity

Versatile accepts both 35mm and 16mm roll microfilm; stands upright for vertical images, lies on its side for horizontal formats

Dependable
UL approved with a 90-day warranty on parts and labor (excluding lamps).

YES! I want to pick up ☐ Elite Microfilm Reader(s) in a magnification ratio of ☐17x ☐22x, on a 30-day trial basis! Charge me $275 each, plus $5 shipping and handling per unit, and taxes where applicable. If I return my reader within 30 days, I will only be charged for shipping (both ways).

☐ Please send me more information

BILL TO:
Name
Institution
Address
City
P.O. No. State Zip
Tax Exempt No.

SHIP TO:
Name
Institution
Address
City
State Zip

CLIP AND MAIL TO:
Equipment Coordinator
Xerox University Microfilms
300 N. Zeeb Rd., Ann Arbor, Mich. 48106
(313) 761-4700

XEROX® is a trademark of XEROX CORPORATION

LJ NEWS

Congress vetoes Ford's '76 budget

Congress has voted by an overwhelming margin to override President Ford's veto of the fiscal 1976 Labor-HEW bill (H.R. 8069)—nixing the Administration's attempt to reduce drastically federal support for libraries. Ford is still trying to eliminate federal library aid: his 1977 consolidation package calls for zero funding for both public and college libraries. Commenting on the override, Sarah Case of ALA's Washington Office told LJ that "Ford apparently hasn't gotten the message that Congress will stand behind libraries." Case noted that each year a "charade" is played out: Ford recommends zero support for libraries; Congress comes up with a budget providing federal library aid; Ford vetoes it; Congress overrides the veto; and Ford finally tries a rescission request in a last ditch effort to cut funding for libraries to the bone.

Case predicted that Congress will reject Ford's latest rescission requests. She noted that LSCA (Library Services & Construction Act) funding is now going out and that HEA (Higher Education Act) grants for college book buying and demonstration grants will not really be held up by the rescission because such grants are not awarded until the spring.

Among the programs covered by the new Labor-HEW money law: LSCA, Title I for library services ($49,155,000); LSCA, Title II for public library construction (zero funding); LSCA, Title III for interlibrary cooperation ($2,594,000); Elementary & Secondary Education Act, Title II for book buying ($45,125,000); ESEA, Title IV-B for libraries and learning resources ($68,665,000 plus $147,330,000 in forward funding); HEA, Title II-A for book buying ($9,975,000); and HEA, Title II-B for library training and demonstration projects ($1,500,000). Also: Adult Education Act ($67,500,000 plus $71,500,000 in forward funding); Community Education ($3,553,000); the Library of Congress ($116,843,400); and the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science ($476,000).

For 1977, President Ford has recommended a budget package that resembles Nixon's ill-fated Education Revenue Sharing proposal. Ford's Financial Assistance to Elementary and Secondary Education proposal is a block grant scheme that would consolidate 27 existing programs, including ESEA, Education for the Handicapped, Vocational Education, Adult Education, LSCA, and HEA. About 75 percent of the $3.3 billion block grant (including bonus funding of $262,558,000 that is to be made available only if Congress goes for the consolidation package) is to be reserved for the disadvantaged and the handicapped—usually provided for under such programs as ESEA, Title I for educationally deprived children ($1,900,000,000), Education for the Handicapped ($220,375,000), and Vocational Education ($539,349,000). But Ford wants zero funding for LSCA and HEA Titles that have fueled public and academic libraries in the past. A budget boost of $41,000 is recommended for the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science ($517,000), but there is no mention of the NCLIS-backed White House Conference on Library and Information Science.

Ford has argued that his Financial Education Assistance package will give each state more flexibility in determining priorities and developing projects that meet each state's education needs. Said Ford, the consolidation "will substantially decrease the bureaucratic burden associated with present programs . . . will substantially increase state discretion over the use of funds . . . and will enable federal funds to more effectively complement existing state programs." The states, suggests ALA's Washington Newsletter, will only have the option of deciding where to use 25 percent of funding appropriated, since 75 percent of it is earmarked for programs for the disadvantaged and the handicapped.

But ALA's Sarah Case has questioned the logic of putting higher education programs (HEA II for college book buying and demonstration projects, for example) in a block grant for elementary and secondary education. One major problem pegged: in many states the agency that administers LSCA (which will probably get money from Congress despite Ford's demands) is totally separate from the state education department that presumably would receive the block grant for elementary and secondary education.

Case predicted that Congress would not enact a proposal differing so radically from old funding patterns in time for this year's appropriations process. In the offing, she said, is another "tug-of-war" between a Congress which wants to keep libraries going and an Administration which wants to wipe out aid to libraries.

Mass. Library Assn. hears LC plans

The Library of Congress, said LC staffer John Y. Cole at the February 5 Midwinter Meeting of the Massachusetts Library Association, hopes to enter a new period of responsiveness to its users, as it makes the transition to a new administration under Librarian of Congress Daniel Boorstin. How this will come about, said Cole, will depend to a large extent on the recommendations of a task force, formed by Boorstin and headed by Cole, and charged with the mission of marshalling the ideas of LC staff and LC service clients on the library's future course.

Coles cited the Library's split role—as Library of Congress and as the nation's de facto national library—as one of the problems, but also as a potential source of value. He suggested that the "creative tension" which could be a result of the library's dual nature could lead to new and better services for all the library's clients. As an example, he cited the Congressional Research Service, which has developed into a highly skilled information

Highlights and Sidelights

Announcing a series of Audio Guides to the history and culture of Cities, States and Countries of the World.

The first five of this entirely new series—England, France, Mexico, Virginia, Washington D.C.—are now available:

To plan exciting visits to new places.

To re-visit lands already travelled and enjoy familiar Cities and Sounds.

To add realism and dimension to the studies of geography, history and language that cannot be found in a text alone.

Highlights and Sidelights captures the very essence of life in many different areas of the world. The street sounds of Mexico, the language and music of France, the culture of England, the natural beauty of Virginia, the history of Washington D.C.—all these come to life with realism and excitement that otherwise could be inspired only by an actual visit.

Each album contains six 20-minute audio cassettes in vinyl binders that include maps to guide the listeners.

Each cassette is painstakingly prepared to include more things about more places, in far more interesting ways than could otherwise possibly be available. The cassettes can be used with a group or by an individual with equal ease.

Highlights and Sidelights--the street sounds, the native language, the music, the vivid historical portrayals. These belong in your library. Everyone will love them. Even you.

ORDER THESE FIVE OUTSTANDING PROGRAMS

THE BAKER & TAYLOR COMPANIES
Audio-Visual Department
BOX 230
Momence, Illinois 60954

Qty.	Title	Price
( )	England	$59.95
( )	France	59.95
( )	Mexico	59.95
( )	Virginia	59.95
( )	Washington, D.C.	59.95
	TOTAL:	$299.75

Special Price for All Five: $275.00 (a saving of $24.75)

( ) Please send me more information on these and future Highlights and Sidelights programs.

NAME _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____

SIGNATURE _____

TITLE _____

B&T THE BAKER & TAYLOR COMPANIES

service to the Congress, utilizing many new techniques and materials. Similar high powered service to the public, he suggested, could grow out of this service tailored to the needs of legislators.

The new Librarian, Daniel Boorstin, he said, might well follow the path taken in the past few administrations headed by nonlibrarians—he cited Archibald MacLeish as one—a path of consolidation of gains rather than one of expansion. Boorstin's predecessor, he noted, L. Quincy Mumford, a librarian by profession, took the Library of Congress in a few years from a $9 million to a $90 million annual operation.

While Cole was speaking, the news came in of the final sewing up of the future of the LC Madison Building as a library facility and not another House office building. The appropriation for the final stage of fitting it out as a library was approved. Cole reported that LC's heretofore anonymous "Annex Building" will have its name changed with appropriate fanfare during the coming National Library Week to the Thomas Jefferson Building.

LC sent another ambassador to the Bay State's winter conclave: Virginia Haviland, head of the Children's Book Service, speaking about the Library of Congress mission of "serving those who serve children," while at a concurrent program, Juan Freudenthal of Simmons College demonstrated that a slide show of national libraries in Europe and South America can be a very funny experience when he narrates.

Other bases touched by the heavily attended meeting included service to the handicapped, copyright, and the preservation of books, with Boston University's David P. Goding reviewing LC activities in the latter area. Lunch time inspiration was provided by Michael Meeropol, co-author of We Are Your Sons, the Legacy of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg.

Boorstin impact at LC felt; goals task force appointed

Members of the library community who had vigorously opposed the appointment of historian Daniel Boorstin to the post of Librarian of Congress are re-evaluating their stance; initial reports say that Boorstin is tackling the job energetically, thus belying early predictions that he would spend much of his time writing another history book instead of running the library.

One major initiative announced: a new task force has been appointed to conduct a "full-scale review of the Library and its activities"; ideas are to be solicited from the library staff as well as "a number of outside advisory groups chosen to represent the library's constituencies."

Chaired by John Y. Cole, the task force includes Alan M. Fern, Beverly Gray, Tao-Tai Hsia, Edward Knight, Lucia Rather, Lawrence S. Robinson, Norman J. Shaffer, Robert D. Stevens, Elizabeth Stroup, and Glen A. Zimmerman. Boorstin has announced his intention to work closely with the new Task Force on Goals, Organization, and Planning.

LC's Deputy Director John Lorenz—a contender for the top LC post who drew stiff opposition from LC black employee groups because they felt he paid short shift to discrimination complaints—is leaving to head the Association of Research Libraries (ARL) Washington office. He will be replaced by William J. Welch, director of LC's Processing Department.

Tough security measures adopted by research libraries

Alarming increases in theft and vandalism in U.S. museums and research libraries, says the American Antiquarian Society, have forced the adoption of more stringent security precautions by many institutions affected. Cited as an indication of the severity of the problem: the Society of American Archivists has encouraged the development of institutional security programs, and in 1975-76 is establishing a major archival security program aimed at sizing up the extent of theft and mutilation and exploring possible solutions (LJ, December 15, 1975, p. 2283).

The American Antiquarian Society stressed that "fundamental to any security measure is the matter of identification." AAS ticked off its own precautions: a guard-receptionist is on station; briefcases and outer garments must be left in lockers; an interview with a senior staff member screens visitors further; references or faculty endorsements are required; patrons must sign for materials requested (some rare items must be used at a table directly in front of the service desk); and the researcher must present a slip indicating that he has returned all materials borrowed.

AAAS endorses restriction of library photocopying

The Board of Directors of the American Association for the Advancement of Science has issued a policy statement in favor of pending copyright legislation, endorsing restrictions on "systematic" photocopying by libraries. While noting that the widespread dissemination of scientific and technical information is desirable and that scientists involved in research projects rely

WE HAVE WHAT YOU NEED, SOMETIMES EVEN BEFORE YOU KNOW YOU NEED IT.

If you've always ordered some of your supplies from one company, and some from another, we'd like to make a suggestion: order everything your library needs from Brodart's complete line of over 4000 items. One source. One purchase order. It's that simple.

You'll also discover that our catalog is not only a good, clear buying guide, but it's a valuable source of new ideas. Over the past 30 years, Brodart has been a step ahead of your needs many times. We invented the book jacket cover, book aid cloth tape, and other useful products and services.

And each year, we add to our line and improve it. For example, we now offer 13 different types of book cover protection, more than any other supplier.

So when it comes to library supplies and equipment, come to the company that's most likely to have what you need, and very likely to anticipate a need, maybe even before you do.

We salute the AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION 1876–1976 ALA 100

PLEASE SEND THIS COUPON, OR WRITE TO:

Mr. Stephen Tomasini, Product Manager
BRODART INC., Dept. B36
1609 Memorial Avenue
Williamsport, PA 17701

Dear Mr. Tomasini: I have not received your newest supplies and equipment catalog, please send me one ☐

Name_____

Title_____

Library/Organization_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____ Zip_____

BRODART

THE LIBRARY COMPANY

1609 MEMORIAL AVE., WILLIAMSPORT, PA 17701 1236 SO. HATCHER ST., CITY OF INDUSTRY, CA 91749 6 EDMONDSON ST., BRANTFORD, ONTARIO N3T 5M3

Get the latest paperbacks faster and easier—just mail your list to Demco—we'll do the rest

Any K-12 Paperback you see Favorably Reviewed in...

- The New York Times Book Review
- Publisher's Weekly
- Booklist
- Horn Book
- Kliatt Paperback Guide

...is automatically ordered into our inventory.

As you page through these publications, simply jot down the title, author and publisher of each book you need. Then send us your list. We'll follow through with fast service and high fill rate. And our low discount prices apply:

Library Discounts

1-24 titles ..... Net
25-99 titles 10%
100 and over 20%

Classroom Discounts

Books must be all the same title.
3-9 books 10%
10-24 books 20%
25 or more books 25%

If you would like Demco's current, updated check lists of the latest Favorably Reviewed paperback titles, or our new Books and Media Catalog with over 3,000 paperback titles, write to: Demco, Box 1488, Dept. P43, Madison, Wis. 53701

DEMCO

Books and Media for Young America

Demco Educational Corp.
Madison, Wis., Fresno, Cal.
Book Div., Paramus, N.J.

on photocopying, the AAAS board said that "unlimited photocopying could seriously affect the viability of many scientific publishing operations." Stressing that "the interests of both publishers and libraries need to be balanced," the AAAS board contended "that provisions in legislation to revise the Copyright Act being considered by Congress are reasonable approaches toward that balance."

Among the provisions specifically endorsed: attempts to "codify the judicial doctrines of fair use and to grant special rights to libraries but to prohibit systematic photocopying"; "inclusion in the legislation of language to better define systematic photocopying"; and "the development of mechanisms which would permit libraries and research organizations fair use of copyrighted works as well as to pay publishers for other uses in efficient and cost effective ways."

Prefab mini-libraries slated for Baltimore Co.

Following the lead of West Virginia, which several years ago started building "instant libraries" in efforts to provide library service to isolated rural areas, Baltimore County plans to set up prefab library facilities in both high-density suburban communities and sparsely populated areas. Library Director Charles Robinson reports that prefab buildings (manufactured by Game Time, a Toro subsidiary of Litchfield, Michigan) are to be acquired by a local contractor who will then add the systems and equipment to complete the facilities and turn them over to the Baltimore County Public Library ready for the books.

The new "libraries," said Robinson, will hopefully be staffed completely by volunteers, shelve some 10,000 books (which are to be replenished at a rate of $15-$20,000 per year), and offer no library service beyond popular adult hardbound books, paperbacks, and children's books, plus a dictionary and encyclopedia which may be consulted standing up (there will be no seating).

Robinson says that the first one (slated for a high-readership area) is expected to circulate some 200,000 books a year, thus lessening demands on the system's full service branches. It will replace a popular bookmobile, but will cost only about $50,000 as against $1 million for a conventional branch. Inside, the mini-library will resemble a modern bookstore, said Robinson, with most books shelved face out and a charging machine instead of a cash register.

Problems to be faced: local building codes are more troublesome than they would be in a rural setting. Although Robinson would like to put the buildings up at shopping centers, he admitted that this would not always be possible. The first one will go on some land owned by the school department.

Automation in libraries: processing & cataloging

Reports of new automation projects indicate the impact of the new technology in scattered libraries. The Library of Congress is trying out an automated processing system. Others are switching from cumbersome book catalogs to cheaper, space saving alternatives: a Michigan system is preparing a computer output microfilm union catalog; the Salt Lake County Library System is going the online catalog route.

•Automated inventory control at LC: The Library of Congress has contracted with Identicon Corporation (Franklin, Massachusetts) for optical scanning hardware for use in LC's new processing system. Identicon's Model 600 bar code scanning products will enable LC staffers to keep track of the location of the 1000-odd titles processed daily by monitoring each bar-coded book as it travels from station to station in LC's processing network. The inventory control system, which will be installed and maintained by IBM, consists of a network of 98 Identicon "light pen" or optical wand stations; ten Identicon Model 635 Multiplex decoders (each capable of monitoring 16 individual "light pen" stations); and a central IBM System 7 computer to interpret and report information supplied by the decoders.

•Michigan's first COM catalog: The Raisin Valley Library System reports the installation at library locations in Monroe and Lenawee counties of a computer output microfilm (COM) union catalog—the first phase of a project to put all the holdings of the three-county system on COM. The California firms, Information Design (Menlo Park) and Inovar Inc. (Los Altos Hills), designed the catalog program and hardware (ROM II Readers). Raisin Valley claims its project is the first public library use of the COM catalog in Michigan. The public will get instruction in the use of the automated catalog, which will be updated quarterly to include the 19,000 odd titles added by RVLS members each year. The system reports that COM will greatly reduce cataloging costs and also solve space problems. (The Fairfax County Public Library, Springfield, Virginia, claims that its new COMCAT—Computer Output Microfilm Catalog—will cost only one-fifth as much to maintain as a totally cumulated book catalog).

•Salt Lake County goes the online catalog route: The Salt Lake County Li-

With our Learning Resource System you can add 6,000 Volumes To Your Library

And save nearly $70,000

This comprehensive book collection on ultrafiche is ideal for small academic libraries which need to expand their holdings for accreditation, or to meet the growing needs of students engaged in individual study. At an average of $2 per volume, the Learning Resource System provides in-depth coverage of five fundamental disciplines: Science and Technology, Political Science and Government, American Civilization, Social Sciences, and Literature and Humanities.

Most titles have been validated by at least two—and often many more—recognized standard subject bibliographies.

You can acquire the entire 2,500 title (6,000 volume) collection, with reader/printer and a complete set of LC catalog cards, for just $12,000. For selective acquisition, the collection is available in sections of 250 or 500 titles at a slightly higher price per volume.

By comparison, cloth-bound reprints, if available, would cost you more than $50,000. Add the cost of cataloging, shelving, and floor space (typically $30,000) and you can realize savings for the whole LRS collection in the neighborhood of $70,000.

In addition to cost savings, you'll find your patrons also benefit with the Learning Resource System. Each ultrafiche is a self-contained collection, with as many as ten titles on one topic. In researching atomic structure, for example, students quickly locate the reference they need, along with material on wave mechanics, quantum mechanics, and theory of matter.

The touch of a button produces a hard copy of any page for students to use as they wish—eliminating the problems of torn or defaced books.

To learn more about how the Learning Resource System can bring important research works to your faculty and students, please clip and mail the coupon, or call Information Handling Services directly.

Information Handling Services
Library and Education Division
Denver Technological Center, 5500 South Valentia Way, Englewood, CO 80110, Telephone (303) 771-2600

TO: Information Handling Services, Library and Education Division
Denver Technological Center, 5500 South Valentia Way
Englewood, CO 80110
(303) 771-2600

☐ I'd like to see the Learning Resource System. Have your representative call for an appointment.

☐ Send more information about The Learning Resource System.

Name_____

Title_____

Institution_____

Address_____

City_____

State/Zip_____

Telephone_____

brary System (Utah) is trying out an online catalog. It will start out with a book catalog cumulated by Xerox computers. SLCLS will send new acquisitions information to Xerox for entry into the computer and development of a master for a book catalog that will be made available in all the library's departments and reissued every three months. Eventually all information will go online, and both card and book catalogs will pass into oblivion.

•Typewriters vs. photocopiers: A study run at the Lynnfield Public Library (Massachusetts) found that the typewriter can do in 40 minutes the duplicating of catalog cards (to produce added entries for 24 titles) which takes 90 minutes on the photocopying machine.

Notable books adult list issued by ALA

The American Library Association released at its Midwinter meeting the 1975 list of Notable Books for Adults—titles selected for excellence by a 12-member Notable Books Council. Members named to the 1975 Council were: Jerome K. Corrigan, (Prince George's County Memorial Library, Maryland); Robert Cayton, (Marietta Bethlehem Public Library, Ohio); Robert Donahugh (The Public Library of Youngstown and Mahoning County, Ohio); Elizabeth Egan (Helen M. Plum Memorial Library, Lombard, Illinois); Lyn Hart (Enoch Pratt Free Library, Baltimore); Jane K. Hirsch (Montgomery County Public Library, Rockville, Maryland); Joan Hoagland (Cleveland Public Library); Phyllis Levine (Santa Clara County Library, San Jose, California); Inalea Mullen (Tulsa City-County Library, Oklahoma); Martha Reynolds (Frederick County Public Libraries, Maryland); Ross Stephen (William Rainey Harper College, Palatine, Illinois); and Dorothy Snowden, consultant for ALA's publication, The Booklist.

Notable books of 1975 included: Global Reach; the Power of the Multi-National Corporation by Richard J. Barnet (S. & S.); The Three Marias: New Portuguese Letters by Maria Isabel Barreno, Maria Teresa Horta, and Maria Velno da Costa (Doubleday); Humboldt's Gift by Saul Bellow (Viking Pr.); Slaves without Masters: the Free Negro in the Antebellum South by Ira Berlin (Pantheon); The Morality of Consent by Alexander M. Bickel (Yale Univ. Pr.); Looking on Darkness by Andre P. Brink (Morrow); Coming To by Alan Brody (Berkley/Putnam); Against Our Will by Susan Brownmiller (S. & S.); The War Against the Jews: 1933-1945 by Lucy S. Davidowicz (Holt); Ragtime by E. L. Doctorow (Random); The Realms of Gold by Margaret Drabble (Knopf); Washington Journal: the Events of 1973-74 by Elizabeth Drew (Random); All the Strange Hours: Excavations of a Life by Loren Eiseley (Scribners); 1977: Year of Illusions by Thomas Fleming (Norton); Gettysburg: a Journey in Time by William A. Frassanito (Scribners); and Who Shall Live? Health, Economics and Social Choice by Victor Fuchs (Basic Bks.).

Also named: Money: Whence It Came, Where It Went by John Kenneth Galbraith (Houghton); The Shattered Mind: the Person after Brain Damage by Howard Gardner (Knopf); Here at the New Yorker by Brendan Gill (Random); Slammer by Ben Greer (Atheneum); Anna by Dagfinn Gronoset (Knopf); A Sorrow Beyond Dreams: a Life Story by Peter Handke (Farrar); The Architecture of the Arkansas Ozarks by Donald Harington (Little); The House of Medici: Its Rise and Fall by Christopher Hibbert (Morrow); Lamy of Santa Fe: His Life and Times by Paul Horgan (Farrar); The Years of MacArthur: V. II, 1941-1945 by James D. Clayton (Houghton); WW II: a Chronicle of Soldiering by James Jones (Grosset); The Silent Clowns by Walter Kerr (Knopf); The First Casualty; from the Crimea to Vietnam: the War Correspondent as Hero, Propagandist, and Myth Maker by Phillip Knightly (Harcourt); Edith Wharton, a Biography by R. W. B. Lewis (Harper); and Far Tortuga: a Novel by Peter Matthiessen (Random).

Also picked: Meeting at Postdam by Charles L. Mee (Evans); The Gentle Tasaday: a Stone Age People in the Philippine Rain Forest by John Nance (Harcourt); I Wouldn't Have Missed It: Selected Poems of Ogden Nash by Ogden Nash, ed. by Linell Smith and Isabel Eberstadt (Little); Our Kind of People by Bill Owens (Straight Arrow); Robert Louis Stevenson by James Pope-Hennessey (S. & S.); Sylvia Porter's Money Book by Sylvia Porter (Doubleday); Looking for Mr. Goodbar by Judith Rossner (S. & S.); A Division of the Spoils by Paul Scott (Morrow); Pueblo/Mountain, Village, Dance by Vincent Scully (Viking Pr.); The Life of Emily Dickinson, 2 vols. by Richard B. Sewall (Farrar); The Awful Rowing Toward God by Anne Sexton (Houghton); The Chicken Book by Page Smith and Charles Daniel (Little); Minamata by Eugene W. & Aileen M. Smith (Holt); W. H. Auden: a Tribute ed. by Stephen Spender (Macmillan); The Great Railway Bazaar: by Train through Asia by Paul Theroux (Houghton); The Eden Express by Mark Vonnegut (Praeger); Samuel Johnson by John Wain (Viking Pr.); and Beyond the Bedroom Wall; a Family Album by Larry Woiwode (Farrar).

Black books supplement offered free to libraries

The Black Scholar: Journal of Black Studies and Research will feature in its April 1976 issue the first of two special supplements to be published annually. Each supplement will list new black titles and current black-related offerings of major U.S. publishers, plus a "Black Books Round-Up" feature in which outstanding black books of the current publishing year are reviewed.

Black Scholar offers its supplement free to libraries. To get single copies, write The Black Scholar, P.O. Box 908, Sausalito, Calif. 94965.

ARLIS/NA publishing awards

Art Libraries Society/North America has announced the winners of its publishing awards for 1975. The top prize went to the University of Chicago Press for The Prints of Rockwell Kent ($32.50) by Dan Burne Jones. Abrams copped an honorable mention for "their efforts in 1975 toward improving the physical format and design of their art book trade" via such important monographs as Brancusi: the Sculpture and Drawings ($37.50) by Sidney Geist.

NLA newsletter launched

The National Librarians Association, an organization that was established recently because a group of librarians felt that existing library associations do not sufficiently address the needs of the library professional, has started publishing a quarterly newsletter. The NLA Newsletter costs $1 for single copies; $10 for subscriptions to 12 issues. To get on the mailing list, contact Peter Dollard, Editor, Monteith Library, Alma College, Alma, Mich. 48801.

Theft via stolen identification

Librarians in the U.S. and Toronto have been warned about a new form of theft—hundreds of dollars worth of records and books taken out either on stolen cards or on cards issued to persons presenting driver's licenses lifted from stolen wallets. The Salt Lake County Library System is trying to combat such theft: it has urged library staffers to ask for identification (preferably with photograph) other than a library card "should a patron appear suspicious."

Puzzles for the visually impaired

Large-print puzzles: John Curley Associates (P.O. Box 37, Yarmouth South, Mass. 02664) announces Large Print Crossword Puzzles in a variety of subscription packages.

Britain's Library Association plots reorganization

The (British) Library Association has been conducting a series of studies (the first was started back in 1971) in a major move towards overhauling the association; a recent issue of the Library Association Record reports progress to date. The (British) Library Association's efforts in charting new directions are similar to reorganization initiatives under discussion in recent years within the American Library Association, and are thus of interest to the library community at large.

The present structure of the association, reports Norman Horrocks of Dalhousie University School of Library Service, resembles that of the Special Libraries Association. On the Council are: the president, president-elect, vice president, chairman of council, and elected councillors, representing London, the "country", special interest groups, branches, and the Association of Assistant Librarians. The branches, he said, are geographical divisions; groups and sections represent types of libraries and special interest groups.

Pegged by the British LA as one incentive for the reorganization: "current developments in the national economy are seriously undermining the whole financial basis of the Association . . . unless some fairly drastic action is taken, it may be necessary to seriously restrict the range of activities of the Association."

On the whole, the final report on the reorganization of the (British) Library Association proposes major changes in its management stucture and the relationship between the Council and the branches and groups. Among specific recommendations made:

- The Council should play a stronger role in the development of policy—plotting major objectives and coming up with plans for achieving them; it should assume more responsibility in administrative matters and monitor the performance of the association. Council membership should be expanded; the Association President should chair Council meetings; and the office of Chairman of Council should be discontinued.
- The Secretariat should assume wider administrative responsibility and accountability—functioning as a management body instead of in its former role as a group subservient to committees and other groupings.
- The number of departmental divisions should be reduced to a minimum.
- There should be improved provision for cooperation between the Council and the branches and groups: "groups . . . with a membership of 2000 or more should be entitled to nominate a representative to the Professional Development Committee or the Library Service Committee or the General Purposes Committee." A proposal for the abolition of the branches was scrapped, incidentally, on the grounds that "the branches . . . provide the only opportunity for local professional activity that cuts across the boundary of specialization, and that no kind of coordinating committee could satisfactorily fill that role."
- The development of new groups and sections should not be hindered because "even small groups attract persons into membership of the associa-

Reach for this new information source on books and media and start saving valuable selection and ordering time

Demco's comprehensive new Books and Media Catalog puts more than 65,000 titles for children and young adults at your fingertips for fast, easy selection and ordering. Actually five catalogs in one:

- 36,000 Hardcover titles.
- 4,500 Perma-Bound® titles.
- 3,000 Paperback titles.
- 20,000 AV titles from over 100 producers.
- Complete list of Periodicals.

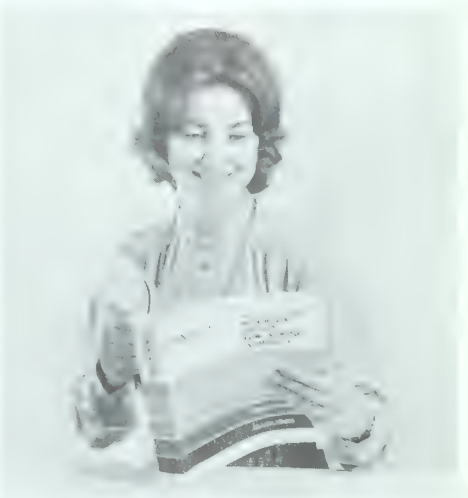
To help you check your collection for the latest titles, the Favorably Reviewed and best-sellers from April 1974 through September 1975 are listed under Dewey Decimal Classifications (subject-organized). Listings have full ordering information, including review sources when applicable. All 65,000 titles are also organized alphabetically by title.

And when you order, you are assured of prompt service and high fill rate, because Demco stocks more than 400,000 books and media.



If you don't already have your copy of this time-saving new catalog, mail this coupon today.

Elementary Secondary

Mail to: Demco, Box 1488, Dept. C43
Madison, Wis. 53701

Name _____

Title _____

School or Library _____

Address _____

City _____

State _____ Zip _____

DEMCO

Books and Media for Young America

Demco Educational Corp., Madison, Wis., Fresno, Cal., Book Div., Paramus, N.J.

tion who would otherwise see no purpose in joining. Conversely, the refusal to recognize specialist interests inside the Association would inevitably lead to an increase in the number of librarians' organizations outside it."

• Confidence that the earlier tendency of the association to develop into a federation has been overcome, and consequently the concept of a single unified profession of librarianship is no longer in question. This points to the need for a greater emphasis on the mutuality of interest of members of the profession than has been the case within the existing structure. Strong standing committees are needed to deal with the interests of types of libraries and to insure that all substantial groups have representation at policy-making levels. Recommended are four major standing committees which would address: the development of professional standards, career opportunities, library standards, and conditions of employment for librarians. The current review finds that "there is little justification for the continuation of central standing committees concerned specifically with Public Libraries, Special Libraries, and National Academic and Medical Libraries."

ALA Nominating Committee solicits candidates

In what could be interpreted as a response to criticism voiced at ALA-Midwinter about the selection of official candidates for ALA Vice President, President-elect, and Councilors, ALA's 1976/77 Nominating Committee has asked the membership to suggest their own candidates for these elective offices. One indication of disenchantment by the ALA membership with the Nominating Committee's choices: the increasing number of petition candidates put in the running each year. But at ALA-Midwinter, there was a strong move to change nominating procedures—one aimed at making it harder to get nominated by petitions. The proposal would have eliminated nominations by any ten Councilors and increasing from 100 to 300 signatures for petition candidates. But this proposal was tabled.

ALA's Nominating Committee is asking for suggestions for the top ALA posts and councilors. Members are asked to fill out a form, listing their candidate's qualifications: ALA participation; activities in state, regional, and other associations; and additional professional contributions, including published works. The Committee notes that its form includes "no question relating to degree qualifications."

Nomination forms are available from any member of the 1976/77 Nominating Committee. Among them: Jovana Brown (Evergreen State College, Olympia, Wash. 98505); Peggy O'Donnell (SLICE Director, 7371 Paldao Dr., Dallas, Tex. 75240); Lillian Shapiro (University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich. 48109); Rose Vainstein (University of Michigan School of Library Science); and James R. Wright (Phillis Wheatley Community Library, Rochester Public Library, 13 Bronson Ave., Rochester, N.Y. 14608).

Md. library clerks seek parity with liquor clerks

The disparity in salaries made by Montgomery County library clerks and liquor store clerks is the basis for a sex discrimination complaint recently filed with the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission in an effort to force the county to pay library clerks "equal pay for equal work." The suit, filed by two library clerks, alleges that library clerical workers who have put in 16 years of service only make $12,500 a year, while liquor store workers are getting about $15,200. The basis for the sex discrimination charge: the liquor clerks (all but one of 75) are men; the library clerks (all but four of 57) are women.

Complainant Trueheart C. Lindley ticked off her duties: supervision of other clerical workers, cataloging, checking out books, and helping library users. The liquor clerks, says a Washington Post account, keep the shelves stocked and handle cash sales. The library clerks had tried unsuccessfully last year to get the County Personnel Department to upgrade their salaries. Personnel Director Ronald Lloyd said recently that the fact that liquor store clerks were required to handle cash and to do some heavy physical work was partially responsible for their higher salaries.

ALA Preconference to air pro & nonpro work roles

Work roles of both nonprofessionals and professionals will be the topic of a one-day ALA Preconference slated for July 17 in Chicago; the Council on Library Technical-Assistants is sponsoring the meet, which will consist of five concurrent sessions (by type of library)—each led by a professional and nonprofessional library staffer. "Discussion will center around how people perceive their roles in public, special, government, medical, school, and academic libraries as professionals or nonprofessionals; and what they would like to see changed."

Contact: Margaret Barron, Cuyahoga Community College, 3900 Community College Ave., Cleveland, Ohio 44105.

Library Certification Exam slated in New York

An examination for Public Librarian's Professional Certification for New York State is slated for September 11, 1976 for candidates having a library degree from an undergraduate program, a foreign school, or a graduate library school that is not accredited by the American Library Association. Librarians need public librarian provisional (valid for beginning level positions) or professional (valid for higher level Civil Service positions) certifications to get a job in New York.

The application filing deadline is August 27. Contact: Alice L. Britenbaker, Division of Library Development, State Education Department, 99 Washington Ave., Albany, N.Y. 12230.

Volunteers run libraries, work for Peace Corps

In recent years, financially-pressed libraries have been relying more heavily upon volunteers to help salaried professionals provide top-notch library service; they are now starting to count on volunteers to run the whole show.

The Washington State Library reports the opening of two libraries which will be manned completely by volunteers. They're in charge of the Washington County Cooperative Library Service's new storefront library in Tanasbourne. The new library, which occupies space donated by Standard Insurance (developers of the town center complex), houses about 4000 volumes (purchased with LSCA funds and donations), and will serve residents formerly without access to a public library or the Books-By-Mail service. Volunteers will also run the new Cedar Mill Community Library, occupying rented space in the Milltowner Shopping Center. The Cedar Mill Community Library Association raised money to build a collection of 8000 volumes; the library is expected to serve about 25,000 residents.

Librarians are still volunteering for the Peace Corps, and there seems to be a trend toward their functioning as experts in the development of specialized information services. One such volunteer is Christine Peterson of New Richmond, Wisconsin. She's in Monrovia, Liberia developing indexing for documents on rice cultivation for the West Africa Rice Development Association, where she went after getting her master's in library science at the University of Minnesota.

One reading list of use to any library considering the use of volunteers is a new annotated bibliography, Suggested Readings on Voluntarism. It's available for 75¢ from Warner Eddison Associates, Box 254, Lexington, Mass. 02173.

Volunteers for ethnic workshop

ALA's Social Responsibilities Round Table Task Force/Ethnic Materials solicits volunteers to help run a multi-ethnic workshop slated for July 22, during ALA's Annual Conference in Chicago. It wants resource people with experience in developing ethnic collections and programming for minority member groups. The contact person is David Cohen, Coordinator, 68-71 Bell Blvd., Bayside, N.Y. 11364; telephone (212) 229-1510.

Appeal from ALA women's group

Elizabeth Dickinson of the Hennepin County Library (Minnesota) has sent in this appeal for suggestions: "The Ad Hoc Committee to draft general guidelines for an American Library Association Standing Committee on the Status of Women in Librarianship in the U.S.A. would appreciate suggestions on specific areas of involvement appropriate to such a standing committee." Send suggestions to Dickinson, Technical Services Division, Hennepin County Library, 7001 York Ave. South, Edina, Minn. 55435.

THE LIBRARY DOLLAR

Mass. state aid threat; SFPL faces new $$ battle

Reports from Massachusetts and San Francisco tell of efforts by both state and local government to slash library support. If the governor wins out in his latest cutback try, state aid to Massachusetts libraries and regional systems could drop ten percent. San Francisco city fathers are trying to get the library to cut expenditures to the bone, but they're getting stiff resistance from SFPL Director Kevin Starr. And New York's Buffalo & Erie County Library faces the loss of more staff; the county wants all job vacancies frozen.

• State aid threat in Massachusetts: Mary Spillane of the Massachusetts Bureau of Library Extension reports that cutbacks in state aid to libraries—proposed by the governor in his budget message—could result in losses in Library Services and Construction Act funding, which last year totaled $1,251,648. The governor wants the legislature to okay a ten percent cut to $1,944,028 in local library aid and to $2,310,284 for the regional library systems. He has recommended a five percent boost for the state library ($493,047), but no increase for the Bureau of Library Extension, which stays at last year's level of $296,445. Says Spillane, the cuts "jeopardize the maintenance of effort provisions of LSCA," and the Bureau "will be reduced to a 'housekeeping agency'." If LSCA funds are lost, she says, 20 positions will be terminated and programs for the elderly, the disadvantaged, and ethnic communities will be curtailed. Bureau Chief Charles Joyce told LJ the Bureau

SOUND/ MOTION
INSTA-LOAD 16MM
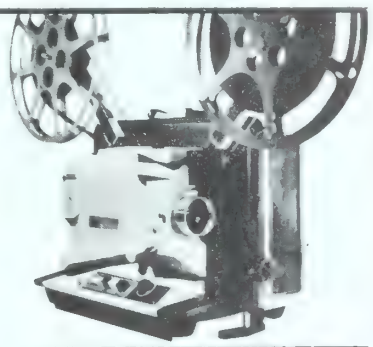
Instant loading, pushbutton controlled, foolproof in the classroom.



SOUND/ FILMSTRIP
AUTO-VANCE FILMSTRIP
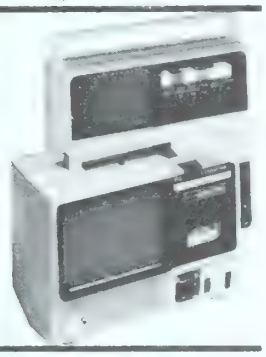
Synchronized sight & sound for individual instruction.



SOUND/ SLIDE
CARAMATE II SLIDE
The most versatile rear-screen sound/ slide projector of its kind, record and playback.

SATISFY YOUR PROJECTION REQUIREMENTS WITH SINGER QUALITY AND DEPENDABILITY

The Singer continuing quest for quality means Singer projectors are tailored to meet modern audiovisual methods. This continuing search is exemplary of the many advanced performance features that are built into Singer projectors. Many are audiovisual "firsts." Each is a practical contribution to educational versatility. Each is a contribution to the continuing process of making Singer... and quality audiovisual products ...a synonomous thought.

SINGER
EDUCATION DIVISION

Education Systems
3750 Monroe Avenue
Rochester, New York 14603

trademarks of THE SINGER COMPANY

How Demco's wide book selection, competitive pricing, quality processing and prompt delivery help Leslie Goetzfried

Leslie Goetzfried, Library Media Specialist at Westlake Village School, Broomfield, Colorado, needed a dependable source for books. She says:

"I turned to Demco because of their large selection. I was very satisfied with the prompt delivery, the careful processing, the high discount rate, and the helpful sales representative."

Demco's unique Favorably Reviewed program, broad inventory and high fill rate can help you get your K-12 books when you need them. Processing is still only 69¢ per book, competitive discounts are available, and delivery is free on orders of 251 books or more.

Next time you order books, depend on Demco.

Fast selection and ordering with Demco's new books and media information source. Write today for your free copy of the new 1976 Demco Books and Media Catalog, with more than 65,000 Hardcover, Perma-Bound, Paperback and AV titles. Demco Box 1488 Dept A43 Madison, Wis. 53701 Please indicate Elementary or Secondary Catalog is organizing a lobbying effort aimed at convincing legislators to say no to the governor's cutback requests—as it did successfully last year.

DEMCO

Books and Media for Young America

Demco Educational Corp. Madison, Wis., Fresno, Cal Book Div., Paramus, N.J.

• SFPL girds for another $$ battle: In a letter to Mayor George Moscone, San Francisco Public Library Director Kevin Starr has flatly rejected a demand by the new city administration calling for the slashing of library expenditures. Starr declared that he'll "ask for funding significantly higher than SFPL's current budget" instead of cutting back. Moscone had informed Starr that he would not give budget approval to "any new program, any increase in the level of expenditures, or any new position unless it is proven cost-effective." Current spending and existing positions, said the mayor, would also be nixed unless SFPL could prove that programs requiring such expenditures are "necessary . . . and efficiently operated." He wants SFPL to establish its "functional priorities . . . [via mandatory] public hearings."

Director Starr made the following points in arguing against budget slashing:

—"Even the complete elimination of the entire library system would save the city less than one percent of its total budget . . . Urban cities in the U.S. spend an average of two percent of their budgets to provide public library service [while] San Francisco has never spent more than one percent."

—SFPL has "received no city funds for equipment in eight years . . . facilities are in an advanced state of disrepair due to deferred maintenance. We do not now receive sufficient funds for materials and supplies to make efficient use of our staff and facilities."

—"Further cuts in the book budget (currently $650,000) would eliminate any pretense that San Francisco is going to provide library service. Comparable library systems provide their citizens with an average of 3.16 books per capita," but the average for San Francisco is 1.86 books per capita.

—Comparable library systems are staffed by an average of 6.64 librarians and clerical workers per 10,000 population served, but SFPL (which lost 15 positions last year) has a staff average of only 3.41. The loss of additional staff would force branch closings and the elimination of services. But the closing of branches would result in minimal savings.

Summing up, Starr said "the library system will not be run effectively or efficiently until the city is willing to provide the necessary equipment and supplies, facilities and books."

• Job freeze in Buffalo & Erie County: New York's Buffalo & Erie County Library reports that the county has come up with a plan for paring the library's 1976 budget by $500,000: it expects to save $316,000 by freezing all job vacancies; $39,000 through layoffs; and $145,000 by reducing part-time help. At year's end, the county government had forced the library to furlough all part timers—an action that led to the closing of Central temporarily. A reduction in the part-time work force now in effect has led to reductions in hours of service at several of BECPL's branches. One way of coping: transfers of personnel are seen as one means of coping with increasing numbers of full-time vacancies.

New LSCA Title V draft proposed by ULC

ALA's reluctance to back its proposed revision of the Library Services and Construction Act has prompted the Urban Library Council to issue yet another draft of a new LSCA Title V. The new legislation would establish federal responsibility for aiding large public libraries directly by means of grants to the states; each state library administrative agency would distribute such funding on an equal per capita basis to urban libraries serving cities with a population over 100,000. The funds would be used only for buying books and related library materials. And a provision would bar use of the money to reduce local support; the state library agency would withhold federal funding if local aid drops below the average sum for the three years immediately preceding the grant.

The draft language for the proposal was prepared by Alex Ladenson of the Chicago Public Library. One directory's statistics listed some 150 U.S. cities in the 100,000 plus population bracket.

If ALA gives the LSCA Title V draft its blessing, ULC will try for Congressional approval in 1977.

Canadian gov't puts up $$ for library book buying

The National Library of Canada reports that its Multilingual Biblioservice—a government-funded project that was launched last year—is getting multicultural books to local libraries. Since March of 1975, some 11,000 books in eight languages (Chinese, Dutch, German, Italian, Polish, Portuguese, Spanish, and Ukrainian) were sent to 23 provincial and regional library centers for subsequent distribution to area public libraries. But a staff shortage coupled with rising acquisitions costs is holding back circulation: the number of volumes actually delivered in 1975 was only one third of the total requested.

Canada's Biblioservice has a staff of 11 full-time workers plus a few short-term specialists—a crew responsible not only for the processing of requests but also for the addition of other language collections. The goal is to get into circulation collections in 72 languages. In its second year of operation, the Biblioservice will build nine new language collections, including Arabic, Finnish, Gaelic, Hungarian, Icelandic, Maltese, Swedish, Greek, and Russian.

Student wage hike forces cuts at B.C. library

Wage gains won by the union representing student assistants employed by the University of British Columbia Library will wipe out the library's budget increase and force cutbacks in hours of service and book buying. The Association of University and College Employees, Local I ironed out a union contract boosting the hourly pay scale for student assistants from $2.50 to $4.16. The university library is the largest single employer of student assistants: last year it spent $351,000 for 140,386 working hours (which would cost $584,000 under the new wage rate). In efforts to cut costs, the university has announced that its new budget will allow for only 84,336 working hours by student assistants—a 40 percent cutback.

Other cutbacks slated: hours of access during the fall and spring sessions will be cut by ten percent; book buying will be curtailed and the moratorium on new periodical subscriptions will be continued (new subscriptions cannot be placed unless a periodical of equal monetary value is cancelled); and staff vacancies will be frozen. Special service cutbacks announced: UBC's MEDLINE terminal (set up in the Woodward Library) will be shut down if financial support cannot be found, and the Crane Library for the Blind and Visually Handicapped will eliminate on-demand recording service to other post-secondary educational institutions in the province.

Liquor tax proposal asks new $$ for W.Va. libraries

West Virginia Governor Arch Moore has announced his support of a proposal to put some 50 percent of the gross profits of the state's sales of liquor into public library funding. If the constitutional amendment makes it through the House and Senate, it will go on the November ballot for a decision by the voters. If the voters favor this referendum item, the state's library funding commitment could increase from the present $3.6 million to $10 million—funding to be handled by the State Library Commission (Frederick Glazer, director) and passed out for library construction, equipment, and per capita support as determined by the Commission.

The proposal could face stiff opposition. Although the governor may have won supporters in the hollows with the "instant library" program, he and the Republicans are still a tiny minority. Another possible roadblock: no legislature is likely to give up its main prerogative easily—deciding where state funds should go. On the other side, a strong pitch could be made to the voters to demand that their legislators let them have a chance to vote on how their taxes are to be spent.

The idea of channeling sales tax dollars to libraries is not unique; Massachusetts has for years had on the books a law that funnels dog tax money (locally levied) into public library support. The state level emphasis of the West Virginia gambit is new, however, and whether successful or not, the West Virginia push for this new kind of state support is in phase with the developing future of libraries and state agencies which regulate and—maybe—support them.

ANNOUNCING THE AVAILABILITY ON 35MM MICROFILM FROM RESEARCH PUBLICATIONS, INC. OF

CURRENT AND BACKFILE ISSUES OF THESE TIMES NEWSPAPERS OF LONDON

THE SUNDAY TIMES

T·L·S
THE TIMES LITERARY SUPPLEMENT

THE TIMES
Educational Supplement

THE TIMES
Higher Education
SUPPLEMENT

Current microfilm subscription prices are:

THE SUNDAY TIMES	$145.00
THE TIMES LITERARY SUPPLEMENT	$ 35.00
THE TIMES EDUCATIONAL SUPPLEMENT	$100.00
THE TIMES HIGHER EDUCATION SUPPLEMENT	$ 35.00

Prices for backfiles are available on request: THE SUNDAY TIMES from 1822; THE TIMES LITERARY SUPPLEMENT from 1902; THE TIMES EDUCATIONAL SUPPLEMENT from 1910; and THE TIMES HIGHER EDUCATION SUPPLEMENT from 1972 (and two months of 1971).

Bibliographic access is provided by THE TIMES INDEX which, from 1973, encompasses the supplements as well as THE SUNDAY TIMES.

Orders and inquiries from North America should be directed to:

rp
research publications, inc.
12 Lunar Drive Woodbridge, CT. 06525

Orders may also be placed by calling collect to (203) 397-2600.
All others see NADL address below.

In addition, write for information on microfilm editions (both current and backfiles) of LE MONDE of Paris, France; THE DAILY TELEGRAPH and THE SUNDAY TELEGRAPH of London, England; and THE SCOTSMAN of Edinburgh.

Orders and inquiries outside of North America may be directed to:
Newspaper Archive Developments Limited
Post Office Box 4013
Amity Station
New Haven, Connecticut 06525

Human rights, Chinese films, belly dancing

Libraries are trying to attract the attention of potential patrons with such varied programs as a skiing hotline (St. Louis Public Library), training sessions on do-it-yourself electrical work and weight loss (Milwaukee County Federated Library System), and Spanish cooking lessons (Lake County Public Library, Indiana).

• Individual & community rights: The Utah Endowment for the Humanities has put up funding for a high-powered series of programs aimed at generating discussion in the state on individual and community rights, society's concepts of such rights, and how these concepts relate to access to information and the right to a humane environment. The Salt Lake City Public Library will run the 12-part series of lectures, seminars, and panel discussions; six programs will be videotaped by SLCPL and will be made available to interested individuals or organizations in the state. Specific topics and guest speakers include: Paul Mishkin (University of California-Berkeley), the philosophical roots of society's concept of rights; Glenn Vernon (University of Utah), the religious justification of rights; Richard Darling (Columbia library school), access to information; Nicholas Johnson (Access publisher), mass communication; Judith Krug (ALA Intellectual Freedom Office), censorship; Author Vance Packard, information gathering; Architect Peter Blake, a humane environment; and Peter Grundfossen (Salt Lake County Government Study Commission), the inner city. The library also plans to present a series of documentary films exploring individual and community rights.

• Chinese films: The Baltimore County Public Library recently aired a series of Chinese films, which it acquired through the Embassy of the Republic of China; the library also had on display an exhibit of contemporary Chinese brush paintings.

• Job services: New York's Onondaga County Public Library will set up a job information center with LSCA money; one system member (the Solvay Public Library) already has a job service for youngsters—it alerts them to baby-sitting jobs.

• Career guidance: The St. Louis Public Library is helping residents cope with the tight job market via career opportunity centers—set up in its bookmobile as well as two branches. Each has equipment for the viewing of filmstrips on vocational opportunities, new careers, and money management.

• Belly dancing: The University of Utah's Marriott Library is the latest to try to draw a crowd with a demonstration of belly dancing; "Zinaida" recently showed her craft and explained how to use this form of dance in meditation, enticement, and weight loss.

• Videotape in Milwaukee: The Milwaukee County Federated Library System reports that its videotape collection, which opened to public use in December of 1975, now contains over 550 videocassette programs; central and all system members have players and TV sets for program viewing. Among the programs on cassette: consumer survival, weight control, breast cancer, black cultural programs, high school equivalency exam review courses, energy, and films like Mark Twain's America.

FREE BUYING GUIDE FOR LIBRARY ADHESIVES

10 tapes and 4 glues especially for libraries! Order from Section A of our '75-6 catalog, send in the coupon below or call Customer Service.

Josten's LIBRARY SERVICES DIVISION
1301 Cliff Road, Burnsville MN 55337
800-328-2980 TOLL FREE

☐ Please send me your buying guide for glues and tapes

☐ Check here if you do not have our '75-6 Library Supplies Catalog and we will send you one.

Name _____

Library _____

Address _____

City _____

State _____ Zip _____

Outreach service via headsets, radio, mailbooks

Libraries are offering special services to the handicapped and the institutionalized: mailbooks for inmates, radio broadcasts for the blind, and learning kits for deaf kids are among them.

• Special headsets & talking books: Virginia's Prince William County Public Library makes available to the hearing impaired "Washington Ear" receiver sets—enabling them to listen to daily readings from metropolitan newspapers. The library has also started circulating talking books.

• Learning kits for the hearing impaired: Maryland's Prince George's County Memorial Library System has put into circulation a series of learning kits designed for use with the hearing impaired or deaf child.

• Radio broadcasts for the blind: The State Library Commission of Utah has launched a program of special radio broadcasts of readings for the blind and physically handicapped. FM stations of Brigham Young University and the University of Utah are involved. Handicapped patrons will get special radio receivers from the Division for the Blind and Physically Handicapped.

• Hardware for the visually handicapped: Of interest to libraries providing specialized service to the handicapped is a list of the many devices the Crane Library at the University of British Columbia makes available to visually handicapped patrons. Among them: Braille slates, Braille writers, Tellatouch (for the deaf-blind), audible calculators, a calculator enlarging lens, a compass to produce raised lines, Braille protractors, Braille rulers, a Sewell Drawing Board, a Taylor Arithmetic Slate, magnifiers, plastic letter aids to writing, an Optacon to convert print to felt vibrations, print letter sheets, a visual display to use with the Optacon—enabling a sighted person to monitor what the blind person is "seeing" by touch, a Visualtek to enlarge print in a video-like display, cassettes, including reduced speed models, a SPELLEX typing terminal hooked up to the campus computer, and others. The list was compiled by Reference Librarian Judith Thiele; UBC is at (604) 228-2373.

• Mailbook service to jails: The Salt Lake County Library System is getting books to county jail inmates via its Mail-A-Book service. About 150 books—selected by inmates from Mail-a-Book catalogs provided—go out every two weeks.

COOPERATION

New York eyes possible statewide systems upgrading

At a recent meeting in Farmingdale, Long Island, representatives of the New York Division of Library Development met with librarians from public, school, academic, and special libraries; library system people; educators; and legislators from Suffolk and Nassau Counties. The meeting was called to initiate discussion leading to a task force study on system development in the two counties—a major step towards achieving greater regionalization and more effective delivery of service in Long Island, New York. The forthcoming study could yield important lessons having possible implications statewide.

Commenting on the study, Deputy Commissioner of Education John Humphry told LJ that the task force will be looking at all aspects of library organization and service configurations. In the offing could be more active coordination of libraries of all types and of the several established network organizations already in operation in New York (New York State Inter-Library Loan, NYSILL; Board of Cooperative Educational Services, BOCES; 3R's for sharing research resources; the many public library systems; and the libraries of the State University of New York, to mention a few). Humphrey agreed that sizing up new developments in other states (such as California, which is working towards a reorganization of its varied systems) would be within the scope of the task force.

The troubles of the Suffolk Cooperative Library System (which last year faced default because of financial mismanagement as well as a threatened secession of seven well-heeled member libraries that felt they could get better and cheaper service from the neighboring Nassau system) provides only one of several indications that the pioneer New York pattern of public library systems is in need of remodeling to meet today's needs and new financial stringencies. And lending urgency to all such efforts is the proposed national program of the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science, which will demand that all states get their houses in order and ready to participate in national network activities.

Central Colorado system leaves Council of Govts.

The Central Colorado Library System has split from the Denver Regional Council of Governments (DRCOG) and established a separate office (Sidebar), reports System Coordinator Edward Sayre. A new law empowered the system to assume independent fiscal status, with the Denver Public Library "as a new fiscal and administrative support agency." CCLS is now inviting academic, school, and special libraries in the Denver Metropolitan area to join it.

Reasons for the split-up pegged by Sayre: "The plain fact is that the DRCOG tried a power grab on our system. The Library Council resented it and voted to get out. There were other, less dramatic problems with the DRCOG: COG boundaries and representation not coterminous with the system's; political ambitions of the DRCOG not harmonious with system goals; and time and money spent in the COG bureaucracy that diverted staff attention from system business. Our Library Council most emphatically appreciates the importance of regional planning and the purpose of COG's, but, after our experience, I would recommend library systems keep a certain distance."

N.Y.'s intertype library assn.

The newly created Bronx Library Association has announced its intent to promote cooperative interplay among university, school, special, and public libraries of the borough"—one example of a strong move towards intertype cooperation.

LJ PEOPLE

J. DENIER

V. WALTER

JUNE B. ADAMS, formerly Director of the West New York Public Library, New Jersey, is now Director of the Somerset County Library, Somerville, N.J.

DAVID BALATTI, formerly Chief, Canadian Theses Division, Cataloging Branch of the National Library of Canada, Ottawa, is now Chief, Subject Analysis Division, Cataloging Branch of the Library.

ALEXANDER C. CROSMAN, JR., formerly Assistant Director of the Peoria Public Library, Illinois, is now Director.

JAMES DENIER, formerly with the Forest Park Public Library, Illinois, is now Special Services Librarian, North Suburban Library Systems, Morton Grove, Ill.

GLADYS W. JARRETT, formerly acting Chief Librarian, York College, City University of New York, is now Chief Librarian.

MURIEL C. JAVELIN, formerly Interagency Consultant, Nassau Library System, Garden City, New York, is retiring this month after 49 years in librarianship.

THOMAS RAYMOND, formerly Regional Library Consultant, Eastern Europe, U.S. Information Agency, is now USIA Regional Library Consultant, East Asia, Taipei, Taiwan.

LILLIAN WALLIS, formerly Assistant Chief, Technical Services, Minneapolis Public Library and Information Center, Minnesota, is now Chief of Technical Services at the Library.

VIRGINIA WALTER, formerly in charge of the Malabar Branch Library, Los Angeles Public Library, California, is now Regional Librarian, Northeast Region, at the Library.

BENJAMIN WHITTEN, formerly Assistant Professor of Library Science, University of California, is now U.S. Information Agency Regional Library Consultant, East Africa, Nairobi, Kenya.

DANIEL YETT, formerly Acting Director, George Washington University Medical Center Library, D.C., is now U.S. Information Agency Regional Library Consultant, Eastern Europe, Belgrade, Yugoslavia.

This 3M Brand Microfilm Reader/Printer not only makes dry copies from microfilm in seconds.

It can even make you a member of the ALA.

In support of the American Library Association's centennial membership promotion, 3M's Microfilm Products Division is awarding one free personal ALA membership to each library that purchases one or more 3M Brand Microfilm Reader/Printers during the effective period February 15 to May 15, 1976.

Choose from six models: The 500C-EC, 500CT, 500F, 500M, 500-PS, 600.* All our microfilm reader/printers reproduce completely dry copies. All of the chemicals are contained in the paper and developed by heat so there are no chemicals or toners to mix. No mess or fuss.

We salute the AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION 1876-1976

Our Model 500F produces completely dry 8½" x 11" prints in seconds from various size microfiche. And it has interchangeable magnification lenses to handle a variety of microfilm reductions from both source document or COM generated film.

Our 500M features a motorized film drive with variable speed control that lets you scan and view microfilm images ...or speed through 100 feet of film in just seconds.

Our newest model is the 3M Brand 600C Reader/Printer. It has a large 14" x 18" screen that can display two 8½" x 11" documents simultaneously. And it accepts new 3M leaderless Easy Load film cartridges, as well as standard 3M cartridges. Variable print lengths can be produced from 6" to 18" long on either 8½" or 11" width paper.

In addition, all cartridge models are available with an odometer index for use with older, uncoded microfilm materials.

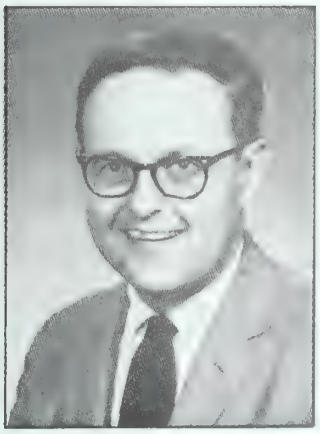
For more information about our reader/printers and free ALA membership offer, contact your local authorized 3M Microfilm Products Sales Representative. Or write: 3M Company, Microfilm Products Division, Library Systems 220-9E, 3M Center, St. Paul, Minn. 55101.

Microfilm Systems 3M COMPANY

*Does not apply to 400 Series

LJ

Public Library Support and Salaries in the Seventies



By Kenneth D. Shearer & Ray L. Carpenter

THIS REPORT continues and updates an investigation into the financial fortunes and misfortunes of contemporary public libraries and librarians in the United States and Canada.[1] The data upon which the report rests were collected for the date January 1, 1975, and specifically refer, as earlier, to public libraries serving areas with populations of 100,000 or more.

Comparable previous financial analyses were made for January 1, 1971 and 1973. Careful, computer-aided analysis of those earlier figures brought forth hard evidence of several trends of general interest in librarianship which we continue to monitor in this article. Earlier findings confirm that female librarians are less likely to become public library administrators, and are paid less than their male counterparts when they do become administrators (both widely suspected facts before we published our figures). Moreover, on average, when females do manage public libraries: 1) newly employed professional librarians—whether male or female—are offered lower salaries, and 2) per capita support of the entire system is lower. Presumably these conditions make it more difficult for women directors to compete for better beginning librarians, and their smaller library budgets lessen the quality and amount of library service they can provide.

There also was evidence in the earlier studies that per capita support of public libraries in Canada and the United States and interregionally within the United States was increasing at markedly different rates. The public libraries of the South, long at the bottom in terms of economic support, showed some evidence of correcting (or beginning to correct) that condition. Canada, with the very notable exception of Montreal, appeared to be exceeding the United States in supporting its public libraries.

The earlier reports also showed that public library budgets, unlike public librarians' salaries, had kept ahead of the erosion caused by the inflation rates experienced in both the United States and Canada. Since our last writing, both countries have suffered in differing degrees from continuing inflation and recession.

The impression from reading the library press in the past two years is that most public libraries have fared badly in their struggle for funding during this period of stagflation. However, the same impression—that most public libraries lost ground during 1971–1973—was discovered to be incorrect in our earlier analysis. As we will see, the findings of this report show that during the past biennium there were hard times for some, but all was not as bleak as expected.

Kenneth D. Shearer is associate professor, School of Library Science, North Carolina Central University, Durham. Ray L. Carpenter is associate professor, School of Library Science, and research associate, Institute for Research in Social Science, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

Current public library support

In fact, on January 1, 1975 per capita support of large public libraries for the United States and Canada as a whole was up $1.30 per person to a total of $5.80 (from $4.50 in 1973 and $3.70 in 1971). This placed the financial support of public libraries a comfortable 29 percent over two years ago and up 57 percent in the past four years. Even after discounting general inflationary pressures, public library support continued to make real advances overall.

While most of the funding decisions affecting the figures were made after the decision-makers were well aware of double digit inflation, some were made before the extent of the severity of the recession was known. We may, in a year or two, see a dip in support reflecting the austerity programs undertaken at the state and local levels most recently. Although coincident dips in public library per capita support and gross national product would be expected according to conventional wisdom as well as some library research, projections are difficult to pinpoint.

Jesse Shera, for example, has written in connection with his historical study of New England public libraries for the period, 1790-1850, "if one were to superimpose upon the graph of library growth in New England. . . a chart of wholesale price fluctuation in that region during the same period, the coincidence would not be perfect but the configurations would be strikingly similar."[2] The experience of libraries during the Great Depression seems to reinforce his observations.

However, Haynes McMullen shows that for Southern libraries before 1976, the number of librarians in existence per 10,000 population and the health of that region did not vary simultaneously. In fact, he concludes an article by noting, in part, that:[3]

> The major depression following the Panic of 1827 caused no diminution in library activity; in fact a mysterious increase took place as the depression got worse. Then the prosperous 1850s show no very large increse [sic] but the ten years after the Civil War, years of poverty and unhappiness on the part of whites, show noticeable increase in the amount of interest in libraries.

Source: Every other year since 1961, the Fort Wayne (Indiana) Public Library, under the directorship of Fred J. Reynolds, has surveyed large public libraries by questionnaire and printed the responses. The current report, entitled "Statistics of Public Libraries in the United States and Canada Serving 100,000 or More, 1975," was compiled by Beth E. Carpenter and Alba M. Shaheen of the library. Below the distribution of responses in 1973 and 1975 are contrasted.

Distribution of Respondents by Geographic Region:

U.S. Regions and Canada	Number of Respondents		Percent of Total
	1973	1975	1973	1975
Northeast	43	31	16%	13%
South	93	78	34%	32%
North Central	63	65	23%	27%
West	58	51	21%	21%
Canada	19	17	7%	7%
Total	276	242	101%*	100%

*Total is greater than 100% because of rounding.

Distribution of Respondents by Size of Population Served:

Size of Population Served	Number of Respondents		Percent of Total
	1973	1975	1973	1975
100,000-199,999	139	107	50%	44%
200,000-399,999	79	72	29%	30%
400,000-749,999	37	41	13%	17%
750,000 and over	21	22	8%	9%
Total	276	242	100%	100%

Distribution of Respondents by Sex of Director:

Sex of Director	Number of Respondents		Percent of Total
	1973	1975	1973	1975
Male	175	166	66%	72%
Female	89	63	34%	28%
Total	264	229	100%	100%*

*Totals differ from those above because some directorships were vacant and some names and all initials do not permit gender identification.

Returning to the 1975 figures, we note that while economic progress for public libraries was scored overall in the past two years, arrangement of the figures according to region and population size reflects other significant trends. In Table 1 observe that from 1973 to 1975 increases in per capita support ranged from 24 to 32 percent in the U.S. regions and Canada. From 1971 to 1973 comparable increases to make the most marked improvement both absolutely and in percentage gain, while the South continues its strong gains in terms of percentage improvement.

Table 2 reflects increases from 1971 to 1975. The North Central region, which placed a close second to the West in its 1971 standing in per capita support, is now in third place among the four regions of the U.S. If the trends continue the Northeast will overtake the West, and the gap between the North Central and Southern regions

HOD OF COLLECTION AND ANALYSIS

Analysis: The Fort Wayne compilation is organized alphabetically by the name of the community in which the reporting library is located; from this we have deduced the region. The compilers solicited information from each system which included: a) the director's name (from which sex is determined); b) the director's current salary and length of tenure; c) beginning professional salary; d) per capita support; e) size of population served; and f) total operating budget. This compilation was in effect used as the raw data for our analysis, and it was subjected to the usual tests for inaccuracies and internal inconsistencies. The data is subject to the problems inherent in all survey research compounded in this instance by the use of secondary sources. Communication with the Fort Wayne Public Library has assured us that we are not misinterpreting either the intent of the questionnaire, or its limitations.

A real problem lies in the fact that not all libraries responded, and that even with the most careful follow-up by the library staff, some few respondents may have entered incorrect statements, and less than optimum replies. Using "SPSS—Statistical Package for the Social Sciences," a computer program, we have systematically analyzed such relationships as the sex of the director or geographic regions to level of per capita support and beginning professional salaries. Further, by comparison with similar analyses of data compiled in 1971 and 1973, an assessment of recent trends is possible.

Fewer libraries reported this time than in 1973. Regionally, the Northeastern libraries are less well represented and the North Central systems are proportionally better represented than in the preceding report and, in terms of population served, the smallest population category (100,000-199,999) is less well represented, the second largest category (400,000-749,999) is proportionally and absolutely better represented than before, and the largest category (750,000 and over) is also somewhat increased in representation.

The percentage of women directors reporting has dropped very substantially and that drop presents a potential skewing problem. If the proportion of women and of men directors reporting represents about their true incidence in the total population, then large public library directorships are increasingly going to males. We have no evidence, or strong reason, to disbelieve that this is the case. But, if women directors with better (or less well) supported libraries on average are not responding during this biennium, our comparisons with figures from 1973 and 1971 could be misleading.

While the distribution of respondents in 1975 differs in several respects from those in 1971 and 1973, the fact that 242 participants are included ensures substantial representation of the large public libraries in North America, excluding its Latin American nations only. We estimate the total universe of Canadian and United States public libraries of this size to be about 400.

could even begin to diminish in absolute dollars by 1977. In 1971 Canada had the same support per capita as the North Central region; it pulled ahead of all U.S. regions in 1973 and continues comfortably to hold that lead.

Venerable and vulnerable

When per capita expenditure is examined for communities of different sizes, as in Table 3, it would appear to confirm the widespread belief that our largest and most venerable public library systems may now be our largest and most vulnerable systems. Systems serving 750,000 people or more realized negligible increases in income, clearly falling behind in the race with inflation. Fortunately, on the average, smaller public libraries have fared better.

If the trends of the first half of the 1970s persist into the second half, then support of these largest libraries will fall behind that of all other sizes included in this report. In terms of purchasing power they may already have fallen behind because they pay higher salaries, and salaries constitute over half of public library operating costs. Many of the smaller systems are well financed regional or county ones serving large nonurban populations. Such systems may increasingly become a source of innovative service and a subject of greater attention in librarianship.

Sex and support

In 1975, public libraries with male directors enjoyed a mean per capita support of $5.96 and with women directors, $5.04, a difference of the same magnitude as was true both in 1973 and 1971. However, the importance of this difference diminished because budgets in libraries administered by women increased more proportionately than those administered by men. The financial advantage of men over women is calculated by dividing the difference between them by the per capita figure for women. This figure was 30 percent in 1971, reduced to 23 percent in 1973, and further reduced to 19 percent in 1975. The trend seems to be toward equitable support of libraries as far as the gender of director is concerned. We do not know whether this result is attributable to 1) region (the South has more women directors than the others); 2) size-of-population (smaller libraries have greater likelihood of having women directors); 3) women's efforts to improve their budgets; or 4) a number of other factors.

Library directors and the cost of living

We recently read in Library Journal, "In 1973, when library salaries were holding the line and increases were rare, top U.S. business executives awarded themselves increases of 8.7 percent—the best they had done in five years."[4] While public library executives' salaries, on average, have not kept at the pace of business executives, they have made substantial improvement. Directors are now being compensated in a manner more nearly commensurate with their responsibilities than in earlier decades. This is important for all public librarians because increases at the director level are probably necessary to rationalize all salary increases, especially those for middle management, a group too frequently squeezed between the modest salaries of the director and the beginning librarian.

The median salary for directors on January 1, 1975 was $23,000, whereas it was $18,900 in 1973 and $17,160 in 1971. The lowest figure was $8,510 (much below the median salary offered beginning professionals, incidentally) and the highest was $44,036. The size of this range is, of course, related to the great difference between being head of a Chicago or Brooklyn Public Library and of a poorly supported system "serving" 100,000 people.

One test of the adequacy of compensation is its purchasing power. The U.S. Department of Labor has defined and reported figures of the cost of enjoying a "higher living standard" for a four-person family. In 1972, the authors ascertained that this figure was appropriate to evaluate the purchasing power of public library directors in the South.[5] Therefore, we use the "higher living standard" as a criterion to determinate how well library directors are keeping up with inflation. The "higher living standard" figures for the fall of 1972 and 1974 can be compared with the directors' salaries as of January 1973 and 1975. In the fall of 1972, when the directors' median salary was $18,900, the cost for a higher standard of living was $16,558.[6] In the fall of 1974, when the median salary was $23,000 (up 21 percent) the cost of a higher standard of living was up to $20,777 (up 25 percent).[7] Library directors did not receive salary increases large enough to maintain their level of living over this period.

Sex and salary for directors

Tables 4, 5, 6, and 7 all provide current information on the importance of being Ernest (or Ernestine) in public library management today. The median salary for male directors was $24,000 and for females $18,750 on January 1, 1975. In terms of absolute dollars, the difference is $5,250; in terms of percentage, 28 percent; in terms of a higher standard of living, the men comfortably above, the women uncomfortably below it for a family of four. For additional perspective, notice that the median salary for men in 1973 was $4,740 (30 percent) more than that for women in 1973 and $4,310 (30 percent) in 1971. There has been little change in the percentage difference between men and

TABLE 1
CHANGES IN THE MEAN PER CAPITA PUBLIC LIBRARY EXPENDITURE, 1973-1975 BY REGION*

U.S. Regions & Canada	Per Capita Support (Number of reporting libraries) 1975	1973	Increase: 1973-1975
Northeast	$6.60 (29)	$5.00 (41)	$1.60 (32%)
South	$4.20 (78)	$3.20 (87)	$1.00 (31%)
North Central	$6.20 (64)	$4.90 (62)	$1.30 (27%)
West	$6.70 (51)	$5.40 (56)	$1.30 (24%)
Canada	$7.30 (16)	$5.80 (18)	$1.50 (26%)
All	$5.80 (238)	$4.50 (264)	$1.30 (29%)
Range	$4.20-7.30	$3.20-5.80	$1.00-1.60 (24-31%)

*Per capita expenditure rounded to nearest ten cents.

TABLE 2
CHANGES IN THE MEAN PER CAPITA LIBRARY EXPENDITURE, 1971-1975 BY REGION*

U.S. Regions & Canada	Per Capita Support (Number of reporting libraries) 1975	1971	Increase: 1971-1975
Northeast	$6.60 (29)	$3.90 (40)	$2.70 (69%)
South	$4.20 (78)	$2.60 (92)	$1.60 (62%)
North Central	$6.20 (64)	$4.40 (61)	$1.80 (41%)
West	$6.70 (51)	$4.60 (55)	$2.10 (46%)
Canada	$7.30 (16)	$4.40 (18)	$2.90 (66%)
All	$5.80 (238)	$3.70 (266)	$2.10 (57%)
Range	$4.20-7.30	$2.60-4.60	$1.60-2.90 (41-69%)

*Per capita expenditure rounded to nearest ten cents.

TABLE 3
CHANGE IN THE MEAN PER CAPITA PUBLIC LIBRARY EXPENDITURE, 1973-1975, BY SIZE OF POPULATION SERVED*

Size of Population Served	Per Capita Support (Number of reporting libraries) 1975	1973	Increase: 1973-1975
100,000-199,999	$5.80 (106)	$4.60 (129)	$1.20 26%
200,000-399,999	$5.30 (71)	$4.00 (78)	$1.30 33%
400,000-749,999	$6.70 (40)	$5.10 (37)	$1.60 31%
750,000 and over	$5.60 (21)	$5.10 (20)	.50 10%
All	$5.80 (238)	$4.50 (264)	$1.30 29%
Range	$5.30-6.70	$4.00-5.10	$.50-1.60 18-33%

*Per capita expenditure rounded to nearest ten cents.

TABLE 4
DIRECTORS' MEDIAN SALARIES IN 1975 BY SEX OF DIRECTORS AND REGION*

U.S. Regions & Canada	Male (Number of salaries reported)	Female (Number of salaries reported)	Difference (Male—Female)
Northeast	$24,020 (23)	$23,150 (7)	$ 870 (4%)
South	$22,530 (47)	$18,080 (29)	$4,450 (25%)
North Central	$23,720 (51)	$17,930 (7)	$5,790 (32%)
West	$24,780 (35)	$22,760 (15)	$2,020 (9%)
Canada	$27,000 (10)	$17,680 (5)	$9,320 (53%)
All	$24,000 (166)	$18,750 (63)	$5,250 (28%)
Range	$22,530-27,000	$17,680-23,150	$870-9,320 (4%-53%)

*Salaries rounded to nearest $10.

TABLE 5
DIRECTORS' MEDIAN SALARIES IN 1975 BY SEX OF DIRECTOR AND SIZE OF POPULATION SERVED*

Population Served	Male (Number of salaries reported)	Female (Number of salaries reported)	Difference (Male—Female)
100,000-199,999	$21,250 (68)	$17,730 (33)	$3,520 (20%)
200,000-399,999	$22,760 (48)	$19,900 (22)	$2,860 (14%)
400,000-749,999	$27,870 (32)	$25,970 (5)	$1,900 (7%)
750,000 and over	$30,740 (18)	$33,100 (3)	−$2,360 (−7%)
All	$24,000 (166)	$18,750 (63)	$5,250 (28%)
Range	$21,250-30,470	$17,730-33,100	−$2,360-3,520 (−7%-+20%)

*Salaries rounded to nearest $10.

TABLE 6
CHANGES IN THE DISTRIBUTION OF DIRECTORS' SALARIES, 1973-1975 BY SEX OF DIRECTOR

Size of Salary	Male Directors			Female Directors
	1975	1973	Percent Change	1975	1973	Percent Change
Less than $15,000	1%	7%	− 6%	11%	41%	−30%
$15,000-19,999	18%	38%	−20%	46%	38%	+ 8%
$20,000-24,999	38%	35%	+ 3%	18%	17%	+ 1%
More than $25,000	44%	20%	+24%	25%	5%	+20%
Total	101%*	100%		100%	101%*
Median Salary	$24,000	$20,270	(18%)	$18,750	$15,530	(20%)

*Error due to rounding.

TABLE 7
CHANGES IN THE DISTRIBUTION OF BEGINNING PROFESSIONAL SALARIES, 1973-1975, BY SEX OF DIRECTOR

Beginning Professional Salary	Under a Male Director			Under a Female Director
	1975	1973	Percent Change	1975	1973	Percent Change
Less than $8,000	7%	22%	−15%	13%	41%	−28%
$8,000-8,999	19%	40%	−21%	25%	39%	−14%
$9,000-9,999	31%	28%	+ 3%	27%	16%	+11%
$10,000-10,999	25%	9%	+16%	24%	2%	+22%
$11,000 or more	19%	2%	+17%	11%	1%	+10%
Total	101%*	101%*		100%	99%*
Median Salary	$9,800	$8,680	13%	$9,620	$8,180	18%

*Error due to rounding.

TABLE 8
INCREASE IN 1975 MEDIAN BEGINNING PROFESSIONAL SALARIES OVER 1973 BY SIZE OF POPULATION SERVED*

Population Served	Median Salary		Increase: 1973-1975
	1975	1973
100,000-199,999	$ 9,510 (105)	$8,400 (133)	$1,110 (13%)
200,000-399,999	$ 9,610 (72)	$8,480 (78)	$1,130 (13%)
400,000-749,999	$ 9,910 (41)	$8,730 (36)	$1,180 (14%)
750,000 and over	$10,310 (22)	$9,240 (21)	$1,070 (12%)
All	$ 9,710 (240)	$8,510 (268)	$1,200 (14%)

*Salaries rounded to nearest $10.

women directors' salaries, in strong contrast with the trend remarked on above toward more equal per capita support of libraries managed by men and women.

The lowest salary of a female director (remember that the data are for libraries serving large populations of 100,000 or more) was $8,510; while the lowest salary for a male director was $14,213. At least all the men directors earn more than all the beginning professionals reported here, although the difference between the highest beginner's salary and the lowest male director's salary is a narrow $272. The lowest woman directors' salary, as noted above, is actually lower than the median salary for a beginner. It is more cheering to consider the high salaries: $44,036 for men and $38,232 for women. Men's salaries, therefore, begin and end nearly $6000 above women's salaries, with a range that is almost identical. Sex continues to account for substantial variation in director's salaries, nearly unchanged from our earlier surveys.

Sex and region

The differences between male and female directors' salaries in the Northeast is less than $1000. One startling change emerging from this analysis is the $9000 (+) salary differential between Canadian male and female directors. The Canadian male director, on the average, earned more than half again as much as his female colleague. This was especially unexpected since in 1973 male Canadian directors earned, on the average, $3,450 more.

The Canadian figures are so distinctive that if data had been collected and processed only for the United States in both 1973 and 1975, the difference in directors' salaries, male and female, in 1973 would have been higher than the 30 percent reported for the total group and in 1975 would have dropped lower than the 28 percent for the total group. That is, data may be signaling a trend toward smaller salary differences in the United States. The data on Canadian libraries suggest a wider difference between males and females from 1973 to 1975, but this difference may be due to factors we have not controlled for in this analysis.

Moreover, so few Canadian libraries with female directors responded in this survey that no firm conclusions are possible. The Canadian Library Association is undertaking a more thorough study of Canadian salaries, and its data should provide a more valid analysis of

TABLE 9
INCREASE IN 1975 MEDIAN BEGINNING PROFESSIONAL SALARIES OVER 1973 BY REGION*

U.S. Regions & Canada	Median Salary		Increase 1973-1975
	1975	1973
Northeast	$9,500	$8,300	$1,200 (14%)
South	$9,400	$8,180	$1,220 (15%)
North Central	$9,820	$8,590	$1,230 (14%)
West	$10,070	$8,790	$1,280 (15%)
Canada	$10,330	$8,740	$1,590 (18%)
All	$9,710	$8,510	$1,200 (14%)

*Salaries rounded to nearest $10.

any differences between salaries for male and female directors.

Sex and population

These international and interregional variations are more pronounced than those disclosed by a breakdown on the basis of size of population served (Table 5). The difference in median salaries is least favorable to women working in libraries serving smaller populations, where most women directors are found, and is most favorable to women directors of the largest libraries. The very largest category, libraries serving 750,000 or more, should probably be discounted since it includes only three women in the United States and Canada combined. The patterns among communities of different size exhibit a regularity and interpretability not evident in the interregional comparison. They continue to conform closely to the patterns of 1973—women directors in smaller libraries earn much less than men in the same size libraries and, in larger communities, the inequity grows smaller. A comparison of the patterns of 1973 and 1975 does show a distinct, slow shift toward "equal pay for equal work." Whether this is the beginning of a significant trend is not now apparent.

In Table 6 the distribution of the salaries of men and women directors by various salary classes shows the shift from 1973 to 1975. Perhaps the most telling comparison is that nearly half (44 percent) of the men but only 25 percent of women earn over $25,000 per year and nearly half (46 percent) of the women but only 18 percent of the men earn $15,000-$19,999. However, there has been a solid, general advance for both men and women during a period of great inflation, severe recession and extensive unemployment, including the unemployment endured by so many new entrants to the field.

Beginning compensation

Beginning librarians have had a tough time economically, these past two years. Not only are there too few available positions, in contrast with the period when personnel directors offered jobs to "warm bodies with degrees," but also those who did find jobs today discover that their salaries have decreased in terms of purchasing power.

Frarey and Learmont report that 1974 graduates of schools of librarianship accredited by the American Library Association earned a median salary of $9,600 (women), $10,184 (men) and $9,638 (all). Public librarians did less well than any other category that year with $9,500 the median salary for women and $9,890 the comparable figure for men.[8]

They also report salaries actually received by those students (with or without experience) whose salaries are reported to the accredited library schools, whereas we depend on figures reported at the beginning professional salary that would be offered to a person without experience. Persons with experience or desirable skills earn more, according to Frarey and Learmont. Our analysis shows that the median salary offered the new librarian on January 1, 1975 was $9,710, up only $1,200 (14 percent) from the figure we computed two years ago. The mean salary ($9,728) is very close to the median. During these past two years, beginning salaries advanced much less quickly than the cost of living rate. Keeping in mind that most of these public librarians are in urban environments which normally are more costly than rural or suburban areas, the severity of the situation becomes clearer. The lowest beginning 1975 salary offered was $6,696 and the highest was $13,941. The difference of $7,245 between the highest and lowest beginning salaries is greater than the smallest salary offered.

Public library directors' salaries, as described earlier, have nearly kept up with the cost of maintaining a family of four in accordance with the United States Department of Labor's hypothetical higher standard of living. How about the beginning professional who is married and has children? The level of living according to the Labor Department definitions most nearly coincident with the salaries of beginning public librarians is the "lower living standard." In Autumn 1972, probably the nearest appropriate period to compare with salaries of January 1, 1973, a worker required $7,386 to maintain a family of four in a lower level of living according to the Department.[9] In Autumn 1973 that figure was $8,181.[10] That year the median salary figure for beginners was $8,510. Most beginning librarians therefore were earning more than the amount estimated to be necessary to support a family of four at a lower level of living. The Department of Labor's figure was up nearly 11 percent in one year, and our figures show beginning librarians' salaries up only 14 percent in two years. At the time of writing no comparable information was located on the lower level of living for 1974, and so no calculation of the two-year increase in that figure was possible.

A careful study of Tables 7, 8 and 9 could reward a beginning librarian or library science student contemplating seeking employment in a public library. In 1971 among the four U.S. regions only the South ranked lower than Canada. Now Canada's beginning public librarians are faring better than those in the United States. (It is interesting to note that Frary and Learmont have independently noted an upward move in Canadian salaries.)[11]

Within the United States salaries in all regions are moving ahead inadequately (14 percent from 1973 to 1975) and are quite homogeneous: there is only a difference of $670 per year between the low median salary in the South and the high in the West. All other things equal, the salaries should be assessed in relation to the local cost of living. As salaries for beginning librarians are quite limited in their variability, geographical variations in the cost of living may be a factor in accepting a position.

Just as weakness in per capita support of the largest public libraries was noted earlier, compensation is quite closely tied to the size and population served, as noted in Table 7. While the very largest cities paid the highest salaries, the increase over 1973 was the least in these generally more costly, large metropolitan areas.

Salaries for beginners—whether male or female—increased dramatically under female directors in the past two years. The difference between median salaries paid by male and female directors in 1971 was $490 (7 percent) and in 1973, the situation was virtually unchanged at $500 (six percent). The difference in 1975 is only $180 (2 percent); a difference in salary perhaps unimportant to most beginning librarians. Also since female directors are most often located in the South and the less densely populated areas, the shift of the past two years has most probably made a negligible difference between purchasing power offered new professionals by women and men directors.

It seems quite possible that in this crucial respect women public library directors now have a very slight advantage in offering more purchasing power, if not more dollars, to new professionals. If the trend of the past four years continues, beginning salaries in libraries directed by women will be greater than in those directed by men by 1977.

Conclusions

From 1973-1975 public librarians fared worse economically than public libraries. Moreover, beginning librarians fared worse than directors. Whatever progress in librarians' personal income was realized in the 1960s is rapidly diminishing. Librarians have employed various strategies to cope with economic problems including lobbying, unionization, more part-time work opportunities to distribute a limited number of positions to a larger number of workers, considering positions in less urban or urbane locations, enjoining professional organizations to consider such resolutions as reduction of admissions to library schools.

Probably a strong and healthy economy could remedy most library financial problems. However, Library Manpower, A Study of Demand and Supply estimates that the use of paraprofessionals in public libraries is reducing the need for professional staff.[12] On the other hand, the Frarey and Learmont survey of beginning salaries in 1975 does not indicate that the public library has slowed in its capacity to provide a steady major source of full-time employment for new graduates of Master's degree programs. Rather, the share of jobs offered by the public library has been increasing in the past five years.

Furthermore, in the development of information and referral services, stronger multimedia collections, and preschool library services, for example, there is enormous room to increase the total amount of professional work in public libraries. In other words, if the financial support were provided, there would be no lack of jobs to be done in public librarianship.

It is encouraging that public library per capita support actually advanced in 1973 and 1975, a time of economic distress nationally. Noteworthy is Canada's apparent improvement over that of the United States and its movement toward a level of financial support that can provide qualitatively better service.

Among the 240 directors' salaries reported the relative standing of women is virtually unchanged from 1971 when we began these reports: women directors now earn 28 percent less than men. In controlling for size of population and for region, the differences remain major. In the matter of per capita support however, there is substantial progress; while women directors had 30 percent less than men to spend in 1971, they had only 19 percent less in 1975. Further, the beginning librarian's salary under women now is only two percent less than that offered by men. Given that women are more often found in the south and in the less populous regions where living costs tend to be lower, purchasing power for new professional employees under women directors may not be significantly different than that earned under male directorship. To summarize the change in the past four years, women public library directors are now in a more competitive position for hiring new librarians and are provided more funds to develop adequate library service in other ways.

We hope in the near future to publish research on public library finance from the early 1960s to 1975. This will provide a longer-term perspective on the economic developments of public libraries and librarians, the absence of which has been decried for a long time.

REFERENCES

1. Carpenter, Raymond L. & Kenneth D. Shearer. "Sex and Salary Update." Library Journal, (January 15, 1974). p. 101–07 (reprinted in the Bowker Annual of Library and Book Trade Information, 1974. Bowker, 1974, p. 310–22); also Carpenter, Raymond L. & Kenneth D. Shearer. "Sex and Salary Survey; Selected Statistics of Large Public Libraries in the United States and Canada." Library Journal, (November 15, 1972), p. 3682–85 (reprinted in the Bowker Annual of Library and Book Trade Information, 1973. Bowker, 1973, p. 406–14).
2. Shera, Jesse H. Foundations of the Public Library; the Origins of the Public Library Movement in New England 1629–1855. Univ. of Chicago, 1949, p. 80.
3. McMullen, Haynes. "More Statistics of Libraries in the Southeast Before 1876." Southeastern Librarian, Spring 1974, p. 28.
4. "The Job Market: Fewer Jobs, Small Salary Gains." Library Journal, March 15, 1975, p. 547.
5. Shearer, Kenneth D. & Raymond L. Carpenter. "Municipal Public Libraries in the South: a Slant Towards Salaries," Southeastern Librarian, Winter 1972, p. 171–72.
6. U.S. Department of Labor. Handbook of Labor Statistics 1974, p. 344. GPO, 1974, p. 344.
7. Dorfman, Robert. "Two Steps Backward: Report on the Economic Status of the Profession, 1974–75" AAUP Bulletin, August 1975, p. 130.
8. Frarey, Carlyle J. & Carol L. Learmont. "Placements and Salaries 1974: Promise or Illusion?" Library Journal, October 1, 1975, p. 1767–74. Note that these figures may be somewhat incorrect because the median reported by Frarey and Learmont for the entire group is lower than the median reported for both subgroups.
9. Brackett, Jean. "Urban Family Budgets Updated to Autumn 1972" Monthly Labor Review, August 1973, p. 70.
10. U.S. Department of Labor. Bureau of Labor Statistics. Handbook of Labor Statistics 1975—Reference Edition. GPO, 1975, p. 363–64.
11. In the 1974 report they do not comment on the difference because less than half the Canadian schools responded. But the trend had been noted in earlier reports. Specifically, on p. 1772 of "Placement and Salaries 1973: Not Much Change" Library Journal, July 1974, they discuss Canadian salaries.
12. U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. Library Manpower: A Study of Demand and Supply. GPO, 1975.

THE PARTICIPATION PROBLEM

MORE THAN 3000 of librarianship's elite, elected officers, appointed committee people, top and second level administrators, along with representatives from some 100 publishing houses, gathered in Chicago's musty, overheated Palmer House to attend the Midwinter Meeting of the American Library Association from January 18-24. There they found an ALA free of the financial woes that have plagued it for several years, smoothly functioning, basking in the glory of its 100th year, and moving efficiently, without too much excitement, toward the gala celebration planned for the same city in July.

Midwinter was all business, some of it controversial, but most of it simply a reflection of the well-built bueaucracy that has become 50 East Huron Street as the leadership of Robert Wedgeworth, ALA Executive Director, solidifies. For LJ's reporter the week began with the urban library crisis, and ended, just after the plane landed at home in New York, at a sit-in demonstration at one of the branches of the New York Public Library scheduled to close in that city's disaster.

ALA and urban libraries

The Urban Libraries Council, one of more than 40 groups that isn't part of ALA but tags along at Midwinter and annual conferences, spent all day January 17th discussing its prime goal, federal aid for the nation's embattled city libraries.

ULC is still pursuing its apparently impossible dream, to amend the Library Services and Construction Act to provide direct federal aid to the ailing libraries in America's cities. Presided over by Chicago's Ralph Newman, in fine fettle after his troubles over a Richard Nixon tax-deductible gift, ULC is contemplating a new approach to joining ALA, hoping that it can garner the support of ALA's legislative leaders for its legislative aims. Obviously, from the ULC point of view, ALA has been less than receptive to a ULC affiliation, and even less happy to grant the needed support for ULC's legislative proposals. Much of the talk that cold Chicago day was about ALA's inability to include ULC as part of the big umbrella. In any case, ULC will try again with its LSCA amendment, and with ALA, although it was obvious that many in the small group felt that joining ALA would be both difficult, and possibly disadvantageous. Alex Ladenson pointed out that U.S. research libraries, faced with the same problems years ago, decided to form their own Association of Research Libraries. Fears that joining ALA would threaten ULC control over its own dues and dollars, would lower its profile, and hamper the ability to act quickly on issues, were widely shared. Wyman Jones, director of the Los Angeles Public Library, put it this way: "It's better to go on being a splinter; at least a splinter can penetrate!"

Jones: ". . . a splinter can penetrate!"

Other problems surfacing at ULC: Big libraries like Los Angeles have a great many part-time workers. They are not counted in Affirmative Action Programs, and ULC should look into the possibility of changing appropriate federal laws and regulations. Library schools are not recruiting sufficient minority students, making it very difficult for the big public libraries to find and hire minority librarians. Both Newman of Chicago and Ervin Gaines of Cleveland echoed this concern.

Father Murray, a trustee from the Boston Public Library, did approach ALA Exec Bob Wedgeworth privately, and reported that the Association would entertain another proposal from ULC for affiliation. More important, there is an ad hoc committee from ULC and ALA's Legislation Committee which had met three times prior to Midwinter, and ULC Exec Ervin Gaines says "some change in ALA legislative philosophy and timetables seems to be in the air . . ."

The latest LSCA amendment making the ULC rounds (all ULC legislation is drafted by Alex Ladenson of Chicago) concedes that any grants should be administered by State agencies, and includes restrictions on their use to the purchase of library materials.

Later in the week LJ's reporter was barred from a meeting of large public library directors at the Chicago Public Library. One member of the group was surprised at the secrecy: "It baffles me; we were not plotting the overthrow of governments, the abduction of princes, the heisting of banks, or even the demise of ALA . . ." According to our informant, discussion was limited to "how terrible things are . . . with precious little time devoted to suggestions for remedy, except—heavens above—to ask ALA to pass a resolution . . . Obviously what every city library needs is a good, ringing resolution from ALA . . ."

The New York resolutions

Well, that's about what urban libraries got at Midwinter . . . at least one of them. A unanimous resolution from the ALA Council cited the New York Public Library's "research facility" as a national and world resource and directed ALA's Legislation Committee to work with NYPL on federal legislation to "assure the permanence of this great institution." Yep, it was unanimous!

Not so, when it came to NYPL's Branch Library System. The ALA Council found bitter opposition to a resolution supporting the citizens of New York in their efforts to keep their branch libraries open. It was opposed, surprisingly, by the director of the Queens Borough Public Library, among many others, on the grounds that such a resolution from a national body might upset the NYPL administration in its attempts to deal with the fiscal crisis. The resolution did finally pass, thus putting ALA on record in support of both the research and public libraries of New York City, but the branch systems did not get any promises of legislative support.

Urban library news

LJ gleaned other news from the urban librarians. Ernie Siegel, director of Baltimore's Enoch Pratt Free Library, gave the good news that Pratt will try again with information and referral services. The failure of Pratt's first experiment is a matter of professional record ("Some Experiments Fail," LJ, June 15, 1975, p. 1185-90). Siegel says the new information service will begin operation in the Spring.

Ervin Gaines, the Cleveland Public Library director, was still urging those libraries that can to try to go direct to the voters for support. In Cleveland, voters turned down highways and other public works, while voting for massive increases in library support (LJ, December 15, 1975, p. 2284).

ALA legislative action

ALA's Legislation Committee reported few victories during Midwinter, although the Madison Memorial Building was saved for LC, and the Committee thanked ALA members for letters to Congressmen that helped.

It is obvious to all that the Ford White House just couldn't care less about funding a White House Conference on libraries this or any other year. Al Trezza, National Commission on Libraries and Information Science exec, indicated that there is little hope, and that only one unpromising avenue is still open to pursue funding for the Conference. The Legislation Committee still urges librarians to have what they are calling "Libriscons," state level legislative conferences to lead up to the national one, "White House" or not. The White House Conference Planning Committee of ALA has even published guidelines for these happenings which are to be held for "lay leadership." The 12-page document provides detailed guidance and is available from the ALA Washington Office to "any group of people interested in the potential of library services . . ."

Trezza: little hope for White House Conference

The July-December 1975 report of the ALA Washington Office, distributed at Midwinter, details ALA's lobbying efforts, which were obviously massive. No less than 32 pieces of legislation of interest to libraries are identified in the report, and 17 have become law.

The Legislation Committee is well along on plans for Library Legislative Day to be held on April 6 in Washington. Eleven states have already signed up to send delegations, and the committee is hoping to see such groups from every state. They are also urging similar efforts at state capitols on April 6 or thereabouts. The thrust of the legislative message this year is "growing grass roots" and most of the Committee's activity is devoted to that kind of planting.

Copyright: Advice but no consent

Ed Low reported that there is hope that the general copyright revision bill will become law before the end of 1976. The bill (S 22) has been reported out of committee in the Senate, and is unlikely to be changed. In the House, the Kastenmeier subcommittee is still seeking language from publishers and librarians on some resolution of their differences. Just before Midwinter Low, Wedgeworth and a group of publishers met, no lawyers allowed, to try again to iron out differences. They made some progress and scheduled another session for after Midwinter.

Despite these legislative efforts, librarians are beginning to accept the inevitability that whatever copyright law emerges will be tougher about copying. Reflecting this fear, and to help librarians deal with the complexity of restrictions on the use of protected materials, the ALA Council passed a resolution asking the ALA President to study the feasibility of having the Association publish a series of "advisory statements on the circulation and reproduction of materials in library collections protected by national and international copyright . . ."

ALA elections

A spate of petition candidates for the ALA Council and officer ballots continued the trend to add names to ballots chosen by the Nominating Committee. This year's ALA presidential race ought to be a hot one. In addition to "official" nominees Robert Rohlf of the Hennepin County Library and Cecil Beach from the Florida State Library, petitioners nominated Russell Shank of the Smithsonian Institution and Eric Moon of Scarecrow Press to run for the ALA Presidency. Beach and Rohlf have kept low profiles, and will have an uphill battle against the visible and audible Moon and Shank. LJ hopes to publish the candidates' responses to a series of questions on library issues in the April 15th issue, and we expect real differences on some of them. Questions deal with a range of issues from urban library support to the status of women.

Moon: visible and audible

As if in response to the petitions that have burdened each ballot since the process was made easier, a motion came from Councillor Richard Waters to kill the provision allowing 100 members to nominate by petition and to up the number to "three percent of the votes cast" for president. This would amount to nearly three times the number of signatures currently required. The Council defeated the measure, but only by a couple of votes. Members who want to keep the petition channel open had better gird themselves for future battles on this one.

Waters also tried to get the Council to require that candidates for ALA office answer specific questions prepared by the Nominating Committee. The questions would deal with current "problems/goals/objectives the Association is facing at the time . . ." Waters was defeated again.

The ALA Presidency will be a much more attractive job to more people now, since both the Council and Executive Board approved a measure to provide up to $20,000 in support for the president and vice-president. (The ALA President-elect is V.P. for one year.)

The Council also voted to amend the By-laws of ALA to allow Chapters to elect their ALA Councillors by a vote of all Chapter members, instead of the previous restriction that only ALA members in the Chapter could vote for Councillors. This was part of general Council concern regarding membership and its participation in ALA. More about that is reported below.

From a field of six, including E. J. Josey, Milton Byam, Pat Schuman, and Maryann Duggan, who lost the election, the Council elected Kathleen Molz of the School of Library Service at Columbia University and Tom Galvin, Dean of the Pitt Graduate School of Library and Information Sciences to the ALA Executive Board. The election was widely interpreted as an indication that the Council preferred the quiet, conservative, and more establishment oriented on that Board, rather than more outspoken critics of ALA.

ALA vs. ALA members

The Council Orientation, early in the Midwinter Week, devoted a significant part of its agenda to the question of membership participation. It was obviously a sensitive area, which we won't detail here. Some of the facts are reported in LJ's March 1 Editorial (p. 647).

Alice Ihrig: orienting the Council

The skittishness of the Council regarding participation in ALA governance by anyone other than itself was evident in many places at Midwinter: in the movement, which barely failed, to make petition nominations more difficult; in the election to the Executive Board, which defeated those candidates who have traditionally brought membership concerns to the Council floor; in the Council Orientation session, where the prepared papers seemed oddly weak in proposals to insure membership participation. Later Council actions seemed to verify this fear.

As part of its program to defend the Council power to make "policy," the Council voted to add to the charge of its Resolutions Committee (CRC) the authority to determine which proposals, whether they are passed by membership, or submitted by individual Councillors, are matters of policy. This might not be a particularly threatening measure if the Ad Hoc Committee to Study the Relationship between Council and Membership which drafted it hadn't further obfuscated the issue by its strange, incomprehensible definition of policy as a "method or course of action designed to guide and determine present and future decisions: an action which will be operative for an extended period of time, or which will result in repeated and/or continuing activities." That should thoroughly muddy the waters surrounding "policy," "position," and the like.

The measure is equally dangerous when considered in view of the complaining CRC report, the thrust of which is that resolutions coming before the ALA Council need some prior screening. No doubt it is frustrating for some Councillors to spend time on matters they deem inappropriate to their agenda, on the other hand, it is questionable that any body could be created that will be able to "screen" resolutions and avoid being labelled the Council censor.

In the view of many at Midwinter, disagreements with any screening process will be as great as the time spent disdebating "unscreened" resolutions. One can envision endless Council debate over which resolutions are matters of "policy," or over the question of whether or not the CRC should be allowed to reject this or that item.

In any case, the Council voted to empower the Committee to screen for "policy" and to review membership resolutions to determine if Council must act on them. The same resolution created an Ad Hoc Committee to reorganize the ALA policy manual.

Councillor Gerald Shields, who has often taken membership concerns to the Council, offered a resolution to study the feasibility of a unit within ALA for professional librarians (those with the Master's Degree). Shields felt that ALA should follow the California model: the California Library Association has one unit called the California Society of Librarians to which only professionals belong. Shield's resolution was defeated, so he withdrew a second one asking ALA to develop a program for continuing support, development of standards, and continuing educational development for professionals.

The question of membership participation in ALA is not academic. Membership renewals are down, and while it is very early in the year, as of December 31 ALA had only 12,362 personal members in all categories, and only 7708 regular personal members. The big renewal period is at hand, and the responses between now and June will tell the full story of ALA's membership situation. Nonetheless, given the current economic situation, it will be necessary for the Association to provide more direct participation and results to its regular members than publications and cut-rate conference fees. The Council is beginning its own "outreach" program to members in response to this problem.

ALA Council "Outreach"

One big step in the Council outreach program is the passage at Midwinter of a resolution on library issue caucuses. The Council voted that chapter councillors and those "at large" work together to "establish library issue caucuses at state library association and type-of-library association meetings" to identify and communicate recommendations on library issues to the Council and other bodies of ALA for consideration. Fundamentally it is a fine idea, and it should attract membership attention.

The only flaw is that there are already a number of issue caucuses in existence at the state and local level, and it might be better for Councillors to seek out these existing groups. For example, nearly every state association has an intellectual freedom committee. These IFC's are already concerned that the local affiliates of ALA's Intellectual Freedom Round Table are intruding and encroaching on their territory. ALA's Social Responsibility Round Table is pretty well organized at the state and local level in some parts of the country, and their affiliates are already organized around issues. ACRL has state chapters, and there are state, regional, and local counterparts of nearly every ALA Division or unit. One interesting feature of all of this is that those established state level units can be much more powerful through the channels of their state associations than in the "caucus" format where there is no real power.

Nonetheless, the resolution did pass, and we hope either new issues are "caucused" or existing caucuses in the chapters are sought out and given the opportunity to respond before Councillors establish new ones.

ALA vs. its units

Complicated discussion of two documents in the meetings of the Executive Board and the ALA Council pointed up growing strains in the relationship between ALA as represented by the Headquarters and the Executive Board, and the units, represented by the Divisions and their new Division Interests Special Committee (DISC), and the round tables. Frankly, LJ's reporters got lost in the complicated question of how ALA can assess both Divisions and Round Tables for unusual expenses and overhead. It is our perception that these matters were moved toward a solution at Midwinter, but not without some argument on all sides.

DISC at work

COPES, the ALA budgeting committee, worked out complicated formulae, and, apparently gave up on the Round Tables, and the Executive Board sent a detailed document for Council approval that spells out which headquarters' services Divisions get free and those for which they will have to pay. The Executive Board gave DISC another year of life, but the Council turned down yet another attempt to give Divisions Council seats. So Division power is still contained in DISC. The group met several times at Midwinter, and influenced a number of issues.

ACRL—muscle flexing

The Association of College and Research Libraries (ACRL), ALA's strongest division, flexed its muscle on two unrelated but symbolic issues. The results are not in yet.

ALA is under contract with the management firm of Hay Associates to undertake a classification and compensation study for ALA staff. At Midwinter, the ACRL Board, citing Hay studies in New Jersey's State Colleges, at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and in institutions in Alaska and Iowa, said that Hay studies had resulted in the loss of faculty status by librarians when the studies were implemented. The ACRL Board requested that ALA's Executive Board terminate the Hay Associates Contract. After heated discussion, and assertions from ALA Presidential Candidate Russell Shank that he was absolutely against the contract with Hay "with or without documentation of ACRL's charges," the Executive Board decided to pass the buck to Exec Director Bob Wedgeworth for further study.

The other issue was ACRL's deficit budgeted reviewing magazine Choice. The argument is whether Choice belongs to ALA or to ACRL. ACRL wants it under Division control. Members of the Executive Board see it both ways, and this one will have to be resolved later too.

While this sort of Division muscle flexing has not brought much change in ALA governance, it is obvious to any observer that the Divisions are beginning to mount a campaign for more power in ALA and if their membership numbers are any indication, they'll probably get it.

ALA fiscal strength

The brightest spot in ALA currently is its fiscal strength. For the first time in years, the ALA budget will not require dipping into endowment income. The new dues structure and resulting reorganization of ALA have brought Division budgets into line, and while they may eliminate weaker units, the remaining Association will stay solvent, and be able to save its endowment.

The fiscal mood of the Executive Board was obvious in two other matters it decided. A COPES plan for remodeling the first floor of the Headquarters building at 50 East Huron Street was nixed, but plans to remodel the ALA building on Rush Street, around the corner, will go forward.

The Board also turned back to COPES an elaborate new dues schedule for organizational members, characterized by Ed Holley as "lousy." The plan listed seven different categories (and prices) of organizational membership, each with a different set of benefits. The Board asked for simplification.

The new Publishing Committee reported growth and strength in ALA's publishing programs. Booklist, always the strongest of ALA's periodicals, showed good profit last year, and the publishing program appears to be gaining strength. In the works are an ALA Yearbook to be edited by Wedgeworth, with 166 articles (count 'em), and a full review by the Committee of the scope of ALA book publishing. ALA's best sellers are the Anglo-American Cataloging Rules, with 65,474 copies sold in cloth and 43,582 in paper, followed by the ALA Rules for Filing Catalog Cards with 54,514 copies sold.

Midwinter is the meeting at which all the leftover membership resolutions from the summer conference are finally brought to the ALA Council, and while the political and social content of the Council agenda was small, there was plenty of "old business" from San Francisco.

Issues: Part-time work

There was little opposition to the resolution on permanent part-time employment passed by ALA members in July. The Council agreed that ALA "recognizes that the right to earn a living includes the right to part-time employment on a par with full-time employment, that is, with prorated pay and fringe benefits, with opportunity for advancement and protection of tenure, and with access to middle and upper level jobs and exercise of full responsibilities at any level . . ." The resolution went on to instruct ALA to create more "voluntarily chosen upgraded permanent part time jobs in its own organization" and that the Association support similar action in libraries.

Issues: smoking

After deeply impassioned speeches, and a bit of self-congratulation for its "Solomon-like" wisdom, the Council backed away from a membership resolution that banned smoking at all meetings (another S.F. left over). In "small" meeting rooms the presiding officer of the meeting will decide whether or not smoking will be allowed, while in "large" meeting rooms separate smoking and no-smoking sections will be set up.

Issues: service to jails

Zoia Horn's resolution on library service to people in local jails and detention centers was accepted. The only dissent came from Councillor Luther Lee, ALA's own George Wallace, who was concerned that jails would become "too comfortable." The measure put ALA on record as encouraging local public libraries and systems to make "a concerted effort" to extend service to local jails; ALA's Health and Rehabilitative Library Services Division, Public Library Association, and ALTA were instructed to design a plan to assist public libraries in carrying out this extension of service.

The Council amended ALA's policy on Equal Employment Opportunity to include the prohibition of discrimination on the basis of physical or mental handicaps.

Issues: women

When the San Francisco resolution on sexist terminology and advertising came before Council it was Luther Lee conservatively concerned again, regarding the "relevance" of the motion to libraries. The Council decided it was relevant and agreed that guidelines be immediately established and distributed to ALA staff for editing all future ALA documents and publications to remove sexist terms, and to review all future advertising copy to insure that discriminatory remarks are eliminated.

The SRRT Women's Task Force in their Sunday night "strategy" session drew some 60 to 75 concerned people. All ALA Councillors were invited, and of the 31 that replied, 15 or more showed up. After some heated (and some calm) exchanges over strategies for getting the Council to accept resolutions with women's concerns as their theme, the group went on to debate the creation and role of a new ALA Committee on the Status of Women in Librarianship in the U.S. Task force members didn't buy the line that ultimately prevented permanent establishment of such a committee: that ALA President Martin had already appointed a committee (ad hoc), on the advice of the ALA Executive Board, to determine whether or not a permanent committee is necessary. The Task Forcers see the need as "self-evident" and can't understand the Exec Board's reluctance to go along. (There certainly appears to be plenty of evidence around to prove that need.) The permanent committee's role, according to some at the meeting, would be to bring the concerns of women in librarianship to the appropriate governing body or units of ALA for action. It would be difficult to dispute the need for such a group, given the number of issues that have come before ALA at nearly every session that relate to the problems of women in the profession.

Nonetheless, at a meeting of the Ad Hoc Committee, chaired by Liz Dickinson of Hennepin County, there was real confusion over the role of a permanent committee on the status of women. The 30 people in attendance did discuss a wide range of issues of concern to women, including personnel and employment practices, reference materials on women, problems in library education and career guidance for women, and contact with other professions and organizations.

It seemed apparent that the groups would eventually decide that such a committee would fill an important gap in the ALA arsenal of referral groups. Its role, as we understand those discussions, should be to bring women's concerns into focus and request that appropriate bodies within ALA initiate whatever action is necessary to deal with the concern expressed. Why anyone would oppose the establishment of such a group is unclear to this reporter.

Issues: ethnic materials

SRRT's Ethnic Materials Information Exchange Task Force drew nearly 60 conferees to hear reports from all over on the training and nurture of librarians to serve ethnic groups and develop collections for them. Task force committees reported that 1) a directory of ethnic resource librarians and organizations is nearly finished; 2) a newsletter in the field will be founded; 3) a grant proposal to USOE has been filed to establish an Ethnic Materials Information Center at Queens College in New York; 4) a joint committee with RASD will develop guidelines and resources for foreign language library collections; 5) a "multi-ethnic workshop" will be held by the task force at the July Conference.

Issues: intellectual freedom

Although the ALA Intellectual Freedom Committee exhibited some symptoms of a group in search of an issue, particularly in its protracted discussion of a report on the broadcasting "Fairness doctrine," it was hard for our observers to grasp the library connections of the matter, which relates to equal broadcasting time for candidates for public office. It is truly a First Amendment matter and probably, as such, more the province of the Freedom To Read Foundation. In any case, the Committee couldn't agree and will probably continue the discussion.

IFC did take important matters to the Council and got action on some. The Council passed a resolution putting ALA behind the efforts of Peruvian author Hugo Blanco to be granted a visa to visit the U.S. ALA will notify the Congress of this action.

IFC's long struggle to come to some accommodation with the Children's Services Division and other parties interested in library service to children and young adults continued, and is reported in detail in School Library Journal. It is apparent that concessions have been forthcoming from both groups and further action on the question of children's rights of access to literature will be forthcoming. IFC rightly slapped down the Council on Interracial Books for Children, a New York based group whose efforts to remove racism, sexism, and other "isms" have deteriorated into borderline ideological censorship. At issue were charges in the Council's Bulletin distributed at the ALA Conference in San Francisco to the effect that ALA's IFC was guilty of unwitting "pro-racist, pro-sexist, pro-censorship" policies. IFC strongly reiterated its stand on these issues, as well as its history of encouragement of minority views, regardless of which minority. In the view of many, the New York group's efforts represent a relatively new phenomenon in U.S. intellectual freedom struggles: the well-intentioned, but obviously censorious, effort to remove offensive materials from libraries because they are anathema to a more "liberal" constituency. It is a knotty problem and is one case where the "purity" of the ALA-IFC position on censorship, one often attacked, is obviously proper.

IFC requested that ALA's president write to the State Department regarding the case of Alexandra Alexvna Dimitrochenkova, a Soviet citizen denied an exit visa from the U.S.S.R. because of her alleged knowledge of military secrets. Dimitrochenkova was a librarian at the Leningrad Artillery School and, according to IFC evidence, indicates that she was employed in the general literature department of that library. The ALA letter will simply ask for more information and advice on the matter.

The Committee was asked by the Freedom To Read Foundation to look into the library implications of the Privacy Act of 1974 and has scheduled discussions for the 1976 Conference.

Richard Darling delivered the report of the Freedom To Read Foundation to the ALA Council. He described the Foundation's efforts in the long litigation of Moore v. Younger, explaining why the process is so lengthy.

Judith Krug, ALA Intellectual Freedom Office, and Richard Darling, Freedom to Read Foundation

The Foundation has also gone to the aid of an Iowa bookseller in the case of Smith v. U.S. Jerry Lee Smith from Des Moines published a mag called The Swinger, which federal agents surreptitiously subscribed to and received through the mail. Smith was tried and convicted of mailing obscene materials. Iowa had repealed its state obscenity laws for adults, and thus Smith's appeal contends that local standards in Iowa allow adults to receive material, like The Swinger. The appeal documents include the Foundation's amicus brief, and because the chances of winning on appeal appear to be slim, the Foundation has granted stand-by authority to its Executive Board to carry the case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The Foundation's decision to throw ALA Round Table representatives off its Board was received with predictable anger in the RTs, and was cited as further evidence that librarianship's intellectual freedom establishment has become a more and more exclusive club.

ALA's newest IF unit, the Intellectual Freedom Round Table, seems to be a family matter, too. Last year's nominating committee put one of its own members on the slate, and this year the spouses of two of its leaders will nominate. The IFRT exec board met for about three hours at Midwinter, planning their Fair for the summer conference, dealing with housekeeping matters, and coming up with a contribution to the ALA Office for Intellectual Freedom. IFRT representatives monitored all other IF activity at Midwinter as well.

New faces have not been notable on IFC, in the FRF officers, and on the leadership of IFRT. This year's appointments to the Intellectual Freedom Committee suggest some change in that pattern and an attempt to respond to this criticism. The new members of IFC will be trustee Stephen Oppenheim from Middletown, New York, Prof. Miriam Braverman from Columbia University, Zoia Horn from Stockton, California, and Priscilla Moulton of the Brookline, Massachusetts, Public Schools. A trustee, a school librarian, a public librarian, and a library school professor, but beyond that fundamental kind of balance, these four add another kind of "balance" to IFC. There are among them both activists and more conservative types, both legal talent and social concern; they are excellent appointments.

Honorary members

As part of a continuing centennial program, the Council elected eight obviously deserving people to honorary membership: famed University of Illinois library director and former ALA President Robert B. Downs; former ALA President, distinguished library educator and school librarian now Bro-Dart executive, Mary V. Gaver; 30-year dean of the School of Library Science at Atlanta University, Virginia Lacy Jones; former Royal Librarian of Belgium and IFLA President Herman Liebaers; librarian of New College (Sarasota, Florida) and long-time legislative and copyright spokesman for ALA, Edmon Low; former president and chairman of the R. R. Bowker Company, Daniel Melcher; Tennessee Valley Authority librarian, Mary U. Rothrock; and former dean at Case Western Reserve, and scholar-spokesman on a host of fundamental issues, Jesse Hauk Shera.

Detroit blues

Apparently there is still some doubt about whether or not the city of Detroit will be able to handle ALA's hordes in the summer of 1977—despite reassurance from Detroit officials. ALA Conference Manager Chris Hoy is still worried, and the matter came up at the final Exec Board meeting at Midwinter.

Detroit is a city in trouble. ALA's President-elect Clara Jones serves that city and must operate a public library in that depressed economy and environment. We hope ALA will be able to work out the problems and have its 1977 Conference there. We would even advocate abandoning some of the usual plastic comforts in order to cast this small vote of confidence in one of America's hardest hit cities.

Detroit's library history has been glorious, from the courageous provision of information service under Ralph Ulveling during the forties, during World War II, and even in the midst of violent racial unrest. The library's response to racial problems was one of the proudest chapters in American library history. Clara Jones is writing another chapter now, with crucial services tailored to a citizenry deeply in need of information and help. The vote of confidence in Detroit and its libraries that an ALA Conference represents should not be withheld at this crucial time. Better to billet the ALA troops or schedule meetings in local colleges, small hotels, or even in library branches than to abandon Detroit in these hard times.

Incidentally, the Cobo Hall area is one of the most commodious Convention centers in America, and for exhibits and meetings it can't be beat.

Jones: another chapter in Detroit

Chicago this summer

So . . . Its back to the windy city in July. Hoopla and hullabaloo . . . A 16-page section in the New York Times on Sunday, July 18 (and in a Chicago paper if Alice Ihrig has her way) to celebrate 100 years of ALA. Fairs, shows, fun and games, lots of issues, and lots of unfinished business.

Will ACRL get CHOICE back? Will more trustees join ALTA now that they're getting a dues break? Will Council find a way to increase membership participation in ALA activity? Does it want to? Will Rohlf be Beached, will the Moon rise, or will we go into 1978 on Shank's mare? Will we get back to Detroit? Will Moore ever beat Younger? Will women get an even break? Will urban libraries get help? Will next year's new librarians find work? Will LED live? Or ASLA? Will you renew your ALA membership? Will your colleagues? Will Plotnik's mood ring, a deep black last time we saw it, ever turn tranquil blue?

Read the September 1 issue of LJ for the answers to these and all the new questions librarianship brings to Chicago this summer. John Berry

BOOK LOSSES GROWING?
BOOK BUDGET SHRINKING?

we have a solution-

The Gaylord/Magnavox Book Security System

We don't pretend to be able to put more dollars into your book budget, but we can help make the dollars you have go farther by reducing your book losses.

Gaylord/Magnavox, two leading names in libraries and electronics, have teamed to produce the latest in detection systems featuring:

POSITIVE DETECTION—when the system sounds you can be confident that a book which could have been lost forever has been saved.

FREEDOM FROM FALSE ALARMS—virtually free from the troublesome false alarms which erode staff confidence and embarrass patrons.

CONVERTIBILITY—can operate either as a By-Pass System or as a Full Circulation System.

Write today for a complete description of the newest and finest in Book Security Systems, designed to increase your book budget by reducing your book losses.

GLS

GAYLORD

QUALITY... INNOVATION... PRACTICAL LIBRARY EXPERIENCE
SYRACUSE, NY 13201 • STOCKTON, CA 95208

Continuing education

ALLEN, Lawrence A. Continuing Education Needs of Special Librarians.

Special Libraries Assn. (SLA State-of-the-Art Review, No. 3). 1974. 54p. appendix. bibliog. ISBN 0-87111-222-1. LC 74-9805. pap. $5.

Allen provides a rather superficial overview of continuing education for special librarianship. The preface identifies the three things this study set out to do: 1) review the literature; 2) identify continuing education needs of special librarians; and 3) make recommendations for research to fill in the gaps where more knowledge is necessary to establish an effective continuing education program.

In the superficial review of the literature, it is important to note that the author has set the requirement that this state of the art be derived only from published RESEARCH literature; he does not include Harold Borko's "Targets for Research in Library Education" (which does address both continuing education and relationships of professional associations).

The continuing education needs of special librarians are identified in one and two-thirds pages only by categorizing these needs in five ways: 1) identity and philosophy; 2) administration-management; 3) changing technical skills, techniques, and patterns; 4) basic library skills; and 5) specialized needs.

In Section 3, he reviews some 52 articles, chapters, books, and reports. Only some of these are listed in his bibliography of 132 citations divided into: Librarianship (29 citations dating from 1960-72); Engineering (15 citations, 1965-71); Clergy (19 citations, 1962-71); Social Work (eight citations, 1968-72); Medical (eight citations, although three of these relate to nonphysicians, 1962-71); Law (12 citations, 1963-72); Nursing (12 citations, 1970-71); and Andragogy (27 citations, 1958-72).

In compiling his bibliography, Allen seems to have tied himself to the introduction of the term "continuing education" in Library Literature which he states appeared "in or around 1968," yet the Bulletin of the Medical Library Association used this phrase in an editorial as early as 1948. Another warning in using the bibliography: seven of 29 citations were utilized and of these seven, two had errors in publication dates.

Section 7 is really directed to the Special Libraries Association although the statement that SLA has been in advance of other library associations is inaccurate as can be documented by the articles in Allen's bibliography. SLA started presenting programs at national conferences in 1969, while the Medical Library Association presented "experimental" courses in 1958, which have been repeated since 1960 without interruption. MLA also has had a director of medical library education since 1970. Allen proposes that SLA employ such a person either full- or half-time. The suggestions made to SLA are perhaps the most interesting part of the book and SLA should address itself to these.

Unfortunately there is no index, but this may be excused on the basis that the table of contents is adequate for a 54-page publication.—PAULINE M. VAILLANCOURT, SCHOOL OF LIBRARY AND INFORMATION SCIENCE, STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK AT ALBANY

Directories—In Brief

Libraries in the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland.

The Library Association, London. 1975. 151p. index. ISBN 0-85365-208-2. pap. £2.50; to LA members, £2.00.

A "complete list" of public libraries; a selected list of academic, national and government, and special libraries; and schools of librarianship.

Directory of Special Libraries in Alaska. ed. by Alan Edward Schorr.

Special Libraries Assn. 1975. 67p. indexes. ISBN 0-87111-239-6. LC 75-29043. pap. $5.

Contains data on 64 special libraries, arranged alphabetically, with indexes to personnel, city, and subject areas.

WASSERMAN, Paul & others, eds. LIST: Library and Information Services Today: an International Registry of Research and Innovation. Vol. 5/1975.

Gale. 1975. 633p. indexes. ISBN 0-8103-0387-6. LC 74-7634. $45.

Contains data on 1,335 research projects, reported by 2,553 individuals. New to this volume: inclusion of citations to the projects described; and an index to acronyms.

Documents compilation

O'HARA, Frederick J. Bibliographical Essays on Government and Diverse Matters.

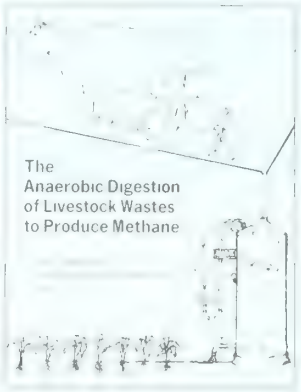
Long Island University Palmer Graduate Library School. 1975. approx. 350p. spiral bound, pap. $10

After O'Hara's well-composed Reader in Government Documents, this compilation is quite a disappointment. The content is confusing, the selection of topics is arbitrary, and the analysis rather useless for librarians working with documents. The physical appearance of the book is poor, the spiral binding is not suitable for such a bulky composition, and the reproduction of mimeographed pages is sometimes of poor quality.

The work is divided into four large sections. The "Introductory Material" to government publications consists of some titles already published in the Reader, and most of the information is available in other publications. The other sections describe a few executive agencies, their main publications, and what New York City, New York State, the UN, and the British are publishing. O'Hara's essays, previously published in the Wilson Library Bulletin, comprise a large part. To these are added some new chapters, a few reprints of original U.S. government publications, and writings of other authors. The activities of many important government agencies and sub-agencies are neglected. The descriptions are far too long, filled with unnecessarily small details, and many of the publications listed in the bibliographies are seldom used. The index is only an alphabetized listing of the table of contents.

For information on agencies and their products, it is much easier to look in the U.S. Government Manual (which is legible, more complete, updated, well indexed, and less expensive) or in Andriot's Guide to U.S. Government Publications. No matter how much we marvel at the tremendous amount of information crammed together in this work, this compilation is definitely not for the working librarian. Library students taking a course in government publications may be able to use a small part of it.—LOUIS KIRALDI, WESTERN MICHIGAN UNIVERSITY, KALAMAZOO

LJ CHECKLIST



Library manual

How To Organize and Operate a Small Library will meet the needs of churches, law firms, museums, historical societies, corporations, small communities, and others without the services of a trained librarian. Written in simple terms, the 47-page manual tells how to order, classify, and maintain books and other materials, prepare a card catalog, check books in and out, keep yearly records, and seek funding, financial subsidies, and technical assistance. A list of suppliers is appended, although only the publisher is listed under "Library and A-V Equipment and Supplies"! Copies cost $2.20 each postpaid (6-11 copies, $2; 12 or more, $1.90) from the Highsmith Company, Inc., Box 25, Fort Atkinson, Wis. 53538.

Student aid

Thirteen Steps to Research is a quick reference guide for the student preparing a paper. It includes sample footnotes and manuscript pages. The 50-page publication costs $1 from its authors, Anna Johnston, Colchester High School, Colchester, Vt. 05446, or Ernest Cabrera, South Burlington High School, S. Burlington, Vt. 05401.

Reference tool

Periodicals and Sources: A List of Federal Statistical Publications notes 798 titles of currently issued government periodicals which contain statistics on a wide variety of subjects. Citations include information on periodicity, availability, and depository status, and where appropriate, depository item number and hardcopy price. A list of 140 federal sources (Executive agencies, Congressional committees and offices, and others) which issue these periodicals is also provided. Many of the titles listed are not depository items and are not available for purchase from the Government Printing Office, although some may be acquired directly from an individual issuing agency. The checklist is offered at no charge to librarians by Congressional Information Service, Inc., 7101 Wisconsin Ave., Washington, D.C. 20014.

Energy bibliography

Comprehensive collections on the environment and energy will want to add Anaerobic Digestion of Livestock Wastes To Produce Methane, a bibliography of materials written between 1946 and June 1975. Over 400 entries, one-third of them bearing abstracts, cite international literature relating to the anaerobic digestion of farm-generated cellulosic wastes and the fertilizing value of the effluent. Appendixes include a detailing of the compilers' research method and its limitations, and a tabular survey of recent literature. The 103-page publication is available for $2, with checks or money orders made payable to the Agricultural Engineering Dept., University of Minnesota. The fee will allow the compilers, Gregg S. Shadduck and James A. Moore, to recoup printing and postage costs and to distribute a number of copies free to researchers in Third World countries. Send your requests to Mr. Moore at the Department, Univ. of Minnesota, St. Paul, Minn. 55108.

Church library guide

A bibliography of aids to organizing and operating effective religious libraries is available from the Church and Synagogue Library Association. This 16-page booklet, a second edition, includes sections on library promotion and publicity sources, and contains the names and addresses of church and synagogue library associations in the United States and Canada; the national headquarters for denominational library services; religious library periodicals; and publishers, associations and directories which may be sources of materials. Church and Synagogue Library Resources costs $2 prepaid from CSLA Headquarters, P.O. Box 530, Bryn Mawr, Pa. 19010. A handling charge will be added if billing is required.

On voluntarism

A three-page bibliography, Suggested Readings on Voluntarism, has 21 annotated entries. Send 75¢ for the list to Warner-Eddison Associates, Box 254, Lexington, Mass. 02173.

Kid stuff

Librarians besieged with requests for suggestions for children's reading might do well to secure a copy of Children's Books and Recordings 1975. Prepared to aid library users in selecting holiday gifts, the publication would serve as a ready guide to borrowers as well. Entries, with brief annotations, are listed alphabetically under general subject headings. These include: picture books; Christmas stories; picture book folk and fairy tales; folk and fairy tales; stories; stories for older boys and girls; poetry and song; the arts; hobbies, crafts and pastimes; sports, nature; the sciences; "What Is Man . . .?"; people and places, native Americans; "Making Our Way"—1776 and Beyond; children's books and childhood; and new editions and reprints. There is a section on recordings, as well as an author and title index. The 48-page booklet, which is free to those who request it in person at one of New York's branch libraries, costs $2 prepaid by mail. Send requests to Office of the Branch Libraries, New York Public Library, 8 E. 40th St., New York, N.Y. 10016.

Alternative school report

The Mini-School Experiment, by James J. Morriseau, documents a unique project in which the entire Haaren High School in Manhattan was divided into 12 smaller schools, each with its own distinctive academic program and teaching staff. The book discusses the shortcomings of the educational system which led to the conception and analyzes the experiment's successes and failures. Speculations on the future of the Mini-School Project and of alternative education and school renewal in general, particularly in the inner cities, are included. The concluding chapter is a handbook for educators and community groups interested in launching their own alternative school programs. It offers a step-by-step guide to planning, organization, management, financing, administration, staffing, day-to-day operations, involvement of the business community, and facilities planning and acquisition. The 158-page paperback costs $3.95 and may be ordered from the New York Urban Coalition, Inc., 1270 Ave. of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10020.

LJ MAGAZINES

Bill Katz, PROFESSOR, SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SCIENCE, STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK, ALBANY

Book Forum

1974. Quarterly. $10. Ed: Marshall Hayes. Hudson River Pr., Rhinecliff, N.Y. 12574. Illus. adv. Aud: Ac. (Subject: Books and Book Reviews. Issues examined: Vol. 1, Nos. 1-4, 1974-75)

A general book review journal for scholars and for "the educated general reader," a typical 150- to 170-page issue of Book Forum considers some 60 new titles in signed 250- to 500-word reviews; 30 pages of "new and recommended books" are treated in 100 words or so per title; and there is a section of essays and notes on publishers, literature, bibliography, etc. One of the best features is Robert Armstrong's column on writing and publishing, which appears in each number. There is also a section of forthcoming books arranged by subject. Unfortunately, there is no publication date of titles reviewed, the assumption apparently being that they are all current books. Most titles do appear to represent the current output of primarily American university or scholarly publishers. The reviewers are professors, many are members of the journal's editorial board. In tone, arrangement, and style this is more a leisurely review media than a standard library item such as Library Journal or Choice. It is more for individuals than for libraries, falling somewhere between the TLS and New York Times Review and book notes at the end of countless scholarly journals. Good for casual reading but of limited value for library book selection.—BK

CoEvolution Quarterly

1974. Quarterly. $6. Ed: Stewart Brand. Point, Box 428, Sausalito, Calif. 94965. Illus. Aud: Ga, Ac, Hs. (Subject: Alternative Cultures. Issue examined: Summer 1975)

The founder and editor of the defunct, although apparently to be resurrected, Whole Earth Catalog is back. This time he and a nonprofit group are editing a standard format 140- to 200-page magazine. Contents follow the familiar Whole Earth approach, e.g. a mixture of articles, comments, and detailed descriptions of hundreds of items from books to miniature flutes. This time there are more articles, and the writers include Fuller, Memford, Bateson, Erlich, etc. The purpose is to alert citizens to causes and information sources which will improve the lifestyle of the individual and of the community. There are numerous illustrations, notes about a variety of materials, and accurate bibliographical data for publications. The whole is organized under ten to 12 standard subject headings, and while a browsing addict's dream, the magazine can be used with a little effort by reference librarians. As a nonprofit publisher, Brand accepts no advertising. It is difficult to overpraise what has become the extension of a publishing legend, but the quarterly can be recommended without reservation for all types and sizes of libraries.—BK

Access

1975. Biweekly. $20. Ed: Chuck Shepherd. National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting, 1346 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., Suite 525, Washington, D.C. 20036. Illus. Aud: Ac, Ga. (Subject: Communications and Media. Issue examined: July 14, 1975)

Although primarily focused on public access to television and radio, this 20- to 24-page report is more broadly concerned with a critical analysis of all types of communication. Publisher Nicholas Johnson writes: "We like to think of Access as the Consumer Reports of the media reform business," and so it is, in the best tradition of (More), The Columbia Journalism Review and Content. Access is a hard-hitting, factual record of the journalism peculiar to commercial and public radio and television. There are usually one or two articles or reports, but for library reference purposes the magazine is a must because of the careful auditing of the FCC docket, Congressional hearings, and notes on both official and unofficial events which have, or will, shape the media. Equally helpful is the detailed "Classified news," which includes bibliographical notes, directory information, and short notes on FCC activities throughout the United States. (Note: not to be confused with Gaylord's new periodical index of the same name.)—BK

The Spirit That Moves Us

1975. Three issues a year. $4. (Individuals, $3.) Ed: Morty Sklar. P. O. Box 1585, Iowa City, Iowa 52240. Illus. Aud: Ac. (Subject: Poetry. Issue examined: Vol. 1, No. 1, September 1975)

A carefully composed, offset little poetry magazine whose editorial policy is explained by the editor: "My only prejudices are guaranteed to be those of my personal taste only." This translates into 26 entries—from the editor to Rilke to Michael Lally and Darrell Gray to lesser knowns. Quality is good, sometimes excellent. As they say: This has considerable promise. It should be, at a minimum, found in Midwestern libraries.—BK

Resources

1974. Monthly. $5. Ed: Richard Gardner. Box 134, Harvard Square, Cambridge, Mass. 02138. Aud: Ga, Ac. (Subject: Communications and Media. Issues examined: Various, 1975)

In eight to ten pages, Resources lists and briefly annotates 60 to 70 media items which may be had free or purchased from a variety of sources. The editor lists information on "changing needs and aspirations, new ideas, products, services, events, and the people, groups and organizations that are changing and creating." For example, one issue opens with data on "A Directory of Information Resources in the United States," ends with news about a free "unit pricing and calorie counting slide rule." As much of this material is free or inexpensive, and as Resources costs little, it is an ideal buying guide for librarians—and individuals. Gardner offers a number of other services, and the librarian should write him for information. Meanwhile, Resources is highly recommended, particularly in these days of tight budgets and rapid changes in society—changes documented by the items listed here.—BK

Harper's Weekly

1975. Weekly. $12. Ed: Robert Shnayerson. Harper's Magazine Co., 2 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016. (Subs to: 381 West Center St. Marion, Ohio 43302.) Illus. adv. Aud: Ga. (Subject: General Magazines. Issue examined: July 28, 1975)

Fletcher Harper founded the original Harper's Weekly in 1857, and it grew to be the most popular illustrated magazine in America. Politics and changing tastes finally killed it off in 1916. Now it returns, dutifully reprinting some of the illustrations from the original, but with an entirely new editorial policy. The editor devotes 16 to 20 pages to a radio talk show in print. Other material—from items such as "I was a teenage non-shoplifter," to interviews ("He runs the jail on fear"), to longer articles—are primarily by nonprofessional writers with something to say. There are one or two staff pieces and editorial comments throughout. The judicious editing turns the tabloid grab bag into a folksy, activist gossip sheet. The saving factor is the liberal, intelligent commentary of some lay contributions who would spark even the dullest talk show. Lacking any central direction, other than the noble "giving the press back to the people" (and when did they ever have it?), the new Harper's Weekly is a mild ripoff with occasional value. Not recommended.—BK

TWO NEW REFERENCE TOOLS ON CHILDREN'S LITERATURE

CHILDREN'S BOOK REVIEW INDEX

Edited by Gary C. Tarbert. Periodical Issues appear triannually: January-April, May-August, September-December. ISBN 0-8103-0625-5. Subscription, $18.00/year. Annual Cumulations of periodical issues published in March following the year covered. 1975 Cumulation, ISBN 0-8103-0626-3. $18.00/year.

Based on Gale's Book Review Index, the new Children's Book Review Index cites all children's book reviews that are cited in BRI, which now indexes reviews in over 250 periodicals and newspapers. CBRI cites all reviews appearing in the periodicals devoted to children's literature, and all children's book reviews in the other periodicals covered. Entries give: author's name . . . title of book . . . reviewing publication . . . date and page of review.

CHILDREN'S LITERATURE REVIEW

Edited by Ann Block and Carolyn Riley. About two clothbound volumes per year. Cumulative indexes of authors, critics, and book titles in each volume. Volume 1, ISBN 0-8103-0077-X, is in print. $25.00/volume.

Children's Literature Review furnishes librarians, teachers, and parents with a representative selection of in-depth critical commentary on the writings of both past and present authors of children's books. The long excerpts are taken from hundreds of critical appraisals in books and magazines that treat children's literature. Arranged alphabetically by author, each entry begins with a brief note on the author, plus excerpts from general commentaries. Following are excerpts from criticism on specific books by the author. The entry ends with a list of full citations of additional book reviews and commentary.

Volume 8 just published

SOMETHING ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Facts and Pictures about Contemporary Authors and Illustrators of Books for Young People. Edited by Anne Commire. Sketches give biographical details, complete bibliographies, literary sidelights, critical comments, etc. With author portraits, illustrations from each author's books, and cumulative indexes to authors and illustrations. Volume 8, ISBN 0-8103-0064-8, contains sketches on 200 authors not covered in earlier volumes. $25.00/volume.

"Something about the Author will be useful not only to boys and girls needing information on authors and their lives, but also to students of children's literature, authors and would-be authors, librarians, and teachers . . . Recommended." (The Booklist, Feb. 1, 1972)

"Important for even a small basic reference collection in this subject." (Wilson Library Bulletin, Sept., 1972)

Something about the Author was included in Library Journal's annual list of "outstanding reference books." (Library Journal, April 15, 1972)

Please write for detailed information on these titles. Placing standing orders for these publications insures prompt delivery.

ALL GALE BOOKS ARE SENT ON 30-DAY APPROVAL.

GALE RESEARCH COMPANY

BOOK TOWER • DETROIT, MICHIGAN 48226

LJ
BOOK REVIEW

The Contemporary Scene

Hall, Edward T. Beyond Culture.

Anchor: Doubleday. 1976. 256p. LC 74-3550. ISBN 0-385-08747-0. $7.95. PSYCH/SOC SCI

Man is always a piece of the cultural fabric into which he is woven. Space, movement, people, context, buildings, furniture, weather, all impinge and make meaning for the moment. In turn, man creates and imposes meaning upon his environment. Hall is one of the few anthropologists to carefully study the effect of physical settings upon human behavior, and to investigate the functions and effects of language and cultural expectation that code meaning into our human biological functioning. Hall bases this study on "two widely diverging but interrelated experiences, psychoanalysis and work as an anthropologist." The key here is experience, and the result is intellectually fascinating and emotionally challenging. Especially worthwhile is the last chapter, where Hall analyzes the dangers inherent in an unconscious identification with one's particular culture and stresses the need to go "beyond culture." The book's graceful, nontechnical style and the many illuminating, real-life illustrations make it a delight to read.—E. Mansell Pattison, M.D., Dept. of Psychiatry & Human Behavior, Univ. of California, Irvine

Lloyd, Robin. For Money or Love: boy prostitution in America.

Vanguard. Mar. 1976. 256p. intro. by Birch Bayh. ISBN 0-8149-0773-3. $8.95. CRIME

An investigative reporter brought to the topic by an incident involving his own son and his ward, Lloyd considers honestly and without sensationalism the problem of boy prostitution in America, which may involve between 300,000 and 600,000 children. He first states the case, emphasizing the diverse types of boy prostitution, from the one centering around poverty-scarred urban areas fed by runaway children to luxury stables of boys serving wealthy homosexuals, and rings forming in cities and towns throughout the country. In the second part Lloyd details the causes of boy prostitution, emphasizing such elements as the failure of sex education in the schools, the lack of interest of parents, the danger of correctional institutions as breeding grounds for homosexual prostitution, the drug culture, and the new sexual awareness of the popular youth culture. Finally, he suggests cures, including the establishment of group homes for runaways; improvement of the juvenile justice system, which often spawns prostitution; and the formation of a Department of Education and Youth, to devote itself fully to these and other problems of youth. A worthwhile book, stressing the need for a national solution.—L. W. Griffin, Univ. of Wisconsin Lib., Madison

Mitchner, Stuart. Indian Action: an American journey to the great fair of the East.

Little. Mar. 1976. 246p. ISBN 0-316-57530-5. $8.95. TRAV

Luckily, readers are forewarned that Indian Action is "reimagined" nonfiction. But it's really an hallucinogenic travelogue, propelling Mitchner and friends across India in a frantic, stoned, hilarious, and exhaustive drive toward the Kumbha Mela: the great fair on the shore of the Ganges, where literally millions gather once every 12 years for a mass exhibition of either utmost devotion or Machiavellian commercialism. A remarkable journey, peopled with unforgettable characters and suffused with a heady literary exoticism. It's Kerouac's On the Road abroad—with Americans who try like hell to penetrate India's devious simplicity but who just get weirder in the process. It shares some of that book's excessiveness and obfuscation, but also its zest, wonder, and downright hairiness!—Thomas D. Bedell, Asst. Editor, "Valley Stream MAILeader," N.Y.

Pinkney, Alphonso. Red, Black, and Green: black nationalism in the United States.

Cambridge Univ. Pr. Mar. 1975. 250p. index. LC 75-22550. ISBN 0-521-20887-4. $12.95. HIST/SOC SCI

Pinkney defines nationalism as ethnic consciousness consisting of unity, pride in cultural heritage, and some degree of autonomy for self-determination. Within this framework, he studies the history and contemporary manifestations of Afro-American nationalism. He categorizes the present movement into revolutionary, cultural, educational, and religious aspects, and analyzes separately the goals, leaders, and activities of each, providing some comment on the conflicts between them. Pinkney eschews jargon and his book is easily within the grasp of general readers, though it will also appeal to scholars. One should note, however, that the au-

CONTENTS

The Contemporary Scene	799
Reference	800
Art	803
Biography	805
Business & Economics	807
Communications	808
Education	808
History	808
Home Economics	814
Humor	814
Literature	814
Philosophy	818
Poetry	819
Political Science & International Affairs	820
Psychology & Psychiatry	821
Religion	823
Science & Technology	824
Social Science	826
Sports & Recreation	828
Theater	831
Fiction	832
Book Review & Professional Reading Author Index	837

Library Journal reviews are indexed in Book Review Index and in Book Review Digest.

"Entertaining...colorful"
—Publishers Weekly

"Peculiar Institutions"
AN INFORMAL HISTORY OF THE SEVEN SISTER COLLEGES
By ELAINE KENDALL
Author of The Upper Hand and The Happy Mediocrity

"A social, occasionally institutional history of the Seven Sister Colleges—Smith, Mount Holyoke, Vassar, Wellesley, Barnard, Radcliffe, and Bryn Mawr—from the days of their founding to the present.... Kendall gives a detailed account of the pioneers... discusses the struggles and rewards of life at each school... reflects the shifting history of the times, up through the activist '60s." —Kirkus Reviews. Illustrations, bibliography, index. $8.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

LIPPINCOTT

"Exhilarating... holds the reader enthralled."
—Publishers Weekly

SNOW, STARS AND WILD HONEY
George P. Morrill

"Without attempting a 'how to homestead in Vermont' guide, Morrill describes about five years in his life as he and his wife found their niche in southern Vermont and struggled to make it their own. . . . Timeless, and will appeal to other young couples starting out, especially since Morrill writes with both humor and insight." — Library Journal. "Written with a modest grace and good sense that somehow suit the subject the way bread suits butter." — Kirkus Reviews. Photographs. LC 75-14084
ISBN 0-397-01029-X $7.95

Write Library Service Dept. for FREE high school and YA catalog.

J. B. Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105

thor's treatment of post-1973 changes is extremely cursory and he takes an anti-integrationist point of view. In general, his evaluations are not especially original or profound; but nevertheless his work is a very sound and useful compendium.—James Levin, Dept. of Special Programs, C.C.N.Y.

Shulman, Richard. The Billion Dollar Bookies.
Harper's Magazine Pr. Mar. 1976. 240p. $7.95. CONSUMER AFFAIRS/BUS
These "bookies" deal in life insurance. Shulman considers the mutual-type firms to be essentially involved in a "bookmaking operation," taking in bets (premiums) and paying out part of this income to the winners (death beneficiaries). Like all good bookies, however, they adjust the odds so that the income exceeds the output. The author charges that the surplus funds have reached unnecessary levels and that they should be distributed in dividends to policyholders or else channeled into worthwhile social projects. To correct the situation, he urges that consumer groups gain control of the mutuals through a united campaign to elect responsive boards of directors (the one policyholder, one vote rule applies in most mutuals). For starters he includes a set of reply cards for readers to submit (these cards "will only be made available to organizations and other interested persons seeking to bring about changes"). Though the author is a bit glib at times, overall his book is enlightening, and it should be of interest to the many readers who hold policies through these mutuals.—William H. Hoffman, Wichita P.L., Kansas

Tutko, Thomas, M.D. & William Bruns. Winning Is Everything and Other American Myths.
Macmillan. Jun. 1976. 224p. ISBN 0-02-620770-2. $7.95. SPORTS
During 1975, over five million pre-adolescent boys and girls competed in organized sports. Only one percent will ever make a national team or sign a pro contract. This book is about the other 99 percent and the effects of the "winning is everything" philosophy on their enjoyment of sports and the development of their self-concepts. The authors give good advice to parents who have to deal with the psychological problems common to this age group as a result of a child's participation or lack of it in sports activities. Such advice makes this an important work for child rearing as well as sports collections. The writing is hindered by a lack of footnotes guiding the reader to the many fine sources cited in the text; nonetheless, this work is a much better choice than Martin Ralbovsky's Lords of the Locker Room (LJ 11/1/74) for its treatment of the influence of athletic coaches on youth, and it compares very favorably with Terry Orlick and Cal Botterill's Every Kid Can Win (LJ 5/15/75) in its assessment of the effects of the damage done to many children by the "winning is everything" philosophy. Highly recommended.—Kenneth Tracy, Oklahoma State Univ. Lib., Stillwater

Yates, Gayle Graham. What Women Want: the ideas of the movement.
Harvard Univ. Pr. 1975. 230p. bibliog. index. LC 75-14018. ISBN 0-674-95077-1. $10. soc sci
Yates offers a comprehensive and well-written work of scholarship on the ideas of the women's movement. From the apparent chaos of a rapidly changing social and intellectual situation, Yates discerns three perspectives in the women's movement, which she identifies as the feminist, the women's liberationist, and the androgynous paradigms. She traces the evolution of these strands from their sources in early feminist thinking to their recent manifestations, offering sensitive and informed criticism in the process. According to Yates, the three ideologies are competing for dominance in current feminism, and the result will determine the future development of the movement. Although the author's own position on issues is always apparent, What Women Want is clearly the work of a disciplined scholar rather than a polemicist. In contrast to the plethora of shoddy literature in the area of women's studies, Yates's book is a significant contribution to intellectual history. Besides being an important source for scholars, its interesting and readable style will make it available to the general reading public.—Myra McMurry, Dept. of English, Valdosta State Coll., Ga.

REFERENCE

Anderson, Bob, ed. SportSource.
World. 1976. 430p. illus. bibliog. LC 75-16003. ISBN 0-89037-061-3. $9.95. SPORTS/REF
Athletic activities are no longer the sole domain of the super jock. The average person has a tremendous interest in participation sports. The purpose of this book is to turn even more people on to the benefits of sport. To do this, brief, yet informative descriptions are provided for over 210 sports, games, hobbies, and recreational activities. Comments by athletes, teachers, or writers are also included for each entry, along with photographs. An annotated bibliography of books and periodicals in the field and a list of organizations to write for further information accompany each article. The book's appeal lies in its breadth (e.g., everything from abalone diving to yoga is discussed) not its depth, since it is not designed to give detailed accounts. Highly readable and attractive, SportSource is recommended for public library sports collections.—Scott Cohen, Jackson State Comm. Coll. Lib., Tenn.

Atkinson, Frank. Dictionary of Pseudonyms and Pen-Names: a selection of popular modern writers in English.
Linnet: Shoe String. 1975. 166p. ISBN 0-208-01540-X. $9. LIT/REF
No librarian can ever have too many dictionaries of pseudonyms, and unfortunately, the standard works usually stop short somewhere around 1900. So even with its limitations, the present work is probably a necessary item. Atkinson defines his subject as writers publishing in English since 1900 and lists, according to his publisher, more than 2500 authors. His book is in two parts: real names followed by pen names, and pen names with corresponding real names. One suspects a strong British bias, and is far more likely to find an obscure author listed if he is British rather than American. No birth and death dates are given; in fact, no information whatever is included, simply cross references of names. Nevertheless, simply to cover all the angles in a difficult reference area libraries should consider purchase.—Sheila Pepper, McMaster Univ. Lib., Hamilton, Ontario, Canada

Graves, Edgar B., ed. A Bibliography of English History to 1485: based on "The Sources and Literature of English History from the Earliest Times to About 1485" by Charles Gross.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1975. 1103p. index. ISBN 0-19-822391-9. $52. HIST/BIBLIOG

Gross's Sources and Literature . . ., published in 1915 and familiar to every reference librarian, has finally been brought up to date. This version follows Gross's original plan, with numerous new sections: e.g., local history, structure of society, agrarian society, the church, and a catchall entitled "Intellectual Interests." Each section begins with a short introduction, and many entries have sub-entries, making the total list considerably larger than the 7225 main items. As one might expect in a work so vast, there are errors and misprints, and some scholars will quibble that their favorite books are missing. But the coverage seems very full right up to the closing date, December 1970. The index, 166 pages long, is stronger on names and places than on subjects, in the usual British style. Used in conjunction with other reference works (which it lists), this work should prove invaluable to any library. —Donald K. Fry, Dept. of English, SUNY at Stony Brook

Grotpeter, John J. Historical Dictionary of Swaziland.

Scarecrow. (African Historical Dictionaries, No. 3). 1975. 251p. map. bibliog. LC 75-4734. ISBN 0-8108-0805-6. $10. HIST/REF

Grotpeter has done expert and thorough work in detailing and describing persons, places, organizations, and events of significance in the history of Swaziland. His inclusion of many items foreign to Swaziland yet important in its past is extremely useful, as are his exhaustive subject bibliography and chronological table. Unfortunately this dictionary does not give pronunciations for Swazi words or birth and death dates for individuals. Grotpeter has otherwise covered his ground quite admirably. This volume and others in the valuable series should be acquired by all libraries interested in African affairs.—Louis W. Truschel, Dept. of History, Western Washington State Coll., Bellingham

Hammelmann, Hans. Book Illustrators in Eighteenth-Century England.

pub. for the Paul Mellon Centre for Studies in British Art by Yale Univ. Pr. 1976. 120p. + 45 illus. ed. & completed by T. S. R. Boase. index. LC 75-2770. ISBN 0-300-01895-9. $27.50. GRAPHIC ARTS/REF

There were several hands involved in the preparation of this volume, but the end result is most successful. It is primarily a biographical dictionary of 263 artists involved in imaginative book illustration in 18th-Century England, and excludes those concerned with architecture or the sciences. The entries range from a paragraph to several columns and are followed by a short title listing of books illustrated for each artist. There are 44 pages of well-chosen plates, a fine essay on book illustration of the period by Dr. Boase, and a brief selective listing of books whose designers are unknown. The whole is written with wit and grace; a wealth of material brought together to delight and instruct. It is worth mentioning that the book is well-designed—surely a boon in a reference work. Indispensable for libraries collecting in English art and literature.—GraceAnne A. DeCandido, N.Y.P.L.

Harting, Emilie C. A Literary Tour Guide to England and Scotland.

Morrow. 1976. 191p. maps. index. LC 75-22189. ISBN 0-688-02971-X. $6.95. LIT/REF

A portable handbook of the literary greats of English literature. English and Scottish towns of literary interest are a milestone in literary exploration

COMPREHENSIVE INDEX TO ENGLISH-LANGUAGE LITTLE MAGAZINES, 1890-1970

now available

For the first time, 100 important English-language little magazine titles (both foreign and American) have been completely indexed from their beginning issues through their last issues, or 1970. These 100 distinct "experiments in literature" characterized as "little magazines" have been chosen for Series One by two distinguished experts in the field of literature: Professors Charles Allen and Felix Pollack. The Index provides access for the first time to many existing works until now "lost" to scholars. In addition to early texts of major authors, the only published works of secondary authors can now be easily located.

. . . over 6,000 pages
. . . over 200,000 entries
. . . over 33,000 contributors

Edited by Marion Sader. Series One. 9 volumes. Millwood, N.Y., 1976.

LC 74-11742 ISBN 0-527-00370-0 clothbound $590.00

For further information, or to place an order, please write or call:

Kraus-Thomson Organization Limited
Route 100, Millwood, New York 10546
(914) 762-2200

"Highly recommended...
Explains the role that knowledgeable parents can play. The alphabetical listing of medical problems includes many rare conditions for which reference is useful, but the emphasis is on common ailments... Rapidly changing areas such as diet and auto-safety devices are given up-to-the-minute treatment... Parents will much appreciate the detail and lucid style of this authoritative book."
—Library Journal

CHILD HEALTH ENCYCLOPEDIA
The Complete Guide for Parents
The Boston Children's Medical Center
& Richard I. Feinbloom, M.D.

$15.00
ISBN: 0-440-01385-2
DELACORTE PRESS

Delacorte Press/Seymour Lawrence
DELL PUBLISHING CO., INC.
1 Dag Hammarskjold Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10017

listed in alphabetical order, complete with directions and visiting hours. Harting has established two criteria for selecting sites: the site must be easily associated with a recognized author, and it must be either visable or open to visitors at least part of the year. London walking tours are arranged by neighborhoods, and houses are identified as to authors and material written there. Harting knows her literature and writes well. Her book is recommended for college and public libraries.—Dortha H. Skelton, Coll. of William and Mary Lib., Williamsburg, Va.

Index to U.S. Government Periodicals.
Infordata Internat. Inc., Suite 4602, 175 E. Delaware Pl., Chicago, Ill. 60611. 1975. 636p. ed. by Allan Carpenter. index. $175. REF

The intent of this retrospective work is to index those "U.S. government periodicals which [offer] substantive articles of lasting research and reference value." Beyond that statement, no definite criteria are given as determining the inclusion or exclusion of a particular title. This Index covers 149 titles published during 1973—an increase of ten titles over the Index for 1974—with articles listed under an integrated author-subject arrangement. The articles are not annotated, but full bibliographic information is given for each entry, including the sequence number for articles which may be found in Current U.S. Government Periodicals on Microfiche. The volume contains an alphabetical listing of indexed periodicals which includes the frequency of publication, the 1975 Superintendent of Documents classification number, and an indication of whether the title is on the list of periodicals sent to depository libraries and of whether the title is distributed by the GPO. A second alphabetical listing of the journals gives the addresses of the publishing agencies. The price includes the hard-bound cumulation and three paper-cover quarterly indexes. Cumulations and retrospectives for 1970, 1971, 1972, and 1975 are scheduled for publication in 1976.—Colin McLeod, Dept. of English, Virginia Polytechnic Inst. & State Univ., Blacksburg

Liao, Allen Y. Acupuncture: a research bibliography.
NYU Medical Center Lib., Catalog Dept., 550 1st Ave., N.Y.C. 10016. 1975. 66p. index. pap. $3.95. MED/BIBLIOG

Liao has compiled a numbered list of almost 800 items on a topic of much current interest and awareness. Included are 168 books, as well as articles from 364 English-language and 243 foreign-language journals; all appeared in print between 1960 and early 1975. Journal citations, divided into English and foreign languages, are arranged by title. For the latter, an English translation is provided with the original language indicated. Newspaper and nonscientific periodical citations are not included. There is a supplemental AV section that includes 17 slides, tapes, video cassettes, and motion pictures. Acupuncture periodicals, journal abbreviations, and an author index complete this publication. It should be useful to a wide audience and especially to health professionals in acupuncture diagnosis, therapy, and research.—James E. Bobick, Temple Univ. Libs., Philadelphia

Rust, Brian. The American Dance Band Discography 1917-1942. 2 vols.
Arlington House. 1976. 2066p. index. LC 75-33689. ISBN 0-87000-248-1. $35. MUSIC/REF

Any new publication by Rust is a special event. He and Walter C. Allen pioneered the bio-discography concept with King Joe Oliver (1955, o.p.), and Rust's Jazz Records A-Z: 1897-1942 (International Pubs. Serv., 1969. 3d ed.) is one of the few truly indispensable reference works for jazz. The line between "jazz" and "dance" genres is often hazy. Many famous jazz bands, of course, played for dancing. Here, as opposed to his earlier monograph The Dance Bands (International Pubs. Serv., 1973), Rust generally excludes items of jazz interest—especially the work of those bands (Ellington, Henderson, Basie, Miller, Goodman) which have received thorough discographical treatment elsewhere. Rust uses the standard format of jazz discography: alphabetical ordering by leader/performer; individual entries by date with locale, personnel, titles arranged in sequence of matrix numbers, and catalog numbers of all 78 rpm issues. A thorough and meticulous study destined to be the definitive work of its kind for many years.—James Patrick, Cornell Univ.

A HARPER PAPERBACK

The essential book on the past, present and future status of women

Women's Rights Almanac

Edited by Nancy Gager

"Oriented entirely toward women's interests in general and the national and international feminist movement in particular, this unique source presents both statistical and textual data on one of our major social concerns... Arranged for easy use and well-indexed."
—Library Journal

A Library Size Paperback
CN/450 $5.95

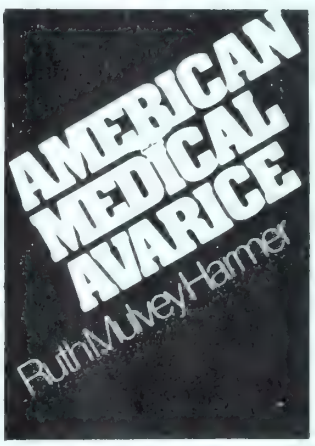
for a complete Women's Studies list write to

Harper & Row
Paperback Dept
10 E. 53d St., New York 10022

THE CROWELL CORNER · ABELARD-SCHUMAN



AMERICAN MEDICAL AVARICE
by Ruth Mulvey Harmer
Foreword by Jerry Voorhis

"This excellent analysis of the medical care system in this country is important reading for everyone.... An outstanding job of pointing out the discrepancies and shortcomings of health care."
—Library Journal

ISBN: 0-200-04025-1
LC: 74-9370
$8.95

ABELARD-SCHUMAN
A division of T.Y. Crowell
666 Fifth Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10019

Triche, Charles W., III & Diane Samson Triche. The Euthanasia Controversy, 1812–1974: a bibliography with select annotations.

Whitston, 1975. 242p. index. LC 75-8379. ISBN 0-87875-071-1. $18. MED BIBLIOG

After consulting more than 30 indexing and abstracting services, the authors have produced a detailed bibliography of 1300-odd items on a timely biomedical subject. There are three sections: books and essays (150 items), periodical literature, and author index. Both popular and scientific journals are represented and arranged alphabetically by article title within 19 subject divisions such as death determination, decisions and medical ethics, geriatrics, and living will. Titles of non-English citations are translated with indication of original language. Most of the numbered items are accompanied by crisp descriptive annotations. An excellent addition to most library collections, considering the current interest in this highly charged topic.—James E. Bobick, Temple Univ. Libs., Philadelphia

Warner, Ezra J. & W. Buck Yearns. Biographical Register of the Confederate Congress.

Louisiana State Univ. Pr. 1975. 319p. illus. maps, bibliog. index. LC 74-77329. ISBN 0-8071-0092-7. $15. BIOG REF

The Register includes 500-word sketches of the Confederate Congress' 267 members, followed by appendixes listing officers and state delegations of provisional and regular sessions, as well as each member's committee assignments. Also included is a 12-page bibliography. Unfortunately, the use of footnotes has been parsimonious; and the authors have chosen not to give direct citations to "generally accessible works" or to "certain primary sources" (except for direct quotes). Nonetheless, the Register corrects the published record in some cases—e.g., on birth dates and places of interment—and the brief life histories of more obscure members do add to the personal characteristics upon which Thomas B. Alexander and Richard E. Beringer based their Anatomy of the Confederate Congress (Vanderbilt Univ. Pr., 1972). For collections strong in Confederate history.—Sally Linden, Wellesley Coll. Lib., Mass.

ART

Gaya-Nuño, Juan Antonio. Juan Gris.

New York Graphic Society, 1975. 267p. illus., some color, bibliog. index. LC 75-9106. ISBN 0-8212-0667-2. $47.50. ART

This is the first monograph on Gris (who died in 1927) to be published in his native Spain, and the strangely combative tone of this account of his life and work may appear odd to readers here. For the critical neglect that the author attacks has not been evident here: Kahnweiler's classic appraisal has been available in several editions and Soby's critical study for the 1958 Museum of Modern Art exhibition is still in print. There have also been numerous journal articles on Gris. Perhaps it is the translation, but Gaya-Nuño's concern seems to center largely on small differences in biographical information and on this artist's status vis-à-vis his more famous compatriot, Picasso. What value this book has for collections which own either Soby's or Kahnweiler's book rests in its several hundred illustrations, many of them representing the late, less rigorously Cubist works which hardly appear in the other studies. But the awkward large-print format, the lack of correspondence between text and plates, and the cropped effect of many of these as they bleed to the edge of the pages even diminishes that value.—Margot Karp, Pratt Inst. Lib., Brooklyn

Architecture

Stanforth, Deirdre. Restored America.

Praeger, 1976. 245p. photogs., some color by Louis Reens, fwd. by James Biddle. LC 74-5573. ISBN 0-275-49740-2. $25. ARCHITECTURE

Primarily a picture book of successful preservation efforts across the country. While the 250 color and black-and-white photographs handsomely portray a variety of reuse and restoration projects, the emphasis is clearly on domestic architecture rather than on more complex facilities (railroad stations, factories, schools). Stanforth's text provides little practical or in-depth information on the means of acquisition, the sources of funding restorations, or the problems of zoning or locating professional expertise. The lack of an index and a bibliography, coupled with inadequate photograph identification, limits the usefulness of this lavish but ultimately disappointing volume.—H. Ward Jandl, National Register of Historic Places, Washington, D.C.

Decorative Arts & Crafts

Cassin-Scott, Jack. Making Historical Costume Dolls.

Branford, 1975. 96p. illus. LC 74-26667. ISBN 0-8231-3031-2. $8.50. CRAFTS

This thin British book with many photos of dolls tries to tell how to make the figures from scratch, how to make up their faces, plus how to construct nine costumes. The author attempted to simplify the process—and succeeded, to the point of relating what the dolls should look like rather than clearly explaining how to make them. Details make all the difference in re-creating the artifacts of a historical era, and they're sadly missing here. Even the photographed costumes, impressive at first glance, are poorly made. Good patterns are given for the costumes, although the dressmaking, which in the past was an art, is relegated to "instructions" such as "sew or stick on." Cassin-Scott's book could be used to make a few Bicentennial dolls; its historical costume notes are the most valuable part of the book. But if you follow his instructions, the dolls will end up looking like the models for low-budget period movies, where Martha Washington would have a zipper up the back of her dress.—Marion Mylly Bartholomew, New York

The ALA called this women's directory an "outstanding reference book" —and now it's even better!

NOW AVAILABLE

Twice as big and twice as useful as the first edition, this unique directory now has approximately 20,000 detailed entries and four indexes—alphabetical, geographical, subject area and periodical—to identify and locate specialized organizations in the women's movement here and abroad, their leaders, and other prominent individuals. Since the women's movement has now become a major issue in legislation, politics, education, government, industry, and business, easy access to information about those individuals and groups directly concerned with the movement has become a necessity. That's why Library Journal recommended the first edition as a basic acquisition to any size collection.

1975-1976 Edition
WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS & LEADER'S DIRECTORY
First International Directory
Edited by Myra E. Barrer

Distributed exclusively to libraries, book dealers and the international market by The Baker & Taylor Companies. Published by Today Publications & News Service, Inc.

B&T THE BAKER & TAYLOR COMPANIES
DRAWER Z LJ-M-15-76
MOMENCE, ILLINOIS 60954

Please send me _____ copies of the WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS & LEADERS DIRECTORY—1975-1976 Edition @$46.00 each.

$_____ total enclosed.

ISBN 0-87999-007-4

Personal checks not accepted from individuals.

NAME _____

INSTITUTION _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____

STATE _____ ZIP _____

Chu, Arthur & Grace Chu. Oriental Cloisonné and Other Enamels: a guide to collecting and repairing.

Crown. 1975. 180p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 75-23441. ISBN 0-517-52352-3. $9.95. DEC ARTS

Although the Chus give the 13th Century as the date of earliest cloisonné and illustrate examples in museums of the 15th, virtually all remaining illustrations are of pieces made in the first quarter of the 20th Century. This was a period of mass imports from the Orient, and it is these which are now being sought by collectors. The techniques involved in producing the various types of enameled ware are explained, and the evidences of quality described. There is an excellent chapter on repairing; however, the work is not to be attempted by anyone with more than two thumbs or by anyone with limited patience. The Chus' useful Oriental Antiques and Collectibles (LJ 4/15/73) has a brief chapter on cloisonné, of which this is an extention (with a great many more illustrations). The stiff binding will not be serviceable for ordinary library use.—Paul von Khrum, formerly with New York Univ. Libs.

Dorn, Sylvia O'Neill. The How To Collect Anything Book.

Doubleday. 1976. 225p. LC 75-14814. ISBN 0-385-09824-3. $7.95. DEC ARTS

For anyone able to look past the fun of present collecting to the final disposition of the "treasure" by gift or sale, this experienced author has specific suggestions. Before getting to them at the end of her book, however, she examines the reasons for being a collector (rather than an accumulator, without plan) and shows how much better it is to stick to a single love than to play the field. With good sense and humor (a bit thinly, here and there) she covers almost every kind of antique, semi-quasi-genuine.—Sarah Chokla Gross, formerly Editor, "Broadside," Theatre Lib. Assn., East Rockaway, N.Y.

Kallem, Anne E. with assist. of Louisa B. Hellegers & Steven Morgenstern, comps. Giant Book of Crafts.

Sterling. 1976. 480p. illus. index. LC 75-14517. ISBN 0-8069-5328-4. $20; lib. ed. ISBN 0-8069-5329-2. $16.79. CRAFTS

In addition to the crafts that nearly everyone expects in a survey book on crafts these days (appliqué, quilting, needlepoint, decoupage, etc.), this thick volume covers some lesser-known arts (net-making, beauty recipes from natural foods, animating films without a camera, etc.). Since each section, such as "Mosaics With Natural Stones," is taken from a single smaller book (all published by Sterling), this book could be used in place of 31 volumes to try a new craft or to experiment in different ways with a familiar one. Well recommended despite the drawback of no bibliography on each individual craft.—Judith Odiorne, Roger Clark Memorial Lib., Pittsfield, Vt.

Kluger, Phyllis. A Needlepoint Gallery of Patterns from the Past.

Knopf. 1975. 191p. illus., some color. bibliog. LC 75-8234. $15. CRAFTS

This lovely book will be popular with all patrons who have needlepoint skill. The author has adapted to canvas designs found in ten different periods (from the Minoans to 19th Century America) and several different mediums (from mosaic floors to wallpaper). Although a few of the designs can be found in other needlework books, most are excitingly "new." Each of the 102 designs is shown in color and in chart form; each chart (except for one) is accompanied by tips for doing the design and dimensions. Adding to the value of the book are the capsule histories of each period covered. Although all the designs are attractive, those which may be used as borders may be the most valuable part of the book. This book is well worth its price: even those who never lift a needle will find the history and patterns captivating.—Dorothy E. Wynne, SUNY at Buffalo

Leach, Bernard. The Potter's Challenge.

Dutton. 1975. 156p. ed. by David Outerbridge. illus. bibliog. LC 75-15520. ISBN 0-87690-150-X. $10. CRAFTS

This small and nicely illustrated book is the result of a series of interviews the editor had with Leach. He discusses the philosophy of pot throwing and reminds us that one must be technically good before emphasizing creativity. Half of the book is devoted to black-and-white photos of pots that were chosen for their quality, character, and timelessness. Leach's A Potter's Book is still a classic and essential for libraries. This new work is a pleasing companion to his other works as a gentle and aesthetic word from a master.—Marilyn J. Sharrow, Univ. of Washington Libs., Seattle

Newman, Thelma R. & Virginia Merrill. The Complete Book of Making Miniatures: for room settings and dollhouses.

Crown. 1975. 308p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 75-16456. ISBN 0-517-52318-3. $12.95; pap. $6.95. CRAFTS

A detailed, well-illustrated, comprehensive album/manual. Not dollhouses alone, but "settings" suggesting action about to begin, views of a remembered Bulgarian village, and scenes like the Mad Hatter's Tea Party can be designed and assembled. Orange crates, old clock cases, or shadow boxes admirably hold the miniature sets. Keeping to a perfectionist standard, the authors present the finest examples of small-scale furniture, and step-by-step photos of procedure guide the craftsperson even into glassmaking.—Sarah Chokla Gross, formerly Editor, "Broadside," Theatre Lib. Assn., East Rockaway, N.Y.

Seagroatt, Margaret. A Basic Textile Book.

Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1975. 96p. illus. index. LC 75-12165. ISBN 0-442-25064-9. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-442-25066-5. $5.95. CRAFTS

Although it is too basic a book for the experienced fiber craftsman, this is an excellent book for teachers of elementary classes whose students wish to experience and explore textiles with very simple equipment. Seagroatt begins with a history and discussion of natural and synthetic fibers (including the different breeds of sheep and their wools). There is an excellent chapter on weaving, her forté, which gives many ideas for inexpensive homemade looms, suitable for even very young children. She includes an explanation of natural and synthetic dyes as well as methods in tie-and-dye, batik, and printing. While there is a short but good chapter on spinning, the coverage of crocheting, knitting, embroidery, and macramé is much too brief. The book was originally published in England. There is a limited list of U.S. suppliers. Most of the books in the bibliography are British, omitting outstanding U.S. authors like Shirley Held.—Pamela Jajko, Choate Rosemary Hall Lib., Wallingford, Conn.

Smith, Keith. Practical Silver-Smithing & Jewelry.

Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1975. 111p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-9988. ISBN 0-442-27791-1. $12.95. CRAFTS

This is a good, thorough and easy-to-read studio handbook for the beginning silversmith/metalworker. Most major processes in the art of metalwork are explored and described with clear line drawings. Virtually nothing is included, however, on the art of designing, nor is any history or information on gems and gem setting included. For the price, there is nothing in this book which is not included in any other studio handbook and for the primary source in the library, Philip G. Morton's Contemporary Jewelry (LJ 5/15/70) is a better investment. This book is an advisable purchase only as a back up for libraries with high interest in silversmithing.—Judith Ellyn Wegener, Monroe County P.L., Bloomington, Ind.

Photography

Witney, Dudley. The Lighthouse.

New York Graphic Society: Little. 1975. 256p. fwd. by Thomas H. Raddall. photogs., some color. LC 75-9103. ISBN 0-8212-0670-2. $29.95. TECH/PHOTOG

After a general overview of lighthouse history from the splendid Pharos of Alexandria built in 300 B.C. to the fiberglass towers of the 1970's with their computer-operated beacons, the author details the development of navigational landmarks along North America's eastern seaboard, from Newfoundland to Florida. There are interesting accounts of the construction and destruction of lights, mismanagement and scandals involving government as well as keepers, unique financing schemes (lights built by lotteries), navigational disasters, and even the "haunting" of lights by the ghosts of those lost at sea. The text is somewhat uneven and repetitive, but the illustrations cannot be faulted. Some 300 illustrations include old photos, drawings, and engravings as well as Witney's own superb photographs. As a pictorial essay, the book dramatically emphasizes the abandonment of manned facilities, and the takeover by technology of what was once a personal, perilous confrontation with the cruel sea.—Shirley Havens, "Library Journal"

BIOGRAPHY

Acton, Harold. Nancy Mitford: a memoir.

Harper. Mar. 1976. 252p. illus. index. ISBN 0-06-010018-4. $8.95. LIT/MEMOIR

Relying heavily on Mitford's letters, as well as the recollections of her friends, Acton has put together a book crammed with facts. We learn what nicknames she used for her sisters, what roses she planted in her garden, and what books she read. Acton makes no attempt, however, to analyze her character in depth, nor to criticize her works. The portrait that emerges is that of a rather bigoted woman, whose world consisted of clothes, dinner invitations, interior decorating, and laughing at the inferior diction of Americans. The superficiality of Acton's portrait may do Mitford an injustice, but public libraries will probably want to buy this book because it is a mine of information which will please Mitford fans. It is not, however, the really understanding biography that one hopes to see written about this interesting woman.—Catherine von Schon, SUNY at Stony Brook Lib.

Amis, Kingsley. Rudyard Kipling and His World.

Scribners. Mar. 1976. 128p. illus. index. LC 75-29827. ISBN 0-684-14550-2. $8.95. LIT/BIOG

This volume marks the continued rehabilitation of Kipling from the imperialist caricature. It's a modest compilation of biographical and analytical squibs, and the concern is not to find and reveal new facts, but to provide a casual companion essay to a splendid pictorial expanse of Kiplingiana. While neatly avoiding any sadistic imputations, the study is all too objective. Psychological probing is paltry, the survey of colonial India's historical circumstances breezy, slight. Even the deft distinction between Kipling's authoritarian politics and totalitarianism is marred by Amis' defense of the "white man's burden." Hence, the eye is advised to wince away the critical patter, saving all revelry for the evocative illustrations.—Richard Charnoff, Dept. of English, York Coll., CUNY

Angier, Bradford & Vena Angier. Wilderness Wife.

Chilton. Mar. 1976. 177p. photogs. LC 75-15548. ISBN 0-8019-6291-9. $7.95. PER NAR

A vaunting account by a husband and wife who renounce their hectic Boston urban blues to follow Thoreau's "different drum" to the far Northern wilds of British Columbia. Their saccharine story contains many plugs for Bradford's other books, and is even spiced with occasional recipes in the darnedest places. It's also spiced up with episodes such as whispered "I love you's" and embraces "tautly and tenderly and savagely" committed right in the midst of capturing a moose carcass from a wolfpack. In the end this desire in (for) the wilderness prevails as overtures to prolific author-editor Bradford to take an "all-important Hollywood office" are rejected. From rat race to Nirvana spans a 25-year period. In sum, rather boring and not recommended.—Joseph Drazan, Whitman Coll. Lib., Walla Walla, Wash.

Brock, Alice May. My Life As a Restaurant.

Bookstore Pr./Overlook, dist. by Viking. 1976. 144p. illus. LC 75-4378. ISBN 0-87951-032-3. $7.95. COOKERY/PER NAR

Alice's Restaurant has already been immortalized in song and film, and now Alice Brock shares the limelight with her coworkers, an industrious bunch of bottle washers, floor polishers, and onion choppers. My Life As a Restaurant defies description—it's an autobiography that includes recipes, helpful kitchen hints, and even an acrostic puzzle. Whatever you call it, it's a warm and funny book, disappointing only in its recipes (one adds prunes to the cock-a-leekie soup; another calls for "50 onions, chopped very fine . . ."). All in all, though, it's a fine effort.—Carol K. Carey, formerly with Dept. of Film, Museum of Modern Art, New York

Browning, Robert. The Emperor Julian.

Univ. of California Pr. May 1976. illus. index. $11.50. BIOG

Browning's biography presents an explanation of the problems and questions raised by Julian's attempts to restore paganism. The emperor's belief in the old gods was based on the neoplatonist views of the fourth Century: an idealization that failed to take into account the deep changes wrought in the Roman world by the upheavals of the third Century. Browning judges Julian's policies a failure. The war with Persia was ill conceived, possessed no clear objectives, and ended with the emperor's death and loss of territory. Throughout, Browning provides incisive and well-reasoned arguments based squarely on the sources; doubts are allowed to remain when the evidence is lacking. Particularly valuable is Browning's examination of the legislation attempting to restore paganism. The results disprove the traditional charges of persecution of the church. Although the Christians suffered from the loss of state funds and the recall of exiled heretics resulted in strife, Julian's aim was to restore the variety of religions of late antiquity, thus ending the privileged position of one faith. We are given a picture of an age of transition and syncretism and the portrait of a talented leader who personified the contradictions of his age. The writing is succinct and graceful. A scholarly and original study.—Martin Clasin, Princeton, N.J.

Clifton, Lucille. Generations: a memoir.

Random. Mar. 1976. 57p. $5.95. MEMOIR

Quiet accolades for this unassuming poetic portrait of a black woman's personal account of her family's origins. Told in succinct prose, Generations is brief and impressionistic. Chapters alternate between the present (with the author journeying to her father's funeral in Buffalo) and the past (with flashbacks tracing the family's slave history). Most of the biographical detail had been handed down verbally until finally put on paper by Clifton. Her story is peopled with strong, dynamic characters, male and female, descended from proud Dahomean stock. Moving and vibrant, Generations is a deeply satisfying work.—Marsha H. Murphy, VA Hospital Lib., Northampton, Mass.

Gregory, Isabella Augusta Persse, Lady. Seventy Years: being the autobiography of Lady Gregory.

Macmillan. 1976. 583p. ed. & fwd. by Colin Smythe. photogs. index. LC 75-23329. ISBN 0-02-545550-8. $15. LIT/AUTOBIOG

Because of testamentary and editorial complications, Lady Gregory's story of her life from 1852 to 1922 was not "discovered" until 1972. As literature, it is uneven, tedious for the most part, indiscriminately incorporating a journal that lacked both artistic and historical perspective. As a document, it is one person's hearsay and hence must be read with reservation. Nevertheless, attractively issued and scrupulously edited, it still should be in college and university collections because of Lady Gregory's importance both in Anglo-Irish studies and women's studies. The major woman in the Celtic Renaissance, she has long been known only as its mother-goddess and benefactor. But she was also an exemplar of her class and times and spent the first 40 years of her life as the carefully reared aristocratic country girl knowingly chosen as a good connubial investment by an aging, distinguished man of the world.—Marilyn Gaddis Rose, Dept. of Comparative Literature, SUNY at Binghamton

Lee, Laurie. I Can't Stay Long.

Atheneum. 1976. 232p. decorations by Susan Campbell. ISBN 0-233-96726-5. $6.95. TRAV/PER NAR

"A kind of scrap-book of first loves and obsessions." So the author of Cider With Rosie describes this book, and it would be churlish not to acknowledge its unassuming nature. Unfortunately, the charm becomes rather oppressive. In the set pieces on "Appetite," "Love," "Charm," and so on, we are treated in addition to statements such as: "One of the major pleasures in life is appetite, and one of our major duties should be to preserve it." Add to this silly inaccuracies like "The Welsh . . . are Celts, the tough little wine-dark race who were the original possessors of the island," and the reader has an uphill battle on his hands. I Can't Stay Long wanders with pleasant enough scenes from Europe to the Americas, and is fine enough for a light read of an evening, but has little bite or distinction to it.—Brian Swann, Dept. of Humanities, Cooper Union, New York

Lehmann, John. Virginia Woolf and Her World.

HBJ. Mar. 1976. 127p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-15-193771-0. $12.95. LIT/BIOG

The photographs—most of them rather familiar—are the raison d'être for this new item for the literary coffee table. It was a good idea to have Lehmann write the text: as a young man he managed the Woolfs' Hogarth Press and was close to Virginia until her death. Lehmann cares about his subject immensely. He has produced a quite decent capsule biography, laced with thoughtful literary analysis. Virginia Woolf and Her World holds no surprises but is certainly a pleasing addition to the series.—Keith Cushman, Dept. of English, Univ. of Chicago

Lindbergh, Anne Morrow. The Flower and the Nettle: diaries and letters 1936-1939.

Helen & Kurt Wolff: HBJ. 1976. 605p. photogs. index. LC 75-25708. ISBN 0-15-131501-9. $12.95. CORRESPONDENCE

Lindbergh is not as introspective here as she was in her first three volumes of diaries and letters—one senses she is losing some of her shyness and feeling more at home in the outside world. Also, she doesn't have the time. Besides moving and setting up two different homes abroad (a reconstructed barn in Kent, England and an old stone house on an island off the Brittany coast), she is raising two children. She also accompanies her husband on trips to Germany, Russia, India, and other places, and they enjoy a varied social life. Domestic scenes, dialogues with children, sensitive insights alternate with political debates and conversations with celebrities. Quoting historians and other primary sources, Lindbergh devotes most of her introduction to defending her husband with regard to the wave of accusations of Nazi sympathies that resulted from his trips to Germany and reports of German air superiority. This gingerly analysis lacks the clarity and personal openness of the diaries themselves.—Barbara Zelenko, U.S. Attorney's Lib., Southern District of New York

Maddox, Lester Garfield. Speaking Out: the autobiography of Lester Garfield Maddox.

Doubleday. 1975. 183p. illus. index. LC 74-2521. ISBN 0-385-08956-2. $6.95. AUTOBIOG

The "plain talk" story of a feisty, self-made man who "started out at the top" politically as Governor of Georgia. First we see Maddox's experiences as a high-school dropout hustling to support his family, as well as his later jobs as a steel worker, salesman, and independent businessman. Then we learn how his firm stand against the federal government on the integration of his Pickrick Restaurant pushed him out of business, into the spotlight, and eventually into the governor's seat. To Maddox, there is a sharp distinction between the racist and the segregationist. The latter "has enough racial pride and racial integrity and love for his fellow human beings to want to see all races protected and preserved." His followers will relish this testimonial to his outspoken beliefs in God, country, and capitalism; others will want to compare this self-serving version to independent sources on his record as Governor and Lieutenant Governor of Georgia.—Ruth E. Almeida, North County Lib., Glen Burnie, Md.

Martin, George. Madam Secretary: Frances Perkins.

Houghton. Apr. 1976. 570p. photogs. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-395-24293-2. $17.50. BIOG

This fine biography of Perkins, the first woman cabinet officer, presents a compelling and inspiring picture of a dedicated and intelligent woman. Beginning her career as a teacher, then moving into settlement work, Perkins became one of the most influential instigators of social legislation under FDR. As Secretary of Labor, she sponsored the Social Security Act and the Fair Labor Standards Act, and throughout her career, she was an advocate of women's rights. This book, based primarily on her oral history, provides a wealth of information about labor practices from the turn of the century through FDR's Administration. Footnotes and bibliography, plus a detailed table of contents, further enhance this book.—Suzanne Plessinger, Los Angeles County P.L. System, Lakewood, Calif.

Nimoy, Leonard. I Am Not Spock.

Celestial Arts. 1976. 152p. illus. LC 75-28761. ISBN 0-89087-117-5. pap. $4.95. PER NAR

The surprisingly active Star Trek cult will snap up this book by Nimoy, alias Mr. Spock, Vulcan science officer. Nimoy says that, in a way, the character of Spock has become his alter ego. It has had a strong influence on him and on his career. He discusses his involvement with the show, and gives the reader an insider's view of the good spaceship Enterprise's operations. Nimoy/Spock writes well: even when he describes the non-Spockian aspects of his work, he retains the reader's interest.—Carol Stein, Queens Borough P. L., N.Y.

Porsche, Ferry with John Bentley. We At Porsche: the autobiography of Dr. Ing. H. C. Ferry Porsche.

Doubleday. Mar. 1976. illus. index. ISBN 0-385-05309-6. $10. TECH/AUTOBIOG

Porsche tells not only his own life story but that of his father and the Porsche firm. Incidents from his childhood and adult life give the reader insight into two remarkable men, father and son. He chronicles the nightmare years of World War II and the determination of the Porsche family to stay out of politics and get on with the car business. The creation of the Volkswagen concept, its fruition and growth before and after the war, the part Hitler played in the fortunes, (or lack thereof) of Porsche, family and company, make fascinating reading. Technical details and histories of all cars designed by Porsche will delight buffs. The story is told more or less chronologically, but some switching back and forth in time is somewhat confusing. But this is a minor flaw in an excellent book. Recommended for all automotive collections.—Susan Ebershoff-Coles, Indianapolis-Marion County P.L., Ind.

Rowse, A. L. Jonathan Swift: major prophet.

Scribners. Apr. 1976. 240p. illus. index. $10. LIT BIOG

The prolific historian of Elizabethan England here ventures into the 18th-Century to turn out a popular biography of Swift. The book shows Rowse's ability to manage a readable narrative and his usual opinionativeness. Except perhaps for his defense of Swift in the Vanessa relationship and his view of the importance of the social class distinction between Vanessa and Stella, there is nothing new in the book. In fact, Rowse seems unaware of many of the problems of interpretation that concern Swift scholars. He echoes the old cliché about Pope's "easy optimism" and assumes the identity of Swift's position with that of his character Lemuel Gulliver. Also, it is not clear how he intends Swift to be viewed as a "major prophet." Nevertheless, Rowse handles the most essential features of Swift's career with sympathetic clarity. Many libraries, public and academic, will find the book worth adding, even though it is not to be compared with Irvin Ehrenpreis's authoritative two-volume Swift (LJ 5/15/68).—Arthur E. Jones Jr., Drew Univ. Lib., Madison, N.J.

Shepherd, Jack. The Adams Chronicles: four generations of greatness.

Little. 1976. 448p. intro. by Daniel Boorstin. illus., half color. index. LC 75-34422. ISBN 0-316-78497-4. $17.50. HIST/BIOG

All of the essential ingredients are here: genius and ability, scandal, brutal politics. The Adams Chronicles, intended to complement a 13-part television series, is an attractive, lavishly illustrated volume that can stand quite well on its own as a concise account of four generations of "overachievers," as Boorstin charitably describes the Adamses in his excellent introduction. John Adams got the family off to a fast start and set a high standard for later Adamses to emulate (actually, no generation of Adamses ever fulfilled the expectations of the preceding generation). Thereafter, we follow the lives of John Quincy Adams (who emerges as a more multi-dimensional character than his overpowering father), Charles Francis Adams, Henry Adams, Brooks Adams, and Charles Francis Adams Jr. The Adams women also play their parts, but with the lingering impression that they never quite approved of the shenanigans of their husbands. Through it all the family's vision of superiority over other mere mortals never wavered, and just about everyone in the family contributed to the tons of diaries, letters, and assorted manuscripts that have fortunately survived for our edification. Shepherd ties all of the disparate pieces together into an entertaining presentation that should have a wide readership.—Mark Norton Schatz, Ann Arrundell County Historical Soc., Glen Burnie, Md.

Sherman, Jane. Soaring: the diaries and letters of a Denishawn Dancer in the Far East, 1925-1926.

Wesleyan Univ. Pr. Apr. 1976. 304p. photogs. LC 75-34445. ISBN 0-8195-4093-5. $14.95. CORRESPONDENCE/PER NAR

In 1925 the Denishawn Dancers began an Asian tour unprecedented by a professional American group. Sherman, 17, was the youngest member of the company. From her remarkable diary and letters home, she has created a vivid travelogue of the Orient 50 years ago. Seldom has any teenager experienced such a year, which included a professional salaried position, a trip almost around the world, and four proposals of marriage from admiring swains. But all was not orchids over the footlights, for the talented young dancer endured tropical heat, uncomfortable modes of travel, unpalatable foods, outbreaks of fever and boils, along with a gain in weight which threatened her career. The book, whose title comes from a dance costumed in "soaring suits," is a distinguished piece of writing, delightful to read, with sharp insights into noted personalities of modern dance and an intimate glimpse of a dancer's world.—Evelyn G. Callaway, Nebraska Lib. Comm., Fairbury

Speer, Albert. Spandau: the secret diaries.

Macmillan. 1976. 480p. tr. from German by Richard & Clara Winston. photogs. index. LC 75-25903. ISBN 0-02-612810-1. $13.95.

HIST/MEMOIR

In Inside the Third Reich (LJ 7/70), Speer presented a startlingly new picture of Hitler and created a sensation. The present work promises to have a similar impact. Speer offers a selection from more than 20,000 pages of diaries that he secretly compiled while he served a 20-year sentence as a war criminal in the Nuremberg and Spandau prisons. He claims that the diaries are totally authentic; and because Speer did not think of later publication while jotting down his notes, this volume may surpass his first book as a genuine historical source and human document. Speer describes the dreariness of prison life and his often very tense relationships with fellow inmates. His emotions about his past and his sense of personal guilt often change. But most important are the novel and penetrating observations about Hitler's personality that Speer wrote while his memory was still fresh. Speer considers that it was Hitler's passionate hatred of Jews—and not his dreams of world conquest—that formed the basis for his ultimate actions. This well-translated book is essential for academic and public libraries of all sizes.—Felix E. Hirsch, Professor Emeritus, Trenton State Coll., N.J.

Strage, Mark. Women of Power: the life and times of Catherine de' Medici.

Helen & Kurt Wolff: HBJ. Mar. 1976. 267p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-15-198370-4. $12.95.

BIOG

This work describes how three women, Catherine de' Medici, Diane de Poitiers, and Marguerite de Valois, shaped events in 16th-Century France. Complicated religious issues, international power struggles, and political factionalism seem pale in comparison to Diane's control over Henry II, Marguerite's inability to control her sensuality, or Catherine's failure to control her weak sons. While the book is well written, the "great woman" thesis is not adequately supported. One can do better with Irene Mahoney's Madame Catherine (LJ 8/75).—Robert O. Lindsay, Dept. of History, Univ. of Montana, Missoula

Weed, Steven with Scott Swanton. My Search for Patty Hearst.

Crown. 1976. 244p. $8.95. PER NAR

Weed, for those who have been in isolation for the past two years, was living with and planning to marry Patty Hearst when she was abducted by the Symbionese Liberation Army. This book traces the author's and Hearst's relationship, provides an inside look at the Hearst clan and their reaction to crisis, and outlines the steps taken to assure Patty's release. Unfortunately, the book is sloppily written, Weed comes across to me as weak, and nothing new is added to the public record. Doubtless there will be more and better volumes available after Hearst's trial.—Saul J. Amdursky, Albion P.L., Mich.

West, Jessamyn. The Woman Said Yes: encounters with life and death.

HBJ. Apr. 1976. 190p. LC 75-40368. ISBN 0-15-198400-X. $7.95. PER NAR

This brief memoir is divided into two parts. The first is a reminiscence of her mother, whom West respected and adored, with a long section on West's almost fatal bout with tuberculosis that occurred while she was a graduate student. Her mother, Grace McManaman Milhous, had been born an Irish Quaker in Indiana and the long stories which she told of her Quaker forebears sustained West during her illness (she had been sent home to die) and became the basis for her book The Friendly Persuasion. West credits her physical and emotional survival to her mother's wisdom and prayers. The second section is an account of the death of her sister Carmen from cancer. Carmen had decided not to allow herself to endure the agony of the prolonged seige that their grandmother had suffered when they were children. She had therefore accumulated a cache of sleeping pills, and asked Jessamyn to share her final weeks. West's narrative of Carmen's suicide is moving, not in the least maudlin. Written in West's readable style, this personal and sensitive book will please her fans. Recommended for public libraries.—Cynthia Harrison, formerly with Brooklyn P.L.

Young, Stark. Stark Young: a life in the arts; letters, 1900-1962. 2 vols.

Louisiana State Univ. Pr. 1976. 1454p. ed. by John Pilkington. index. LC 73-90874. ISBN 0-8071-0100-1. slipcased $50.

THEATER/CORRESPONDENCE

Although Young's stature as a drama critic seems secure in the annals of the stage, his place as dramatist, poet, and novelist must await further exploration, study, and interpretation. For this reason, there will be those who will question the merit of a two-volume set of his letters at this time. Yet, it is for his writings on drama and his theatrical involvements that Young is best known, and the letters do indeed throw fresh light on these aspects of his varied career (especially since he failed to produce a second volume to his autobiographical The Pavilion [1951] as intended). Pilkington's introductory material to each of the 11 segments provides an illuminating factor to the correspondence that follows; his footnotes are generous and informative. Theater and literary collections will find these letters of more than passing interest.—Louis A. Rachow, Walter Hampden-Edwin Booth Theatre Collection & Lib., New York

BUSINESS & ECONOMICS

Bartlett, Laile E. New Work/New Life.

Harper. 1976. 192p. ISBN 0-06-060649-5. $7.95.

SOC SCI/LABOR

Bartlett has provided a glowingly optimistic forecast of changes initiated by middle-class reformers. These changes involve humanizing the workplace and other areas of lives either by working within established institutions or by working outside the system. Although many of the endeavors described seem worthwhile, the author's simplistic treatment fails to deal realistically with the basic question of whether our dehumanizing institutions can be changed by such atomized efforts. Basically a weak follow-up to The Greening of America.—Ken Nash, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Brown, Courtney C. Putting the Corporate Board to work.

Macmillan. 1976. 159p. bibliog. index. LC 75-14918. $10.95. BUS

Corporate catastrophes (Penn Central, Lockheed, Ampex) and demands by outside or minority stockholder groups (environmentalists, women, academics) have focused attention on the corporate board of directors, often regarded by management as a ceremonial anachronism or a necessary nuisance. Current debate centers around the issues of board effectiveness and accountability to the corporation and the public. In this scholarly, well-written essay, Brown presents a strong argument for enhancing effectiveness by restructuring the board to include no more than one member of management; the chairman of the board should never be the CEO. The author's proposal challenges "a basic tenet now widely held in the business community,

THE THIRD INDUSTRIAL AGE
Strategy for business survival
by Charles Tavel
The author introduces a new dimension into the world of business—the strategist! This new world will be everybody's world, and all thinking people should read about it, for most assuredly we will all be affected by it. $11.95
Dow Jones-Irwin
1818 Ridge Road, Homewood, Ill. 60430

namely, that there can be only one head man." Advocating a clear delineation of the functions of board and management, Brown recommends a board composed of professional directors, who would receive adequate compensation for their efforts. This is not a handbook for board members, but a provocative study certain to generate discussion. For the academic business collection.—Holly Millard, Los Ange-

Gutman, Herbert. Slavery and the Numbers Game: a critique of "Time on the Cross."

Univ. of Illinois Pr. 1975. 180p. index. LC 75-15899. ISBN 0-252-00564-3. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-252-00565-1. $2.95. HIST/ECON

This work appeared originally in a slightly different form in the January 1975 issue of the Journal of Negro History. Gutman's book is a direct rebuttal to the conclusions set forth by Robert W. Fogel and Stanley L. Engerman in their Time on the Cross: the economics of American Negro slavery (LJ 7/74). According to Fogel and Engerman, the average slave was socialized by his master into a black Horatio Alger who, "on an average . . . was harder working and more efficient than his white counterpart." In a word, the most ordinary slave workers had internalized the "Protestant work ethic." Furthermore, Fogel and Engerman contended that the black family was the basic unit of social organization under slavery and thus it is a myth that enslavement destroyed the black family. To these and other conclusions or "corrections" advanced in Time on the Cross, Gutman marshals a formidable amount of contradictory evidence; he utterly destroys Fogel and Engerman's pretentious "corrections." Strongly recommended for most libraries. One criticism, however: the lack of a bibliography.— Ted Samore, Sch. of Library Science, Univ. of Wisconsin-Milwaukee

Korda, Michael. Power!: how to get it, how to use it.

Random. 1975. 268p. bibliog. LC 75-2263. ISBN 0-394-49314-1. $8.95. SOC SCI/BUS

On a superficial level this is a funny book. Korda tells the reader what shoes, watch style, and wall color "winners" choose and how to develop a firm, trustworthy expression by applying an anesthetic to the corners of the mouth. Yet on a deeper level it is both a sad and frightening book, especially in light of recent revelations about public morality. For this book is a vade mecum on how to get ahead by conning people rather than by using such trite methods as intelligence or hard work. "All life is a game of power. The object of the game is simple enough: to know what you want and get it."—Mary Chatfield, Harvard Business Sch. Lib.

"When one has stripped off all the conventions and hypocrisies, then one is educated."

These were the ringing words of a rebellious young schoolmaster who was destined to make history.

Collected for the first time, here is the germinal thinking on education and child rearing of the author of Summerhill.

Here are three of Neill's earliest books in one volume.

702 pages, $8.95.

THE DOMINIE BOOKS OF A.S. NEILL

Author of SUMMERHILL

HART PUBLISHING CO., INC.
15 W. 4th Street, N.Y. 10012

communications

Berger, Arthur Asa. The TV-Guided American.

Walker. 1976. 240p. photogs. LC 75-12191. ISBN 0-8027-0500-6. $7.95. COMM

A cultural analysis of mostly American prime time television, delving into the psychology of such all-time favorites as Gunsmoke, Star Trek, Walter Cronkite, and football as well as more recent entries like Chico and Rhoda. There are also side trips into the Sinatra special, commercials, Upstairs, Downstairs, and British televised humor. The interpretations are sometimes farfetched, like that of the popular detective series which is linked to the public's interest in "what went on in the parental bedroom." There are some interesting conclusions here, but the sociological approach will discourage the mass of readers who would rather be mesmerized than analyzed.—Gloria Gehrman, Moscow-Latah County Lib., Idaho

EDUCATION

Holt, John. Instead of Education: ways to help people do things better.

Dutton. Apr. 1976. 250p. bibliog. ISBN 0-525-13437-9. $8.95. ED

Holt yearns for the abolition of compulsory education at a time when the national temper leans more toward a resanctification of strict discipline and the "basics." Having pushed beyond the wreckage of the liberal reformation, he declares uncategorically that enforced schooling "is a tyranny and a crime against the human mind and spirit." He envisions alternative modes of learning based on resource exchanges, shared experiences, and the natural receptivity of unadulterated minds. Disciples will continue to support him; opponents will be even less likely to do so than before. And although much of Holt's message has been stated more succinctly by others, some of it is new, and all of it is interesting.—Mark R. Yerburgh, SUNY at Albany Lib.

On the Meaning of the University. by Eric Ashby & others.

Univ. of Utah Pr. Mar. 1976. ed. & intro. by Sterling M. McMurrin. $8. ED

Written "to celebrate the inauguration of David Pierpont Gardner as . . . president of the University of Utah," seven essays by distinguished educators discuss the state of American higher education: its traditions, its problems, its strengths, and its challenges. Each deals with the evolution of higher educational directions to their present condition, introduces a current conflict and suggests a means of integrating the conflict or, in some cases, forecasts the consequences if such integration were to occur. While brief, this book provides an excellent, conceptually sound and readable synopsis of critical choices confronting higher education, and the country itself, during the remaining years of the 20th Century. Recommended.—Jerry L. Parsons, Univ. of Illinois Lib. at Urbana-Champaign

Zwerling, L. Steven. Second Best: the crisis of the community college.

McGraw. 1976. 408p. bibliog. index. LC 75-31735. ISBN 0-07-073090-3. $10. SOC SCI/ED

Second Best is a revisionist interpretation of the function of the community college in American society. The central premise of the book is that community colleges are designed in such a way that ultimately they assure the failure of the majority of their students. "I contend that we must begin by seeing our schools' 'failures' to be the successful fulfillment of their hidden social functions." Community colleges, according to Zwerling, who is director of the Experimental College at Staten Island Community College, serve to certify inequality rather than acting to eradicate it. The argument is made on two levels—academic citing of relevant research to buttress his case, and personal experience. The academic argument is interesting and worthy of careful reading. The author's experiences in community colleges, while sensational, add little to his case. Highly recommended.—Thomas Gaughan, Hamline Univ. Lib., St. Paul, Minn.

HISTORY

Alotta, Robert I. Street Names of Philadelphia.

Temple Univ. Pr. 1975. 168p. illus. bibliog. LC 75-14689. ISBN 0-87722-046-8. $10. HIST

This charming little book traces the history of more than 1000 Philadelphia street names. The author admits in a disarming preface that "the criteria for inclusion was nothing more than the bulk of available, accurate data" he

"Reliable... biographical history"
The New York Times

"Highly recommended"
Washington Star

"Extremely readable"
Cleveland Press

"Lavish use of illustrations"
Buffalo Courier Express

"Witty scholarship"
Chicago Daily News

Three outstanding biographies of important historical figures, written with flair and a strong sense of the meaning of these men for our times. A masterful compilation of maps, paintings and photos (some with fascinating then and now comparisons) helps the reader to grasp the impact and meaning of these very complex men. These are books for the general reader, well-paced, lively, entertaining, written with consummate (but never intrusive) scholarship. Each provides rare insights into the life of its subject, his quest for power and the men and conditions he fought against.

20 full color and over 200 black and white illustrations and maps in each volume form an outstanding visual backdrop and help to make the subjects come alive.

CAESAR by Michael Grant
0695-80542-8 Cloth $10.00

NAPOLEON by John Bowle
0695-80543-6 Cloth $10.00

NELSON by Oliver Warner
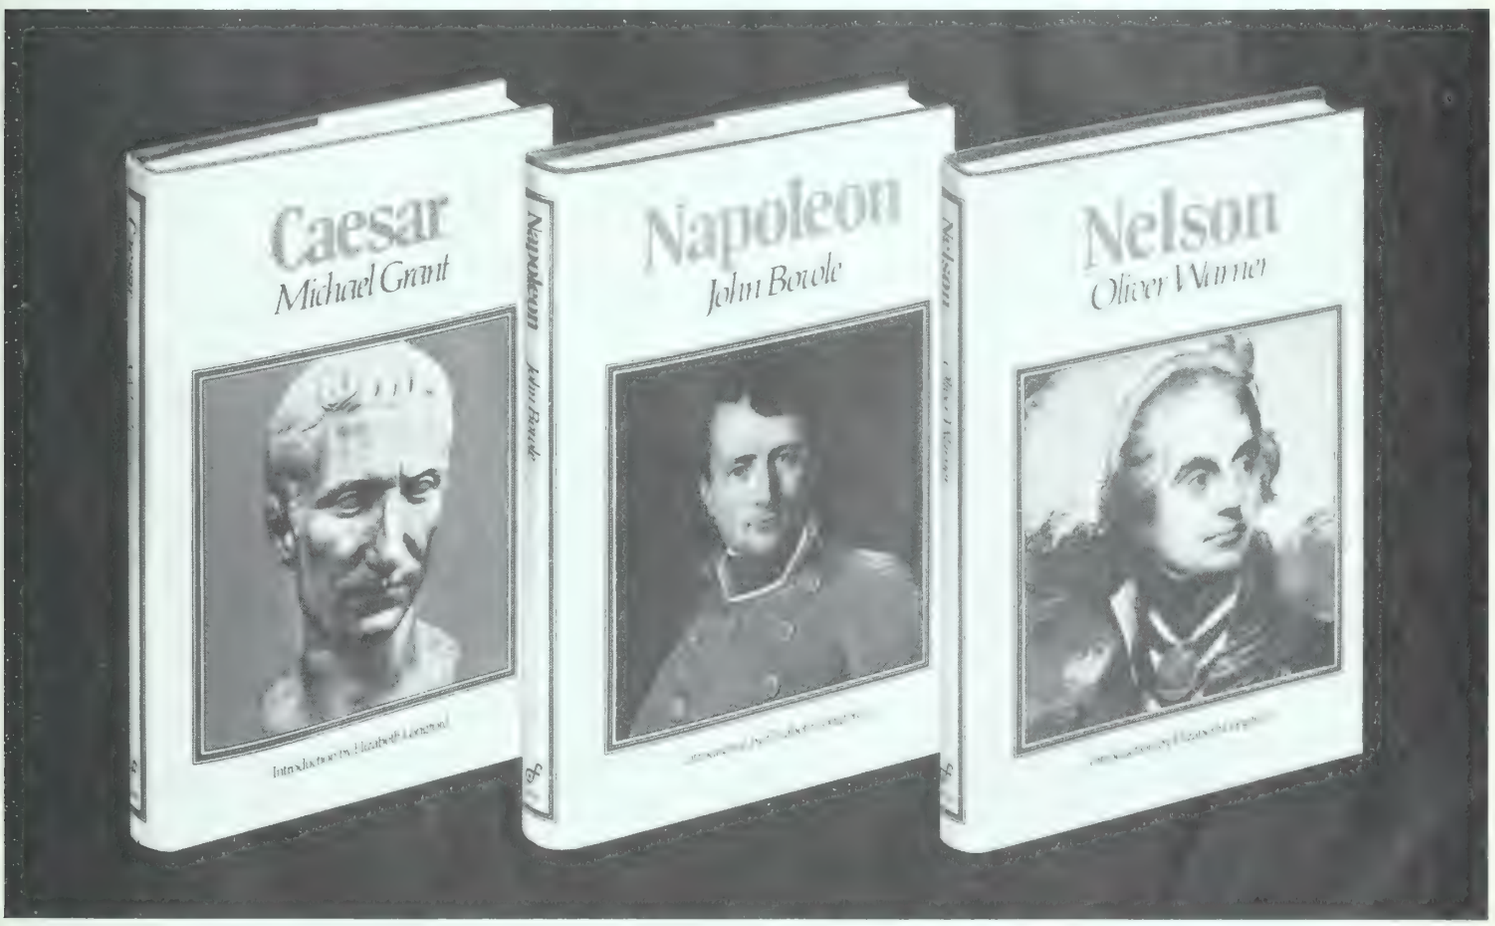
0695-80541-X Cloth $10.00



FOLLETT PUBLISHING COMPANY CHICAGO, ILLINOIS 60607

THE MARSHALL CAVENDISH
☆ ☆ ☆ ILLUSTRATED ☆ ☆ ☆ ENCYCLOPEDIA OF WORLD WAR II

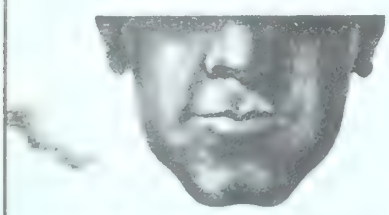
"business as usual"



AMERICA
open your eyes !

Based on the original text by the Swiss military historian, Lt. Colonel Eddie Bauer.

Chronologically arranged in 25 volumes. Thousands of full-color photographs plus posters and scale model diagrams of weapons.

For further information, write to:

Purnell Educational
850 Seventh Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10019

was able to compile. Alphabetic in arrangement and including sections on famous people, governors and counties that lent their names to our thoroughfares, the book is crammed with interesting sidelights on Philadelphia history. Elfreth's Alley, one of the oldest continually occupied streets in our town, got its name when Henry Elfreth married Sarah Gilbert, whose father had settled in the Byberry area but owned a house on a small alley in town. Says Alotta, "Besides winning Sarah's hand, Henry got the alley." It is little odd bits of information such as this which make the book a browser's delight.—Agnes C. Ringer, formerly with Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Baldwin, Hanson W. The Crucial Years, 1939–1941: the world at war.

Harper. 1976. 516p. illus. maps. index. ISBN 0-06-010186-5. $16.95. HIST

This volume, which constitutes the first half of a projected military history of World War II, is a narrative account of the naval and military events of the years 1939 through 1941. It is also an historical overview and a survey of forces, with descriptions of principal leaders. Although the book covers the war on all fronts, even the generally unheralded campaigns in East Africa, it describes little that is not available in other histories. Yet the book derives special value from Baldwin's insightful critiques of campaigns and battles (for example, his observations on the British landings in Greece and his reappraisal of the 1941 Battle of Moscow) and his ability to examine critically those important decisions determining the outcome of battles and campaigns. As military history this volume reads well; however it is not quite equal to some of the author's former books, such as Great Mistakes of the War (1950) and Battles Lost and Won (LJ 7/66).—John Buechler, Univ. of Vermont Lib., Burlington

Betts, Raymond F. The False Dawn: European Imperialism in the Nineteenth Century.

Univ. of Minnesota Pr. (Europe & the World in the Age of Expansion). 1975. 270p. illus. maps. bibliog. index. LC 75-14683. ISBN 0-8166-0762-1. $15 HIST

This book provides both a chronological overview and a systematic hearing of the historiographical interpretations of 19th-Century imperialism. The "false dawn" of the title refers to the essentially transitory nature of imperial rule; the basic questions raised are on the causes and duration of the imperialist process. Committed to neither a rigidly economic nor a strictly political explanation, Betts argues that the "new imperialism" after 1870 was rooted in the institutions and techniques of earlier colonial acquisitions, and that commerce, religion, racial thinking, and strategic considerations accelerated its growth until European empires embraced most of the globe. While most events and issues are discussed, the strongest parts of the book are on the "scramble for Africa" at the end of the 19th Century, and the French part therein. A good introductory volume, recommended for general and academic libraries.—John R. Broadus, Dept. of History, Univ. of Chicago

Brooke, Christopher N. L. with assist. of Gillian Keir. London 800-1216: the shaping of a city.

Univ. of California Pr. 1975. (History of London). 424p. illus. maps. bibliog. index. LC 73-92620. ISBN 0-520-02686-1. $21.

Trease, Geoffrey. London: a concise history.

Scribners. 1975. 224p. illus. index. LC 75-14077. ISBN 0-684-14454-9. $12.50. HIST

London remains, even in these days of vanished empire and economic distress, a world metropolis and a magnet for all the English-speaking peoples. We welcome, therefore, two different but valuable works on the city's history, one a detailed scholarly study of the roots of its greatness, the other a sprightly survey of its whole story.

Brooke's London 800-1216, the second in a new collaborative series on the city, is the work of an expert on Anglo-Saxon and Norman England. The author makes sense of an ill-documented development from Anglo-Saxon burgh to mercantile commune and Angevin capital by placing this squarely in the context of the European urban renaissance of the 11th and 12th centuries. Consideration in succession of topography, social structure, trade, government, and ecclesiastical life contributes to our understanding of many vexing historical issues. This careful work is a necessary purchase for university and other research libraries.

Trease is a prolific popular historian of many fields. His London sweeps from the Roman foundation at the Thames bridgehead, through the invasions, mercantile and political growth, the plague and fire of the 1660's, the Georgian and Victorian ages, to the contemporary city. Personalities, famous and infamous, may overshadow analysis, structures, and trends; politics and the arts may conceal trade and commerce; later chapters in particular become too much a catalog of architects, developers, and engineers. Nevertheless, this profusely illustrated work provides a solid yet interesting narrative of a vibrant city and is recommended to libraries that serve the general reader.—Richard C. Hoffmann, Dept. of History, York Univ., Downsview, Ontario, Canada

Drake, Fred W. China Charts the World: Hsu Chi-Yu and his geography of 1848.

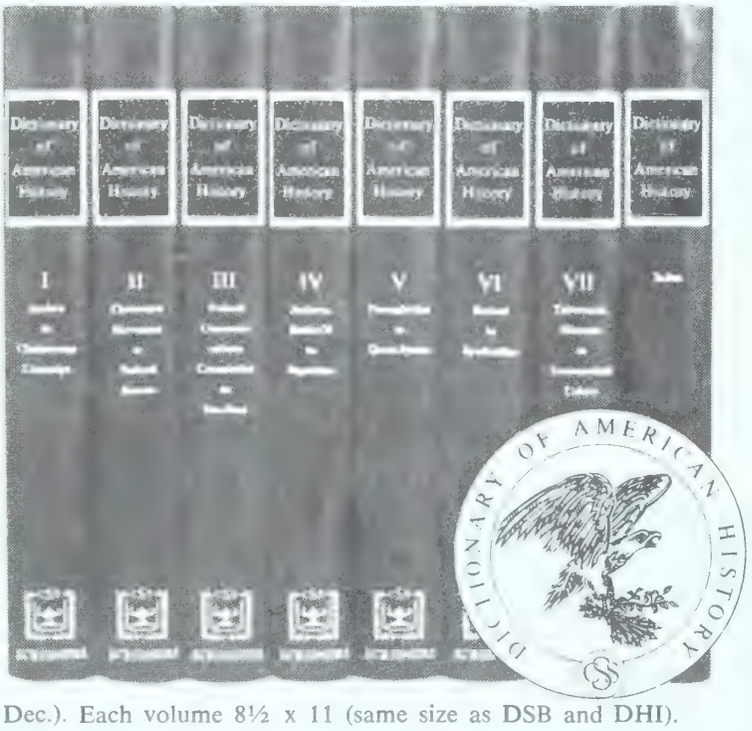
East Asian Research Center, dist. by Harvard Univ. Pr. 1975. (East Asian Monographs). 272p. bibliog. index. LC 75-17882. ISBN 0-674-11643-7. $8.50. HIST

When China came into conflict with the expansive, industrializing West, even the elite had little knowledge of the world beyond their own central kingdom. One of the few Chinese scholars who attempted to correct this deficiency was Hsu Chi-yü, governor of the province of Fukien in the 1840's. Drake has made excellent use of the available materials about Hsu's life, and while fulfilling the rigorous standards of Sinological research, he has al-

The first revision in thirty-five years of one of the most lauded reference sets of our time

Dictionary of American History

Just in time for the Bicentennial—to be published July 4, 1976—this seven-volume plus index set has been thoroughly revised, updated, and reset in a larger format. Of the 7,200 signed articles by leading historians and public figures, 1,200 have been completely rewritten. 4,500 entries have been reedited, rechecked and updated, and 1,000 cross-references have been added. 500 totally new subjects include many articles on the sciences, plus entries on Afro-Americans and American Indians, the moon landing, Watergate, the Vietnam War, etc.



7 volumes plus index (index to be shipped in Dec.). Each volume 8½ x 11 (same size as DSB and DHI).

ORDER YOUR SET TODAY AND TAKE ADVANTAGE OF OUR SPECIAL PRE-PUB OFFER: $265.00 (plus shipping and handling) UNTIL JULY 4, 1976.

As an additional benefit, bills may be rendered now, in June, or in July.

After July 4, the library price will be $280.00

★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★ Available only from ★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★

LJ

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS

REFERENCE DEPARTMENT
597 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017

Please send me_____ sets of the DAH @ the pre-pub price of $265 plus shipping and handling.

☐ Bill now
☐ Bill in June 1976
☐ Bill in July 1976

Bill to_____

Address_____

_____

Order #_____

Ship to_____

_____

Address_____

_____

so managed to write a highly readable book. He presents a sympathetic portrait of Hsu, showing him as a man with an inquiring, cosmopolitan mind, an official who also retained his devotion to the ideals of Confucian scholarship. Drake also includes several maps from Hsu's 1848 geography, as well as excellent translations of key portions from that book. Though Drake's study is part of a specialized monograph series, it is worthy of a broader readership. Especially recommended to professional and amateur geographers.—David D. Buck, Dept. of History, Univ. of Wisconsin-Milwaukee

Ellis, John. A Short History of Guerrilla Warfare.

St. Martin's Apr. 1976. 250p. LC 75-9479. $8.95. HIST

Ellis has, as he states in his preface, kept "the definition of guerrilla warfare as wide as possible." Most accounts of guerrilla warfare begin with Mao Tse-tung, but irregular warfare has been frequently practiced throughout history. Ellis, who is a military rather than a social or political historian, traces guerrilla activity and campaigns from biblical and Roman times to the Vietnam war. His prime concern is with strategy, tactics, terrain, logistics, and the like. As might be expected from a sweeping overview, there is heavy reliance on secondary sources. Yet the author does weld the material into a coherent account, with little undue pedantry. His conclusions on the nature and common themes of guerrilla warfare will interest the military theorist and historian.—Michel Ridgeway, U.S. Military Academy Lib., West Point

Charles Gallenkamp
MAYA
The Riddle and Rediscovery of a Lost Civilization
Illustrated with drawings and photographs
A Revised and Expanded Edition
Completely up to date!
Revised, expanded, re-set, and with new illustrations, the most highly recommended book on Maya culture now includes all the recent discoveries in Mexico, Guatemala, and Honduras.
Photographs, drawings, 2-page map, index
$12.95
McKAY

Filler, Louis. Appointment at Armageddon: muckraking and Progressivism in American life.

Greenwood. (Contribs. in American Studies, No. 20). 1976. LC 75-23865. ISBN 0-8371-8261-1. $15.95. HIST

Filler's latest discussion of the Progressive era, its antecedents, and its context, is intended as a corrective to the often stereotypical views advanced by recent historians of the period. The book's weakness lies in its admitted lack of definition and major thesis. Its strengths are most evident in the discussions of such forgotten figures as Anne Royall, Dorman B. Eaton, and Josephine Shaw Lowell; these discussions are interesting and insightful, and more than make up for the somewhat careless chronology and obfuscated style. Although the book proposes to relate the era's reformers to modern muckrakers, it succeeds only marginally in this attempt and therefore should be read in conjunction with Filler's recently published narrative and descriptive bibliography, Muckraking and Progressivism: an interpretive bibliography, for a fuller understanding of what remains a casually categorized, but ill-defined era in American history.—Carol M. Petillo, Dept. of History, Rutgers Univ.

Gaither, Gerald H. Blacks and the Populist Revolt: ballots and bigotry in the new South.

Univ. of Alabama Pr. Mar. 1976. 272p. illus. LC 75-6904. ISBN 0-8173-4726-7. $10.75. POL SCI/HIST

Gaither's study demonstrates clearly that, whatever the nature of their rhetoric, white Populists of the 1890's did indeed oppose racial social equality. This opposition effectively destroyed the possibility of a political-economic coalition of poor whites and blacks. As the author shows, black voters also remained susceptible to Democratic party bribery, which led some Gulf state Populists to conclude that elimination of black suffrage must precede economic reform. These two points offer valuable insights; but much of the book's material has been better analyzed elsewhere. The new statistical tables relate to a very small proportion of the text. Thus this book, which is stylistically clumsy and prolix, will have a rather limited scholarly audience.—James Levin, Dept. of Special Programs, C.C.N.Y.

Haley, James L. The Buffalo War.

Doubleday. Mar. 1976. illus. LC 74-33643. ISBN 0-385-06149-8. $7.95. HIST

A revealing narrative concerning a little-known yet highly significant historical episode. This Indian war resulted in the subjugation of three pivotal tribes, rendered certain the annihilation of bison from the South Plains, opened vast stretches of territory to white settlement, and sealed the fate of Grant's "Quaker" policy. Yet it has been largely forgotten. The author's analysis is scholarly, yet the presentation is episodic and exciting. He details in balanced perspective the actions and motivations of the Indians, buffalo hunters, Indian agents, and the army, and in the process he offers much insight into personalities, both Indian and white. Haley cuts folklore to the bone and corrects several historical errors resulting from literary prejudices of the past. His book is thoroughly researched and well documented, with heavy reliance upon primary sources.—Roger Woelfel, Los Angeles County P.L. System

Katz, William Loren & Jacqueline Hunt Katz, sel. Making Our Way: America at the turn of the century in the words of the poor and powerless.

Dial. 1975. 170p. illus. LC 74-18601. ISBN 0-8037-5442-6. $6.95. MEMOIR/HIST

Life in America at the turn of the century is often a record of the achievements of the middle and upper classes, the pioneers, and other highly visible groups. The plight of the ordinary citizen is often left to the historian to interpret, though firsthand accounts often portray the struggle for survival more vividly than any history book. The diaries and memoirs included in this collection touch on the major ethnic groups and workers who made up the backbone of this country. Primarily for the young adult.—Suzanne Plessinger, Los Angeles County P.L. System, Lakewood, Calif.

Koch, H. W. The Hitler Youth: origins and development 1922–1945.

Stein & Day. 1976. 340p. illus. bibliog. index. $10. HIST

Koch, born in Munich, and now a professor in England, brings the personal perspective of a brief membership in the Hitler Youth to bear on the rise and fall of this sometimes tragic, often pathetic, organization. By diligent use of Nazi Party and Hitler Youth archives and the growing German scholarly literature, Koch has fashioned the best treatment of the Hilter Youth phenomenon yet published in English. Unlike Walter Laqueur's Young Germany (Basic Bks., 1962), which is primarily an intellectual history, this study includes a history of the Hitler Youth's organization and leadership. It also surpasses Peter D. Stachura's Nazi Youth in the Weimar Republic (LJ 10/1/75) because Koch traces Hitlerjugend's antecedents in 19th-Century German romanticism, pre-1914 youth culture, and the World War I radicalization of German youth. He analyzes Hitler Youth ideology and education more fully than does Stachura and covers not only the Weimar period, but also the critical Third Reich years. Highly recommended for university and large public libraries.—Donald J. Murphy, Chabolt Coll., Livermore, Calif.

Morley, James William. Japan's Road to War.

Columbia Univ. Pr. Mar. 1976. 220p. LC 75-25524. ISBN 0-231-08969-4. $17.50. HIST

A fascinating and important perspective on Japan's diplomatic and military maneuverings leading up to World War II. Based on official Japanese documents, analyzed by Japanese scholars and introduced with the sympathetic hand of Morley, this volume does much to increase our knowledge of Japan's Asian and European activities during the years from 1935 to 1939. The book treats three major events: the development and negotiation of the Japanese-Nazi Anti-Comentern Pact, the strange but fierce 1939 border war between Japanese Manchuria (notably the incidents at Changkugeng and Nomonhan) and the Soviet Union, and finally the execution of the Tripartite Pact (1939-1940) involving Japan, the Nazis, and the Fascists. Altogether, for the American student and scholar, an aspect of history restored and ably documented. Especially for research and university collections.—R. F. Delaney, U.S. Naval War Coll., Newport, R.I.

Potter, David. The Impending Crisis, 1848-1861.

Harper. (New American Nation). 1976. 640p. ed. by Don E. Fehrenbacher. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-06-013403-8. $15. HIST

Potter's untimely death in 1971 left this study unfinished, and Fehrenbacher, a Stanford University colleague, has completed it, thus filling the void in Harper's acclaimed series. The volume covers the explosive years preceding the Civil War, describing in great detail the increasing sectionalism which finally split the nation. It focuses on the impact of sectionalism in politics, showing how such factors as expansionism, slavery, events in Kansas and Missouri, and political parties all became political issues that contributed to the growing division in America. Our criticism: a bibliographical essay would have been more useful than the extensive list provided. The book's scholarly tone may limit its readership; nevertheless, the volume serves as a lasting memorial to a great historian.—William Z. Schenck, Yale Univ. Lib.

Rodriguez O., Jaime E. The Emergence of Spanish America: Vicente Rocafuerte and Spanish Americanism, 1808-1832.

Univ. of California Pr. 1975. 328p. illus. maps. bibliog. index. LC 74-22972. ISBN 0-520-02875-9. $17. HIST

Based upon extended research, this study traces the rise and decline of Spanish Americanism through the actions of one of its more prominent adherents, Vicente Rocafuerte (1783-1847). As fervent supporters of the Spanish liberal tradition, the Spanish Americanists initially favored a Hispanic constitutional commonwealth embracing both Spain and her colonies. When this failed, they fought to prevent the fragmentation of Hispanic America through a regional, supranational approach to the complex problems of the times. As a reflection of a growing but powerless bourgeoisie, they were overwhelmed by larger national realities. Still, their efforts present a fascinating insight into a little-explored aspect of Latin American history. And the author, through a careful study of archival materials in Colombia, Ecuador, Great Britain, Mexico, Spain, and the U.S., has strengthened the work by intertwining rich documentary materials, contemporary newspapers, and personal accounts. The result is a most valuable historical work capturing the essentials and spirit of the movement.—Joseph A. Ellis, Dept. of History, C.C.N.Y.

Stevenson, William. A Man Called Intrepid: the secret war.

HBJ. Mar. 1976. 512p. photogs. maps. ISBN 0-15-156795-6. $12.95. HIST

This book concerns the remarkable Canadian scientist and industrialist, Sir William Stephenson, and his equally remarkable British Security Coordination (BSC), the agency which, from its New York offices, coordinated British intelligence activities during World War II. The book is at its best when discussing prewar British intelligence; Stephenson's relations with F.D.R., "Wild Bill" Donovan of the O.S.S., and J. Edgar Hoover; and the extensive Anglo-American collaboration (not only on intelligence) after 1939. The book's touch is less secure on the overall wartime role of intelligence, which it exaggerates; e.g., Rommel's early victories in the desert were not solely attributable to superior German intelligence. Also the book reveals a shaky command of the literature on the war. (The actual sources are not quite clear, for, though the author claims to have used BSC papers, references of any kind are infrequent.) Finally, though the book has a pleasing style, the anecdotal approach and casual chronology sometimes obscure the relationships of events. In short, to be read with caution.—John G. Williamson, Yale Univ. Lib.

Travel, Exploration & Adventure

Jacobs, Charles & Babette Jacobs. Far East Travel Digest.

Travel Digests, 1100 Glendon Ave., Suite 1517, Los Angeles, Calif. 90024. 1976. 320p. illus. index. LC 75-113820. ISBN 0-912640-08-1. pap. $5.95. TRAV

Travel Digests publishes nuts-and-bolts type guidebooks aimed at travel agents and strong on airfares, routings, border regulations, and advice on how one can best spend his four hours in capital cities. This new title, covering roughly the region east of India and north of Australia, is weighted for the tourist primed for pleasure (12 pages on China, 31 on Hong Kong, 34 on Taiwan) rather than for lingering and learning. It does bring together a goodly amount of current information that is useful for planning, but it lacks the production polish of the McKay, Waldo, and Clark guidebooks already available. A supplementary source for heavily used travel collections.—Harold M. Otness, Southern Oregon State Coll. Lib., Ashland

Massow, Rosalind. Now It's Your Turn To Travel.

Macmillan. May 1976. 224p. index. $6.95; pap. $3.95. TRAV

This handbook for the older traveler covers everything from itineraries and passports to handling medical problems battleship to escort, incredibly detailed...

Battle stations!

Bismarck, Warspite, Enterprise . . . these and the other celebrated names recalling World War II as the last of the great naval wars are presented in detail. Their wartime careers, their design features, cost, fighting capabilities are complemented with tables, a chronology and a summary of the war at sea. Historical data and technical information of 29 renowned American, English, German and Japanese ships-warships representing the culmination of a century of development. Over 100 illustrations.

0695-80613-0 224 pages $9.95

FOLLETT PUBLISHING CO.

away from home. There is an excellent chapter on ethnic travel—i.e., visiting relatives in the "old country"—and even one on the pleasures and pitfalls of retirement living. Unfortunately, the book attempts to cover the entire globe as a travel guide and can therefore offer little more than capsule comments. Any of this information can be obtained easily and in more detail from a regular travel guide. The "useful foreign phrases" unhappily have no phonetics included. How would you pronounce "Nie mogę jesc potraw smazonych"? The book's value lies in the specific information it offers the older person traveling, perhaps for the first time, perhaps with a newly acquired physical disability.—Lola Dudley, Mamaroneck Free Lib., N.Y.

Scherman, Katharine. Daughter of Fire: a portrait of Iceland.

Little. Mar. 1976. photogs. maps. index. $12.50. IRAN

Beginning with the inevitable "birth of Surtsey," Scherman tells the story of Iceland's past and present: early voyages, the vagaries of fishing and agriculture, violent volcanoes and violent Vikings, blood feuds, trips to Vinland, natural history, political affairs, the writing of the sagas, modern education, descriptions of ancient farms. These threads, and more, are intertwined, with much local color added—the whole being based on a series of trips about the island. This interesting and readable book could be a series of articles in, say, Holiday magazine; it is recommended for the same readership. The illustrations were not seen.—R. G. Schipf, Univ. of Montana Lib.

FOR NEW MOTHERS
-about themselves

At last, a book that tells new mothers how to get themselves back together again—physically and emotionally—so that they will feel better and happier than ever after childbirth.

NOW THAT YOU'VE HAD YOUR BABY

by Dr. Gideon G. Panter and Shirley Motter Linde

With index and Glossary. $9.95

McKAY

Home Economics

Milinaire, Caterine & Carol Troy. Cheap Chic.

Harmony: Crown. 1976. 223p. photogs. index. LC 75-25562. ISBN 0-517-52453-8. $12.95; pap. ISBN 0-517-52368-X. $5.95. HOME ECON

This is an exciting, albeit rather funky and far-out guide to developing personal style. The authors recommend having a few clothes that look good and feel right and discuss such categories as "first layers," classics, sport clothes, ethnic items, wrapping, work clothes, and eclectic ensembles. Here, too, are interviews with assorted fashion mavins, ranging from such heavies as Diana Vreeland, Yves St. Laurent, and Betsey Johnson to individuals who dress with particular panache. Bea Feitler's book design is excellent, and the text is fun. Shopping strategies, thrift shop scrounging, and worldwide markets are surveyed in this appealing, lavishly illustrated book. It's full of good ideas and worth the price.—Mary Pradt Ziegler, Brooklyn P.L.

Cookery

Sokolov, Raymond A. The Saucier's Apprentice.

Knopf. Mar. 1976. 186p. illus. index. LC 75-34281. ISBN 0-394-48920-9. $10. COOKERY

Sokolov, a former food news editor of the New York Times, has written a cookbook on sauces which he calls "the last frontier." He assumes that the person using the book has some background in French cooking. The text abounds with technical terms for which a glossary would have been helpful. (Sokolov recommends consulting Julia Child's Mastering the Art of French Cooking.) Recipes for the basic sauces are large (a demiglacé requires 26 pounds of beef and veal bones). These sauces are frozen for use in innumerable compound sauces. Accompaniments for the sauces are recommended and recipes for some dishes are included—a roast pork seasoned with rosemary and garlic and served with Sauce Robert was unusually tasty. A well-written book for the experienced, adventurous cook.—Christine Bulson, SUNY at Oneonta Lib.

HUMOR

Hills, L. Rust. How To Be Good.

Doubleday. Mar. 1976. illus. LC 73-15346 ISBN 0-385-00235-1. $6.95. HUMOR

When a humorist suddenly writes in what appears to be a serious vein, it is difficult to know if he's still playing it for laughs, and I'm haunted by the suspicion that Hills might be having sport with us in this book, the third volume in his "Fussy Man" trilogy. In How To Do Things Right (LJ 6/1/72), he succeeded in making us laugh; in How To Retire at Forty-One (LJ 5/15/73), he bored us with the details of how he spends his days. But in How To Be Good, he's not particularly funny and he's not at all boring. He works up a big head of steam about a number of seemingly extinct ideas—virtue, morality, ideals, goodness—expressing wonder at how they have been corrupted by the evils of urbanization, bureaucratization, and industrialization. Perhaps in our day of push and drive and cynicism, there is no other way to deal with goodness than to walk around it on tiptoe, tongue-not-quite-in-cheek. Recommended.—A. J. Anderson, Sch. of Library Science, Simmons Coll., Boston

Literature

Allen, Mary. The Necessary Blankness: women in major American fiction of the sixties.

Univ. of Illinois Pr. Mar. 1976. 250p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-252-00519-8. $8.95. LIT

In examining the fiction of Barth, Pynchon, Purdy, Kesey, Roth, Updike, Oates, and Plath, Allen sees the most noticeable quality of women characters to be their blankness, with the chilling suggestion that women should "keep silent and content themselves at home." The glaring caricatures of Sophie Portnoy and Nurse Ratched exaggerate assertiveness and independence into mocked bitchery. The subtler, insidiously stereotypical passive women are doomed to a mind-shattering void, popping pills, descending into madness. A grim view, worthily and convincingly argued. Recommended for women's studies collections in academic libraries.—Marcia G. Fuchs, Free Lib. of Philadelphia, Pa.

Boccaccio, Giovanni. The Corbaccio.

Univ. of Illinois Pr. 1975. 194p. tr. & ed. by Anthony K. Cassell. bibliog. index. LC 75-9844. ISBN 0-252-00479-5. $7.95. LIT

An excellent scholarly edition and first English translation of Boccaccio's post-Decameron, antifeminist satire. Cassell traces persuasively and with concision the "scandalous" tale's ties to a broad tradition of dream/vision literature, hopefully burying further autobiographical interpretations. Introduction and end notes, which in length exceed the tale, illuminate it and assist the reader in appreciating the literary force of this false-confessional dream-dialogue between a lover and the beloved's dead husband in a place called the "Labyrinth of Love" (also the "Pigsty of Venus"). Appended are translations of two contemporary ordinances regulating excessive expenditures for dress, plus an excellent bibliography.—Marilyn Schneider, Dept. of French & Italian, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis

Unbiased reviewers are needed for books in Jewish studies. Please contact Ellen Levy, The Book Review.

Butscher, Edward. Sylvia Plath: method and madness.

Continuum: Seabury. 1976. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-8164-9253-0. $15.95. LIT

Butscher finds Plath's later poetry to be in the first rank, and provides biographical materials to unlock its central symbols. The first few chapters of the book are rather weak; the author indicts the conformist values of the American dream and its bitch goddess, success, as a cause for Plath's psychosis. However, he builds a convincing story of the events of her life, based upon numerous interviews and relevant documents. This book can be used by both the general reader and the student of literature.—Harriett Straus, formerly with Dutchess County Community Coll. Lib., Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

Chiaromonte, Nicola. The Worm of Consciousness and Other Essays.

HBJ. Mar. 1976. 233p. ed. by Miriam Chiaromonte. pref. by Mary McCarthy. index. ISBN 0-15-199440-4. $10. LIT

It is a joy to listen to the passionate good sense of Chiaromonte, recently deceased, long a cosmopolitan scrutinizer of the confrontation between mass "inertia" and individualistic "noble values" in our century. These writings in English, Italian, and French (the latter translated by several hands) well represent the hitherto neglected theater man, literary critic, and philosopher of history. Antifascist refugee, former anarchist, friend of existentialist Camus, he expresses with lucid intelligence his humane reservations about Marxist ideology, student revolt, and other forms of "banal" realism which further obscure, rather than solve any problems. It is like a sudden shaft of light straight from the Italian Renaissance.—Adrienne Gillespie, formerly at SUNY at Binghamton Lib.

Coh, Ruby. Modern Shakespeare Offshoots.

Princeton Univ. Pr. 1976. 416p. $22.50. THEATER/LIT

This atrociously titled work is actually an interesting and useful study of the way Shakespeare's plays have fared as adaptations or transformations in drama, fiction, and poetry. Cohn takes up where Hazelton Spencer left off in his study of Shakespeare on the Neoclassical English stage, Shakespeare Improved. While Cohn's work does not have the wit or the sense of delight which pervades Spencer's, it offers excellent treatment of Shaw's and Brecht's use of Shakespeare. Unfortunately, the section on Beckett strains the relationship, outdoing Jan Kott's "Lear as Endgame" in Shakespeare Our Contemporary. All in all, however, a book for all collections of Shakespeare, theater history, and contemporary drama.—Sanford Sternlicht, Dept. of Theater, SUNY Coll. at Oswego

Dickson, Lovat. Radclyffe Hall at the Well of Loneliness: a sapphic chronicle.

Scribners. Mar. 1976. 236p. illus. index. $7.95. BIOG/LIT

Dickson's new book might at first be taken for a biography of Radclyffe Hall, whose treatment of lesbian love in her 1928 novel The Well of Loneliness carried an implicit announcement of her own sexual tastes; but Dickson focuses on Hall's lover, Una Troubridge, far more than on Hall, suggesting that the work's real subject is their relationship. The volume is extremely well written, and it gives a fascinating view of British society from the perspective of these two nonconformist women. Dickson presents Hall's incongruous interests—Catholicism, sexual inversion, and psychic research—with intelligence and understanding. His first-hand knowledge of the publishing world serves him well as he recounts the publishing history of Hall's controversial novel in Britain and America. A fascinating subject superbly handled.—Margaret Anne O'Connor, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Dowrick, Stephanie. Land of Zeus: the Greek myths retold by geographical place of origin.

Doubleday. Mar. 1976. maps. bibliog. index. LC 74-25102. ISBN 0-385-05629-X. $7.95. LIT/MYTHOLOGY

This is not a study of causation and relationships among myths in a particular location. It is merely a consolidation and rearrangement of materials from two earlier books on myth by the author. As such, it should have some initial utility to students interested in the myths of a particular location or to persons planning a trip to certain parts of Greece and wishing background for the itinerary, but the reader should not look for new cultural insights or scholarly illumination of art or literature.—Robert P. Sonkowsky, Dept. of Classics, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis

Higginbotham, Virginia. The Comic Spirit of Federico García Lorca.

Univ. of Texas Pr. 1975. 181p. bibliog. index. LC 75-16079. ISBN 0-292-71033-X. $10.50. LIT

Generally considered a writer of tragedy, Lorca receives a fresh look in this comprehensive study. Defining the comic spirit as "an attitude of defiance in the face of incongruity and defeat," Higginbotham studies its expression in Lorca's poetry, prose, and theater (including key puppet farces and avant-garde plays). The role of comedy in revealing the human condition is the author's theme as she follows Lorca's satire, slapstick, whimsy, and humour noir to the hopelessness and despair they convey. Two features recommend the work to readers generally interested in 20th-Century European letters: English translations are supplied for passages quoted in Spanish, and Lorca's theater is viewed in relation to his modern Spanish predecessors (Benavente, Valle-Inclán, Arniches) and the subsequent Theater of the Absurd.—Dru Dougherty, Dept. of Spanish & Portuguese, Univ. of California, Berkeley

Aleksandr Pushkin's novel in verse

EUGENE ONEGIN

Revised Edition • Translated from the Russian, with a Commentary, by VLADIMIR NABOKOV

Sovfoto

"A magnificent achievement . . . unsurpassed as a translation and annotation of Pushkin's poem," wrote E.J. Simmons in the New York Times Book Review in 1964 when Vladimir Nabokov originally published his translation of Eugene Onegin. Now Nabokov has drastically revised his version, making it more faithful to his ideal of "literal" translation. Controversial as this new edition surely will be, it places within the reach of the English reader, more certainly than ever before, the sense and beauty of Pushkin's masterpiece.

Bollingen Series LXXII ISBN 0-691-09744-5
4 volumes $50.00 until June 1
Thereafter, $60.00

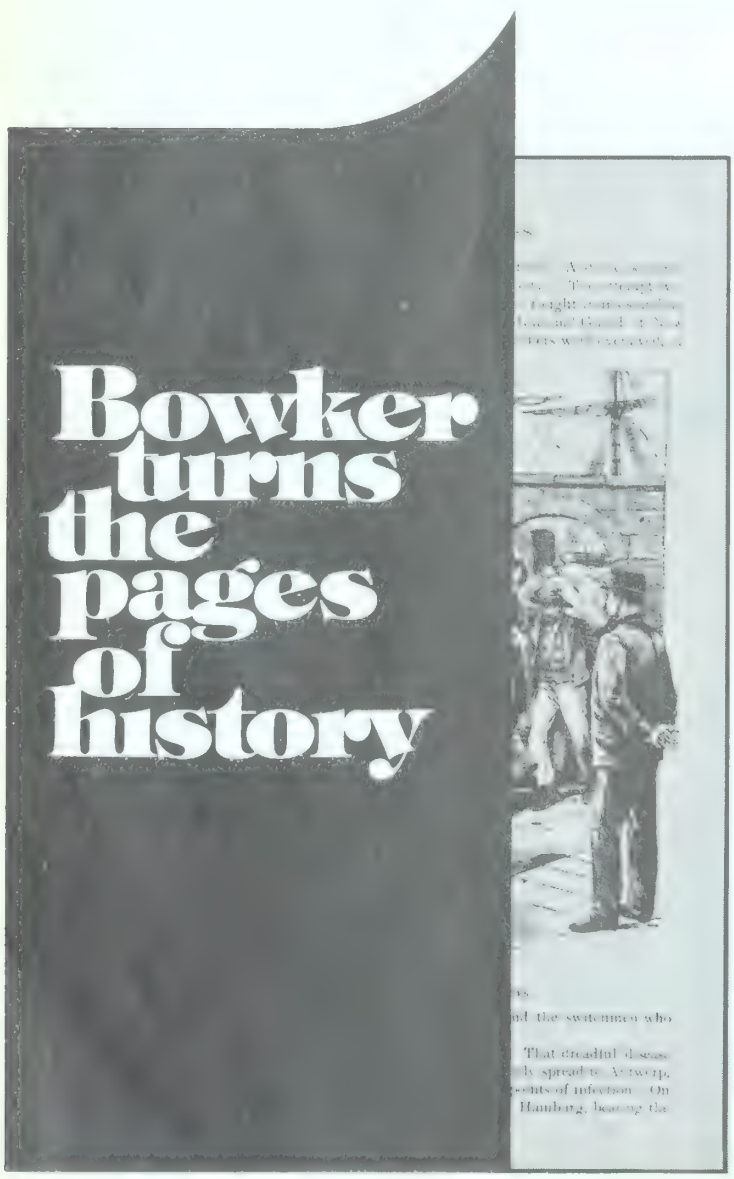
PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS
Princeton, New Jersey 08540

Cities
A Bibliographic Guide
for Contemporary Collections

A subject-arranged, critically annotated listing of more than 1,000 books, games, journals, films, filmstrips, and other items for everyone who teaches, studies, or provides information on the American city and its predecessors. It includes studies of individual neighborhoods, grand theories of urban development, histories of ancient cities. Criteria for inclusion were availability, critical reception, contemporaneity, and significance in the field.

Part I, The City in Practice, is oriented to contemporary and historical problems. Part II, The City in Perspective, looks at the urban experience through the lens of different academic disciplines.

From the new Bowker series edited by Peter Doiron. April, 1976. By Prof. Dwight W. Hoover, Ball State University. 6" x 9". 280 pages. ISBN 0-8352-0790-0. cip. $14.95.



Progressivism and Muckraking
A Bibliographic Guide
for Contemporary Collections

A unique, wide-ranging bibliographic essay which retrieves and explores the literature of and on social dissent in this country. It concentrates on the late 19th and early 20th century reform movements, and includes their predecessors and successors.

The author identifies and comments on more than 1,500 relevant titles, making this an unprecedented review of the literature for all scholars and students in American Studies, and an invaluable selection tool for librarians.

From the new Bowker series edited by Peter Doiron. April, 1976. By Prof. Louis Filler, Antioch College. 6" x 9". 250 pages. ISBN 0-8352-0875-3. cip. $15.95.

Rulers and Governments of the World
Volume II: 1492-1929 (1st English edition)

A completely updated English-language edition of Professor Bertold Spuler's famous German reference work, Regenten und Regierungen der Welt. In a country-by-country format, this new edition is the only single reference source to provide the complete record of successions of presidents and monarchs throughout the world, as well as, in many cases, the principal ministers who served under them.

August, 1976. Edited by Bertold Spuler and John Fletcher. 8-1/4" x 11-1/2". c500 pages. ISBN 0-85935-009-6. $31.50t.

Watch for Volume I: Earliest Times to 1492, and Volume III, 1930-1975. Ready late 1976.

Congress Investigates
A Documented History 1792-1974*

Scholarly analyses of 29 of the most important congressional investigations from The St. Clair Investigation, 1792 to The Watergate Committee. Outstanding historians unearthed the documents, and wrote in-depth essays which focus on background events, participants, results, legacy. 1975. Edited by Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr. and Roger Bruns. 6-1/4" x 9". 4103 pages. LC 74-34005. ISBN 0-8352-0795-1. $150.00 the 5-volume set.

Congress Investigates 1792-1974*

Reprints in their entirety, and in one volume, 16 important essays from the original 5-volume set. Each essay contains a bibliography and a list of documents. Edited by Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr. and Roger Bruns. 1975. 6" x 9". 507 pages. LC 75-28106. ISBN 0-8352-0864-8. cip. $15.95.

* Published by Chelsea House Publishers in association with R.R. Bowker Company.

R.R. Bowker Order Dept.
P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Mich. 48106

Outside Western Hemisphere:
Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England.
All orders plus shipping and handling.
Sales tax added where applicable.
(Prices subject to change without notice.)

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

Lambert, Gavin. The Dangerous Edge.
Grossman, dist. by Viking. Mar. 1976. 272p. bibliog. ISBN 0-670-25581-5. $8.95. BIOG/LIT
This survey of the literary careers of nine masters of suspense attempts to draw parallels between their lives and their plots and characters. Discussed are Wilkie Collins, Conan Doyle, John Buchan, Georges Simenon, G. K. Chesterton, Eric Ambler, Graham Greene, Raymond Chandler and Alfred Hitchcock. Under the premise that to convey fear effectively one must have felt it strongly in childhood, Lambert provides mainly plot summaries juxtaposed with accounts of incidences of shock in early life that would predispose these writers toward suspense fiction. This treatment is successful for some of the writers (Collins, Simenon, Greene), less effective for others (Chesterton, Doyle, Ambler). Limited critical discussion and a minuscule bibliography inhibit research use, but lovers of suspense literature will gain some insight.—Barbara F. Meiser, Dallas P.L.

Lundquist, James. Chester Himes.
Ungar. (Modern Literature Monographs). May 1976. c.200p. bibliog. $7. LIT
This is the first book-length study of a much-neglected modern black novelist, and, as such, it does a real service for black literature in America. It begins with a brief biography of Himes, emphasizing the poverty and racial prejudice that he experienced as a black child in America in the first two decades of this century. Lundquist spends the rest of the book discussing Himes's fiction. Although he too often summarizes plots where analysis is needed, he does provide a very useful compendium of Himes's career and an honest reevaluation of Himes's underestimated position in modern American letters.—John Louis DiGaetani, Dept. of English, Univ. of New Orleans

Marcovich, Miroslav, ed. Illinois Classical Studies. Vol. 1, 1975.
Univ. of Illinois Pr. 1976. 270p. ISBN 0-252-00516-3. $8.95. HIST/LIT
The classics departments of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and Chicago Circle have started a new, annual, scholarly series, Illinois Classical Studies, to publish articles dealing with various aspects of classical antiquity. The first volume includes 16 articles covering such topics as Roman numismatics, the history and transmission of the texts of Tacitus, and certain details of Aristophanes' Wasps. The articles, in general, are well written and documented, but they are not for rookies to the classics or those without a reading knowledge of Greek or Latin. This work should be of some use to universities with graduate programs in the classics. A qualified recommendation.—John D. Campbell, Occidental Coll. Lib., Los Angeles

O'Hara, J. D. Poetry.
Newsweek Bks. 1976. 192p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 74-83893. ISBN 0-88225-119-8. $10. LIT
Because it deals with the entire history of poetry this volume suffers from the problems which befall a survey of limited length. Greatest emphasis is placed on English-language poetry, with a portion of the work devoted to the Homeric epics and poetry of other languages. When the author is not self-consciously addressing his audience (as when he refers to the warring factions in the Mahabharata as "good guys" and "bad guys"), he writes an interesting and informative history. He is at his best when he becomes engrossed in his topic and presents unique facets of poems or poets' lives, and thereby encourages the reader to pursue the matter in greater depth. Unfortunately, there are no footnotes, and bibliographic references are far too general to be of any service. Allusions to various poems not included in the text assume access to a good collection of poetry. The profuse illustrations add immeasurably to the work; their presence makes the price of this volume very reasonable for school libraries.—Janet C. Muller, Learning Resource Center, Frederick Community Coll., Md.

Pizer, Donald. The Novels of Theodore Dreiser: a critical study.
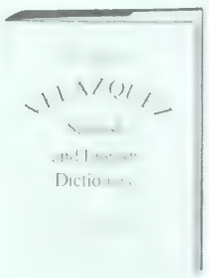
Univ. of Minnesota Pr. Jun. 1976. c. 400p. $20. LIT
Pizer's criticism of the novels is based on both an obvious close reading of the works themselves and on an investigation of the composition and printing history of the texts. What results is a multi-

FOR YOUR LANGUAGE REFERENCE NEEDS, SAY "PRENTICE-HALL."

BRUECKNER'S FRENCH CONTEXTUARY
John Brueckner

This completely new kind of dictionary translates any common English phrase into its exact French equivalent. Over 11,500 entries are listed with 44,000 contextual uses.
"A unique reference tool."
—Catholic Library World
$30.00



VELÁZQUEZ New Pronouncing Dictionary of the Spanish and English Languages, Revised Edition
Mariano Velázquez de la Cadena

An authoritative guide to both Castilian and Pan-American Spanish, with thousands of new words in this edition. Completely self-pronouncing, this dictionary offers accurate pronunciation in modern and traditional usages.
thumb indexed $12.95

APPLETON'S NEW CUYÁS DICTIONARY
Arturo Cuyás

This Fifth Revised Edition defines over 130,000 words, phrases and idioms. Appendices offering equivalents for proper and geographic names, nicknames, and common abbreviations plus guides to pronunciation make it a complete reference.
$10.95; thumb indexed $11.95

PRENTICE-HALL, INC.
General Book Marketing Division,
Box 500
Englewood Cliffs,
New Jersey 07632

faceted discussion of theme, structure, source material, and text for each of the novels. The inclusion of biographical data provides the reader with a clearer picture of Dreiser's development of theme and social philosophy during his writing career and helps explain the lesser literary merits of the final novels. Although each novel is considered separately and in chronological order, Pizer does engage in some comparative criticism which focuses on an analysis of the thematic structure and governing philosophy incorporated in the canon. Though An American Tragedy and Sister Carrie are, with reason, commented on most fully, no novel is given short shrift. The book is, therefore, an important and valuable study.—Colin McLeod, Dept. of English, Virginia Polytechnic Inst. & State Univ., Blacksburg

Sartre, Jean-Paul. Sartre on Theater.

Random. May 1976. 235p. ed. by Michel Contat & Michel Rybalka. tr. from French by Frank Jellinek. ISBN 0-394-49247-1. $10.95. THEATER/LIT

This useful collection contains the full text of a number of articles, lectures, and conversations in which Sartre analyzes the role of theater in contemporary society while comparing his own views with those of other great playwrights. There are also sections from various documents and interviews given by Sartre at the time of performance of certain of his plays. The result is a highly readable and rich portrait of Sartre as dramatist. This volume will serve as a useful and practical supplement to existing works of criticism on Sartre's literary and philosophical writings.—Anthony Caprio, Dept. of Romance Languages, Lehman Coll., CUNY

Thomas, Clara. The Manawaka World of Margaret Laurence.

Books Canada, Inc., 33 E. Tupper St., Buffalo, N.Y. 14203. 1975. 212p. illus. bibliog. $11.50. LIT

Thomas adds little here to her previous volume of criticism, Margaret Laurence (o. p.). She suggests that this study "is a discussion of the progress to date of her [Laurence's] writing." Thomas uses the word discussion in a very liberal sense, for her study is nothing more than a collection of extensive synopses with elaborated commentary. By devoting almost equal space to all of Laurence's books, Thomas fails to formulate a focus on the various attributes of the works and the author's progress. There is a lengthy bibliography that may be useful, but the book is not recommended as it has little else to offer to any collection on Laurence.—Anthony J. Kelly, Grad. Sch. of Library Science, McGill Univ., Montreal, Canada

Tropp, Martin. Mary Shelley's Monster.

Houghton. Mar. 1976. photogs. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-395-24066-2. $7.95. CINEMA/LIT

This fascinating critical study traces the Frankenstein myth from its origins in the unique personality of Mary Shelley to its latest manifestations in Hollywood horror films. According to Tropp, the myth is essentially concerned with the complex relationships between science, self, and society. For the 19-year-old Shelley, the new science of the industrial revolution and the gothic tradition combined with her own personal dreams to form our first modern science fiction novel. Tropp finds the novel "mythopoetic-myth creating" and deftly shows how succeeding generations, faced with an even more powerful science and the possibility of atomic holocaust, have used the Frankenstein story in more than 20 film adaptations to reflect their own cultural nightmares. The Frankenstein legend appeals to nearly everyone, and this careful, scholarly, and exciting examination of that legend is just as engaging.—Joseph J. Branin, Kent State Univ. Lib., Salem, Ohio

Unamuno, Miguel de. Ficciones: four stories and a play.

Princeton Univ. Pr. (Bollingen Series 85, Vol. 7). Jun. 1976. 310p. tr. by Anthony Kerrigan. intro. & notes by Martin Nozick. LC 67-22341. ISBN 0-691-09930-8. $12.50.

Unamuno, Miguel de. Novela/Nivola.

Princeton Univ. Pr. (Bollingen Series, 85, Vol. 6). Jun. 1976. 517p. tr. & intro. by Anthony Kerrigan. annotated by Martin Nozick & Anthony Kerrigan. LC 67-22341. ISBN 0-691-09929-4. $14.50. LIT

These two volumes include fine translations of some of Unamuno's major works. In Volume 6 an informative introduction by Kerrigan describes Unamuno's own genre called the nivola. Unamuno's treatment of the interplay of illusion and reality is then compared to Pirandello and Borges. A particularly interesting foreword by Jean Cassou, who translated many of Unamuno's works into French and knew the author personally, reveals how Unamuno's exile stimulated his preoccupation with death. The works in Volume 6 include Mist, Unamuno's dramatic presentation of the autonomy of characters; Abel Sánchez, an original work based on the Cain and Abel theme; and How To Make a Novel, which deals with the author's obsession with his exile, death, and the creative process.

In Volume 7 Kerrigan relates Unamuno's pessimistic view that all men are sentenced to die. Nozick's stimulating introduction compares Unamuno to Erasmus in his criticism of the Church, and presents the basic conflict of an author whose profound desire to have complete faith in God was shaken by European rationalism. Included in this volume are "Tia Tula", "Saint Manuel Bueno, Martyr"; "The Novel of Don Sandalio, Chess Player"; "The Madness of Doctor Montarco"; and "The Other." These works echo Unamuno's philosophical concerns: his religious doubts and inner conflicts, mortality, and the complexity of man's identity. The two volumes are excellent additions to the series.—James J. Troiano, Dept. of Foreign Languages & Classics, Univ. of Maine, Orono Weiskel, Thomas. The Romantic Sublime: studies of structure and psychology of transcendence.

Johns Hopkins. Apr. 1976. 250p. index. $12. LIT

Examining the work of Longinus, Burke, Kant, and the major English Romantic poets, but especially Wordsworth, Weiskel attempts to isolate and define the sublime moment in which "the burden (of the past, but not exclusively) is lifted and there is an influx of power." In this moment, a man transcends, in language and feeling, his ordinary limitations. To analyze this moment, Weiskel uses techniques provided by structuralism and psychoanalysis. Though he claims to be only "an amateurish and somewhat lukewarm structuralist," his study reveals a central preoccupation of structuralism: its needs to explain the difference between the obvious content of literary works and their latent structural identity. Weiskel is conversant with more recent French and Continental criticism, as well as similar work in American criticism. His subject is a hard one, and his method allows for subtle interpretations that reveal esoteric shades of meaning and significance.—F. P. Riga, Dept. of English, Canisius Coll., Buffalo, N.Y.

Philosophy

Tagliacozzo, Giorgio & Donald P. Verene, eds. Giambattista Vico's Science of Humanity.

Johns Hopkins. 1976. 528p. bibliog. index. $16.50. PHIL

These 28 essays link Vico's ideas to the thought of Hobbes, Spinoza, Kant, Hegel, Marx, Dilthey, Husserl, Wittgenstein, Cassirer, Joyce, and Piaget. Ranging over the topics of interpretation, history, philosophy, the social sciences, and the relation between theory and practice, the essays contain seeds for overcoming the antithesis between the natural and social sciences, for a philosophical grasp of the whole which could deepen the self-understanding of modern man. The comprehensive list of works on Vico published in English or in English translation is a valuable research tool for Vico scholarship.—Sister Dorothy A. Haney, Dept of Philosophy, Marywood Coll., Scranton, Pa.

Yartz, Frank J. & others. Progress and the Crisis of Man.

Nelson-Hall. Jun. 1976. 144p. ISBN 0-88229-165-3. $9.95. SOC SCI/PHIL

In an essay each, two philosophers and a political scientist probe deeply for the meaning of progress, searching for a balance between humanity and technology. Some of their concerns are the ambiguousness of progress; the concept of growth for growth's sake; the specialist's need for more social understanding; secularism versus secularization; and the "big brother" dangers of genetic planning, relativity of values, dehumanization of the working classes, space exploration, etc. A timely, realistic, and well-written volume.—Raleigh De Priest, Mansfield State Coll. Lib., Pa.

POETRY
POETRY

POETRY

Algarín, Miguel & Miguel Pinero, eds. Nuyorican Poetry: an anthology of Puerto Rican words and feelings.

Morrow. 1975. 185p. photogs. by Gil Mendez. LC 75-22390. ISBN 0-688-02967-1. $6.95; pap. ISBN 0-688-07966-0. $2.95. POETRY

This anthology of poems by Puerto Ricans living in New York City covers a wide range of themes, but underlying them all is fierce anger at the indignity of a life of poverty in a hostile society, and a growing determination to build a meaningful existence out of a desperate situation. The language at times is the new "Nuyorican," that mixture of Spanish and English born on the streets of Puerto Rican New York, used here to create scenes of acute immediacy. The rawness of inner-city life is not disguised, and while the poetry is not marked by subtle insights, no reader will remain unmoved by its power and compassion. Literal translations are given for those poems written entirely in Spanish.—Dayle Manges, Univ. of Louisville Lib., Ky.

Boullata, Issa, ed. & tr. Modern Arabic Poets, 1950-1975.

Three Continents Pr. (Critical Perspectives Series). 1976. 300p. $16; pap. $10. POETRY

The intentions of this new series on literature of the non-Western world are good, the scope wide, the need evident. Unfortunately, this volume doesn't live up to expectations. The fault is not in the introduction, which demonstrates how social and poetic-technical revolution proceed hand in hand—the need for new forms, new experiences, new resources of self and society are seen as one. Necessarily, the poetry is "political" in the widest sense, with "free verse" a part of the revolution. But the poetry itself is not easily grasped. Frequently heavily mythical, it reads too often like poor "waste land" material. There is fine poetry written in Arabic, so I have to conclude that the editor's choices were suspect and his translation ability inadequate (there are too many unidiomatic and archaic phrases: "split in twain" and so on). Poetry in one language should remain poetry in another.—Brian Swann, Dept. of Humanities, Cooper Union, New York

Bringhurst, Robert. Bergschrund.

Kanchenjunga Pr., 22 Rio Vista Lane, Red Bluff, Calif. 96080. 1975. 103p. $10.95; pap. $4. POETRY

In these days of self-involved confessional poetry it is refreshing to come upon a poet who looks outward to the world and draws strength for his vision from the hardness of nature itself. Bringhurst's poetry is distinguished by a lack of self-pity in facing reality and history and a willingness to grapple with the problem of finding an original language for that which is not-man. The powerful "Hachadura," for example, traces the evolution of both weapons and man from "the razor edge of air" to the "axeheads of the spine." Other sections include a series of poems on Greek philosophers and a series on Biblical themes. The imagery, sense of history, and first-person narrative style often recall T. S. Eliot. This is a difficult, challenging collection that maintains a high intellectual level and an authoritative command of language.—Norman Stock, Brooklyn Coll. Lib.

Connellan, Leo. First Selected Poems.

Univ. of Pittsburgh Pr. (Pitt Poetry Series). Mar. 1976. 70p. LC 75-29152. pap. ISBN 0-8229-5268-8. $2.95. POETRY

There are selections here from three books previously published by small presses. The sensibility is dark and brooding, of men "staggered by risks," of life as it is. The poems are political though not in any didactic way; they voice the struggle of living, while dramatizing the violence and betrayal—inner and outer—in all of us, as in "Lament for Lorca," among the finest poems: "We will let it happen again,/ when the time comes/ some of us will do it." Sometimes these poems seem postured; but they are going for the raw emotion. And if they are occasionally bathetic, they are often startling in their imagery, as in "Old Gravestones": "See them in morning mist like fingernails of/ some gigantic hand ripped up/ through the hard ground. . . ."—Merrill Leffler, Dept. of English, U.S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md.

THE WORKS OF WILLIAM JAMES

Frederick Burkhardt is General Editor: Fredson Bowers, Textual Editor: Ignas K. Skrupskelis, Associate Editor.

Harvard Univerity Press inaugurates a definitive edition of all of William James's published and unpublished writings except his letters. It is a new edition rich in "firsts."

It is the first edition of James's works to benefit from scrupulous overall editorial attention. And the first edition prepared according to modern standards of scholarship.

Supervised by a team of scholars, each a specialist in his field, The Works of William James fills the long-standing need for an authoritative, standard edition of the philosopher's works. It has been awarded the seal of approval of the Center for Editions of American Authors.

Harvard University Press
Cambridge, Mass. 02138

Pragmatism
A New Name for Some Old Ways of Thinking
William James
Introduction by H.S. Thayer
$15.00

The Meaning of Truth
A Sequel to Pragmatism
William James
Introduction by H.S. Thayer
$16.50

Dorn, Edward. The Collected Poems, 1956-1974.

Four Seasons, dist. by Book People. 1975. 277p. index. LC 74-27227. ISBN 0-87704-030-3. $10; pap. ISBN 0-87704-029-X. $5. POETRY

Though nothing in this volume surpasses Dorn's sprawling masterpiece, Gunslinger [see LJ 2/1/76—Ed.], there is much to recommend it. Like Gunslinger, this collection frequently exhibits that too infrequent a being, the comic poet; but the comic mask sometimes slips, revealing a large and ranging compassion for the beaten: a condemned man in "The Prisoner of Bellefonte (Pa)," Appalachian coal miners in "Eugene Delacroix Says," reservation Indians, "Fort Hall Obituary: A Note." Much of Dorn's poetry is political satire, sardonically lampooning the cowboy mentality he finds still too near the center of America's consciousness for comfort. His rapier skewers equally liberals and conservatives. The most effective and moving satiric piece is the long prose poem, "The World Box-Score Cup of 1966," a Swiftian attack on geo-politics that broadcasts a global sporting contest between the Haves and the Havenots in a voice disquietingly close to that of Sunday NFL games. Dorn's poetry deserves wider circulation than it's had, and this book should help that process along.—James McKenzie, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Dakota, Grand Forks

Lima, Frank. Angel: new poems.

Liveright: Norton. Mar. 1976. 72p. ISBN 0-87140-109-6. $6.95; pap. ISBN 0-87140-617-9. $2.95. POETRY

This latest collection of poems by a fairly popular poet of the New York School attempts to convey a surrealist vision of freedom for the imagination through the use of highly idiosyncratic and usually discordant imagery. Such lines as, "I apologize to rusty water" and "I see dogs in the streets/ and they remind me of my coffee," and numerous other such combinations, can be liberating to the imagination if you are willing to go along with them. But too much of this can also be just that, too much. Or perhaps it is not a matter of clarity but of context. A line like "I greet you with breakfast but you want lightning on the lake" seems to have more power because it implies some human context rather than just drifting through space. Too often, however, such good lines are lost in the poems because they are surrounded by a loose flow of image after image after image. This may be a good way to learn how to write poetry, but once you learn, how about some selection? For those poetry collections with a demand for this kind of currently fashionable overdone poetry.—Norman Stock, Brooklyn Coll. Lib.

Sexton, Anne. 45 Mercy Street.

Houghton. Mar. 1976. 113p. ed. by Linda Gray Sexton. ISBN 0-395-24295-9. $6.95; pap. ISBN 0-395-24294-0. $3.95. POETRY

The four sections in this posthumous collection chronicle those events, confessions, nightmares of 1973-1974 that preceded the poet's suicide. Inevitably, some of the poems appear fragmented; others are more finished, all are intense. In Part 1 (11 poems entitled "Beginning the Hegira") there is a search for Mercy Street, "not there, not there," and a voice frantically crying for peace, "in my middle age, I'm well aware/ You keep making statues of my acts . . ."With many Daliesque images the poet identifies or speaks directly with the animals in her bestiary (Part 2)—the bat, a thing "to be caught/ somewhere in the cemetery hanging upside down/ like a misshapen udder" or the snail (a magnificent poem) about a creature who "wears his mother all day" and "hides his mysterious bottom/ as if it were rotten fruit." Victim and victimiser keep reappearing in "Divorce Papers" (Part 3) and "Eating the Leftovers" (Part 4). There is still love and "spasms of it will not sleep." Occasionally, lines or single words leap from the page with a sense of urgency conjuring order from disorder, performing an "undoing dance." All the pieces are here for the taking, a legacy—like some broken mirror—that remains to be put together with glue.—Rosaly De Maios Roffman, Dept. of English, Indiana Univ. of Pennsylvania

Time to Greez! Incantations from the Third World.

Third World Communications/Glide. 1975 211p. intro. by Maya Angelou. index. LC 75-355. pap. ISBN 0-912078-44-8. $4.95.

Troupe, Quincy & Rainer Schulte, eds. Giant Talk: an anthology of Third World writings.

Random. 1975. 531p. bibliog. $15; Vintage pap. $5.95. POETRY

Here are two very different but complementary approaches to Third World writing. Giant Talk is broadly comprehensive, defining Third World writing as anything coming from the international "world of the politically and economically oppressed and exploited" and as not limited to black or brown, a particular class, or the immediate present. In fact, however, most selections are by black writers from America, Africa, and the Caribbean or by Latino writers, while Asian and American Indian materials receive considerably less attention. A wide variety of literary schools and movements are represented. Materials are neatly organized thematically: oppression and protest, violence, identity, music-language-rhythm, humor, ritual-magic, and conceptualization-abstraction. There is a detailed and useful preface, set of biographical notes, and bibliography.

By contrast, Time to Greez! is more specialized, being limited to recent works from San Francisco writers' workshops. The book is organized in sections—Aian (Asian American), Pacho che (la Raza), black, and American Indian writers. Though the materials presented are uneven in quality, a number of fine works clearly express Third World attitudes toward what they consider America's unfinished revolution. These young writers view their works as a sharing of food (a greez is a feast) with those who would know them better. The theme of this collection is to be found in the unifying metaphor of food sharing and food leftovers. In the words of Chinese poet Wing Tek Lum's "Minority Poem": [we're] . . . "the leftover peelings/ lying on the kitchen counter/ which the cook has forgotten about/ or doesn't know/ quite what to do with."—Robert D. Welch, Dept. of English, Wayne County Community Coll., Grosse Pointe, Mich.

Wild, Peter. Chihuahua.

Doubleday. Mar. 1976. LC 75-21059. ISBN 0-385-11452-4. pap. $4.95. POETRY

Wild continues to work in the Surrealist mode. His distrust of reason makes many of his narratives and character sketches seem shapeless or evasive; many of the flights of fancy seem willfully inane. Yet, this distrust gives consistency to the tone and clarity to the images in "Agriculturalists" and "In the Guggenheim"—two poems that poke fun at the untruth of city life or city people. Other poems in the book are more ambitious. In "Chepa Franco," "Chihuahua," and "Lolo Pass" Wild brings us a bit closer to the strangeness of the Southwest. In the book's final poem, "Fisherman," he approaches—rather than flees—the recurrent image of a man awake at night, alone or beside a sleeping wife. This poem, while not as realized as the three just mentioned, does suggest the integrity of the poet and the possibilities of his art.—Michael Madigan, Dept. of English, Univ. of California, Berkeley

Political Science & International Affairs

Glassman, Jon D. Arms for the Arabs: the Soviet Union and war in the Middle East.

Johns Hopkins. 1976. 243p. bibliog. index. LC 75-29254. ISBN 0-8018-1747-1. $12.50. INT AFFAIRS

Three wars in the Middle East—and the Soviet role in them—form the basis of Glassman's calm study. Treating a subject that is obviously of interest and concern to a wide audience, Glassman has succeeded in presenting a wide range of facts without the intrusion of spleen or argumentation. Until the next war, or until the next major development in the Middle East, Glassman will remain the basic authority on Soviet intervention through arms supply and advisers. He details how the position of the U.S. and the West has deteriorated and how the U.S.S.R. has become less and less sensitive to the U.S. reactions to Soviet adventures in the Middle East. In spite of some setbacks, the Soviet Union will, Glassman says, remain a major factor there. His readers will surely agree and will thank him for such an even study of the events which have created this situation.—Walter Darnell Jacobs, Dept. of Government & Politics, Univ. of Maryland, College Park

Mailer, Norman. Some Honorable Men: political conventions 1960-1972.

Little. Apr. 1976. 439p. illus. $12.50. POL/SCI

This work brings together all of Mailer's writings on national political conventions from 1960 to 1972. Until now these essays were spread throughout four books: The Presidential Papers, Cannibals and Christians, Miami and the Seige of Chicago, and St. George and the Godfather. Because of Mailer's importance as an exponent of the New Journalism (and these works in particular as often-cited examples thereof), there is some validity in bringing them together in one place, without the admixture of other materials which mark at least the first two volumes mentioned above. The fact that the first of the four—The Presidential Papers—is now out of print is an additional reason for acquiring this edition. All in all, the new composite volume makes good reading in preparation for this summer's upcoming edition of our quadrennial national sport.—Scott Wright, Coll. of St. Thomas Lib., St. Paul, Minn.

O'Brien, David J. Neighborhood Organization and Interest-Group Processes.

Princeton Univ. Pr. 1976. 263p. index. bibliog. LC 75-3468. ISBN 0-691-09363-6. $13.50.

POL SCI

This analysis of selected forces affecting the development of neighborhood organizations is based on the author's doctoral research. The underlying assumption is that although the people in poor residential areas have common interests and a "common culture," their individual interests may inhibit the process of neighborhood organization. O'Brien emphasizes the need to find incentives that will motivate such self-interested group members to support collective social action. Yet certain of his interpretations seem clearly subject to critical debate and evaluation. For example, although he deals with the fact that people work through interest and pressure groups, he fails to stress sufficiently the impact of power and powerlessness on organizational processes. Nevertheless his study can be recommended for academic and public libraries.—Benjamin N. Levy, Dept. of Urban Studies, Southern Connecticut State Coll., New Haven

Ostow, Miriam and Anna B. Dutka. Work and Welfare in New York City.

Johns Hopkins Pr. 1975. 93p. fwd. by Eli Ginzberg. index. LC 75-11357. ISBN 0-8018-1735-8. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-8018-1736-6. $2.75.

PUBLIC ADMIN

This work examines New York's welfare system with the intention of reporting which recipients are most employable and under what circumstances. The study is accessible to the nonspecialist, and it makes some useful distinctions between different types of public assistance beneficiaries. But as a whole it is disturbing because the authors accept vague categories from departmental records. For example, ethnicity is divided into white, black, and Puerto Rican; jobs are either white or blue collar; chronic illness is left undefined. Vital areas of public policy rest on conclusions of a study such as this one and in order to make choices wisely, one needs considerably more data and far more precise categorization of that data.—James Levin, Dept. of Special Programs, C.C.N.Y.

POL SCI

Porter, Gareth. A Peace Denied: the United States, Vietnam, and the Paris Agreement.

Indiana Univ. Pr. 1976. 416p. photogs. index. LC 75-3890. ISBN 0-253-16160-6. $15.

INT AFFAIRS

A complete analysis of the negotiations which led to the Paris Agreement of January 25, 1973, ending America's military involvement in that long struggle. The concluding chapters carry the tragic story down to the final fall of Saigon in 1975. Porter demonstrates, with balanced and superb documentation, that the North Vietnamese understood American goals far better than our leaders understood the dynamics of Vietnam's long struggle against foreign domination. The U.S. missed many opportunities from 1954 to 1973 to find a peace far more just and more advantageous to American goals than that which finally emerged. Porter's book is essential reading for those who shape foreign policy as well as for thoughtful students and citizens. It is an important and valuable study.—Albert Erlebacher, Dept. of History, DePaul Univ., Chicago

Russell, Francis. The President-Makers: from Mark Hanna to Joseph P. Kennedy.

Little. Apr. 1976. 400p. illus. index. $12.95.

HIST/POL SCI

Writing with his customary ease, Russell profiles the colorful careers of seven individuals who guided other men to the Presidency in this century: Hanna (McKinley); Thomas Platt (Theodore Roosevelt); Theodore Roosevelt (Taft); George Harvey (Wilson); Harry Daugherty (Harding); Frank Stearns (Coolidge); Louis Howe (FDR); and Joseph Kennedy (JFK). Understandably, Russell's portraits vary in their sharpness. He deftly captures the crude Daugherty and the doughty Howe, for instance, even as he blurs the unsavory side of the elder Kennedy and ignores Harvey for the sake of Wilson. Even more seriously, Russell fails to isolate the character of his subjects. His portraits are rich in detail and anecdote; but they do not penetrate the complex obsession with power that gripped all his subjects and that drove them, at tremendous personal cost, into becoming the unique political operatives that they were. What results is an enjoyable collection of political stories. But the book is not—as it might have been—a vehicle that drives us toward a deeper understanding of the elemental meaning of politics.—Charles DeBenedetti, Dept. of History, Univ. of Toledo, Ohio

Sale, Kirkpatrick. Power Shift: the rise of the Southern Rim and its challenge to the Eastern Establishment.

Random. 1975. 362p. index. LC 75-10302. ISBN 0-394-48947-0. $12.95.

POL SCI

Journalist Sale's thesis is that the long-vaunted Establishment centered in the Northeast is being challenged politically, economically, and culturally by a new power nexus in the South and Southwest regions—the Southern Rim. The critical conflict is not between Democrat and Republican, but between what Sale identifies as the Yankee culture and the cowboy culture. Population shifts, the growing importance of oil, agribusiness, and the leisure industry, the Southern concentration of defense and technology installations, and the attendant real estate and construction boom have all contributed to the ascendancy of the Rim. Sale argues that this climb to power reached its acme in the Johnson and Nixon Presidencies, and that the extreme conservatism and corruption rampant in the Rim were reflected in the character of both administrations, peaking with Nixon. He sees the Watergate investigations as the Yankee "counter-attack," checking cowboy power momentarily but probably not permanently. Sale's argument is vastly overextended, and much of the statistical evidence he has amassed is ambiguous and unconvincing. But his central thesis will have a permanent impact on the thinking even of those who reject many of his individual supporting arguments. An important book for public and academic libraries.—Nancy C. Cridland, Indiana Univ. Lib., Bloomington

Psychology&Psychiatry

American Handbook of Psychiatry. 2d rev. & expanded ed. 6 vols. Vol. 1: The Foundations of Psychiatry ed. by Silvano Arieti, M.D. 1270p. Vol. 2: Child and Adolescent Psychiatry, Sociocultural and Community Psychiatry ed. by Gerald Caplan, M.D. 858p. Vol. 3: Adult Clinical Psychiatry ed. by Silvano Arieti, M.D. & Eugene B. Brody, M.D. 896p. Vol. 4: Organic Disorders and Psychosomatic Medicine ed. by Morton F. Reiser, M.D. 992p. Vol. 5: Treatment ed. by Daniel X. Freedman, M.D. & Jarl E. Dyrud, M.D. 1024p. Vol. 6: New Psychiatric Frontiers ed. by David H. Hamburg, M.D. & H. Keith H. Brodie, M.D. 1104p.

ea. vol: Basic Bks. 1975. index. Vol. 1, LC 72-89185. ISBN 0-465-00147-5. $29.50; Vol. 2, LC 72-89185. ISBN 0-465-00148-3. $24.50; Vol. 3, LC 72-89185. ISBN 0-465-00149-1. $24.50; Vol. 4, LC 75-26588. ISBN 0-465-00150-5. $32.50; Vol. 5, LC 73-78893. ISBN 0-465-00151-3. $32.50; Vol. 6, LC 75-26586. ISBN 0-465-00152-1. $32.50; set $169.50.

PSYCH

This improved second edition of a standard reference has been reorgan-

JUST RELEASED

Hoffer-Kelm-Osmond:
Orig. ed. 1975 256 pp. 11.50
Clinical and Other Uses of the Hoffer Osmond Diagnostic Test
Keith: 347 pp. 13.95
Menders of the Maimed
Kopell: 178 pp. 13.50
Peripheral Entrapment Neuropathies
Kornhauser: 354 pp. 14.25
Mental Health of the Industrial Worker
Marcial-Rojas: 1027 pp. 65.00
Pathology of Protosoal and Helminthic Diseases
Pearl: 141 pp. 6.50
To Begin With
Rogler-Hollingshead: 436 pp. 16.50
Trapped: Families and Schizophrenia

ROBERT E. KRIEGER PUBLISHING CO., INC
645 NEW YORK AVENUE P.O. BOX 542
HUNTINGTON, N.Y. 11743

ized and revised throughout and made much more comprehensive (the work has been expanded from three to six volumes). While some chapters show only minor editorial changes, others have been entirely rewritten, either by the same author or by new authors. Vol. 1, for example, includes a new, innovative chapter on "The Life Cycle and Its Common Vicissitudes" which will be of special interest to the lay-reader, and there are new chapters on healing and normality. Vol. 6 is almost entirely new. It deals with the understanding and development of human behavior, psychopharmacology, new treatment methods, and the social context of psychiatry. The six volumes of the American Handbook of Psychiatry form an excellent basic reference collection, together with the new second edition of Alfred M. Freedman & Harold I. Kaplan's Comprehensive Textbook of Psychiatry and Lawrence C. Kolb's Modern Clinical Psychiatry. Essential for collections serving students or professionals in the fields of psychiatry, psychology, social work, pastoral counseling, and education.—Ronald A. Grant, M.D., Medical Director, Montclair Counseling Center, N.J.

Bell, Robert & John Coplans. Decisions, Decisions: game theory and you.

Norton. 1976. 160p. illus. bibliog. LC 75-23142. ISBN 0-393-01121-6. $7.95. PSYCH

Game theory is a fairly complex method of solving problems involving mathematics, feelings, and a concept of morality, which is usually employed by military strategists, economists, and social planners. This book is an attempt to adapt the method to everyday problems—should Sue live with Joe without marriage? should Liz double-park? should Kate report her boss who is embezzling funds? People are instructed to rank their various alternatives in terms of the least desirable option, working up to the one with the greatest advantage—the authors coin the term "lowerarchy" to describe this process—and then construct a "conflict map" (a sort of grid) on which they show other people's options. There's more, and it's all quite complicated. I'd toss a coin to see whether I wanted to buy the book.—A.J. Anderson, Sch. of Library Science, Simmons Coll., Boston

Broadbent, W. W., M.D. How To Be Loved.

Prentice-Hall. Apr. 1976. 164p. $6.95. PSYCH

This small book of self-help techniques is based on what the author calls "Belonging Therapy." Six chapters describe how to be responsible for and how to change one's actions toward others. The expository text is interspersed with dialogues, anecdotes, and humorous descriptions of various personality types. The author's premise is that changing habits, not insight into the past, is essential to loving and being loved in the broadest sense of the word. Unpretentious, enlightening, intelligent, and clearly written—despite the author's use of his own rather complicated terminology—this may not have the audience of How To Be Your Own Best Friend, but it will be read and appreciated by those who enjoyed Games People Play and by those who agree with the author that "you have to catch a chicken to eat it."—Anne F. Dykstra, Booklyn P.L.

Cermak, Laird S. Improving Your Memory.

Norton. 1976. 128p. index. LC 75-22158. ISBN 0-393-01124-0. $6.95. PSYCH

Cermak identifies and defines three systems of memory—immediate, short-term, and long-term—and presents various techniques (such as chunking, imagery, mediation, mnemonics, etc.) to facilitate remembering in all three modes. For the author, the key to efficient recall requires one to pay attention and to organize carefully. He provides numerous examples he finds useful for implementing these techniques. Cermak's contention that such techniques for improving memory are supported by extensive research findings is, by and large correct, although the extent to which such findings transfer to everyday experience and the types of inhibition factors that may accrue in attempting to do so are unknown. However, for persons motivated sufficiently to work on improving their memory this book should prove useful.—Lowry C. Fredrickson, Dept. of Psychology, Coe Coll., Cedar Rapids, Iowa

Cormier, Bruno M., M.D. The Watcher and the Watched.

Tundra Bks., dist by Scribners. 1976. 330p. bibliog. LC 75-2791. ISBN 0-912766-13-1. $10. CORRECTIONS/PSYCH

This book is a revised version of 20 papers (five of which were previously published) by the author and his colleagues and students. It reports on a project conducted by the McGill Clinic in Forensic Psychiatry at the Dannemora State Hospital's Center at Clinton Prison, N.Y. The project sought to change the prison into a therapeutic community. The project staff was more concerned with inmates' inner lives than with inmates' abilities, in exploring inmates' attitudes rather than developing inmates' skills to cope with the extra-prison environment. No evaluation component seems to have been included in the project. However, there is no evidence of the project's impact on any other correctional system.—Stephen Winokur, Dept. of Psychology, Texas Christian Univ., Fort Worth

Doob, Leonard W. Pathways to People.

Yale Univ. Pr. 1975. 319p. bibliog. $17.50. PSYCH

Doob describes the process whereby people judge each other. Though the intended audience is probably the educated general reader, in organization and content the book reviews existing academic psychology on a near-professional level. Despite its intention of avoiding jargon and addressing commonsense issues it would serve better as a crib for a graduate student preparing for orals in person perception than as a guide for ordinary mortals to pathways to people. Doob's arch editorial popularizations (such as calling Erving Goffman "our sociological troll") do not make up for the lack of originality or general theoretical framework in this area of psychology—nor for his failure to provide either.—Joseph B. Juhasz, Coll. of Environmental Design, Univ. of Colorado, Boulder

Fincher, Jack Human Intelligence.

Putnam. 1976. 416p. bibliog. ISBN 0-399-11487-4. $14.95. PSYCH

This is a remarkably complete review (for the general reader and the college student) of the concept of intelligence. In the course of discussing the various aspects of this most awesome output of brain, the author provides a surprisingly wide amount of information on the brain itself. Fincher is a journalist-science writer and a very good one. He has carefully researched his field, done an enormous amount of reading, and talked and corresponded with many scientists to come up with a careful and accurate survey that is still breezy, lively, and entertaining. One focus of course is the nature-nurture argument, seen in historical context and in its current eruption, the Jensen-Herrnstein controversy. This emotionally loaded area (is "intelligence" higher in some races than in others?) is handled objectively and well by putting the emphasis on the underlying problem: we don't even know what intelligence is, much less what its genetic basis is or how to test it. Highly recommended.—George Adelman, Neurosciences Research Program, M.I.T., Boston

Glass, Sheldon D., M.D. with Harvey Ardman. Life-Control.

Evans, dist. by Lippincott. Apr. 1976. 264p. $7.95. PSYCH

Every group that is assigned a task goes through four phases: the euphoria of an introductory phase, the conflicts of the resistance-testing phase, the quiet satisfaction of the productive phase, and the personally moving and crucial termination phase. Each phase in the larger cycle has its own requirements for the leader and the members, and each phase can be subdivided into four smaller phases that recapitulate the entire process. This heuristic model is plausible for most high-achieving, task-oriented groups of two or more people. The theory is effectively presented, and should enable the reader not only to become more aware of the process (meaning) disguised in content (events) within structured groups, but to gain leadership control by systematically employing tactics that smooth the predictable patterns in every cycle. The authors adhere to the narrowly conventional values assigned to working roles and social ceremonies, which renders their model inapplicable to heterogeneous groups and fluid, shared leadership situations.—William S. Abrams, Portland State Univ. Lib., Ore.

Kaplan, Berton H. & others, eds. Further Explorations in Social Psychiatry.

Basic Bks. 1976. 300p. index. $17.50. SOC SCI/PSYCH

On the eve of Alexander Leighton's retirement from the Harvard School of Public Health, this book summarizes his decades of work; namely, to identify how socio-cultural process impacts on the individual to create mental illness or promote mental health. Four key issues are stated: how to define normality, how to measure the impact of environment on personality development, the implications of cross-cultural diversity for mental health prevention, and the impact of society on the mentally ill person. Although technical in structure, the book is quite readable. A major conceptual and theoretical contribution to social psychiatry, which will be must reading for professionals in all branches of science that deal with human behavior.—E. Mansell Pattison, M.D., Dept. of Psychiatry & Human Behavior, University of California, Irvine

Reynolds, David K. Morita Psychotherapy.

Univ. of California Pr. 1976. 242p. bibliog. LC 74-30530. ISBN 0-520-02937-2. $10. PSYCH

Anthropologist Reynolds has written a lucid, perhaps definitive account of this Japanese form of psychotherapy, at least for Western readers. The method was originated in 1917 by Shoma Morita and is widely used in Japan today. Reynolds gives us an overview of the therapy and explains in depth how it operates in Morita hospitals and in outpatient care. He speculates about the connections between Japanese neurosis and cure and the culture and character of the Japanese people. A chapter is devoted to changes in Morita therapy over the 50 years of its history and relates these changes to cultural change. An illuminating account of the differences between Morita and Western forms of psychotherapy is perhaps the most rewarding portion of the book. Reynolds makes an interesting distinction between behavior therapy and Morita; in the latter, the patient is made responsible for his own neurotic behavior. The relationship between Zen and Morita is given careful and sensitive treatment. Most important, this book draws together theoretical concepts which enables a Western professional to take stock of his own methods and weigh them in a wider, more comprehensive manner.—Robert S. McCully, Dept. of Psychiatry & Behavioral Science, Medical Univ. of South Carolina, Charleston

Shrader, Wesley. The Amazing Power of Hypnosis: what it can do for you.

Doubleday. 1976. ISBN 0-385-07088-8. $7.95. REL/PSYCH

Some 25 case histories of people whom the author, a Baptist minister and professor, has helped through the use of hypnosis. These include a football player with an irrational fear of flying, a victim of rape who wanted to be rid of the memory of her attacker, a couple having sexual difficulties, and so on. The purpose of the book is not, the author maintains, to provide a how-to-do-it handbook, but rather to convince the public of the value of hypnotism in helping people. Shrader reports hostility from university colleagues, churches, seminaries, and religious fanatics. He hopes for increased acceptance of hypnosis, but he is not optimistic as regards churches. An interesting, responsible treatment of a little-understood subject.—Douglas Marsh, Memphis & Shelby County P.L., Tenn.

Symposium on Consciousness: Presented at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, February 1974. by Philip R. Lee & others.

Viking. 1976. 181p. LC 75-30642. ISBN 0-670-68903-3. $8.95. PARAPSYCH/PSYCH

This is a collection of essays from the group of American psychologists most seriously interested in researching drug-induced "altered states of consciousness." While it presents a review of Robert E. Ornstein's work on the right and left lobes of the brain and related articles by Arthur Deikman and others, its principal value is in Charles Tart's article on discrete states of consciousness which makes up the major portion of the book. [See also Tart's States of Consciousness (LJ 2/1/76)—Ed.] Tart presents a systematic model of the psyche which he finds useful in explaining how one moves from one "discrete state" to another "altered state" of consciousness. His emphasis on a psychological rather than physiological mode of description, as well as his courage to persevere in a controversial (and nearly illegal) field of research, is to be highly commended. —Edward Russell, New York

Parapsychology & Occultism

Hall, Angus. Signs of Things To Come.

144p. LC 75-16747.

Wilson, Colin. They Had Strange Powers.

142p. LC 75-16748.

ea. vol: Doubleday. 1975. (A New Library of the Supernatural). illus., some color. ISBN 0-385-11327-8. $7.95. PARAPSYCH

These are the first two volumes of a British-produced 20-volume series. The first covers prophecy from Delphi to Dixon, while the second focusses on people like Geller, Gurdjieff, Rasputin, et al. Due to the cut-and-paste format employed, the volumes will not be of much use as information sources—no index, notes, or bibliography, and a serious lack of organization. One hopes that the editorship of Colin Wilson and Christopher Evans will guarantee a reasonable amount of accuracy, but the coverage in these first two volumes is so broad and superficial that one wonders. With their colorful pictures and chatty style, the main appeal of the books should be to browsers, particularly YA's.—Jeanne S. Bagby, Tucson P.L., Ariz.

Taylor, Ruth Mattson. Witness from Beyond: conversations with the late A. D. Mattson.

Hawthorn. 1976. 160p. LC 75-5033. ISBN 0-8015-8776-X. $6.95. PARAPSYCH

These communications (made through the voice of an English medium during tape-recorded sessions) from a deceased American Lutheran theologian were directed to his daughter, who also transcribed them from the tapes. Interesting details of A. D.'s passing from this life to the next are given and there is some mention of the study and work in which he is now engaged. His messages seem to confirm the belief held by spiritualists that eternity consists of a series of higher levels to which one progresses as he develops his soul power. Most of the chapters, however, read like notes for sermons, so this volume will probably have most appeal for church-goers who are already convinced of survival of death.—Eleanor Touhey Smith, New York

Temple, Robert K. G. The Sirius Mystery.

St. Martin's 1975. 244p. illus. bibliog. $7.95. SCI/PARAPSYCH

It is Temple's conviction that knowledge about the star Sirius and a darker star which orbits it has been preserved by an African tribe. The existence of Sirius' companion has been known only for a fairly short time in the West, and Temple investigates how the tribe could have come by this knowledge. After much tortuous reasoning Temple concludes that it ultimately came from the Sumerians who were taught it in turn by Oannes, an amphibious creature, which readers in ancient astronautdom will recognize as the being which gave civilization to the Sumerians. Unlike most others on this subject, this book aspires to serious scholarship and is by no means light reading.—Robert Molyneux, Virginia Polytechnic Inst. & State Univ. Lib., Blacksburg

Religion

Cobb, John B., Jr. Christ in a Pluralistic Age.

Westminster. 1975. 287p. index. LC 74-820. ISBN 0-664-20861-4. $12.50. REL

Those who maintain that Christology is the area of process theology most in need of development will have much to ponder in this study. Cobb claims that his book will please "neither the orthodox nor the liberal." Yet the book offers the liberal much salve for whatever displeasure he might feel. Viewing Christ as the "creative transformation" at work in the world and humanity (Cobb is still an ardent disciple of Whitehead), he calls for a deepening of Christian experience, but in a way in which Christianity is liberated from its exclusiveness for a profitable encounter with our pluralistic age. In Part 1, Cobb identifies Christ as the Logos incarnating itself throughout history. Part 2, a Whiteheadian interpretation of biblical scholarship and the early councils, argues that Jesus is Christ—the unique ("so far as we know") incarnation of the Logos. Part 3 is a challenging response to the age's pessimistic view of the future and offers Christ as an embracing image of hope. Any theological library without this volume will be in serious want.—Paul Knitter, Dept. of Theology, Xavier Univ., Cincinnati

Haughton, Rosemary. The Drama of Salvation.

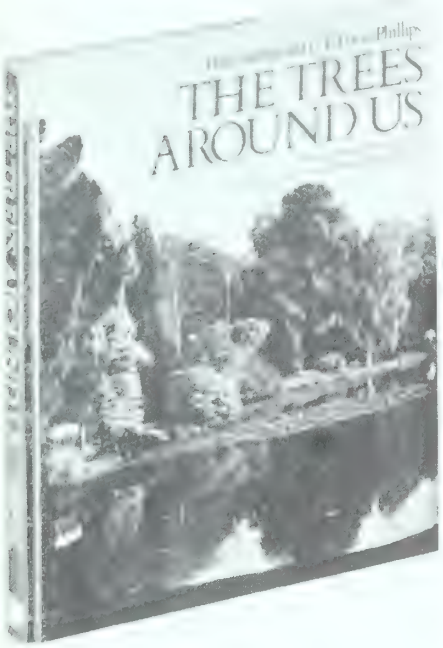
Crossroad: Seabury. 1975. 148p. LC 75-14301. ISBN 0-8164-1201-4. $6.95. REL

Briefly put, this book is an extended

"...stunning book ...excellent photographs"

★ Starred Review, ALA Booklist, Dec. 15, 1975



The Trees Around Us is all they say and more. An all-embracing survey of temperate zone trees is accompanied by detailed identification guides, plus practical advice on selection, planting, and care of trees. A feast for the eyes and a practical reference guide, too. Approximately 200 full color and black and white photos.

0695-80539-8 12x10⅜ $15.95

"Encyclopedic in scope"
Louisville Courier-Journal & Times

"Elaborately illustrated"
Portland Oregonian

"A utilitarian book"
El Paso Times

"Highly readable"
Chicago Tribune

FOLLETT PUBLISHING CO.
Chicago, Illinois 60607

metaphor comparing the theology of salvation to the artistic form of the drama. Haughton is not afraid to apply the idea in both directions: theology and art criticising one another's methods for dealing with the same basic "raw material" of spiritual experience. Much of the essay is predictable after the opening chapter which introduces the main idea; at times it even gets tedious. But the author is consistent with her experiment, brings some very interesting examples to illustrate it, and I think achieves her goal of deepening reflection on one of the central doctrines of Christianity. Haughton is one of those people who have helped to take the sarcastic edge off the word "populariser" and to develop a literary form vital to the transmission of religious tradition in the modern world. The Drama of Salvation is another important step in that direction.—James W. Heisig, Dept. of Philosophy & Religion, Catholic Theological Union, Chicago

Martin, Malachi. Hostage to the Devil: the possession and exorcism of five living Americans.

Readers Digest, dist. by Crowell. Mar. 1976. 469p. index. LC 75-23276. ISBN 0-88349-078-1. $9.95. REL

Martin does not intend these five case studies to be another addition to the recent raft of fantasy-ticklers on the devil. As a former Jesuit and assistant at 11 exorcisms he has the credentials to argue that possession and exorcism "are tangible expressions of the reality which envelops the daily lives of ordinary people." The cases are based on personal interviews and on tapes made during the actual exorcisms. They are preceded by "A Brief Handbook of Exorcism" which outlines the steps followed in every process of exorcism. Following the cases is a theological evaluation in which Martin argues for the reality of spirits which are "personal and intelligent beings," "the source of all evil." Were his conclusions more nuanced and not based on an exclusively Christian perspective, they might be more convincing. The book however makes for gripping reading and is a sobering argument for the reality of evil. Most public and academic libraries will want a copy.—Paul Knitter, Dept. of Theology, Xavier Univ., Cincinnati

Swanson, Reuben J. The Horizontal Line Synopsis of the Gospels.

Western North Carolina Pr., P. O. Box 29, Dillsboro, North Carolina 28725. 1975. 597p. LC 75-20997. ISBN 0-915948-01-X. $23.95. REL

Synopses of the Gospels traditionally have been arranged in one to four columns, with the order of the materials of each Gospel rearranged according to a single chronological scheme. Thus no Gospel was found in its original order. Swanson has changed the format by placing the parallel sections in horizontal lines. He has also kept the order of each Gospel intact by repeating the process each time with a different Gospel in the lead position. This simplifies and speeds up the task of picking out similarities and differences among the Gospels. (Perhaps the traditional order of the columnar model could have been included as well.) This book will prove to be a useful tool for the study of the Gospels and will make the columnar model obsolete.—Sakae Kubo, Andrews Univ. Lib., Berrien Springs, Mich.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

Ridpath, Ian. Worlds Beyond: a report on the search for life in space.

Harper. Mar. 1976. 176p. illus. index. LC 75-30344. ISBN 0-06-013568-9. pap. $6.95. SCI

British science journalist Ridpath has produced a clear, well-documented review of current scientific knowledge concerning the possibility of the existence of extraterrestrial life. Topics covered include the conditions necessary for the origin of life and the evidence of such conditions in space, the latest theories and knowledge about galaxies, and the origins and development of planets and stars in general, and of the solar system in particular. The likelihood and the technology of interstellar and interplanetary communication are also discussed. Format is oversize, with text, diagrams, and illustrations well organized. Overall, a highly readable, reasoned account of a timely and controversial subject. Recommended for public and academic libraries as a recreational and informative book for the general reader.—Virginia E. Yagello, Chemistry & Physics Libs., Ohio State Univ., Columbus

Vallee, Jacques. The Invisible College: what a group of scientists has discovered about UFO influences on the human race.

Dutton. 1976. 223p. bibliog. index. LC 75-12843. ISBN 0-525-13470-0. $8.95. SCI

Vallee, an information scientist and veteran UFO researcher, has written his most thought-provoking work to date. He presents a personal interpretation of ufological data, noting its complexity and implications. (In this respect, I think the book is mistitled as these are not the opinions of other scientists, just the author's.) Vallee approaches ufology via descriptive phenomenology. He speculates that UFO's are not necessarily extraterrestrial but that they could be manifestations of a technology that is capable of manipulating both time and space and generating a variety of altered states of consciousness in humans. UFO's, he says, may be a psychological control system (similar to a thermostat) whose purpose may be to stabilize man's concept of the increasingly confusing universe. One need not swallow Vallee's theory, but he has given us much food for thought. Recommended for comprehensive collections in ufology.—Allen Benz, Aerial Phenomena Research Organization Lib., Tucson, Ariz.

Qualified readers interested in reviewing technical, health and medicine books should contact Ellen Levy, The Book Review.

SCI

Botany & Horticulture

Lester, Lee. The Absolute Beginners Book of House Plants.

Citadel. 1975. 191p. photogs. by Joel Levinson. fwd. by Julie Morris. index. LC 75-14312. ISBN 0-8065-0473-0. $8.95. HORT

In view of the considerable number of books on house plants already in print, there seems no special call for this one, which lacks outstanding merit either for novices or others. The introductory general chapters are rather skimpy, too sentimental, not very inspiring, and not always clear. Lester devotes the main body of her text to specific cultural directions for some 100 popular house plants, and includes special sections on begonias and bromeliads. The 40 black-and-white plant portraits are excellent.—Elizabeth C. Hall, Horticultural Society of New York Lib.

Walls, Ian G. with contribs. from E. W. Curtis & others. The Complete Book of Greenhouse Gardening.

Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. 1975. 447p. illus., some color. index. LC 75-8291. ISBN 0-8129-0577-6. $14.95. HORT

This is the most complete and most helpful greenhouse book I have seen. Walls writes for the amateur greenhouse gardener, but he doesn't rely just on personal experience or horticultural lore for his material. Instead, he synthesizes ideas from commercial, government, and scientific sources so that he presents the most up-to-date equipment and concepts. In addition, he includes specific chapters on growing popular greenhouse plants. A substantial index, address list, and tables add to the book's value. My only criticism is that the text was intended for a British audience; and although the American edition has a generous preface, the efforts that have been made to make the book transatlantic are only somewhat successful.—Margery Read, Bergen Community Coll. Lib., Paramus, N.J.

Health & Medicine

Friedberg, John, M.D. Shock Treatment Is Not Good for Your Brain: a neurologist challenges the psychiatric myth.

Glide. 1976. 244p. illus. LC 75-12050. ISBN 0-912078-43-X. pap. $6.95. PSYCH/MED

Here we have a bold, courageous, and long overdue attack on a common psychiatric practice—electroconvulsive shock treatment (ECT). Neurologist Friedberg has a captivating writing style. He conducted 15 interviews with persons who had experienced ECT, and discusses seven of these in detail in the book. Actual dialogue enhances the presentations and offers insight into the feelings and viewpoints of persons who have undergone this type of treatment. The appendixes contain capsule descriptions for the lay reader of the variety of shock procedures as well as a detailed compilation of statements about ECT by authorities in the field. This volume should be of interest to professionals and the lay public alike.—Beatrice J. Kalisch, Dept. of Parent-Child Health, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor

Schein, Clarence J., M.D. Surgeon at Work.

Stein & Day. 1976. 219p. LC 75-11819. ISBN 0-8128-1836-9. $8.95. PER NAR/MED

Dr. Schein takes us with him from the initial incision to the final sutures of an ulcer operation. He also pauses to reminisce, to reflect on the medical colleagues and students assisting in the operation, and to air his views on the medical profession. Surgeon at Work presumably presents a day in the life of the author; it also shows us an egocentric, opinionated individual whose competence at his profession is his primary concern. An interesting book as much for the personality revealed as the profession explored.—Margery Read, Bergen Community Coll. Lib., Paramus, N.J.

Ward, Charlotte & Fred Ward. The Home Birth Book.

New Perspectives: INSCAPE, 1629 K St., N.W., Suite 5107, Washington, D.C. 20006. 1976. 150p. ed. by Roger Glenn Brown. photogs. by Fred Ward. intro. by Ashley Montagu. LC 74-23672. ISBN 0-87953-309-9. $14.50; pap. ISBN 0-87953-310-2. $6.95. HEALTH

This book, without the usual attack on hospital regimentation, promotes childbirth at home for its own special virtues. Sections of this well-organized volume deal with personal, medical, psychological, sociological, and practical aspects of childbirth. Contributors include an obstetrician, pediatrican, registered nurse, midwife, psychologists, and childbirth educators. In accounts by several couples (from commune residents to middle-class professionals) who have had home births a recurrent theme is the joy of being together contrasted with the pain of separation of the family triad which occurs so often in hospitals. I question the inclusion of "The Lasting Impact" (of birth) by primal therapist Patricia Nicholas. Although this impact is being studied widely today, its interpretation and management in primal therapy seems still too experimental to be appropriate here, and certainly out of step with the other chapters on psychological considerations—Elizabeth M. Johnson, R.N., Lamaze Childbirth Association, Columbus, Ohio

Technology

Bergier, Jacques. Secret Armies: the growth of corporate and industrial espionage.

Bobbs. 1976. 268p. index. LC 75-6404. ISBN 0-672-51918-6. $12.95. BUS/TECH

Secret Armies represents a translation of three of the author's works, which were originally published separately in France under the titles of L'Espionnage Industriel (1969), L'Espionnage Scientifique (1971), and L'Espionnage Stratégique (1973). Unfortunately the survey of scientific espionage quickly bogs down in meaningless speculation, with some dubious arguments supporting the use of spy networks rather than modern surveillance technology, a quick glance at forecasting methods, and more speculation about the future. The brief overview of business espionage is the best section of an otherwise mediocre book. But the few nuggets of infor-

LIBRARY JOURNAL has done its research and found these Viking science books among the 100 best of 1975

PLANT AND PLANET
by Anthony Huxley
"The one book I would read about plants this winter....More than botany...it is about fundamental life....Written with grace and skill as well as wide-ranging knowledge."
—The New York Times Book Review
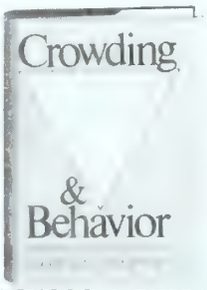
Illustrated 670-55886-9 $14.95



CROWDING & BEHAVIOR
The Psychology of High-Density Living
by Jonathan Freedman
"Three loud huzzahs...the importance of this book is vastly out of proportion to its 177-page length. I cannot do more than hint at its richness and urge the reader to dig in." —The New York Times Book Review
670-24982-3 $7.95

PRE-MEDITATED MAN
Bioethics and the Control of Future Human Life
by Richard M. Restak
*"An intensive, amply documented study." —Starred Review, ALA Booklist
"Deserves deep consideration." —Chicago Tribune
670-57333-7 $8.95

THE VIKING PRESS
625 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022
Nothing in this advertisement prevents anyone from quoting or charging any price for Viking books.

LIPPINCOTT

"Magnificent illustrations, rich content."*

THE PLEASURE OF BIRDS

An Audubon Treasury

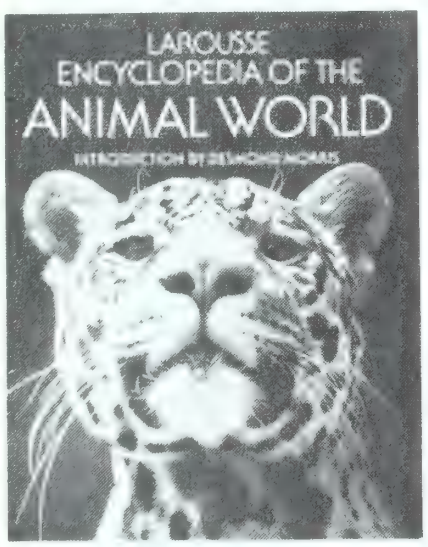
Edited by Les Line

Illustrated by Chuck Ripper

"A personal selection from the pages of Audubon magazine by its editor Les Line . . . For ornithologist, amateur bird watcher, or just plain nature lover." —Kirkus Reviews. "The twenty-five contributors represent our top nature writers."—Publishers Weekly*. "Should find a ready audience among the many who pursue the fascinating hobby of bird-watching. Even 'non-birders' will find the volume a delightful introduction to the world of birds."—Library Journal. 18 color plates, 28 halftone drawings. LC 75-17948

ISBN 0-397-01065-6 $14.95

J. B. Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105



$50.00 • 640 pp • ISBN =0-88332-028-2

"Crème de la crème"... Los Angeles Times

"Splendid volume"...New York Times

"A worthy and valuable addition to any library"... Boston Globe

"Particularly recommended for school and public libraries"... Library Journal

Larousse & Co., Inc., 572 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10036, phone: (212) 575-9515, telex: 12335

mation are scarcely worth the bother of reading the book.—Jack King, Hamline Univ. Lib., St. Paul, Minn.

Florman, Samuel C. The Existential Pleasures of Engineering.

St. Martin's. 1976. 160p. LC 75-9480. $7.95. TECH

Florman dwells less on "existential pleasures" than on a spirited defense of engineering and technology against the onslaughts of "antitechnologists," whom others call the humanists. His adversaries—specifically, Jacques Ellul, Lewis Mumford, Rene Dubos, Charles Reich, and Theodore Roszak—have a worthy opponent in this practicing engineer (who also lists serious study of English literature to his credits). He presents the technologist's viewpoint, which is often ill represented in literary debate, with clarity and grace. In true engineer fashion, Florman states the case against technology so objectively that even when he fails to answer adequately some of the points, at least he draws the issues fairly. This short discourse provides an essential balance to the current outcries against material proliferation.—Daniel La Rossa, Systems Management Engineering, South Huntington, N.Y.

Von Braun, Wernher & Frederick I. Ordway III. Rockets' Red Glare.

Doubleday. Mar. 1976. 224p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 75-6162. ISBN 0-385-07847-1. $9.95. HIST/TECH

About two-thirds of the text of this brief history of rocketry is used to carry the story up to the 20th Century, thus leaving the recent period rather lightly covered. For this reason, the book might serve best as a companion volume to the same authors' History of Rocketry and Space Travel (LJ 3/1/67. rev. ed. 1975). The style of the present work tends to be very episodic, although the text is informative. Early sections discuss ancient rocketry, fabrication and types of powder rockets, and 19th-Century military rocketry. There are also interesting accounts of Von Braun's involvement in German rocketry in the late 1930's, of colleagues who worked with him on the awesome V-2, and of the origins of the American space program.—Roger E. Bilstein, Univ. of Houston at Clear Lake City, Houston

Social Science

Bundy, Robert, ed. Images of the Future: the twenty-first century and beyond.

Prometheus Bks. 1976. 239p. pref. by Robert Bundy. LC 75-32697. ISBN 0-87975-048-0. $12.95. SOC SCI

Half written for this book, half taken from a special edition of the Humanist magazine, these 20 essays all offer positive new visions for the future. Bundy contends that our past images of the future have not come to fruition: we aren't now where we once thought we'd be; we aren't moving in any definite direction, for we have no central goal or faith; and in fact, we Westerners now seem to fear the future and avoid thinking about it. Bundy has been involved for some years in planning for the future. He has collected here ideas and hopes from thinkers in education, the social sciences, literature, philosophy, and religion. The essays all reflect serious thought on the part of the writers, and require the same of the readers, but none are ponderous or dull. For college and large public libraries, and for some high schools.—Joan S. Martinez, Los Angeles County P.L. System

Cleaver, Charles G. Japanese and Americans: cultural parallels and paradoxes.

Univ. of Minnesota Pr. Mar. 1976. ISBN 0-8166-0761-3. $12.75. SOC SCI

In this long essay comparing life in Japan and the U.S., Cleaver sets out "to break down stereotypes and rectify misunderstandings" that exist between the two countries. Toward this end, the author makes a series of comparisons of Japanese and American literature, work life, child-rearing practices, attitudes towards nature, and so on. Unfortunately, the work has little to recommend it to either the specialist or the general reader. Although the author occasionally makes valid points, they are frequently lost in obtuse prose or in the loose organizational format of the work. Also many of the comparisons seem randomly chosen.—Susan J. Pharr, Social Science Research Council, New York

Cohen, Myron L. House United, House Divided: the Chinese family in Taiwan.

Columbia Univ. Pr. (East Asian Inst.). Mar. 1976. 272p. LC 75-28473. ISBN 0-231-03849-6. $12. REGIONAL STUDY

On the basis of extensive field work done among the Hakka families of the village of Mei-nung in Taiwan during the 1960's, Cohen challenges the conclusions of half a century of social scientists with regard to the nature of the Chinese family. He argues that economic advantage, rather than class, is the major determinant of family form in Chinese society. When the family pursues certain kinds of livelihoods, regardless of class considerations, it can maximize the collective and individual interests by adopting a joint family structure. However, other kinds of economic activities favor the small, nuclear family. Thus questions of ideology are extraneous, and Cohen concentrates his attention on describing and analyzing the economic circumstances that produced different family forms in Mei-nung. Cohen's data and his conclusions constitute a major restatement of the problem of Chinese family form, and this important monograph should be available in most large libraries.—David D. Buck, Dept. of History, Univ. of Wisconsin, Milwaukee

Glassie, Henry. All Silver and No Brass: an Irish Christmas mumming.

Indiana Univ. Pr. 1975. 224p. illus. LC 75-9132. ISBN 0-253-30470-9. $10. FOLKLORE

This is an evocative study of the folk traditions of County Fermanagh, on the battle-torn borderland of Northern Ireland. Glassie views the mumming tradition as a ritual affirmation of community life and a dramatization of the continuity of history. He has a lyrical sense of mood and place and an unusually valuable rapport with the old folk, recording their memories and incomparable idiom intact. They mourn that mumming, and the old seasonal traditions have only a tenuous hold in these angry modern times. Part sociology, part anthropology, part literary history, this is both a sound contribution to folklore studies and a touching portrait of an ancient agrarian people trying to survive in the midst of civil war. Highly recommended for collections strong on folklore and Ireland.—Patricia Goodfellow, Leaside Lib., Toronto

SOC SCI

Goodwin, Donald, M.D. Is Alcoholism Hereditary?

Oxford Univ. Pr. May 1976. 150p. index. $8.95. SOC SCI

The cause of alcoholism has not been established, but the fact that it runs in families is the strongest argument for the possibility that it is influenced by heredity. However, scientific evidence for a genetic element in overdrinking has been slight and contradictory, primarily because the research is so hard to do. "Drinking genes" have never been isolated. In this book, Goodwin presents a study of persons who had been separated from their biological parents (one of whom was alcoholic) soon after birth and raised by unrelated, nonalcoholic foster parents. He finds that children of alcoholics had nearly twice the number of alcohol problems and four times the rate of alcoholism as children of nonalcoholics. Goodwin's writing is lively, and his book is interesting and exceedingly fair. Though Goodwin is a psychiatrist, he criticizes the various methods of alcoholism therapy; moreover, he includes an appendix which rebuts his thesis. Because of its scholarly treatment, not of general interest. Recommended therefore for large city and university libraries.—Carol W. Gelderman, Dept. of English, Univ. of New Orleans

Markale, Jean. Women of the Celts.

Gordon Cremonesi, dist. by Atheneum. 1975. tr. by A. Mygind & others. 315p. index. ISBN 0-86033-001-X. $17.95. SOC SCI

Markale is a recognized authority on Celtic studies. This book concerns the early Celtic and Breton mores and attitudes toward women, emphasizing the remarkable degree of personal, sexual, and economic independence they enjoyed. The author gives an interesting historical and juridical summary of Celtic society and common law and then (in Part 2) presents his chief documentation, drawn from the early epic literature and folklore (such as Tristan and the grail legend). However, any attempt to do social studies from sources in which the content is expressed mythically presents difficulties. Markale has chosen to rely heavily on the Freudian symbol system for his interpretation. In Part 3 he postulates a model drawn from Celtic society for the role of women in modern life. Even devotees of Freud and de Beauvoir (who is also frequently quoted) will question whether Markale's theories on marriage, love, and sex in the contemporary world can be logically derived from the data developed in Parts 1 and 2 of this book. Nevertheless, the study is valuable for the glimpses it gives us of a society totally unfamiliar to most Americans. Whether or not one agrees with the thesis, it is a highly sophisticated, informative, and thought-provoking presentation.—Jo-Ann D. Suleiman, Wright-Patterson Air Force Base Medical Center Lib., Dayton, Ohio

If you feel qualified to concisely and critically review books in ethnic studies or folklore, please contact Ellen Levy, The Book Review.

Rodnitzky, Jerome L. Minstrels of the Dawn: the folk-protest singer as a cultural hero.

Nelson-Hall. Apr. 1976. 186p. ISBN 0-88229-284-6. $9.95. MUSIC/SOC SCI

A look at the folk singer as a major influence on the tumult of the 1960's with special emphasis on Woody Guthrie, Pete Seeger, Joan Baez, Phil Ochs, and Bob Dylan. Using snatches of lyrics and McLuhanesque theories, the author attempts to show that the music was a social force in itself rather than a mere reflection of the attitudes of its listeners. The repetition and fragmented approach, however, neither reads easily nor lends itself to a unifed view and definite conclusions.—Gloria Gehrman, Moscow-Latah County Lib., Idaho

Toole, Ross K. The Rape of the Great Plains: Northwestern America and the energy crisis.

Atlantic: Little. Mar. 1976. 229p. maps. bibliog. $9.95. TECH/SOC SCI

Despite the author's obvious and admitted bias, he has produced a very sound, carefully reasoned polemic concerning the effect of strip-mining of coal on the people and land of the Northern Plains. Toole, a historian at the University of Montana, takes us from Cheyenne to ranchers, from water to reclamation, and from taxation to the state legislature, and he is careful to keep pertinent background material sharply in focus. The author also succeeds in putting his feeling for the land and association with ranchers to good advantage, offering many anecdotes and quotations that are particularly revealing. Yet, though Toole raises important questions—if an "unnecessary rush toward devastating exploitation" cannot be stopped in Montana, can it ever be stopped anywhere?—his argumentation fails to deliver a penetrating analysis of the forces which have created the "monstrous machines" now descending on us. Nevertheless, this informative and compelling book will have wide appeal.—Frank D. Doble Jr., Onondaga Community Coll. Lib., Syracuse, N.Y.

Turnbull, Colin M. Man in Africa.

Anchor: Doubleday. Mar. 1976. 101p. illus. ISBN 0-385-05671-0. $7.95. SOC SCI

This book contains very general de-

WHO SAYS T.Y.CROWELL AND READER'S DIGEST PRESS HAVE SIX OF THE BEST SCIENTIFIC AND TECHNICAL BOOKS OF 1975?

LIBRARY JOURNAL (MARCH 1 ISSUE) DOES.

T. Y. Crowell:

THE CONCISE COLOR ENCYCLOPEDIA OF SCIENCE
Robin Kerrod

"Fills a useful niche... profusely illustrated (with many in color), and has a well-written text."
—Library Journal
0-690-00683-7 $9.95

PEACETIME USES OF ATOMIC ENERGY
Third Revised Edition
Martin Mann

"Can be understood by high school students, yet would probably interest older general readers also."
—Library Journal
150 photographs and line drawings
0-690-00118-5 $8.95

PICTORIAL GUIDE TO PLANET EARTH
Frederick I. Ordway III

"Vividly portrays how satellites can provide photographs of the earth and its resources.... Recommended for libraries of all sizes." —Library Journal
More than 150 photographs in color and black and white 16 pages in full color
0-690-62193-0 $12.95

THE COLOR TREASURY OF GEMSTONES

"An exceptional value for libraries of all sizes.... dazzling full-color photographs of the gems in both uncut and polished state."
—Library Journal
80 full-color photographs
0-690-00986-0 $9.95

ONE DAY AT KITTY HAWK
The untold story of the Wright Brothers
John Evangelist Walsh

"A fascinating account.... Should have a place in libraries of all sizes."
—Library Journal
More than 50 photographs
0-690-00103-7 $10.00

Reader's Digest Press:

WE ALMOST LOST DETROIT
John G. Fuller

"Detailed (and very interesting)... should be of great interest to the general public." —Library Journal
0-88349-070-6 $8.95

T. Y. CROWELL
666 Fifth Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10019

scriptions of African societies, including some archaeological information and a historical overview. The unifying theme is the relationship between cultural forms—social, economic, political, religious—and the natural environment: "how people live is strongly related to where they live." The book is organized into sections corresponding to the major ecological divisions of Africa—grassland, river valley, forest, desert, and woodland—and each section is illustrated by the description of selected aspects of African life which are compared, usually favorably, to corresponding aspects of Western society. The study is concluded with an overview of slavery and an appreciation of present-day Africa.—Winifred Lambrecht, Dept. of Anthropology, Lehman Coll., CUNY

SPORTS & RECREATION

Charles, Allegra. How To Win at Ladies' Doubles.

Arco. Mar. 1976. 151p. illus. bibliog. LC 75-3780. ISBN 0-668-03797-0. $5.95. SPORTS

This is percentage tennis, a statistical view of the shots to play and the strategy to rely on in order to win at womens' doubles. It addresses the club ladies, women who have started late but take their tennis seriously enough to worry about the interference of sex (an odd chapter!). The book is short, liberally illustrated, though strangely enough it still seems padded, largely because the chapters on basic strokes are far too general to improve anyone's game. Charles begins with the psychology of winning and offers a simple but clear course of action from choosing the right partner and racket to playing parallel alignment and perfecting the drop-shot and lob. These chapters are effective, and because of them I would recommend the book for purchase by libraries.—Joan Owen, Dept. of English, C. W. Post Coll., Greenvale, N.Y.

Dickey, Glenn. The Great No-Hitters.

Chilton. Apr. 1976. 270p. bibliog. index. LC 75-28136. ISBN 0-8019-6251-X. $9.95. SPORTS

Any baseball fan who has ever witnessed the spectacle of a no-hitter has experienced the almost unbearable tension that builds throughout the game. In this well-researched work Dickey describes some of the great no-hitters of the past in a lively and enjoyable manner. Not only are the games of the great pitchers like Koufax and Feller described, but also the ones that were pitched by men who had their one moment and never amounted to anything. Remember Bo Belinsky? You will also learn about Don Larsen's perfect game (no batter reaching first base) in the World Series, Johnny Vander Meer's back to back no-hitters, and Harvey Haddix's unbelievable feat of pitching 12 no-hit innings and still losing the ball game. An extensive appendix featuring the box scores of all no-hitters since 1901 concludes this worthwhile addition to sports collections.—Jack M. Berk, Bethlehem P.L., Pa.

Gehrig, Eleanor & Joe Durso. My Luke and I.

Crowell. Apr. 1976. illus. ISBN 0-690-01109-1.$7.95. PER NAR/SPORTS

Amyotrophic lateral sclerosis is a deadly form of infantile paralysis, commonly known as "Lou Gehrig's disease." The Yankee's "Iron Man" was stricken by the disease at age 36 in 1939 and died two years later. This slight volume by his widow is more a reminiscence than a biography and as much her story as his. In fact, her description of her girlhood in Chicago in the 1920's is the most interesting part of the book. Gehrig, himself, remains a shadowy figure, albeit a heroic one.—Josephine A. DeLapo, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Goodman, Mike & Michael J. Goodman. Mike Goodman's Your Best Bet.

Brooke House, 9010 Reseda Blvd., Suite 226, Northridge, Calif. 91324. 1976. 267p. LC 75-33446. ISBN 0-912588-09-8. $10. GAMES

Goodman goes international in his most recent how-to book. In an economical and clear style, he discusses baccarat, roulette, dice, the "new 21," counting cards, money management, and gambling systems, relating each to gaming in Nevada and England and on the Continent. Goodman admits percentage gamblers prefer English clubs for their better odds, and he includes an annotated directory of London gaming clubs. But because language problems and unmarked chips create some chaos, he advises Americans to avoid European casinos. Noted for his forthrightness and not naming names, he crucifies most modern, self-assured, published "card counters." This title should be considered essential for public libraries.—Jack I. Gardner, Clark County Lib. District, Las Vegas, Nevada

Honig, Donald. Baseball Between the Lines: baseball after World War II as told by the men who played it.

Coward. Apr. 1976. c. 200p. intro. by Red Smith. photogs. LC 75-34477. ISBN 0-698-10725-X. $9.95. PER NAR/SPORTS

Last year in a follow-up to Larry Ritter's The Glory of Their Times (LJ 10/1/66) Honig gave us Baseball When the Grass Was Real (LJ 3/15/75), one of the best sports books of 1975. Now he continues baseball's story as told by its participants and serves up the reminiscences of 19 players, including Tommy Henrich, Ewell Blackwell, Ralph Kiner, Johnny Vander Meer, Vic Raschi, Herb Score, and Robin Roberts. Honig has a knack for eliciting choice anecdotes from his subjects, and their attitudes and feelings about baseball and life come through clearly. Baseball Between the Lines makes a first-rate contribution to the lore of baseball and fans can't afford to miss it.—Robert R. Harris, "Library Journal"

Libby, Bill. Champions of the Indianapolis 500: the men who have won more than once.

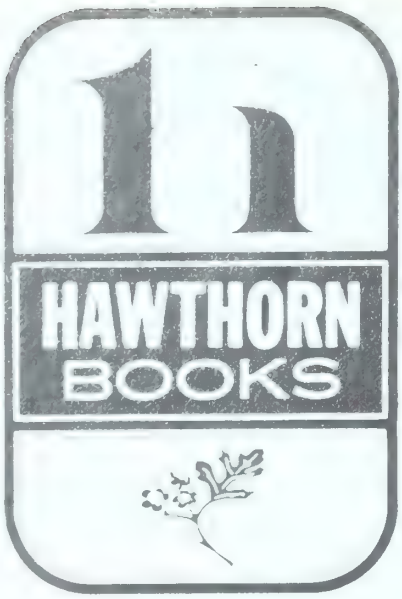
Dodd. Apr. 1976. 140p. illus. index. $7.95. BIOG/SPORTS

This time out Libby writes about the nine men who won the Indianapolis 500



AVAILABLE IN PAPERBACK

●

THE COMPLETE BOOK OF GROWING PLANTS FROM SEED
by Elda Haring.
ISBN 0-8015-1489-4. $4.95.

TRAINS IN TRANSITION
by Lucius Beebe.
ISBN 0-8015-7882-5. $5.95.

DOUBLE-SPEAK IN AMERICA
by Mario Pei.
ISBN 0-8015-2185-8. $3.95.

HOW TO GET BIG RESULTS FROM A SMALL ADVERTISING BUDGET
by Cynthia S. Smith.
ISBN 0-8015-3649-9. $3.95.

GROWING ORCHIDS AT YOUR WINDOW
by Jack Kramer.
ISBN 0-8015-3175-6. $3.95.

HOW TO PLAY WITH YOUR CHILDREN (AND WHEN NOT TO)
by Brian and Shirley Sutton-Smith.
ISBN 0-8015-3685-5. $3.95.

RELIEF AND DESIGN TRANSFER: Creating a Three-Dimensional Illusion on a Flat Surface by Harold Stevens.
ISBN 0-8015-6277-5. $3.95.

●

For your copy of our complete catalog, please write to: Department of School and Library Programs, Hawthorn Books, Inc.

HAWTHORN BOOKS
260 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

two or three times (no one has won it more often). His subjects (from Tommy Milton through the Unser brothers) are covered in workmanlike fashion. But while Champions isn't bad, there isn't anything that lifts it above similar books on similar subjects. The primary failing seems to be that although Libby tries, he never really gets inside the heads of the drivers.—John Smothers, Monmouth County Lib. System, Freehold, N.J.

Lyttle, Richard. How To Beat the High Cost of Sailing.

Regnery. May 1976. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-32975. $12.95; pap. $4.95 SPORTS

The cheapest way to enjoy sailing? Crew on someone's boat. This and several other bits of advice follow the usual survey (approximately two-thirds the book's length) of the problems and techniques of sailing, examining, maintaining, and enjoying small boats. Although the book is well written and often informative, its scope is just too broad. Each subject treated (and nearly every important one is) is done by briefly touching on the important aspects of the topic. Accordingly, the more common questions asked by novice sailors will be answered. Lyttle does provide some useful data, not readily available, on the price-per-pound aspects of 46 popular boats between eight and 28 feet in length. But knowledgeable sailor-readers will not learn how to enjoy sailing cheaply from reading this book. The best way to avoid the high cost of sailing (and it's not mentioned) is to subscribe to the Telltale Compass and get the sobering facts about the boating scene.—James Tazelaar, U.S. Army Engineer Topographic Labs, Fort Belvoir, Va.

Petzal, Davie E., ed. & intro. The Experts' Book of Big-Game Hunting in North America.

S. & S. Jul. 1976. 144p. index. $9.95. SPORTS

Petzal, the managing editor of Field & Stream, presents eight chapters written by accomplished hunters who also have had experience in writing about their adventures. The main emphasis is on trophy hunting, and the game discussed is limited to antelope, bear, caribou, elk, moose, deer, goat, and sheep. Generally each chapter contains information on the species, geographical location, habitat, special methods of stalking, measurement of trophy size, weapons and ammunition, the future of the species as a game animal, etc. These writers enjoy trophy hunting and present the viewpoint on the ecological question that maintains that being a hunter is part of our basic make-up as human beings.—Donald C. Rowland, Black Hawk Coll. Lib., Moline, Ill.

Rowley, Peter with Ken Rosewall. Ken Rosewall: twenty years at the top.

Putnam. Apr. 1976. 275p. illus. index. ISBN 0-399-11683-4. $8.95. PER NAR/SPORTS

"The finest tennis player who ever existed," is Rowley's claim for Rosewall in a book that college and public libraries will want to buy in spite of its shortcomings. Rowley supports his argument with statistics from Rosewall's remarkable more-than-20-year record and gives details of memorable matches. Rosewall is quoted extensively about styles of other players—and those quotes sometimes sound more literary than conversational, which they are supposed to be. Overstatement dominates; Rosewall undoubtedly is the Australian Jack Armstrong, but that does not need to be said quite as often as it is. However, Rosewall is popular in the U.S., and the book should be popular on the shelves.—David Peele, Staten Island Community Coll. Lib., N.Y.

Strung, Norman & others. Whitewater!

Macmillan. May 1976. 256p. line drawings by C. W. "Wally" Hansen. index. ISBN 0-02-615110-3. $9.95. RECREATION

A recommended addition to library collections on canoeing and kayaking, this work will nicely complement titles more oriented toward technique. Besides a chapter on river hydrodynamics that should be read by all planning a trip, the book has a chapter on "rafting," a rarely discussed method of river travel in inflatable rubber rafts. Strongly philosophical, the viewpoints expressed by the authors in discussing their chosen vehicles for river travel should help readers choose between the three alternatives, and also to match the boat to the trip contemplated. As stated, the book is weak-

"Highly recommended... The motorcycles presented here are the forerunners of today's machines... Meticulous attention is given to each of the 40 cycles mentioned; their development, features of technical significance, and good and bad points are covered. Interwoven are discussions of the fortunes of the manufacturers and of the personalities of the designers and riders. Numerous photographs and drawings enhance the book."
—Library Journal

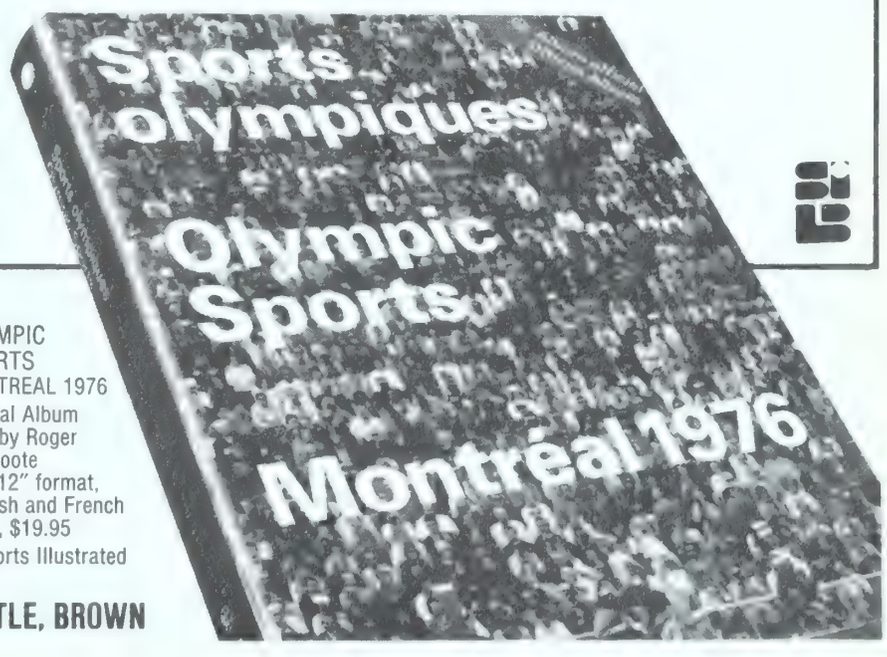
CLASSIC MOTORCYCLES
Vic Willoughby
$17.50
ISBN: 0-8037-4626-1
THE DIAL PRESS
DELL PUBLISHING CO., INC.
1 Dag Hammarskjold Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10017

Put yourself in the picture.

In the stands at Montreal or in front of your TV set, you'll enjoy the Olympics more with this official album. It offers a concise history of each event, a digest of rules, a complete list of champions for every Olympic sport, current world records, plus a special section on great U.S. Olympians, and hundreds of action photos—including more than 200 in color.



OLYMPIC SPORTS MONTREAL 1976
Official Album
Text by Roger de Groote
9" x 12" format, English and French texts, $19.95
A Sports Illustrated Book
LITTLE, BROWN

Come to Bowker's Film Festival!

FEATURE FILMS ON 8MM AND 16MM

This 4th edition lists 16,000 films, from early silent classics to late 1973 releases. All are available in the U.S. for rental, sale or lease, regardless of where in the world they were produced. All necessary information is included. "Invaluable master catalog," said Filmakers Newsletter. 1974. By James L. Limbacher. 8½" x 11". 368 pages. LC 79-163905. ISBN 0-8352-0709-9. $16.50.

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH FILM

Originally published in Great Britain and now available in the U.S., this 4-volume set is the most comprehensive and detailed study of British cinema ever written. Hundreds of still photos, bibliographies, directories, indexes are included. "Indispensable," stated Ernest Lindgren, formerly Curator, Britain's National Film Archive. 1973. By Rachel Low. Published by George Allen & Unwin Ltd. 6½" x 9½". LC 73-10747.

Vol. 1: 1896-1906.	136 pages.	ISBN 0-04-791002-4.	$11.50.
Vol. 2: 1906-1914.	312 pages.	ISBN 0-04-791008-9.	$13.50.
Vol. 3: 1914-1918.	336 pages.	ISBN 0-04-791009-7.	$14.75.
Vol. 4: 1918-1929.	544 pages.	ISBN 0-04-791021-6.	$18.50.

THE AMERICAN FILM INSTITUTE CATALOG—FEATURE FILMS 1961-1970

Here's the second segment in this highly-acclaimed series. It lists and describes every film produced in the U.S. during the decade in which cinema finally came into its own as an independent art form, as a mode of communication to be seriously studied, as a research area to be pursued. Thousands of films are arranged by title in Volume I, with information on cast, director, cameraman, writers, literary source, production and distribution companies, release date, plot synopsis, and more. Volume II contains an Index of Individual and Corporate Names which enables you to locate films associated with specific actors, directors, technicians, production companies, etc. A Subject Index helps you find films dealing with thousands of different subject areas under 12 major categories. Spring, 1976. 8½" x 11". LC 79-128587. ISBN 0-8352-0453-7. $90.00 the 2-volume set.

THE AMERICAN FILM INSTITUTE CATALOG—FEATURE FILMS 1921-1930

Focus on Film called this first segment "one of the most exciting and valuable film books ever produced." In the same 2-volume format, it lists and describes some 7,000 films that span the golden years of the Silents and the birth of the Talkies—the Jazz Age in film. 1971. 8½" x 11". 1653 pages. LC 79-12857. ISBN 0-8352-0440-5. $57.00 the 2-volume set.

WHO WAS WHO ON SCREEN

Here are profiles of 6,000 great, near-great, and virtually unknown screen personalities who died between 1920 and 1971—with full screen credits for each. "A big fat beautiful reference book... absolutely fascinating," wrote the Chicago Tribune. 1973. By Evelyn Mack Truitt. 8½" x 11". 363 pages. LC 74-4325. ISBN 0-8352-0719-6. cip. $22.50.

THE FILM USER'S HANDBOOK

Here is a basic manual that shows librarians, educators, community groups every aspect of building a successful film service. How to choose and run equipment. When to purchase films and when to rent. How to prepare publicity releases and film notes. How to avoid film damage in projection. And much more. 1975. By Dr. George Rehrauer. 6" x 9". 301 pages. Ill. LC 75-15884. ISBN 0-8352-0659-9. cip. $14.95.

FILMS—TOO GOOD FOR WORDS

A unique, annotated directory of over 1,000 non-narrated 16mm films that will both entertain and instruct people of low-language ability, the aurally handicapped, or highly literate students for whom condescending narration would be meaningless. Films are listed by subject, with all necessary ordering information. Visual Education called it "fascinating." 1973. By Salvatore J. Parlato, Jr. 6" x 9". 192 pages. LC 72-12831. ISBN 0-8352-0618-1. $13.00.

Order all books on 30-day approval.

R.R. Bowker Order Dept.,
P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Mich. 48106.

Outside Western Hemisphere:
Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England.

All orders plus shipping and handling.
Sales tax added where applicable.
(Prices subject to change without notice.)

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

r on technique than other available ties, but it's very good on philosophy nd precautionary advice.—Ronald
. Nimmer, Ohio State Univ. Lib., 'olumbus

THEATER

Bartal, Lea & Nira Ne'eman. Movement Awareness and Creativity.

Harper. Apr. 1976. 179p. illus. ISBN 0-06-060560-X. $7.95. DANCE

Both authors have studied and worked n Israel and England. Their approach o movement is based on the concepts of Moshe Feldenkrais, Noa Eshkol, nd Abraham Wachmann, plus the very different (but apparently compatble) ancient Chinese T'ai Chi Ch'uan. This work presents a basic program for se in classrooms with dance and dra-na students and with children. The exercises are designed to develop body awareness and discipline rather than echniques. The program seems sound, nd the exercises are reasonably interesting. A good teacher should be able o use the ideas effectively, and the program and exercises could easily be modified to suit the special needs of a class. Of interest primarily to teachers.—George Louis Mayer, N.Y.P.L.

Howard, Sir Robert & George Villiers. The Country Gentleman.

Univ. of Pennsylvania Pr. Apr. 1976. ed. by Arthur-H. Scouten & Robert D. Hume. ISBN 0-8122-7705-8. $13.50; pap. ISBN 0-8122-1086-7. $4.95. THEATER

This play, banned before its scheduled performance in 1669, now makes its first appearance in print. And a welcome appearance it is. The editor-sleuths provide an informative introduction to the play, the history of the manuscript discovered in the Folger Library in 1973, and its historical background, including the political reasons for its suppression. The Country Gentleman employs some of the main conventions of Restoration comedy: pairs of intriguing lovers, city life versus country life, and political and social satire. In the hands of Howard (Villiers contributed one significant scene), these conventions come alive with superb comic skill and vitality. The publication of this play may assist the rehabilitation of Howard's status as a dramatist, for he has been neglected too long.—Robert E. Kelley, Dept. of English, University of Iowa, Iowa City

Mordden, Ethan. Better Foot Forward: a new history of American musical.

Grossman, dist. by Viking. May 1976. 335p. illus. bibliog. index. $12.95. THEATER

The wedding of form and content in Show Boat (1927) is at the center of this chronicle of 100 years of American popular culture. The elements of music, writing, and production are traced from their roots, through hits and flops, to the decline and fall in the middle 1970's. It is a readable, almost personal, history that provides an alternate vision to that found in David Ewen's standard works (which are inexplicably missing from the "very selective bibliography"). The index and photos were not seen by this reviewer. Recommended to general theater collections.—Chuck Broadbent, Ursinus Coll. Lib., Collegeville, Pa.

Patrick, Robert. Kennedy's Children.

Random. 1976. 66p. $6.95. THEATER

In a New York City bar, five people, including a Vietnam veteran with a habit, a young gay man, and a beautiful young woman who dreamed of succeeding Marilyn Monroe as America's sex symbol, drink away a rainy afternoon and recall the 1960's as each experienced the turbulent decade. There is no dialogue and no plot; Patrick makes his artistic statement through a series of monologues. Each character is a type easily identified with the events and movements of the 1960's, and the dramatic tension of the play results from the contrast between the characters' revealed hopes and intentions and the lives they are actually living. The playwright has given actors and actresses ample opportunity to develop three-dimensional stage figures, but only the most imaginative and persistent readers will stick with this to the end. For that minority, Patrick's play provides an absorbing and rewarding reflection on the Kennedy era and its aftermath.—Theodore O. Wohlsen Jr., Connecticut State Lib., Hartford

Cinema

Bergman, Ingmar. Face to Face.

Pantheon. Mar. 1976. 95p. tr. from Swedish by Alan Blair. $5.95. CINEMA

A script is only half a movie, and when written by Bergman, it's usually the lesser half. Images are his forte, not words or ideas. Even his best scripts suggest little of their cinematic potential, and Face to Face is definitely not one of his best. The plot concerns Jenny Isaakson, a psychiatrist described as "a mental illiterate . . . convinced that a cheese is a cheese, a table a table . . . that a human being is a human being." During the course of the film, these convictions are overturned; Jenny goes through some sort of mental crisis and tries to take her own life. She is saved by a homosexual doctor who shares her anguished sense of emotional dislocation. "Reality," he says, "would be to know that a joy is a joy and above all that a pain has to be a pain." Jenny asks him to elaborate, but the reader has had more than enough. By this point, the pseudo-intellectuality of the dialogue has become so overpowering that it stifles all interest in Jenny's obliquely defined dilemma. Overall Face to Face reads as though it were trumped up from bits and pieces of earlier, better Bergman films; it's going to take a lot of visual wizardry to make it look like anything more than a pretentious potboiler.—Gary Carey, Dept. of Film & Theater History, Sch. of Visual Arts, New York

Tuska, Jon. The Filming of the West.

Doubleday. Mar. 1976. illus. index. LC 75-12830. ISBN 0-385-03115-7. $14.95. CINEMA

This massive, fascinating, refreshingly antinostalgic work provides everything you could ever possibly want to know about western movies and their personalities. Tuska tells us he has seen over 8000 westerns, and he has chosen 100 significant or representative films from 1903–1972 to discuss in detail. He defines seven major periods of development. His writing is succinct and readable, and he gives cast and credit information, synopses, and most important, detailed descriptions of the "contributing factors"—who, what, when, where, and how—of each production. He also provides careful, clear delineations of the intricate business and corporate (wheelings and) dealings. A decade-long work of a western nut who has devoted his life to his art and now shares his wealth.—David Bartholomew, N.Y.P.L.

Westmore, Frank & Muriel Davidson. The Westmores of Hollywood.

Lippincott. May 1976. 256p. photogs. index. LC 75-33210. $8.95. PER NAR/CINEMA

To even the casual moviegoer, the name Westmore conjures up visions of the most convincing cosmetic effects that Hollywood make-up could achieve. To a certain extent, Frank Westmore treats these professional achievements in this chronicle of his family's 60-year involvement with the industry. Yet if the Westmores virtually created the use of make-up as a profession, they did so at a terrible human price to themselves. And this story, more than the secrets of the trade, or

BODYBUILDING FOR EVERYONE

By LOU RAVELLE

Everyone's introduction to bodybuilding. Both sexes and all ages should make it part of their lives. Step by step, the author explains the secrets of physical development, the principles of weight-gaining and slimming, muscle building and body contouring—everything you need to know to reshape your body in the way you want it.

SBN 87523-157-8 $5.95

17 photographs and 55 line drawings

MATHEMATICS FOR EVERYMAN:

From Simple Numbers to the Calculus

By EGMONT COLERUS

"An attempt to clear away the mystery of mathematics. Assuming no mathematical education, the book leads the reader to understand the fundamental mathematical operations and to grasp some of the magic, greatness, and beauty of the subject." — Library Journal.

"The author . . . assumes on the part of his readers no previous acquaintance with mathematics, and . . . advances the reader to some mathematical notions of 'college' level . . . The near-miracle is accomplished by patient, carefully-phrased exposition intended for study without the aid of a teacher." — New Technical Books (of the New York Public Library).

SBN 87523-104-7 Illustrated $6.95

EMERSON BOOKS, INC.

Buchanan, New York 10511

A riveting novel of an old-guard politician's "last hurrah"

Banquet Before Dawn

By WARREN ADLER

Author of Options

A veteran Congressman fights for his political life in this tough, gritty novel about the startling realities of American politics. After 23 years in office, John J. Sullivan is pitted for re-election against Aram Yomarian—young, dynamic, backed by the savviest of campaign staffs. With his back to the wall, Sullivan still has a few tricks up his sleeve—and uses them in this explosive inside view of our political system and how it really works. "The writing is first-rate and the book has plenty of bite."—Library Journal. $7.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N. Y. 10016

"A marvel"
—Chicago Tribune Book World

★"Helen Yglesias is a natural writer with authenticity, ubiquitous vitality, and a sympathetic warmth."
—Starred Review, The Kirkus Reviews.

★"A typical situation is raised to a power of intensity by the ability of Yglesias to convey nuances, to draw out hidden meanings behind events of life and death, birth and funerals, to fill in the elements which together bring these individuals alive."
—Starred Review, ALA Booklist.

FAMILY FEELING a novel by HELEN YGLESIAS

$8.95
ISBN 0-8037-5365-0

THE DIAL PRESS

DELL PUBLISHING CO., INC.
1 Dag Hammarskjöld Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10017

the details of Hollywood gossip, which he also supplies, is Frank Westmore's subject. In truth, readers will find little new here about either Hollywood or the use of make-up. Instead, the book details the awful corrosive effect that professional jealousies had upon the seven Westmores in the business. Father set against sons; brother opposed to brother. As their fame and success increased, they became increasingly estranged. Given the sadness of the chronicle, it is difficult to understand its purpose. Perhaps the telling of the horrors is an expiation. It is even more difficult to guess the effect the book may have on readers drawn by the magic of the Westmore name.—Marshall Deutelbaum, Film Dept., George Eastman House, Rochester, N.Y.

Bales, William Alan. The Seeker.
McGraw. Mar. 1976. 130p. LC 75-34415. ISBN 0-07-003557-1. $6.95. F
An anonymous man, the only survivor of a plane crash, is cast upon an unidentified beach. He endures essentially by repeating Man's discovery/invention of tools, weapons, shelter, fire, clothing, and so on. When he next meets man, he sacrifices his life for another's. This first novel is really a long short story, and, as you would suspect after learning the plot, is both adventure and myth. For larger fiction collections.—Shirley A. Smith, Kanawha County P.L., Charleston, W. Va.

fiction

Buell, John. Playground.
Farrar. Mar. 1976. 224p. ISBN 0-374-023436-1. $7.95. F
Playground is a tour de force of extraordinary depth. The story begins with the first day of Spencer Morison's holiday, a holiday that "had been planned logistically, with three friends, over winter months, planned with a deep hunger for getting away, a need to remove themselves from the complex pressures of their work and lives." Morison is leaving Montreal and his family for a long-relished two weeks of "fishing, drinking, eating, sleeping, all out doors in rugged bush country" of northern Canada. He flies in alone earlier than his friends to set up their camp and is forced to crash land in a lake way off course. The major part of the novel consists of Buell's masterful description of middle-aged Morison's persistent and occasionally naïve attempts to survive in the wild. The irony, of course, is how difficult it is to survive "away from it all. . . ." After reading Playground I am sure you will want to read Buell's three other books. Highly recommended for all fiction collections.—Jean B. Palmer, Stoneham P.L., Mass.

Charyn, Jerome. Marilyn the Wild.
Arbor House, dist. by Dutton. Mar. 1976. 246p. LC 75-31072. ISBN 0-87795-129-2. $8.95. F
This one is all about New York in a wild, tough fantastic way. It is all about the real workings of the New York Police Department and the workings o the street—superheated, but alive, u to date, fascinating and exciting. hard Jewish cop in the hierarchy is be deviled by a rash of senseless holdup and raids in his own bailiwick by a gan of adolescent but totally wise school children. This culminates in the bludg eoning of the cop's mother, a loca junk dealer. There are riveting com plications: the cop's daughter, a much married bolter, is having an affair with blue-eyed Jewish cop, a chess-playin child is doing the same with a Hassidi girl, revolted by her expectations. Th plot is impelled by sound notions of re venge by the young against the old, an the action is embellished by tartly witt observations of a grotesque collectio of hoodlums. Theatrical but compellin to the end.—Henri C. Veit, Brooklyn P.L.

Clark, Jean. Untie the Winds.
Macmillan. May 1976. 340p. ISBN 0-02-525780-3. $8.95. F
When Ann Eaton, wife of the first governor of colonial New Haven, is excommunicated from the Puritan Church fo dallying with a Baptist tract, she blames the ostracism on her jealous mother-in-law and the ambitious minister who is her husband's best friend. Then the perversity of her own character, more tyrannical than Fate or the Church, succeeds in estranging her from her few remaining sources of warmth and companionship in town. Clark's New Haven is a land where the affluent, stiff with winter cold, conduct their affairs with equal stiffness and where little besides the rigors of indentured servitude can equip people with sense and fortune enough to secure their happiness along with their freedom. Although often a cheerless account of the withering of personal liberty, Untie the Winds combines extensive historical research with a lively narrative skill and is certain to enjoy wide readership appeal.—Charles Teixeira, New York

Connell, Evan S., Jr. Double Honeymoon.
Putnam. Mar. 1976. 275p. LC 75-34386. ISBN 0-399-11663-X. $8.95. F
Karl Muhlbach, middle-aged insurance man who became obsessed with pre-Columbian art in The Connoisseur (LJ 8/74) here finds a new obsession: Lambeth Brent, a beautiful young woman who monopolizes male attention wherever she goes. Besides beauty and sensuality, Lambeth also displays instability, promiscuity, and disregard for propriety to the point of immorality, all qualities abhorrent to Muhlbach in his well-ordered life. A man who knows himself well and is realistic about what life holds for him, Muhlbach finds Lambeth one of life's "unspeakable delights" and repeatedly deludes himself into thinking their affair has more meaning and potential than is possible. Only after seeing Double Honeymoon, a pornographic film in which Lambeth stars, does Muhlbach admit his love and feel its pain—a much greater expenditure than was required by his earlier obsession. This is a story of life, and Connell tells it elegantly and economically. Especially fine.—Michele M. Leber, Virginia Beach P.L.

Davies, Robertson. World of Wonders.
Viking. Mar. 1976. 358p. $10. F
Here is the concluding volume of Davies' trilogy (the first two were Fifth Business, LJ 11/1/70 and The Manticore, LJ 11/1/72). The world's premier illusionist, Magnus Eisengrim, tells his story to an audience of friends and filmmakers: his solitary childhood in a small, deeply Calvinistic village in rural Canada; his abduction by a carnival magician and his years of labor as a huckster; his initiation into the British theater by a grande dame and her husband, an egoistical star whom Magnus all but absorbs into himself; his work as a master repairman of gadgets, clocks, and mechanical toys; and finally his triumphant career on stage. World of Wonders propounds the questions: Does one live only in the present, or is he the sum of all his past actions, and hence eternally responsible for them? Can one accurately report the past? Or, in describing it, do we all become "illusionists"? Davies does not do full justice to such knotty problems, but he has written an interesting and—in a modest way—an exotic novel.—John Agar, Dept. of English, Valdosta State Coll., Ga.

De Blasis, Celeste. Suffer a Sea Change.
Coward. 1976. 208p. LC 75-26957. ISBN 0-698-10708-X. $7.95. F
This high-toned Gothic has literary pretensions—it's supposed to be a modern, novelized version of The Tempest. Like its title and heroine, the book suffers a sea change: in midstream, this slow, unfocused love story becomes a fast-moving but conventional suspense tale of the Mary Stewart variety, as if the editor had advised De Blasis to "tighten it up." The total effect is awkward and puzzling, and the many parallels to Shakespeare's pastoral comedy seem forced. Jess (Miranda), to escape a stultifying existence, allows herself to be maneuvered by an elderly deus ex machina (Prospero) into visiting Bermuda. According to plan, she meets his eligible nephew (Caliban/Ferdinand) and they live happily ever after. Though this is a creditable effort to elevate the genre, most romantic suspense readers won't stick with it after the first chapter.—Joyce W. Smothers, Monmouth County Lib., Freehold, N.J.

Duffy, Maureen. Capital.
Braziller. Mar. 1976. 221p. $6.95. F
Another of Duffy's strange but fascinating novels, Capital is an evocation of the city of London. The book is woven of three threads: the story of Meepers, a rootless eccentric who seeks to prove the continuity of London's civilization; the letters of a history professor to his lover; and historical flashbacks, vignettes of London at different times through different eyes. Themes of identity, humanity, and civilization are interwoven deftly. Though an intimate knowledge of London would increase enjoyment and understanding of the novel, it is an intriguing, richly metaphoric, and stylistically unusual work, rewarding for those who read for style and thematic content, not merely a "good story."—Melanie Axel-Lute, formerly with Elmwood Park P.L., N.J.

Eliason, Joyce. Laid Out.
Harper. Apr. 1976. 256p. ISBN 0-06-011119-4. $8.95. F
Wally Beck was a 42-year-old director trying for a comeback, and most of the women at his funeral had known him sexually as well as socially. Among them is Susannah Nash, sometimes actress, whose thought processes read like a porno flick and nightmare. Writer Vivian O'Gara is more self-possessed, bringing some note of class into the picture; Leah is an agent's secretary and disappointed wife. These and other women recall their turns with Wally, a rather shallow Love Machine, against a background of Susannah's increasing mental derangement. Characterizations are believable and give a sense of the empty lives of these second-string Hollywood makers and shakers.—Hara L. Seltzer, Rutgers Univ. Graduate Sch. of Library Service

Finley, Joseph E. Missouri Blue.
Putnam. Mar. 1976. 273p. ISBN 0-399-11623-0. $7.95. F
The sound of a steam locomotive whistle evokes many emotions—from loneliness and wanderlust to remembrances of dreams and ambitions long

For inquiring minds...
For fertile imaginations...
WESTMINSTER
BOOKS for young readers
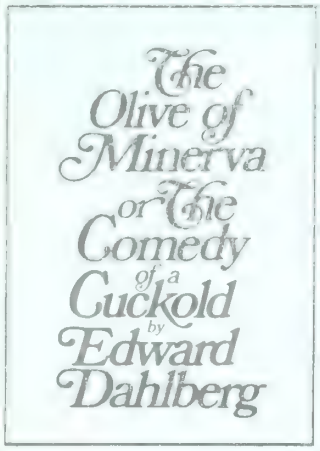
SPRING 1976
FICTION
QUADRUS AND GOLIATH
by ALVIN LESTER ben-MORING. Realistic and exciting, humorous and touching—this story set thirty years ago in a black community in the Deep South describes the adventures of one little boy and how he defeated a giant black bear. Illustrated. 11-13. March 22. $6.95t (32590-4)
I THINK THIS IS WHERE WE CAME IN
by PHYLLIS ANDERSON WOOD. A warmly human High Interest/Low Reading Level novel about three teenagers on a very special camping trip. 12-13 and up. A HIWAY book. March 22. $6.50 (32582-3)
THUNDER ON FORBIDDEN MOUNTAIN
by THEODORE W. MUNCH and ROBERT D. WINTHROP. A nature hike in Arizona's Superstition Mountains turns into an epic wilderness adventure. 10-14. March 22. $6.95 (32588-2)
THE HAUNTED KITCHEN
by MARY PHRANER WARREN. Three young sters organize a hunt for the ghost who is haunting their new home. Illustrated. 9-11. March 22. $5.75 (32584-X)
ALL BECAUSE OF JILL
by TERI MARTINI. A bashful girl steps out of the shadow of her beautiful older sister. 12-14. March 22. $6.95t (32589-0)
MYSTERY OF THE GOLDEN RAM
by RUTH MALONE. This appealing detective story also takes an intimate look at the workings of a museum. 12-14. March 22. $6.00 (32585-8)
NONFICTION
WHO DO YOU THINK YOU ARE?
Digging for Your Family Roots by SUZANNE HILTON. A complete how-to book, studded with interesting anecdotes, that will get young people hooked on an exciting and significant hobby: discovering one's origins through the creative detective work called genealogy. A Junior Literary Guild Selection. Illustrated. 12 up. April 19. $6.95 (32587-4)
SUBMERGE! THE STORY OF DIVERS AND THEIR CRAFTS
by ANABEL DEAN. The fascinating history of submersibles from Greek times to the present day. A Franklin Institute Book. Illustrated. 12-15 and up. April 19. Cloth $6.95t (32569-6); paper $4.95t (34009-1)
NOISE, NOISE, NOISE!
by JERRY GREY. A timely examination of "unwanted sound" and what we can do about it. A Franklin Institute Book. Illustrated. 12-15. Jan. 5. $6.50 (32575-0); $4.50 paper (34010-5)
THE UPROOTED
by CHARLES PAUL MAY. An eye-opening account of how whole populations have been forcibly moved in American history. 12-up. April 19. $6.95 (32591-2)
CARLOS P. ROMULO—THE BAREFOOT BOY OF DIPLOMACY
by ADELE deLEEUW. The inspiring story of the Philippines' most famous citizen—newspaper reporter, freedom fighter, U.N. leader. Illustrated. 12-up. April 19. $6.95 (32583-1)
THE WESTMINSTER PRESS
920 Witherspoon Bldg., Phila., Pa. 19107
In Canada: McGraw-Hill Ryerson, Ltd.
Illustration from Who Do You Think You Are?
t—tentative price. Please add Westminster's prefix, 0-664-, to get full ISBN's.

THE CROWELL CORNER



THE OLIVE OF MINERVA or THE COMEDY OF A CUCKOLD by Edward Dahlberg

*"Comedic loquaciousness envelops the serious intent of Dahlberg's modern fabliau posing the deepest questions of life.... Dahlberg's virtuoso locutions achieve poetic distillations rich in allusion and imagery." —Starred review, ALA Booklist

ISBN: 0-690-00697-7 $6.95
LC: 75-20358

Thomas Y. Crowell
666 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019

Recommended
LIBRARY JOURNAL

GIRLS TURN WIVES

by NORMA KLEIN

"'Trees turn bare and girls turn wives' and then what? More than just living happily ever after, particularly for women who grew up in the '50s such as former roommates Hannah King and Jessica Proctor, Barnard, '59. The setting is up-to-the-minute East Coast urban, but the story deals with constants. Klein has the same sure skilled touch she has shown before, plus the understanding and thoughtfulness to make her female characters especially true. As entertaining as it is illuminating—a real pleasure."

—Library Journal

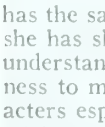
$8.95 LC 75-35707



SIMON AND SCHUSTER
630 Fifth Ave
New York 10020

ago lost to the years of our youth. Missouri Blue, a first novel, is the saga of a railroader caught up in the Great Depression. Forced by circumstances to return with his family to the cotton fields of his childhood, Braz Marvin struggles from dawn to well past dusk, day in and day out, picking enough cotton to exist until next picking time. But always in the background, like the ethereal beat of a different drummer, hangs the seductive call of the locomotive whistle. Missouri Blue treats much more than the struggle of a man to provide for his family; it deals strongly with man's ideals and what he is willing to give up in his pursuit of life, liberty, and happiness for himself and his family. Finley is a craftsman of top rank—a bench mark. Like the locomotive whistle, this novel evokes many emotions.—Charles MacPhee, New York

Flores, Janis. Hawkshead.
Doubleday. 1976. LC 75-17071. ISBN 0-385-11364-1. $5.95.

Shaw, Irene. Murderer's Mansion.
Doubleday. 1976. LC 75-17074. ISBN 0-385-11384-6. $5.95.

Wissmann, Ruth. Fear Waits on Cypress Road.
Doubleday. 1975. 188p. LC 75-14850. ISBN 0-385-11278-5. $5.95. F

Flores' Hawkshead is clichéd and mediocre. Devon Brandwyne, a spunky lady's companion, finds work at a country mansion governed by dashing Lord Davencourt. If you can't guess the villain in this one, and if you've no idea who will eventually win Devon's heart and hand, then you've never read a Gothic novel before.

Shaw's Murderer's Mansion is set in contemporary northern California. One stormy night, Marianne Osborn finds shelter at an isolated mansion owned by a very attractive ex-murderer. Marianne's budding romance with her bitter landlord finds rough-going when her late husband's wealthy relatives turn up to complicate matters. Though far from a classic, the book is lively and often moving. (Murderer's Mansion was published in Great Britain in an earlier version titled Moonstone Manor.)

Fear Waits on Cypress Road should be chilling but isn't. Wissmann's heroine, Laura Evans, moves into a suburban house furnished with a restless spirit. Laura soon becomes involved with threatening calls, strange noises in the night, dead bodies, and flaming chairs. Laura's husband recommends tranquilizers. I recommend you seek thrills elsewhere.—Carol K. Carey, formerly with Dept. of Film, Museum of Modern Art, New York

Hawkes, John. Travesty.
New Directions, dist. by Lippincott. Mar. 1976. 128p. $5.95. F

This fascinating horror story is quintessential Hawkes, without the overwriting and difficulty he has been accused of. It is all here—the dreamlike ambience, the objective distance of the author, an understated but pervasive sense of doom. The unnamed driver of an expensive automobile plans to wreck the car, killing himself and his two passengers, his daughter and her lover, who is also his wife's lover. The novel is in the form of a monologue by the driver, a sort of apologia pro vita sua, and a discourse on "the worm in the bud," the presence of death in life and the power of the imagination. The driver has planned the crash as a creative act of love offered to his wife, and Hawkes's skill makes his madness plausible and compelling.—Dennis Pendleton, Roanoke P.L., Va.

Henderson, Michael. The Log of a Superfluous Son.
Internat. Publications Serv. 1975. 143p. $7.50.

Young New Zealander Osgar Senney has an English-style private-school background and a law degree, as does his author. They also share a fondness for borrowed styles, especially Joyce's. Son of a butcher and his Old English-speaking wife, Senney has fled his government job to become a cattle-tending supercargo on a former Liberty ship, fleeing also his family, his Vietnam-war-supporting country, and his nonentity girlfriend. He is obeying a graffito in his school lavatory; but the Liberty ship is now decaying (irony) so he jumps ship in Guam and the novel suddenly stops. Despite the Joycean hijinks ("God is Dad"), which are sometimes unintelligible, the thin characterizations and stock plot make the novel little more than a curiosity, a self-pleased game of styles.—J. D. O'Hara, Dept. of English, Univ. of Connecticut, Storrs

Hodges, Hollis. The Fabricator.
Crown. Apr. 1976. 220p. $7.95.

This appealing tale features Cletus Hayworth, a young social worker who evolves a uniquely effective sociopsychotherapy based on fabrication. The therapy backfires, however, when he tries to reunite a young boy with his missing mother. Determined to thwart his agency's attempt to put the boy up for adoption, Cletus abducts him from his foster home and begins a clandestine search for the missing mother. While combing the files of other agencies, Cletus falls in love with a feminist job counselor, who also indulges in fabrication. Confusion reigns predictably, augmented by numerous subplots and artfully constructed time shifts, but the final page brings a happy ending to all concerned. Hodges' tongue-in-cheek approach makes for delightful reading, and the meandering time structure alleviates the boredom often prevalent in light reading. Definitely recommended.—Diane Haas, Howe Lib., Hanover, N.H.

Jones, Gayl. Eva's Man.
Random. Mar. 1976. $6.95.

This work is a chant, a sad, dark chant ridden with sex and blood. The central thematic thread is a deeply serious search for lost innocence. The narrator and main figure, Eva, is a black woman juggling back and forth across three time levels—three generations emerge. At 17, Eva stabs a man who abuses her. She's 48 when she poisons a man, bites off his penis and goes to prison for the murder. A Medusa figure, she's also a queen bee who refuses to explain herelf. Elvia, her jail cellmate, is her alter ego whom she finally accepts. Out of boredom? No salvation is possible. The precise dialogue is beautiful; past and present blend faster and faster and one comes away reminded of the cursed figures in Toni Morrison's novels. This is a good mysterious book.—Clarence Major, Dept. of English, Univ. of Maryland, College Park

King, Harold. Four Days.
Bobbs. 1976. 352p. LC 75-30888. ISBN 0-672-52183-0. $8.95. F
It is March, 1953 and Stalin is dying. American and British military personnel are deeply unsettled by the promise of a major Russian power shake-up. The situation is complicated by a Polish aviator who defects to Denmark in a new Russian jet fighter. Further south, a hotshot American pilot violates Czech air space and is shot down. In the midst of this threatening turmoil, the Strategic Air Command decides on a secret test of the U.S. East Coast defenses by casting 60 bombers as enemy invaders. These themes and their subplots come together in a suspenseful story heavily laden with verisimilitude. Author of Paradigm Red (LJ 4/15/75), King peoples his novel with real contemporaries of his fictional (and rather stereotyped) characters. He relies on a meticulously detailed plot to sustain interest and he succeeds.—Barbara Conaty, Madison P.L., Wis.

Koperwas, Sam. Westchester Bull.
S. & S. Apr. 1976. 130p. $7.95. F
Though at times the author appears to have had difficulty deciding whether to write a story about a football player who happens to be Jewish or a Jew who happens to be a football player, this first novel is generally amusing and successful (although a short story might have been sufficient). Ace's encounters with his family, his teammates, his opponents, his bedmates leave him concluding that he is God's personal gift to football and to the world. Some of the sexual material seems pointless, some of the family scenes are stereotypes of Jewish life, but the book is entertaining.—Arthur Kurzweil, formerly with Plainfield P.L., N.J.

Lau, Joseph S. M., ed. Chinese Stories from Taiwan, 1960–1970.
Columbia Univ. Pr. May. 1976. 336p. ISBN 0-231-04007-5. $20; ISBN 0-231-04008-3. $6.95. F
In the 1920's modern Chinese literature developed out of the antitraditional, pro-Western cultural upsurge associated with the May Fourth Movement. The overwhelming concern of the pioneer writers for the desperate condition of China made most fiction didactic; their superficial understanding of Western literary forms and theories made it experimental. After 1949, when literature on the mainland became prescriptive these "modern" trends continued to be promoted in Taiwan. The works of the 11 second-generation writers from Taiwan represented in Lau's anthology reveal how modern Chinese literary tradition has matured and developed. The names of these writers may not be known in America but their stories provide a student of China a rare insight into the milieu and the psychology of Chinese youth caught in the process of "modernization." The translators have handled the Chinese idiom ably.—Ranbir Vohra, Dept. of Political Science, Trinity Coll., Hartford, Conn.

Serge, Victor. Conquered City.
Doubleday. 1975. 194p. tr. from French, fwd. & biographical note by Richard Greeman. bibliog. LC 75-25099. ISBN 0-385-05748-2. $7.95. F
This final volume of a trilogy comprising Birth of Our Power (LJ 4/15/67) and Men In Prison (LJ 11/15/69) is an

"Spooky shudders and strange doings"
—Publishers Weekly

The Speaking Stones

Sara Cardiff

"Danielle Roberts, a budding opera singer, is only 22 when she marries the celebrated 77-year-old composer and conductor Stefan Brandt. As the novel opens they are at home in California, despite Brandt's extremely busy schedule, diligently cared for by the old housekeeper, Herta Graf. Dany has discovered she is expecting a child, and because of two ritual murders of pregnant girls in the area, is warned to be careful... suspense builds to the final horrifying scenes."—Booklist
224 pp. $7.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

A HARPER NOVEL OF SUSPENSE
"Cheers for the lady."
—Louis Untermeyer
ODDS ON MISS SEETON
HERON CARVIC
The indomitable Miss Seeton takes on the gambling syndicate in a wild and woolly romp.
$6.95

A HARPER NOVEL OF SUSPENSE

RECOMMENDED FICTION
★"A staggeringly effective coupling of fact and fiction."
—Starred Review, ALA Booklist.
"While Huie's trenchant character study culls its plot from events surrounding our entry into the atomic age, its implications cut right to the present by reflecting contemporary dilemmas like executive privilege and Cold War diplomacy...(and) portrays in chilling terms what chief executives can do in the name of national security."
—Publishers Weekly.
$8.95 ISBN: 0-440-04367-0

★"Richard Yates' strongest novel since that fine first one, Revolutionary Road...His disturber of the peace has an obliterating immediacy and bitter vulnerability."
—Starred Review, The Kirkus Reviews. "Long awaited by admirers of Yates...the present novel succeeds as a worthy sequel ...set down in scenes of compelling clarity."
—ALA Booklist.
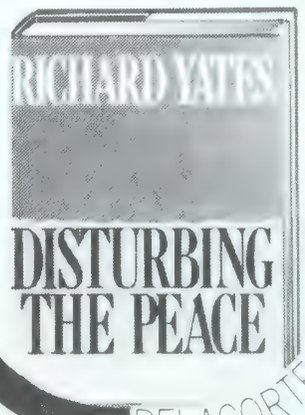
Delacorte Press/ Seymour Lawrence
$7.95
ISBN: 0-440-03390-X



DELACORTE PRESS
DELL PUBLISHING CO., INC.
1 Dag Hammarskjöld Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10017

Heart-pounding suspense in the classic Hitchcock manner!

The Running of Beasts

By BILL PRONZINI & BARRY MALZBERG

A modern-day Jack the Ripper stalks an Adirondack resort town in this breathtaking thriller that probes the darkest recesses of the human mind. A psychiatrist's theory that the killer has no conscious knowledge of his crimes haunts four men in the town—each secretly convinced that he himself could be the murderer—until the mounting tension finally explodes in a series of shocking revelations. "The 'Ripper's' identity will unsettle readers just as it catches them totally unaware." —Publishers Weekly. "Mature teenagers will appreciate the macabre twist ending."—School Library Journal YA $8.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

"This is that rarity, a book for family reading...

An authentic background and sturdy characterization. Somewhat reminiscent of Greyfriars Bobby." —Library Journal. "A moving, well-written tale for animal lovers of all ages." —School Library Journal. "Touching without cloying ...most engaging." —Publishers Weekly. "A charmer."— N.Y. Times Book Review.

THE SPUDDY
a novel by Lillian Beckwith

$6.95
ISBN: 0-440-07681-1

DELACORTE PRESS

DELL PUBLISHING CO., INC.
1 Dag Hammarskjold Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10017

extraordinary chronicle of the Russian Revolution, focusing on the siege of St. Petersburg in 1919–1920. Episodic and panoramic in treatment, it uses a semi-documentary technique to dramatize the struggle of the revolutionary secret police organization (the Cheka) against both its own contradictions and the external threat of the encircling White armies. Serge's protagonist is no single individual, but the emerging collective of the Communist Party; his theme, that of defeat in victory. To Serge, who participated in the events he describes, the violent will of the revolutionaries to change the quality of Russian life was compromised and finally doomed by the abuse of power itself. The author was expelled from the Soviet Union in 1936 and fled from Paris to Mexico in 1940, dying there in 1947. He wrote to fellow-exile Trotsky's widow, "We are the sole survivors. . . . There is nobody left who knows what the Russian Revolution was really like." But there was still Serge's powerful and encompassing memory, and this, with his other novels and memoirs, is its ironic legacy.—Rosemary Neiswender, UCLA

Thomas, Donald. The Flight of the Eagle.
Viking. Apr. 1976. 238p. LC 75-30655. $8.95.

This thoroughly entertaining picaresque novel by the author of Prince Charlie's Bluff follows its soldier hero through the battles and boudoirs of England and Europe just prior to and during Napoleon's Hundred Days. The appealing and indefatigable Captain Tollemache, less rogue than dupe, is precipitated into the center of the political and social maneuvers of his age and made to play a direct role in Bonaparte's escape from Elba. Though seen through an Englishman's eyes, as the tale unfolds Wellington's valiant image is debunked while Napoleon receives somewhat more sympathetic treatment. Among the novel's notable qualities are an ample display of the principal characters' eminently human faults and foibles as well as the deglamorization of battle scenes without loss of excitement. Developments are plausibly motivated and the pace is excellent. Interesting and enjoyable.—Karen Horny, Northwestern Univ. Lib., Evanston, Ill.

Van Der Zee, John. Stateline.
HBJ. Mar. 1976. 216p. ISBN 0-15-184905-6 $7.95. F

Stateline is a taut cold novel which takes its name from the harsh setting of Lake Tahoe's south shore gambling houses. A con scheme involving bad checks and counter legal ploys is devised by two society dropouts. The plan almost works except for the dogged attempts of the Villa Casino's security officer, Ferrell. Struggling to maintain a new-found identity, Ferrell pursues the culprits to the end—a thankless hero, but at least a victor. An odd assortment of multidimensional characters pass through the novel, and it is apparent the author is familiar with the nightmare world of the casino. The story is both vivid and believable; the concept of life as a "con" is sustained throughout.—Paula J. Weiner, Leland R. Weaver Lib., Los Angeles County P.L. System

Yoshiyuki, Junnosuke. The Dark Room.
Kodansha, dist. by Harper. 1976. 170p. tr. by John Bester. ISBN 0-87011-255-4. $8.95. F

Shuichi Nakata, a writer of modest reputation in contemporary Japan, has been married once. Since his wife's death, however, he has preferred to keep a "safe" distance from the women he sees. Haunted by images from his past—wartime bombing raids, his wife's infidelity, a nervous breakdown—Nakata finds solace in the emotional neutrality of his relationships with women. Yet that neutrality is illusive, and soon he is caught up in a sexual labyrinth which both frightens and fascinates him. He narrows his attentions to one woman, Natsue, and by the conclusion of the novel is prepared to enter the "dark room" of their love. The prose style of this novel is sometimes ungainly, and it makes for a deceptive surface. What seems at first like a rather simplistic treatment of female sexuality evolves into something much deeper, especially in the parallels drawn between sexual and social sterility in postwar Japan. But even at its best the novel seems heavy-handed, and one wonders finally who is to blame: author or translator?—Bruce M. Firestone, Dept. of English, Clemson Univ., S.C.

Photography Market Place 75-76

Here are thousands of names, addresses, services, suppliers that professional still photographers use every working day. Where-to-buy-it and where-to-sell-it data right at your fingertips, answering questions like, "Is there an underwater camera housing manufacturer in Florida?" "Who's the picture editor at People Magazine?" By Fred W. McDarrah. 1975. 6 x 9. 425 pages. LC 75-833. ISBN 0-8352-0803-6. $14.95, plus shipping and handling.

R.R. BOWKER CO.
P.O. Box 1807
Ann Arbor, Mich. 48106

Science Fiction

Dann, Jack & George Zebrowski, ed. Faster Than Light.
Harper, Mar. 1976. 320p. illus. ISBN 0-06-010952-1. $8.95. 1

Faster-than-light space travel is the theme here, with introductory articles by Isaac Asimov, Arthur C. Clarke, and Ben Bova (pro) and a marvelous argument by Keith Laumer (con). The short stories deal with either the process or implications of FTL. The best piece (which, oddly, has the least to do with FTL) is Harlan Ellison's TV shooting script for "Phoenix Without Ashes"; it is brilliant. Other standouts are "Seascape," by Gregory Benford, and Chelsea Quinn Yabro's "Dead in Irons," a grim but effective tale. Recommended for all libraries with any sort of sf collection.—Charles A. Seavey, Univ. of Northern Iowa Lib., Cedar Falls

Eckert, Allan W. The Hab Theory.
Little, 1976. 564p. ISBN 0-316-20859-0. $9.95. 1

This novel is set in the very near future. H. A. Boardman, an elderly retired engineer, discovers that a planet-wide calamity is about to destroy civilization. He feigns an assassination attempt on the U.S. President to get the world's attention and succeeds in convincing both the President and journalist John Grant that his theory is true. The rest of the book is divided between the private life of Grant and the President's attempts to convince the world that the H.A.B. theory is right. Although the reader may disprove the theory by a simple calculation, the author has done an excellent job of making the science seem plausible. His characterizations are unusually deep for sf, but too many of the good guys (Grant and his mistress, Boardman, the President) are unbelievably good while the bad guys (unconvinced scientists, Russian diplomats, Grant's wife) are incredibly boorish. A final frustration occurs at the close of this long novel: the world is just starting to prepare for the end when it comes.—Raymond T. Hough, Dept. of Chemistry, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor

Zelazny, Roger. Doorways in the Sand.
Harper, Mar. 1976. 288p. LC 74-20423. ISBN 0-06-014789-X. $8.95. 1

This is a highly imaginative, humorous, and suspenseful tale of the future. The plot centers around professional student Fred Cassidy who, after 13 years of undergraduate study, is drawn into a mystery involving an interstellar cultural swap. The Earth has given two of its treasures—the British Crown jewels and the Mona Lisa—in exchange for precious star stones. One of the stones is stolen and Fred and his former school roommate are suspected of substituting a phony rock. A charming duo of alien undercover agents taking the form of wombat and kangaroo act as guardian angels to hero Fred, who escapes the entire episode with little physical damage but a graduate degree. Wonderful characters and unusual machinery give the story great charm. Although the writing is a bit uneven, this is a most satisfying read, sure to delight fans of the genre.—Paula J. Weiner, Leland R. Weaver Lib., Los Angeles County P.L. System

INDEX.

Acton, H., 805
Algarín, M., 819
Allen, L. A., 791
Allen, M., 814
Alotta, R., 808
American handbook of psychiatry, 821
Amis, K., 805
Anderson, B., 800
Angier, B., 805
Ashby, E., 808
Atkinson, F., 800

Baldwin, H. W., 810
Bales, W. A., 832
Bartal, L., 831
Bartlett, L. E., 807
Bell, R., 822
Berger, A. A., 808
Bergier, J., 825
Bergman, I., 831
Betts, R. F., 810
Boccaccio, G., 814
Boullata, I., 819
Bringhurst, R., 819
Broadbent, W. W., M.D., 822
Brock, A. M., 805
Brooke, C. N. L., 810
Brown, C. C., 807
Browning, R., 805
Buell, J., 832
Bundy, R., 826
Butscher, E., 815

Cassin-Scott, J., 803
Cermak, L. S., 822
Charles, A., 828
Charyn, J., 832
Chiaromonte, N., 815
Chu, A., 804
Clark, J., 832
Cleaver, C. G., 826
Clifton, L., 805
Cobb, J. B., Jr., 823
Cohen, M. L., 826
Cohn, R., 815
Connell, E. S., Jr., 832
Connellan, L., 819
Cormier, B. M., M.D., 822

Dann, J., 837
Davies, R., 833
De Blasis, C., 833
Dickey, G., 828
Dickson, L., 815
Doob, L. W., 822
Dorn, E., 820
Dorn, S. O., 804
Dowrick, S., 815
Drake, F. W., 810
Duffy, M., 833

Eckert, A. W., 837
Eliason, J., 833
Ellis, J., 812

Filler, L., 812
Fincher, J., 822
Finley, J. E., 833
Flores, J., 834
Florman, S. C., 826
Friedberg, J., M.D., 825

Gaither, G. H., 812
Gaya-Nuño, J. A., 802
Gehrig, E., 828
Glass, S. D., M.D., 822
Glassie, H., 826
Glassman, J. D., 820
Goodman, M., 828
Goodwin, D., M.D., 827
Graves, E. B., 801
Gregory, I. A. P., Lady, 805
Grotpeter, J. J., 801
Gutman, H., 808

Haley, J. L., 812
Hall, A., 823
Hall, E. T., 799
Hammelmann, H., 801
Harting, E. C., 801
Haughton, R., 823
Hawkes, J., 834
Henderson, M., 834
Higginbotham, V., 815
Hills, L. R., 814
Hodges, H., 834
Holt, J., 808
Hong, D., 828
Howard, Sir R., 831

Index to U.S. Government periodicals, 802

Jacobs, C., 813
Jones, G., 834

Kallem, A. E., 804
Kaplan, B. H., 822
Katz, W. T., 812
King, H., 835
Kluger, P., 804
Koch, H. W., 812
Koperwas, S., 835
Korda, M., 808

Lambert, G., 817
Lau, J. S. M., 835
Leach, B., 804
Lee, L., 805
Lee, P. R., 823
Lehmann, J., 805
Lester, L., 825
Liao, A. Y., 802
Libby, B., 828
Libraries in the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland, 791
Lima, F., 820
Lindbergh, A. M., 806
Lindquist, J., 817
Lloyd, R., 799
Lyttle, R., 829

Maddox, L. G., 806
Mailer, N., 820
Marcovich, M., 817
Markale, J., 827
Martin, G., 806
Martin, M., 824
Massow, R., 813
Milinaire, C., 814
Mitchner, S., 799
Mordden, E., 831
Moreley, J. W., 812

Newman, T. R., 804
Nimoy, L., 806

O'Brien, D. J., 821
O'Hara, F. J., 791
O'Hara, J. D., 817
Ostow, M., 821

Patrick, R., 831
Petzal, D. E., 829
Pinkney, A., 799
Pizer, D., 817
Porsche, F., 806
Porter, G., 821
Potter, D., 813

Reynolds, D. K., 823
Ridpath, I., 824
Rodnitzky, J. L., 827
Rodriguez, O., J. E., 813
Rowley, P., 829
Rowse, A. L., 806
Russell, F., 821
Rust, B., 802

Sale, K., 821
Sartre, J. P., 818
Schein, C. J., M.D., 825
Scherman, K., 814
Schorr, A. E., 791
Seagroatt, M., 804
Serge, V., 835
Sexton, A., 820
Shaw, I., 834
Shepherd, J., 806
Sherman, J., 806
Shrader, W., 823
Shulman, R., 800
Smith, K., 804
Sokolov, 814
Speer, A., 807
Stanforth, D., 803
Stevenson, W., 813
Strage, M., 807
Strung, N., 829
Swanson, R. J., 824

Taghacozzo, G., 818
Taylor, R. M., 823
Temple, R. K. G., 823
Thomas, C., 818
Thomas, D., 836
Time to greez, 820
Toole, R. K., 827
Trease, G., 810
Triche, C. W., III, 803
Tropp, M., 818
Troupe, Q., 820
Turnbull, C. M., 827
Tuska, J., 831
Tutko, T. M. D., 800

Unamuno, M. de, 818

Vallee, J., 824
Van Der Zee, J., 836
Von Braun, W., 826

Ward, C., 825
Walls, I. G., 825
Warner, E. L., 803
Wasserman, P., 791
Weed, S., 807
Weiskel, T., 818
West, J., 807
Westmore, F., 831
Wild, P., 820
Wissmann, R., 834
Witney, D., 804

Yartz, F. L., 818
Yates, G. G., 800
Yoshiyuki, J., 836
Young, S., 807

Zelazny, R., 837
Zwerling, L. S., 808

LJ CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

All advertisements for the Positions Open and the Positions Wanted classifications will be edited to exclude direct or indirect references to race, creed, color, age, and sex as conditions of employment. Positions open and positions wanted, $1.70 per line, minimum charge, $5.10, all other types of ads, $2.60 per line, minimum charge $7.80. If vouches forms are required for billing, please send them at the time advertisements are submitted for insertion. Copy for ads and requests for cancellations must be received at the LJ office 45 days preceding date of issue. Write: Classified Advertising Department, Library Journal, 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10036.

OUT-OF-PRINT

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS get prompt attention, wide search, reasonable prices, from International Bookfinders, Inc., Box 1-LJ, Pacific Palisades, Calif. 90272.

COLONIAL "out-of-print" Book Service, Inc. Want Lists invited. 23 E. 4th St., New York City 10003.

WE FIND BOOKS. Free International Search. Exclusive want lists invited. Realistic prices. Eva Davis Books. 108 Prince Charles, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

OP BOOKS in literature: social science, humanities. EGLI; Lamont, etc. Book Lande, 8926 National Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90034.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC Magazine: (1888-1976) Any issue from 1910. (Fine cond.) Reasonable. Price list furn. Don Smith, 3930 Rankin St., Louisville, KY 40214.

SEARCH SERVICE. Out-of-print titles. Free quotes; reasonable prices. Send wants. Smith's Book House, 112 No. Plain St., Ithaca, N.Y. 14850.

Q. M. DABNEY & CO. Large stock of OP government publications and scholarly books. Free search service. Box 31061-J. Wash., D.C. 20031.

INTERNATIONAL CONGRESSES are one of our specialties. Foreign books and periodicals, current and out-of-print. Albert J. Phiebig Inc., Box 352, White Plains, N.Y. 10602.

WISH TO PURCHASE: regardless of condition or completeness; atlases and periodicals and books of American scenery. K. Manning, 1255 Post #609, San Francisco 94109.

MAGAZINES—BACK NUMBER

BACK ISSUE MAGAZINES, general scholarly, technical. Designed to serve high school and jr. college libraries. Please send want lists to Back Issues West; P.O. Box 6688, Tucson, Arizona 85716.

INTERNATIONAL University Booksellers, Inc. 101 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10003 carries one of the most comprehensive inventories of periodical backfiles. We invite inquiries for complete sets, runs, volumes, and issues required. We also buy scientific and scholarly journals in all fields for cash or credit.

OVER 2,000,000 backdate magazines on file. Send want lists for immediate attention. Magazine Center, Dept. LJ, 145 West 29th Street., New York, N.Y. 10001.

SERVICES—PERSONNEL

THERESA M. BURKE Employment Agency, 8 West 40th St., N.Y., N.Y. 10018. Specializing in the recruitment of library and information personnel for special, academic, and public libraries.

CAREER BLAZERS AGENCY non-fiction, best selling jobs for career-minded publishing professionals. 36 W. 46 St., YU 6-1285.

MICROFORMS

MICROFORMS. Good second-hand microfilm of periodicals of established micropublishers bought and sold. Write or call Microforms International Marketing Company, Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523. (914) 592-9141.

FOR SALE

COMPLETE SET of The Instrumentalist music magazine Vol. I, September 1946 thru Vol. XXVII June 1973. Excellent condition. Phone (804) 353-2065.

POSITIONS WANTED

CHILDREN'S LIBRARIAN seeking head or assistant position of children's department in public library. Varied experience; prefer relocation in community 25,000 population and over. G 51.

LIBRARIAN seeks position this summer. M.S.L.S. Graduate of Simmons College, Boston, Mass. Reading knowledge of French & Spanish. Experience. G 57.

RECENT M.L.S. graduate seeking beginning level position. B.A. in humanities and history. Read and write Spanish. Prefer cataloging or government documents. Am willing to relocate. Résumé from: Carol Kropp, 407 Water St. S.W., Sleepy Eye, MN 56085.

ASSOCIATE PROFESSORSHIP for fall 1976. Areas of interest: Comparative librarianship, education for librarianship, history of books & libraries, academic libraries, research methods. M.A. in English, specialist in education, M.L.S. and Ph.D. Experience U.S. & abroad. G 58.

CHILDREN'S LIBRARIAN desires position as children's program director and librarian, beginning in Sept. 1976. 2 years experience, B.A. in elementary education. Creative, enthusiastic, widely varied experience in work with children. Will relocate. E. B. Warren, 3715 Skyland Circle, Kingsport, TN 37664.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHWEST

LIBRARIAN, CATALOGER. M.L.S., minimum two years' experience required. Ability to work with LC, Western languages, and nonprint and special materials desirable. Appointment effective May 1, 1976. Librarian 2 (minimum salary $11,500). Faculty status, TIAA/CREF, broad insurance program, some moving expenses. Send résumé and three letters of reference to: Dr. G. Donald Smith, Director of Libraries, Washington State University, Pullman, WA, 99163 before April 2, 1976. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHEAST

ASSISTANT REFERENCE Librarian to work mostly evenings and weekends, taking responsibility for supervision of staff when the only professional on duty. Required: M.L.S. from accredited ALA library school and at least two years professional reference experience in a college or university library. Knowledge of government documents desirable. Beginning salary range: $10,750-$11,556, dependent upon qualifications. 12-month year, 22 days vacation, State retirement. Travel expenses to and from interview cannot be paid. Send credentials and names of three references to: Charles R. Andrews, University Librarian, Southeastern Massachusetts University, North Dartmouth, MA 02747 before April 15, 1976. SMU is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

LEARNING RESOURCES DIRECTOR (faculty position): Responsible for the organization, management and use of information sources and media materials. Desire a media trained librarian to plan and develop a library-media program in support of the college instructional program. Qualifications: M.L.S. from an accredited library school; administrative experience including the area of budget and personnel. Salary range $15,000-$17,000. Position effective September 1, 1976. Applications must be received by April 22. Contact: Dean Milne. North County Community College, Saranac Lake, N.Y. 12983. This college is an affirmative action for human rights employer.

LIBRARY DIRECTOR for municipal library in town of 10,000. Library director is full department head under town's strong merit system. Salary range $11,913–$15,190 with excellent fringe benefits. M.L.S. degree with administrative experience preferable. Appointment to begin no later than May 17, 1976. Apply by April 9 to: Personnel Director, Town of Springfield, 96 Main Street, Springfield, Vermont 05156.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHEAST

CHIEF ACQUISITIONS Librarian. Department consists of two professionals and seven staff. Requires the M.L.S. and at least three years' of appropriate experience. Experience with an automated system is essential. Salary is $16,000 with the usual fringe benefits. Send applications to: Dean, Library Services, West Virginia University, Morgantown, West Virginia 26506. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

MUSIC LIBRARIAN: Chief administrator for a music library with a staff of four including two librarians. Responsible for collection development, budgeting, and for maintaining contact with faculty and other sections of the university library. The collection comprises about 87,000 items, including 30,000 books and 37,000 scores. Requires subject training, preferably Ph.D. and M.L.S. with 4 years experience or equivalent. Minimum salary, $13,500. Twelve month academic appointment, 22 days vacation, standard insurance, and state retirement. Send résumé by April 1 to: Joseph Jerz, Assistant University Librarian for Staff Development, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, NC 27514. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

SCIENCE/TECHNOLOGY Librarian. Louisiana Tech University, offering a broad spectrum of fully accredited academic curricula through the doctorate, will have a retirement vacancy in the library which has to be filled by September 1, 1976. The M.L.S. or equivalent degree is required, a second Master's degree in a related subject field is desirable, and experience in academic libraries and scientific bibliography preferred. Tech's science/technology librarian is responsible for developing the collection in pure and applied sciences, and supervises the Hardtner Memorial Forestry Library. Although the salary is negotiable, current approval includes $10,000 for 9 months and faculty rank of assistant professor. Applications will be accepted until May 1, 1976. Louisiana Tech is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Send résumé and letter of application to: Dr. Sam A. Dyson, Director of Libraries, Louisiana Tech University, Ruston, Louisiana 71270. Do it now while you are thinking about it!

LIBRARY DIRECTOR for Oak Ridge Public Library, Oak Ridge, Tennessee, serving a population of 30,000. Beautiful location in the Smoky Mountain area. Applicant should have a Master's degree in Library Science and four years of administrative experience. Salary $12,200-$16,400 with liberal fringe benefits. Send résumé to: Personnel Director, City of Oak Ridge, P. O. Box 1, Oak Ridge, Tennessee 37830.

HEAD REFERENCE LIBRARIAN: Requirements include M.L.S. from ALA accredited university and active participation in all facets of reference work. Candidate should have at least five years' of reference experience, preferably with some supervisory responsibility. A Second Master's degree and some knowledge of foreign languages are desirable. This department head works with a staff of four professionals and three non-professionals, serving an academic community of 10,000 undergraduate and graduate students, 600 faculty, and a working collection of 600,000 volumes. The reference staff also has the primary responsibility for collection building. Salary $14,000 and up, depending on qualifications. Faculty status. Twelve month appointment. Liberal retirement, insurance, and vacation benefits. Send résumé to: Mrs. Marjorie Memory, Chairperson, Library Search Committee, Jackson Library, University of North Carolina at Greensboro, Greensboro, N.C. 27412. Deadline for applications: April 15, 1976. An affirmative action equal opportunity employer.

ASSISTANT REFERENCE Librarian: M.L.S. from ALA accredited university required. Previous reference experience desirable but not essential for superior applicants. Candidates must have a broad educational background and be able to participate not only in reference service but also collection development and library instruction. Knowledge of foreign languages desirable. Salary $9,500 and up depending on experience. Faculty status. Twelve month appointment. Liberal retirement, insurance, and vacation benefits. Send résumé to: James Thompson, Library Director, University of North Carolina at Greensboro, Greensboro, N.C. 27412. Deadline for applications: April 15, 1976. An affirmative action equal opportunity employer.

LIBRARIAN, M.L.S. Richard H. Thornton Library, Oxford, North Carolina 27565. Public Library and 3 branches. Salary range $12,000-$14,000. Send résumé and references to: Richard H. Thornton Library, Main Street, Oxford, N.C. 27565. Att: Mrs. Stanley H. Fox, Chairperson.

POSITIONS OPEN—WEST

PUBLIC SERVICES Librarian, Occidental College. Position open July 1, 1976. Primarily responsible for reference service, development of reference collection, and interlibrary loans. Also provides supervision for documents (selective depository, one supporting staff member) and professional oversight of the circulation department. Works closely with the librarian-at-large, a grant-funded position, to help stimulate the use of the Library. Qualifications: ALA accredited M.L.S. degree; ability to provide skilled reference service to current students and faculty, and to work well with other members of the library staff. Some knowledge of foreign languages essential. Preference will be given to a person with several years of comparable reference experience. Twelve-month appointment with one month's vacation per year; forty-hour week, including some evening or weekend hours. Salary $9,000-$13,000, depending upon experience. Apply to: Tyrus G. Harmsen, Occidental College Library, 1600 Campus Road, Los Angeles, CA 90041. Mail résumé of education, subject specialization, experience, and names of three references. Application deadline: April 10, 1976. Occidental College is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

ASSISTANT UNIVERSITY Librarian, Administration: Working directly with the university librarian, this person is responsible for coordination of the following areas: (1) allocation, recruitment and evaluation of all staff positions, (2) library budgets, (3) operations analysis, and (4) automation activities. Minimum qualifications must include graduate degree from ALA accredited library school, plus a second graduate degree (M.B.A. preferred) with emphasis on finance, operations analysis, and personnel administration. Minimum of four years experience equivalent to the level of a CSUC Associate Librarian in an academic library with evidence of superior performance. Knowledge and experience in library automation highly desirable. Appointment is at librarian level ($18,156-$22,068). Work schedule at 40 hrs/week with 21 days vacation annually. Public Employees Retirement System and health plans available. CSU, Sacramento is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Applications should be directed to: Gordon P. Martin, University Librarian, California State University, Sacramento, 6000 J. Street, Sacramento, CA 95819.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY Libraries. Head Librarian, Cubberley Education Library. Salary $15,000-$18,500. Directs program of library service for nationally first-ranked Stanford School of Education with responsibility for: defining goals and setting policies and procedures for the library; developing collections in the field of education; participating in reference and student orientation programs of the Cubberley Library. Requires M.L.S. or equivalent; graduate training in education. Requires substantial public service experience either in an Education research library or in a general reference department which serves Education faculty and students. Requires demonstrated materials selection, supervisory and managerial competence. Contact: Mrs. Dale Canelas, Search Officer, Stanford University Libraries, Stanford, CA 94305. Closing date for applications: April 15, 1976. Stanford University is an equal employment opportunity/affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—WEST

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR. Department of Librarianship, San Jose State University; an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. A tenure track position with salary beginning at approximately $14,000 for academic year, to start September 1, 1976. Additional compensation for summer teaching. Doctorate in library science or related area, with recent administrative experience in public library preferred. Primary teaching areas: public library administration, technical services and research methodology. Send vita to: Leslie H. Janke, Chairperson, Department of Librarianship, San Jose State University, San Jose, CA 95192.

POSITIONS OPEN—MIDWEST

LIBRARIAN, ENGINEERING (42,000 vols.) and mathematics (27,000 vols.) libraries. Undergraduate degree in engineering, mathematics, or a physical science; graduation from an ALA accredited library school; 3–5 years of professional library experience. Appointment at Librarian II level; starting salary, $13,000–$13,500. TIAA retirement (15% plan), Blue Cross and Blue Shield, disability and major medical insurance. Vacancy to be filled by July 1, 1976. Apply to: Dean of Library Administration, University of Iowa Libraries, Iowa City, IA 52242. The University of Iowa is an equal opportunity employer.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR of Libraries and Learning Resources. This is a new position beginning July 1, 1976. This administrator will assume responsibility for the university libraries, media services, audiovisual and graphics production resources, and instructional support activities. In addition to strong academic preparation, including an earned doctorate or equivalent, candidates should have successful experience in managing large or complex library organizations and should have practical knowledge of current trends in educational technology and instructional development. The administrator will operate at peer level with academic deans in designing a campus-wide system of integrated resource, curriculum, and faculty development that will consolidate and enhance the many innovative programs begun within the last three years. The administrator will have the opportunity to initiate a range of new approaches for library-learning resources in response to the university's emerging role in the UW System as a "University of Alternatives," serving new student populations and as a regional center for cooperative graduate and continuing education programs. Applications or nominations should be mailed by March 20 to: John Miniear, Chairperson Search and Screen Committee, Polk Library 322, University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh, Oshkosh, WI 54901.UW-Oshkosh is an equal opportunity-affirmative action employer.

ASSISTANT ACQUISITIONS Librarian: To assist acquisitions librarian in coordinating selection, bibliographic search and order functions for all book and periodical purchases. Supervisory responsibilities and frequent contact with faculty. Applicant must have M.L.S. from an accredited library school; additional graduate work desirable. Prefer applicant with acquisitions/bibliography experience in academic library. Appointment possible March 1, 1976. Faculty rank and status; salary $1,000/month depending on qualifications and experience. Deadline for receipt of applications: March 1, 1976. Contact: Pearce S. Grove, Director of Libraries, Western Illinois University, Macomb, IL 61455. Telephone: (309) 298-1095. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHWEST

HEAD, PUBLIC SERVICES Department. Position available now. Responsible for coordination and supervision of public services functions, reference, including on-line services, circulation, interlibrary loan, photocopy and stack maintenance. Graduation from ALA accredited library school, biomedical training and experience essential, and working knowledge of two foreign languages required. Three years of extensive public service experience including demonstrated supervisory competence. Medical center library including service to schools of medicine, nursing and pharmacy as well as licensed health professionals statewide. Professional librarians, 13; sub-professionals, 12; FTE students, 25. Collection: 80,000 volumes and 3,000 current serials. Salary: $13,500 negotiable. Affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Apply to: James W. Barry, Librarian, Arizona Medical Center Library, Tucson, Arizona 85724. (602) 882-6121.

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR for public services. Responsible to the library director for coordinating the reference, circulation, stack maintenance, interlibrary loan and extension departments of the library of a rapidly expanding health science center with medical, dental, nursing and graduate programs. Public services staff includes 5 librarians and 11 non-professionals. Salary from $14,000-$18,000 depending on background and experience. M.L.S. from an accredited library school and three years health sciences library experience required. Send résumé to: Dr. David A. Kronick, Library Director, The University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio, 7703 Floyd Curl Drive, San Antonio, Texas 78284. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

TECHNICAL SERVICES Consultant (Librarian II/III), Library Extension Service. M.L.S. and 2–3 yrs exp including background in library automation and networking systems. ($11,090–$15,762 DOE) Write/call: Arizona Dept. of Admin., Personnel Div., 1831 W. Jefferson, Phoenix, Arizona 85007, (602) 271-5216. Attn: Doris Krigbaum.

REFERENCE LIBRARIAN: Responsible for reference service in law school library which serves a university community, the practising bar and general public. Duties include extensive reference work, supervision of three reference assistants, student instruction in use of library, program planning and staff development. Reports to assistant librarian for public services. Commitment to service an absolute must. M.L.S. and reference experience required; subject knowledge desirable. Minimum salary $12,500. All qualified persons, without regard to race, sex, religion, national origin or age are encouraged to apply. Send letter of application, résumé, and three letters of professional reference to: Sandra S. Coleman, Assistant Librarian for Public Services, University of New Mexico School of Law Library, 1117 Stanford Drive N.E., Albuquerque, New Mexico 87131 before April 10, 1976.

POSITIONS OPEN—OVERSEAS

POSITION OPEN: ZAIRE (Africa) August 1976, Two School Media Specialists. The American School of Kinshasa. Grades k-12, 550 students. Book and A/V background important. Salary range $7,000–$10,000, plus housing, transportation, shipping and other benefits. Send résumé and inquiries to: Superintendent, American Community School, APO New York 09662.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS

Baker & Taylor Co. 764, 803
R. R. Bowker Co. 793, 794, 795 796, 816, 830
Bro-Dart 765

Coward, McCann & Geoghegan 835
Thomas Y. Crowell Co. 802, 827, 834

Delacorte Press 802, 835, 836
Demco Educational Corp. 766, 769, 772
Dial Press 829, 832
Dow Jones-Irwin 807

Emerson Books 831

Follett Publishing Co. 809, 813, 824

Gale Research Co. 798
Gaylord Bros. 790
Grossman Publishers 750

Harper & Row, Publishers 802, 835
Hart Publishing Co. 808
Harvard University Press 819
Hawthorn Books 828
Hearst Books 755, 756, 757 758, 759, 760

Josten's Library Services Division 774

Kraus-Thomson Organization 801
Robert E. Krieger Publishing Co. 821

Larousse & Co. 826
J. B. Lippincott Co. 752, 800, 826
Little, Brown & Co. 829

3M Co. 2d Cover, 749, 776
McGraw-Hill Book Co. 3d Cover
David McKay Co. 812, 814
Microcard Editions 767

Prentice-Hall 817
Princeton University Press 815
Purnell Educational 810
G. P. Putnam's Sons 800, 832, 836

Research Publications 773

Charles Scribner's Sons 811
Simon & Schuster 834
Singer Education Division 771

University Microfilms 762

Viking Press 825

Westminster Press 833
Word 4th Cover